BIBLIOTHECA CLASSICA

OR,

A CLASSICAL DICTIONARY,

CONTAINING

A COPIOUS ACCOUNT

OF ALL THE

PROPER NAMES MENTIONED IN ANCIENT AUTHORS,

By J. LEMPRIERE, D. D.

A NEW EDITION,

REVISED AND CORRECTED, WITH NUMEROUS ADDITIONS AND IMPROVEMENTS,

By WILLIAM PARK, M.A.,

LIBRARIAN TO THE UNIVERSITY OF GLASGOW.

LONDON

PRINTED FOR THOMAS TEGG, 73, CHEAPSIDE;

RICHARD GRIFFIN & CO. GLASGOW,

TEGG & CO. DUBLIN.

ALSO, J. AND S. A. TEGG, SYDNEY AND HOBART TOWN.

MDCCC.

THE AUTHOR'S PREFACE.

In the following pages it has been the wish of the author to give the most accurate and satisfactory account of all the proper names which occur in reading the Classics, and by a judicious collection of anecdotes and historical facts, to draw a picture of ancient times not less instructive than entertaining. Such a work, it is hoped, will not be deemed an useless acquisition in the hands of the public; and while the student is initiated in the knowledge of history and mythology, and familiarised with the ancient situation and extent of kingdoms and states that no longer exist, the man of letters may, perhaps, find it not a contemptible companion from which he may receive information, and be made, a second time, acquainted with many important particulars, which time, or more laborious occupations, may have erased from his memory. In the prosecution of his plan, the author has been obliged to tread in the steps of many learned men, whose studies have been directed and not without success, to facilitate the attainment of classical knowledge, and the ancient languages. Their compositions have been to him a source of information, and he trusts that their labours have now found new foundation in his own, and that, by a due consideration of every subject, he has been enabled to imitate their excellencies, without copying their faults. Many compositions of the same nature have issued from the press, but they are partial or unsatisfactory. The attempts to be concise, have rendered the labours of one barren and unInstructive, while long and unconnected quotations of passages, from Greek and Latin writers, disfigure the page of the other, and render the whole insipid and disgusting. It cannot, therefore, be a discouraging employment now, to endeavour to finish what others have left imperfect, and, with the conciseness of Stephens, to add the diffuse researches of Lloyd, Hoffman, Colliber, &c. After paying due attention to the ancient poets and historians, from whom the most authentic information can be received, the labours of more modern authors have been consulted, and every composition, distinguished for the clearness and perspicuity of historical narration, or geographical descriptions, has been carefully examined. Truly sensible of what he owes to modern Latin and English writers and commentators, the author must not forget to make a public acknowledgment of the assistance he has likewise received from the labours of the French. In the Siecles Payens of l'Abbe Sabatier de Castres, he has found all the information which judicious criticism, and a perfect knowledge of heathen mythology, could procure. The compositions of l'Abbé Banier, have also been useful, and in the Dictionaire Historique of a literary society, printed at Caen, a treasure of original anecdotes, and a candid selection and arrangement of historical facts have been discovered.

It was the original design of the author of this Dictionary to give a more explanation of all the names of which Pliny and other ancient geographers mention; but, upon a second consideration of the subject, he was convinced it would [illegible] increased his volume in bulk, and not in value.

reader will be sensible of the propriety of this remark, when he recollects, that the names of many places mentioned by Pliny and Pausanias, occur no where else in ancient authors, and that to find the true situation of an insignificant village, mentioned by Strabo, no other writer but Strabo is to be consulted.

This Dictionary being undertaken more particularly for the use of schools, it has been thought proper to mark the quantity of the penultimate of every word, and to assist the student who can receive no fixed and positive rules for pronunciation. In this the authority of Smethius has been followed, as also Leede's edition of Labbe's Catholici Indices.

As every publication should be calculated to facilitate literature, and to be serviceable to the advancement of the sciences, the author of this Dictionary did not presume to intrude himself upon the public, before he was sensible that his humble labours would be of some service to the lovers of the ancient languages. The undertaking was for the use of schools, therefore he thought none so capable of judging of its merit, and of ascertaining its utility, as those who preside over the education of youth. With this view, he took the liberty to communicate his intentions to several gentlemen in that line, not less distinguished for purity of criticism, than for their classical abilities, and from them he received all the encouragement which the desire of contributing to the advancement of learning can expect. To them, therefore, for their approbation and friendly communications, he publicly returns his thanks, and hopes that, now his labours are completed, his Dictionary may claim from them that patronage and that support, to which, in their opinion, the specimen of the work seemed to be entitled. He has paid due attention to their remarks, he has received with gratitude their judicious observations, and cannot pass over in silence their obliging recommendations, and particularly the friendly advice he has received from the Rev. R. Valpy, master of Reading school.

For the account of the Roman laws, and for the festivals celebrated by the ancient inhabitants of Greece and Italy, he is particularly indebted to the learned collections of archbishop Potter, of Godwyn, and Kennet. The quoted authorities have been carefully examined, and frequently revised; and, it is hoped, the opinions of mythologists will appear without confusion, and be found disested of all obscurity.

Therefore, with all the confidence which an earnest desire of being useful can command, the author offers the following pages to the public, conscious that they may contain inaccuracies and imperfections. A dictionary, the candid reader is well aware, cannot be made perfect all at once; it must still have its faults and omissions, however cautious and vigilant the author may have been, and in every page there may be found, in the opinion of some, room for improvement, and for addition. Before the candid, therefore, and the impartial, he lays his publication, and for whatever observations the friendly critic may make, he will show himself grateful, and take advantage of the remarks of every judicious reader. should the favours and the indulgence of the public demand a second edition.

PEMBROKE COLLEGE, OXFORD,
November, 1783.

ROTTERDAM PUBLIC LIBRARY 1859

A

CLASSICAL DIC

ABA and Abæ, a city of Phocis in Greece, said to have been founded by the Abantes, celebrated for an oracle of Apollo, more ancient than that at Delphi, and for a rich temple which was sacked and burned by the Persians. Strab. 9.—Herod. 8, 33.——A city of Caria.——Another of Arabia Felix.——A mountain near Smyrna. Plin. 5, 24.

ABACÆNÆ, a country of Sicily near Messana. Diod. 14.

ABALUS, an island, as the ancients supposed, in the German ocean, called by Tacitus, Basilia, and by Xenophon Lampsacenus, Baltia, now the peninsula of Scandinavia. Here, according to Pliny, some imagined that amber dropped from the trees. Hist. Nat. 37, 2

ABANA, a place of Capua. Cic. contra Rull.

ABANTES, a warlike people, originally from Thrace, who settled in Phocis, where they built a city which they called Abæ, after the name of their leader. From Phocis they crossed over into the island Eubœa, which took from them the name of Abantis. Some of them migrated from Eubœa to Ionia, and mingled with the Ionians. Herod. 1, 146. Hom. Il. 2, 542.

ABANTIAS and Abantiades, a patronymic given to the descendants of Abas king of Argos, such as Acrisius, Danaë, Perseus, Atalanta, &c. Ovid

ABANTIDAS, a man who made himself master of Sicyon, after he had murdered Clinias, the father of Aratus. He was himself soon after assassinated, B. C. 251. Plut. in Arat.

ABANTIS, or Abantia, an ancient name of the island of Eubœa, received from the Abantes, who settled in it from Phocis. Plin. 4, 12.——Also a country of Epirus. Paus. 5, 22.

ABARBAREA, one of the Naiades, mother of Asopus and Pedasus by Bucolion, Laomedon's eldest son. Homer. Il. 6, 23.

ABARIMON, a country of Scythia, near mount Imaus. The inhabitants were said to have their feet turned backwards, and to breathe no air but that of their own country. Plin. 7, 2.

ABARIS, a man slain by Perseus. Ovid. Met. 5, 1.——A Rutulian killed by Euryalus. Virg. Æn. 9, 344.——A native of Hyperborean Scythia, son of Seuthes, who received a golden arrow from Apollo, with which he gave oracles, and is reported himself from place to place with the greatest celerity. He was sent by the Scythians on an embassy to the Athenians, in the time of a general pestilence, probably B. C. 768. He is said to have returned to the Hyperborean countries without eating, and to have made the Trojan Palladium with the bone of Pelops. Some suppose that he wrote treatises in Greek, and it is reported, that there is a Greek manuscript of his epistles to Phalaris in the library of Augsburg. Herod. 4, 36.—Strab. 7.—Dion. Sic. 3, 11.

ABARUS, an Arabian prince, who perfidiously deserted Crassus in his expedition against Parthia. Appian. in Parth.—He is called Mazeres by Flor. 3, 12. and Artamnes by Plut. in Crass.

ABAS, or Abus, a mountain of Armenia Major, which gives rise to the southern branch of the Euphrates. D'Anville supposes it to be the modern Ala-dag, while Mannert is of opinion that it is the modern Araxat.——A river of Armenia Major, where Pompey routed the Albani. Plut. in Pomp.——A son of Metanira, changed into a lizard for laughing at Ceres. Ovid. Met. 5, 7.

——The 11th king of Argos, son of Belus, some say of Lynceus and Hypermnestra, was famous for his genius and valour. He was father to Prœtus and Acrisius, and built Abæ. He reigned twenty-three years, B. C. 1384. Paus. 2, 16. 10, 35.—Apollod. 2, 2.——One of Æneas's friends, lost in the storm which drove Æneas to Carthage. Virg. Æn. 1, 125.——One of the four Etrurian chiefs who commanded the people of Populonia and Ilva in the war of Æneas against Turnus. He was killed by Lausus. Æn. 10, 170, &c.——One of the Grecian chiefs killed at the burning of Troy, whose shield Æneas consecrated in the town of Ambracia. Virg. Æn. 3, 286.——A centaur, famous for his skill in hunting. Ovid. Met. 12, 306.——A soothsayer, to whom the Spartans erected a statue for his services to Lysander. Paus. 10, 9.——A son of Neptune. Hygin. Fab. 157.——A sophist who wrote two treatises, one on history, the other on rhetoric. The time in which he lived is unknown.——A man who wrote an account of Troy. He is quoted by Servius in Virg. Æn. 3.

ABASA, an island in the Red Sea, near Æthiopia. Plin. 6, 26.

ABASITIS, a part of Mysia in Asia. Strab.

ABASSENA or Abasinia. Vid. Abyssinia

ABASSUS, a town of Phrygia. Liv. 38, 15

ABATOS, a small island near Memphis in Egypt, celebrated for its papyrus, and as the burial-place of Osiris. Lucan. 10, 332.

ABDALONIMUS, a descendant of the ancient kings of Sidon, who, when Alexander had subdued that country, was so poor, taged himself by the culture of a kitchen garden. His penury, not an uncommon case, had resulted from his probity. The Macedonian hero caused him to be brought into his presence, and placing the sceptre in his hands, expressed a wish to know how he had endured his poverty. "Would to heaven," replied Abdalonimus, "I may bear my prosperity as well! These hands sufficiently ministered to my necessities: I possessed nothing; I wanted nothing." Alexander, pleased with this reply, gave him the palace and private estate of Strato his predecessor, and enlarged his dominions by the addition of a contiguous tract of country. Justin. 11, 10.—Q. Curt. 4, 1.

ABDERA, a town of Hispania Baetica, built by the Carthaginians. Strab. 3.——An opulent and celebrated city of Thrace, towards the east bank of the mouth of the Nestus, founded by Timesius of Clazomenæ. The Teians completed it, and from them it took its name. Abdera Teiorum Avorum. Many accounts are given of its unwholesome air and productions, and the stupidity of its inhabitants, from which the phrase Abderitica mens had its origin. But it gave birth to Democritus, Protagoras, Anaxarchus, Nicomedes, and Hecatæus. Its ruins are said to exist near the cape Bunarea. Pomp. Mel. 2, 2.—Cic. ad Attic. 4, 16.—Herod. 1, 168.—Mart. 10, 25.

ABDERIA, a town of Spain. Apollod. 2, 5.

ABDERITES, a people of Paeonia, obliged to leave their country on account of the great number of rats and frogs. Who inhabited it. Justin. 15, 2.

ABDERUS, a man of Locris, arm-bearer to Hercules, was born in Pieria by the mares of Diomedes, which the hero had entrusted to his care when going to war against the Bistones. Apollod. 2, 5.

ABRAEÆ, a people of Achaia. Plin. 4, 6.

ABELLA, a town of Campania, whose inhabitants, called Abellani, were a colony of Chalcidians. It derives its only interest from the mention made of it by Virgil and Silius Italicus. Its ancient walls remain in many places, and include a circuit of nearly three miles, within which are fragments of an amphitheatre. It is now called Avella. Virg. Æn. 7, 740.—Sil. Ital. 8, 518.—Justin. 20, 5.

ABELLINUM, a town in the country of the Hirpini. It is distinguished from Abellinum Marsicum, a town of Lucania, by the surname of Protropum. It is now Abellino. Plin. 3, 11.

ABELUX, a noble of Saguntum, who favoured the party of the Romans against Carthage. Liv. 22, 22.

ABENDA, a town of Caria, whose inhabitants were the first who raised temples to the city of Rome. Liv. 45, 6.

ABIA, formerly Ira, a maritime town of Messenia, one of the seven cities promised to Achilles by Agamemnon. It is called after Abia, daughter of Hercules, and nurse of Hyllus. Paus. 4, 30.—Strab. 8.—Homer. Il. 9, 292.

ABGARUS, the name of the princes of Edessa, in Syria. Capitolin. Ant. Pio 9.—Spartian. Severo 13.—Victor de Cæsar. 20.

ABII, a people of Scythia, who led a wandering life. They carried all their possessions in waggons; lived on the flesh of their herds and flocks, on milk, and cheese, and were unacquainted with commerce. They were remarkable for their ingenuity and forbearance, never entering into wars, but when compelled. According to Arrian and Strabo, they surrendered to Alexander, after they had been independent since the reign of Cyrus.—Homer. Il. 13, 6.—Arrian 6.—Curt. 7, 6.

ABILA, or Abyla, a mountain of Africa, in that part which is nearest to the opposite mountain called Calpe, on the coast of Spain, only eighteen miles distant. These two mountains are called the columns of Hercules, and were said formerly to be united, till the hero separated them, and made a communication between the Mediterranean and Atlantic seas. Strab. 3.—Mela 1, 5. 2, 6.

ABISARES, an Indian prince, who offered to surrender to Alexander. Curt. 8, 12.

ABISARI, a country beyond the Hydaspes in India. Arrian.

ABISONTES, some inhabitants of the Alps. Plin. 3, 20.

ABLEMUS, a Trojan, killed by Antilochus. Homer. Il. 6, 32.

ABLERUS, a people near Troy. Strab.

ABNOBA, a chain of mountains in Germany, stretching along the Rhine, from the head of the Danube, near Donaueschingen, to the Lippe. Now, the Black mountains. Tacit. Germ. 1.

ABOBRICA, a town of Lusitania. Plin. 4, 21.——Another in Spain.

ABOCENTUS, a Brotian general, killed with a thousand men, in a battle at Chæronea, against the Ætolians. Plut. vit. Arat.

ABOLANI, a people of Latium, in Alba. Plin. 3, 5.

ABOLUS, a river of Sicily. Plut. in Timol.

ABONITICHOS, a small sea-port town of Paphlagonia, previously called Colonea, and afterwards denominated Ionopolis. It is now Anabolu. Arrian. in Peripl.

ABORACA, a toy of Sarmatia.

ABORIGINES, a people of Italy, who inhabited the ancient Latium, or country now called Campagna di Roma. Whence this people came by the appellation has not been determined. The name is now used to denote the primitive inhabitants of a country, in contradistinction to colonists. Liv. 1, 1.—Dionys. Hal. 1, 10.—Strab. 13, 1.—Plin. 3, 5.

ABORRAS, a river of Mesopotamia. Strab. 16.

ABRADATAS, a king of Susa, in Persia, who, when his wife Panthea had been taken prisoner by Cyrus, and humane treated, surrendered himself and his troops to the conqueror. He was killed in the first battle he undertook in the cause of Cyrus, and his wife stabbed herself on his corpse. Cyrus raised a monument on their tomb. Xenoph. Cyrop. 5, 6, &c.

ABRENTIUS, a man made governor of Tarentum by Hannibal. He betrayed his trust to the enemy to gain the favours of a beautiful woman, whose brother was in the Roman army. Polyæn. 8.

ABROCOMAS, son of Darius, was in the army of Xerxes, when he invaded Greece. He was killed at Thermopylæ. Herod. 7, 224.

ABRODIETUS, a name given to Parrhasius the painter, on account of the sumptuous manner of his living. Vid. Parrhasius.

ABRON, an Athenian, who wrote a treatise concerning the religion of the ancient Greeks.——A grammarian of Rhodes, who taught rhetoric at Rome.——Another who wrote a treatise on Thucydides.——A Spartan, son of Lycurgus the orator. Plut. in 10. Orat.——A native of Argos, famous for his debauchery.

ABRONIUS, Silo, a Latin poet in the Augustan age. He wrote some fables. Senec.

ABRONYCUS, an Athenian, very serviceable to Themistocles in his embassy to Sparta. Thucyd. 1, 91.—Herod. 8, 21.

ABRŌTA, the wife of Nisus, the youngest of the sons of Ægeus. As a monument to her chastity, Nisus, after her death, ordered the garments which she wore to become the models of fashion in Megara. Plut. Quæst. Græc.

ABROTONUM, the mother of Themistocles. Plut. in Them.——A town of Africa, near the Syrtes. Plaut. 5, 1.——A harlot of Thrace. Plut. in Anit.

ABRUS, a city of the Sapæi. Paus. 7, 10.

ABRYPOLIS, an ally of Rome, driven from his possessions by Perseus, the last king of Macedonia. Liv. 42, 51 et 54.

ABSYRTUS, a giant, son of Tartarus and Terra. Hygin. Præf. fab.

ABSYRTUS, a people on the coasts of Pontus, who inhabited a mountain of the same name. Herod. 4, 24.

ABSYRTIDES, four islands on the coast of Illyricum, so named from Absyrtus, who was said to have been murdered there by his sister Medea. The principal one was called Absorus, with a town of the same name. They are now known as Cherz, Osero, Lossina, and Canos. Strab. 7.—Mel. 2, 7.—Plin. 3, 26.

ABSYRTUS, a river falling into the Adriatic sea, near which Absyrtus was murdered. Lucan. 3, 130.

ABSYRTUS, a son of Æetes, king of Colchis. His sister, Medea, as she fled away with Jason, tore his body to pieces, and strewed his limbs in her father's way, to stop his pursuit. Some say that she murdered him in Colchis, others in one of the Absyrtides, and others again lay the scene at Tomos. It has been asserted, on the contrary, that he was not murdered, but that he arrived safe in Illyricum. Lucan. 3, 190.—Strab. 7.—Hygin. Fab. 24.—Apollod. 1, 9.—Flacc. 8, 461—Ovid. Trist. 3, 9.—Cic. de Nat. D. 3, 19.

ABULITES, governor of Susa, betrayed his trust to Alexander, and was rewarded with a province. Curt. 5, 2.—Diod. 17.

ABUS, a river of England, now the Humber.

ABYDENUS, a disciple of Aristotle, too much indulged by his master. He wrote some historical treatises on Cyprus, Delos, Arabia, and Assyria. Plut. Just.—Euseb. contra Ap.

ABYDOS, a city of Asia minor, situate on the Hellespont, nearly opposite to the town of Sestos in Europe. It was in possession of the Thracians, and afterwards by the Milesians. It was the place from which Leander was wont to swim, and from which Xerxes threw the famous bridge across the Hellespont. This city was once important, as it commanded the communication between the Euxine sea and the Archipelago. It was besieged by Philip of Macedon, and the inhabitants devoted themselves to death with their families, rather than fall into the hands of the enemy. Liv. 31, 16.—Lucan. 2, 674.—Justin. 2, 13.—Museus in Her. et Leand.—Flacc. 1, 285.

ABYDUS, a town of Thebais in Upper Egypt, which contained the palace of Memnon and the celebrated temple of Osiris. Now a ruin called Madfoor. Plut. de Isid. et Osir.

ABYLA. Vid. Abila.

ABYLON, a city of Egypt.

ABYSSINIA, a large kingdom of Africa, in Upper Ethiopia, where the Nile takes its rise. The inhabitants are said to be of Arabian origin, and were little known to the ancients.

ACACALLIS, a nymph, mother of Philander and Phylacis by Apollo. These children were exposed to the wild beasts in Crete; but a goat gave them her milk, and preserved their life. Paus. 10, 16.——A daughter of Minos, mother of Cydon, by Mercury, and of Amphithemis by Apollo. Paus. 8, 53.—Apollod. 3, 1.

ACACESIUM, a town of Arcadia, built by Acacus, son of Lycaon. Mercury, surnamed Acacesius, was worshipped there. Paus. 8, 3, 36, &c.

ACACIUS, a rhetorician in the age of the emperor Julian.

ACADEMIA, a place in the immediate vicinity of Athens, surrounded with a wall, and adorned with groves, walks, and fountains. Some have derived its name from κακὸς δήμος, removed from the people, or, ἀκὸς δήμος, the cure of the people; but its origin is commonly ascribed to Academus, who lived in the time of Theseus, and who bequeathed it to the citizens for a gymnasium. Here Plato opened his school of philosophy, and from this, every place sacred to learning has ever since been called Academia. To exclude from it profaneness and dissipation, it was even forbidden to laugh there. It was called Academia vetus, to distinguish it from the second academy founded by Arcesilaus, who made some few alterations in the Platonic philosophy, and from the third which was established by Carneades. The name of Academia is now attached to this once celebrated spot. Cic. de Div. 1, 3.—Diog. 3.—Ælian. V. H. 3, 35.

ACADEMUS, an Athenian, who discovered to Castor and Pollux where Theseus had concealed their sister Helen, for which they amply rewarded him. Plut. in Thes.

ACALANDRUS, or Acalandres, a river falling into the bay of Tarentum. Now, the Salandella. Pers. 3, 14.

ACALLE, a daughter of Minos and Pasiphae. Apollod. 3, 1.

ACAMARCHIS, one of the Oceanides.

ACAMAS, son of Theseus and Phædra, went with Diomedes to demand Helen from the Trojans after her elopement from Menelaus. In his embassy he had a son by Laodice the daughter of Priam. He was concerned in the Trojan war, and afterwards built the town of Acamantium in Phrygia, and called a tribe after his own name at Athens. Paus. 10, 26.—Q. Calar. 12.—Hygin. 108.——A son of Antenor in the Trojan war. Homer. I. 11, 60, &c.——A Thracian auxiliary of Priam in the Trojan war. Homer. I. 11.——A promontory of the island of Cyprus, now called Pisano. It is the first point that presents itself in a voyage from Greece. Plin. 5, 31

ACAMPSIS, a river of Colchis, called higher inland Boas, now Batum, or Batoum. Arrian. Peripl.

ACANTHA, a nymph loved by Apollo, and changed into the flower Acanthus.

ACANTHUS, a city of Macedonia near mount Athos, colonized by Andrians. Near this Xerxes cut a canal, about a mile and a half in length, and twenty-three yards in breadth, through which he conveyed his fleet into the Sinus Singiticus, without doubling the dangerous promontory of Athos. The modern Erisso answers to the ancient Acanthus. Thucyd. 4, 84.—Mela 2, 2.——A town of Egypt, near Memphis, the present Bustita, or, according to D'Anville, Dashur, whether the waters of the Nile are conducted by a canal, and not far from which are the ruins of the temple of Osiris, and some pyramids. Plin.——An island mentioned by Plin. 5, 32.

ACARA, a town of Paphlagonia.——A river of Italy.

ACARIA, a fountain of Corinth, where Iolas cut off the head of Eurystheus. Strab. 8.

ACARNANIA, (anciently called Curetis,) a country of Epirus, bounded on the north by the gulf of Ambracia, on the west by the Ionian sea, and on the east by the river Achelous. It received its name from Acarnas, son of Alcmæon, both of whom are adduced as its earliest kings. Its first inhabitants were the Peleges, Curetes, and Teleboæ, or Taphii. To these Acarnas brought a colony of Hellenes. The Acarnanians reckoned only six months in the year; they were luxurious and addicted to pleasure. They were in fact a semi-barbarous people, and, like their neighbours the Ætolians, they remained rude and unrefined after the Athenians had become the instructors of the world. Plin. 2, 90.—Mela 2, 3.—Strab. 7 et 9.—Paus. 8, 24.

ACARNAS and Amphotērus, sons of Alcmæon and Callirhoe. Alcmæon being murdered by the brothers of Alphesibœa his former wife, Callirhoe obtained from Jupiter, that her children, who were still in the cradle, might grow up to punish their father's murderers. This was granted. Vid Alcmæon. Paus. 8, 24.

ACARNAS and Acarnan, a stony mountain of Attica. Senec. in Hippol. 20.

ACASTA, one of the Oceanides. Hesiod. Theog. 356.

ACASTUS, son of Pelia, king of Thessaly, married Astydamia or Hippolyte, who fell in love with Peleus, son of Æacus, when in banishment at her husband's court. Peleus, rejecting the addresses of Hyppolyte, was accused before Acastus of attempts upon her virtue, and soon after, at a chase, exposed to wild beasts. Vulcan, by order of Jupiter, delivered Peleus, who returned to Thessaly, and put to death Acastus and his wife. Vid. Peleus, and Astydamia.—Ovid. Met. 8, 306. Hesiod. 13, 25.—Apollod. 1, 9, &c.——The second archon at Athens.

ACATHANTUS, a bay in the Red Sea. Strab. 16.

ACCA LAURENTIA, the wife of Faustulus, shepherd of king Numitor's flocks, who brought up Romulus and Remus, who had been exposed on the banks of the Tiber. From her wantonness, she was called Lupa (a prostitute), whence the fable that Romulus was suckled by a she-wolf. Dionys. Hal. 1, 18.—Liv. 1, 4.——The Romans yearly celebrated certain festivals [vid. Laurentalia] in honour of another prostitute of the same name, which arose from this circumstance: the keeper of the temple of Hercules, one day playing at dice, made the god one of the number, on condition that if Hercules was defeated, he should make him a present, but if he conquered, he should be entertained with an elegant feast, and share his bed with a beautiful female. Hercules was victorious, and accordingly Acca was conducted to the bed of Hercules, who in reality came to see her, and told her in the morning to go into the streets, and salute with a kiss the first man she met. This was Tarutius, an old unmarried man, who, not displeased with Acca's filthy lodging her, and made her the heiress of all his possessions. These, at her death, she gave to the Roman people, whence the honours paid to her memory. Plut. Quæst. Rom. & in Romul.——A companion of Camilla. Virg. Æn. 11, 820.

ACCIA or Atia, daughter of Julia, and M. Atius Balbus, was the mother of Augustus, and died about 40 years B. C. Dio.—Suet. in Aug. 4.——Accīola, an illustrious female, whose cause was recently pleaded by Pliny. Plin. 6, ep. 33.

ACCILA, a town of Sicily. Liv. 24, 35.

L. ACCIUS, a Roman tragic poet, the son of a freedman, was born B. C. 170. He wrote several tragedies, in imitation of the Greek dramatists, and on subjects taken from the Grecian history; but he composed also one on the story of Brutus and Tarquin. He is supposed like Pisо to have written two comedies, one named Nuptiæ, and the other Mercator. Besides these pieces, he wrote some historical annals in verse, and miscellaneous poems. His style has been accounted somewhat harsh and crude, but he is generally allowed to have been a great poet. Some few of his verses are preserved by Cicero and other writers, and may be found in the Corpus Poetarum Latinorum. Horat. 2, ep. 1, 56.—Ov. Am. 1, 15, 19.—Quintil. 10, 1.—Cic. de Orat. 2, 16.——A famous orator of Pisaurum, in Cicero's age. Cic. Br. 78.——A noble painter in the time of Vespasian. Plin. 35, 10.——Labeo, a foolish poet mentioned Pers. 1, 50.——Tullius, a prince of the Volsci, very inimical to the Romans. Coriolanus, when banished by his countrymen, fled to him, and led his armies against Rome. Liv 2, 37. —Plut. in Coriol.

ACCO, a general of the Senones in Gaul. Cæs. Bell. Gall. 6, 4 et 44.——An old woman who fell mad on seeing her deformity in a looking-glass. Hrapch.

ACCUA, a town of Apulia, in the vicinity of Luceria. Liv. 24, 20.

ACE, or Aco, a sea-port town of Phœnicia, afterwards called Ptolemais, from the Ptolemies, kings of Egypt. In the time of the crusades, under the name of Acre, it acquired celebrity by being the theatre of the exploits of Richard the first of England, and in our own time, by the defeat of Buonaparte, by sir Sidney Smith. Strab. 16.—Plin. 5, 19.—Diodor. 19, 93.——A place of Arcadia near Megalopolis, where Orestes was cured from the persecution of the furies, who had a temple there. Paus. 8, 34.

ACERATUS, a soothsayer, who remained alone at Delphi when the approach of Xerxes frightened away the inhabitants. Herod. 8, 37.

ACERBAS, a priest of Hercules at Tyre, who married Dido. Vid. Sichæus.—Justin. 1, 4.

ACERINA, a colony of the Brutii in Magna Græcia, taken by Alexander of Epirus. Liv 8, 24.

ACERRÆ, a town of Cisalpine Gaul, now called Ghierra. It is mentioned by Polybius in the Gallic wars, as a strong and important place. Polyb. 2, 34.——An ancient town of Campania, near the source of the river Clanius, which retains the name unchanged. It still subsists, and the frequent inundations from the river, which terrified its ancient inhabitants, are now prevented by the large drains dug there. Virg. G. 2, 225.—Sil. Ital. 8, 537.

ACERRHPCŌMES, a surname of Apollo, which signifies unshorn. Jov. 8, 128

ACES, a river of Asia. Herod. 3, 117.

ACESIA, part of the island of Lemnos, which received this name from Philoctetes, whose wound was cured there. Philostr.

ACESINES, a considerable river of India, which falls into the Indus. The modern Chunab is probably the Acesines of the ancients; so at least major Rennell supposes, and not without convincing good proofs. Arrian. 5, 22.—Theophrast. 4, 12.—Plin. 37, 12.——A river of Sicily. Thucyd. 4, 25.

ACESIUS, a surname of Apollo, as god of medicine. Paus. 6 24.

ACESTA, a town of Sicily, called after king Acestes, and known also by the name of Segesta. It was built by Æneas, who left here part of his crew, as he was going to Italy. Virg. Æn. 5, 746.

ACESTES, or Ægestus, son of Crinisus and Egesta, was king of the country near Dropanum in Sicily. He assisted Priam in the Trojan war, and kindly entertained Æneas during his voyage, and helped him to bury his father on mount Eryx. In commemoration of this, Æneas built a city there, called Acesta, from Acestes. Virg. Æn. 5, 718.

ACESTIUM, a woman who saw all her relations invested with the sacred office of torch-bearers in the festivals of Ceres. Paus. 1, 37.

ACESTODORUS, a Greek historian, who mentions the review which Xerxes made of his forces before the battle of Salamis. Plut. in Themist.

ACESTUS, a tragic poet of Eretria, contemporary with Aristophanes; by whom he is charged with being a foreigner, and not an Athenian citizen. Aristoph. Av. 4, 31. Vespæ, 1221.

ACESTORIDES, an Athenian, who was archon in the 69th Olympiad.——A Corinthian governor of Syracuse. Diod. 19.

ACETES, the armour-bearer of Evander, and attendant of his son Pallas. Virg. Æn. 11, 30.

ACHÆREUS, a lofty mountain in Rhodes, on the summit of which stood a temple of Jupiter.

ACHÆA, a surname of Pallas, whose temple in Daunia was defended by dogs, who fawned upon the Greeks, but fiercely attacked all other persons. Aristot. de Mirab.——Ceres was called Achæa, from Achæus, a word expressive of her grief for the loss of her daughter Proserpine. Plut. in Isid. et Jov.

ACHÆI, the descendants of Achæus, the son of Xuthus, and grandson of Hellen. Achæus, having committed manslaughter, was obliged to fly to Laconia, where he died, and where his posterity remained under the name of Achæi, until they were expelled by the Heraclidæ. Upon this, they pressed into the northern parts of Peloponnesus, and under the command of Tisamenus, the son of Orestes, dispossessed the Ionians of their country, and gave it the name of Achaia. The successors of Tisamenus ruled until the time of Cypselus's tyranny, when Achaia was parcelled into twelve small republics, or so many cities with their respective districts, each of which comprised seven or eight cantons. The names of these cities are Pellena, Helice, Ægæ, Bura, Tritæa, Ægium, Rhypes, Patræ, Dymæ, and Pharæ. The inhabitants of these three last began a famous confederacy, 284 years B. C., which continued formidable upwards of 130 years, under the name of the Achæan league, and was most illustrious whilst supported by the splendid virtues and abilities of Aratus and Philopœmen. Their arms were directed against the Ætolians for three years, with the assistance of Philip of Macedon, and they grew powerful by the accession of neighbouring states, and freed their country from foreign slavery, till at last they were attacked by the Romans, and, after one year's hostilities, the Achæan league was totally destroyed, B. C. 147. From this period the Peloponnesus was reduced to the condition of a Roman province, bearing the name of Achaia. The name of Achæi is generally applied to all the Greeks indiscriminately, by the poets. Vid. Homer. Hesiod. 1, 145. 8, 36.—Strab. Theo. 2, 61. Polyb.—Liv. 1. 27, 32, &c.—Plut. in Philop.—Paus. 4, 5.—Ovid. Met. 4, 605.—Pers. 1, 1, &c.——Also a people of Asia on the borders of the Euxine. Ovid. de Pont. 4, 10. 27.

ACHÆUM, a place of Troas, opposite to the island of Tenedos. Strab. 8.

ACHÆMENES, a king of Persia, among the progenitors of Cyrus the Great, whose descendants were called Achæmenides, and formed a separate tribe in Persia, of which the kings were members. Cambyses, son of Cyrus, on his death-bed, charged his nobles, and particularly the Achæmenides, not to suffer the Medes to recover their former power, and abolish the empire of Persia. Herod. 1, 125. 3, 65. 7, 11.—Homer. 2, od. 12, 21.——A Persian, made governor of Egypt by Xerxes, B. C. 486.

ACHÆMENIA, part of Persia, called after Achæmenes. Hence Achæmenius. Horat Epod. 13, 12.

ACHÆMENIDES, a companion of Ulysses, abandoned on the coast of Sicily, where Æneas, on his voyage to Italy, found him. Virg. Æn. 3, 614.

ACHÆORUM LITTUS, a harbour in Cyprus. Strab.——In Troas.——In Arabia.——In Peloponnesus.——On the Euxine. Paus. 4, 34.

ACHÆORUM STATIO, a place on the coast of the Thracian Chersonesus, where Polyxena was sacrificed to the shades of Achilles, and where Hecuba killed Polymnestor, who had murdered her son Polydorus.

ACHÆUS, a king of Lydia, hung by his subjects for his extortion. Ovid. in Ib.——A son of Xuthus of Thessaly. He fled, after the accidental murder of a man, to Greece, where the inhabitants were called from him, Achæi. He afterwards returned to Thessaly. Strab. 8. - Paus. 7, 1.——A tragic poet of Eretria, born B. C. 484. He wrote forty-three tragedies, of which some of the titles are preserved, such as Adrastus, Iunus, Cycnus, Enomaüs, Philoctetes, Parthenius, Theseus, Œdipus, &c. He gained the dramatic victory only once. Besides tragedies, he composed satirical poems; but of these there are no remains.—Another of Syracuse, author of ten tragedies.—A river which falls into the Euxine. Arrian. in Peripl.—A relation of Antiochus the Great, appointed governor of all the king's provinces beyond Taurus. He aspired to sovereign power, which he disputed for eight years with Antiochus, and was at last betrayed by a Cretan. His limbs were cut off, and his body, sewed in the skin of an ass, was exposed on a gibbet. Polyb. 8.

ACHAIA, called also Helice, a country of Peloponnesus, bounded on the north by the Corinthian gulf, on the south by Elis and Arcadia, on the east by Sicyonia, and on the west by the Ionian sea. It was originally called Ægialus, either from a hero of that name, or, more probably, from its maritime situation. The Ionians called it Ionia, when they settled there; and it received the name of Achaia, from the Achæi, who dispossessed the Ionians. Vid. Achæi.——A small part of Phthiotis was also called Achaia, of which Alos was the capital.

ACHAICUM BELLUM. Vid. Achæi.

ACHAMAS, one of the workmen of Vulcan. Val. Flacc. 1, 583.

ACHARA, a town near Sardis. Strab. 14.

ACHARNENSES, a people of Sicily near Syracuse. Cic. in Verr. 3.

ACHARNÆ, a very large country town of Attica, where the tyrants encamped who marched against Thrasybulus, and where the Lacedæmonians, under their king Ar-encamped, when they made an irruption into Attica, at the beginning of the Peloponnesian war. Aristophanes, in the comedy which takes its title from this town, represents the inhabitants as charcoal makers; and other comic writers stigmatise them as rough and boorish. Acharnæ contained temples dedicated to Apollo Agyæus, Hercules, Minerva, Hygeia, and Bacchus Melpomenus. Dodwell places the remains of Acharnæ about an hour from Kasha, and near Menidi. Thucyd. 2, 19.—Aristophh. Achar. 175.—Pausan. 1, 31.

ACHATES, a friend of Æneas whose fidelity was so exemplary that fidus Achates became a proverb. Virg. Æn. 1, 316.

ACHELOIDES, a patronymic given to the Syrens, as daughters of Achelous. Ovid Met. 5, 15.

ACHELORIUM, a river of Thessaly. Polyæn. 8.

ACHELOUS, the son of Oceanus or Sol, by Terra or Tethys, was god of the rives of the same name in Epirus. He married Perimede, daughter of Æolus, by whom he had Hippodamas, Orestes, Callirrhoe, and Castalia. Afterwards, as one of the numerous suitors of Dejanira, daughter of Œneus, he entered the lists against Hercules, and being interior, changed himself into a serpent, and afterwards into an ox. Hercules broke off one of his horns, and Achelous being defeated, retired into his bed of waters. The broken horn was given to the goddess of Plenty. Some say that he was changed into a river after the victory of Hercules. This river is in Epirus, and rises in mount Pindus, and, after dividing Acarnania from Ætolia, falls into the Ionian sea. The sand and mud which it carries down, have formed some islands at its mouth. This river is said by some to have sprung from the earth after the deluge. As it overflowed its natural limits, and destroyed the neighbouring plains, it was found necessary to restrain its inroads by turning the stream into its original channel, which is supposed to have given rise to the fable of the contest of Hercules with the river god. The Achelous is said to have been formerly called Thoas, and Theatius. Its present name is Aspropotamo, or the white river. Herodot. 2, 10.—Strab. 10.—Ovid. Met. 8, 5. 9, 1. Amor. 3, 6, 35.—Apollod. 1, 3 et 7. 2, 7.—Hygin præf. fab.—Soph. Trach. 507 ——A river of Arcadia falling into the Alpheus.——Another flowing from mount Sipylus. Paus. 8, 38.

ACHERDUS, a tribe of Attica; hence Acherdusius, in Onomath.

ACHERINI, a people of Sicily. Cic. 3 in Verr.

ACHERON, a river of Thesprotia, in Epirus, which, after passing through the Acherusian lake and receiving the Cocytus, falls into the sea near the Cimmerian promontory. Homer called it, from the dead appearance of its waters, one of the rivers of hell, and the fable has been adopted by all succeeding poets, who make the god of the stream to be the son of Ceres, without a father; and say that he conceal d himself in hell for fear of the Titans, and was changed into a bitter stream, over which the souls of the dead are at first conveyed. It receives, say they, the souls of the dead, because a deadly languor seizes them at the hour of dissolution. Some make him son of Titan, and suppose that he was plunged into hell by Jupiter, for supplying the Titans with water. The word Acheron is often taken for hell itself. Horat. 1, od. 3, 36.—Virg. G. 2, 492. Æn. 7, 295, &c.—Strab. 7.—Lucan. 3, 16.—Sil. 2, Silv. 6, 80. —Ov. 8, 24.——A river of Elis in Peloponnesus. ——Another on the Riphæan mountains. Orpheus.——Also a river in the country of the Brutii in Italy. Justin. 12, 2.

ACHERONTIA, a small town of Apulia situated on a mountain. Now Acerenza. Horat. 3, od. 4, 14.

ACHERUSIA, a lake of Campania near Cumæ. Plin. 3, 5.——Another of Epirus, through which the Acheron runs. Plin. 4, 1.—Diodorus, id. 1. mentions, that in Egypt, the bodies of the dead were conveyed over a lake called Acherusia, and received sentence according to the actions of their life. The boat was called Baris, and the ferryman Charon. Hence arose the fable of Charon and the Styx, &c. afterwards imported into Greece by Orpheus, and adopted in the religion of the country.

ACHERUSIAS, a place near Heraclea, where Hercules, as is reported, dragged Cerberus out of hell. Xenoph. Anab. 6.

ACHETUS, a river of Sicily. Sil. 14.

ACHILLAS, a general of Ptolemy, who murdered Pompey the Great. He was himself soon afterwards put to death by Ganymedes the eunuch, who was in the confidence of Arsinoe, the sister of Ptolemy. Hirt. B. Alex. 4.—Plut. in Pomp.—Lucan. 8, 532.

ACHILEA, a peninsula near the mouth of the Borysthenes. Mela 2, 1.—Herod. 4, 55 et 76.—— An island at the mouth of the Ister, where was the tomb of Achilles, over which it is said that birds never flew. Plin. 10, 29.—— A fountain of Miletus, whose waters rise salted from the earth, and afterwards sweeten in their course. Athen. 2, 2.

ACHILLEIENSES, a people near Macedonia. Xenoph. Hist. Græc. 3.

ACHILLEIS, a celebrated poem of Statius, written in heroic measure, in which that author proposed to give the whole life and history of Achilles; but being prevented by death, he has only treated of the infancy and education of this famous hero. Ped. Statius.

ACHILLES, the son of Peleus and Thetis, was the bravest of all the Greeks in the Trojan war. During his infancy, Thetis plunged him in the Styx, and made every part of his body invulnerable, except the heel, by which she held him. His education was entrusted to the centaur Chiron, who taught him the art of war, and made him master of music; and, by feeding him with the marrow of wild beasts, rendered him vigorous and active. He was taught eloquence by Phœnix, whom he ever after loved and respected. Thetis, to prevent him from going to the Trojan war, where she knew he was to perish, privately sent him to the court of Lycomedes king of Scyros, disguised in a female dress. By his familiarity with the king's daughters here, he made Deidamia mother of Neoptolemus. As Troy could not be taken without the aid of Achilles, Ulysses went to the court of Lycomedes, in the habit of a merchant, and exposed jewels and arms to sale. Achilles, choosing the arms, discovered his sex, and went to the war. Vulcan, at the entreaties of Thetis, made him a strong armour, which was proof against all weapons. He distinguished himself in many combats and predatory expeditions, during the years that preceded the capture of Troy. At length he was deprived by Agamemnon of his favourite mistress Briseis, who had fallen to his lot at the division of the booty of Lyrnessus. For this affront, which is the foundation of the Iliad, he refused to appear in the field, till the death of his friend Patroclus recalled him to action, and to revenge [Hia-

Patroclus.] He slew Hector, the bulwark of Troy, tied the corpse by the heels to his chariot, and dragged it three times round the walls of the city. After thus appeasing the shade of his friend, he permitted old Priam to ransom and carry away Hector's body. In the tenth year of the war, Achilles was charmed with Polyxena; and as he solicited her hand in the temple of Minerva, it is said that Paris aimed an arrow at his vulnerable heel, of which wound he died. His body was buried at Sigeum, and divine honours were paid to him, and temples raised to his memory. It is said, that after the taking of Troy, the ghost of Achilles appeared to the Greeks, and demanded of them Polyxena, who accordingly was sacrificed on his tomb by his son Neoptolemus. Some say that this sacrifice was voluntary, and that Polyxena was so grieved at his death that she killed herself on his tomb. The Thessalians yearly sacrificed a black and white bull on his tomb. It is reported that he married Helen after the siege of Troy; but others maintain, that this marriage happened after his death, in the island of Leuce, where many of the ancient heroes lived as in a separate elysium. [Vid. Leuce.] When Achilles was young, his mother asked him, whether he preferred a long life spent in obscurity and retirement, or a few years of military fame and glory; and that, to his honour, he made choice of the latter. Some ages after the Trojan war, Alexander, going to the conquest of Persia, offered sacrifices on the tomb of Achilles, and admired the hero who had found a Homer to publish his fame to posterity. Achilles is supposed to have died, B. C. 1183. Xenoph. de Venat.—Plut. in Alex. De fort. in Orbe Lun. De music. De amor. mull. Quæs. Græc.—Paus. 3, 18, &c.—Dict. 17.—Stat. Achill.—Ovid. Met 12, 3, &c. Trist. 3, 5, 37, &c.—Virg. Æn. 472, 566. 2, 27. 5, 6, 56, &c. Epithal. 15.—Hygin. 96 et 110.—Strab. 14.—Plin. 35, 12.—Max. Tyr. orat.—27.—Homer. 1, od. 8. 2, et 16 4, od. 6. 2 ev. 2, 42.—Hom. Il. & Od.—Dictys Cret. 1, 2, 3, &c.—Dares Phryg.—Juv. 7, 210.—Apollon. Argon. 1, 569.—There were other persons of the same name. The most known were——a man who received Juno when she fled from Jupiter's courtship——the preceptor of Chiron the centaur——a son of Jupiter and Lamia, reported to be larger than Venus——a man who instituted ostracism at Athens——Tatius, a Greek writer of Alexandria. Vid Tatius.

ACHILLEUM, a town of Troas, near the tomb of Achilles, built by the Mytilenians. Plin. 5, 30.

ACHILLEUS, or Aquileus, a Roman general in Egypt, in the reign of Diocletian, who rebelled, and for five years maintained the imperial dignity at Alexandria. Diocletian at last marched against him; and, because he had supported a long siege, the emperor ordered him to be devoured by lions.

ACHIVI, a name given by the ancient poets to all the people of Greece or Achaia.

ACHLADEUS, a Corinthian general, killed by Aristomenes. Paus. 4. 19.

ACHOLOE, one of the harpies. Hygin. 14.

ACICHORIUS, a general with Brennus in the expedition which the Gauls undertook against Persia. Paus. 10, 19.

ACIDALIA, a surname of Venus, from a fountain of the same name in Bœotia, sacred to her. The Graces bathed in the fountain. Virg. Æn. 1, 720.—Ovid. Fast. 4, 168.

ACIDASA, a river of Peloponnesus, formerly called Jardanus. Paus. 5, 5.

ACILA, a town of Arabia, from which the ancients set sail for India. Now Zider. Plin. 6, 28.

ACILIA, a plebeian family at Rome, which traced its pedigree up to the Trojans.—The mother of Lucan.

ACILIA LEX was enacted A. U. C. 556, by C. Acilius the tribune, for the plantation of five colonies in Italy. Liv. 32, 29.——Another, called also Calpurnia, by Manilius Acilius Glabrio, a tribune, A. U. C. 683, ordained that in trials for extortion, sentence should be passed after the cause was once pleaded, and that there should not be a second hearing. Cic. proam. in Verr. 17. 1. 9.—Ascon. in Cic.

M. ACILIUS BALBUS was consul with Portius Cato, A. U. C. 686. It is said, that during his consulship, milk and blood fell from heaven. Plin. 2, 56.——Glabrio, a tribune of the people, who, with a legion, quelled the insurgent slaves in Etruria. Being consul with P. Corn. Scipio Nasica, A. U. C. 561, he conquered Antiochus at Thermopylæ, for which he obtained a triumph, and three days were appointed for public thanksgiving. He stood for the censorship against Cato, but desisted on account of the false measures used by his competitor. Justin. 31, 6.—Liv. 30, 40. 31, 50. 35, 10, &c.——The son of the preceding, erected a temple to Piety, which his father had vowed to this goddess when fighting against Antiochus. He raised a golden statue to his father, the first that appeared in Italy. The temple of Piety was built on the spot where once a woman had fed with her milk her aged father, whom the senate had imprisoned, and excluded from all aliments. Val. Max 2, 5.——The enactor of a law against bribery.——A prætor in the time that Verres was accused by Cicero.——A man accused of extortion, and twice defended by Cæsar. He was proconsul of Sicily, and lieutenant to Cæsar in the civil wars. Cæs. Bell. Civ. 3, 15.——A consul, whose son was killed by Domitian, because he fought with wild beasts. The true cause of this murder was, that young Glabrio was stronger than the emperor, and therefore envied. Juv. 4, 94.

ACILLA, a town in Africa. Cæs. Afr 35.

ACIS, a shepherd of Sicily, son of Faunus and the nymph Simæthis. Galatea fell passionately in love with him; upon which, his rival, Polyphemus, through jealousy, crushed him to death with the fragment of a rock. The gods changed Acis into a stream which rises from mount Ætna, now Jaci. Ovid. Met. 13, 8.

ACME, the mistress of Septimius. Catull 45, 1, &c

ACMON, a native of Lyrnessus, who accompanied Æneas into Italy. His father's name was Clytus. Virg. Æn. 10. 128.

ACMONIDES, one of the Cyclops. Ovid. Fast. 4, 288.

ACO. Vid. Ace.

ACŒTES, the pilot of the ship which, against his consent, carried away Bacchus, who had been found asleep at Naxos. The crew were changed into sea monsters, but Acœtes was preserved. Ovid. Met. 4, 9.

ACONTES, one of Lycaon's sons. Apollod. 3, 8.

ACONTEUS, a famous hunter, changed into a stone, by the head of Medusa, at the nuptials of Perseus and Andromeda. Ovid. Met. 5, 201.——A person killed in the wars of Æneas and Turnus in Italy. Virg. Æn. 11, 666.

ACONTIUS, a youth of the island of Cea, who having gone to Delos, to see the sacred rites which were performed there by a crowd of virgins in the temple of Diana, fell in love with Cydippe, a beautiful virgin, but not daring to ask her in marriage on account of the meanness of his birth, presented her with an apple, on which were inscribed these words, "I swear by Diana, Acontius shall be my husband." Cydippe read the words, and became; herself compelled by the oath she had inadvertently made, married Acontius. Ovid. Her ep. 20. ——A mountain of Bœotia. Plin. 4, 7.

ACONTOBULUS, a place of Cappadocia, under Hippolyte queen of the Amazons. Apollon. 2, 2.

ACORIS, a king of Egypt, who assisted Evagoras king of Cyprus against Persia. Diod. 15.

ACRADINA, the citadel of Syracuse, taken by Marcellus the Roman consul. Plin. in Marcel. —Cic. in Verr. 4.

ACRÆ, a town of Sicily, about twenty-four miles west of Syracuse. It was founded by the Syracusans. Liv. 24, 35. ——A mountain in Peloponnesus. Paus. 2, 36.

ACRÆA, a daughter of the river Asterion. ——A surname of Diana, from a temple built to her by Menalippus, on a mountain near Argos. ——A surname of Juno. Paus. 2, 17.

ACRÆPHIA, or Acræphium, a town of Bœotia, situated on mount Ptoon. It was founded by Acræphneus, son of Apollo. Herod. 8, 135.—Paus. 9, 23.

ACRAGALLIDÆ, a dishonest nation living ancontly near Athens. Æsc. contra Ctesiph.

ACRAGAS. Vid. Agrigentum.

ACRALUS, a lofty man of Nola, sent into Asia to plunder the temples of the gods. Liv. Ann. 15, 45. 16, 23.

ACRAS, one of Hippodamia's suitors. Paus. 6, 21.—Hercules' son, a town of Laconia. Id. 3, 21.

ACRIDOPHAGI, an Æthiopian nation, who fed upon locusts, and lived not beyond their fortieth year. At the approach of old age, swarms of winged insects attacked them, and covered their body and breast, till the patient, to outlive himself, drew blood, which increased their numbers, and ended in his death. Diod. 3. Plin. 11, 29. Solin. 31.

ACRION, a Pythagorean philosopher of Locris. Cic. de An. 5, 3.

ACRISIONEUS, a patronimic applied to the Argives, from Acrisius, one of their ancient kings, or from Acrisione a town of Acrolis, called after a daughter of Acrisius of the same name. Virg. Æ. 7, 410

ACRISIONIADES, a patronimic of Perseus, from his grandfather Acrisius. Ovid. Met. 4, 70.

ACRISIUS, son of Abas one of the Argive kings, by Ocalea, daughter of Mantineus. He was born at the same birth as Proetus with whom, it is said, that he quarrelled even in his mother's womb. The enmity between the brothers grew up with their years, and at last, after much discussion, Acrisius prevailed, and Proetus was driven from Argos. Acrisius had Danae as only child daughter of Eurydice, and being told by an oracle, that his daughter's son would put him to death, he confined Danae in a brazen tower, to prevent her becoming a mother. She however became pregnant, by Jupiter changed into a golden shower; and though Acrisius ordered her, and her infant called Perseus, to be exposed on the sea, yet they were [illegible] for his actions, that Acrisius, anxious to see so renowned a grandson, went to Larissa. Here Perseus wishing to show his skill in throwing a quoit, killed an old man who proved to be his grandfather, whom he knew not, and thus the oracle was fulfilled. Acrisius received about divine honours. Hygin. fab. 63. Ovid. Met. 4, 16.—Herod. 1 and 6.—Apollod. 2, 2. Paus. 2, 16, &c.—Vid Danae, Perseus, Proetides.

ACRITAS, a promontory of Messenia, in Peloponnesus. Now cape Gallo. Mela 2, 2.—Plin. 4, 5.

ACROATHON or ACROTHOUS, a town on the top of mount Athos, whose inhabitants lived to an uncommon old age. Mela 2, 2.—Plin. 8, 5.

ACROCERAUNUM, a promontory of Epirus with mountains called Acroceraunia, which separate the Ionian and Adriatic seas. The word comes from ἄκρος, high, and κεραυνὸς, thunder, because, by reason of their great height, they were often struck with lightning. They were remarkable for attracting storms, and thence dreaded by mariners. Lucret. 6, 420. Plin. 4, 1.—Virg. Æ. 3, 506.—Strab. 6.—Horat. 1, od. 3. 20.

ACROCORINTHUS, a steep and elevated mountain overhanging the city of Corinth, on which was built a citadel, called also by the same name. It was one of the horns on which Philip was advised to lay hold, in order to secure the heads of the Peloponnesus. It was also considered as one of the fetters of Greece, of which the others were Demetrias in Thessaly, and Chalcis in Eubœa. Its position was naturally so strong, that a small number of men were sufficient to surmount it, and we find that in the time of Aratus it was defended by four hundred soldiers. It abounded in excellent water, and afforded one of the most magnificent prospects in the world. Strab. 8.—Paus. 2, 4.—Plut. in Arat.—Stat. Theb. 7, 106.

ACRON, a king of the Caninenses, whom Romulus slew in single combat, after the rape of the Sabines. His spoils were dedicated to Jupiter under the name of Feretrius, because they were carried on a [illegible]. Plin. in Rom.—A physician of Agrigentum in Sicily, who flourished B. C. 470. He wrote physical treatises in the Doric dialect, and put a stop to a pestilence by funeral pyres. Plin. 29, 1. Plut. in Num.—One of the friends of Lucas, killed by Mezentius. Virg. Æ. 10, 719.

ACRONIUS, a person who distinguished himself in the games performed at the court of Alcinous, in presence of Ulysses. Homer. O. 8, 111.

ACROPATOS, one of Alexander's officers, who obtained part of Media after the king's death. Justin. 13, 4.

ACROPOLIS, the citadel of Athens, built on an elevated rock, and accessible only on one side. Its site has been variously stated, but from a careful consideration of the different accounts it appears to have been about a Roman mile in circumference. The Acropolis was entirely occupied with temples and other public edifices. Paus. in Att.

ACROTATUS, son of Cleombrotus, king of Sparta, succeeded to his father, leaving a son called Areus. Paus. 4, 14. 3, 6.—Son of Areus, was greatly loved by Chelonis, wife of Cleombrotus. This union displeased her husband, who called Pyrrhus the Epirot to avenge his wrongs. When Sparta was besieged by Pyrrhus Acrotatus was seen bravely fighting in the middle of the enemy, and commended by the multitude, who congratulated Cleombrotus on [illegible] to arms to [illegible]

ACROTHOOS. Vid. Acroathon.

ACTA, or ACTE, a word derived from αγω, denoting what is drawn out to somewhat of a wedge-like form, or in a general way, a projection or promontory. It was a name given to the sea-coast about mount Athos, in which were six cities mentioned by Thucyd. Ides. It was likewise the ancient name of Attica, Peloponnesus, Troezene, and Epidaurus. Thucyd. 4, 109.—Strab. 9.

ACTÆA, one of the Nereides.——A surname of Ceres.——A daughter of Danaus. Apollod. 2, 1.

ACTÆON, a famous huntsman, son of Aristæus and Autonoe, daughter of Cadmus, whence he is called Autonoeus heros. He accidentally discovered Diana and her attendants bathing in a fountain near Gargaphia, for which he was changed into a stag, and by that shape pursued and devoured by his own dogs. Paus. 9, 2.—Ovid. Met. 3, 3.——A beautiful youth, son of Melissus of Corinth, whom Archias, one of the Heraclidæ, endeavoured to debauch and carry away. He was killed in the struggle which in consequence of this happened between his father and ravisher. Melissus complained of the insult, and drowned himself; and soon after, the country being visited by a pestilence, Archias was expelled. Plut. in Amat.

ACTÆUS, a powerful person who made himself master of a part of Greece, which he called Attica. His daughter Agraulos married Cecrops, whom the Athenians called their first king, though Actæus reigned before him. Paus. 1, 2 et 14.—The word is of the same signification as Atticus, an inhabitant of Attica.

ACTE, a mistress of Nero, degraded from Attalus. Sueton. in Ner. 28.——One of the Horæ. Hygin. 183

ACTIA, the mother of Augustus. As she slept in the temple of Apollo, she dreamt that a dragon had lain with her. Nine months after, she brought forth, having previously dreamt that her bowels were scattered all over the world. Suet. in Aug. 94.——Games instituted, or perhaps restored, by Augustus, in commemoration of his victory over M. Antony, at Actium. They were celebrated every fifth year, according to the general opinion, and were sacred to Apollo, who was thence called Actius Apollo. Plut. in Anton.—Strab. 7.—Virg. Æn. 3, 280. 8, 675.——A sister of Julius Cæsar. Plut. in Cæ.

ACTIS, son of Sol, went from Greece into Egypt, where he taught astrology, and founded Heliopolis. Diod 5.

ACTISANES, a king of Æthiopia, who conquered Egypt, and expelled king Amasis. He was famous for his equity, and his severe punishment of robbers, whose noses he cut off, and whom he banished to a desert place, where they were in want of all aliment, and lived only upon crows. Diod. 1.

ACTIUM, a small town of Epirus, near a promontory at the entrance of the Ambracian gulf of the same name. It was celebrated for a temple of Apollo, and for the naval combat between Antony and Augustus, which decided the fate of the Roman world, Sept. 2, B. C. [illegible] it is still called Azio. Vid. Actia. Plut. [illegible]ton.—Sueton. in Aug.

ACTIUS, a surname of Apollo, from Actium, where he had a temple. Virg Æn. 8, 704.——A poet. Vid. Accius.——A prince of the Volsci Vid. Accius.

ACTIUS NAVIUS, an augur who cut a loadstone in two with a razor, before Tarquin and the Roman people, to convince them of his skill as an augur. Flor. 1, 5.—Liv. 1, 36.——Labeo. Vid. Labeo.

ACTOR, a companion of Hercules in his expedition against the Amazons.——The father of Menœtius by Ægina, whence Patroclus is called Actorides. Ovid. Trist. 1, 8.——A man called also Aruncus. Virg. Æn. 12, 93.——One of the friends of Æneas. Id. 9, 500.——A son of Neptune by Agamede. Hygin. 14.——A son of Deon and Diomede. Apollod. 1, 9.——The father of Eurytus, and brother of Augeas. Apollod. 2, 7.——A son of Acastus, one of the Argonauts. Hygin. 14.——The father of Astyoche. Homer, Il. 2.——A king of Lemnos. Hygin. 102.

ACTORIDES, a patronymic given to Patroclus, grandson of Actor. Ovid Met. 13, 1.——Also to Erythus, son of Actor. Id. Art. A. 3.——Two brothers so like each other, that in driving a chariot, one generally held the reins, and the other the whip; whence they are represented with two heads, four feet, and one body. Hercules conquered them. Pindar.

ACTORIS, a female servant of Penelope. Homer. Od. 23.

M. ACTORIUS NASO, a Roman historian. Sueton. in Jul. 9.

C ACULEO, a Roman lawyer celebrated as much for the extent of his understanding, as for his knowledge of law. He was uncle to Cicero. Cic. in Orat.

ACUPHIS, an ambassador from India to Alexander. Plut. in Alex.

ACUSILAUS, and DAMAGETAS, two brothers, conquerors at the Olympic games. The Greeks strewed flowers upon Diagoras' their father, and called him happy in having such worthy sons. Paus. 6, 7.——A Greek historian, who was born at Argos, and flourished about the same time with Cadmus the Milesian. He composed a work on the Genealogies of the principal Families of Greece, from some brazen tablets, which his father was reported to have found while digging in his house. Cicero tells us that he confined himself to a plain, unadorned narrative of facts, and aimed at none of the graces of composition. Cic. de Orat. 2.——An Athenian who taught rhetoric at Rome under Galba.

M. ACUTIUS, an ancient comic writer, whose plays were known under the names of Leones, Gemini, Anus, Bœotia, &c

ADA, a sister of queen Artemisia, who married Hidrœus. After her husband's death, she succeeded to the throne of Caria; but being expelled by her younger brother, she retired to Alinda, which she delivered to Alexander, after adopting him as her son. Curt. 2, 8.—Strab. 14

ADÆUS, a native of Mitylene, who wrote a Greek treatise on statuaries, and their [illegible]

ADAMANTÆA, Jupiter's nurse in Crete, who suspended him in his cradle to a tree, that he might be found neither on the earth, the sea, nor in heaven. To drown the infant's cries, she had drums beat, and cymbals sounded around the tree. Hygin. 139.

ADAMAS, a Trojan prince, killed by Merion. Homer. Il. 13, 560.——A youth who raised a rebellion on being emasculated by Cotys king of Thrace. Arist Pol 5, 10.

ADAMANTUS, a native of Ithaca, father of Achæmenides. Virg. Æn. 3, 614.

ADARPII, a people at the foot of mount Caucasus. Justin. 12, 5.

ADDEPHAGIA, a goddess of the Sicilians. Ælian. V. H. 1, 27.

ADDUA, a river of Cisalpine Gaul, which issues from the lake Larius, and flows into the Po. Plin. — 108.

ADELPHIUS, a friend of M. Antoninus, whom he accompanied in his expedition into Parthia, of which he wrote the history. Strab. 11

ADEMON, raised a sedition in Mauritania to avenge his master Ptolemy, whom Caligula had put to death. Sueton. in Calig. 25

ADES, or HADES, the god of hell among the Greeks, the same as the Pluto of the Latins. The word is derived from a priv. and ειδω, to see; insinuating that hell is destitute of light. It is often used for hell itself by the ancient poets ADGANDESTRIUS, a prince of Gaul, who sent to Rome for poison to destroy Armenius, and was answered by the senate, that the Romans fought their enemies openly, and never used perfidious means. Tacit. An. 2, 88.

ADHERBAL, son of Micipsa, and grandson of Masinissa, was besieged at Cirta, and put to death by Jugurtha, after vainly imploring the aid of Rome, B. C. 112. Sallust. in Jug

ADHERBAS, the husband of Dido. Vid. Sichæus

ADIANTE, a daughter of Danaus Apollod. 2, 11.

ADIATÓRIX, a governor of Galatia, who, to gain Antony's favour, slaughtered, in one night, all the inhabitants of the Roman colony of Hercules, in Pontus. He was taken at Actium, led in triumph by Augustus, and strangled in prison. Strab. 12

ADIMANTUS, a commander of the Athenian fleet, taken by the Spartans. All the men of the fleet were put to death, except Adimantus, because he had opposed the designs of his countrymen, who intended to mutilate all the Spartans. Aemyl. Hist. Graec. Pausanias says, 4, 17, 10, 8, that the Spartans had bribed him.——A brother of Plato Laert. 3.——A Corinthian general, who reproached Themistocles with his exile.——A king struck with thunder, for saying that Jupiter deserved no sacrifices Ovid. in Ibin 337.

ADMETA, daughter of Eurystheus, was priestess of Juno's temple at Argos.——One of the Oceanides Hesiod Theog. 349.

ADMETUS, son of Pheres and Clymene, king of Pheræ in Thessaly, married Thetis daughter of Nereus, and after her death, Alceste daughter of Pelias. Apollo, when banished from heaven, is said to have tended his flocks for nine years, and to have obtained from the Parcæ, that Admetus should never die, if another person laid down his life for him. This was cheerfully done by Alceste. Admetus was one of the Argonauts, and was at the hunt of the Calydonian boar. Pelias promised his daughter in marriage only to him who could bring him a chariot drawn by a lion and a wild boar. Admetus did this by the aid of Apollo, and obtained Alceste in marriage. Some say that Hercules brought him back Alceste from hell. Senec. in Medea & Hygin. 50, 51, et 243.—Diod. & Apollod. Arg.—Apollon. 2, 2, 89, &c.—Tibull 2, 3.—Paus. 5, 17.——A king of the Molossi, to whom Themistocles fled for protection. C. Nep. in Them. 8.——An officer of Alexander, killed at the siege of Tyre. Diod. 17.

ADONIA, feasts in honour of Venus, and in memory of Adonis; first celebrated at Byblos in Phœnicia. They were observed with great solemnity by the Greeks, Lycians, Syrians, Egyptians, &c. They generally lasted two days; on the first of which the women carried about images of Venus and Adonis, with all the pomp and ceremonies practised at funerals, while the second was devoted to joy, as if Adonis was returned to life. In some towns of Greece and Egypt, they lasted seven or eight days. Only women were admitted, and such as did not appear were compelled to prostitute themselves for one day. The time of the celebration was supposed to be very unlucky. The fleet of Nicias sailed from Athens to Sicily on that day, whence many unfortunate omens were drawn. Plut. in Nicia.—Ammian. 22, 9.

ADONIS, son of Cinyras, by his daughter Myrrha, [Vid. Myrrha] was the favourite of Venus. He was fond of hunting, and was often cautioned by his mistress not to hunt wild beasts, for fear of being killed in the attempt. This advice he slighted, and at last received a mortal bite from a wild boar, which he had wounded, and Venus, after shedding many tears at his death, changed him into a flower called anemone. Proserpine is said to have restored him to life, on condition that he should spend six months with her, and the rest of the year with Venus. This implies the alternate return of summer and winter. Adonis is often taken for Osiris, &c., as the festivals of both were often begun with mournful lamentations, and finished with a revival of joy, as if they were returning to life again. Adonis had temples raised to his memory, and is said by some to have been beloved by Apollo and Bacchus. Apollod. 3, 14.—Propert. 2, 13, 53.—Virg. Ecl. 10, 18.—Ovid. in Amor.—Hygin. 58, 164, 248, &c. Strab. Met. 10, 10.—Museus de Her.—Paus. 2, 20, 9, 41.——A river of Phœnicia, which rises in the neighbouring mountain of Libanus, and falls into the sea, after a north-west course, at Byblos. The streams of this river, at the anniversary of the death of Adonis, which was in the rainy season, were tinged with the red earth over which they flowed, and were supposed to have derived their colour from his blood.

ADRAMYTTIUM, an Athenian colony on the sea coast of Mysia, near the Caycus. Strab. 13.—Thucyd. 5, 1.

ADRANA, a river in Germany. Now, the Eider. Tac. Ann. 1, 56.

ADRANUM, a town of Sicily near Ætna, with a river of the same name. The chief deity of the place was called Adranus, and his temple was guarded by one thousand dogs. Paus. in Timol.

ADRASTA, one of the Oceanides who nursed Jupiter. Hygin. 182.

ADRASTIA, a mountain of Sicyon. Paus. 2, 15.——A mountain. Plut. in Lucul.——A country near Troy, called after Adrastus, who built there a temple to Nemesis. Here Apollo had an oracle. Strab. 13.——A daughter of Jupiter and Necessity. She is called by some Nemesis, and is the punisher of injustice. The Egyptians placed her above the moon, whence she looked down upon the actions of men. Strab.——A daughter of Melisseus, to whom some attribute the nursing of Jupiter. She is the same as Adrasta. Apol. 1, 1.

ADRASTUS, a, a plain near the Granicus, where Alexander first defeated Darius. Justin. 11, 6.

ADRASTUS, son of Talaus and Lysimache, was king of Argos. Polynices being banished from Thebes by his brother Eteocles, fled to Argos, where he married Argia, daughter of Adrastus. The king assisted his son-in-law, and marched against Thebes with an army headed by seven of the most famous generals. They all perished in the war except Adrastus, who was obliged to have recourse to the Athenians, in order to compel the Thebans to restore the bodies of the slain. Adrastus, ten years after the conclusion of the war, collected a new army, under the sons of the former chiefs, and marched with them, accompanied by his own son Ægialeus, against Thebes. The city was taken, and Ægialeus alone, among the chiefs, was slain in the siege. This loss afflicted Adrastus so much, that he died of grief at Megara, as he was leading back his victorious army. A temple was raised to his memory at Sicyon. Virg. Æn. 6, 480.—Apollod. 1, 9, 3, 7.—Hygin. Fab. 71 & 9.—Hygin. 69, 69 et 70.—Paus. 1, 39. 8, 25. 10, 10.—Herod. 5, 67, &c.——A peripatetic philosopher, disciple to Aristotle. It is supposed that a copy of his treatise on harmonics is preserved in the Vatican.——A Phrygian prince, who having inadvertently killed his brother, fled to Crœsus, where he was humanely received, and entrusted with the care of his son Atys. In hunting a wild boar, Adrastus slew the young prince, and in his despair killed himself on his grave. Herod. 1, 35, &c.——A Lydian, who assisted the Greeks against the Persians. Paus. 7, 5.——A soothsayer in the Trojan war. Hom. Il. 2 et 6.——The father of Eurydice, who married Ilus the Trojan. Apollod. 2, 12.——A king of Sicyon, who reigned 4 years B. C. 1215.——A son of Hercules. Hygin. 242.

ADRIA, ADRIANUM, or ADRIATICUM MARE, a sea lying between Illyricum and Italy, now called the gulf of Venice, first made known to the Greeks by the discoveries of the Phocæans. Herod. 1.—Horat. Od. 1, 33. 3, 3 et 9.—Catull. 4, 6.

ADRIANOPOLIS, a town of Thrace on the Hebrus.——Another in Ætolia, Pisidia, and Bithynia.

ADRIANUS, or HADRIANUS, the fifteenth emperor of Rome, was born A. D. 76. He is represented as an active, learned, warlike and masterly general. He came to Britain, in 120, where he built a wall from the mouth of the Tyne to Solway Frith, eighty miles in length, to protect the Britons from the incursions of the Caledonians. He also established a Roman colony in Jerusalem, where he built the city Ælia Capitolina, which gave occasion to a revolt of the Jews. His memory was so retentive, that he remembered every incident of his life, and knew all the soldiers of his army by name. In the beginning of his reign, he followed the virtues of his adopted father and predecessor Trajan, he remitted all debts due to his treasury for sixteen years, and publicly burnt the account books, that his word might not be suspected. It is said that he wished to enrol Christ among the gods of Rome, but his apparent lenity towards the Christians was disproved, by the erection of a statue to Jupiter on the spot where Jesus rose from the dead, and one to Venus on Mount Calvary. He died of a dysentery at Baiæ, July 10 A. D. [illegible] the 63d year of his age, after a reign of [illegible] years and nearly eleven months. On [illegible]-bed, he composed some Latin versés, [illegible]ed to his soul, which betray his uncertainty with regard to a future state. Dio. Cassius.——An officer of Lucullus. Plut. in Luc.——A rhetorician of Tyre in the age of M. Antoninus, who wrote seven books of metamorphoses, besides other treatises now lost.

ADRUMETUM, or HADRUMETUM, a town of Africa, on the Mediterranean, built by the Phœnicians. Its ruins shew it to have been rather a place of importance than extent. Sallust. in Jug.

ADULIS, a town of Ethiopia, founded by Egyptian slaves. Now Arkiko.

ADYRMACHIDÆ, a maritime people of Africa, near Egypt. Herod. 4, 168

ÆA, a city of Colchis, situated on the river Phasis, and famed in the adventures of Jason. Herod. 1, 2.—Apollon. 2.——A fountain of Macedonia, which rose near Amydon, and mingled its waters with those of the Axius. Strab. 7.

ÆACEA, solemn festivals and games, celebrated at Ægina, in honour of Æacus ÆACIDÆ, a king of Epirus, son of Neoptolemus, and brother to Olympias. He was expelled by his subjects for his continual wars with Macedonia. He left a son, Pyrrhus, only two years old, whom Chaonus king of Illyricum educated. Paus. 1, 11.

ÆACIDES, a patronymic of the descendants of Æacus, such as Achilles, Peleus, Pyrrhus, &c. Virg. Æn. 1, 103, &c.

ÆACUS, son of Jupiter by Ægina daughter of Asopus, was king of the island of Œnopia, which he called by his mother's name. A pestilence having destroyed all his subjects, he entreated Jupiter to re-people his kingdom; and according to his desire, all the ants which were in an old oak were changed into men, and called by Æacus myrmidons, from μυρμηξ, an ant.—Æacus married Endeis, by whom he had Telamon and Peleus. He afterwards had Phocus by Psamathe, one of the Nereids. He was a man of such integrity that the ancients have made him one of the judges of hell, with Minos and Rhadamanthus. Horat. Od. 2, 13. 4, 8.—Paus. 1, 44. 2, 29.—Ovid. Met. 7, 25. 13, 25.—Propert. 4, 12.—Plut. de consol. ad Apoll.—Apollod. 3, 12.

ÆÆA, a name given to Circe, because born at Æa. Virg. Æn. 3, 386

ÆANTEUM, a city of Troas, where Ajax was buried. Plin. 5, 30.——An island near the Thracian Chersonesus. Ib. 4, 12.

ÆANTIDES, a tyrant of Lampsacus, intimate with Darius. He married a daughter of Hippias, tyrant of Athens. Thucyd. 6, 59.——One of the seven poets, called Pleiades.

ÆANTIS, an Athenian tribe. Plut. Symp. 2.

ÆAS, a river of Epirus, falling into the Ionian sea. In the fable of Io, Ovid describes it as falling into the Peneus, and meeting other rivers at Tempe. This seems have supposed to be a geographical mistake of the poet. Lucan. 6, 391.—Ovid. Met. 1, 580.

ÆATUS, son of Philip, and brother of Polycles, was descended from Hercules. An oracle having said that whoever of the two touched the land after crossing the Achelous should obtain the kingdom, Polycles pretended to be lame, and prevailed upon her brother to carry her across on his shoulders. When they came near the opposite side, Polycles leaped ashore from her brother's back, exclaiming that the kingdom was her own. Æatus joined her in her exclamation, and afterwards married her, and reigned conjointly with her. Their son Thessalus gave his name to Thessaly. Polyæn. 8.

ÆCHMACORAS, a son of Hercules, by Phylone, daughter of Alcimedon. When the father heard that his daughter had had a child, he exposed her and the infant in the woods to wild [illegible] cones, conducted by the noise of a magpie which imitated the cries of a child, found and delivered them. Paus. 8, 12.

ÆCHMIS, succeeded his father Polymnestor on the throne of Arcadia, in the reign of Theopompus of Sparta. Paus. 8, 5.

ÆDEPSUS, a town of Eubœa, with warm baths. The modern name is Dipso. Plin. 4, 12.—Strab. 10.

ÆDESSA, or EDESSA, a town of Macedonia, near Pella. Caranus, king of Macedonia, took it by following goats that sought shelter from the rain, and called it from that circumstance (αιγες, capræ) Ægeæ. It was the burying-place of the Macedonian kings; and an oracle had said, that as long as the kings were buried there, so long would their kingdom subsist. Alexander was buried in a different place; and on that account, some authors have said that the kingdom became extinct. Justin. 7, 1.

ÆDICULA RIDICULI, a Roman temple to the god of mirth, raised in commemoration of the repulse of Hannibal by severe weather, when he was advancing upon Rome after the battle of Cannæ. Plut. in Lyc. Agid. et Cleom.——Pausanias also mentions a Deus ridiculus.

ÆDILES, Roman magistrates, of three kinds, Ædiles Plebeii, Curules, and Cereales. The Ædiles Plebeii were first created A.U.C. 260, in the Comitia Curiata, at the same time with the tribunes of the commons, to be as it were their assistants, and to determine certain lesser causes which the tribunes committed to them. They were afterwards created, as the other inferior magistrates, at the Comitia Tributa. The Ædiles Curules were created from the patricians, A.U.C. 387. They wore the toga prætexta, had the right of images, and used the sella curulis, whence they had their name. It was the especial duty of the ædiles to take care of public buildings and roads, to regulate the markets, and to examine the lawfulness of weights and measures. Another part of their duty was to procure the celebration of certain public games, to act as judges in all cases relating to the rate or exchange of estates, to inspect all new pieces offered to the theatres, and to be watchful that no new gods or religious ceremonies were intruded upon the people. The Ædiles Cereales two in number, were added by Julius Cæsar. Their office was to inspect the public granaries, and to take care of the corn, which was called annona Cerrea. Dionys. 6, 90.—Liv. 6, 42. 24, 43.—Cic. de Leg. 3, 3.

ÆDON, daughter of Pandarus, married Zethus, brother to Amphion, by whom she had a son called Itylus. She was so jealous of her sister Niobe, because she had more children than herself, that she resolved to murder the elder, who was educated with Itylus. She by mistake killed her own son, and was changed into a nightingale as she attempted to kill herself. Homer. Od. 19, 518.

ÆDUI, or Hedui, a powerful nation of Celtic Gaul known for their valour in the wars of Cæsar. When their country was invaded by this celebrated general, they were at the head of a faction in opposition to the Sequani and their partisans, and they had established their superiority in frequent battles. To support their cause, however, the Sequani obtained the assistance of Ariovistus king of Germany, and soon defeated their opponents. The arrival of Cæsar changed the face of affairs, the Ædui were restored to the sovereignty of the country, and the artful Roman, by employing one faction against the other, was enabled to conquer them all, though the insurrection of Ambiorix, and that more powerfully supported by Vercingetorix, shook for a while the dominion of Rome in Gaul, and checked the career of the conqueror. Cæs. in Bell. G.

ÆETA, or ÆEtes, king of Colchis, son of Sol, and Perseis daughter of Oceanus, was father of Medea, Absyrtus, and Chalciope, by Idya, one of the Oceanides. He killed Phryxus son of Athamas, who had fled to his court on a golden ram. This murder he committed to obtain the fleece of the golden ram. The Argonauts came against Colchis, and recovered the golden fleece by means of Medea, though it was guarded by bulls that breathed fire, and by a venomous dragon. Their expedition has been celebrated by all the ancient poets. [Vid. Jason, Medea, and Phryxus.] Apollod. 1, 9.—Ovid. Met. 7, 1, &c.—Paus. 2, 3.—Justin. 42, 2.—Flacc. et Orpheus in Argon.

ÆETIAS, a patronymic given to Medea, as daughter of Æetes. Ovid. Met. 7, 9.

ÆGA, a city of the peninsula of Pallene. Herod. 7, 123.

ÆGÆ, a town, whose inhabitants are called Ægeates. [Vid. Ædessa.]

ÆGÆ, a city of Macedonia, the same as Ædessa. Some writers make them different, but Justin proves this to be erroneous. 7, 1.—Plin. 4, 10.——A town of Eubœa, celebrated for the worship of Neptune. Strab. 9.——A town of Achaia, on the banks of the river Crathis. Herod. 1, 145.——A town of Æolis, south of Cyma, and east of Phocæa. Herod. 1, 149.

ÆGÆÆ, a town and sea port of Cilicia. Lucan. 3, 227.

ÆGÆON, or Ægæon, one of Lycaon's fifty sons. Apollod. 3, 8.——The son of Cœlus, or of Pontus and Terra, the same as Briareus. [Vid. Briareus.] It is supposed that he was a notorious pirate chiefly residing at Ægæ, whence his name; and that the fable about his hundred hands arises from his having one hundred men to manage his oars in his piratical excursions. Virg. Æn. 10, 565.

ÆGÆUM MARE, now the Archipelago, a part of the Mediterranean which divides Greece from Asia Minor. It is full of islands, some of which are called Cyclades, others Sporades, &c. Some refer the origin of its name to Ægeus, but others, with more probability, derive it from the town of Ægæ in the neighbourhood of Eubœa. The Ægean was accounted particularly stormy and dangerous to mariners. Plin. 4, 11.—Strab. 7.—Mela. 2, 16.—Virg. Æn. 12, 364.

ÆGÆUS, a surname of Neptune, from Ægæ in Eubœa. Strab. 9——A river of Corcyra.——A plain in Phocis.

ÆGALEOS, or Ægaleum, a mountain of Attica, from the summit of which Xerxes beheld the battle of Salamis. It was situated to the left of the road from Athens to Eleusis. Its present name is Sharamanga. Herod. 8, 90.—Thucyd. 2, 19.

ÆGAN, [Græc. αιγαν or αιγαιον] the Ægean sea. Stat. Theb. 5, 56.

ÆGAS, a place of Eubœa.——Another near Dauna in Italy. Polyb. 3.

ÆGATES, promontory of Æolia.——Three islands of Carthage, called Ara by Virg. Æn. 1. These islands the Carthaginian fleet, commanded by Hanno was defeated by that of the Romans, under Lutatius Catulus, in a battle which put an end to the first Punic war. Liv. 21, 10 et 41. 22, 54.—Mela 2, 7.

ÆGELION, a town of Thessaly, taken by king Attalus in the Macedonian war. Liv. 31, 46.

ÆGERIA. Vid. Egeria.

ÆGESTA, the daughter of Hippotes, and mother of Ægestus called Acestes. Virg. Æn. 1, 554.——An ancient town of Sicily near mount Eryx, destroyed by Agathocles. It was sometimes called Segesta and Acesta. Diod. 10.

ÆGEUS, the reputed father of Theseus, was the tenth king of Athens, reckoning from Cecrops, and the son of Pandion II. This king having no children, and wishing to have some, applied to the oracle at Delphi; by which he was directed to abstain from intercourse with women, till his return to Athens. The response, however, not being deemed by him sufficiently explicit, he consulted several persons upon the interpretation of it, and amongst others his friend Pittheus, king of Trœzene, who was remarkable for his wisdom and learning. This prince was unable to solve the difficulty, but gave him his daughter Æthra in marriage. Ægeus left her pregnant, and told her, if she had a son, to send him to Athens as soon as he could lift a stone under which he had concealed his sword. By this sword he was to be known to Ægeus, who did not wish to make any public discovery of a son, for fear of his nephews, the Pallantides, who expected his crown. Æthra became mother of Theseus, whom she accordingly sent to Athens with his father's sword. At that time Ægeus lived with Medea, the divorced wife of Jason. When Theseus came to Athens, Medea attempted to poison him, but he escaped, and upon showing Ægeus the sword he wore, discovered himself to be his son. When Theseus returned from Creto after the death of the Minotaur, he forgot, agreeably to the engagement made with his father, to hoist up white sails as a signal of his success; and Ægeus, at the sight of black sails, concluding that his son was dead, threw himself from a high rock into the sea, which, from him, as some suppose, has been called the Ægean. Ægeus reigned forty-eight years, and died B.C. 1225. | Vid. Theseus, Minotaurus, and Medea.] Apollod. 1, 8, 9. 3, 15.—Paus. 1, 5, 22, 33. 4, 2.—Plut. in Thes.—Hyg. 37 & 43.

ÆGIALE, one of Phaeton's sisters changed into poplars, and their tears into amber. They are called Heliades.——A daughter of Adrastus, by Amphitea daughter of Proœax. She married Diomedes, in whose absence, during the Trojan war, she prostituted herself to her servants, and chiefly to Cometes, whom the king had left master of his house. At his return, Diomedes being told of his wife's wantonness, went to settle in Daunia. Some say that Venus implanted those vicious and lustful propensities in Ægiale, to revenge herself on Diomedes, who had wounded her in the Trojan war. Ovid. in Ib. 350.—Homer Il. 5, 412.—Apollod. 1, 9.—Stat. 3.—Sil. 5, 48.

ÆGIALEA, the ancient name of Peloponnesus.

ÆGIALEUS, son of Adrastus by Amphitea or Demonassa, was one of the Epigoni, i. e. one of the sons of those generals who were killed in the first Theban war. They went against the Thebans, who had refused to give burial to their fathers, and were victorious. Of all returned home safe, except Ægialeus, who was killed. That expedition is called the war of the Epigoni. Paus. 1, 43, 44. 2, 20. 9, 5.——Hyg. 71. 1, 9. 3, 7.——The same with Absyrtus, the brother of Medea. Justin. 42, 3.

ÆGIALUS, son of Phoroneus, was intrusted with the kingdom of Achaia by king Apis going to Egypt. Peloponnesus was called Ægialea from him.——A man who founded the kingdom of Sicyon 2092 before the Christian era, and reigned 52 years.

ÆGIALUS, a name given to part of Peloponnesus. [Vid. Achaia.] Paus. 5, 1. 7, 1.——A city of Asia Minor.

ÆGIDA, a small Roman city, afterwards called Justinopolis, in honour of Justinian, and now Capo d' Istria. Plin. 3, 19.

ÆGIDES, a patronymic of Theseus. Homer. Il. 1, 265.

ÆGILA, a place in Laconia, where Aristomenes was taken prisoner by a crowd of religious women whom he had attacked. Paus. 4, 17.

ÆGILIA, a small island in Eubœa, where the Persian fleet, under Datis and Artaphernes, was moored before the battle of Marathon. It is now Stouri. Herod. 6, 101 et 107.——Another in the channel which separates Cythera from Crete.

ÆGIMIUS, an old man who lived, according to Anaxeron, two hundred years. Plin. 7, 48.——A king of Doris, whom Hercules assisted to conquer the Lapithæ. Apollod. 2, 7.

ÆGIMURUS, a small island in the bay of Carthage. There were two rocks near this island, named Aræ, on which the Romans and Carthaginians agreed to fix their respective boundaries. The modern name of Ægimurus is Zimbra. Plin. 5, 7.—Virg. Æn. 1, 109.

ÆGINA, daughter of Asopus, had Æacus by Jupiter changed into a flame of fire. She afterwards married Actor, son of Myrmidon, by whom she had some children, who conspired against their father. Some say that she was changed by Jupiter into the island which bears her name. Plin. 4, 12.—Strab. 8.—Aria 2, 7.—Apollod. 1, 9. 3, 12.—Paus. 2, 5 et 29.——An island in that part of the Ægean sea which formed the Saronic gulf. It was also called Œnone, Œnopia, and Myrmidonia, and was reckoned about 180 stadia, or 22½ miles in circumference. This island was originally occupied by colonists from Epidaurus; it however soon shook off the yoke of the mother country, and became, by industry and enterprise, one of the first Grecian states. It furnished eighteen ships to the battle of Artemisium; thirty to that of Salamis; and five hundred men to the battle of Platæa. The Athenians, jealous of the power of the Æginetans, made war against them; and after taking seventy of their ships in a naval action they expelled them from their island. The fugitives settled in Peloponnesus, and after the ruin of Athens by Lysander, they returned to their country, but never again rose to their former prosperity. The modern name of the island is Egina. Herod. 5, 6 et 7.—Paus. 2, 29.—Strab. 8.—Ælian. 12, 10.

ÆGINÆTA, [PAULUS] a physician born in Ægina. He flourished about the year 620, and was the first who noticed the cathartic quality of rhubarb. His works were published at Paris, in 1532, folio.

ÆGIXÆTES, a king of Arcadia, in whose age Lycurgus instituted his famous laws. Paus. 1, 5.

ÆGINIUM, a city of Thessaly. Liv. 32, 15.

ÆGIOCHUS, a surname of Jupiter, from his using the goat Amalthea's skin, instead of a shield, in the war of the Titans. Dod. 5.

ÆGIPAN, a name of Pan, because he had goat's feet.

ÆGIRA, a town of Achaia, between Sicyon and Ægium. It was more anciently named Hyperesia. Paus. 7, 26.—Herod. 1, 145.

ÆGIROESSA, a town of Ætolia, whose situation is not known. Herod. 1, 8.

ÆGIS, the shield of Jupiter, so called because it was covered with the skin of a goat, the name being derived from a Greek word signifying goat's skin. The ægis of Jupiter was covered with that of the goat Amalthæa. The goat was afterwards placed among the constellations. Jupiter gave his ægis to Minerva, who, having killed the gorgon Medusa, placed upon it her sneaky head, which had the power of converting those who beheld it into stone. Virg. Æn. 8, 352 et 435.

ÆGISTHUS, king of Argos, was son of Thyestes by his daughter Pelopea. Thyestes being at variance with his brother Atreus, was told by the oracle, that his wrongs could be revenged only by a son born of himself and his daughter. To avoid such an incest, Pelopea had been consecrated to the service of Minerva by her father, who some time after met her in a wood, and ravished her, without knowing who she was. Pelopea kept the sword of her ravisher, and hiding it to be her father's, exposed the child she had brought forth. The child was preserved, and when grown up, presented with the sword of his mother's ravisher. Pelopea, soon after this melancholy adventure, had married her uncle Atreus, who received into his house her natural son. As Thyestes had debauched the first wife of Atreus, Atreus sent Ægisthus to put him to death, but Thyestes knowing the assassin a sword discovered he was his own son, and, fully to revenge his wrongs, sent him back to murder Atreus. After this murder Thyestes ascended the throne, and banished Agamemnon and Menelaus, the sons, or as others say, the grandsons of Atreus. These children were taken care of by Œneus, king of Ætolia. By their marriage with the daughters of Tyndarus, king of Sparta, they were supposed to recover the kingdom of Argos, to which Agamemnon succeeded, while Menelaus reigned in his father-in-law's place. Ægisthus had been reconciled to the sons of Atreus, and when they went to the Trojan war, he was left guardian of Agamemnon's kingdoms, and of his wife Clytemnestra. Ægisthus lived in love with Clytemnestra, and lived with her. On Agamemnon's return, these two adulterers murdered him, and, by a public marriage, strengthened themselves on the throne of Argos. Orestes, Agamemnon's son, would have shared his father's fate, had not his sister Electra privately sent him to his uncle Strophius king of Phocis, where he contracted the most intimate friendship with his cousin Pylades. Some time after, Orestes came to Mycenæ, the residence of Ægisthus, and resolved to punish the murderers of his father, in conjunction with Electra, who lived in disguise in the tyrant's family. To effect this more effectually, Electra publicly declared that her brother Orestes was dead, upon which Ægisthus and Clytemnestra went to the temple of Apollo, to return thanks to the god for his death. Orestes, who had secretly concealed himself in the temple, attacked them, and put them both to death, after a reign of seven years. They were buried without the city walls. [Vid. Agamemnon, Thyestes, Orestes, Clytemnestra, Pylades, and Electra.] Ovid. de Rem. Am. 161.—Trist 2, 396.—Hygin. 87 et 88.—Ælian. V. H. 1, 42.—Paus. 2, 16, &c.—Sophocl. in Electra.—Æschyl. et Stesic. in Agam.—Homer. Od. 3 et 11.——Pompey used to call J. Cæsar Ægisthus, on account of his adultery with his wife Mutia, whom he repudiated after she had born him three children. Suet. in Cæs. 50.

ÆGITHUM, a town of Æolia, on a mountain eight miles from the sea. Plancyd. 3, 95.

ÆGIUM, a town of Achaia, where for a long time the States of Achaia held their meetings. The worship of conventional Jupiter was celebrated here. It is now Vostitza. Paus. 7, 24.—Liv. 28, 7.

ÆGLE, the youngest daughter of Æsculapius and Lampetie.——A beautiful nymph, daughter of the Sun and Neæra. Virg. Æn. 6, 20.——A nymph, daughter of Panopeus, believed by Thessalus after he had left Ariadne. Plut. in Thes.——One of the Hesperides.——One of the Graces.——A prostitute. Martial 1, 95.

ÆGLOGUS, a Samian wrestler, born dumb. Seeing some unlawful measures pursued in a contest, he broke the string which held his tongue, through the desire of speaking, and ever after spoke with ease. Val. Max. 1, 8.

ÆGLETES, a surname of Apollo.

ÆGLOGE, a nurse of Nero. Sueton. in Ner. 50.

ÆGOCEROS, or Capricornus, an animal into which Pan transformed himself when flying before Typhon in the war with the giants. Jupiter made him a constellation. Lucret. 1, 613.

ÆGON, a shepherd. Virg. Ecl.——Theocrit. Idyl.——A promontory of Lemnos.——A name of the Ægean sea. Flace. 1, 628.——A boxer of Zacynthus, who dragged a large bull by the heel from a mountain into the city. Theocrit. Idyl. 4.

ÆGOSPOTAMOS, i. e. the goat's river, a small stream in the Thracian Chersonesus, with a town or port named Ægos at its mouth. Here the Athenian fleet, consisting of 180 ships, was totally defeated by the Spartan admiral Lysander, on the 16th Dec. B. C. 405, in the last year of the Peloponnesian war. Mela 2, 2.—Plin. 2, 88.—Paus. 3, 8 et 11.

ÆGOSSAGES, an Asiatic nation under Attalus, with whom he conquered Asia, and to whom he gave a settlement near the Hellespont. Pompey.

ÆGUS and ROSCILLUS, two brothers amongst the Velobrogi, who deserted from Cæsar to Pompey. Cæs. Bell. 8, 39.

ÆGY, a town near Sparta, destroyed because its inhabitants were suspected by the Spartans of favouring the Arcadians. Paus. 3, 2.

ÆGYPANI, a nation in the middle of Africa, whose body is human above the waist, and that of a goat below. Mela. 1, 4, et 8.

ÆGYPIUS, a town of the Getæ, near the Danube. Ovid. ex Pont. 1, 5, 4, 7.

ÆGYPTA, a freedman of Cicero. ad. Attic. 8.

ÆGYPTII, the inhabitants of Egypt. [Vid. Ægyptus.]

ÆGYPTIUM MARE, that part of the Mediterranean sea which is on the coast of Egypt.

ÆGYPTUS, son of Belus, and brother to Danaus, gave his 50 sons in marriage to the 50 daughters of his brother. Danaus, who had established himself at Argos, and was jealous of his brother, obliged all his daughters to murder their husbands the first night of their nuptials. This was executed, but Hypermnestra alone spared her husband Lynceus. Ægyptus was killed by his sons in Phœnicia. [Vid. Danaus, Danaides, Lynceus.——Ægyptus, a king, after his father, of a part of Africa, which from him has been called Ægyptus. Hygin. 168, 170.—Apollod. 2, 1.—Ovid Metoid 14.—Paus. 7, 21.——An extensive country of Africa, bounded on the south by Æthiopia, on the north by the Mediterranean, on the east by the Sinus Arabicus, or Red sea, and on the west by Marmorica, and the deserts of Libya. It de-ived its name either from Ægyptus, brother to Danaus, or, more probably, from the dark colour of its soil and inhabitants, called by the Greeks Ægyptius. Its extent, according to modern calculation, is 700 miles from north to south, and it measures about 200 miles on the shore of the Mediterranean; but at the distance of 50 leagues from the sea, it diminishes so much as scarce to measure 7 or 8 leagues between the mountains on the east and west. It may be properly divided into Upper, Middle, and Lower Egypt. Thebes was the capital of Upper Egypt, and Memphis of Middle Egypt. Lower Egypt, comprising the Delta and the land on either side, was full of cities, the most remarkable of which was Sais. The greater part of Lower Egypt is supposed to have been formed by the accumulation of sand and mud, carried down from the higher countries by the Nile. The Egyptians reckoned themselves the most ancient nation in the world, (vid. Psammetichus,) but some authors make them of Æthiopian origin. They were conversant with the arts and sciences, and to them are ascribed many useful discoveries and inventions. They are remarkable for their rites and debasing superstition; they paid as much honour to the cat, the crocodile, the bull, and even to vegetables, as to Isis. In consequence of the absence of rain, the fertility of the soil of Egypt depends on the yearly inundations of the Nile, which rises to the height of about 20 cubits on an average, and exhibits a large plain of waters, in which are scattered, here and there, the towns and villages, as the Cyclades in the Ægean sea. The air is not wholesome, but the population is great, and the cattle very prolific. It is said that Egypt once contained 30,000 cities. It was governed by kings who have immortalized themselves by the pyramids they have raised and the canals they have opened. The priests traced the existence of the country for many thousand years, and foolishly asserted that the gods were their first sovereigns, and that their monarchy had lasted 11,340 years, according to Herodotus. According to the calculation of Constantine Manasses, the kingdom of Egypt lasted 3663 years from its beginning under Misraim the son of Ham, 2188 B. C., to the conquest of Cambyses, 525 B. C. Egypt revolted twice from the Persian power, B. C. 414, and Amyrtæus then became king. After him succeeded Psammetichus, whose reign began 408 B. C. Nepherees 396. Acoris 389. Psammuthis 376. Nephorites 4 months, and Nectanebis, 375. Tachos, or Teos, 361. Nectanebus, 361. It was conquered by Ochus 350 B. C., and after the conquest of Persia by Alexander, Ptolemy ascended the kingdom, and he and his reign 324 B. C. Philadelphus, 284. Euergetes, 246. Philopater, 221. Epiphanes, 204. Philometor, 181 and 165, conjointly with Euergetes II. or Physcon, for 6 years. Euergetes II. 155. Lathurus Soter, and his mother Cleopatra, 116. Alexander of Cyprus, and Cleopatra, 106. Lathurus Soter restored, 88. Cleopatra II. 6 months, with Alexander the second, 19 days, 81. Ptolemy, surnamed Alexander, 81. 80. Dionysius, surnamed Auletes, 65. Dionysius II. with Cleopatra III. 51. Cleopatra III. with young Ptolemy, 46, and in 30 B. C. it was reduced by Augustus into a Roman province. The history of Egypt, therefore, can be divided into three epochas: the first beginning with the foundation of the empire, to the conquest of Cambyses, the second ended at the death of Alexander, and the third comprehends the reign of the Ptolemies, and ends at the death of Cleopatra, in the age of Augustus. Strab. 17.—Herod. 2, 3, et 7.—Theocrit. Id. 17, 79.—Paulc. 18.—Diod. 1.—Plin. 5, 9, 14, 7.—Marcel. 22, 40.—Justin. 1.—Strab. in Paus. 3, in Iph. in Isaiam. 3.—Curt. 4, 1.—Jos. 15, 175.—Paus. 1, 11.—Plut. in Exercitus Obs. Lau. de Isid. et Osir. in Plut. in Alex.—Mirab. 1, 9.—Apulod. 2, 1 et 5.—A minister of Manasses king of Cana. Polyæn. 6.—The ancient name of the Nile. Homer. Od. 5, 258.—Pans. 9, 40.

ÆGYS. Vid. Ægyo.

ÆGYSTHUS. Vid. Ægisthus.

ÆLIA, the wife of Sylla. Liv. in Sull.—The name of some towns built or repaired by the emperor Adrian.

ÆLIA LEX, enacted by Ælius Tubero the tribune, A. U. C. 572, to send two colonies into the country of the Brutii. Liv. 34, 53.— Another A. U. C. 568, ordaining, that, in public affairs, the augurs should observe the appearance of the sky, and the magistrates be empowered to postpone the business.— Another called Ælia Sextia, by Ælius Sextus, A. U. C. 756, which enacted, that all slaves who from any marks of punishment received from their masters, or who had been imprisoned, should be set at liberty, but not rank as Roman citizens.

ÆLIA PETINA, of the family of Tubero, married Claudius Cæsar, by whom she had a son. The emperor divorced her, to marry Messalina. Sueton. in Claud. 26.

ÆLIANUS CLAUDIUS, a Roman sophist of Præneste, in the reign of Adrian. He first taught rhetoric at Rome; but being disgusted with his profession, he became author, and published treatises on animals in seventeen books, and on various history in fourteen books, &c. in Greek, a language which he preferred to Latin. In his writings he shows himself very fond of the marvellous, and relates many stories which are often devoid of elegance and purity of style, though Philostratus has commended his language as superior to what could be expected from a person who was neither born nor educated in Greece. Ælian died in the 60th year of his age, A. D. 140. The editions of his various histories most valued, are those of Gronovius, 4to. Amst. 1731, of Kuhnius, 2 vols. 8vo. Lips. 1780 and of Lehnertus, 2 vol. 8vo. Lips. 1781. The best edition of his history of animals is that of Schneiderus, 3 vo. Lips 1784. His works were collected and published by Gesnerus, at Zurich, in 1556. Some attribute the treatise on the tactics of the Greeks to another Ælian.

ÆLII and ÆLIA, a family in Rome, so poor that sixteen lived in a small house, and were maintained by the produce of a little field. Their poverty consumed the Paulli, conquered Perseus king of Macedonia, and gave his son to Fabius. Tubero five pounds of gold from the booty. Val. Max. 4, 4.

ÆLIUS ADRIANUS, a African, grandfather to the emperor Adrian.— Gallus, a Roman knight, the first who invaded Arabia Felix. He was very intimate with Strabo the geographer, and sailed on the Nile with him to take a view of the country. Plin. 6, 29.— Publius, one of the first quæstors chosen from the plebeians at Rome. Liv. 4, 54.— Q. Ælius Pætus, son of Sextus or Publius. As he sat in the senate-house, a wood-pecker perched on his head, upon which a south-sayer exclaimed, that if he suffered the bird, his house would flourish and Rome cease; and if he killed it, the contrary must happen. Hearing this, Ælius; in the presence of the senate, bit off the head of the bird. All the youths of his family were killed at Cannæ, and the Roman arms were soon attended with success. Val. Max. 5, 60. ——Saturninus, a satirist, thrown down from the Tarpeian rock for writing verses against Tiberius. ——Sejanus. Vid. Sejanus.——Sextus Cæsar, censor with M. Cethegus. He separated the senators from the people in the public spectacles. During his consulship, the ambassadors of the Romans found him feasting in earthen dishes, and offered him silver vessels, which he refused, satisfied with the earthen cups, &c. which for his virtues, he had received from his father-in-law, L. Paulus, after the conquest of Macedonia. Plin. 33, 11.—Cic. de Orat. 1.——Spartianus, wrote the lives of the emperors Adrian, Antoninus Pius, and M. Aurelius. He flourished A. D. 240 —— grandson of L. Paulus, was austere in his and a formidable enemy to the Gracchi. adson was accused before Cæsar, and ably d. sed by Cicero. Cic. ep ad Brut.——Verus Cæsar, the name of L. C. Commodus Verus, after Adrian had adopted him. He was made prætor and consul by the emperor, who was soon convinced of his incapacity in the discharge of public [illegible]. He killed himself by drinking an antidote. Antoninus, surnamed Pius, was adopted in place. Ælius was father to Antoninus Verus, who [illegible] Pius adopted.——A physician mentioned by Galen.——L. Gallus, a lawyer, who wrote twelve books [illegible] law words.——Sextus Pætus, a lawyer, consul at Rome A. U. C. 533. He is greatly commended by Cicero for his learning, and called cordatus Romæ by Ennius for his knowledge of law. Cic. de Orat. 1, 38. in Brut. 20.——Stilo, a native of Lanuvium, master to M. Ter. Varro, and author of some treatises.——Lamia. Vid. Lamia.

AELLO, one of the Harpies, (from ἀελλα, alienum tollens, or ἀελλα, tempestas.) Flacc. 4, 450. —Ovid. Met. 13, 710.——One of Actæon's dogs. Ovid. Met. 3, 219.

ÆLURUS, (a cat) a deity worshipped by the Egyptians; and after death, embalmed, and buried in the city of Bubastis. Herod. 2, 66, &c.—Diod. 1.—Cic. de Nat. D. 1.

ÆMATHION, and ÆMATHIA. Vid. Emathion.

ÆMILIA LEX, was enacted by the dictator Æmilius, A. U. C. 302. It ordained that the censorship, which was before quinquennial, should be limited to one year and a half. Liv. 9, 33.——Another in the second consulship of Æmilius Mamercus, A. U. C. 462. It gave power to the eldest prætor to drive a nail in the capitol on the ides of September. Liv 7, 3. The driving of a nail was a superstitious ceremony, by which the Romans supposed that a pestilence could be stopped or an impending calamity averted.

ÆMILIANUS, (C. Julius) a native of Mauritania, proclaimed emperor after the death of Decius. He marched against Gallus and Valerian, but was informed they had been murdered by their own troops. He soon after shared their fate.——One of the thirty tyrants who rebelled in the reign of Gallienus.

ÆMILIUS. Vid. Æmylius.

ÆMNESTUS, a tyrant of Enna, was deposed by Dionysius the elder. Diod. 14.

ÆMON. Vid. Haemon.

ÆMONA, a large city of Asia. Cic. pro Flacc.

ÆMONIA, a country of Greece, which received its name from Æmon, or Æmus, and was alternately called Thessaly. Achilles is called Æmonius, as being born there. Ovid. Trist. 3, 11. 4, 1. —Horat. Od. 1, 37. It was also called Pyrrha, from Pyrrha, Deucalion's wife, who reigned there.

ÆMONIDES, a priest of Apollo in Italy, killed by Æneas. Virg. Æn. 10, 537.

ÆMUS, an actor in Domitian's reign. Juv. 6, 197.

ÆMYLIA, a noble family in Rome, descended from Mamercus, son of Pythagoras, who, for his humanity, was called Æmylus, blander.——A vestal who rekindled the fire of Vesta, which was extinguished, by putting her veil over it. Val. Max. 1, 1.—Dionys. Hal. 2.——The wife of Africanus the elder, famous for her behaviour to her husband, when suspected of infidelity. Val. Max. 6, 7.——Lepida, daughter of Lepidus, married Drusus the younger, whom she disgraced by her wantonness. She killed herself when accused of adultery with a slave. Tacit. 6, 40 ——A part of Italy, called also Flaminia. Martial. 6, 85 ——A public road leading from Placentia to Ariminum, called after the consul Æmylius, who is supposed to have made it. Martial. 3, 4.

ÆMYLIANUS, a name of Africanus the younger, son of P. Æmylius. In him the families of the Scipios and Æmylii were united. Many of that family bore the same name. Juv. 8, 4.

ÆMYLII, a noble family in Rome, descended from Æmylius, who reckoned Æneas among his ancestors. Plutarch says, that they are descended from Mamercus, the son of Pythagoras, surnamed Æmylius, a Numa et Emyl.

ÆMYLIUS, a beautiful youth of Sybaris, whose wife met with the same fate as Procris. Vid. Procris.——Censorinus, a cruel tyrant of Sicily, who liberally rewarded those who invented new ways of torturing. Patereulus gave him a brazen horse for the purpose, and the tyrant made the first experiment upon the donor. Plut. de Fort. Rom.——Lepidus, a youth who had a statue in the capitol, for saving the life of a citizen in a battle. Val. Max 4, 1.——A triumvir with Octavius. Vid. Lepidus.——Macer, a poet of Verona in the Augustan age. He wrote some poems upon serpents, birds, and as some suppose, on bees. The book, which is extant, on the virtues of herbs, and bears his name, is not, according to Scaliger, the production either of a great poet or learned physician. From the epithet Iunonius, given him by Ovid, some imagine that Macer wrote an account of the Trojan war. Macer died a few years before the birth of Christ. Ovid. Trist. 4, 10.——Marcus Scaurus, a Roman who flourished about 100 years B. C. and wrote three books concerning his own life. Cic. in Brut.——A poet in the age of Tiberius, who wrote a tragedy called Atreus, and destroyed himself.——Sura, another writer on the Roman year.——Mamercus, three times dictator, conquered the Fidenates, and took their city He limited to one year and a half the censorship, which before his time was celebrated during five years. Liv. 4, 17 et 19, &c.——Papinianus, son of Hostilius Papinianus, was in favour with the emperor Severus, and was made governor to his sons Geta and Caracalla. Geta was killed by his brother, and Papinianus for upbraiding him, was murdered by his soldiers. From his school the Romans have had many able lawyers, who were called Papinianists.——Pappus, a censor, who banished from the senate, P. Corn. Rufinus, who had been twice consul, because he had at his table ten pounds of silver plate, A. U. C. 476 Liv. 11.—Porcina, an elegant orator. Cic. in Brut.—Rectina, a severe governor of Egypt, under Tiberius Dio.—Regilius, conquered the general of Antiochus at sea, and obtained a naval triumph. Liv. 37, 51.—Scaurus, a noble, but poor citizen of Rome. His father, to maintain himself, was a coal merchant. He was edile, and afterwards pretor, and fought against Jugurtha.—His son, Scaurus, was son in law to Sylla, and in his edileship he built a very magnificent theatre. Plin. 36, 15.—A bridge at Rome, called also Sublicius. Liv. 1, 33.

ÆNARIA, an island over against Cumæ in Campania, named after Æneas, who is supposed to have landed here on his voyage from Troy. It was peopled by Chalcidians, but they soon abandoned it, being alarmed by repeated eruptions and earthquakes. It was famed for its cypress trees, as well as its mineral waters. It is now called Ischia. Plin., l. 3, c. 5.—Val. Syce. 3, 5, 114

ÆNASIUS, one of the Ephori at Sparta. Thucyd. 5, 2.

ÆNIA, or ÆNIA, a town of Macedonia, 15 miles from Thessalonica, founded by Æneas. Liv 40, 4, et 44, 10.

ÆNEADÆ, a name given to the friends and companions of Æneas, by Virg. Æn. 1, 101.

ÆNEADES, a town of Chersonesus, built by Æneas. Cassander destroyed it, and carried the inhabitants to Thessalonica, lately built. Dionys. Hal. 1.

ÆNEAS, a Trojan prince, son of Anchises and the goddess Venus. The opinions of authors concerning his character are different. The care of his tender years, as is generally reported, was intrusted to a nymph, and at the age of five he was recalled to Troy, and placed under the inspection of Acoetes, the friend and companion of his father. He afterwards improved himself in Thessaly, under Chiron, a very edifying sage whose house was frequented by all the young princes and heroes of the age. Soon after his return home he married Creusa, Priam's daughter, by whom he had a son called Ascanius. During the Trojan war, he behaved with great valour, in defence of his country, and came to an engagement with Diomedes and Achilles. Yet Strabo, Dictys of Crete, Dionysius of Halicarnassus, and Dares of Phrygia, accuse him of betraying his country to the Greeks, with Antenor, and of preserving his life and fortune by this treacherous measure. He lived at variance with Priam because he received not sufficient marks of distinction from that king and his family, a circumstance which might have provoked him to seek revenge by perfidy. Authors of credit report, that when Troy was in flames, he carried away upon his shoulders, his father Anchises, and the statues of his household gods, leading in his hand his son Ascanius, and leaving his wife to follow behind. Some say that he retired to mount Ida, where he built a fleet of twenty ships, and set sail in quest of a settlement. Strabo and others maintain that Æneas never left his country, but remain Troy, where he reigned and his posterity after him. Even Homer, who lived four hundred years after the Trojan war, says, Il. 20, 30, &c. that the gods destined Æneas and his posterity to reign over the Trojans. This passage Dionys. Hal. explained, by saying that Homer meant the Trojans who had gone over to Italy with Æneas, and not the actual inhabitants of Troy. According to Virgil and other Latin authors, who, to make their court to the Roman emperors, traced their origin up to Æneas, and described his arrival into Italy as indubitable, he with his fleet first came to the Thracian Chersonesus, where Polymnestor, one of his allies, reigned. After visiting Delos, Strophades, and Crete, where he expected to find the empire promised him by the oracle, as in the place where his progenitors were born, he landed in Epirus and Dreparum, the court of king Acestes, in Sicily, where he buried his father. From Sicily he sailed for Italy, but was driven on the coasts of Africa, and kindly received by Dido queen of Carthage, to whom on his first interview he gave one of the garments of the beautiful Helen. Dido being enamoured of him, wished to marry him, but he left Carthage by order of the gods. In his voyage he was driven to Sicily, and from thence he passed to Cumæ, where the Sybil conducted him to hell, that he might hear from his father the fate which attended him and all his posterity. After a voyage of seven years, and the loss of thirteen ships, he came to the Tiber. Latinus, the king of Italy, received him with hospitality, and presented him his daughter Lavinia, who had been before betrothed to king Turnus in her mother Amata. To prevent this marriage, Turnus made war against Æneas; and after many battles, the war was decided by a combat between the two rivals, in which Turnus was killed. Æneas married Lavinia; in whose honour he built the town of Lavinium, and succeeded his father in law. After a short reign, Æneas was killed in a battle against the Etrurians. Some say that he was drowned in the Numicus, and his body was borne down by his armour, upon which the Latins not finding them king, supposed that he had been taken up to heaven, and therefore offered him sacrifices as a god. Dionys. Hal. fixes the arrival of Æneas in Italy in the 35th Olymp. Some authors suppose that Æneas, after the siege of Troy, fell to the share of Neoptolemus, together with Andromache, and that he was carried to Thessaly, whence he escaped to Italy. Others say, that after he had come to Italy, he returned to Troy, leaving Ascanius king of Latium. Æneas has been praised for his piety, and submission to the will of the gods. The story of the loves of Dido and Æneas is allowed to be a mere poetical ornament, introduced by a violent anachronism. Homer Il. 13, et 20, Hymn in Vener.—Apollod. 3, 12.—Hygin. 3. Fast. 2, 23. 3. 22, 30. 23.—Plut. in Romul. et Coriol. Quæst. Rom.—Val. Max. 1, 8.—Flor. 1, 1.—Justin. 20, 1. 31, 8. 33, 1.—Dictys Cret. 5.—Dares Phryg. 6.—Dionys. Hal. 1, 11.—Strab. 13.—Liv. 1, 1.—Virg. Æn.—Ant. Lucan.—Rhian. V. H. 8, 22.—Propert. 4, 1.—Ovid. Met. 13, 3, &c. Trist. 1, 298.——A son of Æneas and Lavinia, called Silvius, because his mother retired with him to the woods after his father's death. He succeeded Ascanius in Latium. Virg. Æ. 6, 770.—Liv. 1, 3.——An ambassador sent by the Lacedæmonians to Athens to treat of peace, in the eighth year of the Peloponnesian war.——A Greek author on the military art, who flourished B. C. 300. His work was annexed, by Casaubon, to his edition of Polybius, Paris, 1608, and reprinted in 12mo. at Leyden, in 1633.——A Platonic philosopher of Gaza who embraced Christianity, A. D. 485. He wrote a dialogue called Theophrastus, in which are maintained the doctrines of the immortality of the soul, and the resurrection of the body. The author, though writing professedly against Plato, confounds the doctrines of Platonism and Christianity. An edition of this work was published in 4to at Leipsic, in 1659.

Æneia or Æneia, a place near Rome, afterwards called Jubentum.——A city of Troas. Strab. 17.——A city of Macedonia. Diony. Hal. 1.

Æneides, a patronymic given to Ascanius, as son of Æneas. Virg. Æn. 9, 653.

Æneis, a poem of Virgil, which has for its subject the settlement of the Trojans under Æneas in Italy. The great merit of this poem is well known. The author has imitated Homer, and, as some say, Homer is superior to him, only because he is more ancient, and is an original. Virgil died before he had corrected it, and at his death ordered it to be burnt. This injunction was happily disobeyed, and Augustus saved from the flames, a poem which proved his family to be descended from the kings of Troy. The Æneid has engaged the attention of the poet for eleven years, and in the first six books it seems that it was Virgil's design to imitate Homer's Odyssey, and in the last the Iliad. The action of the Æneid comprehends eight years, one of which only, the last, is really taken up by action, as the seven first are merely episodes, such as Juno's attempts to destroy the Trojans, the loves of Æneas and Dido, the relation of the fall of Troy, &c. Throughout the poem, the agents, divine and human are equal to their allotted parts in the action, the sentiments are always proper, and the diction is everywhere poetic, dignified exquisite, and harmonious. In the first book of the Æneid, the hero is introduced, in the seventh year of his expedition, sailing in the Mediterranean, and shipwrecked on the African coast, where he is received by Dido. In the second, Æneas, at the desire of the Phœnician queen, relates the fall of Troy, and his flight through the general conflagration to mount Ida. In the third, the hero continues his narration, by a minute account of his voyage through the Cyclades, till places where he landed, and the dreadful storm with the description of which the poem opened. Dido, in the fourth book, makes public her partiality to Æneas, which is slightedby the sailing of the Trojans from Carthage, and the book closes with the suicide of the disappointed queen. In the fifth book, Æneas sails to Sicily, where he celebrates the anniversary of his father's death, and thence pursues his voyage to Italy. In the sixth, he visits the Elysian fields, and learns from his father the fate which attends him and his descendants the Romans. In the seventh book, the hero reaches the destined land of Latium, and concludes a treaty with the king of the country, which is soon broken by the interference of Juno, who stimulates Turnus to war. The auxiliaries of the enemy are enumerated, and in the eighth book, Æneas is assisted by Evander, and receives from Venus a shield wrought by Vulcan, on which are represented the future glory and triumphs of the Roman nation. The reader is pleased, in the ninth book, with the account of battles between the rival armies, and the immortal friendship of Nisus and Euryalus. Jupiter in the tenth attempts a reconciliation between Venus and Juno. She patronized the opposite parties, the fight is renewed, Pallas feared, and Turnus saved from the avenging hand of Æneas, by the interposition of Juno. The eleventh book gives an account of the funeral of Pallas, and of the meditated reconciliation between Æneas and Latinus, which the sudden appearance of the enemy defeats. Camilla is slain, and the circumstants respected by the night. In the last book, Juno prevents the single combat agreed upon by Turnus and Æneas. The Trojans are defeated in the absence of their king, but on the return of Æneas, the battle assumes a different turn, a single combat is fought by the rival leaders, and the poem is concluded by the death of king Turnus. Plin. 7, 30, &c.

Æneseidemus, a brave general of Argos. Liv. 32, 25.——A Cretan philosopher, who wrote eight books on the doctrine of his master Pyrrho. Diog. in Pyr.

Æpsius, a surname of Jupiter, from his temple in mount Æsium.

Æpytus, a victor at Olympia, who, in the moment of victory, died through excess of joy. Paus. 3, 18.

Æsia, Vid. Æsia.

Æsianes, the inhabitants of Thessaly. Herod. 7, 185.

Æsicus, a comic writer at Athens.

Æsiochi, a people of Asiatic Sarmatia. Lucan. 2, 591

Æsobarbus, or Ahenobarbus, the surname of Domitius. When Castor and Pollux acquainted him with a victory, he discredited them, upon which they touched his chin and beard, which instantly became of a brazen colour, whence the surname given to himself and his descendants.

Æsopus, formerly called Polybotus, an independent city of Thrace, at the eastern mouth of the river Hebrus. Here was the tomb of Polydorus, and a marble monument erected in memory of Cato Uticensis. It still bears the name of Enos. Mela 2, 2

Æsum, a mountain in Cephallenia. Strab 7.

Æsus, a river of Germany, separating Vindelicia from Noricum. It rises in the Rhætian Alps, and falls into the Danube. It is now called the Inn. Tacit. Hist. 3, 5.——A small town, on a river of the same name, near mount Oasa. Septh. de Urb.

Æsyma, a town of Thasos. Herod. 6, 47

Æolia, a name given to Arne. Sappho is called Æolia puella, and Æolic poets, Æolium carmen, because Sappho and Alcæus were natives of Lesbos in Æolia, and wrote in the Æolic dialect. Horat. Od. 4, 3. 12 et 4. 9, 12.

Æolia, or Eolis, a country of Asia Minor so called from the Æolians who settled there. It was almost wholly comprised between the rivers Hermus and Caicus. The Æolians had twelve towns, the most famous of which were Cumæ and Smyrna, the latter, however, was afterwards taken by the Ionians. Besides these cities, they possessed the islands of Lesbos, Tenedos, and the Hecatonnesi. They received their name from Æolus, the son of Helien. They migrated from Greece about 1124 B. C. eighty years before the migration of the Ionian tribes. Herod. 1, 26, &c.—Strab. 1, 2 et 6.—Plin. 5, 30.—Mela. 1, 2 et 18.——Thessaly has been anciently called Æolia. Bœotus, son of Neptune, having settled there, called his followers Bœotians, and their country Bœotia.

Æolides and Æolides, a group of small islands between Sicily and Italy, so called from being the supposed residence of Æolus. They were also named Vulcaniæ and Hesperides, because they emitted flames, as they still do; and Liparæ, from Lipara, the principal of them. The names of these islands are, Lipara, Hiera, Strongyle, Didyme, Erasssa, Phœnicusa, and Enonymos. Now, the Liparæ Islands. Justin. 4. 1.—Strab. 6.

Æolida, a city of Icaria.——Another near Thermopylæ. Herod. 8, 35.

ÆOLIDES, a patronymic of Ulysses, from Æolus, because Anticlea, his mother, was pregnant by Sisyphus, the son of Æolus, when she married Laertes. It is also given to Athamas and Misenus, as sons of Æolus. Ovid. Met. 4, 511. 13, 31.—Virg. Æn. 6, 164 et 529.

ÆOLUS, a king of the Æolian islands, was the son of Hippotas. He taught the use of sails, and having strictly observed the changes of the winds and weather, he frequently foretold them with exactness, and from hence he is fabled to be the god of the winds. He granted a favourable reception to Ulysses, when thrown upon his coasts, and at parting, made him a present of leathern bags, in which he had confined the winds adverse to the progress of his voyage. The companions of Ulysses, impelled by curiosity, opened the bags, and by thus giving vent to their fatal contents, brought upon the Grecian hero the further calamities he suffered before his return to Ithaca. Æolus was indebted to Juno for his royal dignity, according to Virgil. The name seems to be derived from αολος, tarsus, cause the winds over which he presided are ever varying. Plin. 3, 9, 7, 56.—Homer. Od. 10, 1.—Virg. Æn. 1, 56, &c.—Ovid. Met. 11, 718. 14, 224.—Apollon. Argon. 4.—Diod. 5.—Flac. 1, 556.—There were two others, a king of Etruria, father to Macareus and Canace, and a son of Hellenus, often confounded with the god of the winds. This last married Enaretta, by whom he had seven sons and five daughters. Apollod. 1.

ÆORA, a festival in Athens, in honour of Erigone.

ÆPALIUS, a king of Greece, restored to his kingdom by Hercules, whose son Pallas he adopted. Strab. 9.

ÆPEA, a town of Crete, called Solis, in honour of Solon. Plut. in Solon.

ÆPOLO, a general of the Istrians, who drank to excess, after he had stormed the camp of A. Manlius, the Roman general. Being attacked by a soldier, he fled to a neighbouring town, which the Romans took, and killed himself rather than appear of being taken. Flor. 2, 10.—Liv. 41, 11.

ÆPY, a town of Elis, under the dominion of Nestor. Strab. 8.—Plin. 4, 5. 1, 180.

ÆPYTUS, king of Mycenæ, son of Cresphontes and Merope, was educated in Arcadia with Cypselus, his mother's father. To recover his kingdom, he killed Polyphontes, who had married his mother against her will, and usurped the crown. Apollod. 2, 6.—Paus. 4, 8.——A king of Arcadia, son of Elatus.——A son of Hippothous, who forcibly entered the temple of Neptune, near Mantinea, and was struck blind by the sudden eruption of salt water from the altar. He was killed by a serpent in hunting. Paus. 8, 4 et 5.

ÆQUI or ÆQUICOLI, a people of Latium, near Tybur, they were great enemies to Rome in its infant state, and were conquered with much difficulty. Flor. 1, 11.—Liv. 1, 32. 2, 30. 3, 2, &c.—Plin. 3, 4.—Virg. Æn. 7, 747. 9, 604.—Ovid. Fast. 3, 93.—Dionys. Hal. 2, 19.

ÆQUIMELIUM, a place in Rome where the house of Melius stood, who aspired to sovereign power. Liv. 4, 16.

ÆRIAS, an ancient king of Cyprus, who built the temple of Paphos. Tacit. Hist. 2, 3.

ÆROPE, wife of Atreus, committed adultery with Thyestes her brother-in-law, and had by him Ægisthus, who were placed as food before Atreus.—Hygin. Fab. 2, 88.——A daughter of Cepheus, ravished by Mars. She died in child-bed, her child was preserved, and called Æropus. Paus. 8, 44.

ÆROPUS, a general of Epirus, in the reign of Pyrrhus.——A person appointed regent to Orestes, the infant son of Archelaus king of Macedonia.——An officer of king Philip, banished for bringing a singer into his camp. Polyæn. 4, 2.——A mountain of Chaonia. Liv. 31, 5.

ÆSACUS, a son of Priam by the nymph Alexirhoe, or, according to others, by Arisbe. He became enamoured of the beautiful Hesperia; but she treated his affection with disdain. Endeavouring to escape from him, when he once accidentally met her on the banks of the Cebrenus, he was bit by a serpent in the foot; the wound occasioned her death, and Æsacus in despair threw himself from a rock into the sea. Tethys, out of compassion, transformed him into a cormorant; but he, provoked that he could not die, never ceased plunging himself into the sea. Ovid. Met. 11, 11.

ÆSAPUS, a river of Mysia, in Asia, falling into the Hellespont. Plin. 5, 32.

ÆSAR, or ÆSARAS, a river of Magna Græcia, falling into the sea near Crotona. Ovid. Met. 15, 28.

ÆSCHINES, a celebrated Grecian orator, the contemporary and rival of Demosthenes, was born at Athens 389 B. C. His father's name was Atrometus, and he boasted of his descent from a noble family, though Demosthenes reproached him as being the son of a courtezan. The first open signs of enmity between the rival orators appeared at the court of Philip, where they were sent as ambassadors; but that the character of Æschines was tarnished by the acceptance of a bribe from the Macedonian prince, whose tyranny had hitherto been the general subject of his declamation. When the Athenians wished to reward the patriotic labours of Demosthenes with a golden crown, Æschines impeached Ctesiphon, who proposed it, and in their subsequent dispute we are indebted for the two celebrated orations de corona. Æschines was defeated by his rival's superior eloquence, and banished to Rhodes, but as he retired from Athens Demosthenes ran after him, and nobly forced him to accept a present of silver. In his banishment, the orator repeated to the Rhodians the oration which he had delivered against Demosthenes, and after receiving much applause, he was desired to read the answer of his antagonist. It was received with greater marks of approbation, but, exclaimed Æschines, how much more would your admiration have been raised, had you heard Demosthenes himself speak it! Æschines died in the 75th year of his age, at Rhodes, or, as some suppose, at Samos. He wrote three orations, and nine epistles, which, from their number, received the names, the first of the Graces, and the last of the Muses. The orations alone are extant. His style is diffuse, ornamental, and more adapted to please than to move, that of Demosthenes, on the contrary, is concise and energetic, and rushes upon the mind of the reader with the force of an impetuous torrent. The orations of Æschines are generally printed with those of Demosthenes. The best editions are, that of Wolfius, fol. Francof. 1604, and that of Dobson, 10 vols 8vo. London 1747. Dr Leland has given an excellent translation of Æschines' Oration against Ctesiphon. Cic. de Orat. 1, 54. 2, 55. in Brut. 17.—Plut. in Dem.—Dionys. 2 et 3.—Plin. 7, 30.——A philosopher of Athens, contemporary with Socrates and a disciple of his school. He wrote seven dialogues in the true spirit of his master, on temperance, moderation tion, humanity, integrity, and other virtues. Only three of them are now extant. The best editions are that of Leovard, 1718, with the notes of Horreus, in 8vo. and that of Fischer, 8vo. Lips. 1780.

Æschrion, a Mitylenean poet, intimate with Aristotle. He accompanied Alexander in his Asiatic expedition.—An Iambic poet of Samos Athen.—A physician, commended by Galen. A treatise of his on husbandry has been quoted by Pliny.—A lieutenant of Archagathus, killed by Hanno. Diod. 20.

Æschylides, a man who wrote a book on agriculture. Ælian H. An. 15.

Æschylus, the tragic poet, was born at Eleusis about the end of the sixty-third Olympiad, B.C. 525. He was of a respectable family, and distinguished himself with his brothers Cynægirus and Ameinias, at the battles of Marathon, Salamis, and Platæa. His mind was early roused by an enthusiastic fondness for the poems of Homer; and when he had scarcely attained his twenty-fifth year he composed pieces for public representation. He first introduced two actors on the stage, and connected the Chorus, which he limited to fifteen, with the performance of some definite piece. He also invented the mask and the buskin, and embellished the stage with appropriate scenery. He removed all scenes of bloodshed and murder from the eyes of the spectators. His fertility was such that he wrote ninety tragedies, of which forty were rewarded with the public prize. A few expressions of impious tendency in his plays had nearly proved fatal to him; he was on the point of being condemned to death by the Athenian people, when his brother Amynias uncovered the arm of which the hand had been cut off at Salamis, and claimed the acquittal of Æschylus as his reward. After this the poet retired to the court of Hiero, king of Syracuse by whom he was honourably entertained. He died at Gela in the sixty-ninth year of his age, B. C. 456. The manner of his death, as commonly related, is singular. It is said that having become very bald in his old age, an eagle with a tortoise in her bill flying over him, mistook his head for a stone, and dropping her prey upon it, killed the poet on the spot. The people of Gela buried him with much pomp, and raised a tomb to his memory. Of the dramas which Eschylus composed only seven have reached us: the Prometheus chained, the Seven Chiefs against Thebes, the Persians, the Supplicants, the Agamemnon, the Choephoræ, and the Eumenides. They are distinguished by an uncommon grandeur of style and loftiness of thought, but they particularly excel in the terrific, and even now can scarcely be read without a shudder. The best edition of Æschylus is that of Butler, 3 vols. 8vo. Cantab. 1809. The editions of five tragedies, separately put forth by Joshua Bloomfield, are much esteemed. Mr Potter has given an elegant translation of this poet in English verse. Horat. Art. Poet. 278.—Quintil. 10. 1. Plin. 10. 3.—Val. Max. 9, 12.—The twelfth perpetual archon of Athens.—A Corinthian brother-in-law to Timophanes, intimate with Timoleon. Paus. in Corin.—A Rhodian set over Lycia with Nearchus by Alexander. Curt. 9. 8.

Æsculapius, the god of physic, was the son of Apollo, by Coronis, or as some say, by Larissa, daughter of Phlegias. Apollo set a raven to watch the nymph Coronis after his union with her; and discovering that she admitted the embraces of Ischys of Elatea, he destroyed her with lightning, but preserved the infant, and committed him to the care of Chiron the centaur, to be educated in the art of medicine. Some authors say, that Coronis left her father to avoid his discovering her pregnancy, and that she exposed her child near Epidaurus. A goat of the flock of Aresthanes nursed him, and the dog that kept the flock stood by him to shelter him from injury. He was found by the shepherd, Aresthanes, behind in search of his lost goat, and the head of the infant was then observed to be surrounded with resplendent rays of light. He at last became so skilful in the art of healing, that he is believed to have restored many dead people to life. Pluto was displeased with the numerous cures of Æsculapius, and lest his dominions should want inhabitants complained to Jupiter. The father of the gods struck the physician with thunder, and Apollo, in revenge, killed the Cyclops who made the thunderbolts. Æsculapius received divine honours after death, chiefly at Epidaurus, Pergamus, Athens, Smyrna, &c. Goats, bulls, lambs, and pigs, were sacrificed on his altars; and the cock, the raven, the dog, and the serpent, were sacred to him. Rome, being delivered from a plague, A. U. C. 462, built a temple to this god of physic, who, it was said, had concealed himself under the form of a serpent in a marshy island of the Tiber, and stopped the ravages of the disease. Æsculapius is represented with a long beard, holding in his hand a staff, round which is wreathed a serpent: his other hand is sometimes supported on the head of a serpent. Serpents are more particularly sacred to him, as the ancient physicians used them in their preserves. He married Epione, by whom he had two sons, Æmeon and Podalirius, and four daughters, of whom Hygeia, goddess of health, is the most celebrated. Some have supposed that he lived a short time after the Trojan war. Hesiod makes no mention of him. Homer Il. 4, 194.—Hygin in Æscul.—Apollod. 3. 10.—Apuleius 4. Asclepius.—Hygin. 49.—Ovid. Met. 2, 8.—Paus. 2, 11 et 27. 7, 23, &c.—Pind. 4.—Pindar. Pyth. 3.—Lucian. Dial. de Salt.—Val. Max. 1, 8.—Cic. de Nat D. 3, 22, says there were three of this name: the 1st, a son of Apollo and Coronis, worshipped in Arcadia: 2d, a brother of Mercury: 3d, a son of Apollo and Arsinoe.

Æsepus, a son of Bucolion. Homer. Il. 6, 21.—A river. Vid Æsapus.

Æsernia, a city of the Samnites, in Italy. Now Isernia. Liv. 27, 12.—Sil. 8, 567.

Æsion, an Athenian, known for his respect for the talents of Demosthenes. Paus. in Bœotic.

Æsis, a river of Italy, which separated Umbria from Picenum. Sil. Ital. 8, 416.—A town of Umbria, on the left bank of the river Æsis, now Jesi. Plin. 3, 14.

Æson, son of Cretheus, was born at the same birth as Pelias. He succeeded his father in the kingdom of Iolchos; but was soon exiled by his brother. He married Alcimeda, by whom he had Jason whose education he intrusted to Chiron, being afraid of Pelias. When Jason was grown up he demanded his father's kingdom from his uncle, who gave him evasive answers, and persuaded him to go in quest of the golden fleece. (Vid Jason.) At his return, Jason found his father very infirm: and Medea (Vid Medea) at his request drew the blood from Æson's veins, and refreshed them with the juice of certain herbs which she had gathered, and immediately the old man recovered the vigour and bloom of youth. Some say that Æson killed himself by drinking bull's blood, to avoid the persecution of Pelias. Diod. 4.—Apollod. 1, 9.—Ovid. Met. 7, 285.—Hygin. 12.——A river of Thessaly, with a town of the same name.

ÆSÓNIDES, a patronymic of Jason, as he descended from Æson.

ÆSÓPUS, a Phrygian philosopher, who, though originally a slave, procured his liberty by the sallies of his genius. He travelled over the greatest part of Greece and Egypt, but chiefly resided at the court of Crœsus, king of Lydia, by whom he was sent to consult the oracle of Delphi, and to make offerings in the temple. In this commission Æsop behaved with great severity; and satirically compared the Delphians to floating sticks, which appear large at a distance, but are nothing when brought near. The Delphians, offended with his sarcastic remarks, accused him of having secreted one of the sacred vessels of Apollo's temple, and threw him down from a rock, 561 B. C. The Athenians, soon after his death, erected a statue to his memory. Maximus Planudes has written his life in Greek; but no credit is to be given to the biographer, who falsely asserts that the mythologist was short and deformed. Æsop de Scaret Pia fables, to his patron Crœsus, but what appears now under his name, is no doubt a compilation of all the fables and apologues of wits before and after the age of Æsop, conjointly with his own. The best editions of Æsop are those of Hudsonus, 8vo. Oxon. 1718, of Heusingerus, 8vo. Lips. 1776, and of Ernesti, 8vo. Lips. 1781. The translations have been numerous. Plut. in Solon.—Phæd. 1, 2, 9.——Clodius, a celebrated Roman tragedian, very intimate with Cicero, to whom he gave instructions on the art of action. He was an extraordinary epicure; and among other luxuries, served up to his guests a dish filled with singing and speaking birds. His son, no less extravagant, melted precious stones to drink at his entertainments. Æsop, notwithstanding this wanton profusion, is said to have died worth £160,000. Horat. 2, Sat. 3, 239.—Val. Max. 8, 10, 2, 1.—Juv. 9, 35. 10, 51.——An orator. Dion.——An historian in the time of Anaximenes. Plut. in Solon.——A river of Pontus. Strab. 10.——An attendant of Mithridates, who wrote a treatise on Helen, and a panegyric on his royal master.

ÆSTIÆI, a people of Germany, inhabiting modern Estonia, in Livonia. Tacit. G. 45.

ÆSTRIA, an island in the Adriatic. Mela 2, 7.

ÆSULA, a town on a mountain between Tybur and Præneste. Horat. 3, 29.

ÆTHÆ, a man from whose tomb Polites spied what the Greeks did in their ships during the Trojan war. Homer. Il 2, 793.

ÆSYMNÉTES, a surname of Bacchus. Paus. 7, 21.

ÆSYMNUS, a person of Mégara, who consulted Apollo to know the best method of governing his country. Paus. 1, 43

ÆTHALIA. Vid. Ilva.

ÆTHALIDES, a herald, son of Mercury; to whom it was granted to be amongst the dead and the living at stated times, and thus to become acquainted with what passed on the earth. Apollon. Argon. 1, 641.

ÆTHION, a man slain at the nuptials of Andromeda. Ovid. Met. 5, 116.

ÆTHIÓPIA, an extensive country of Africa, divided by the ancients into Superior and Interior. The former, lying to the south of Egypt, answered nearly to modern Nubia and Abyssinia; and the latter, known to the ancients only in name, corresponded with modern Angola, Caffraria, Monomotapa, and Monamuga. Homer has styled the Æthiopians the most just of men and the favourites of the gods, who used to feast among them for twelve days each year. Diod. 4. says, that the Æthiopians were the first inhabitants of the earth. They were the first who worshipped the gods, for which, as some suppose, their country has never been invaded by a foreign enemy. The inhabitants are of a dark complexion. The country is inundated for five months every year, and the days and nights are almost of an equal length. The ancients have given the name of Æthiopia to every country whose inhabitants are of a black colour. Lucan. 3, 253 9, 651.—Juv. 2, 23.—Plin. 6, 29.—Paus. 1, 33.—Homer. Od. 7, 22.

ÆTHLIUS, son of Jupiter by Protogenia, or, according to some, of Æolus, was father of Endymion. Apollod 1, 7.

ÆTHON, a horse of the sun. Ovid. Met. 2, 1.——A horse of Pallas, represented as shedding tears at the death of his master, by Virg. Æn. 11, 89.——A horse of Hector. Homer. Il. 8, 185.——A horse of Pluto's chariot. Claud. de Rap. Pros. 1.

ÆTHRA, daughter of Pittheus king of Trœzene, had Theseus by Ægeus. [Vid. Ægeus.] She was carried away by Castor and Pollux, when they recovered their sister Helen, whom Theseus had stolen, and entrusted to her care. [Vid. Helen.] She went to Troy with Helen; and it was the wish of seeing her, and of restoring her to liberty, which induced Demophoon and Acamas to accompany the Grecian expedition against Priam. Homer. Il. 3, 144.—Paus. 2, 31. 5, 19.—Hygin. 37 et 79.—Plut. in Thes.—Ovid. Her. 10, 131.——One of the Oceanides, wife to Atlas. She is more generally called Pleione. A. Gell. 13, 9.

ÆTHUSA, a daughter of Neptune by Amphitrite. Paus. 2, 30.——An island near Lilybæum. Plin. 3, 8.

ÆTIA, a poem of Callimachus, in which he speaks of sacrifices, and of the manner in which they were offered. Mart. 10, 4.

ÆTION, or ÉTION, the father of Andromache, Hector's wife. He was killed at Thebes, with his seven sons, by the Greeks.——A famous Grecian painter, whose picture of the nuptials of Alexander and Roxana, exhibited at the Olympic games obtained for him not only the prize of merit, but the daughter of Proxenides the president. Cic. Brut. 18.

ÆTNA, a mountain of Sicily, now called Gibello, famous for its volcano, which, for about three thousand years, has thrown out fire at intervals. It is more than ten thousand feet above the surface of the sea, and measures one hundred and eighty miles round at the base, with an ascent of thirty miles. Its crater forms a circle about three and a half miles in circumference, and its top is covered with snow and smoke at the same time, whilst the sides of the mountain from the great fertility of the soil, exhibit a rich scenery of cultivated fields and blooming vineyards. Pindar is the first who mentions an eruption of Ætna; and the silence of Homer on the subject is considered as a proof that the fires of the mountain were unknown in his age. From the time of Pythagoras, the supposed date of the first volcanic appearance, to the battle of Pharsalia, it is computed that Ætna has had one hundred eruptions. The streams of lava emitted in great eruptions, are sometimes fifteen and twenty miles in length, six or seven in breadth, and fifty feet in depth. The poets supposed that Jupiter had confined the giants under this mountain, and it was represented as the forge of Vulcan, where his servants the Cyclops fabricated thunderbolts, &c. Hesiod. Theog. 860.—Virg. Æn. 3, 570.—Ovid. Met. 5, 6. 15, 340.—Pol. 14, 59.——A town at the bottom of the south side of the mountain, now Nicolosi. Strab. 6

ÆTOLIA, a province of Greece, bounded on the west by Acarnania, on the north by Thessaly, on the east by the country of the Locri, Œtæa, and on the south by the Corinthian gulf. It received its name from Ætolus. The inhabitants were covetous and illiberal, and were little known in Greece, till after the ruin of Athens and Sparta they assumed a consequence in the country, and afterwards made themselves formidable to the allies of Rome and as its enemies, till they were conquered by Fulvius. Liv. 26 24, &c.—Flor. 2. 9.—Strab. 8et 10.—Mela 2, 3.—Plin. 4, 2.—Paus. 10, 18.—Plut. in F. m.——Domede is call d Ætolus heros, and Aputia, where he settled. Auli rampi, Ovid. Met. 14, 481.—Sil. 1, 1.5. 9, 693. 10, 155, &c

ÆTOLUS, son of Endymion of Elis and Iphianassa, married Pronoe, by whom he had Pleuron and Calydon. Having accidentally killed Apis son of Phoroneus, he left his country, and came to settle in that part of Greece which has been called from him Ætolia. Apollod. 1. 7 et 9.—Paus. 5.1.

ÆX, a rocky island between Tenedos and Chios. Plin. 4, 11 ——A city in the country of the Marsi ——The nurse of Jupiter changed into a constellation.

AFER, an inhabitant of Africa.——An informer under Tiberius and his successors. He became also known as an orator, and as the preceptor of Quintilian, and was made consul by Domitian. He died A.D. 59. Quintil. 12, 11.—Tacit. Ann. 4, 52.

AFRANIA, a Roman matron who frequented the forum, forgetful of female decency. Val Max. 8, 3.

AFRANIUS, a comic poet, flourished about B C. 100. He wrote some Latin comedies, of which a few fragments are to be found in the Corpus Poetarum. Quint. 10, 1.—Suetun Ner. 11.—Hor. 2, ep 1, 57.——A general of Pompey, conquered by Cæsar in Spain. Suet in Cæs. 34.—Plut. in Pomp. 2 —— Q. a man who wrote a severe satire against Nero, for which he was put to death in the Pisonian conspiracy. Tacit.——Potitus, a plebeian, who said before Caligula, that he would willingly die if the emperor could recover from the distemper he laboured under. Caligula recovered, and Afranius was put to death that he might not forfeit his word. Dio.

AFRICA, called Libya by the Greeks, one of the three parts of the ancient world, and the greatest peninsula of the universe, was bounded on the east by Arabia and the Red Sea, on the north by the Mediterranean, south and west by the ocean. In its greatest length it extends 4 080 miles, and in its greatest breadth it is 3,500 miles. The ancients knew little more than the northern parts of this division of the globe, but with these they were better acquainted than we are at the present day. The interior they thought uninhabitable from the excessive heat, or peopled it with fabulous monsters, of which Africa was proverbially the nurse. (Vid. Libya.) Mela 1, 4, &c.—Diod. 3 4, et 20.—Herodot. 2, 17. 26, et 32. 4, 41, &c.—Plin. 5, 1, &c. ——There is a part of Africa called Propria, which answers to the present Tunis.

AFRICANUS, a bad epic poet commended by Ennius. ——A very eminent Christian writer, who flourished in the beginning of the third century. He was the author of a treatise on chronology in five books, containing a series of events from the creation of the world to A. D. 221. He also wrote a letter to Origen denying the authenticity of the history of Susanna, and another to Aristides reconciling the genealogies of our Saviour, as given by St Matthew and St Luke. Eusebius has given extracts from the works of Africanus in his Præparatio evangelica and in his Demonstratio evangelica.——A lawyer, disciple to Papinian, and intimate with the emperor Alexander.——An orator mentioned by Quintilian.——The surname of the Scipios, from the conquest of Africa. Vid. Scipio.

AFRICUM MARE, is that part of the Mediterranean which is on the coast of Africa.

AFRICUS, a name applied to a violent wind, which blew from Africa between south and west. Virg. 1 90. Horat. 1, od. 14, 5.

AGAGRIANA PORTA, gates at Syracuse, near which the dead were buried. Cic. in Ver.

AGALASSES, a nation of India, conquered by Alexander. Diod. 17.

AGALIA, a woman of Corcyra, who wrote a treatise upon grammar. Athen. 1.

AGAMEDES and TROPHONIUS sons of Erginus, king of Orchomenos in Bœotia, were celebrated as the two architects who made the entrance of the temple of Delphi, for which they demanded of the god, whatever gift was most advantageous for a man to receive. Eight days after they were found dead in their bed. Pint. de cons. ad Apol.—Cic. Tusc. 1, 47.——Paus. 9. 11 et 37, gives a different account.

AGAMEMNON, king of Mycenæ and Argos, was brother to Menelaus, and son of Pisthenes the son of Atreus. Homer calls them sons of Atreus, which is incorrect, upon the authority of Hesiod, Apollod. &c. (Vid. Pisthenes.) When Atreus was dead, his brother Thyestes seized the kingdom of Argos, and removed Agamemnon and Menelaus, who fled to Polyphidus king of Sicyon, and hence to Œneus, king of Ætolia, where they were educated. Agamemnon married Clytemnestra, and Menelaus Helen, both daughters of Tyndarus king of Sparta, who assisted them to recover their father's kingdom. After the banishment of the usurper to Cythera, Agamemnon established himself at Mycenæ, whilst Menelaus succeeded his father-in-law at Sparta. When Helen was stolen by Paris, Agamemnon, from the extent of his dominions, as well as from his personal valour and his mental resources, was elected commander-in-chief of the Greeks in their expedition against Troy. The fleet was detained at Aulis, where Agamemnon, yielding to the power of the gods and the entreaties of the confederates, sacrificed his daughter to appease Diana. (Vid. Iphigenia.) During the Trojan war, Agamemnon behaved with great courage, but his quarrel with Achilles, whose mistress he took by force, was fatal to the Greeks. (Vid. Briseis.) After the ruin of Troy, Cassandra fell to his share, and foretold him that his wife would put him to death. He gave no credit to this, and returned to Argos with Cassandra. Clytemnestra, with her paramour Ægisthus, (Vid. Ægisthus,) prepared to murder him, and as he came from the bath, they embraced him, she gave him a tunic whose sleeves were sewed together, and while he attempted to put it on, she brought him to the ground with the stroke of a hatchet, and Ægisthus seconded her blows. His son Orestes afterwards took revenge on the murderers, and the events of horror attended by the history of this family have been favourite subjects of the tragic muse of ancient Greece, and its imitators in modern-times. (Vid. Clytemnestra, Medeinus, and Orestes.) Homer. Il. 1, 2, &c. Ovjen. 3, &c.—Ovid. de Rem. Am. 777. Met. 12, 30.—Hygin. 88 et 97.—Strab. 8.—Theocrit. 1, 9.—Æsch. V. H. 4, 20.—Dict. Cret. 1, 2, &c.—Dares Phryg.—Sphoc. in Elect.—Eurip. in Orest.—Seneca in Agam.—Paus. 2, 6, 9, 31, &c.—Virg. Æn. 6, 838.—Ilia 2, 3.

AGAMEMNONIUS, an epithet applied to Orestes as son of Agamemnon. Virg. Æn. 4, 471.

AGAMEDES, an athlete of Mantinea, frequently honoured with the prize at Olympia. Paus. 6, 10.

AGAMEMNON, a king of Athens.

AGANIPPE, a celebrated fountain of Bœotia at the foot of mount Helicon. It flows into the Permessus, and is sacred to the muses, who, from it, were called Aganippides. Paus. 9, 29.—Propert. 3, 3.—Ovid. Met. 5, 312.

AGAPENOR, the commander of Arcadians in the Trojan War. Homer. Il. 2.——The son of Ancæus and grandson of Lycurgus, who, after the ruin of Troy, was carried by a storm into Cyprus, where he built Paphos. Paus. 8, 5.

AGAPTOLEMUS, a son of Ægyptus and Pharinosa, put to death by his wife Pieræa. Apollod. 2.

AGARA, a town of Africa. Hec. Hist. Afr. 76.

AGARENI, a people of Arabia. Trajan destroyed their city, called Agarum. Strab. 16.

AGARISTA, daughter of Clistenes, was courted by all the princes of Greece. She married Megacles. Elian. V. H. 12, 21.—Herod. 6, 126, &c.——A daughter of Hippocrates, who married Xanthippus. She dreamed that she had brought forth a lion, and sometime became mother of Pericles. Plut. in Peri.—Herod. 6, 131.

AGASIAS, a sculptor of Ephesus, and the disciple, if not the son of Paythens. He is celebrated by his admirable statue called the Gladiator.

AGASICLES, king of Sparta, was son of Archidamus, and one of the Procudæ. He used to say that a king must so govern his subjects as a father governs his children. Paus. 3, 7.—Plut. in Apoph.

AGASSÆ, a city of Thessaly. Liv. 36, 27.

AGASTHENES, father to Polyxenus, was, as one of Helen's suitors, concerned in the Trojan war. Homer. Il. Lyc.——A son of Augeas, who succeeded as king of Elis, with his brothers Amphimachus and Thalpius. Paus. 5, 3.

AGASTROPHUS, a Trojan, wounded by Diomedes. Homer. Il. 11, 338.

AGATHIAS, an archon of Athens.

AGATHE, a harbour on the coast of Apulia.—Plin. 3, 11.

AGATHA, a town of Gaul, now Agde. Mela 2, 5.—Plin. 3, 4.

AGATHARCHIDAS, a general of Corinth in the Peloponnesian war. Thucyd. 2, 83.——A geographer and historian of Cnidus, who lived about 160 B. C. He wrote ten books on the History of Asia, forty-nine on Europe, and five on the Red Sea. Some fragments of this writer may be found in Josephus, Lucian, and Photius. Joseph. contra Ap.

AGATHARCHUS, an officer in the Syracusan fleet. Thucyd. 7, 25.——A painter in the age of Zeuxis. Plut. in Peri.

AGATHIAS, a Greek historian of Æolis.——A poet and historian in the age of Justinian, of whose reign he published the history in five books. Several of his epigrams are found in the Anthologia. His history is a sequel of that of Procopius. The best edition is that of Paris, fol. 1660.

AGATHO, a Samian historian, who wrote an account of Scythia.——A Greek dramatic poet, the contemporary and friend of Euripides. He gained the tragic prize, B. C. 416. His works, except some passages quoted by Aristotle and other writers, are lost. Plut. in Parall.——A son of Priam. Homer. Il. 24.——A governor of Babylon. Curt. 5, 1.——A Pythagorean philosopher. Elian. V. H. 13, 4.——A learned and melodious musician, who first introduced songs in tragedy. Aristot. in Post.——A youth of Athens, loved by Plato. Diog. Laert. 3, 32.—Aul. G. 19, 11.

AGATHOCLEA, a beautiful courtezan of Egypt. One of the Ptolemies destroyed his wife Eurydice to marry her. She, with her brother, long governed the kingdom, and attempted to murder the king's son. Plut. in Cleom.—Justin 30, 1.

AGATHOCLES, a lascivious and ignoble youth, son of a potter, who, by entering in the Sicilian army, arrived to the greatest honours, and made himself master of Syracuse. He reduced all Sicily under his power; but being defeated at Himera by the Carthaginians, he carried the war into Africa, where, for four years, he extended his conquests over his enemy. He afterwards passed into Italy, and made himself master of Crotona. He died in his 72d year, B. C. 289, after a reign of 28 years of mingled prosperity and adversity. Plut. in Apophth.—Justin. 22 et 23. Polyb. 15. Diod. 18, &c.——A son of Lysimachus, taken prisoner by the Getæ. He was ransomed, and married Lysandra, daughter of Ptolemy Lagus. His father, in his old age, married Arsinoe, the sister of Lysander. After her husband's death, Arsinoe, fearful for her children, attempted to murder Agathocles. Some say that she fell in love with him, and killed him because he slighted her. When Agathocles was dead 283 B. C. Lysandra fled to Seleucus. Strab. 13.—Plut. in Pyrrh. & Demetr.—Paus. 1, 9 et 16.——A Grecian historian of Babylon, who wrote an account of Cyzicus.——A Chian, who wrote on husbandry. Varro.——A Samian writer.——A physician.——An Athenian archon.

AGATHON. Vid. Agatho.

AGATHONYMUS wrote a history of Persia. Plut. de Flum.

AGATHOPOLIS, a town of Gaul, now Montpellier.

AGATHOSTHENES, a poet, &c.

AGATHYLLUS, an elegiac poet of Arcadia.—Diosys. Hal. 1.

AGATHYRNUM, a town of Sicily.

AGATHYRSI, an effeminate nation of Scythia, who had their wives in common. They claimed for their ancestor Agathyrsis, the son of Hercules by the Libyan. Herod. 4, 10.—Virg. Æn. 4, 146.

AGAVE, daughter of Cadmus and Hermione, married Echion, by whom she had Pantheus, who was torn to pieces by the Bacchanals. (Vid. Pentheus.) She is said to have killed her husband in celebrating the orgies of Bacchus. She received divine honours after death, because she had contributed to the education of Bacchus. Hygin. fab. 25.—Ovid. Met. 3, 725.—Lucan. 1, 571.—Stat. Theb. 11, 315.—Apollod. 3, 4.——One of the Nereides. Apollod. 1.——A Lycian of stature. Jur. 7, 67, &c.

AGAUI, a northern nation who lived upon milk. Homer. Il. 13.

AGAVUS, a son of Priam. Homer. Il. 24, 251.

AGDESTIS, a mountain of Phrygia, where Atys was buried. Paus. 1, 4.——A surname of Cybele.

AGELADAS, a sculptor of Sicyon, master of Myron and Polycletus. His statues were much admired, particularly two in brass, one an infant Jupiter, and the other a young Hercules. Plin. 24, 8.

AGELASTUS, a surname of Crassus, the grandfather of the rich Crassus. He only laughed once in his life, and this, it is said, was upon seeing an ass eat thistles. Cic. de Fin. 5.—Plin. 7, 19.

AGELAUS, a king of Corinth, son of Ixion.——A Trojan, son of Paradmon, killed by Diomedes. Homer. Il. 8.——One of the suitors of Penelope, killed by Ulysses. Homer. Odyss. 20.——A son of Hercules and Omphale, from whom Croesus was descended. Apollod. 2, 7.——A servant of Priam, who preserved Paris when exposed on mount Ida. Id. 3, 12.

AGENDICUM, a town of Gaul, the capital of the Senones. Now Sens.

AGENOR king of Phœnicia, was son of Neptune and Libya, and brother to Belus. He married Telephassa, called by some Agriope, by whom he had Cadmus, Phœnix, Cilix, and Europa. As Carthage was built by his descendants, it is called Agenoris urbs. Virg. Æn. 1, 338.—Hygin. 6.—Ital. 1, 15. 17, 58.—Apollod. 2, 1. 3, 1.——A son of Antenor, brother to Polybus, slain in the Trojan war by Neoptolemus. Paus. 10, 27.—Homer. Il. 21, 579.——A son of Jasus and father of Argus. Apollod. 2, 10.——A son of Ægyptus Id 2, 1.——A son of Phlegeus, Id. 3, 7.——A son of Pleuron, and father to Phineus. Id 1, 7——A son of Amphion and Niobe. Id. 3, 5.——A king of Argos, father to Crotopus.——A Mitylenean, who wrote a treatise on music.

AGENORIA, or AGENORA, from ayavop, fortis, the goddess of industry and courage. Her temple was upon mount Aventine.——The goddess of silence bore also the same name, and was represented with one of her fingers pressing her lips.

AGENORIDES, a patronymic applied to Cadmus and the other descendants of Agenor. Ovid. Met. 3, 8.

AGERINUS, a freed man of Agrippina, accused of attempting Nero's life. Tacit. An. 14, 16.

AGESANDER, a sculptor of Rhodes, who flourished about the 88th olympiad. He is famous for having executed, in conjunction with his sons Athenodorus and Polydorus, the Laocoon, which was discovered at Rome in 1506.

AGESIAS, a Platonic philosopher who taught the immortality of the soul. One of the Ptolemies forbade him to continue his lectures, because his doctrine was so prevalent that many of his auditors committed suicide.

AGESILAUS, king of Sparta, of the family of the Agidæ, was son of Doryssus, and father of Archelaus. During his reign, Lycurgus instituted his famous laws. Herod. 7, 204.—Paus. 3, 2.——A son of Archidamus of the family of the Proclidæ, by Eupolia, daughter of Antespiadas elected king in preference to his nephew Leotychides. He made war against Artaxerxes king of Persia with success; but in the midst of his conquests in Asia, he was recalled home to oppose the Athenians and Beotians, who desolated his country, and his return was so expeditious that he passed, in thirty days, over that tract of country which had taken up a whole year of Xerxes' expedition. He defeated his enemies at Coronea; but sickness prevented the progress of his conquests, and the Spartans were beat in every engagement, especially at Leuctra, till he appeared at their head. Though deformed, small of stature, and lame, he was brave, and a greatness of soul compensated for all the imperfections of nature. He was as fond of sobriety as of military discipline: and when he went, in his eightieth year, to assist Tachus king of Egypt, the servants of the monarch could hardly be persuaded that the Lacedæmonian general was eating with his soldiers on the ground, bare-headed, and without any covering to recline upon. Agesilaus died on his return from Egypt, after a reign of thirty-six years, 362 B. C. and his remains were embalmed and brought to Lacedæmon. Justin. 6, 1.—Plut. et C. Nep. in vit.—Paus. 3, 9.—Xenoph. Orat. pro Ages.——A brother of Themistocles, who went into the Persian camp, and stabbed Mardonius instead of Xerxes. Plut. in Parall.——A surname of Pinto.——A Greek who wrote a history of Italy.

AGESIPOLIS I. king of Lacedæmon, son of Pausanias, obtained a great victory over the Mantineans. He reigned fourteen years, and was succeeded by his brother Cleombrotus. B. C. 380. Paus. 3, 5. 8, 8.—Xenoph. 3. Hist. Græc.——II. son of Cleombrotus, king of Sparta, was succeeded by Cleomenes II. B. C. 370. Paus. 1, 1. 3, 5.

AGESISTRATA, the mother of king Agis. Plut. in Agid.

AGESISTRATUS, a man who wrote a treatise intitled De arte mechanicâ.

AGIAS, a famous soothsayer of Lacedæmon, son of Agelochus, who foretold to Lysander his future success at Ægospotamus, and the destruction of the Athenian fleet. Paus. 3, 11.

AGGRAMMES, a cruel king of the Gangarides. His father was a hair-dresser, of whom the queen became enamoured, and whom she made governor to the king's children, to gratify her passion. He killed them, to raise Aggrammes, his son by the queen, to the throne Curt. 9, 2.

AGGRIS, a people near mount Rhodope. Cic. in L. Pis. 37.

AGIDÆ, the descendants of Eurysthenes, who shared the throne of Sparta with the Proclidæ; the name seems to be derived from Agis son of Eurysthenes. Virg. Æn. 8, 683.

AGILAUS, king of Corinth, reigned thirty-six years.——One of the Ephori, almost murdered by the partizans of Cleomenes. Plut. in Cleom.

AGIS, king of Sparta, succeeded his father, Eurysthenes, and, after a reign of one year, was succeeded by his son Echestratus, B. C. 1056. Paus. 3, 2.——Another king of Sparta, who waged bloody wars against Athens, and restored liberty to many Greek cities. He attempted to restore the laws of Lycurgus at Sparta, but in vain; the perfidy of friends, who pretended to second his views, brought him to difficulties, and he was at last dragged from a temple, where he had taken refuge, to a prison, where he was strangled by order of the Ephori. Plut. in Agid.——Another, son of Archidamus, who signalized himself in the war which the Spartans waged against Ephesus. He obtained a victory at Mantinea, and was successful in the Peloponnesian war. He reigned twenty seven years. Thucyd. 3 et 4.—Paus. 3, 8. et 10.——Another, son of Archidamus, king of Sparta, who endeavoured to deliver Greece from the empire of Macedonia, with the assistance of the Persians. He was conquered in the attempt, and slain by Antipater, Alexander's general, and 5,300 Lacedæmonians perished with him. Curt. 6, 1.—Diod. 17.—Justin. 12, 1, &c.——Another son of Eudamidas, killed in a battle against the Mantineans. Paus. 8, 10.——An Athenian in the expedition of Cyrus against his brother Artaxerxes Polyæn. 7, 16.——A poet of Argos, who attended Alexander in his Asiatic expedition, and rendered himself agreeable by the meanest adulation. He raised his patron to immortality, and declared that Bacchus, Hercules, and the sons of Leda would yield to his superior merits in the assembly of the gods. Pont. 8, 5.——A Lycian who followed Æneas into Italy, where he was killed. Virg. Æn. 10, 751.

AGLAIA the youngest of the three Graces, called sometimes Pasithae. Paus. 9, 35

AGLAONICE, daughter of Hegemon, was acquainted with astronomy and eclipses, whence she boasted of her power to draw the moon from heaven Her arrogance and the falsehood of her assertions, rendered her name proverbial for deceit and imposition. Plut. de Orac. defect.

AGLAOPE one of the Sirens

AGLAOPHON, an excellent Greek painter, in the age of Eupho, the father of Parrhasius Plin. 35, 8

AGLAOSTHENES, wrote a history of Naxos Strab 6

AGLAURUS, the daughter of Cecrops, king of Athens, changed into a stone by Mercury. Ovid Met 2 12.

AGLAUS, the poorest man of Arcadia, pronounced by the oracle more happy than Gyges king of Lydia. Plin. 7, 46 Val. Max. 7, 1

AGMON, one of the companions of Diomedes remarkable for his fidelity, his valour, and constancy The contempt he expressed for Venus offended the gods, and he was changed into a swan Ovid. Met 14, 509

AGNA, a woman in the age of Horace, who though deformed, had many admirers Horat. 1, 3, 40

AGNO, one of the nymphs who nursed Jupiter. She gave her name to a fountain on mount Lycæus. When the priest of Jupiter, after a prayer, stirred the waters of this fountain with a bough, a thick vapour arose, which was soon dissolved into a plentiful shower Paus 8, 31, &c.

AGNODICE, an Athenian virgin, who disguised her sex to learn medicine She was taught by Hierophilus the art of midwifery, and when employed, always discovered her sex to her patients. This brought her into so much practice, that the males of her profession, who were now out of employment, accused her before the Areopagus of corruption. She confessed her sex to the judges and a law was immediately made to empower all free-born women to learn midwifery Hygin. 274.

AGNON son of Nicias, was present at the taking of Samos by Pericles. In the Peloponnesian war he went against Potidæa, but abandoned his expedition through disease He built Amphipolis whose inhabitants rebelled to Brasidas, whom they regarded as their founder, forgetful of Agnon Thucyd. 2, 3 &c.——A writer, whose talents were employed in vilifying the powers of eloquence Quintil. 2, 17.——One of Alexander's cooks Plin. 33, 2.

AGNONIDES, a rhetorician of Athens, who accused Phocion of betraying the Piræus to Nicanor. When the people recollected what services Phocion had rendered them, they raised him statues and put to death his accuser. Plut. et Nep. in Phocion

AGONALIA and AGONIA, festivals in Rome, celebrated three times a year, in honour of Janus, or Agonius. The chief priest used to offer a ram. Ovid. Fast. 1, 317.—Varro de L. L. 5.

AGONES CAPITOLINI, games celebrated every fifth year upon the Capitoline hill, established by Domitian. Prizes were proposed for agility and strength, as well as for poetical and other literary compositions. The poet Statius publicly recited his Thebaid, which was not received with much applause.

AGONIS, a woman in the temple of Venus, on mount Eryx. Cic. Verr. 1.

AGONIUS, a Roman deity, who patronised the actions of men Vid Agonalia.

AGONOTHETES, the officers who sat as umpires at the Grecian games They took care that the contests should be performed according to custom settled all disputes which arose and decided upon whom the prizes should be awarded AGORACRITUS a sculptor of Paros, scholar of Phidias B. C 439. He seems to have been particularly favoured by his master who it is said permitted him to place his name on some of the works which he himself had executed. Plin 35 8.

AGORANIS, a river falling into the Ganges Now the Gogra Ptol. de Ind.

AGORANOMI four magistrates at Athens, who watched over the city and port and inspected whatever was exposed to sale

AGORÆA, a name of Minerva at Sparta Paus. 3, 11

AGORÆUS one of the names of Mercury from his presiding over the markets Paus. 1 15.

AGRA, a place near Athens on the banks of the Ilissus, where the smaller Eleusinian mysteries were celebrated. Here was a temple to Diana, who was surnamed Agræa and the beauty of the spot induced Plato to make it the scene of his dialogue called Phædrus. Paus 8, 19.——A city of Susa——of Arcadia,——and Arabia.

AGRÆI and AGRÆNES, a people of Arabia. Plin. 6, 28 —— Of Thrace Liv. 32, 34.

AGRAGAS or ACRAGAS a river town and mountain of Sicily, called also, Agrigentum The town was built by the people of Gela, who were a Rhodian colony. [Vid. Agrigentum.] Virg. Æn 3, 703.—Diod. 11.

AGRARIA LEX was intended to distribute among the Roman people all the lands which they had gained by conquest and to limit the number of acres which an individual should possess. It was first proposed, A U C 267, by the consul Sp. Cassius Vecellinus, and rejected by the senate. This produced dissensions between the senate and the people and Cassius upon seeing the ill-success of the new regulations he proposed, offered to distribute among the people the money which was produced from the corn of Sicily after it had been brought and sold in Rome. This act of liberality the people refused, and tranquility was soon after re-established in the state. [Vid. Cassius.] It was proposed a second time A U. C. 299 by the tribune Licinius Stolo but with no better success and so great were the tumults which followed, that one of the tribunes of the people was killed, and many of the senators fined for their opposition. Mutius Scævola, A. U. C 620 persuaded the tribune Fabrius Gracchus to propose it a third time; and though Octavius, his colleague in the tribuneship, opposed it yet Fabrius made it pass into a law, after much altercation, and commissioners were authorised to make a division of the lands This law at last proved fatal to the freedom of Rome, under Julius Cæsar Flor. 2, 2 et Id.—Cic. pro Leg. Agr —Liv. 2, 41

AGRAULE, a tribe of Athens. Plut. in Them.

AGRAULIA, a festival at Athens in honour of Agraulos The Cyprians also observed these festivals, by offering [illegible]

AGRAULOS, a daughter of Cecrops.——A surname of Minerva.

AGRAUONIÆ, a people of Illyria. Liv. 45. 26.

AGRE, one of Actæon's dogs. Ovid. Met. 3, 213.

AGRIANES, a river of Thrace, which falls into the Hebrus. Now the Erkana. Herod. 4, 9.——A people that dwelt in the neighbourhood of that river. Id. 5, 16.

AGRICOLA, the father-in-law of the historian Tacitus, who wrote his life. He was eminent for his public and private virtues. He was governor of Britain, and first discovered it to be an Island. Domitian envied his virtues; he recalled him from the province he had governed with equity and moderation, and ordered him to enter Rome in the night, that no triumph might be granted to him. Agricola obeyed, and without betraying any resentment, he retired to a peaceful solitude, and the enjoyment of the society of a few friends. He died in the 56th year, A. D. 93. Tacit. in Agric.

AGRIGENTUM, a town of Sicily, eighteen stadia from the sea, on mount Agragas. It was founded by a colony from Gela, B. C. 582; and was renowned for its power, grandeur, and commercial enterprise. The inhabitants were noted for their hospitality and for their luxurious manner of living. In its flourishing situation Agrigentum contained 200,000 inhabitants, who submitted without resistance to the superior power of Syracuse. The government was monarchical, but afterwards a democracy was established. The famous Phalaris usurped the sovereignty, which was also for some time in the hands of the Carthaginians. Agrigentum can now boast of more venerable remains of antiquity than any other town in Sicily. Polyb. 9.——Strab. 6.

AGRINIUM, a city of Acarnania near the Achelous. Polyb. 5.

AGRIONIA, a Grecian festival observed in honour of Bacchus, who was called Agrionius, from his fondness for savage beasts. It was celebrated at night, when the females present made a search after the god as if he had fled from them, and not finding him exclaimed that he had concealed himself among the Muses. The rest of the time was spent in solving enigmas, and difficult questions. This mystery has been thought to inculcate that learning and the muses should accompany good cheer. Plut. in Symp. 8, 1.

AGRIOPAS, a man who wrote the history of all those who had obtained the public prize at Olympia. Paus. 8, 22.

AGRIOPE, the wife of Agenor, king of Phœnicia, whom some, however, call Telephassa. Hygin. 6, 178, 179.

M. AGRIPPA VIPSANIUS, a celebrated Roman, who obtained a victory over S. Pompey, and favoured the cause of Augustus at the battles of Actium and Philippi, where he behaved with great valour. He was an enemy to the measures adopted by his imperial friend to abridge the liberties of Rome and, in all the openness of confidence, he advised him to lay down the authority, and totally establish the republican government at Rome, but he was over-ruled by Mecænas. In his expeditions in Sicily and Germany, Agrippa obtained several victories, but refused the honours of a triumph. The expenses which others would have lavished on that frivolous spectacle, he applied to the more glorious purpose of adorning Rome with magnificent buildings, one of which, the Pantheon, still remains. In consequence of a quarrel with Marcellus, the nephew of Augustus, he retired to Mitylene, whence, after an absence of two years, he was recalled by the emperor. He first married Pomponia, the daughter of the celebrated Atticus, and afterwards Marcella, the niece of Augustus. While this lady was still living, the emperor prevailed upon his sister Octavia to resign to him her son-in-law, and gave him in marriage his own daughter Julia; so strong was his desire of Augustus to be united with him in the closest alliance. The high degree of favour in which he stood with the emperor was soon after evinced by a farther mark of esteem: for during a visit to the Roman provinces of Greece and Asia, in which Augustus was absent two years, he left the government of the empire to his care. While Agrippa enjoyed, and indeed seems to have merited, all the partiality of Augustus, he was likewise a favourite with the people. He died, B. C. 12, in the fifty-first year of his age, universally lamented; and his remains were deposited in the tomb which Augustus had prepared for himself. Agrippa left by Julia three sons, Caius, Lucius, and Posthumus Agrippa, and two daughters, Agrippina, and Julia. His son, C. Cæsar Agrippa, was adopted by Augustus, and made consul, by the flattery of the Roman people, at the age of fourteen or fifteen. This promising youth went to Armenia, on an expedition against the Persians, where he received a fatal blow from the treacherous hand of Lollius, the governor of one of the neighbouring cities. He languished for a little time, and died in Lycia. His younger brother, L. Cæsar Agrippa, was likewise adopted by his grandfather Augustus, but he was soon after banished to Campania, for using seditious language against his benefactor. In the seventh year of his exile he would have been recalled, had not Livia and Tiberius, jealous of the partiality of Augustus for him, ordered him to be assassinated in his twenty-sixth year. He has been called ferocious and savage, and he gave himself the name of Neptune, because he was fond of fishing. Virg. Æn. 8, 682.——Horat. 1, 6.——Sylvius, a son of Tiberinus Sylvius, king of Latium. He reigned thirty-three years, and was succeeded by his son Remulus Sylvius. Dionys. Hal. 1, 8.——One of the servants of the murdered prince assumed his name and raised commotions. Tacit. Ann. 2, 39.——A consul who conquered the Æqui.——A philosopher. Diog.——Herodes, the son of Aristobulus and Berenice, and grandson of Herod the Great, was born about B. C. 7. He was brought up at Rome with Drusus, the son of Tiberius, but after the death of that prince, all who had been his companions were commanded by the emperor to leave Rome, lest the sight and presence of them should renew his affliction. Agrippa had lived very profusely, and when he left Rome, was overwhelmed with debts. He did not think proper to go to Jerusalem, because he could not appear in that city in a manner suitable to his birth; but he retired to a castle of Idumea, in which he lived rather like a private person than a prince. Hence he returned to Rome, where, attaching himself to Caius Cæsar, he was imprudent enough to express a wish for the death of Tiberius, which, being reported to that jealous emperor, caused him to be thrown into prison and loaded with chains. When Caius ascended the throne, his favourite was released, presented with a chain of gold as heavy as that which had lately confined him, and made king of Judæa. He commenced a persecution against the Christians to please the Jews, and put the apostle James the Greater to death. Being soon after of Cesarea, he instituted games in honour of the emperor Claudius, at which the inhabitants of Tyre and Sidon waited on him to sue for peace. On this occasion he made a pompous appearance on his throne, and when he spoke, the parasites who surrounded him, said, it was the voice of a god, and not of a man. Receiving this impious adulation with pleasure, the angel of the Lord smote him with a disorder, of which he died, A. D. 44. ——His son, of the same name, succeeded to the throne at the age of seventeen. St Paul pleaded his cause before him with so much eloquence, that Agrippa acknowledged he had "almost persuaded him to be a Christian." He died at Rome about 93. D. 91. and in him terminated the Herodian line and family. Jos. 5, 15.—Tacit. Hist. 2, 81.——Messalina, a Roman general, who obtained a triumph over the Salassi. He appeased the populace at Rome by the well-timed liberality of the belly and the limbs, and erected the new office of tribunes of the people, A. U. C. 261. He died poor, but universally regretted, his funeral was at the expense of the public, from which also his daughters received dowries. Liv. 2. 33.—Flor. 1, 25.——A mathematician in the reign of Domitian; he was a native of Bithynia.

AGRIPPINA, the daughter of M. Agrippa and Marcella, and wife of the emperor Tiberius. She was much beloved by her husband, and it was with great reluctance that he divorced her, when obliged to marry Julia, the daughter of Augustus. Agrippina was afterwards married to Asinius Gallus, whom Tiberius, still retaining his affection for his former wife, condemned to perpetual imprisonment, in the spirit of a jealous rival. Suet. in Tib. 7.—Tacit. Ann. 1, 1.——The daughter of M. Agrippa by Julia, daughter of Augustus. She married Germanicus, whom she accompanied in all his campaigns, and when Piso poisoned him, she carried his ashes to Italy, and accused his murderer, who stabbed himself. She fell under the displeasure of Tiberius, who banished her to the island of Pandataria, where she starved herself to death. The cabinet of antiques at Dresden possesses four famous busts of this Agrippina. Suet. in Tib. 54.—Tacit. Ann. 14, 25.——Julia, daughter of Germanicus and Agrippina, married Domitius Ahenobarbus, by whom she became the mother of Nero. After her husband's death she married her uncle the emperor Claudius, whom she destroyed, to make Nero succeed to the throne. After many cruelties and much licentiousness, she was assassinated by order of her son, and as she expired, she exclaimed, "strike the belly which could give birth to such a monster." She died A. D. 59. She was richly endowed with the gifts of nature, but her ambition was boundless, and her disposition intriguing and dissolute. It is said that her son viewed her dead body with all the raptures of admiration, saying, he never could have believed his mother was so beautiful a woman. She left memoirs which assisted Tacitus in the composition of his Annals. The town which she built, where she was born, on the borders of the Rhine, and called Agrippina Colonia, is the modern Cologne. Tacit. Ann. 4, 75. 12, 7, 22, &c.

AGRIUS'S. Vid. Acrisius.

AGRIOPE, the mother of Cadmus. Hygin. 6.

AGRIUS, the son of Parthaon king of Ætolia, who deprived his brother Œneus of the crown. He was afterwards dethroned by Diomedes, the grandson of Œneus, upon which he killed himself. Hygin. 175 et 242.—Apollod. 1, 7.—Homer. Il. 14, 117.——One of Actæon's dogs. Hygin. 181.——A giant.——A centaur killed by Hercules. Apollod. 2, 5.——A son of Ulysses by Circe. Hesiod. Theog. 1013.——The father of Thersites. Ovid. ex Pont. 3, 9, 9.

AGROLAS, surrounded the citadel of Athens with walls, except that part which afterwards was repaired by Cimon. Paus. 1, 28.

AGRON, a king of Illyria, who, after conquering the Ætolians, drank to such excess that he died instantly, B. C. 231. Polyb. 2, 4.

AGROTAS, a Greek orator of Marseilles.

AGROTES, an anniversary sacrifice of goats offered to Diana at Athens. It was instituted by Callimachus the Polemarch, who vowed to sacrifice to the goddess so many goats as there might be enemies killed in a battle which he was going to fight against the troops of Darius, who had invaded Attica. The quantity of the slain was so great, that a sufficient number of goats could not be procured, therefore they were invited to five hundred every year, till they equalled the number of Persians slain in battle. Aeneph. in Cyrop.

AGYIEUS and AGYIEUS, from αγυια a street; a surname of Apollo, because sacrifices were offered to him in the public streets of Athens. Horat. 4, 6.

AGYLLA, a town of Etruria, founded by a colony of Pelasgians, and governed by Mezentius when Æneas came to Italy. It was afterwards called Cære, by the Lydians, who took possession of it. It is now Cervateri. Virg. Æn. 7, 652. 8, 479.

AGYLLÆUS, a famous wrestler of Cleonæ, scarce inferior in strength to Hercules, whose son he was said to be. Diod. Sic. 5, 148.—Stat. Theb. 6, 857.

AGYRIS, a tyrant of Sicily, assisted by Dionysius against the Carthaginians. Dio. 14.

AGYRIUM, a town of Sicily, where Diodorus the historian was born. The inhabitants were called Agyrinæi. It is now St Fuppo d' Agyrio. Diod. 14.—Cic. in Verr. 2, 65.

AGYRIUS, an Athenian general, who succeeded Thrasybulus. Diod. 14.

AGYRIUS, a man who killed his father. Ovid. Met. 5, 148.——A combatant in the Theban war. Stat. Th. 9, 241.

AHALA, the surname of the Servilii at Rome.

AHENOBARBUS. Vid. Æneobarbus.

AJAX, son of Telamon by Periboea or Eribœa daughter of Alcathous, was, next to Achilles, the bravest of all the Greeks in the Trojan war. He engaged Hector, with whom at parting he exchanged arms. After the death of Achilles, Ajax and Ulysses disputed their claim to the arms of the dead hero. When the prize given to the latter, A. as was so enraged that he slaughtered a whole flock of sheep, supposing them to be the sons of Atreus, who had given the preference to Ulysses, and stabbed himself with his sword. The blood which ran to the ground from the wound, was changed into the flower Hyacinth. Some say that he was killed by Paris in battle, others, that he was murdered by Ulysses. His body was buried at Sigæum, some say on mount Rhœtus; and his tomb was visited and honoured by Alexander. Hercules, according to some authors, prayed to the gods that his friend Telamon, who was childless, might have a son, with a skin as impenetrable as the skin of the Nemæan lion which he then wore. His prayers were heard; and when Ajax was born, Hercules wrapped him up in the lion's skin, which rendered his body invulnerable, except that part which was left uncovered by a hole in the skin, through which Hercules hung his quiver. This vulnerable part was in his breast, or, as some say, behind the neck. Q. Calab. 1. 14.—Apollod. 2, 10 et 13.—Philostr. in Heroic. 12.—Pindar. Isthm. 6.—Homer Il. 1, &c. Odyss. 11.—Dictys Cret. 5.—Dares Phryg. 9.—Ovid. Met. 13.—Horat. Sat. 2, 3, 197.—Hygin. 107 et 242.—Paus. 1, 35. 5, 19.——The son of Oileus king of Locris, was surnamed Locrian, in contradistinction to the son of Telamon. He accompanied the expedition to Troy, because he had been one of the suitors of Helen. During the siege he distinguished himself by his intrepidity; he shared the toils and the dangers of the Telamonian Ajax; and so great was his dexterity, that, to express it, some of the ancients have represented him as having three hands. As to his moral character, it appears in a very unfavourable light. On the night of the capture of Troy, he offered violence to Cassandra, the prophetic daughter of Priam, in the very sanctuary of Minerva, whither she had fled for security. The goddess resented this profanation of her temple, she obtained the privilege of hurling the thunderbolts of Jupiter, and the power of tempests from Neptune; and the fleet of the unhappy Ajax was dispersed, and his own ship set on fire. He, however, escaped the violence of the waves and of the thunder, and swam to a rock, where he might have been preserved, had he not impiously boasted that he could there secure himself against the vengeance of the gods. Neptune upon this struck the rock with his trident, and with the crumbling fragments the hero was again precipitated into the sea, where he perished. His body was afterwards found, and the Greeks honoured his remains with funeral obsequies, and offered black sheep on his tomb. According to Virgil's account, Minerva seized him in a whirlwind, and dashed him against a rock, where he expired, consumed by thunder. Virg. Æn. 1, 43, &c.—Homer. Il. 2, 13, &c. Odyss. 4.—Hygin. 116 et 273.—Philostr. Icn. 2, 13.—Horat. epod. 10, 13.—Paus. 10, 26 et 31.——The two Ajaces were, as some suppose, placed after death in the island of Leuce, a separate place reserved only for the bravest heroes of antiquity.

AIDONEUS, a surname of Pluto.——A king of the Molossi, who imprisoned Theseus, because he and Pirithous attempted to ravish his daughter Proserpine, near the Acheron; whence arose the well-known fable of the descent of Theseus and Pirithous into hell. Plut. in Thes.——A river near Troy. Paus. 10, 12.

AIMYLUS son of Ascanius, was, according to some, the progenitor of the noble family of the Æmylii in Rome.

AIUS LOCUTIUS, a deity to whom the Romans erected an altar from the following circumstance: one of the common people, called Cedicius, informed the tribunes that as he passed one night through one of the streets of the city, a voice more than human, issuing from above Vesta's temple, told him, that Rome would soon be attacked by the Gauls. His information was neglected, but his veracity was proved by the event; and Camillus, after the conquest of the Gauls, built a temple to that supernatural voice which had given Rome warning of the approaching calamity, under the name of Aius Locutius. This divinity is ridiculed by Cicero. Liv. 5, 32 et 50.—Cic. de N. D. 1. 45. 2, 32.

ALABANDA, an inland town of Caria, near the river Mæander. Its inhabitants were called Alabandi, Alabandeni, and Alabandenses. It was built by Alabandus, who was thereiore worshipped as a deity. New Carystii. Cic. de N. D. 3, 15.—Herod. 7, 195.—Strab. 14.

ALABARCHES, a nickname given to Pompey, on account of his having raised certain taxes in Syria. Cic. ad Att. 2, 17.

ALABASTRUM, a town in Egypt, near which alabaster, a soft kind of marble, was found. Plin. 36, 7. 37, 10.

ALABUS, a river of Sicily.

ALÆA, a surname of Minerva in Peloponnesus. Her festivals are also called Alæa. Paus. 8, 4 et 7.

ALÆI, a number of islands in the Persian gulf, abounding in tortoises. Arrian. in Peripl.

ALÆUS, the father of Auge, who married Hercules.

ALAGONIA, a city of Laconia. Plut. 3, 21 et 36.

ALALA, the goddess of war, sister to Mars. Plut. de glor. Athen.

ALALCOMENÆ, a city of Bœotia, near the western border of the lake Copais. It was celebrated for the worship of Minerva, thence surnamed Alalcomenea.

ALALIA, a town of Corsica, built by a colony of Phocæans, destroyed by Scipio 562 B. C. and afterwards rebuilt by Sylla. Herod. 1, 165.—Flor. 2, 2.——A town of Syria, near the Euphrates.

ALAMANNI, Vid. Alemanni.

ALANDER, a river of Phrygia. Liv. 38, 18.

ALANI, a people of Sarmatia, near the Palus Mæotis, who were said to have twenty-six different languages. They migrated into Europe, advanced to the banks of the Danube, and, traversing Gaul, settled at the foot of the Pyrenees. They next entered Spain, and took possession of many of its finest provinces; but they were afterwards dispersed by the Goths and Franks, and their name was finally lost in that of their conquerors. Strab.

ALARES, a people of Pannonia. Tac. Ann. 15, 10.

ALARICUS, a famous king of the Goths, who plundered Rome in the reign of Honorius. He was greatly respected for his military valour, and during his reign he kept the Roman empire in continual alarms. He died, after a reign of thirteen years, A. D. 410. He was buried in the channel of the river Busentinus, that his remains might not be found by the Romans, and the captives employed in the work were murdered.

ALARODII, a nation near Pontus. Herodot. 3, 94.

ALASTOR, a son of Neleus and Chloris. Apollod. 1, 9.——An arm-bearer to Sarpedon, king of Lycia, killed by Ulysses. Homer. Il. 5, 677.—Ovid. Met. 13, 257.——One of Pluto's horses, when he carried away Proserpine. Claud. de Rapt. Pros. 1, 256

ALATA CASTRA, a military station of the Romans in Britain, placed by some at Edinburgh.

ALAUDÆ, soldiers of one of Cæsar's legions in Gaul. Sueton. in Jul. 24.

ALAZON, a river of Albania, rising in mount Caucasus, and flowing into the Cyrus. Plin. 6, 10.

ALBA SYLVIUS, son of Latinus Sylvius, succeeded his father in the kingdom of Latium, and reigned thirty-six years. Ovid. Met. 14, 612.——Longa, a city of Latium, built by Ascanius, B. C. 1152, on the spot where Æneas found, according to the prophecy of Helenus, Virg. Æn. 3, 390, &c., and of the god of the river, Æa. 8, 43, a white sow, with a litter of thirty young ones. It was called Longa, from its being extended along the slope of the Mons Albanus. The descendants of Æneas reigned there in the following order: 1. Ascanius, son of Æneas, with little intermission, eight years. 2. Sylvius Posthumus, twenty-nine years. 3. Æneas Sylvius, thirty-one years. 4. Latinus, five years. 5. Alba, thirty-six years. 6. Atys or Capetus, twenty-six years. 7. Capys, twenty-eight years. 8. Capetus, thirteen years. 9. Tiberinus, eight years. 10. Agrippa, thirty-three years. 11. Romulus, nineteen years. 12. Aventinus, thirty-seven years. 13. Procas, thirteen years. 14. Numitor and Amulius. Alba was destroyed by the Romans, 665 B. C. and the inhabitants were carried to Rome. The beautiful lake of Albano, with its canal, and the castle of Gondolfo, still remind us of Alba Longa. Liv. 1, 3.—Juv. 12, 72.—Varro de R. R. 2, 4.——Fucensis, a city of the Marsi in Italy, near the Lacus Fucinus. Its inhabitants were called Albenses, to distinguish them from the people of Alba Longa, called Albani. It was chosen by the Romans as a place of residence for captives of rank and consequence, as well as for notorious offenders. Now Alba. Strab. 5. ——Pompeia, a city of Liguria, on the river Tanarus. It was the birth-place of the emperor Pertinax. It is now called Asta simply. Plin. 3, 5.

ALBANI and ALBENSES, names applied to the inhabitants of the two cities of Alba. Vid. Alba. Cic. ad Her. 2, 28.

ALBANIA, a province of Asia, bounded on the west by Iberia, on the east by the Caspian sea, on the north by mount Caucasus, and on the south by the river Cyrus. The inhabitants were occupied principally in the feeding of cattle. They are represented as having been of majestic stature, of handsome countenance, with yellow hair, and blue eyes. Some maintain that they followed Hercules from mount Albanus in Italy, when he returned from the conquest of Geryon. Albania is now known by the names of Erivan and Shirvan. Dionys. Hal. 1, 15.—Justin. 42, 3.—Strab. 11.—Plin. 6, 40.—Mela 3, 5.—The Caspian sea is called Albanum, as being near Albania. Plin. 6, 13.

ALBANIÆ PORTÆ, defiles in mount Caucasus, affording an entrance into Albania. Val. Flacc. 3, 497.

ALBANUS, a mountain near Alba Longa, about twenty miles from Rome. It was on this mountain that the Latinæ Feriæ, or holidays kept by all the cities of the Latin name, were celebrated. There was a lake at the foot of the mountain, called the Alban lake, about seven or eight miles in circumference. The neighbourhood was adorned with the villas of the opulent Romans. Horat ep. 2. 1, 27.——The word, taken adjectively, is applied to such as are natives of, or belong to, the town of Alba.——A river of Albania, now Iberus.

ALBIA TERENTIA the mother of Otho. Suet.

ALBICI, a people of Gallia Aquitana. Cæs. Bell. Civ. 1, 34.

ALBIENSES, a people of Latium. Dionys. Hal.

ALBIGAUNUM, a town of Liguria. Now Albenga. Mela 2, 4.

ALBINI, two Roman orators of great merit, mentioned by Cicero in Brut. This name is common to many tribunes of the people. Liv. 2, 33. 6, 30.—Sallust. de Jug. Bell.

ALBINOVANUS CELSUS. Vid. Celsus.—Pedo, a Latin poet, who flourished about A D 16. He was intimate with Ovid. He wrote elegies, epigrams, and heroic poetry; but only two of his pieces are extant, one, an elegy on the death of Drusus, and another on that of Mecænas. Ovid. ex Pont. 4. 10.—Ovid. 10. 3.

ALBINTIMELIUM, a town of Liguria. Now Vintimiglia. Tacit. Hist. 2. 13.

ALBINUS, was born at Adrumetum in Africa, and made governor of Britain by Commodus. After the murder of Pertinax, he was elected emperor by the soldiers in Britain. Severus had also been invested with the imperial dignity by his own army; and these two rivals, with about 50,000 men each, came into Gaul to decide the fate of the empire. Severus was conqueror, and he ordered the head of Albinus to be cut off, and his body to be thrown into the Rhone, A.D. 198.——A prætorian sent to Sylla, as ambassador from the senate during the civil wars. He was put to death by Sylla's soldiers. Plut. in Sylla.——A usurer. Horat.——A Roman plebeian who received the vestals into his chariot in preference to his family, when they fled from Rome, which the Gauls had sacked. Val. Max. 1, 1.—Liv. 5, 40.—Vell. 1, 15.——A. Posthumus, consul with L. Lucullus, B. C. 151, wrote a history of Rome in Greek, which Cicero has praised.——A Latin poet, three of whose verses are preserved in the collection of Latin poets.

ALBION, son of Neptune by Amphitrite, came into Britain, where he established a kingdom, and first introduced astrology and the art of building ships. He was killed at the mouth of the Rhone, with stones thrown by Jupiter, because he opposed the passage of Hercules. Mela 2, 5.——The greatest island of Europe, now called Great Britain. The etymology of the name is very uncertain. The Greek adjective albus, the Phœnician alp high, or alpin high mountain, and the Welch alben white, have each been said to furnish its origin, from the height of the chalky cliffs on the coasts of the island. Some however, have derived it from king Albion, who is said to have reigned here. The ancients compared the figure of this island to a long buckler, or to the iron of a hatchet.

ALBIS, a river of Germany falling into the German ocean, and now called the Elbe. Lucan. 2, 52.

ALBIUS, a man, father to a famous spendthrift. Horat Sat. 1, 4.——A name of the poet Tibullus. Horat. Od. 1, 33, 1.

ALBUCILLA, an immodest woman. Tacit. Ann. 6, 47.

ALBULA, the ancient name of the river Tiber. Virg. Æn. 8, 332.—Liv. 1, 3.

ALBUNEA, a wood near Tibur and the river Anio, sacred to the Muses. It received its name from a Sibyl, called also Albunea, worshipped as a goddess at Tibur, whose temple still remains. Near Albunea there was a small lake of the same name, whose waters were of a sulphurous smell, and possessed some medicinal properties. This lake fell, by a small stream called Albula, into the river Anio, with which it soon lost itself in the Tiber. Horat. Od. 1, 7, 14.—Virg. Æn. 7, 83.—Tibull. 2, 5, 69.

ALBURNUS, a lofty mountain of Lucania, near the junction of the Silarus and Tanager. It is now Monte di Postiglione. Virg. G. 3, 147.

ALBUS PAGUS, a place near Sidon, where Anthony waited for the arrival of Cleopatra.

ALBUTIUS, a prince of Celtiberia, to whom Scipio restored his wife. Livius.——A sordid man, father to Canidia. He beat his servants before they were guilty of any offence, lest, said he, I should have no time to punish them when they offend. Horat. Sat. 2, 2.——A rhetorician in the age of Seneca.——An ancient satirist. Cic.

in Brut.——Titus, a Roman philosopher, flourished about B. C. 120. He is ranked by Cicero among the Epicureans. Having been educated at Athens, he became so fond of Greece and Grecian manners, that he wished rather to pass for a Greek than a Roman. He was made governor of Sardinia; but he grew offensive to the senate, and was banished. It is supposed that he died at Athens.

ALCÆUS, a celebrated lyric poet, was born at Mitylene, in the isle of Lesbos, about 600 years before the Christian era. He was contemporary with the famous Sappho, to whom he paid his addresses, but, as it seems, unsuccessfully. In an engagement between the Athenians and Lesbians, he made his escape from the battle by flight, and having thrown away his armour, the victorious Athenians obtained possession of it, and hung it up, as a monument of his disgrace, in the temple of Minerva at Sigæum. He is accounted the inventor of the barbiton, or harp, and has given his name to the measure called Alcaic. He composed many amatory and Bacchanalian songs; but his muse seems to have been more congenially employed in supporting the cause of liberty, and in denouncing vengeance on the heads of tyrants. Of the works of this admired poet, nothing but a few fragments remain; which have been edited with great ability by Bloomfield, and printed in the Museum Criticum. Quintil. 10, 1.—Horat. 5, 95.—Horat. Od. 4, 9.—Cic. Tusc. 4, 33.——A poet of Athens, said by Suidas to be the inventor of tragedy.——A writer of epigrams.——A comic poet.——A son of Androgeus, who went with Hercules into Thrace, and was made king of part of the country. Hyginus, 2, 5.——A [illegible] of Hercules by a maid of Amphalce.——A son of Perseus and Andromeda, and father of Amphitryon, the supposed father of Hercules. From him Hercules has been called Alcides. Apollod. 2, 4. Pans. 8, 14.

ALCAMENES, one of the Agidæ, king of Sparta, known by his apophthegms. He succeeded his father Teleclus, and reigned thirty-seven years. The Helots rebelled in his reign. Pans. 3, 2, 4, 4 et 5.——A general of the Achæans. Pans. 7, 15.——A statuary, who lived 448 B. C. and was distinguished for his statues of Venus and Vulcan. Pans. 5, 10.—Quintil. 1, 10.—Plin. 34, 8.——The commander of a Spartan fleet, put to death by the Athenians. Thucyd. 4, 5, &c.

ALCANDER, an attendant of Harpedon, killed by Ulysses. Ovid. Met. 13, 257.——A Lacedæmonian youth, who accidentally put out one of the eyes of Lycurgus, and was generously forgiven by the sage, though the people were clamorous for his punishment. Pans. in Lyc.—Pans. 3, 18.——A Trojan killed by Turnus. Virg. Æn. 9, 767.

ALCANDRE, the wife of Polybius, a rich Theban. Homer. Odyss. 4, 672.

ALCANOR, a Trojan of mount Ida, whose sons Pandarus and Bitias followed Æneas into Italy. Virg. Æn. 9, 672.——A son of Thorus, killed by Æneas. Ib. 10, 338.

ALCATHOE, a name of Megara in Attica, because rebuilt by Alcathous, son of Pelops, who reigned there. Pans. 1, 4.—Ovid. Met. 7, 443. Ars Am. 2, 321.

ALCATHOUS, a son of Pelops, who being suspected of murdering his brother Chrysippus, came to Megara, where he killed a lion, which had destroyed the king's son. He succeeded to the kingdom of Megara, and, in commemoration of his services, festivals called Alcathoia, were instituted at Megara. Pans. 1, 4, &c.——A Trojan, who married Hippodamia, daughter of Anchises. He was killed in the Trojan war by Idomeneus. Homer. Il. 12, 93.——A son of Parthaon, killed by Tydeus. Apollod. 1, 7, &c.——A friend of Æneas, killed in the Rutulian war. Virg. Æn. 10, 747.

ALCE, one of Actæon's dogs. Ovid.——A town of Spain, which surrendered to Gracchus. Now Alcazar. Liv. 40, 47.

ALCÆUS, an Argive, who alone with Chromius survived the battle between 300 of his countrymen and 300 Lacedæmonians. Herod. 1, 82.

ALCESTE, or ALCESTIS, daughter of Pelias, married Admetus. She, with her sisters, put to death her father, that he might be restored to youth and vigour by Medea, who, however, refused to perform her promise. Upon this, the sister fled to Admetus, who married Alceste. They were soon pursued by an army headed by their brother Acastus; and Admetus being taken prisoner, was redeemed from death, by the generous offer of his wife, who was sacrificed in his stead to appease the shades of her father. Some say that Alceste, with an unusual display of conjugal affection, laid down her life for her husband, when she had been told by an oracle, that he could never recover from a disease except some one of his friends died in his stead. According to some authors, Hercules brought her back from the infernal regions. She had many authors while she lived with her father. [Vid. Admetus.] Juv. 6, 651.—Apollod. 1, 9.—Pans. 5, 17.—Hygin. 251.—Eurip. in Alcest.

ALCETAS, a king of the Molossi, descended from Pyrrhus, the son of Achilles. Pans. 1, 11.——A general of Alexander's army, brother to Perdiccas.——The eighth king of Macedonia, who reigned twenty-nine years.——An historian, who wrote an account of every thing that had been dedicated in the temple of Delphi. Athen.——A son of Arybas, king of Epirus. Pans. 1, 11.

ALCHIDAS, a Rhodian, who became enamoured of a nam[illegible] Cupid of Praxiteles. Plin. 36, 5.

ALCIBIADES, an Athenian general, the son of Clinias, the nephew of Pericles, and lineally descended from Ajax. He was famous for his enterprising spirit, versatile genius, and natural foibles. He was disciple to Socrates, whose lessons and example checked, for a while, his vicious propensities. He early entered on a military life, and won several prizes at the Olympic games. In the Peloponnesian war, he was appointed to command with Nicias and Lamachus, in an expedition against Syracuse, but while he was thus employed, a charge was made against him of mutilating the statues of Mercury dispersed through the city, and of ridiculing the religious mysteries of his country. He was ordered to take his trial, but aware of the jealousy of his countrymen, he fled to Sparta, and stirred up the Lacedæmonians to declare war against Athens. He afterwards retired to Tissaphernes, the Persian satrap, by whose interest he procured his pardon and recal. He then commanded with success against the Lacedæmonians, and having forced them to sue for peace, he returned in triumph to Athens. He was welcomed by his fellow-citizens as their deliverer, presented with crowns of gold, and chosen commander of the forces by sea and land. But his popularity was of short duration; for the defeat of the Athenian fleet by Lysander, being attributed to his perfidy, he was deprived of his command. Reduced to this situation, he retired into Thrace, and afterwards took refuge with Pharnabazus, who was at last prevailed upon by the Athenian tyrants to murder his guest. Two servants were sent for that purpose, and they set on fire the cottage where he was, and killed him with darts as he attempted to make his escape. He died in the forty-sixth year of his age, 404 B. C. after a life of perpetual difficulties. If the fickleness of his countrymen had known how to retain among them the talents of a man who distinguished himself, and was admired wherever he went, they might have risen to greater splendour, and to the sovereignty of Greece. His character has been cleared from the aspersions of malevolence by the writings of Thucydides, Timæus, and Theopompus, and he is known to us as a hero, who, to the pliant principles of the debauchee, added the intelligence and sagacity of the statesman, the cool intrepidity of the general, and the humanity of the philosopher. Plut. et C. Nep. in Alcib.—Isocrat. & 6 et 7.—Xenoph. Hist. Græc. 1, &c.—Diod. 12.

ALCIDAMAS, of Cos, father to Citesilla, who was changed into a dove. Ovid. Met. 7, 12.——A celebrated wrestler. Stat. Theb. 10, 500.——A Greek rhetorician, who was pupil to Gorgias, B.C 421. He wrote a treatise in praise of death, which is lost. Two of his orations are still extant, and are printed in the Orateres Græci of Reiske. Cic. Inv. 1, 58.—Quintil. 3, 1.

ALCIDAMEA, was mother of Bunus by Mercury.

ALCIDAMIDAS, a general of the Messenians, who retired to Rhegium after the taking of Ithome by the Spartans, B. C. 723. Strab. 6.

ALCIDAS, a Lacedæmonian, sent with twenty-three gallys against Corcyra, in the Peloponnesian war. Thucyd. 3, 16, &c.

ALCIDES, a name for Hercules, from his strength, ἀλκὴ, or from his grandfather Alcæus.——A surname of Minerva in Macedonia. Liv. 42, 51.

ALCIDICE, the mother of Tyro, by Salmoneus. Apollod. 1, 9.

ALCIMACHUS, a renowned painter. Plin. 35, 11.

ALCIMEDE, the wife of Æson, and mother of Jason. Fast. 1, 236.

ALCIMEDON, a plain of Arcadia, with a cave, the residence of Alcimedon, whose daughter Phile was ravished by Hercules, and became mother of Eumagoras. Homer. Il. 16, 197.—Paus. 8, 12.——An excellent carver. Virg. Ecl. 3.——A sailor, &c. Ovid. Met. 4, 10.

ALCIMENES, a tragic poet of Megara.——A comic writer of Athens.——An attendant of Demetrius. Plut. in Dem.——A man killed by his brother Bellerophon. Apollod. 2, 3.—— A Greek general. Xenoph. Græc. 4.

ALCIMUS, an historian of Sicily, who wrote an account of Italy.——An orator. Dueg.——Avitus, a Christian writer. Vid. Avitus.

ALCINOE, a daughter of Sthenelus son of Perseus, and sister of Eurystheus. Apollod. 2, 4.——One of Jupiter's nurses. She was honoured with a statue in Minerva's temple at Tegea. Paus. Arc. 47.

ALCINOR. Vid. Alcenor.

ALCINOUS, a son of Nausithous, king of Phæacia. He married Arete, the daughter of his brother Rhexenor, by whom he had five sons and a daughter named Nausicaa. He kindly entertained Ulysses, who had been shipwrecked on his coast, and heard the recital of his adventures; whence arose the proverb of the stories of Alcinous, to denote improbability. Alcinous was regarded as a just prince; and has been praised for his love of horticulture. The beauty of his garden is very pleasingly described by Homer. Homer. Odyss. 7.——Orph. in Argon.—Virg. G. 2, 87.—Stat. Sylv. 1, 3, 82.—Juv. 5, 151.—Ovid. Am. 1, 10, 56.—Plin. de Mir. 10.—Apollod. 1, 9.——A son of Hippocoon. Apollod. 3, 10.——A man of Elis. Paus.——A philosopher of the second century, who wrote a book De doctrina Platonis, the best edition of which is the Lipsic printed at Oxford, in 1667. It has been translated into English by Stanley.

ALCIONEUS, a man killed by Perseus. Ovid. Met. 5, 4.

ALCIPHRON, a philosopher of Magnesia, in the age of Alexander. There are some epistles in Greek, that bear his name, and contain a very perfect picture of the customs and manners of the Greeks. They are by some supposed to be the production of a writer of the fourth century. The best edition is that of Wagnerus, Lips. 1798, 2 vols. 8vo.

ALCIPPE, a daughter of the god Mars, by Agraulos. She was ravished by Halirrhothius. Apollod. 3, 14.——The wife of Metion, and mother to Eupalamus. Id. 3, 10.——The daughter of Œnomaus, and wife of Œnus, by whom she had Marpessa.——A woman who, it is said, brought forth an elephant. Plin. 7, 3.——A countrywoman Virg. Ecl. 7.——An attendant in the court of Menelaus. Homer, Odyss. 4, 134.

ALCIPPUS, a reputed citizen of Sparta, banished by his enemies. He married Democrite, of whom Plut. in Lyc.

ALCIS, a daughter of Ægyptus. Apollod.——A deity worshipped by the Naharvali, a people of Germany. Tacit. G. 43.——A name given to Minerva by the Macedonians. Liv. 42, 51.

ALCISTHENES, a female painter. Plin. 35, 11.

ALCITHOE, a Theban woman, who ridiculed the orgies of Bacchus. She was changed into a bat, and the spindle and yarn with which she worked, into a vine and ivy. Ovid. Met. 4, 1.

ALCMÆON, was son of the prophet Amphiaraus and Eriphyle. His father going to the Theban war, where, according to an oracle, he was to perish, charged him to revenge his death upon Eriphyle, who had betrayed him. Vid. Eriphyle. As soon as he heard of his father's death, he murdered his mother, for which crime the Furies persecuted him till the river god Achelous purified him and gave him his daughter Alphesibœa in marriage. Alcmæon gave her the fatal collar which his mother had received to betray her father, and afterwards divorced her, and married Callirrhoe, the daughter of Achelous, to whom he promised the necklace he had given to Alphesibœa. When he attempted to recover it, Alphesibœa's brothers murdered him on account of the treatment he had shown their sister, and left his body a prey to dogs and wild beasts. Alcmæon's children by Callirrhoe revenged their father's death by killing his murderers. Vid. Alphesibœa, Amphoterus. Paus. 5, 17, 6, 18, 8, 24.—Plut. de Exil.—Apollod. 3, 7.—Hygin. 73 et 120.—Stat. Theb. 2 et 4.—Ovid. Fast. 2, 44. Met. 9, 10.——A son of Ægyptus, the husband of Hippodamia. Apollod.——A philosopher of Crotona, and a disciple of Pythagoras. He wrote on physic, and he was the first who dissected animals to examine into the structure of the human frame. Cic. de Nat. D. 3 27.——A son of the poet Euchelius.——A son of Sylleus, driven from Messenia, with the rest of Nestor's family, by the Heraclidæ. He came to Athens, and from him the Alcmæonidæ were descended. Paus. 1, 18.

ALCMÆONIDÆ, a noble family of Athens, descended from Alcmæon. They undertook for three hundred talents, to rebuild the temple of Delphi, which had been burnt, and they finished the work in a more splendid manner than was required, in consequence of which they gained popularity, and by their influence the Pythia prevailed upon the Lacedæmonians to deliver their country from the tyranny of the Pisistratidæ. Herod. 5 et 6.—Thucyd. 6, 59.—Plut. in Solon.

ALCMAN, a Greek lyric poet, flourished about B. C. 670. The place of his birth cannot be positively ascertained, for some authors assert that he was born at Sardis in Lydia, and others contend that this honour belongs to Lacedæmon. He is said to have written six books of verses in the Doric dialect, besides a play entitled Colymbosas. He was remarkable for his voracious appetite, and died of the morbus pediculosus. Some fragments of his compositions are preserved in the works of Athenæus, and other ancient writers. Paus. 1, 41. 3, 15.—Strab. Hist. Anom. 5, 31.

ALCMENA, was daughter of Electryon king of Argos, by Anaxo, whom Plutarch calls Lysidice, and Diodorus Eurymede. Her father promised his crown and his daughter to Amphitryon, if he would revenge the death of his sons, who had been all killed, except Licymnius, by the Teleboans, a people of Ætolia. While Amphitryon was gone against the Æolians, Jupiter, who was enamoured of Alcmena, resolved to introduce himself into her bed. The event effectually to insure success in his amour, he assumed the form of Amphitryon, declared that he had obtained a victory over Alcmena's enemies, and even presented her with a cup, which he said he had preserved from the spoils for her sake. Alcmena yielded to her lover what she had promised to her future husband; and Jupiter, to delay the return of Amphitryon, ordered his messenger, Mercury, to stop the rising of Phœbus, or the sun, so that the night he passed with Alcmena was prolonged to three long nights. Amphitryon returned the next day, and after complaining of the coldness with which he was received, Alcmena acquainted him with the reception of a false lover the preceding night, and even showed him the cup which she had received. Amphitryon was perplexed at the relation, and more so upon missing the cup from among his spoils. He went to the prophet Tiresias, who told him of Jupiter's intrigue; and he returned to his wife, proud of the dignity of his rival. Alcmena became pregnant by Jupiter, and afterwards by her husband, and when she was going to bring forth, Jupiter boasted in heaven, that a child was to be born that day, to whom he would give absolute power over his neighbours, and over all the children of his own blood. Juno, who was jealous of Jupiter's amours with Alcmena, made him swear by the Styx, and immediately prolonged the travails of Alcmena, and hastened the bringing forth of the wife of Sthenelus king of Argos, who, after a pregnancy of seven months, had a son called Eurystheus. Orid. Her. 9, 5, &c. says, that Juno was assisted by Lucina to put off the bringing forth of Alcmena, and that Lucina, in the form of an old woman, sat before the door of Amphitryon with her legs and arms crossed. This posture was the cause of infinite torment to Alcmena, till her servant Galanthis, supposing the old woman to be a witch, and to be the cause of the pains of her mistress, told her that she had brought forth. Lucina retired from her posture, and immediately Alcmena brought forth twins, Hercules conceived by Jupiter, and Iphicles by Amphitryon. Eurystheus was already born, and therefore Hercules was subjected to his power. After Amphitryon's death, Alcmena married Rhadamanthus, and retired to Oculea in Bœotia. This marriage, according to some authors, was celebrated in the island of Æacea. The people of Megara said that she died in her way from Argos to Thebes, and that she was buried in the temple of Jupiter Olympius. Paus. 1, 41. 5, 18. 9, 16. —Plut. in Thes. et Rom.—Homer. Odyss 11, 1. 14. —Pandor. Pyth. 9.—Lucian. D. d. Dear.—Dod. 4. —Hygin. 29.—Apollod. 2, 4 et 7. 3, 1.—Plaut. in Amphit.—Hermi. 2, 43 et 45.—[Virg. Amphitryon, Hercules, Eurystheus.]

ALCON, a famous archer, who one day saw his son attacked by a serpent, and aimed at him so dexterously that he killed the beast without hurting his son.——A silversmith. Ovid. Met. 13, 5.——A son of Hippocoon. Paus. 3, 14.——A surgeon under Claudius, who gained much money by his profession, in curing hernias and fractures.——A son of Mars.——A son of Amycus. These two last were at the chase of the Calydonian boar. Hygin. 173.——A native of Sagantum, who attempted in vain to procure favourable conditions of peace for his countrymen from Annibal. Liv. 21, 12.

ALCYÓNE, or HALCYÓNE, daughter of Æolus, married Ceyx, who was drowned as he was going to Claros to consult the oracle. The god acquainted Alcyone, in a dream, of her husband's fate, and when she found, on the morrow, his body washed on the sea shore, she threw herself into the sea, and was, with her husband, changed into birds of the same name, who keep the waters calm and serene while they build, and sit on their nests on the surface of the sea, for the space of seven, eleven, or fourteen days. Virg. G. 1, 399.—Apollod. 1, 7.—Ov. d. Met. 11, 10.—Hygin. 65.——One of the Pleiades, daughter of Atlas and Pleione. She had Arethusa by Neptune, and Eleuthera by Apollo. She, with her sisters, was changed into a constellation Vid. Pleiades. Paus. 2, 30. 3, 18.—Apollod. 3, 10.—Hygin. 157. ——The daughter of Evenus, carried away by Apollo after her marriage. Her husband pursued the ravisher with bows and arrows, but was not able to recover her. Upon this, her parents called her Alcyone, and compared her fate to that of the wife of Ceyx. Homer. Il. 9, 55.——The wife of Meleager. Hygin. 173.——A town of Thessaly, where Philip, Alexander's father, lost one of his eyes.

ALCYONEUS, a youth of exemplary virtue, son to Antigonus. Plut. in Pyrrh.—Diog. 4.——A giant, brother to Porphyrion. He was killed by Hercules. His daughters, mourning his death, threw themselves into the sea, and were changed into Alcyons, by Amphitrite. Claudian. de Rap. Pros.—Apollod. 1, 6.

ALCYONIA PALUS, a pool in Corinth, whose depth the emperor Nero attempted in vain to find. Its banks were grassy, and covered with rushes. There nocturnal orgies were annually celebrated in honour of Bacchus. Paus. 2, 37.

ALCYONIUM MARE, a name given to that portion of the Sinus Corinthiacus, or Gulf of Lepanto, which lay between the promontory of Antirrhium and the coast of Megara. Strab. 8.

ALDESCUS, a river of European Sarmatia, rising from the Riphæan mountains, and falling into the northern sea. Dionys. Per.

ALDUABIS. Vid. Dubis.

ALEA, a surname of Minerva, from her temple, built by Alæus, son of Aphidas, at Tegæa in Arcadia. The statue of the goddess made of ivory was carried by Augustus to Rome. Paus. 8, 4 et 46.——A town of Arcadia, built by Alæus. It had three famous temples, that of Diana Ephesia, of Minerva Alea, and of Bacchus. At the annual festival held here in honour of the latter deity, women were beaten with scourges, in obedience to a command of the Delphian oracle. Paus. 8, 23.

ALEBAS, a tyrant of Larissa, killed by his own guards for his cruelties. Just. in Ib. 323.

ALEBION and DERCYNUS, sons of Neptune, were killed by Hercules for stealing his oxen in Africa. Apollod. 2, 5.

ALECTO, one of the three Furies, (from a priv. and λεγω, to rest,) is represented with her head covered with serpents, and breathing vengeance, war, and pestilence. [Vid. Eumenides.] Virg. Æn. 7, 324. 10, 41.

ALECTOR, succeeded his father Anaxagoras in the kingdom of Argos, and was father to Iphis and Capaneus. Paus. 2, 18.—Apollod. 3, 6.

ALECTRYON, a youth whom Mars, during his amours with Venus, stationed at the door to watch against the approach of the sun. He fell asleep, and Apollo came and discovered the lovers, who were exposed by Vulcan in each other's arms, before all the gods. Mars was so incensed that he changed Alectryon into a cock, who, still mindful of his neglect, early announces the approach of the sun. Lucian in Alect.

ALECTUS, a tyrant of Britain, in Diocletian's reign, &c. He died 290, A. D.

ALELIA CAMPUS, a plain in Cilicia Campestris, to the east of the river Sarus, between Adana and the sea. It is celebrated for being the spot on which Bellerophon fell from the horse Pegasus, and over which he wandered till his death. The name is derived from ἀλαομαι, to wander. Homer. Il. 6, 201.—Dionys. Perieg. 872.—Ovid. in Ib. 259.

ALEMANNI, a people of Germany, probably descended from the Suevi, who inhabited the country between the Neckar and the Upper Rhine. Their name, Alemanni, or all-men, signifies properly a multitude of men, and indicated the variety of tribes of which they were composed. They are first mentioned in the reign of Caracalla, who was honoured with the title of Alemannicus from a victory obtained over them. In the succeeding reigns, they made frequent inroads on Gaul and Italy, and experienced a great variety of fortune, till they were finally dispersed by the Franks. The Alemanni were characterised by the most obstinate bravery, and by a love of liberty which nothing could extinguish.

ALEMON, a respected native of Argolis, father of Myscellus. He built Crotona in Magna Græcia. Myscellus is often called Alemonides. Ovid. Met. 15, 19 et 20.

ALEMUSII, inhabitants of Attica, in whose country there was a temple of Ceres and of Proserpine. Paus. in Attic.

ALENE, a place in the island of Cos.

ALEO, a son of Aireus. Ov. de Nat. D. 3, 21.

ALES. Vid Hales.

ALESA, ALESA, or HALESA, a town of Sicily, founded by Archonides, B. C. 404. It was built on an eminence about a mile inland, and was bathed by the river Alæsus. The Romans made it an independent city. D od. Sic. 14, 16.

ALESIA or ALEXIA, now Alise, a famous city of the Mandubii in Gaul, built by Hercules on his return from Iberia. It stood on the summit of a lofty mountain, and was watered by two rivers. Alesia was besieged and taken by Cæsar, B. C. 52, but it became a place of some consequence under the Roman emperors. It was entirely destroyed in the ninth century. Flor. 3, 10.—Cæs. Bell. Gall. 7, 68.—Fell. 2, 47.

ALESIUM, a town and mountain of Peloponnesus. Paus. 8, 10.

ALETES, a son of Ægisthus, murdered by Orestes. Hygin. 122.

ALETHUS, the first of the Heraclidæ, who were king of Corinth. He was son of Hippotas. Paus. 2, 4.——A companion of Æneas, described as a prudent and venerable old man. Virg. Æn. 1, 125. 9, 246.

ALETHIA, one of Apollo's nurses.

ALETIDAS, (from ἀλαομαι, to wander,) certain sacrifices at Athens, in remembrance of Erigone, who wandered with a dog after her father Icarius.

ALETRIUM, a town of Latium, whose inhabitants are called Aletrinates. Liv. 9, 42.

ALETUM, a tomb near the harbour of Carthage in Spain. Polyb. 10.

ALEUADÆ, a royal family of Larissa in Thessaly, descended from Æneas king of that country. They betrayed their country to Xerxes. The name is often applied to the Thessalians without distinction. Diod. 16.—Herod. 7, 6 et 172.—Paus. 3, 8 7, 10.—Ælian. Anim. 8, 11.

ALEUS, a son of Aphidas, king of Arcadia, famous for his skill in building temples. Paus. 8, 4 et 48.

ALEX, a river in the country of the Brutii. Dionys. Perieg.

ALEXAENETUS, an Ætolian, who killed Nabis, tyrant of Lacedæmon, and was soon after murdered by the people. Liv. 35, 34.

ALEXANDER I. son of Amyntas, was the tenth king of Macedonia. He killed the Persian ambassadors for their immodest behaviour to the women of his father's court, and was the first who raised the reputation of the Macedonians. He reigned forty-three years, and died 451 B. C. Justin. 7, 3. —Herod. 5, 7, 8 et 9.

ALEXANDER II. son of Amyntas second king of Macedonia, was treacherously murdered, B. C. 370, by his younger brother Ptolemy, who held the kingdom for four years, and made way for Perdiccas and Philip. Justin 7, 5, says Eurydice, the wife of Amyntas, was the cause of his murder.

ALEXANDER III. surnamed the Great, was son of Philip and Olympias. He was born at Pella, B. C. 356, that night on which the temple of Diana at Ephesus was burnt by Erostratus. This event, according to the magicians, was an early prognostic of his future greatness, as well as the taming of Bucephalus, a horse whom none of the king's courtiers could manage, upon which Philip said with tears in his eyes, that his son must seek another kingdom, for that of Macedonia would not be sufficiently large for the display of his greatness. Olympias during her pregnancy declared that she was with child by a dragon; and the day that Alexander was born, two eagles perched for some time on the house of Philip, as if foretelling that his son would become master of Europe and Asia. He was pupil to Aristotle during five years, and he received his learned preceptor's instructions with becoming deference and pleasure, and ever respected his abilities, by his gratitude and liberality. When Philip went to war, Alexander, in his fifteenth year, was left governor of Macedonia, where he quelled a dan-

2, 9.—Val. Max. 9, 12.—Plut. et C. Nep. in Pelop. —Pans. 6, 5.—Dod. 15 et 16.—Ovid. in Ib. 311. ——Severus, a Roman emperor. Vid. Severus.

ALEXANDRA, the name of some queens of Judæa, mentioned by Josephus. A nurse of Nero Suet. in Ner. 50.

ALEXANDRI ARÆ, the boundaries, according to some, of Alexander's victories, near the Tanais. Plin. 6, 16.

ALEXANDRIA, the name of several cities which were founded by Alexander, during his conquests in Asia; the most famous are:—The capital of Lower Egypt, situated on the shores of the Mediterranean, between the lake Marcotis and the harbour formed by the isle of Pharos, about twelve miles west of the Canopic branch of the Nile. It was built B. C. 332, by Alexander, who intended it to be at once the seat of empire, and the centre of the commerce of the world. The latter intention of the founder completely succeeded; and during eighteen centuries, from the time of the Ptolemies till the discovery of the navigation by the Cape of Good Hope, Alexandria was the great mart for all the merchandise between Europe and the East Indies, which was transported from thence to Arsinoe, or Suez, at the top of the Red Sea, and so to India. Alexandria was famous, among other curiosities, for the large library which the pride or learning of the Ptolemies had collected there, at a vast expense, from all parts of the earth. This valuable repository, containing from seven to eight hundred thousand volumes, is said, but without any very positive proof, to have been destroyed by the Saracens, at the command of the caliph Omar, A. D. 642, and to have furnished fuel during six months to the 4000 baths which contributed to the health and convenience of the populous capital of Egypt. Alexandria was likewise distinguished for its schools, not only of theology and philosophy, but of physic, where once to have studied was a sufficient recommendation to distant countries. The astronomical school, founded by Philadelphus, maintained its superior reputation for ten centuries, till the time of the Saracens. Alexandria was peopled by 300,000 free citizens, and at least equal that number of slaves. The modern Alexandria, called Scanderia by the Turks, contains only 12,000 inhabitants. Curt. Strab. Plin.——Another in Arachosia, on the river Arachotus, now Scanderee of Arrokhage, or Vel-Ahmed.——Another in Aria, built on the river Arius, four miles in circuit. Now Corre.——Another near the foot of the Paropamisus, and long the centre of commerce between Persia and India. It is thought by D'Anville to be the present Kandahar. Another in Syria, called Alexandria ad Issum, on the Issic bay, now Alexandretta, or Iscanderoon.——Another in Sogdiana, built on the river Oxus, and surnamed by Ptolemy Oxiana. Now Kesh.——Alexandria Troas in Mysia, about eighteen miles south of the site of Troy. It was built by Antigonus, and from him first called Antigonia; but Lysimachus, to whom it afterwards devolved, changed its name in honour of Alexander. In the war with Antiochus, it was distinguished for its fidelity to the Romans, who conferred on it the same privileges as the cities of Italy enjoyed. During the reign of Augustus, it received a Roman colony, and became an illustrious city. It is now Eski-Stamboul.——Alexandria Ultima, in Sogdiana, built on the river Jaxartes or Sihon, near the modern Kogkend.

ALEXANDRIDES, a Lacedæmonian who married his sister's daughter, by whom he had Dorycus, Leonidas, and Cleombrotus.——A native of Delphi, of which he wrote a history.——A native of Rhodes, who lived for some time at Athens, where he distinguished himself by some comedies which obtained the applause of his contemporaries, some fragments of which are preserved in Athenæus, 6, 8, 9, &c

ALEXANDRINA AQUA, baths in Rome, built by the emperor Alexander Severus.

ALEXANDROPOLIS, a city of Parthia, built by Alexander the Great. Plin. 6, 25.

ALEXANOR, a son of Machaon, who built a temple to his grandfather Æsculapius, and received divine honours after death. Paus. 2, 11.

ALEXARCHUS, a Greek historian.

ALEXAS, of Laodicea, was recommended to M. Antony by Timagenes. He was the cause that Antony repudiated Octavia to marry Cleopatra. Augustus punished him severely after the defeat of Antony. Plut. in Anton.

ALEXIA, or Alesia. Vid. Alesia.

ALEXICACUS, (from ἀλέξω, to drive away, and κακὸν evil,) a surname given to Apollo by the Athenians, on account of his having removed the dreadful pestilence under which they groaned during the five years of the Peloponnesian war. Paus. 8, 42.——The same surname was applied to Hercules, whose aid was said to be extended to those who besought it under diseases, and who was venerated as the common protector of mankind. Varr. 6, 5.

ALEXINUS, a disciple of Eubulides the Milesian, famous for the acuteness of his genius and judgment, and for his fondness for contention and argumentation. He died of a wound he had received from a sharp-pointed reed, as he swam across the river Alpheus. Dog. in Euclid.

ALEXION a physician, intimate with Cicero. Cic. ad Att. 13, 25.

ALEXIPPUS, a physician of Alexander. Plut. in Alex.

ALEXIS, a, a son of Hercules by Hebe, born at the same birth with Anicetus. Apollod. 2, 7. ——A place of Bœotia, where Alexiræ was born, bears also this name. Paus. 9, 25.

ALEXIRHOE, a daughter of the river Granicus. Ovid. Met. 11, 763.

ALEXIS, a man of Samos, who endeavoured to ascertain, by his writings, the borders of his country.——A comic poet of Thurium in Italy, and either uncle or patron to Menander, lived about B. C. 368. He composed two hundred and forty-five plays, of which some few fragments remain. ——A servant of Asinius Pollio.——An ungrateful youth of whom a shepherd is deeply enamoured, in Virgil's Ecl. 2.——A statuary, disciple to Polycletus, 87 Olymp. Plin. 34, 8.——A school-fellow of Atticus. Cic. ad Attic. 7, 2.

ALEXUS, a native of Myndos, who wrote fables. Dog.

ALFATERNA, a town of Campania, beyond mount Vesuvius.

P. ALFENUS VARUS, a native of Cremona, who, by the force of his genius and his application, raised himself from his original profession of a cobbler, to offices of trust at Rome, and at last became consul. He flourished about A. U. C. 754. Horat. Sat. 1, 3, 130.

ALGIDUM, a town of Latium near Tusculum, about twelve miles from Rome. There is a mountain of the same name in the neighbourhood. Horat. Od. 1, 21.

ALIACMON. Vid. Haliacmon.

ALIARTUS. Vid. Haliartus.

ALICUS, a town of Laconia.——A tribe of Athens. Strab.

ALIENUS CÆCINA, a quæstor in Bœotia, appointed, for his services, commander of a legion in Germany, by Galba. The emperor disgraced him for his bad conduct, for which he raised commotions in the empire. Tacit. Hist. 1, 52.

ALIFÆ, Alifa, or Alipha, a town of Samnium, near the river Vulturnus, famous for its manufacture of pottery. It is now Alife. Liv. 8, 25.—Hor. Sat. 1, 5, 39.

ALILÆI, a people of Arabia Felix.

ALIMENTUS C. an historian in the second Punic war, who wrote in Greek an account of Annibal, besides a treatise on military affairs. Liv. 21 et 30.

ALINDÆ, a town of Caria. Artem.

ALIPHERA, a town of Arcadia, situated on a lofty hill, about eight miles south of Heræa. The strength of its position made it a valuable acquisition to the Eleans, who became possessed of it when the inhabitants were transferred to Megalopolis, on the foundation of that city. It was, however, taken from them during the social war by Philip, king of Macedon. The site of Aliphera probably corresponds with that of Nevovitza. Polyb. 4, 77.—Paus. 8, 26.—Liv. 28, 8. 32, 5.

ALIRROTHIUS, a son of Neptune. Hearing that his father had been defeated by Minerva, in his dispute about giving a name to Athens, he went to the citadel, and endeavoured to cut down the olive, which had sprung from the ground, and given the victory to Minerva; but in the attempt he missed his aim, and cut his own legs so severely that he instantly expired. Servius in Virg. G. 1. 18.

T. ALLEDIUS SEVERUS, a Roman knight, who married his brother's daughter to please Agrippina.——A noted glutton in Domitian's reign Juv. 5, 118.

ALLIA, a river of Italy, descending from the hills of Crustumimum, and flowing into the Tiber a little above Rome. On its banks the Romans were defeated by the Gauls under Brennus, July 17th, B. C. 387. Plut. in Camill.—Liv. 5, 37.—Flor. 1, 13.—Virg. Æn. 7, 717.—Ovid. Art. Am. 1, 413.

ALLIENUS, a prætor of Sicily, under Cæsar Hirt. Afric. 2.

ALLOBROGES, a warlike nation of Gallia, who dwelt near the Rhodanus, in that part of the country now called Savoy, Dauphiné, and Piedmont. The Romans destroyed their city, because they had assisted Hannibal. Their ambassadors were allured by great promises to join in Catiline's conspiracy against his country; but they scorned the offers, and discovered the plot. Strab. 4.—Tacit. Hist. 1, 66.—Sallust. in Jug. Bell.—Cic. in Cat. 3.

ALLOBROGICUS, a surname given to Fabius Maximus, for having conquered the Allobroges. Juv. 8, 13.—Val. Max. 2, 5. 6 2.

ALLOBRYGES, a people of Gaul, supposed to be the same as the Allobroges. Polyb. 3, 56.

ALLOTRIGES, a nation in the southern parts of Spain. Strab. 2.

ALLUTIUS, a prince of the Celtiberi, to whom Scipio restored the beautiful princess he had taken in battle.

ALMO, a small river near Rome, falling into the Tiber, in which the statue of Cybele was annually washed on the 25th of March. Now Aqua Rando. Ovid. Fast. 4, 3 7.—Lucan. 1. 600.—Mart. 3, 47.

ALMON, the eldest of the sons of Tyrrhius, 9 was the first Rutulian killed by the Trojans, and from the skirmish which happened before and after his death, arose the enmities which ended in the fall of Turnus. Virg. Æn. 7, 532.

ALOA, festivals at Athens in honour of Bacchus and Ceres by whose beneficence the husbandmen received the recompense of their labours. The oblations were the fruits of the earth. Ceres has been called, from this, Aloas and Aloïs.

ALOEUS, a giant, son of Titan and Terra. He married Iphimedia, by whom Neptune had two sons, Othus and Ephialtus. Aloeus educated them as his own, and from that circumstance they have been called Aloïdes. They made war against the gods, and were killed by Apollo and Diana. They grew up nine inches every month, and were only nine years old when they undertook their war. They built the town of Ascra, at the foot of mount Helicon. Paus. 9, 29.—Virg. Æn. 6, 582.—Homer. Il. 5, 385. Odyss. 11, 305.

ALOIDES, and ALOIDÆ, the sons of Aloeus. Vid. Aloeus.

ALOPE, daughter of Cercyon king of Eleusis, had a child by Neptune, whom she exposed in the woods, covered with a piece of her gown. The child was preserved, and carried to Alope's father, who, upon knowing the gown, ordered his daughter to be put to death. Neptune, who could not save his mistress, changed her into a fountain. The child, called Hippothoon, was preserved by some shepherds, and placed by Theseus upon his grandfather's throne. Paus. 1, [illegible] 39.—Hygin. f. 7.——One of the Harpies. Hygin. f. 14.——A town of Thessaly. Plin. 4, 7.—Homer. Il. 2, 688.——Another of Locris in Greece. Liv. 42, 56.

ALOPECE, an island in the Palus Mœotis. Strab.——Another in the Cimmerian Bosphorus. Plin. 4, 12.——Another in the Ægean sea, opposite Smyrna. Id. 5, 31.

ALOPECES, a small village of Attica, where was the tomb of Anchimolus, whom the Spartans had sent to deliver Athens from the tyranny of the Pisistratidæ. Socrates and Aristides were born there. Æschin. contra Timarch.—Herod. 5, 63.

ALOPECONNESUS, a town of the Thracian Chersonesus. It was taken by Philip, king of Macedon, towards the commencement of his wars with the Romans. It is now Alepo. Liv. 31, 16.

ALOPIUS, a son of Hercules and Antiope. Apollod.

ALOS, or Halos, a town of Phthiotis in Thessaly, washed by the river Amphrysus. It contained a temple sacred to Jupiter Laphystius. Strab. 9. —Plin. 4, 7.—Herod. 7, 196.

ALOTIA, festivals in Arcadia, in commemoration of a victory gained over Lacedæmon by the Arcadians.

ALPENUS, the capital of Locris to the north of Thermopylæ. Herod. 7, 176, &c.

ALPES, a celebrated chain of mountains, dividing Italia from Gallia, Helvetia, and Germania. It extends, in the form of a crescent, from Vada Sabatia, or Savona, at the bottom of the Gulf of Genoa, to the Sinus Flanaticus, or Gulf of Carnero, in the Adriatic sea. The name seems to be derived either from the Celtic word alp, denoting a mountain; or from the Latin albus, signifying white, the summits of the mountains being always covered with snow. The length of the chain is computed at 600 British miles. It has been divided by both ancient and modern geographers into several portions to each of which a distinct appellation has been given. They are, 1. Alpes Maritimæ, the Maritime Alps, so call d from their vicinity to the Mediterranean, stretching from the environs of Nicæa, now Nice, to mount Vesulus, now Vise. 2. Alpes Cottiæ, the Cottian Alps, now mount Genevre, extending from mount Viso to mount Cenis. They derived their name from Cottius, a Gallic prince, who was protected by Augustus. It is generally supposed that Hannibal passed over the Cottian Alps in his way to Italy. The manner in which he levelled some of the most inaccessible heights rests entirely on the authority of Livy and Juvenal. 3. Alpes Graiæ, the Grecian Alps, now the Little St Bernard, lying between mount Cenis and the Great St Bernard. The name is taken from Hercules, who, with his Grecian followers, passed this way from Spain into Italy. 4. Alpes Penninæ, the Pennine Alps, deriving their name from the Celtic term pen, a summit, and reaching from the Great St Bernard to the sources of the Rhone and Rhine. There are two passes over the Pennine Alps; by one of which Constantius marched his army against the Alemanni, and by the other, which is over mount Simplon, Buonaparte invaded Italy. 5. Alpes Rhæticæ, the Rhætian Alps, so named from their situation in Rhætia, extending from the St Gothard to mount Brenner in the Tyrol. 6. Alpes Noricæ, the Noric Alps, taking their name from Noricum, and proceeding from mount Brenner to the head of the river Plavis or Piave. 7. Alpes Juliæ, the Julian Alps, so called from the road made across them by Julius Cæsar, terminating in mount Alvius in the confines of Illyricum. The Alps were inhabited by numerous and savage clans, who were unsubdued till the age of Augustus, who, to eternise the victory he had obtained over them, erected a pillar in their territory. Strab. 4 et 5.—Liv. 21, 35 et 38.—Juv. 10, 151.—Horat. Sat. 2, 5, 41.—Lucan. 1, 183.—Tacit. Hist. 3, 83.

ALPHEIA, a surname of Diana in Elis. It was given her when the river Alpheus endeavoured to ravish her without success. Paus. 6, 22.——A surname of the nymph Arethusa, because loved by the Alpheus. Ovid. Met. 5, 487.

ALPHENOR, one of Niobe's sons. Ovid. Met. 6, 6.

ALPHENUS. Vid. Alfenus.

ALPHESIBŒA, daughter of the river Phlegeus, married Alcmæon, son of Amphiaraus, who had fled to her father's court after the murder of his mother. [Vid. Alcmæon.] She received as a bridal present, the famous necklace which Polynices had given to Eriphyle to induce her to betray her husband Amphiaraus. Alcmæon, being persecuted by the manes of his mother, left his wife by order of the oracle, and retired near the Achelous, whose daughter Callirhoe he married. Callirhoe had two sons by him, and begged of him as a present the necklace, which was then in the hands of Alphesibœa. He endeavoured to obtain it, and was killed by Temenus and Axius, Alphesibœa's brothers, who thus revenged their sister, who had been so recently abandoned. Hygin. 244.—Propert. 1, 15, 15.—Paus. 8, 24.

ALPHESIBŒUS, a shepherd, often mentioned in Virgil's Eclogues.

ALPHEUS, a famous river of Peloponnesus, which rises in Arcadia, and, after passing through Elis, falls into the Ionian sea below Olympia. The god of this river fell in love with the nymph Arethusa, and pursued her till she was changed into a fountain by Diana. The fountain Arethusa is in Ortygia, a small island near Syracuse; and the ancients affirm, that the river Alpheus passes under the sea from Peloponnesus, and without mingling itself with the salt waters, rises again in Ortygia, and joins the stream of Arethusa. If any things be thrown into the Alpheus in Elis, according to their traditions, it will re-appear, after some time, swimming on the waters of Arethusa near Sicily. Hercules made use of the Alpheus to clean the stables of Augias. The modern name of Alpheus is Rouphia. Virg. Æn. 3, 694.—Ovid. Met. 5, 10.—Lucan. 3, 176.—Stat. Theb. 1 et 4.—Mela 2, 7.—Paus. 5, 7. 6, 21.—Martellin. 25.—Plin. 2, 103.

ALPHIUS, or ALFIUS, a celebrated usurer, ridiculed in Horat. Epod. 2

ALPHIUS AVITUS, a Latin poet, who flourished in the third century. He wrote the lives of eminent men, and the history of the Carthaginian war, in verse. Only a few lines of his poetry remain, which may be found in the Corpus Poetarum.

ALPINUS, belonging to the Alps. Virg. Æn. 4, 442.

ALPINUS, (CORNELIUS), a contemptible poet, whom Horace ridicules for the awkward manner in which he introduces the death of Memnon in a tragedy, and the pitiful style with which he describes the Rhine, in an epic poem, which he had attempted on the wars in Germany. Horat Sat. 1, 10, 36.——Julius, one of the chiefs of the Helvetii. Tacit. Hist. 1, 68.

ALPIS, a small river falling into the Danube. Herod. 4, 49.

ALSIUM, a maritime town of Etruria, upwards of twenty miles west of Rome, now the village of Palo. Sil. Ital. 8, 476.

ALSUS, a river of Achaia in Peloponnesus, flowing from mount Sipylus. Paus. 7, 27.——A shepherd during the Rutulian wars. Virg. Æn. 12, 504.

ALTHÆA, daughter of Thestius and Eurythemis, married Œneus king of Calydon, by whom she had many children, among whom was Meleager. When Althæa brought forth Meleager, the Parcæ placed a log of wood in the fire, and said that as long as it was preserved, so long would the life of the child just born be prolonged. The mother saved the wood from the flames, and kept it very carefully; but when Meleager killed his two uncles, Althæa's brothers, Althæa, to revenge their death, threw the log into the fire, and as soon as it was burnt, Meleager expired. She was afterwards so sorry for the death which she had caused, that she killed herself, unable to survive her son. [Vid. Meleager.] Ovid. Met. 8, 4.—Homer. Il. 9.—Paus. 8, 45. 10, 31.—Apollod. 1, 8.

ALTHÆMÉNES, a son of Cretheus king of Crete. Hearing that either he or his brothers were to be their father's murderer, he fled to Rhodes, where he made a settlement, to avoid becoming a parricide. After the death of all his other sons, Cretheus went after his son Althæmenes; when he landed in Rhodes, the inhabitants attacked him, supposing him to be an enemy, and he was killed by the hand of his own son. When Althæmenes knew that he had killed his father, he entreated the gods to remove him, and the earth immediately opened and swallowed him up. Apollod. 3, 2.

ALTINUM, now Altino, a flourishing city of Venetia, celebrated for its fine wool. Plin. 3, 18.—Martial. 14, 25.

ALTIS, a sacred grove round Jupiter's temple at Olympia, where the statues of the victors at the Olympic games were generally placed. Paus. 5, 29, &c.

ALTUS, a city of Peloponnesus. Xenoph. Hist. Grav.

ALUNTIUM, a town of Sicily. Plin. 3, 8.—Cic. in Verr. 2.

ALUS, ALUUS, and HALUS, a village of Arcadia, called also the temple of Æsculapius. Paus. 8, 25.

ALUTA, now Alt, a river of Dacia, which runs into the Danube.

ALYATTES, a king of Lydia, succeeded his father Sardyattes, B. C. 619. He prosecuted, for some years, the war begun by his father with the Milesians; but was through a stratagem of their king induced to make peace with them. He also engaged in a war with Cyaxares, king of the Medes, which continued five years, and was attended with various success. He then drove the Cimmerians out of Asia, possessed himself of Smyrna, and invaded Clazomenæ. Alyattes dying after a reign of fifty-seven years, was buried near Sardis, where his sepulchre still remains. An eclipse of the sun terminated a battle between this monarch and Cyaxares. Herod. 1, 16, 17, 103.

ALYBA, a country near Mysia. Homer. Il. 2.

ALYCÆA, a town of Arcadia. Paus. 8, 27.

ALYCÆUS, son of Selron, was killed by Theseus. A place in Megara received its name from him. Plut. in Thes.

ALYMON, the husband of Circe.

ALYSEUS, a fountain of Arcadia, whose waters were said to cure hydrophobia. Paus. 8, 19.

ALYXOTHOE, or ALEXIROE, daughter of Dymus, was mother of Æsacus by Priam. Ovid. Met. 11, 763.

ALYZIA, a town of Acarnania, on the western mouth of the Achelous, opposite the Echinades. Cic. ad Fam. 16, 2.

AMADOCUS, a king of Thrace, defeated by his antagonist Seuthes. Aristot. 5. Pol. 10.

AMAFINIUS, a Roman, who first taught among his countrymen the tenets of Epicurus, which he saw embraced with avidity. Cic. Tusc. 4, 3.

AMAGE, a queen of Sarmatia, remarkable for her justice and fortitude. Polyæn. 8, 56.

AMALTHÆA, daughter of Melissus king of Crete, fed Jupiter with goat's milk. Hence some authors have called her a goat, and have maintained that Jupiter, to reward her kindnesses, placed her in heaven as a constellation, and gave one of her horns to the nymphs who had taken care of his infant years. This horn was called the horn of plenty, and had the power to give the nymphs whatever they desired. Diod. 3, 4, et 5.—Ovid Fast. 5, 113.—Strab. 10.—Hygin. 139.—Paus. 7, 26.—A Sibyl of Cumæ, called also Hierophile and Demophile. She is supposed to be the same who brought nine books of prophecies to Tarquin king of Rome, &c. Varro.—Tibull. 2, 5, 67. [Vid. Sibyllæ.]

AMALTHEUM, a public place which Atticus had opened in his country-house called Amalthea, in Epirus, and provided with every thing which could furnish entertainment and convey instruction. Cic. ad Attic. 1, 12.

AMANA, or AMANUS, now Almadag, a branch of mount Taurus, which separates Syria from Cilicia. Cic. ad Fam. 2, 10.—Ad Att. 5, 10.

CN. BAL. AMANDUS, a rebel general under Diocletian, who assumed imperial honours, and was at last conquered by Diocletian's colleague.

AMANICÆ PYLÆ, a defile or pass through Amana, by which Darius penetrated into Cilicia, at a greater distance from the sea than the Pylæ Syriæ, through which Alexander the Great entered Syria. Curt. 3, 4.—Arrian. 2.—Plut. in Alex.

AMANTES, or AMANTINI, a people of Illyricum, descended from the Abantes of Phocis. Callimach.

AMANTIA, a town on the coast of Illyricum. Cic. Phil. 11, 11.—Cæs. Civ. 3, 40.

AMANUS, one of the deities worshipped in Egypt, supposed to be the sun. Strab. 11.

AMARACUS, an officer of Cinyras, changed into marjoram. Servius in Æn. 1, 697.

AMARDI, a Tartar horde from Bactriana, who dwelt on the south coast of the Caspian Sea, in the territory called after them Mazanderan. Mela. 1, 2.

AMARTUS, a city of Greece. Homer. Hymn. in Apoll.

AMARYLLIS, the name of a country-woman in Virgil's eclogues. Some commentators have supposed, that the poet spoke of Rome under this fictitious appellation.

AMARYNCEUS, a king of the Epeans, buried at Buprasium. Strab. 8.—Paus. 8, 1.

AMARYNTHUS, a village of Eubœa, whence Diana is called Amarysia, and her festivals in that town Amarynthia. Eubœa is sometimes called Amarynthus. Paus. 1, 31.

AMAS, a mountain of Laconia. Paus. 3.

AMASENUS, a small river of Latium falling into the Tyrrhene sea. Now Amasino. Virg. Æn. 7, 685.

AMASIA, a city of Pontus, where Mithridates the great, and Strabo the geographer, were born. Now Amasyah. Strab. 12.—Liv. 33, 3.—A river of Germany, flowing into the German ocean, now the Ems. Mela, 3, 3.—Plin. 4, 14.—Tacit. Ann. 1, 60 et 63.

AMASIS, king of Egypt, began to reign B. C. 569. He was at first contemned by his subjects on account of his low origin; but he removed their absurd prejudices by the following device. He caused the statue of a divinity to be formed out of a golden vessel in which he was accustomed to wash his feet; and when he found that it had become an object of general adoration, he assembled the Egyptians, and told them, that if they worshipped that which had been formerly destined to base uses, because it bore the impress of a deity, so they ought to reverence him, though he had formerly filled an obscure place among them. He greatly improved and beautified the country of Egypt; and built many magnificent temples, especially at Sais, the place of his birth. He made a law, that every person, on pain of death, should annually state, before a magistrate, what was his employment, and how he subsisted. He proved very friendly to the Greeks; and is said, like his contemporary Cresus, to have received a visit from Solon. Amasis reigned forty-four years, and was loved and respected by his subjects. He died in the time of Cambyses, B. C. 525. Herod. 1, 2, 3, &c.——A man who led the Persians against the inhabitants of Barce. Herod. 4, 201, &c.

AMASTRA, or AMESTRATUS, a town of Sicily. Sil. 14, 267.—Cic. in Verr. 3, 39, 5, 51.

AMASTRIS, the wife of Dionysius the tyrant of Heraclea in Pontus, was sister to Darius whom Alexander conquered. Strab.——Also, the wife of Xerxes king of Persia. [Vid. Amestris.]——A city of Paphlagonia on the Euxine sea, formerly called Sesamum, and at present Amastra. Cattal.

AMASTRUS, one of the auxiliari s of Perses, against Æetes king of Colchis, killed by Argus, son of Phryxus. Flacc. 6, 544.——A friend of Æneas, killed by Camilla in the Rutulian war. Virg. Æn. 11, 673.

AMATA, the wife of king Latinus. She had betrothed her daughter Lavinia to Turnus, before the arrival of Æneas in Italy. She zealously favoured the interest of Turnus; and when her daughter was given in marriage to Æneas, she hung herself to avoid the sight of her son-in-law. Virg. Æn. 7, &c.

AMATHUS (UNTA-), a city on the south ern side of the island of Cyprus, particularly dedicated to Venus The island is sometimes called Amathusia. Amathus is now named Limmesol, or Lemmesol Auct. a. Vir. Æ. 10, 51 —Ptol 5, 14.

AMAXAMPES, a fountain of Scythia, whose waters embitter the stream of the river Hypanis. Herod. 4, 52.

AMAXIA, a town of Cilicia, abounding with wood for ship building. Plin. 5, 9.—Strab. 14.

AMAZENES, or AMAZENES, a prince of the island Oaracina, who sailed for some time with the Macedonians and Nearchus, in Alexander's expedition into the east. Arrian. in Indic.

AMAZONES, or AMAZONIDES, a nation of famous women who lived near the river Thermodon in Cappadocia. All their life was employed in wars and manly exercises. They never had any commerce with the other sex, but, only for the sake of propagation, they visited the inhabitants of the neighbouring country for a few days, and the male children which they brought forth were, according to Q. Curtius and Philostratus, given to the fathers According to Justin, they were strangled as soon as born; and Diodorus says, that they maimed them, and distorted their limbs. The females were carefully educated with their mothers, in the labours of the field; their right breast was burnt off, that they might hurl a javelin with more force, and make a better use of the bow: from that circumstance, therefore, their name is derived (a non, μαζα mamma). They founded an extensive empire in Asia Minor, along the shores of the Euxine, and near the Thermodon. They were defeated in a battle near the Thermodon, by the Greeks; and some of them migrated beyond the Tanais, and extended their territories as far as the Caspian sea. Themiscyra was the most capital of their towns. Smyrna, Magnesia, Thyatira, and Ephesus, according to some authors, were built by them. Diodorus mentions a nation of Amazons in Africa, more ancient than those of Asia Some authors, among whom is Strabo, deny the existence of the Amazons, but Justin and Diodorus particularly support it, and the latter says, that Penthesilea, one of their queens, came to the Trojan war on the side of Priam, and that she was killed by Achilles, and from that time the glory and character of the Amazons gradually decayed, and was totally forgotten . The Amazons of Africa flourished long before the Trojan war, and many of their actions have been attributed to those of Asia. It is said that after they had almost subdued all Asia, they invaded Attica, and were conquered by Theseus. Their most famous actions were their expedition against Priam, and afterwards the assistance they gave him during the Trojan war; and their invasion of Attica, to punish Theseus, who had carried away Antiope, one of their queens. They were also conquered by Bellerophon and Hercules. Among their queens, Euippe, Antiope, Lampeto, Marpesia, &c. are famous. Curtius says, that Thalestris, one of their queens, came to Alexander whilst he was pursuing his conquests in Asia, for the sake of raising children from a man of such military reputation, and that, after she had remained thirteen days with him, she retired into her country. The Amazons were such expert archers, that, to denote the goodness of a bow or quiver, it was usual to call it Amazonian. Virg. Æn. 5, 311.—Jornand. de Reb. Get. 7.—Philos t. Icon. 2, 5.—Justin. 2, 4.—Curt. 6, 5.—Plin. 6, 7. 14, 8. 36, 5.—Herod. 4, 110.—Strab 11.—Dion. 2.—Diodor. Hist. 4.—Paus. 7, 2.—Plut. in Thes.—Apollod. 2, 3 et 5.—Hyg. f. 14 et 163.

AMAZONIA, a celebrated mistress of the emperor Commodus.——The country of the Amazons, near the Caspian sea.

AMAZONIUM, a place in Attica, where Theseus obtained a victory over the Amazons.

AMAZONIUS, a surname of Apollo at Lacedæmon

AMBARRI, a people of Gallia Celtica, who lived on the river Arar, a little north of its junction with the Rhodanus. Cæs. Bel. G. 1, 11.

AMBARVALIA, sacred rites in honour of Ceres, performed before the beginning of harvest. The Fratres Ambervales, called also Arvales, twelve in number, offered up on this occasion sacrifices for the fertility of the ground, which were termed Sacra Amburvalia, because the victim was carried round the fields, (arva ambibat). The country people followed, crowned with garlands of oak leaves, and celebrating the praises of the goddess, to whom they made libations of honey diluted with milk and wine. Virg. Georg. 1, 339 et 345. Macrob. 3, 5.

AMBENUS, a mountain of European Sarmatia. Flacc. 6, 85.

AMBIALITES, a people of Gallia Celtica. Cæs. Bel. G. 3, 9.

AMBIANI, a nation of Gaul, living along the river Samara. Their chief city Samarobriva, was afterwards called Ambianum, now Amiens. The Ambiani conspired against Julius Cæsar. Cæs. Bell. G 2, 4.

AMBIATINUM, a village of Germany, where the emperor Caligula was born. Sueton. in Cal. 8.

AMBIGATUS, a king of the Celtæ, in the time of Tarquinius Priscus. Seeing the great population of his country, he sent his two nephews, Sigovesus and Bellovesus, with two colonies, in quest of new settlements, the former towards the Hercynian woods, and the other towards Italy. Liv. 5, 34, &c.

AMBIORIX, a king of one half of the Ebarones in Gaul, Cativolcus being king of the other half. He was a great enemy to Rome, and distinguished himself much in the battles which he fought against her generals. He was at last killed in a battle with Julius Cæsar, and 60,000 of his countrymen shared his fate. Cæ. Bell. G. 5, 11 et 26, 6, 30.

AMBIVIUS, a man mentioned by Cicero de Senect.——Turpio, a comic actor, who represented some of the characters in the plays of Terence.

AMBLADA, a town of Pisidia. Strab.

AMBRACIA, a city of Thesprotia, in Epirus, situated on the river Arachthus or Arathon, now Arta. It is said to have been founded by some Corinthians headed by Gorgus, who was either the brother or the son of Cypselus, chief of Corinth, though other traditions have represented it as already existing long before that period. It was of a tolerable size, and had an excellent port. It appears also, from the various sieges it underwent, to have possessed considerable strength. It was the royal residence of Pyrrhus, who waged war with the Romans. Augustus, after the battle of Actium, called it Nicopolis, in honour of his victory. Mela 2, 3.—Plin. 4, 1.—Strab. 10.

AMBRACIUS SINUS, a bay of the Ionian sea, near Ambracia, about three hundred stadia long, very narrow at the entrance, but inland near one hundred stadia in breadth. It appears to have abounded with every kind of fish. It is now called the gulf of Arta. Polyb. 4, 63.—Mela 2, 3.—Plin. 4, 11.—Strab 10.

AMBRACUS, a fortress near Ambracia, now called Vetu Castro. Polyb 4, 63.

AMBRI, an Indian nation. Justin. 12, 9.

AMBRONES, a people of Gaul, who lost their possessions by an overflowing of the sea, and afterwards lived by rapine and plunder. They assisted the Cimbri and Teutones in their invasion of the Roman territories. They were conquered by Caius Marius. Plut. in Mario.

AMBROSIA, festivals celebrated in honour of Bacchus, in peculiarities of Greece. They answered to the Brumalia of the Romans.——One of the daughters of Atlas, changed into a constellation after death.——The food of the gods, in distinction from their drink, which was called nectar. The word signifies immortal, being compounded of a not, and βροτος, mortal. It had the power of giving immortality to all those who eat it. It was sweeter than honey, and of a most odoriferous smell, and it is said, that Berenice the wife of Ptolemy Soter, was saved from death by eating ambrosia given her by Venus. Tithonus was made immortal by Aurora, by eating ambrosia, and in like manner Tantalus and Pelops, who, on account of their impiety had been driven from heaven, and compelled to dwell upon earth, had the power of healing wounds, and therefore Apollo, in Homer's Iliad, saves Sarpedon's body from putrefaction, by rubbing it with ambrosia, and Venus also heals the wounds of her son, in Virgil's Æneid, with it. The gods used generally to perfume their hair with ambrosia, as Juno when she adorned herself to captivate Jupiter, and Venus when she appeared to Æneas. Homer. Il. 1, 14. 16 et 24.—Lucian. de Dea Syra.—Catull. 100. —Theocrit. Id. 15.—Virg. Æn. 1, 407. 12, 419.—Ovid. Met. 2.—Pindar. Olymp. 1.

AMBROSIUS, one of the fathers of the Christian church, was born about A. D. 340, probably at Treves, where his father resided as governor of Gaul. He devoted himself to the study of law, in which he became so distinguished, that Anicius Probus, prefect of Italy, first admitted him into his council, and afterwards appointed him governor of Liguria, of which Milan was the capital. His mildness secured the love of the people, and the wisdom of his government tended greatly to promote their happiness. This state of prosperity was interrupted however, by disturbances growing out of the doctrines of Arius, and Ambrose was called to the bishopric of Milan; all parties uniting in the choice. He long refused to accept the dignity, but in vain. He fled by night, and thought himself on the way to Pavia, but unexpectedly found himself again before the gates of Milan. At length he yielded, received baptism, for he had hitherto been only a catechumen, and, eight days after, was consecrated a priest. He obtained great honour by his conduct as a bishop. He gave his possessions to the church and the poor, reserving the interest during life, and gave himself up to the study of theology under the guidance of Simplicianus. He abolished abuses, established greater ecclesiastical discipline, reclaimed heretics, and boldly opposed the illegal encroachments of imperial power. A remarkable instance of firmness was given in his excommunication of the emperor Theodosius for the massacre at Thessalonica, whom at last with difficulty he absolved after a penance of eight months and a public humiliation. He died April 4th, A. D. 397, regretted by his people and glorying in his God. The best edition of his works is that of the Benedictines, 2 vols. fol. Paris, 1686-90.

AMBRYON, a man who wrote the life of Theocritus of Chios. Diog.

AMBRYSSUS, a city of Phocis, so called from a hero of the same name. It was situated in a country abounding in a plant which produced a scarlet dye, by means of an insect which was bred in its berries. This city, having been destroyed by the Amphictyons, was rebuilt and fortified by the Thebans before the battle of Cheronea. It was taken by T. Quintius Flaminius in the Macedonian war. Its ruins are to be seen near the village of Dystomo. Paus. 10, 35.—Liv. 32, 18.

AMBUBÆ, dissolute women of Syria, resembling the almas or dancing girls of eastern nations, who were in the habit of attending the festivals and public assemblies of Rome as minstrels. They derive their name either from the Syriac word abub, signifying a flute; or from ambi, round, and baia, the place which they generally frequented. Horat. Sat. 1, 2.—Ruet. in Nov. 37.

AMBULLI, a surname of Castor and Pollux, in Sparta.

AMFLES, a river of hell, whose waters no vessel could contain. Plut. de Rep 10.

AMENANUS, a river of Sicily, near mount Ætna, now Judicello. Strab. 6.

AMENIDES, a secretary of Darius the last king of Persia. Alexander set him over the Arimaspi. Curt. 7, 3.

AMENOCLES, a Corinthian, said to be the first Grecian that built a three-oared galley at Samos and Corinth. Thucyd. 1, 13.

AMERIA, an ancient town of Umbria, south-west of Spoletum, where Sextus Roscius was born. Its low and moist valleys were famous for the production of willows. Now Amelia. Plin. 3, 14.—Virg. G. 1, 265.

AMESTRATUS, a town of Sicily, near the Halesus. It resisted the besieging army of the Romans seven months; but was obliged to yield after a third siege, when the inhabitants were all sold for slaves. It is now Mistretta, in the Val de Demone. Polyb. 1, 21.

AMESTRIS, queen of Persia, was wife to Xerxes. She cruelly treated the mother of Artaynte her husband's mistress, and cut off her nose, ears, lips, breast, tongue, and eye-brows. She also buried alive fourteen noble Persian youths, to appease the deities under the earth. Herod. 7, 61. 9, 111.——A daughter of Oxyartes, wife to Lysimachus. Diod. 20.

AMIDA, a city of Mesopotamia, besieged and taken by Sapor, king of Persia. It was called Constantia, in honour of the emperor Constantius who fortified it. It is now named Diarbekir, or Cara-Amida. Ammian. 19.

AMILCAR, a Carthaginian general of great eloquence and cunning, surnamed Rhodanus. When the Athenians were afraid of Alexander, Amilcar went to his camp, gained his confidence, and secretly transmitted an account of all his schemes to Athens. Trogus 21, 6.——A Carthaginian, whom the Syracusans called to their assistance against the tyrant Agathocles, who besieged their city. Amilcar soon after favoured the interest of Agathocles, for which he was accused at Carthage. He died in Syracuse, B. C. 309 Diod 20.—Justin. 22, 2 et 3.——A Carthaginian, surnamed Barcas, father to the celebrated Annibal. He was general in Sicily during the first Punic war; and after a peace had been made with the Romans, he quelled a rebellion of slaves, who had besieged Carthage, and taken many towns of Africa, and rendered themselves so formidable to the Carthaginians that they begged and obtained assistance from Rome. After this, he passed into Spain with his son Hannibal, who was but nine years of age, and laid the foundation of the town of Barcelona. He was killed in a battle against the Vettones, B. C. 237. He had formed the plan of an invasion of Italy, by crossing the Alps, which his son afterwards carried into execution. His great enmity to the Romans was the cause of the second Punic war. He used to say of his three sons, that he kept three lions to devour the Roman power. C. Nep. in Vit.—Liv. 21, 1. —Polyb. 2.—Plut. in Annib.——A Carthaginian general, who assisted the Insubres against Rome, and was taken by Cn. Cornelius. Liv. 32, 30 33, 8.——A son of Hanno, defeated in Sicily by Gelon, the same day that Xerxes was defeated at Salamis by Themistocles. He burnt himself, that his body might not be found among the slain. Sacrifices were ordered to him. Herod. 7, 165, &c.

AMILUS, or AMILUS, a river of Mauritania, where the elephants go to wash themselves at the new moon. Plin. 8, 1.——A town of Arcadia. Paus. in Arcad c.

AMIMONE, or AMYMONE, a daughter of Danaus, changed into a fountain which is near Argos, and flows into the lake Lerna. Ovid. Met. 2, 240

AMINEA, or AMMINEA, a part of Campania, where the inhabitants are great husbandmen. Its wine was highly esteemed. Virg. G. 2, 97.——A place of Thessaly.

AMINIAS, a citizen of Athens, who began the battle at Salamis. He pursued Artemisia in her flight, on which account great praise was bestowed on him. Herod. 8, 84 et 93.

AMINIAS, a famous pirate, whom Antigonus employed against Apollodorus tyrant of Cassandrea. Polyæn. 4, 18.

AMINIUS, a river of Arcadia. Paus. 8, 30.

AMINOCLES, a native of Corinth, who flourished 705 B. C. &c.

AMISENA, a country of Cappadocia. Strab. 12

AMISENUS SINUS, a gulf on the Euxine, adjacent to the town of Amisus, and called after its name.

AMISIA, a river of Germany falling into the German ocean. Now, the Ems.

AMISIAS, a comic poet, whom Aristophanes ridiculed for his stupid verses.

AMISSAS, an officer of Megalopolis in Alexander's army. Curt. 10, 8.

AMISUS, a city of Pontus, on the coast of the Euxine, north west of the mouth of the river Iris. It was founded by a colony of Milesians and Athenians combined, and was originally a free city of Greece, but fell to Pharnaces, king of Pontus, by conquest, and ultimately to the Romans, under the command of Lucullus. It is now known by the name of Samsun. Cic. Manil. 8.—Plin. 10, 9.

AMITERNUM, a town of Italy, where Sallust was born. Its inhabitants assisted Turnus against Æneas. It was taken by the consul Sp. Carvilius. A. U. C. 459, and subsisted until the quarrels of the Guelphs and Gibellines. The ruins of this town are to be seen near St Vittorino. Virg. Æn. 7, 710.—Plin. 3, 5.—Liv. 28, 45.

AMITHAON, or AMYTHAON, was father to Melampus the famous prophet. Stat Theb. 3, 451.

AMMÆCHOSTUS, a promontory of Cyprus, southwest of Salamis, now Formagusta.

AMMALO, a festival in honour of Jupiter in Greece.

AMMIANUS. Vid Marcellinus.

AMMON and HAMMON, a name of Jupiter, worshipped in Libya. He appeared under the form of a ram to Hercules, or, according to others, to Bacchus, who, with his army, suffered the greatest extremities for want of water, in the deserts of Africa, and showed him a fountain. From this, Bacchus erected a temple to his father, under the name of Jupiter Ammon, i. e. sandy, with the horns of a ram. The ram, according to some, was made a constellation. The temple of Jupiter Ammon was in the deserts of Libya, twelve days' journey from Memphis. It had a famous oracle, which, according to ancient tradition, was established about eighteen centuries before the time of Augustus, by two doves which flew away from Thebais in Egypt, and came one to Dodona, and the other to Libya, where the people were soon informed of their divine mission. The oracle of Hammon was consulted by Hercules, Perseus, and others, but when it pronounced Alexander to be the son of Jupiter, such flattery destroyed its long established reputation, and in the age of Plutarch it was scarcely known. The situation of the temple was pleasant; and, according to Herodotus, there was near it a fountain whose water was tepid in the morning, cool in the forenoon, extremely cold at mid-day, diminishing in coldness as the day declined, warm at sunset, and boiling hot at midnight. Browne discovered in 1792 the site of the temple of Ammon, in a fertile spot called the Oasis of Siwah, situated in the midst of deserts, five degrees nearly west from Cairo. In 1798, Hornemann discovered the fountain. In 1815, Belzoni visited the spot, and found the fountain situated in the middle of a beautiful wood of palm trees. He visited the fountain at noon, evening, midnight, and morning. He had no thermometer with him, but judging from his feelings at these different periods, it might be 40° at noon, 60° in the evening, 100° at midnight, and 80° in the morning. Plin. 6, 29.—Strab. 1, 11 et 17.—Plut cur. Orac. edi desierunt; et in Isid.—Curt. 4, 7. 6, 10. 10, 5.—Herod. 1, 6. 2, 32 et 55. 4, 44 et 181.—Paus. 3, 18. 4, 23.—Hygin. 133. Po t Astr. 2, 20.—Justin. 1, 9. 11, 11 ——A king of Libya, father to Bacchus. He gave his name to the temple of Hammon, according to Diod. 3.

AMMON and BROTHAS, two brothers famous for their skill in boxing. Ovid. Met. 5, 107.

AMMONIA, a name of Juno in Elis Paus. 5, 15.

AMMONII, a nation of Africa, who derived their origin from the Egyptians and Æthiopians. Their language was a mixture of that of the two people from whom they were descended. Herod. 2, 3, 4.

AMMONIUS, a peripatetic philosopher at Athens, who flourished about A. D. 66. Plutarch, who was his pupil, makes frequent mention of him in his works.—Sacca, a philosopher of the third century and the founder of the eclectic sect. He was born of Christian parents, and, according to some, continued through life to profess the Christian religion, but Porphyry and others claim him as a convert to Paganism. He instituted a school at Alexandria to reconcile the discordant doctrines of Plato and Aristotle, and among his other eminent disciples were the elegant Longinus and the profound Plotinus. He died A. D. 243.——A peripatetic philosopher, son of Hermias, flourished at Alexandria, at the beginning of the 6th century. He wrote commentaries on Aristotle and Porphyry, which are still extant.——A grammarian of Alexandria, lived in the fourth century. His treatise Περι ὁμοιων και διαφορων λεξεων, on words of similar and of different significations, was printed at Venice in 1497. It is also annexed to Stephen's Thesaurus, and to Scapula's Lexicon.——An Athenian general surnamed Barcas. Polyb. 3.

AMMOTHEA, one of the Nereides. Hesiod. Theog.

AMNIAS, a river of Bithynia. Appian. de Bell. Mithr.

AMNISUS, a port of Crete, south-east from Gnossus, with a small river of the same name, near which Lithyia had a temple. The nymphs were called Amnisiades or Amnisides. Paus. 1, 18.—Homer. Odyss. 19, 187.—Callim. in Dian. 15.

AMŒBÆUS, an Athenian player of great reputation, who sang at the nuptials of Demetrius and Nicæa. Polyæn. 4, 6.

AMOMETUS, a Greek historian. Plin. 6 17.

AMOR, the son of Venus, was the god of love. Vid. Cupido.

AMORGES, a Persian general killed in Cæria in the reign of Xerxes. Herod. 5, 121.

AMORGOS, an island among the Cyclades where Simonides was born. It gave its name to a peculiar linen dress manufactured in the island. Now Amorgo. Strab. 10.—Nymph. Byz.

AMPE, a town situate on the Erythræan sea, at the mouth of the Tigris. Herod. 6, 20.

AMPELUS, a promontory of Samos.——Another of Macedonia, in the Toronæan gulf.——A town of Crete,——Liguria,——and Cyrene.——A favourite of Bacchus, son of a satyr and a nymph, who lived on the shores of the Euphrates in Armenia. He was presented with a vine by the god whose friendship he enjoyed, and some time after, while he amused himself in collecting the finest grapes from the branches, he fell down, and was killed on the spot. The god honoured his memory by placing him among the constellations. Ovid. Fast. 3, 407.

AMPELUSIA, a promontory of Mauritania, in Africa, now Cap-Spartel. Mela 1, 5 et 6.

AMPHEA, a city of Messenia, taken by the Lacedæmonians. Paus. 4, 5.

AMPHIALAUS, a famous dancer in the island of the Phæacians. Homer. Odyss. 8.

AMPHIANAX, a king of Lycia in the time of Acrisius and Proetus. Apollod. 2, 2.

AMPHIARAIDES, a patronymic of Alcmæon, as being son of Amphiaraus. Ovid. Fast. 2, 43.

AMPHIARAUS, son of Oicleus, or, according to others, of Apollo, by Hypermnestra, was at the chase of the Calydonian boar, and accompanied the Argonauts in their expedition. He was famous for his knowledge of futurity. He married Eriphyle, the sister of Adrastus king of Argos, by whom he had two sons, Alcmæon and Amphilochus. When Adrastus, at the request of Polynices, declared war against Thebes, Amphiaraus secreted himself, not to accompany his brother-in-law in an expedition in which he knew he was to perish. But Eriphyle, who knew where he had concealed himself, was prevailed upon to betray him by Polynices, who gave her as a reward for her perfidy, a famous golden necklace set with diamonds. Amphiaraus, being thus discovered, went to the war, but previously charged his son Alcmæon to put to death his mother Eriphyle, as soon as he was informed that he was killed. The Theban war was fatal to the Argives, and Amphiaraus was swallowed up in his chariot by the earth as he attempted to retire from battle. The news of his death was brought to Alcmæon, who immediately executed his father's command, and murdered Eriphyle. Amphiaraus received divine honours after death, and had a celebrated temple and oracle at Oropos in Attica. His statue was made of white marble, and near his temple was a fountain, whose waters were ever held sacred. They only who had consulted his oracle, or had been delivered from a disease, were permitted to bathe in it; after which they threw pieces of gold and silver into the stream. Those who consulted the oracle of Amphiaraus, first purified themselves, and abstained from food for twenty-four hours, and the nine days from wine; after which they sacrificed a ram to the prophet, and spread the skin upon the ground, upon which they slept in expectation of receiving in a dream the answer of the oracle. Plutarch de Orac. Defect. mentions, that the oracle of Amphiaraus was once consulted in the time of Xerxes, by one of the servants of Mardonius, for his master, who was then with an army in Greece, and that the servant when asleep, saw in a dream a minister of the god approach him, who commanded him to be gone, and upon his refusal threw a large stone at his head, so that he believed himself killed by the blow. This oracle was verified in the death of Mardonius, who was actually killed by the blow of a stone he received on the head. Cic. de Div. 1, 40.—Phil str. in Vit. Apollon. 2, 11.—Homer. Odyss. 15, 244, &c. —Hygin. 70, 73, 128 et 130.—Diod. 4.—Ovid. 9, 10.—Paus. 1, 34. 2, 37. 9, 8 et 19.—Æschyl. Septante Theb.—Apollod. 1, 8 et 9. 3, 6, &c.—Strab. 8.

AMPHICLEA, or AMPHICÆA, a city of Phocis, sixty stadia from Lilæa. It was ruined by the Persians. Bacchus had a temple and an oracle in this city, where many cures are said to have been wrought. Paus. 10, 33.—Herod. 8, 33.

AMPHICLUS, a Trojan, killed by Meges during the siege of his country. Homer. Il. 16, 313.

AMPHICRATES, an historian who wrote the lives of illustrious men. Diog.——An Athenian sophist, banished from his country. He retired to Nelucia, but despising the place, he observed, with all the arrogance of false philosophy, that the fish was too large for the dish. Plut. in Lucull.

AMPHICTYON, son of Deucalion and Pyrrha, reigned at Athens after Cranaus and first attempted to give the interpretation of dreams, and to draw omens. Some say that a deluge happened in his age, which destroyed the greater part of the inhabitants of Greece. Justin. 2, 6.

AMPHICTYONES, the representatives of the principal states of Greece, who formed a general assembly, similar to the states-general of Holland, or the diet of the German empire. Some writers suppose that Acrisius, king of Argos, was the founder of this assembly; but others, with greater probability, ascribe that honour to Amphictyon, the son of Deucalion and Pyrrha. It consisted of twelve members originally, sent by the Ionians, Dorians, Perrhæbians, Bœotians, Magnesians, Achæans, Phthians, Melians, Dolopians, Ænianians, Delphians, and Phocians. Other cities in process of time sent also some of their citizens to the council of the Amphictyons; and in the age of Antoninus Pius they were increased to the number of thirty. At first, they met at Delphi; in later times, at Thermopylæ, or rather at the neighbouring village, Anthela. It was their duty to compose the public dissensions and the quarrels of individual cities, to punish civil and criminal offences, and particularly to take cognizance of transgressions against the law of nations. Another part of their duty was to protect the Delphian oracle, to superintend its treasuries, and to settle all disputes between the Delphians and the votaries who came to consult the oracle. When the Phocians plundered the temple of Delphi, the Amphictyons declared war against them, and this war was supported by all the states of Greece, and lasted ten years. The Phocians, with their allies, the Lacedæmonians, were deprived of the privilege of sitting in the council of the Amphictyons, and the Macedonians were admitted in their place, for their services in support of the war. About sixty years after, when Brennus, with the Gauls, invaded Greece, the Phocians behaved with such courage, that they were reinstated in all their former privileges. Before they proceeded to business, the Amphictyons sacrificed an ox to the god of Delphi, and cut his flesh into small pieces, intimating that union and unanimity prevailed in the several cities which they represented. Their decisions were held sacred and inviolable, and even arms were taken up to enforce them. Paus. in Phoric. et Achaic.—Strab. 8.—Suidas.—Hesych.—Æschin.

AMPHIDAMUS, a son of Aleus, brother to Lycurgus. He was of the family of the Inachidæ, and one of the Argonauts. Flacc. 1, 379.—Paus. 8, 5.——The father of Clysonimus. Homer. Il. 10, 268.——A son of Busiris, killed by Hercules. Apollod. 2, 5.

AMPHIDROMIA, a festival observed by private families at Athens, on the fifth day after the birth of every child, denominated the lustral day. It was customary to run round the fire with the infant, to dedicate it to the household gods, and to give it a name in presence of its parents. Hesychius in Verb.

AMPHIGENIA, a town of Messenia, near the river Hyposeia. It possessed a temple of Latona. Stat. Theb. 4, 178.—Strab. 8.

AMPHILOCHIA, the country round the city of Argos Amphilochum, in Acarnania. Its modern name is Vilokyno.

AMPHILOCHUS, a son of Amphiaraus and Eriphyle. After his return from the Trojan war, he left Argos his native country, and built a city in Acarnania, which he called Argos Amphilochium, or Amphilochi. Strab. 7.—Paus. 2, 18.——An Athenian philosopher who wrote upon agriculture. Varro. de R. R. 1.

AMPHILYTUS, a southsayer of Acarnania, who encouraged Pisistratus to seize the sovereign power of Athens. Herod. 1, 62.

AMPHIMACHUS, one of Helen's suitors, son of Cteatus. He went to the Trojan war. Apollod. 3, 10. Hygin. 97.——One of the Carian chiefs, son of Nomion. He was killed by Achilles. Homer. Il. 2, 870.

AMPHIMEDON, a Libyan, killed by Perseus in the court of Cepheus. Ovid. Met. 5, 75.——One of Penelope's suitors, son of Melantheus. He was killed by Telemachus. Hom. r. Odyss. 22, 284.

AMPHINOME, the name of one of the Nereides, attendants of Thetis. Homer. Il. 18, 44.

AMPHINOMUS, one of Penelope's suitors, killed by Telemachus. Homer. Od. 22, 89.

AMPHINOMUS and ANAPIUS, two brothers, who, when Catana and the neighbouring cities were in flames, by an eruption from mount Ætna, saved their parents upon their shoulders. The fire, it is said, spared them while it consumed others by their side, and Pluto, to reward their uncommon piety, placed them after death in the island of Leuce, and they received divine honours in Sicily. Val. Max. 5, 4.—Strab. 6.—Hud. 14, 197. —Seneca de Benef. 3.

AMPHION was son of Jupiter, by Antiope daughter of Nycteus, who had married Lycus, and had been repudiated by him when he married Dirce. Amphion was born at the same birth with Zethus, on mount Cithæron, where Antiope had fled to avoid the resentment of Dirce, and the two children were exposed in the woods, but preserved by a shepherd. [Vid. Antiope.] When Amphion grew up, he cultivated poetry, and made an uncommon progress in music. Mercury was his instructor in the science of music, and gave him the lyre, by the sound of which he so charmed the stones, that they arranged themselves in architectural order, and formed the walls of Thebes. He was the first who raised an altar to this god. Zethus and Amphion united to avenge the wrongs which their mother had suffered from the cruelties of Dirce. They besieged and took Thebes, put Lycus to death, and tied his wife to the tail of a wild bull, who dragged her through precipices till she expired. The fable of Amphion's moving stones and raising the walls of Thebes at the sound of his lyre, has been explained by supposing that he persuaded, by his eloquence, a wild and uncivilized people to unite together and build a town to protect themselves against the attacks of their enemies. Homer. Odyss. 11.—Apollod. 3, 5 et 10.—Paus. 6, 6 & 20. 9, 5 et 17.—Propert. 3, 15.—Ovid. de Art. Am. 3, 323.—Horat. Od. 3, 11. Art Po t. 394.—Stat. Theb. 1, 10.——A son of Jasus, king of Orchomenos, by Persiphone daughter of Minus. He married Niobe, daughter of Tantalus, by whom he had many children, among whom was Chloris, the wife of Neleus. He has been confounded by mythologists with the son of Antiope, though Homer, in his Odyssey, speaks of them both, and distinguishes them beyond contradiction. The number of Amphion's children, according to Homer, was twelve, six of each sex; according to Ælian, twenty; and according to Ovid, fourteen, seven males and seven females. When Niobe boasted herself greater, and more deserving of immortality than Latona, all her children, except Chloris, were destroyed by the arrows of Apollo and Diana. Niobe herself was changed into a stone; and Amphion killed himself in a fit of despair. Homer. Odyss. 11, 261 et 282.—Ælian. V H. 12, 36.—Ovid. Met. 6, 5.——One of the Argonauts, son of Hyperasius king of Pallene in Arcadia. Flacc. 1, 367.——A famous painter and statuary, son of Acestor of Gnossus, in Crete. Plin. 10, 13.—Plin. 36, 10.——One of the Greek generals in the Trojan war. Homer. Il. 13, 692.

AMPHIPOLES, magistrates appointed at Syracuse, by Timoleon, after the expulsion of Dionysius the younger. The office existed for about three hundred years. Diod. 16.

AMPHIPOLIS, a town on the Strymon, between Macedonia and Thrace. An Athenian colony under Agnon, son of Nicias, drove the ancient inhabitants, called Edonians, from the country, and built a city, which they called Amphipolis, i. e. a town surrounded on all sides, because the Strymon flowed all around it. It was also called Nea Odos, or the new ways, from the number of roads which met here. It had also other names, such as Acta, Myrcia, Eion, the town of Mars, &c. It is now called Jambola. It was the cause of many wars between the Athenians and Spartans. Thucyd. 4, 102, &c.—Herod. 5, 126. 7, 114.—Diod. 11, 32, &c.——L. Nep. in Cim.

AMPHIPYROS, a surname of Diana, because she carries a torch in both her hands. Sophocles in Trach.

AMPHIRETUS, a man of Acanthus, who artfully escaped from pirates who had made him prisoner. Polyæn. 6.

AMPHIROE, one of the Oceanides. Hesiod. Theog. 361.

AMPHIS, a Greek comic poet of Athens, son of Amphicrates, contemporary with Plato. Besides his comedies, he wrote other pieces, which are now lost. Suidas.—Diog.

AMPHISBÆNA, a two-headed serpent in the deserts of Libya, whose bite was venomous and deadly. Lucan. 9, 719.—Plin. 29, 29.

AMPHISSA, the capital of the Locri Ozolæ, situated at the head of the Sinus Crissæus, about sixty stadia from Delphi. It was said to have derived its name from the circumstance of being surrounded on every side with mountains. It is now called Salona. Liv. 37, 5.—Lucan. 3, 172.—A town of the Bruttii, between Locri and Caulon, now called Rocella. Ovid Met. 15, 703.

AMPHISSENE, a country of Armenia.

AMPHISSUS, a son of Dryope. Ovid. Met. 1, 10.

AMPHISTHENES, a Lacedæmonian who fell lecherous in sacrificing to Diana. Paus. 3, 16.

AMPHISTIDES, a man so naturally destitute of intellects, that he seldom remembered that he ever had a father. He wished to learn arithmetic, but never could comprehend beyond the figure 4. Aristot. Probl. 4.

AMPHISTRATUS and RHECAS, two men of size in, charioteers to Castor and Pollux. Strab. 1.—Justin. 42, 3.

AMPHITEA, the mother of Ægialeus, by Cyanippus, and of three daughters, Argia, Deipyle, and Ægialea, by Adrastus king of Argos. She was daughter to Pronax. Apollod. 1.—The wife of Autolycus, by whom she had Anticlea, the wife of Laertes. Homer. Odyss. 19, 416

AMPHITHEATRUM, a building of an oval form, in which were exhibited various kinds of games and spectacles, particularly combats of gladiators and wild beasts. The area in the middle was called the arena, from the circumstance of its being covered with sand, to prevent the gladiators from slipping, and to conceal the blood. The arena was surrounded by vaults or caves in which the animals were kept; and immediately above these vaults was a gallery, from which ascended successive rows of seats, each of greater height and circumference than the preceding. The fourteen first rows were allotted to the senators and judges, the others were appropriated to the common people. As the building was open in the top, it was provided with an awning, which, by means of pulleys and cords, could be let down or drawn up at pleasure, and which was occasionally stretched to defend the spectators from the rain, and sun. The first durable amphitheatre of stone was erected by Statilius Taurus, at the desire of Augustus. The largest one was the Flavian amphitheatre, or, as its ruins are generally called, the Colosseum, built, as Suetonius informs us, on the ancient site of the gardens of Nero. It was commenced by Flavius Vespasian, A. D. 72, and completed by his son Titus. It measured in its longer diameter, 619 feet, and in the shorter 513 feet. Its entire circumference measured about 1741 feet. Its extreme height was about 179 feet. It contained ranges of seats for the enormous assemblage of 87,000 persons, besides standing room for 20,000 more. It is recorded, that thirty thousand Jews, the victims of war, were employed in its construction. The time that it occupied in building is variously stated; but, from a medal struck on the occasion, we learn that it was dedicated and opened by Titus in the eighth year of his consulship, and the eighteenth of the Christian era. Having suffered by fire in the reign of Antoninus Pius, it was repaired by that emperor, and again, after a similar misfortune, by Alexander Severus. The ruins of this wonderful production of antiquity still remain.——There are amphitheatres still standing, in various degrees of perfection, at several other places besides Rome. The most remarkable are, at Capua and Verona in Italy, at Nismes in Languedoc, at Pola in Istria, and at Pæstum in Lucania.

AMPHITHEMIS, a Theban general, who involved the Lacedæmonians in a war with his country. Plut. in Lyc.—Paus. 3, 9.

AMPHITHOE, one of the Nereides.

AMPHITRITE, a daughter of Oceanus and Tethys, or of Nereus and Doris. Though she had made a vow of perpetual celibacy, yet she was prevailed upon to marry Neptune, and rewarded the fidelity of the dolphin, who had so powerfully pleaded the cause of the god, by placing him among the stars. She became mother of Triton, and shared the divine honours of her husband, especially at Corinth, where she had a statue in his temple. She is sometimes called Salacia, and is often taken for the sea itself. Varro de L. L. 4.—Hesiod. Theog. 930.—Apollod. 3.—Claudian. de Rapt. Pros. 1, 104.—Ovid. Met. 1, 14.—Hygin. P. A. 2, 17.——One of the Nereides. Hesiod. Theog. 241.

AMPHITRYON, a Theban prince, son of Alcæus and Hipponome. His sister Anaxo had married Electryon king of Mycenæ, whose sons were killed in a battle by the Teleboans. Electryon promised his crown, and daughter Alcmena, to him who could revenge the death of his sons upon the Teleboans; and Amphitryon offered himself, and was received, on condition that he should not approach Alcmena before he had obtained a victory. Jupiter, who was captivated with the charms of Alcmena, borrowed the features of Amphitryon, when he was gone to the war, and introduced himself to Electryon's daughter, as her husband returned victorious. Alcmena became pregnant of Hercules by Jupiter, and of Iphicles by Amphitryon, after his return. [Vide Alcmena.] When Amphitryon returned from the war, he brought back to Electryon the herds which the Teleboans had taken from him. One of the cows having strayed from the rest, Amphitryon, to bring them together, threw a stick, which struck the horns of the cow, and rebounded with such violence upon Electryon that he died on the spot. After this accidental murder, Sthenelus, Elecon's brother, seized the kingdom of Mycenæ, and obliged Amphitryon to leave Argolis, and retire to Thebes with Alcmena. Creon, king of Thebes, purified him of the murder. Apollod. 2, 4.—Virg. Æn. 6, 213.—Propert. 3, 19, 1.—Hesiod. in Scut. Hercul.—Hygin. 29.—Paus. 8, 14.—Plaut. 1, 371. —Lucan. 9, 643.

AMPHITRYONIADES, a surname of Hercules, as the supposed son of Amphitryon. Virg. Æn. 8, 103.

AMPHITUS, a priest of Ceres, at the court of Celænæ. Ovid. Met. 5, 5 ——A charioteer in the service of Castor and Pollux. Plin. 9, 5.

AMPHIUS, a son of Merops the soothsayer, who, in spite of his father's prophecies, attended the siege of Troy, at the head of the inhabitants of some of the Peloponnesian cities. Homer. Il. 2, 337.——A Trojan, son of Selagus, killed by Ajax. Homer. Il. 5.

AMPHOTERUS, an officer appointed commander of a fleet in the Hellespont by Alexander. Curt. 3, 1.——A son of Alcmæon. Vid. Acarnas.

AMPHRYSUS, a river of Thessaly, near which Apollo, when banished from heaven, fed the flocks of king Admetus. From this circumstance, the god has been called Amphrysius, and his priestess Amphrysia. Ovid. Met. 1, 580.—Lucan. 6, 367. —Virg. G. 3, 2.—Æn. 6, 398.——A river of Phrygia, whose waters rendered women liable to barrenness. Plin. 31, 2.

AMPIA LABIENA LEX, was enacted by T. Ampius and T. Labienus, tribunes of the people, A. U. C. 693. It gave Pompey the Great the privileges of appearing in triumphal robes, and with a golden crown at the Circensian games, and with a prætexta and golden crown in the theatre, which mark of distinction he used only once. Patrc. 2, 40.

AMPRACIA. [Vid. Ambracia.]

AMPSAGAS, a river of Africa, separating Numidia from Mauritania Cæsariensis, and falling into the Mediterranean sea to the east of Igilgilis, or Jigel. Now, the Wad-el-Kiber, i. e. the Great River.

AMPYSIDES, a patronymic of Mopsus, son of Ampyx. Ovid. Met. 8, 316.

AMPYX, a son of Pelias. Paus. 7, 18.——A man mentioned by Ovid. Met. 5, 184.——The father of the soothsayer Mopsus. Orph. in Argon. —Paus. 5, 17.

AMSANCTUS, a lake in the country of the Hirpini, at the east of Capua, whose waters are so sulphureous that they infect and destroy whatever animals come near the place. It is through this place that Virgil makes the fury Alecto descend into hell, after her visit to the upper regions. On the banks of the lake stood a temple consecrated to Mephitis, the goddess of bad smells, hence it is now called Mephi. Virg. Æn. 7, 565.—Cic. de Div. 1, 36.

AMULIUS, king of Alba, was son of Procas, and youngest brother to Numitor. The crown belonged to Numitor by right of birth; but Amulius dispossessed him of it, and even put to death his son Lausus, and consecrated his daughter Rhea Sylvia to the service of Vesta, to prevent her ever becoming a mother. Yet, in spite of all these precautions, Rhea became pregnant by the god Mars, and brought forth twins, Romulus and Remus. Amulius, who was informed of this, ordered the mother to be buried alive for violating the laws of Vesta, which enjoined perpetual chastity, and the two children to be thrown into the river. They were providentially saved by some shepherds or, as others say, by a she-wolf: and when they had attained the years of manhood, they put to death the usurper Amulius, and restored the crown to their grandfather. Ovid. Fast. 3, 67.—Liv. 1, 3 et 4.—Plut. in Romul.—Flor. 1, 1.—Dionys. Hal.——A celebrated painter. Plin. 35, 10.

AMYCI PORTUS, a harbour on the Thracian Bosphorus, north of Nicopolis, and south of the temple of Jupiter Urius. Here Amycus, an ancient king of the Bebryces, was slain in combat with Pollux. Arrian.

AMYCLA, a daughter of Niobe, who, with her sister Melibœa, was spared by Diana, when her mother boasted herself greater than Diana. Paus. 2, 22.—Apollod. 3.——Homer says that all the daughters perished. Il. 24. [Vid. Niobe.]—— The nurse of Alcibiades. Plut.

AMYCLÆ, a town of Latium, situated between Caieta and Terracina. The inhabitants were Pythagoreans, and considered it impious to take away life even in self-defence, upon which principle they suffered serpents to multiply nearly to their own destruction. In consequence of a false rumour that an enemy was coming to storm the town, a law was enacted in Amyclæ, inflicting a severe penalty on any person who should in future propagate such a rumour, which procured the town the epithet of tacitæ, or the silent, and had ultimately a still more serious effect, for when the Dorians really appeared, no one presumed to announce their arrival, and the place was easily taken. Amyclæ appears to have transmitted its name to the sea on which it stood; for Tacitus and Pliny speak of the Amyclanum mare and Amyclanus sinus. Plin. 3, 29. 13, 5.—Virg. Æn. 10, 564. —Sil. Ital. 8, 529.—Tacit. Ann. 4.——An ancient city of Laconia, about forty stadia south-east of Sparta, built by Amyclas. It was celebrated for the birth of Castor and Pollux, and for the death of Hyacinthus. Apollo, surnamed Amyclæus, had a magnificent temple here, which contained a statue of the god seated on a throne, richly adorned in every part by the chisel of Bathycles. Polybius describes the country around Amyclæ as most beautifully wooded, and of great fertility, which account is corroborated by Dodwell, who says it luxuriates in fertility, and abounds in mulberries, olives, and all the fruit-trees which grow in Greece. The modern name of Amyclæ is Sclavo-Chorio. Paus. 3, 18.—Stat. Theb. 4, 223. 7, 162.—Ital. 2, 434.—Strab. 8.—Virg. G. 3, 345.—Ovid. de Art. Am. 2, 9.

AMYCLÆUS, a statuary. Paus. 10, 13.——A surname of Apollo.

AMYCLAS, son of Lacedæmon and Sparta, built the city of Amyclæ. His sister Eurydice married Acrisius king of Argos, by whom she had Danae. He himself had for wife Diomede, daughter of Lapithus, who became mother of Cynortas the father of Perieres. Apollod. 1, 23. 3, 19.—Paus. 3, 1. 7, 18.——The master of a ship in which Cæsar in disguise embarked from a place near Oricum, in order to hasten the passage of his troops from Brundusium. When Amyclas wished to put back to avoid a violent storm, Cæsar, unveiling his head, discovered himself, and bidding the pilot pursue his voyage, exclaimed, Cæsarem vehis, Cæsarisque fortunam. Lucan. 5, 520.

AMYCUS, son of Neptune, by Melia, or Bithynis according to others, was king of the Bebryces. He was famous for his skill in the management of the cestus, and he challenged all strangers to a trial of strength. When the Argonauts, in their expedition, stopped on his coasts, he treated them with great kindness, and Pollux accepted his challenge, and killed him when he attempted to overcome him by fraud. Apollon. Argon. 2.—Theocrit. Id. 22.—Apollod. 1, 9.——One of the companions of Æneas, who almost perished in a storm on the coast of Africa. He was killed by Turnus. Virg. Æn. 1, 225. 9, 772.——Another, likewise killed by Turnus. Ib. 12, 509.——A son of Ixion and the cloud. Ovid. Met. 12, 245.

AMYDON, a city of Macedonia, on the Axius, which sent auxiliaries to Priam during the Trojan war. Homer. Il. 2.—Juv. 8, 79.

AMYMONE, daughter of Danaus and Europa, married Enceladus, son of Ægyptus, whom she murdered the first night of her nuptials. She wounded a satyr with an arrow which she had aimed at a stag. The satyr pursued her, and even uttered her violence, but Neptune delivered her. It was said, that she was the only one of the fifty sisters who was not condemned to fill a leaky tub with water in hell, because she had been continually employed, by order of her father, in supplying the city of Argos with water, in a great drought. Neptune saw her in this employment, and was enamoured of her. He carried her away, and in the place where she stood, he raised a fountain, by striking a rock. The fountain has been called Amymone. She had Nauplius by Neptune. Propert. 2, 28, 46.—Apollod. 2.—Strab. 8.—Paus. 2, 37.—Ovid. Amor. 1, 515.—Hygin. 169.——A fountain and rivulet of Peloponnesus, flowing through Argolis into the lake of Lerna. Ovid. Met. 2, 240.

father Alcetas. His son Alexander murdered the ambassadors of Megabyzus, for their wanton and insolent behaviour to the ladies of his father's court. Bubares, a Persian general, was sent with an army to revenge the death of the ambassadors, but instead of making war, he married the king's daughter, and defended his possessions. Justin. 7, 3.—Herod. 5, 7 et 8.——The second of that name was son of Menelaus, and king of Macedonia, after his murder of Pausanias. He was expelled by the Illyrians, and restored by the Thessalians and Spartans. He made war against the Illyrians and Olynthians with the assistance of the Lacedæmonians, and lived to a great age. His wife, Eurydice, conspired against his life; but her snares were seasonably discovered by one of his daughters by a former wife. He had Alexander, Perdiccas, and Philip, Alexander the Great's father, by his first wife, and by the other he had Archelaus, Arrhidæus, and Menelaus. He reigned twenty-four years; and soon after his death, his son Philip murdered all his brothers, and ascended the throne. Justin. 7, 4 et 9.—Diod. 14, &c.—C. Nep. et Plut. in Pelopid.——There is another king of Macedonia of the same name, but of his life few particulars are recorded in history.——A man who succeeded Dejotarus, in the kingdom of Gallogræcia. After his death it became a Roman province under Augustus. Strab. 12.——One of Alexander's officers.——Another officer, who deserted to Darius and was killed as he attempted to besiege Egypt. Curt. 8, 9.——A son of Antiochus, who withdrew himself from Macedonia, because he hated Alexander.——An officer in Alexander's cavalry. He had two brothers called Simias and Polemon. He was accused of conspiracy against the king, on account of his great intimacy with Philotas, and acquitted. Curt. 4, 13. 6, 9 8, 12.——A shepherd. Virg. Ecl. 3, 23 et 73.——A Greek writer who composed several works quoted by Athenæus.

AMYNTIANUS, an historian in the age of Antoninus, who wrote a treatise in commendation of Philip, Olympias, and Alexander.

AMYNTOR, a king of Argos, son of Phrastor. He deprived his son Phœnix of his eyes, to punish him for the violence he had offered to Clytia his concubine. Hygin. 173.—Ovid. Met. 8, 307.—Apollod. 3.—Homer. Il. 9.——A general of the Dolopes. Ovid. Met. 12, 364.——A son of Ægyptus, killed by Damone the first night of his marriage. Hygin. 170.

AMYRIS, a man of Sybaris, who consulted the oracle of Delphi concerning the probable duration of his country's prosperity, &c.

AMYRICUS CAMPUS, a plain of Thessaly. Pliny. 3.

AMYRIUS, a king by whom Cyrus was killed in a battle. Ctesias.

AMYRUS, a town of Thessaly.——A river mentioned by Val. Flacc. 2, 11.

AMYSTIS, a river of India, falling into the Ganges. Now Pattera. Arr. Indic.

AMYTHAON, a son of Cretheus king of Iolchos, by Tyro. He married Idomene, by whom he had Bias and Melampus, and a daughter called Pero-mele. After his father's death, he established himself in Messenia, with his brother Nelcus, and re-established or regulated the Olympic games. Melampus is called Amythaonius, from his father Amythaon. Virg. G. 3, 550.—Diod. 4.—Apollod. 1.—Homer. Odyss. 11.——A son of Hippasus, who assisted Priam in the Trojan war, and was killed by Lycomedes. Homer. Il. 17.

AMYTHAONIUS, a patronymic of Melampus, son of Amythaon. Virg. G. 3, 550.

AMYTIS, a daughter of Astyages, whom Cyrus married. Ctesias.——A daughter of Xerxes, who married Megabyzus, and disgraced herself by her debaucheries.

ANACES, or ANACTES, a name given to Castor and Pollux by the Athenians, on account of the regard they were supposed to have shown their city. Their festivals were called Anacæa. Plut. in Thes. Cic. de N. D. 3, 21.

ANACHARSIS, a Scythian philosopher, was the son of a Scythian chief by a native of Greece, and flourished about B. C. 600. Being early instructed in the Greek language by his mother, he became desirous of being acquainted with Greece and obtained from the king of Scythia a passage to Athens. On his arrival, in the first year of the forty-seventh Olympiad, or B. C. 592, he met with Toxaris, one of his countrymen, who conducted him to the house of Solon. When he arrived there, he desired a servant to inform his master that Anacharsis, a Scythian, was at the door, and wished to be received as his guest and friend. To this message Solon's answer was, that friendships are best formed at home; to which Anacharsis replied, then let Solon, who is at home, make me his friend, and receive me into his house. Solon struck with the propriety of the reply, immediately gave admittance to his visitor, and, finding him worthy of his confidence, honoured him with his friendship. Anacharsis, on his part, did not neglect this opportunity of possessing himself of all the wisdom which was to be learned from so excellent a master. He was introduced by Solon to the principal citizens at Athens, and was the first stranger upon whom the Athenians conferred the honour of citizenship. After the death of Solon, he left Athens, and travelled into different countries. On his return to Scythia, he attempted to introduce the civilization and religion of Greece, which brought upon him the enmity of his countrymen. Going one day into a wood, to perform sacred rites to Cybele, he was killed by an arrow revelled at him by the king's own hand. He was celebrated for a noble and manly mode of speaking, which, from his time, acquired the epithet of Scythian eloquence. He is said to have added the second hook to the anchor, and to have invented the potter's wheel. Among his ingenious sayings, the following may deserve to be mentioned. The best method of teaching a youth sobriety, is to place before his eyes a drunken man. The vine bears three kinds of fruit: the first, pleasure; the second, intoxication, the third, remorse. An ape is ridiculous by nature, a man by art and study. To an Athenian of infamous character, who reproached him with being a Scythian, he remarked, my country is indeed a disgrace to me, but you are a disgrace to your country. The epistles which bear his name, are generally supposed to be spurious.—Herod. 1, 46, 47 et 48.—Plut. in Conviv. —Cic. Tusc. 5, 32.—Strab. 7.

ANACIUM, a mountain with a temple sacred to the Anaces in Peloponnesus. Paus. 1, 21.

ANACREON, a Greek lyric poet, was born at Teos, a city on the coast of Ionia, in Lesser Asia, and flourished about 500 B. C. In the earlier part of his life, he seems to have left his native country, at the invitation of Polycrates, king of Samos, who bestowed upon him his friendship, and entertained him at his court. Here Anacreon composed his songs, inspired by wine and love. After the death of his protector, he went to Athens, where he met with the most distinguished reception from Hipparchus. The fall of the latter drove him from Athens, and probably he returned to Teos. But when Ionia revolted from Darius, he fled to Abdera, where he reached the advanced age of eighty five. According to tradition he was choked, in the act of drinking, by a grape-stone. From the few particulars that can be gathered of his life, it is evident that Anacreon was a man of various principles and debauched manners. He did not, however, unite avarice with voluptuousness; for Polycrates having presented him with four talents, which prevented him from sleeping, he returned them, observing, that though the sum was of great value, sleep was of greater value still. The city of Teos put his likenesses upon its coins; his statue was placed on the Acropolis, in Athens, and he was held in honour throughout Greece. Only a small part of his works has come down to us. Of five books, there are six-eight poems remaining under the name of Anacreon. They are, for the most part, in praise of wine, and of the appetites which have been so often and so improperly dignified by the name of love. In their kind, however, they are matchless. They abound in the happiest turns, the most appropriate imagery, and the most singular felicities of expression. The difficulty of attaining their excellencies is proved by the numberless unsuccessful imitations, unworthy of the name of Anacreontics. The measure in which Anacreon composed his poems, and which is called after him, is commonly divided into three bambuses, with a cæsura. The best editions of Anacreon are, that of Mattaire, 4to. Lond. 1725, of which only one hundred copies were printed, and the very correct one of Brunck, 12mo. Argentor. 1778, to which may be added that of Fisher, 8vo. Lipsiæ, 1793. The last greatly surpasses all the editions which have preceded it. The works of Anacreon have been very frequently rendered into English. The best translations are those of Ezekiel Moore. Poet. 1, 2. 23.—Sat 6. 11.—Ælian. V. H. 9, 4.—Cic. in Tusc. 4, 33.—Horat. Epod. 14, 20. —Plin. 7, 7.—Herod. 3, 121.

ANACTORIUM, a town of Epirus, north of Leucadia, at the mouth of the Ambracian gulf. It was founded by a Corinthian colony, and was the cause of many quarrels between the Corcyreans and Corinthians. It ceased to exist as a town, when Augustus transferred its inhabitants to Nicopolis. Anactorium occupied the place of the present Vonitza. Strab. 10.—Thucyd. 1, 55.—Plin. 4, 1. 5, 29. ——An ancient name of Miletus.

ANACT IDE, a woman of Lesbos, wantonly loved by Sappho. Ovid. Her. 15, 17.

ANADYOMENE, an exquisite painting of Venus, ascribed to Apelles, which originally adorned the temple of Æsculapius, in the island of Cos. It represented the goddess rising out of the sea, and in the act of wringing her hair. Augustus bought it, and placed it in the temple of Julius Cæsar. The lower part of it was a little defaced, and there were found no painters in Rome able to repair it. Antipater of Sidon, in the Anthology, and also other poets, have celebrated its beauty. Plin. 35, 10.—Anthol. 1, 12.

ANAGNIA, now Anagni, the capital of the Hernici in Latium, where Antony struck a medal when he divorced Octavia and married Cleopatra. It is thirty-six miles east of Rome. Virg. Æn. 7, 681.—Strab. 5.—Ital. 8, 392.

ANAGOGIA, an annual feast in honour of Venus, celebrated at Eryx, in Sicily, where she had a temple, and from which place she was said to retreat into Africa for nine days, when she was followed by all the doves in the vicinity. The return of the goddess was commemorated by a feast named Catagogia.

ANAGYRONTUM, a small village of Attica. Herod.

ANAGYRUS, a place in Attica, where a plant, called Anagyris, grew in great abundance, which emitted a fetid odour on being touched; hence the proverb Anagyrum commovi, to bring a misfortune on one's self. Strab. 9.—Plin. 27, 4

ANAITIS, a goddess of Armenia. The virgins who were consecrated to her service, esteemed themselves more dignified by public prostitution. The festivals of the deity were called Sacæum Festa; and when they were celebrated, both sexes assisted at the ceremony, and inebriated themselves to such a degree, that the whole was concluded by a scene of the greatest lasciviousness and intemperance. They were first instituted by Cyrus, when he marched against the Sacæ, and covered tables with the most exquisite dainties, that he might detain the enemy by the novelty and sweetness of food to which they were unaccustomed, and thus easily destroyed them. Strab. 11.—— Diana is also worshipped under this name by the Lydians Plin. 33, 4.

ANANIAS, an Iambic poet. Athen.

ANAPAUOMENOS, a fountain in the grove of Dodona, whose waters could kindle an extinguished torch. It always became cold at mid-day, and then gradually increasing, overflowed at midnight. Plin. 2, 103.—Mela 2, 3

ANAPHE, from φαινω to appear, one of the Sporades, north-east of Thera, that suddenly rose out of the sea, and afforded the Argonauts shelter in the midst of a storm. A temple was in consequence erected to Apollo under the name of Æglete in the island. It is now called Anapha. Apoll. Argon. 4, 1717.—Strab. 10.

ANAPHLYSTUS, a small village of Attica, near the sea called after an ancient hero of the same name, who was son of Troezen. It belonged to the tribe Antiochis. The inhabitants were said to possess a strong propensity to satire. The modern village of Anaphiso is supposed to represent the ancient Anaphlystus. Aristoph. Ran. 450. Eccles. 961.—Paus. 2, 33.—Strab. 8.

ANAPUS, a river of Epirus. Thucyd 2, 80.——Of Sicily. L. 6, 96.

ANARTES, a people of lower Pannonia. Cæs. Bell G. 6, 25

ANAS, a river of Spain, now called Guadiana. Strab. 3.

ANATOLE, one of the Horæ. Hygin. 183.——A mountain near the Ganges, where Apollo ravished a nymph called Anaxibia.

ANAUCHIDAS, a Samian wrestler. Paus. 5, 27.

ANAURUS, a river of Thessaly, near the foot of mount Pelion, where Jason lost one of his sandals, on his return to his country. The winds were said to respect the waters of this river, according to Lucan. 6, 347.—Apollon. 1 et 3.—Apollod. 1, 26.——A river at Troas near Ida. Catull.

ANAXIBIA, one of Medea's suitors, killed by Styrus. Val. Flacc. 6, 43.

ANAX, a son of Cœlus and Terra, father to Asterius, from whom Miletus has been called Anactoria. Paus. 1, 36, 7, 2.

ANAXAGORAS, succeeded his father Megapenthes on the throne of Argos. He shared the sovereign power with Bias and Melampus, who had cured the women of Argos of madness. Paus. 2, 18.——A celebrated philosopher, born at Clazomenæ, in Ionia, about B. C. 500. He inherited a considerable estate in his own country, which he relinquished to indulge his thirst for knowledge at Athens, where he applied himself to the study of eloquence and poetry. Afterwards he left Athens to attend the instructions of Anaximenes, at Miletus, under whom he made a great progress, but on returning to his native country, he found that his estate had run to waste, which he affected to consider a fortunate circumstance, as leaving him free to pursue his studies. He then removed to Athens, where he taught philosophy, and had, among numerous pupils, Euripides, the tragedian, and Pericles, the orator; to whom some have added, but rather inconsistently with chronological dates, Socrates and Themistocles. His great celebrity at length excited the jealousy and envy of his contemporaries, and brought upon him a cruel persecution. He was accused by Cleo of impiety, for teaching that the sun was an inanimate fiery substance, or burning mass of stone, herein robbing it of its divinity, and contradicting the popular opinion that the sun was Apollo, one of the greater deities. He was sentenced by his judges to death, but, through the interposition of Pericles, the sentence was commuted into banishment. When he was told of his being condemned to die, he replied with the calmness of a true philosopher, nature long ago pronounced the same sentence against me; and when a friend had intimated to him the milder punishment that had been substituted, and was expressing regret on account of his departure from Athens, he said, with a mixture of equanimity and pride, it is not I who have lost the Athenians, but the Athenians who have lost me. After his banishment, Anaxagoras passed the remainder of his time at Lampsacus, where he taught philosophy till his death, which happened in his seventy-second year, and B. C. 428. Being asked by his friends, a little before his death, whether they should carry his bones to his native city, he answered, it is unnecessary; the way to the regions below is every where alike open. The magistrates of Lampsacus, having, at the same period, sent a message, requesting to be informed in what manner they might honour his memory after his decease, he said, by ordaining that the anniversary of my death be annually observed as a holiday in all the schools of Lampsacus. His request was complied with; and the festival, which was called Anaxagoreia, continued in Lampsacus for many centuries. The inhabitants of that city farther expressed their veneration for his memory, by honouring him with a tomb and epitaph, and by erecting two altars in his name, one dedicated to Truth, and the other to Mind. Several doctrines are ascribed to Anaxagoras, which prove him to have been an attentive and judicious observer of the phenomena of nature. He taught that wind is produced by the rarefaction of the air; that the rainbow is the reflection of the solar rays from a cloud; that the moon is an opaque body inhabited like the earth; that comets are wandering stars; and that the fixed stars are in a region beyond our system. Diog. in Vit.——Plut. in Nicia et Pericl.——Cic. Acad. Q. 4, 23. Tusc. 1, 43.——A statuary of Ægina. Paus. 5, 23.——A grammarian, disciple to Zenodotus. Diog.——An orator, disciple to Socrates. Diog.——A son of Echecratus, who, with his brothers Codrus and Diodorus, destroyed Hegesias, tyrant of Ephesus.

ANAXANDER, of the family of the Heraclidæ, was son of Eurycrates, and king of Sparta. The second Messenian war began in his reign, in which Aristomenes so egregiously signalized himself. Herod. 7, 204.—Plut. in Apoph.—Paus. 3, 3, 4, 15 et 16.——A general of Megalopolis, taken by the Thebans.

ANAXANDRIDES, king of Sparta, son of Leon, reigned about B. C. 550–510, with his colleague Ariston. His first wife, whom he loved, had no children, and he was obliged by the Ephori to marry again, in order that the race of Eurysthenes might not be extinct. He became father of Cleomenes by the second wife, and, some time after, the first bore him Doricus, Leonidas, and Cleombrotus. Alexandrides was successful in war against the Tegeates. Several apophthegms of his, which evince his good sense, are recorded by Plutarch. Herod. 1, 5 et 7.—Plut. Apoph.——Paus 3, 3, &c.——A son of Theopompus. Herod. 8, 131.——A comic poet of Rhodes in the age of Philip and Alexander. He was the first who introduced scenes of gross intrigue and debauchery upon the stage. He was of such a passionate disposition, that he tore his unsuccessful compositions in pieces, or sent them as waste paper to the perfumers' shops. He composed sixty-five plays, of which ten were crowned. Some fragments of his poetry remain in Athenæus. He was starved to death, by order of the Athenians, for libelling their government. Aristot. Rhet. 3.

ANAXARCHUS, a philosopher of Abdera, one of the followers of Democritus, and the friend of Alexander. When the monarch aspired to the honours of divinity, the philosopher checked his vanity, by pointing to his finger while it bled, and exclaiming, see the blood of a mortal, not of a god. Being one day at the table of Alexander, who asked him what he thought of the feast, Anaxarchus replied, that it only wanted the head of a nobleman to be served up in a dish, in saying which, he fixed his eyes steadfastly upon Nicocreon. On the death of Alexander, this sarcasm was severely punished by Nicocreon, who caused Anaxarchus to be pounded to death in an iron mortar, and his tongue to be torn out by the roots. The philosopher endured the punishment without complaint, and biting off his tongue with his teeth, spit it in the tyrant's face. Justin. 12, 13. —Val. Max. 3, 3.—Ovid. in Ib. 571.—Plut. in Symp. 7.—Dyog. in Vitâ.—Cic in Tusc. 2, 22. ——A Theban general. Thucyd. 8, 100.

ANAXARETE, a girl of Salamis, who so arrogantly despised the addresses of Iphis, a youth of ignoble birth, that the lover hung himself at her door. She saw this sad spectacle without emotion or pity, and was changed into a stone. Ovid. Met 14, 748.

ANAXENOR, a musician, whom M Antony greatly honoured, and presented with the tribute of four cities. Strab. 14.

ANAXIAS, a Theban general. Paus. 2, 22.

ANAXIBIA, a daughter of Atreus, who became mother of seven sons and two daughters by Nestor. Apollod. 1.—Paus. 2, 29.——A daughter of Bias, brother to the physi married Pelias, king of Iolchos, by whom she had Acastus, and four daughters, Pisidice, Pelopea, Hippothoe, and Alceste. Apollod. 1, 9. She is called daughter of Dymas, by Hygin. 14.

ANAXICRATES, an Athenian archon. Paus. 10, 23

ANAXIDAMUS, succeeded his father Zeuxidamus on the throne of Sparta. Paus. 3, 7. 4, 15.

ANAXILAS and ANAXILAUS, a Messenian tyrant of Rhegium, descended from Alcidamas, who had brought a Grecian colony into Sicily. He took Zancle, and was so mild and popular during his reign, that when he died, 476 B. C. he left his infant son to the care of one of his servants, and the citizens chose rather to obey a slave than revolt from their benevolent sovereign's children. Justin. 3, 2.—Paus 4, 23. 5, 26.—Thucyd. 6, 5.—Herod 6, 23. 7, 167.——A magician of Larissa, banished from Italy by Augustus.——A Pythagorean philosopher.——A physician. Plin. 29, 1.——An historian, who began his history with bitter invectives against former writers. Dionys. Hal. 1.——A Lacedæmonian. Plut in Alcib.——A comic writer, about the 100th Olympiad.

ANAXILIDES, wrote some treatises concerning philosophers, and mentioned that Pluto's mother became pregnant by a phantom of the god Apollo, from which circumstance her son was called the prince of wisdom. Dyog in Plut.

ANAXIMANDER, a philosopher of Miletus, and the founder of the Ionic sect, was the disciple of Thales. He cultivated with considerable success the sciences of mathematics and astronomy. He wrote a compendium of geography, and delineated a map of the earth, or geographical tables, in which he marked the divisions of land and water. He explained the obliquity of the ecliptic, and erected a gnomon, or sun-dial, at Lacedæmon. He believed that the stars are globular collections of fire and air, carried round with the spheres in which they are placed; that the sun occupies the highest place in the heavens, the moon the next, and the planets and fixed stars the lowest; that the earth is placed in the midst of the universe as in a common centre; and that the sun is twenty-eight times larger than the earth. He died in the 64th year of his age, B C. 547. Cic. Acad. Quæst. 4, 37.—Diu. 1, 50. N. D. 1, 10.—Dyog. in vit.—Plin. 2, 79.—Plut. Ph. He had a son who bore his name. Strab. 1.

ANAXIMENES, a philosopher of Miletus, the disciple and successor of Anaximander, flourished about B. C. 550. He said that air was the cause of every created being, and a self-existent divinity; that all minds are air; that fire, water, and earth, proceed from it, by rarefaction, or condensation; that the sun and moon are fiery bodies, whose form is that of a circular plate. He considered the earth as a plain, and the heavens as a solid concave sphere, on which the stars were fixed like nails, an opinion prevalent at that time, and from which originated the proverb, τὸ ἀστρον ἐμπεφυκεναι, What of the heavens should fall? to which Horace has alluded, Od. 3, 2, 7. He died 501 years B. C. Cic. Acad. Quæst. 4, 37. De N. D. 1, 10.—Plut. Ph.—Plin. 2, 76.——A native of Lampsacus, son of Aristocles. He was pupil to Diogenes the Cynic, and preceptor to Alexander the Great, of whose life, and that of Philip, he wrote the history. When Alexander, in a fit of anger threatened to put to death all the inhabitants of Lampsacus, because they had maintained [illegible] by his countrymen to appease the king, who, as soon as he saw him, swore he would not grant the favour he was going to ask. Upon this, Anaximenes begged the king to destroy the city, and enslave the inhabitants, and by this artful request the city of Lampsacus was saved from destruction. Besides the life of Philip and his son, he wrote a history of Greece, in twelve books, all now lost. His nephew bore the same name, and wrote an account of ancient paintings. Paus. 6, 18.—Val. Max. 7, 3.—Dyog. in Vit.

ANAXIPOLIS, a comic poet of Thasos. Plut. 14, 14.——A writer on agriculture, likewise of Thasos.

ANAXIPPUS, a comic writer in the age of Demetrius. He used to say, that philosophers were like only feather speeches, but fools in their actions. Athen.

ANAXIPHRON, a daughter of Coronus, who married Epeus. Paus. 5, 1.

ANAXIS, a Bœotian historian, who wrote a history down to the age of Philip son of Amyntas. Diod. 25.

ANAXO, a virgin of Troezene, carried away by Theseus. Plut. in Thes.——A daughter of Alceus and Hipponome, who married Electryon king of Thebes, and became mother of Alcmena. Apollod. 2, 9 et 10.

ANAZARBUS, now Ain-Zerbeh, a city of Cilicia Propria, situated on the banks of the river Pyramus, at some distance from the sea. It was twice destroyed by an earthquake, and twice repaired by the Roman emperors. When Cilicia was divided into two provinces, under the younger Theodosius, Anazarbus was made the capital of the eastern province, Tarsus being the metropolis of the western. In the neighbourhood of this city a battle was fought in 113?, between the Saracens and Christians, in which the latter were defeated with great slaughter. Anazarbus had the honour of giving birth to Dioscorides and Appian.

ANCÆUS, the son of Lycurgus and Antinoe, was in the expedition of the Argonauts. He was at the chase of the Calydonian boar, in which he perished. Hygin. 173 et 248.—Ovid. Met 8.—— The son of Neptune and Astypalæa. He went with the Argonauts, and succeeded Tiphis as pilot of the ship Argo. He reigned in Ionia, where he hand, and called the prophet to convince him of his falsehood; when the servant, yet firm in his prediction, uttered this well-known proverb,

Πολλα μεταξυ πελας κυλικος και χειλεος ακρου,
Multa cadunt inter calicem supremaque labra.

At that very moment Ancæus was told that a wild boar had entered his vineyard; upon which, he threw down the cup, and ran to drive away the wild beast. He was killed in the attempt.

ANCALITES, a people of Britain, in the neighbourhood of the Atrebatii. Some authors suppose them to have been the shepherds and herdsmen of the Atrebatii, and to have enjoyed the fine pastures of Buckinghamshire and Oxfordshire. The Romans conquered this people and some others in their vicinity, with the government of which they rewarded the British king of the Dobuni, for his ready acknowledgment of their power, and his faithful adherence to their interests. Cæs. Bell. G. 5, 21.

ANCARIUS, a god of the Jews. Vid. Anchialus.

ANCHARIA, a family of Rome.——The name of Octavia's mother. Plut. in Anton.

ANCHARIUS, a noble Roman killed by the partizans of Marius during his civil wars with Sylla Plut. in Mario.

ANCHEMÓLUS, son of Rhœtus, king of the Marrubii, in Italy, ravished his mother-in-law, Casperia, for which he was expelled by his father. He fled to Turnus, and was killed by Pallas, son of Evander, in the wars of Æneas against the Latins. Virg. Æn. 10. 389.

ANCHESITES, a wind which blows from Anchiva, a harbour of Epirus. Cic. ad Attic. 7, 1.—Dionys. Hal.

ANCHESMUS, a mountain of Attica, with a statue of Jupiter on its summit. Now Agios Georgios, or Mount St George.

ANCHIÁLE, and ANCHILIA, a city on the sea-coast of Cilicia. It was built, with its neighbouring city Tarsus, by Sardanapalus, the last of the Assyrian kings, who was buried here, and had a statue with an inscription in the Syrian language, denoting the extreme intemperance, extravagance, and folly of his life. Strab. 14.—Plin. 5, 27.—Diod. 2

ANCHIALUS, a famous astrologer.——A Greek killed by Hector. Homer. Il. 5. 609.——A great warrior, father of Mentes.——One of the Phæacians. Homer. Odyss.——A god of the Jews, as some suppose, in Martial's epigrams, 11, 95.——A city in Thrace.——Another in Epirus.

ANCHIMOLIUS, a Spartan general, sent against the Pisistratidæ, and killed in the expedition. Herod. 5. 63.——A son of Rhœtus. [Vid. Anchemolus.]

ANCHINOË, a daughter of Nilus, and wife of Belus. Apollod. 2, 1.

ANCHION. Vid. Chion.

ANCHISÆ PORTUS, a name given to the port of Onchasmus in Epirus, by the Romans.

ANCHISE, a city of Italy. Dionys. Hal.

ANCHISES, a son of Capys by Themis, daughter of Ilus. He was of such a beautiful complexion, that Venus came down from heaven on mount Ida, in the form of a nymph, to enjoy his company The goddess became pregnant, and forbade Anchises ever to mention the favours he had received, on pain of being struck with thunder. The child which Venus brought forth, was called Æneas; he was educated as soon as born by the nymphs of Ida, and when of a proper age, was intrusted to the care of Chiron the centaur. When Troy was taken, Anchises was become so infirm that Æneas, to whom the Greeks permitted to take away whatever he esteemed most, carried him through the flames upon his shoulders, and thus saved his life. He accompanied his son in his voyage towards Italy, and died in Sicily in the eighteenth year of his age. He was buried on mount Eryx by Æneas and Acestes king of the country, and the anniversary of his death was afterwards celebrated by his son and the Trojans on his tomb. Some authors have maintained, that Anchises had forgot the injunctions of Venus, and boasted at a feast, that he enjoyed her favours on mount Ida, upon which he was killed with thunder. Others say, that the wounds he received from the thunder were not mortal, and that they only weakened and disfigured his body. Virgil, in the fifth book of the Æneid, introduces him in the Elysian fields, relating to his son the fates that were to attend him, and the fortune of his descendants, the Romans. [Vid. Æneas.] Virg. Æn. 1, 2, &c.—Hygin. 94, 254, 260, 270.—Hesiod. Theog. 1010.—Apollod. 3.—Ovid. Fast. 4, 34.—Homer. Il. 20. et Hymn. in Vener.—Xenoph. Cynег. 1.—Dionys. Hal. de Antiq. Rom. 1.——Pausanias, 8, 12, says that Anchises was buried on a mountain in Arcadia, which from him has been called Anchisia.——An Athenian archon. Dionys. Hal. 8.

ANCHISIA, a mountain of Arcadia, at the bottom of which is a monument of Anchises. Paus. 8, 12 et 13.

ANCHISIÁDES, a patronymic of Æneas, as being son of Anchises. Virg. Æn. 6, 318, &c.

ANCHOE, a place near the mouth of the Cephisus, in Bœotia, where there is a lake of the same name. Strab.

ANCHÔRA, a fortified place in Galatia.

ANCHÚRUS, a son of Midas king of Phrygia, who sacrificed himself for the good of his country, when the earth had opened and swallowed up many buildings. The oracle had been consulted, and gave for answer, that the gulf would never close, if Midas did not throw into it whatever he had most precious. Though the king had parted with many things of immense value, yet the gulf continued open, till Anchurus, thinking himself the most precious of his father's possessions, took a tender leave of his wife and family, and leaped into the earth, which closed immediately over his head. Midas erected there an altar of stones to Jupiter, and that altar was the first object which he turned into gold, when he had received his fatal gift from the gods. This unpolished tumpot gold existed still in the age of Plutarch. Plut. in Parall.

ANCILE, and ANCYLE, a sacred shield, which, according to Roman authors, fell from heaven in the reign of Numa, when the Roman people laboured under a pestilence. Upon the preservation of this shield depended the fate of the Roman empire, and therefore Numa ordered eleven of the same size and form to be made, that if ever any attempt was made to carry them away, the plunderer might find it difficult to distinguish the true one. They were made with such exactness, that the king promised Veterius Mamurius, the artist, whatever reward he desired. [Vid. Mamurius.] They were kept in the temple of Vesta, and an order of priests was chosen to watch over their safety. These priests were called Salii, and were twelve in number; they carried every year, on the first of March, the shields in a solemn procession round the walls of Rome, dancing and singing praises to the god Mars. This sacred festival continued three days, during which every important business was stopped. It was deemed unfortunate to be married on those days, or to undertake any expedition; and Tacitus in Hist. 1. has attributed the unsuccessful campaign of the emperor Otho against Vitellius, to his leaving Rome during the celebration of the Ancyliorum festum. These two verses of Ovid explain the origin of the word Ancyle, which is applied to these shields:

Idque ancyle vocat, quod ab omni parte recisum est,
Quemque notes oculis, angulus omnis abest.—
Fast 3, 377, &c.——Varro de L. L. 5, 6.—Vit. Mar. 1, 1.—Juv. 2, 124.—Plut. in Num.—Virg. Æn. 8, 664.—Dionys. Hal. 2.—Liv 1, 20.

ANCON and ANCONA, a town of Picenum, about twenty miles from Senagallica. It is supposed to derive its name from the angular form of the promontory on which it stands. The foundation of Ancona is ascribed to the Syracusans. It is mentioned in Roman history, as a naval station of some importance in the wars with the Illyrians, and was occupied by Cæsar soon after his passage of the Rubicon. The present port was made, or greatly improved, by Trajan; and the honorary arch is still standing, which the gratitude of the citizens raised to their benefactor. At some distance from Ancona is the famous chapel of Loretto, supposed by monkish historians to have been brought through the air by angels, August 10th, A. D. 1291, from Judæa, where it was a cottage, inhabited by the virgin Mary. The reputed sanctity of the place has often brought 100,000 pilgrims in one day to Loretto. Plin. 3, 13.—Lucan. 2, 402.—Jul. 3, 437.—Mela 2, 4.—Juv. 4, 40.

ANCUS MARTIUS, the fourth king of Rome, was grandson to Numa, by his daughter. His name Ancus was derived from the Greek αγκος, because he had a crooked arm which he could not stretch out to its full length. He waged a successful war against the Latins, Veientes, Fidenates, Volsci, and Sabines, and joined mount Janiculum to the city by a bridge, and inclosed mount Martius and the Aventine within the walls of the city. He extended the confines of the Roman territories to the sea, where he built the town of Ostia, at the mouth of the Tiber. He inherited the valour of Romulus with the moderation of Numa. He died B. C. 616, after a reign of twenty-four years, and was succeeded by Tarquin the elder. Dionys. Hal. 3, 9.—Liv. 1, 32, &c.—Flor. 1 4.—Virg. Æn. 6, 815.

ANCYRA, a city of Galatia, near the river Halys. Pausanias states, that it derived its name from an anchor which was found here, and preserved in the temple of Jupiter. This city was enlarged and ornamented by Augustus, and, under Nero, was called the metropolis of Galatia. It is now named by the Turks Angori, and by the Europeans Angora, and is famous for the fleeces of its goats. In the neighbourhood of this place Bajazet was conquered and made prisoner by Timur the Great.

ANCYRÆ, a town of Sicily.——A town of Phrygia. Paus. 1.

ANDA, a city of Africa. Polyb.

ANDABATÆ, from ανα βαινω, to ascend, a term applied to those gladiators who fought in chariots with their eyes blind-folded, and having almost all their face concealed by a peculiar kind of helmet. Hence the phrase Ante aciarum more, which denotes rashness and want of consideration. Cic. ad Fam. 7, 10.

ANDANIA, a city of Arcadia, where Aristomenes was educated. It derived its name from a gulf in its vicinity. Paus. 4, 1 et 33.

ANDEGAVI, ANDECAVI, or ANDES, a people of Gaul, east of the Namnetes, and north of the Liger, or Loire. Cæs. Bell. G. 2, 35.

ANDEGAVIA, a country of Gaul, near the Turones and the ocean. Tacit. Ann. 3, 41.

ANDES a village of Italy, near Mantua, immortal as the birth-place of Virgil.

ANDOCIDES, an Athenian orator, son of Leogoras. He lived in the age of Socrates the philosopher, and was intimate with the most illustrious men of his age. He was often banished, but his dexterity always restored him to favour. Plutarch has written his life in 10 Orat. Four of his orations are extant.

ANDOMADUNUM, a town in Gaul, now Langres.

ANDOMATIS, a river of India, falling into the Ganges. Arrian.

ANDRÆMON, the father of Thoas, married Gorge daughter of Œneus, whom he succeeded on the throne of Calydon. He died at Amphissa, where his tomb was still to be seen in the age of the Antonines. Hygin. 97.—Paus. 10, 38.—Homer Il. 2 et 14.—Apollod. 1, 19 et 21.——The husband of Dryope, and father of Thoas. Ovid. Met. 9, 333, &c.

ANDRAGATHUS, a tyrant, defeated by Gratian, A. D. 383, &c.

ANDRAGATHUS, a man bribed by Lysimachus to betray his country, &c. Polyæn. 4, 12.

ANDRAGORAS, a man who died a sudden death. Mart. 4, 6, 53.

ANDRAMITTIUM. Vid. Adramyttium.

ANDRAMYLES, a king of Lydia, who castrated women, and made use of them as eunuchs. Athen. 6.

ANDREAS, a statuary of Argos. Paus. 6, 16.——A man of Panormum, who wrote an account of all the remarkable events that had happened in Sicily. Athen.——A son of Peneus. Part of Greece was called Andreis after him. Paus. 9, 34, &c.

ANDRICLUS, a mountain of Cilicia. Strab. 14.——A river of Troas, falling into the Scamander. Plin. 5, 27.

ANDRISCUS, a man who wrote a history of Naxos. Athen. 1.——A worthless person called Pseudophilippus, on account of the likeness of his features to king Philip. He incited the Macedonians to revolt against Rome, and was conquered and led in triumph by Metellus, 152 B. C. Flor. 2, 14.

ANDROBIUS, a famous painter. Plin. 35, 11.

ANDROCLEA, a daughter of Antipœnus of Thebes. She, with her sister Alcida, sacrificed herself in the service of her country, when the oracle had promised the victory to her countrymen, who were engaged in a war against Orchomenos, if any one of noble birth devoted himself for the glory of his nation. Antipœnus refused to do it, and his daughters cheerfully accepted it, and received great honours after death. Hercules, who fought on the side of Thebes, dedicated to them the image of a lion in the temple of Diana. Paus. 9, 17.

ANDROCLES, a son of Phintas, who reigned in Messenia. Paus. 4, 5, &c.——A man who wrote a history of Cyprus.

ANDROCLIDES, a noble Theban who defended the democratical, against the encroachments of the oligarchical, power. He was killed by one of his enemies.——A sophist in the age of Aurelius, who gave an account of philosophers.

ANDROCLUS, a son of Codrus, who reigned in Ionia, and took Ephesus and Samos. Paus. 7, 2.

——A Dacian slave, recognised in the Circus Maximus by a lion, which he had formerly relieved when wounded in the woods. Gellius 5, 14.—Ælian. H. An 7 48.—Seneca de Benef. 2, 19.

ANDROCYDES, a physician, who wrote the following letter to Alexander:—"Vinum potatorum, rex, memento te bibere sanguinem terræ, acuti venenum est hominicidæ, sic et vinum." Plin. 14,5.

ANDRODAMUS. Vid. Andromadas.

ANDRÓDUS. Vid. Androcles.

ANDRÓGEOS, a Greek, killed by Æneas and his friends, whom he took to be his countrymen. Virg. Æn. 2, 371.

ANDRÓGEUS, son of Minos and Pasiphae, was famous for his skill in wrestling. He overcame every antagonist at Athens, and became such a favourite of the people, and of the Pallantides, the apparent heirs to the throne, that Ægeus king of the country grew jealous of his popularity, and caused him to be assassinated as he was going to Thebes. Some say that he was killed by the wild bull of Marathon. Minos declared war against Athens to revenge the death of his son, and peace was at last re-established on condition that Ægeus sent yearly seven boys and seven girls from Athens to Crete to be devoured by the Minotaur. [Vid Minotaurus.] The Athenians established festivals by order of Minos, in honor of his son, and called them Androgeia. Hygin. 41.—Diod. 4.—Virg. Æn. 6, 20.—Paus. 1, 1 et 27.—Apollod. 2, 5, 3, 1 et 15.—Plut. in Thes.—Catull. 62, 77.

ANDROGYNÆ, a fabulous nation of Africa, beyond the Nasamones. Every one of them bore the characteristics of the male and female sex; and one of their breasts was that of a man, and the other that of a woman. Lucret. 5, 837.—Lu. 27, 11.—Aul. Gell. 9, 4.—Plin. 7, 2.

ANDROMACHE, daughter of Eetion, king of Thebes in Cilicia, married Hector, son of Priam, king of Troy, by whom she had Astyanax. She was so fond of her husband, that she even fed his horses with her own hand. During the Trojan war, she remained at home employed in her domestic concerns. Her parting with Hector, who was going to a battle, in which he perished, has always been deemed the best, most tender, and pathetic of all the passages in Homer's Iliad. She received the news of her husband's death with extreme sorrow, and after the taking of Troy, she had the misfortune to see her only son Astyanax, after she had saved him from the flames, thrown headlong from the walls of the city, by the hands of the man whose father had killed her husband. Senec. in Troad.) Andromache in the division of the prisoners by the Greeks, fell to the share of Neoptolemus, who treated her as his wife, and carried her to Epirus. He had by her three sons, Molossus, Pielus, and Pergamus, and afterwards repudiated her. After this divorce she married Helenus the son of Priam, who, as herself, was a captive of Pyrrhus, and by him she had Cestrinus. She reigned with her husband over part of the country, and she received there Æneas and his followers, on their way to Italy. Some say that Astyanax was killed by Ulysses, and Euripides says that Menelaus put him to death. Homer. Il. 6, 22 et 24.—Q. Calab. 13.—Virg. Æn. 3, 486.—Hygin. 123.—Dares Phryg.—Ovid. Am. 1, 9, 35. Trist. 5, 6, 43.—Apollod. 3, 12.—Paus. 1, 11, 10, 25.——The title of a tragedy written by Ennius. Cic. Div. 1, 13.

ANDROMACHIDÆ, a nation who presented to their king all the virgins who were of nubile years, and permitted him to use them as he pleased.

ANDROMACHUS, an opulent person of Sicily, father to the historian Timæus. Diod. 16. He assisted Timoleon in recovering the liberty of the Syracusans.——A general of Alexander, to whom Parmenio gave the government of Syria. He was burnt alive by the Samaritans. Curt. 4, 5 et 8.—A brother-in-law of Seleucus Callinicus.——A traitor who discovered to the Parthians all the measures of Crassus, and, on being chosen guide, led the Roman army into a situation whence there was no mode of escape.——A poet of Byzantium.——A physician of Crete in the age of Nero. He invented theriaca, which he described in some elegiac verses.——A sophist of Naples, in the age of Diocletian.

ANDROMADAS, or ANDRODAMUS, a native of Rhegium, who made laws for the people of Chalcis in Macedonia. Aristot.

ANDRÓMEDA, a daughter of Cepheus king of Æthiopia, by Cassiope. She was promised in marriage to Phineus, her uncle, when Neptune inundated the kingdom, and sent a sea-monster to ravage the country, because Cassiope had boasted herself fairer than Juno and the Nereides. The oracle of Jupiter Ammon was consulted, and nothing could stop the resentment of Neptune, if Andromeda was not exposed to the sea-monster. She was accordingly tied naked on a rock, and at the moment that the monster was going to devour her, Perseus, who returned through the air from the conquest of the Gorgons, saw her, and was captivated with her beauty. He promised to deliver her and destroy the monster, if he received her in marriage as a reward for his trouble. Cepheus consented, and Perseus changed the sea-monster into a rock, by showing him Medusa's head, and untied Andromeda, and married her. He had by her many children, among whom were Sthenelus, Ancæus, and Electryon. The marriage of Andromeda with Perseus was opposed by Phineus, and after a bloody battle, was changed into a stone by Perseus. Some say that Minerva made Andromeda a constellation in heaven after her death. [Vid. Medusa, Perseus.] Hygin. 64.—Cic. de Nat. D. 2, 43.—Apollod. 2, 4.—Manil. 5, 533.—Propert. 3, 21.——According to Pliny, 5, 31, it was at Joppa in Judea that Andromeda was tied on a rock. He mentions that the skeleton of the huge sea-monster to whom she had been exposed, was brought to Rome by Scaurus, and carefully preserved. The table of Andromeda and the sea-monster has been explained, by supposing that she was courted by the captain of a ship, who attempted to carry her away, but was prevented by the interposition of another more successful lover.

ANDRON, an Argive, who travelled all over the deserts of Libya without drink. Aristot. de Ebriet. 1.——A man set over the citadel of Syracuse by Dionysius. Hermocrates advised him to seize it and revolt from the tyrant, which he resolved to do. The tyrant put him to death for not discovering that Hermocrates had incited him to rebellion. Polyæn. 5, 2.——A man of Halicarnassus, who composed historical works, particularly a valuable genealogy, now lost, but often quoted by Diogenes and others. Plut. in Thes.——A native of Ephesus, who wrote an account of the seven wise men of Greece. Diog.——A man of Argos.——Another of Alexandria, &c.——Apollon. Hist. Mirab. 15.—Athen.—Aristot de Eorist.

ANDRONICUS LIVIUS. Vid. Livius.

ANDRONICUS, a peripatetic philosopher of Rhodes, who flourished fifty-nine years B. C. He was the first who published and revised the works of Aristotle and Theophrastus. His Periphrasis is extant, the best edition of which is that of Hudsius, 8vo. L. Bat. 1717. Plut. in Syll.——A Latin poet in the age of Cæsar.——A Latin grammarian, whose life Suetonius has written.——A king of Lydia, surnamed Alpyus.——One of Alexander's officers.——One of the officers of Antiochus Epiphanes.——A Greek architect, who built the famous octagonal temple of the winds at Athens, and was the inventor of the weathercock.

ANDROPHAGI, a savage nation of European Scythia. Herod. 4, 18, et 106.

ANDROPOMPUS, a Theban, who killed Xanthus in single combat, by fraud. Paus. 2, 18.

ANDROS, an island in the Ægean Sea, known by the different names of Epagrys, Antandros, Lasia, Cauros, Hydrussa, Nonagria. Its chief town was called Andros. It had a harbour, near which Bacchus had a temple, with a fountain, whose waters, during the ides of January, tasted like wine. It received the name of Andros, from Andros, son of Anius, one of its kings, who lived in the time of the Trojan war. It is now called Andro. Ovid. Met. 13, 648.—Virg. Æn. 3, 80.—Juv. 3, 70.—Plin. 2, 103.—Mela 1 et 2.

ANDROSTHENES, one of Alexander's generals, sent with a ship on the coast of Arabia Arrian. 7, 10.—Strab. 16.——A governor of Thessaly, who favoured the interest of Pompey. He was conquered by J. Cæsar. Cæs. Bell. Civ. 3, 80.——A statuary of Thebes, who was engaged in beautifying the temple of Delphi Paus. 10, 10.——A geographer in the age of Alexander. Theophr. de Caus. Plant. 3, 7.

ANDROTION, a Greek, who wrote a history of Attica, and a treatise on agriculture. Plin.—Paus. 10, 8.—Ælian V. H. 8, 10.

ANELONTIS, a river near Colophon. Paus. 8, 28.

ANEMO, or ANIO, a river near Rome, worshipped as a god. Cic. Nat. D. 3, 20

ANEMOREA, or ANEMOLEA, a city of Phocis in the immediate vicinity of Hyampolis. Homer. Il. 2, 521.—Strab. 9.

ANEMONA, a village of Arcadia. Paus. 8, 35.

ANERASTUS, a king of Gaul.

ANETOR, a native of Phocis, who kept the sheep of Peleus. Ovid. Met. 11, 318.

ANFINOMUS and ANASIAS, rather Amphinomus; which see.

ANGELIA, a daughter of Mercury.

ANGELION, a statuary, who made Apollo's statue at Delphi. Paus. 2, 32.

ANGELUS, a son of Neptune, born in Chios, of a nymph whose name is unknown. Paus. 7, 4

ANGITES, a river of Thrace, rising in the mountains north of the Edones, and falling into the Strymon above Amphipolis. Now Anghistu. Herod. 7, 113.

ANGLES, or ANGLI, a German nation, originally a branch of the Suevi, who, after various migrations, settled in that part of Denmark and the Duchy of Slesswick which is still called Anger, and of which, the city of Flensbourg is the capital. This is the nation which, according to Rapin and many other writers, gave the name of English to the subjects of Egbert, early in the ninth century. Tacit. Germ. 40.

ANGRUS, a river of Illyricum, flowing in a northern direction through the Triballic plain, and uniting with the Bronguas, which joins the Danube. Herod. 4, 49.

ANGUITIA, a wood in the country of the Marsi, between the lake Fucinus and Alba. Serpents, it is said, could not injure the inhabitants, because they were descended from Circe, whose power over those venomous creatures has been much celebrated. Sil. 8.—Virg. Æn. 7, 759.

ANIA, a Roman widow, celebrated for her beauty. One of her friends advised her to marry again. "No," said she, "if I marry a man as affectionate as my first husband, I shall be apprehensive for his death; and if he is bad, why have him, after such a kind and indulgent one?"

ANICETUS, a son of Hercules, by Hebe the goddess of youth. Apollod. 2.——A freedman who directed the education of Nero, and became the instrument of his crimes. Suet. in Ner.

ANICIA, a family at Rome, which, in the flourishing times of the republic, produced many brave and illustrious citizens.——A relation of Atticus. C. Nepos ANICIUM, a town of Gaul. Cæs. Bell. G. ii, 7.

ANICIUS GALLUS triumphed over the Illyrians and their king Genthius, and was proprætor of Rome, A. U. C 585.——A consul with Corn. Cethegus, A. U. C. 592. During his consulship or that of a consul of the same name, there was so plentiful a vintage, that Aciannum vinum afterwards became expressive of superior excellence. Cic. Brut 83.——Probus, a Roman consul in the fourth century, famous for his humanity.

ANIGRUS, a river of Thessaly, the waters of which were rendered unwholesome from the circumstance of the Centaurs having washed their wounds in them after their battle with Hercules. The nymphs of this river were called Anigriades, and it was pretended, that if any person who had a complaint of the skin offered a sacrifice to them, and afterwards swam over the river, he would be cured. The modern name of the Anagrus is Sideno. Paus. 5, 5.

ANIO and ANIEN, now Teverone, a river of Italy, rising in the Apennines, and falling into the river Tyber, about five miles north of Rome. It receives its name, as some suppose, from Anius, a king of Etruria, who drowned himself there when he could not recover his daughter, who had been carried away. Stat. Sylv. 3, 20.—Virg. Æn. 7, 683.—Strab. 5.—Horat. 1, 7, 13.—Plut. de Fort. Rom.

ANITORGIS, a city of Spain, near which a battle was fought between Asdrubal and the Scipios. Liv. 25, 33.

ANIUS, son of Apollo and Rhea, was king of Delos, and father of Andrus. He had by Dorippe three daughters, Eno, Sperno, and Elais, to whom Bacchus had given the power of changing whatever they pleased into wine, corn, and oil. When Agamemnon went to the Trojan war, he wished to carry them with him to supply his army with provisions; but they complained to Bacchus, who changed them into doves. Ovid. Met. 13, 644.—Dionys. Hal. 1.—Diod. 5.—Virg. Æn. 3, 80.

ANNA, a goddess, in whose honour the Romans instituted festivals. She was, according to some, Anna the daughter of Belus and sister of Dido, who, after her sister's death, fled from Carthage, which Iarbas had besieged, and came to Italy, where Æneas met her as he walked on the banks of the Tiber, and gave her an honourable reception, for the kindnesses she had shown him when he was at Carthage. Lavinia, the wife of Æneas, was jealous of the tender treatment which was shown to Anna, and meditated her ruin. Anna was apprized of this by her sister in a dream, and she fled to the river Numicus, of which she became a deity, and ordered the inhabitants of the country to call her Anna Perenna, because she would remain for ever under the waters. Her festivals were performed with many rejoicings; and the females often, in the midst of their cheerfulness, forgot their natural decency, probably to commemorate the intrigues which Anna is said to have carried on with the god of war, by assuming the dress of Minerva. They were introduced into Rome, and celebrated the 15th of March. The Romans generally sacrificed to her, to obtain a long and happy life: and hence the words Annare and Perennare. Some have supposed Anna to be the moon, quia mensibus impetat annum; others call her Themis, or Io, the daughter of Inachus, and sometimes Maia. Another more received opinion maintains, that Anna was an old industrious woman of Bovillæ, who, when the Roman populace had fled from the city to mount Sacer, brought them cakes every day, for which kind treatment the Romans, when a reconciliation was effected, decreed immortal honours to her, whom they called Perenna, ab perenni datæ cultus, and who, as they suppose, was become one of their deities. Ovid. Fast. 3, 653, &c.—Sil. 8, 79.—Virg. Æn. 4, 9, 20, 421 et 500.—Martial. 4, 64, 16.

ANNA COMMENA, daughter of Alexus Comnenus emperor of Constantinople, and celebrated for the Greek history which she has written, in which, with great elegance and spirit, though often with partiality, she records the events which distinguished her father's reign.

ANNÆUS, the name of a family at Rome, to which belonged Lucanus, Seneca, Florus, &c.

ANNALES, a chronological history which gives an account of all the important events of every year in a state, without entering into the causes which produced them. The Annals of Tacitus may be considered in this light. In the first ages of Rome, the writing of the annals was one of the duties and privileges of the high-priest, whence they have been called Annales Maximi, from the priest Pontifex Maximus, who consecrated them, and gave them as truly genuine and authentic.

ANNALIS LEX, settled the age at which, among the Romans, a citizen should be eligible to exercise any office of state. This law originated in Athens, and was introduced in Rome by the tribune L. Villius, who from that circumstance obtained for himself and posterity the surname of Annalis. No man could be a knight before eighteen years of age, nor be invested with the consular power before he had arrived to his twenty-fifth year.

ANNIANUS, a poet in the age of Trajan.

ANNIBAL, a celebrated Carthaginian general, son of Amilcar. He was educated in his father's camp, and inured from his early years to the labours of the field. He passed into Spain when 19 years old, and, at the request of his father, took a solemn oath he never would be at peace with the Romans. After his father's death, he was appointed over the cavalry in Spain; and some time after, upon the death of Asdrubal, he was invested with the command of all the armies of Carthage, though not yet in the twenty-fifth year of his age. In three years of continual success, he subdued all the nations of Spain which opposed the Carthaginian power, and took Saguntum after a siege of eight months. This city was in alliance with the Romans, and its fall was the cause of the second Punic war, which Annibal prepared to support with all the courage and prudence of a consummate general. He levied three large armies, one of which he sent to Africa, he left another in Spain, and marched at the head of the third towards Italy, over the Pyrenees, the Rhone, and the Alps, a difficult march of above a thousand miles, which he effected in the space of five months. This army some have calculated at twenty thousand foot and six thousand horse; others say that it consisted of one hundred thousand foot and twenty thousand horse. Liv. 21, 38. After gaining the top of the Alps, which were deemed almost inaccessible, and which had never been passed over before him but by Hercules, he conquered the uncivilized inhabitants that opposed his passage, and after the amazing loss of thirty thousand men, made his way so easy, by softening the rocks with fire and vinegar, that even his elephants descended the mountains without danger or difficulty, where a man, disencumbered of his arms, could not walk before in safety. It is supposed by Holstenius, D'Anville, and others, that Annibal passed into Italy over the Cottian Alps. It is maintained, however, by General Melville, M. de Luc, and the author of "A Dissertation on the Passage of Annibal over the Alps," that he crossed by the Little Saint Bernard. In the silence of ancient historians on this subject, it is by no means clear over what part of the Alps Annibal effected his passage, and some circumstances which are said to have attended it are still more doubtful. The manner in which he levelled some of the most inaccessible heights, splitting the rocks by means of fire, and afterwards pouring on quantities of vinegar, which are said to have softened and crumbled them, rests entirely upon the authority of Livy, supported by a complimentary and extravagant line of Juvenal. Annibal was opposed by the Romans as soon as he entered Italy, and after he had defeated P. Corn. Scipio and Sempronius, near the Rhone, the Po, and the Trebia, he crossed the Apennines, and invaded Etruria. He defeated the army of the consul Flaminius near the lake Trasimenus, and soon after met the two consuls, C. Terentius and L. Æmilius, at Cannæ. His army consisted of forty thousand foot and ten thousand horse, when he engaged the Romans at the celebrated battle of Cannæ. The slaughter was so great, that no less than forty thousand Romans were killed, and the conqueror made a bridge with the dead carcases; and, as a sign of his victory, he sent to Carthage three bushels of gold rings which had been taken from 5631 Roman knights slain in the battle. Had Annibal, immediately after the battle, according to the advice of Maharbal, marched his army to the gates of Rome, it must have yielded amidst the general consternation, if we believe the opinions of some writers. His delay, however, gave the enemy spirit and boldness, and when at last he approached the walls, he was informed that the piece of ground on which his army then stood, was selling at a high price in the Roman forum. After hovering for some time round the city, he retired to Capua, where the Carthaginian soldiers soon forgot to conquer, in the pleasures and riot of this luxurious city. From that circumstance it has been said, and with propriety, that Capua was a Cannæ to Annibal. After the battle of Cannæ, the Romans became more cautious, and when the dictator Fabius Maximus had defied the artifice as well as the valour of Annibal, they began to look for better times. Marcellus, who succeeded Fabius in the field, first taught the Romans that Annibal was not invincible. After many important debates in the senate, it was decreed that war should be carried into Africa, to remove Annibal from the gates of Rome; and Scipio, who was the first proposer of the plan, was empowered to put it into execution. When Carthage saw the enemy on her coasts, she recalled Annibal from Italy; and that great general is said to have left, with tears in his eyes, a country, which during sixteen years he had kept under continual alarms, and which he could almost call his own. He and Scipio met near Carthage, and after a parley, in which neither would give the preference to his enemy, they determined to come to a general engagement. The battle was fought near Zama: Scipio made a great slaughter of the enemy, twenty thousand were killed and the same number made prisoners. Annibal, after he had lost the day, fled to Adrumetum. Soon after this decisive battle, the Romans granted peace to Carthage, on hard conditions, and afterwards Annibal, who was jealous and apprehensive of the Roman power, fled to Syria, to king Antiochus, whom he advised to make war against Rome, and lead an army into the heart of Italy. Antiochus distrusted the fidelity of Annibal, and was conquered by the Romans, who granted him peace on the condition of his delivering their immortal enemy into their hands. Annibal, who was apprised of this, left the court of Antiochus, and fled to Prusias, king of Bithynia. He encouraged him to declare war against Rome, and even assisted him in weakening the power of Eumenes king of Pergamus, who was in alliance with the Romans. The senate received intelligence that Annibal was in Bithynia, and immediately sent ambassadors, amongst whom was L. Q. Flaminus, to demand him of Prusias. The king was unwilling to betray Annibal, and violate the laws of hospitality, but at the same time he dreaded the power of Rome. Annibal extricated him from his embarrassment, and when he heard that his house was besieged on every side, and all means of escape fruitless, he took a dose of poison, which he always carried with him in a ring on his finger, and as he breathed his last, he exclaimed, "Solvamus diuturnâ curâ populum Romanum, quando mortem senis expectare longum censet." He died in his 70th year, according to some, about 182 years B C That year was famous for the death of the three greatest generals of the age, Annibal, Scipio, and Philopœmen. The death of so formidable a rival was the cause of great rejoicings in Rome; he had always been a professed enemy to the Roman name and ever endeavoured to destroy its power. If he shone in the field, he also distinguished himself by his studies. He was taught Greek by Sosilus a Lacedæmonian, and he even wrote some books in that language on different subjects. It is remarkable, that the life of Annibal, whom the Romans wished so many times to destroy by perfidy, was never attempted by any of his soldiers or countrymen, a circumstance which strongly proves the humanity of his character, and the popularity of his name among the discordant tribes of which his armies were composed. He made himself as conspicuous in the government of the state, as at the head of armies; and though his enemies reproached him with the rudeness of laughing in the Carthaginian senate, whilst every senator was bathed in tears for the misfortunes of the country, Annibal defended himself by saying, that he, who had been bred all his life in a camp, ought to dispensed with all the more polished feelings of a capital. He was so apprehensive for his safety, that when he was in Bithynia, his house was fortified like a castle, and on every side there were secret doors which could give immediate escape if his life was ever attempted. When he quitted Italy, and embarked on board a vessel for Africa, he so strongly suspected the fidelity of his pilot, who told him that the lofty mountain which appeared at a distance was a promontory of Sicily, that he killed him on the spot; and when he was convinced of his fatal error, he gave a magnificent burial to the man whom he had so falsely murdered, and called the promontory by his name, Palorus. The labours which he sustained, and the inclemency of the weather to which he exposed himself in crossing the Alps, so weakened one of his eyes that he ever after lost the use of it. The Romans have celebrated the humanity of Annibal, who, after the battle of Cannæ, sought the body of the fallen consul Æmilius, amidst the heaps of slain, and honoured it with a funeral becoming the dignity of Rome. He performed the same friendly offices to the remains of Marcellus and Tib. Gracchus, who had fallen in battle. He often blamed the unsettled measures of his country; and when the enemy had thrown into his camp the head of his brother Asdrubal, who had been conquered as he came from Spain with a reinforcement into Italy, Annibal said that the Carthaginian arms would no longer meet with their usual success. Juvenal, in speaking of Annibal, observes, that the ring which caused his death made a due atonement to the Romans for the many thousand rings which had been sent to Carthage from the battle of Cannæ. Annibal when in Spain, married a woman of Castulo. The Romans entertained such a high opinion of him as a commander, that Scipio who conquered him, calls him the greatest general that ever lived, and gives the second rank to Pyrrhus the Epirot, and places himself the next to these renowned abilities. It is plain that the failure of Annibal's expedition in Italy did not arise from his neglect, but from that of his countrymen, who gave him no assistance; far from imitating their enemies of Rome, who even raised in one year eighteen legions to oppose the formidable Carthaginian. Livy has painted the character of Annibal like an enemy, and it is much to be lamented that this celebrated historian, with an inexcusable bitterness, and the most reprehensible illiberality, has withheld the tribute due to the merits and virtues of the greatest of generals. C. Nep. in Vitâ.—Liv. 21, 22, &c.—Plut. in Flamin. &c.—Justin. 32, 4—Sil. Ital 1, &c.—Appian.—Florus. 2, et 3.—Polyb.—Diod.—Jus. 10, 189, &c.—Val. Max—Horat. Od. 4, Epod. 16.—The son of the great Annibal, was sent by Himilco to Lilybæum, which was besieged by the Romans, to keep the Sicilians in their duty. Polyb. 1.——A Carthaginian general, son of Asdrubal, commonly called of Rhodes, above one hundred and sixty years before the birth of the great Annibal. Justin. 19, 2.—Xenoph. Hist. Græc.——A son of Glaucon, and grandson of Amilcar, sent by the Carthaginians to the assistance of Ægista, a town of Sicily. He was overpowered by Hermocrates, an exiled Syracusan Justin. 22, 23, ——A Carthaginian surnamed Senior. He was conquered by the consul, C. Sulpit. Paterculus, in Sardinia, and hung on a cross by his countrymen for his ill success.

ANNICERIS a philosopher of Cyrene, and dissiple of Aristippus. When Plato was sold for a slave at Ægina by the orders of Dionysius, Anniceris redeemed him, and sent him to Athens. Anniceris was a famous charioteer, and placed all good in worldly pleasure, to which virtue was to be considered as only subservient. Cic. de Off. 3, 33.—Diog. in Plat. et Arist.—Ælian. V. H. 2, 27.

ANNIUS SCAPULA, a Roman of great dignity, put to death for conspiring against Cassius. Hirt. Alex. 55.

ANNON and HANNO, a Carthaginian general, conquered in Spain by Scipio, and sent to Rome He was son of Bomilcar, whom Annibal sent privately over to the Rhone to conquer the Gauls. Liv. 21, 27.——A Carthaginian who taught birds to sing "Annon is a god," after which he restored them to their native liberty; but the birds lost with their slave-y what they had been taught. Ælian. V. H. ult. ii. 30. ——A Carthaginian general, who was employed to sail round Africa, and to settle colonies in the most commodious stations. He wrote an account of his discoveries in the Punic language, which was translated into Greek. Dodwell disputes the authenticity of the work, and ascribes it to a Greek of Sicily of Mannert, however, successfully defends its credibility. It was published by Troben in 1533, and in Hudson's Geographiæ Veteris Scriptores Græci Minores, in 1698.——Another banished from Carthage for taming a lion for his own amusement, which was interpreted as if he wished to aspire to sovereign power. Plin. 8, 16.——This name has been common to many Carthaginians who have signalized themselves among their countrymen during the Punic wars against Rome, and in their wars against the Sicilians. Liv. 26, 27, &c.

ANOPÆA, a mountain and road near the river Asopus. Herod. 7, 216

ANSER, a Roman poet, whom Ovid, Trist. 3, 1, 425, calls bold and impertinent. He reflected with severity on some of Virgil's verses, which the poet resented by playing upon the double meaning of Anser, in his ninth eclogue. Propertius, 2, 34, also makes mention of him with the same facetious raillery. Anser was a favourite with M. Antony, whom he accompanied to the siege of Mutina. Cic. Phil. 13, 5.

ANSIBARII, AMSIVARII, or AMPSICARII, a people of Germany, driven from their settlements by the Romans. Tacit Ann. 13, 55.

ANTÆA, the wife of Proteus, called also Stenobœa. Homer. Il.——A goddess worshipped by the inhabitants of Antium, supposed to be the same as Rhea, or Fortune.

ANTÆAS, a king of Scythia, who said that the neighing of a horse was far preferable to the music of Ismenias, a famous musician who had been taken captive. Plut.

ANTÆOPOLIS, now Ous-el-Kebir, a town of Upper Egypt, on the eastern side of the Nile. It had a magnificent temple in honour of Antæus, the portico of which remains.

ANTÆUS, a giant of Libya, son of Terra and Neptune. He was so strong in wrestling, that he boasted that he would erect a temple to his father with the skulls of his conquered antagonists. Hercules attacked him, and as he received new strength from his mother as often as he touched the ground, the hero lifted him up in the air and squeezed him to death in his arms. Lucan. 4, 598. —Stat. Theb. 6, 893. Juv. 3, 85.——A servant of Attica. Cic. ad Attic. 13, 44.——A friend of Turnus, killed by Æneas. Virg. Æn. 10, 561.

ANTÆUSA, a man of Cos. Paus 3, 5.——A Rhodian poet, much admired by Antigonus. Id. 1, 2. One day as he was cooking some fish, the king asked him, whether Homer ever dressed any meals when he was recording the actions of Agamemnon? And, do you think, replied the poet, that he would have written so many poems, ever inquired whether any individual dressed fish in his army. Plut. Symp. et Apoph.

ANTALCIDAS of Sparta, son of Leon, was sent into Persia, where he made a peace with Artaxerxes very disadvantageous to his country, by which, B. C. 387, the Greek cities of Asia became tributary to the Persian monarch. Paus. 9, 1, &c.—Diod. 14.—Plut. in Artax.

ANTANDER, a general of Messenia, against the Spartans. Paus. 4, 7.——A brother of Agathocles, tyrant of Sicily. Justin. 22, 7.

ANTANDROS, now Antandro, a city of Great Mysia, on the north coast of the gulf of Adramyttium. It was the arsenal of the Cimmerians for upwards of a century. According to Servius, it was built by the people of Andros, driven from their island by a sedition. Some authors place it at the bottom of mount Ida. Strab. 13.—Virg. Æn. 3, 6.—Mela. 1, 18.

ANTAPHERNES. Vid. Artaphernes.

ANTEBROGIUS, an ambassador to Cæsar from the Rhemi, a nation of Gaul. Cæs. Bell. Gall. 2, 3.

ANTEIUS PUBLIUS was appointed over Syria by Nero. He was accused of sedition and conspiracy, and drank poison, which operating slowly, obliged him to open his veins. Tacit. Ann. 13, &c.

ANTEMNÆ, a city of the Sabines at the confluence of the Anio and Tiber.—Virg. Æn. 7, 631.—Dionys. Hal.

ANTENOR, a Trojan prince related to Priam. It is said, that during the Trojan war, he always kept a secret correspondence with the Greeks, and chiefly with Menelaus and Ulysses In the council of Priam, Homer introduces him as advising the Trojans to restore Helen, and conclude the war. He advised Ulysses to carry away the Trojan palladium, and encouraged the Greeks to make the wooden horse, which, at his persuasion, was brought into the city of Troy by a breach made in the walls. Æneas has been accused of being a partner of his guilt; and the night that Troy was taken, they had a number of Greeks stationed at the doors of their houses to protect them from harm. After the destruction of his country, Antenor removed to Thrace, and thence with the Heneti, to Italy, where he founded Patavium, now Padua. His children were also conspicuous in the Trojan war, and displayed much valour against the Greeks. Their names were Polybius, Acamas, Agenor, and, according to others, Polydamas and Helicaon. Eur. 1, 2.—Hom. Il. 3, 15.—Virg. Æn. 1, 242.—Turin. 16, 21.—Homer. Il. 3, 7, 8, 11.—Ovid Met. 13.—Dictys. Cret. 5.—D re Phryg. 6.—Strab. 13.—Dionys. Hal 1.—Paus. 10, 27.——A statuary. Paus.——A Cretan who wrote a history of his country. Ælian.

ANTENORIDES, a patronymic given to the three sons of Antenor, all killed during the Trojan war. Virg. Æn. 6, 484.

ANTEROS, (anteros, against love,) a son of Mars and Venus. He was not as the derivation of his name implies, a deity that presided over opposition to love, but he was the god of mutual love and of mutual tenderness. Venus had complained to Themis, that her son Cupid always remained a child, and was told, that if he had another brother, he would grow up in a short space of time. As soon as Anteros was born, Cupid felt his strength increase, and his wings enlarge; but if ever he or his brother was at a distance from him, he found himself reduced to his ancient shape. From this circumstance it is seen, that return of passion gives vigor to love. Anteros had a temple at Athens raised to his honour, when Meles had experienced the coldness and disdain of Timagoras, whom he passionately esteemed, and for whom he had killed himself. [Vid. Meles.] Cupid and Anteros are often represented striving to seize a palm-tree from one another, to teach us that true love always endeavours to overcome by kindness and gratitude. They were always painted in the Greek academies, to inform the scholars that it is their immediate duty to be grateful to their teachers, and to reward their trouble with love and reverence. Cic. de Nat. D. 3, 23.—Paus. 1, 30. 6, 23.——A grammarian of Alexandria, in the age of the emperor Claudius.——A freedman of Atticus. Cic. ad Attic. 9, 14.

ANTHEA, a town of Achaia. Paus. 7, 18 —— Of Messenia. Id. 4, 31.——Of Troezene. Id. 2, 30.

ANTHEAS, a son of Rumelus, killed in attempting to sow corn from the chariot of Triptolemus drawn by dragons. Paus. 7, 18.

ANTHEDON, a city of Boeotia, a little to the north-east of mount Messapius, which received its name from the flowery plains that surround it, or from Anthedon, a certain nymph. The Cabiri were worshipped at Anthedon, there was also a temple of Proserpine in the city, and one of Bacchus without the walls. According to Sir W. Gell, the ruins of this city are under mount Kopa. Paus. 7, 10. 9, 22. It was formerly inhabited by Thractians. Homer. Il. 2.—Ovid Met. 13, 905. ——A town of Palestine, on the sea coast to the south-west of Gaza. It was also called Agrippias, in honor of Agrippa. It is now Daron.——A port of Peloponnesus. Plin. 4, 5.

ANTHELA, a town of Thessaly, situated between Thermopylæ and the Phocnix. In the plain round this town was the temple of Ceres Amphictyonia, that of Amphictyon, and the seats of the Amphictyons. Herod. 7, 176.

ANTHEMIS, one of the names of the island of Samos. Strab. 10.

ANTHEMON, a Trojan. Homer Il. 4.

ANTHEMUS, a city of Macedonia, to the north-east of Thessalonica.——A city of Syria. Strab.

ANTHEMUSIA, the same as Samos.——A city of Mesopotamia, to the south-east of Samosata, and just below Edessa. Strab.

ANTHENE, a town of Cynuria in Argolis. Now Palæo Castro. Thucyd. 5, 41.

ANTHERMUS, a Chian sculptor, son of Micciades, and grandson to Malas. He and his brother Bupalus made a statue of the poet Hipponax which caused universal laughter, on account of the deformity of its countenance. The poet was so incensed upon this, and inveighed with so much bitterness against the statuaries, that they hanged themselves, according to the opinion of some authors. Plin. 36, 5.

ANTHES, a native of Anthedon, who first invented hymns. Plut. de Mus.——A son of Neptune.

ANTHESPHORIA, festivals celebrated in Sicily, in honor of Proserpine, who was carried away by Pluto as she was gathering flowers. Claudian. de Rapt. Pros.——Festivals of the same name were also observed at Argos in honor of Juno, who was called Anthesia. Paus. Corinth.—Pollux Onom. 1, 1.

ANTHESTERIA, festivals in honour of Bacchus among the Greeks. They were celebrated in the month of February, called Anthesterion, whence the name is derived, and continued three days. The first day was called Πιθοιγια, apo tou pithous oigein, because they tapped their barrels of liquor. The second day was called Χοες, from the measure χους, because every individual drank of his own vessel, in commemoration of the arrival of Orestes, who, after the murder of his mother, came, without being purified, to Demophoon, or Pandion, king of Athens, and was obliged, with all the Athenians, to drink by himself, for fear of polluting the people by drinking with them before he was purified of the parricide. It was usual on that day to ride out in chariots, and ridicule those that passed by. The best drunker was rewarded with a crown of leaves, or rather of gold, and with a cask of wine. The third day was called Χυτροι, from χυτρα, a vessel brought out full of all sorts of seed and herbs, deemed sacred to Mercury, and therefore not touched. The slaves had the permission of being merry and free during these festivals; and at the end of the solemnity a herald proclaimed, Θυραζε, Καρες, ουκ ετ' Ανθεστηρια, i. e. Depart, ye Carian slaves, the festivals are at an end. Ælian. V. H. 2, 41.

ANTHEUS, a son of Antenor, much esteemed by Paris,—one of the companions of Æneas. Virg. Æn. 1, 514.

ANTHIA a sister of Priam, seized by the Greeks. She compelled the people of Pallene to burn their ships, and build Scione. Polyæn. 7, 47. ——A town. Vid. Anthea.——A daughter of Thespius, mistress to Hercules. Apollod. 2, 7.

ANTHIAS. Vid. Anthea.

ANTHIPPE, a daughter of Thestius, king of Boeotia, mother of Hippodromus, Teleutagorus, Hippotas, and Eubœus, by Hercules. Apollod. 2, 33.

ANTHIUM, a town of Thrace, on the coast of the Euxine, afterwards called Apollonia. Now Sizeboli.—Plin. 4, 11.——A city of Italy.

ANTHIUS (flowery), a name of Bacchus worshipped at Athens. He had also a statue at Patræ.

ANTHO, a daughter of Amulius, king of Alba.

ANTHORES, a companion of Hercules, who followed Evander, and settled in Italy. He was killed in the war of Turnus against Æneas. Virg. Æn. 10, 778.

ANTHRACIA, a nymph. Paus. 8, 31.

ANTHROPINUS, TISARCHUS, and DIOCLES, three persons who laid snares for Agathocles tyrant of Sicily. Polyæn. 5, 3.

ANTHROPOGRAPHUS, a surname given to Dionysius the painter, because he painted nothing but men. Plin. 35, 10.

ANTHROPOPHAGI, a people of Scythia who fed on human flesh. They lived near the country of the Massagetæ. Plin. 4, 12. 6, 30.—Mela 2, 1.

ANTHYLLA, a city of Egypt, west of the Canopic branch of the Nile, and north-west of Naucratis. It is the same as Gynæcopolis. It maintained the queens of the country in shoes, or, according to Athenæus, 1, in girdles. Herod. 2, 98.

ANTIA LEX was made for the suppression of luxury at Rome. Its particulars are not known. The enactor was Antius Restio, who afterwards never supped abroad for fear of being himself a witness of the profusion and extravagance which his law meant to destroy, but without effect. Macrob. 3, 17.

ANTIANIRA, the mother of Echion.

ANTIAS (he goddess of fortune, chiefly worshipped at Antium.——A poet. (Vid Furius.)

ANTICLEA, a daughter of Autolycus and Amphithea. Her father, who was a famous robber, permitted Sisyphus, son of Æolus, to enjoy the favours of his daughter, and Anticlea was really pregnant of Ulysses when she married Laertes king of Ithaca. Laertes was nevertheless the reputed father of Ulysses. Ulysses is reproached by Ajax in Ovid. Met. 5, as being the son of Sisyphus It is said that Anticlea killed herself when she heard a false report of her son's death, which Nauplius had intentionally raised to avenge himself on the family of Ulysses, by whose influence his son Palamedes had been sacrificed to the resentment of the Greeks at the Trojan war. Homer. Od. 11, 19.—Hygin. fab. 201, 243.—Paus. 10, 29.——A woman who had Peripheles by Vulcan. Apollod. 3.——A daughter of Diocles, who married Machaon the son of Æsculapius, by whom she had Nicomachus and Gorgasus. Paus. 4, 30.

ANTICLES, an Athenian archon.——A man who conspired against Alexander with Hermonius Curt 8, 6.——An Athenian victor at Olympia.

ANTICLIDES, a Greek historian, whose works are now lost. They are often quoted by Athenæus, and Plut. in Alex.

ANTICRAGUS, a detached chain of the ridge of mount Cragus, in Lycia, running in a north-east direction along the coast of the Sinus Glaucus. It is now called Soumbourlou. Strab. 4.

ANTICRATES, a Spartan who stabbed Epaminondas, the Theban general, at the battle of Mantinea Plut. in Ages.

ANTICYRA, a city of Phocis, on the isthmus of a small peninsula in the Sinus Corinthiacus, west of the Sinus Crissæus. It is supposed by Pausanias to have been the city called by Homer Lycorea. It is now called Aspropi'a, or the white houses, and some traces of the buildings from which it was so named still remain. There was another of the same name in Thessaly, at the mouth of the Sperchius. Both these places were celebrated for the growth of hellebore, which was recommended by the ancient physicians as a cure for insanity; whence arose the adage, Naviget Anticyram, applied to a person of unsound mind. Horace has been supposed to allude to three places of this name; but this is a mistake, as he merely speaks of a head so incurable, as to defy the healing virtues of three Anticyræ, if there even were so many. Paus. 10, 36.—Horat. Sat. 2, 3, 166.—De Art Poet 300.—Pers. 4, 16.—Strab.—Mela, 2, 3.—Ovid Ep. ex Pont. 4, 3 53 ——A mistress of Demetrius Plut. in Demetr.

ANTIDAMUS, a warlike soldier of king Philip at the siege of Perinthus.

ANTIDOTUS, an excellent painter, pupil of Euphranor. Plin. 35, 11.

ANTIGENES, one of Alexander's generals, publicly rewarded for his valour. Curt. 5, 14

ANTIGENIDAS, a famous musician of Thebes, disciple to Philoxenus. He taught his pupil Isthenias to despise the judgment of the populace; and when he seemed discouraged by the coldness of his auditors, he raised his spirits by saying, Muses came et Musas. Aul Gell. 15, 17.—Val. Max. 7.—Cic. in Brut 97.

ANTIGONA, daughter of Berenice, was wife to king Pyrrhus. Plut. in Pyrr

ANTIGONE, a daughter of Œdipus, king of Thebes, by his mother Jocasta, who was the guide of her father in his wanderings, after he had lost his sight. She interred by night the remains of her brother Polynices, against the positive orders of Creon, who when he heard of it, ordered her to be buried alive. She, however, stabbed herself before the sentence was executed; and Hæmon, the king's son, who was passionately fond of her, and had not been able to obtain her pardon, killed himself on her grave. The death of Antigone is the subject of one of the tragedies of Sophocles. The Athenians were so pleased with it at the first representation that they presented the author with the government of Samos. This tragedy was represented thirty-two times at Athens, without interruption. Sophocl. in Antig.—Hygin. fab. 67, 72.—Paus. 2, 20.—Apollod. 3, 5.—Ovid Trist 3, el. 3.—Philostrat 2, 29.—Stat. Theb. 12, 350 ——A daughter of Eurytion, king of Phthia, in Thessaly. Apollod. ——A daughter of Laomedon. She was the sister of Priam, and was changed into a stork, for comparing herself to Juno. Ovid. Met. 6, 93.

ANTIGONIA, an inland town of Epirus, south-west of Apollonia Now Argyro Castro Plin. 4, 1.——One of Macedonia, in the district of Mygdonia, founded by Antigonus, son of Gonatas. Id. 4, 10.——One in Syria, on the borders of the Orontes, founded by Antigonus. Strab. 16 ——Another in Bithynia, subsequently called Nicæa. Id. 12 ——Another in Arcadia, founded on the ruins of the ancient Mantinea. Paus 8, 8.——One of Troas, in Asia Minor, afterwards named Alexandria. Strab. 13.

ANTIGONUS, one of Alexander's generals, universally supposed to be the illegitimate son of Philip, Alexander's father. In the division of the provinces after the king's death, he received Pamphylia, Lycia, and Phrygia. He united with Antipater and Ptolemy, to destroy Perdiccas and Eumenes; and after the death of Perdiccas, he made continual war against Eumenes, whom, after three years of various fortune, he took prisoner, and ordered to be starved. He afterwards declared war against Cassander, whom he conquered, and had several engagements by his generals with Lysimachus. He obliged Seleucus to retire from Syria, and fly for refuge and safety to Egypt. Ptolemy, who had established himself in Egypt, promised to defend Seleucus, and from that time all friendship ceased between Ptolemy and Antigonus, and a new war was begun, in which Seleucus, Ptolemy, Lysimachus, and Cassander, arrayed themselves against Antigonus. After varied success, the confederate made a treaty with him, and surrendered to him the possession of the whole of Asia, upon condition that the Greek cities should remain free. This treaty was soon broken; and Ptolemy made a descent into Lesser Asia, and some of the islands of the Archipelago, which was at first successful; but he was defeated in a sea-fight by Demetrius, the son of Antigonus, who took the island of Cyprus, made 16,000 prisoners, and destroyed 200 of his ships. Such was the effect of these successes on the mind of Antigonus, that he assumed the title of king, and conferred the same on his son; and from this period, B C. 306, properly commenced his reign in Asia, and also the reigns of Ptolemy in Egypt, and those of the other captains of Alexander in their respective territories. Seleucus, Cassander, Lysimachus, and Ptolemy, soon found sufficient reasons to enter into a new combination. Antigonus gave his son Demetrius the command of a powerful fleet; and himself, at the head of a numerous army, made an attempt to enter Egypt, threatening to disperse his enemies like a flock of birds. But his efforts were not attended with his usual success; and, after being joined by Demetrius, who had made an equally unavailing attack upon Rhodes, he marched their united forces into Phrygia. They met the confederates in the plain of Ipsus, B C. 301, where a decisive battle was fought. Antigonus was defeated, and died of his wounds; and his son Demetrius fled from the field. Antigonus was 81 years old when he died. During his life, he was master of all Asia Minor, as far as Syria; but after his death, his son Demetrius Poliorcetes, and established himself in Macedonia after the death of Cassander, and some time after attempted to recover his former possessions, but died in captivity in the court of his son-in-law Seleucus. "Antigonus was concerned in the different intrigues of the Greeks. He made a treaty of alliance with the Ætolians, and was highly respected by the Athenians, to whom he showed himself very liberal and indulgent. Antigonus discharged some of his officers because they spent their time in taverns; and he gave their commissions to common soldiers, who performed their duty with punctuality. A certain poet called him divine; but the king despised his flattery, and bade him go and inquire of his servants whether he was really what he supposed him. Strab. 13.—Diod. 17, &c.—Paus. 1, 6, &c.—Justin. 13, 14 et 15.—C Nep in Eumen.—Plut in Demetr. Eumen. et Anat.——Gonatas, so called from the place of his birth, son of Demetrius, and grandson to Antigonus, was king of Macedonia. He restored the Armenians to liberty, defeated the Gauls who had made an irruption into his kingdom, and at last was expelled by Pyrrhus, who seized upon his kingdom. He afterwards recovered a great part of Macedonia, and followed Pyrrhus to the neighbourhood of Argos. In a conflict that ensued there, Pyrrhus was slain. After the death of Pyrrhus, he enlarged his authority, and died after a reign of thirty-four years, and was succeeded by his son, Demetrius II., B. C 243. Justin. 24 et 25.—Polyb.—Plut. in Demetr——The guardian of his nephew, Philip, the son of Demetrius, who married the widow of Demetrius, and usurped the kingdom. He was called Doson, from his promising much, and giving nothing. He conquered Cleomenes, king of Sparta, and obliged him to retire into Egypt, because he favoured the Ætolians against the Greeks. He died B. C. 221, after a reign of eleven years, leaving his crown to the lawful possessor, Philip, who distinguished himself by his cruelties, and the war which he made against the Romans. Justin. 28 et 29.—Polyb. 2.—Plut in Cleom.——A son of Aristobulus, king of Judæa, who obtained an army from the king of Parthia, by promising him 1000 talents and 500 women. With these foreign troops he conquered his country, and caused the ears of his uncle, Hyrcanus, the high priest, to be cut off, that he might be incapacitated for the office. Herod, who had betrothed, and afterwards married, Mariamne, the grand-daughter of Hyrcanus, invested Jerusalem, and at length, after a siege of six months, took it by storm. With this event, which happened B. C 37, ended the reign of the Asmoneans, which had continued 129 years, from Judas Maccabeus to Antigonus, the last male of that race who bore the regal title. Sosius, governor of Syria, who commanded the Roman forces, and who had assisted Herod on this occasion, having presented a crown of gold to the temple, left Jerusalem, and conveyed Antigonus in chains to Antony; by whom he was, at the earnest solicitations of Herod, put to a shameful death in the third year of his reign. Joseph. 14.—Dion. et Plut. in Anton.——Carystius, a philosopher and historian, who flourished under the Ptolemies Lagus and Philadelphus, about 300 years B. C. He wrote the lives of some of the ancient philosophers, an heroic poem, entitled "Antipatros," and other works, but none are extant, except a "Collection of Wonderful Stories," concerning animals and other natural bodies. This work was first published at Basle, 1568, and reprinted at Leyden, 1619. Drog.—Athen——A writer on agriculture——A statuary, who wrote on his profession.

ANTILCO, a tyrant of Chalcis. After his death, oligarchy prevailed in that city. Aristot Polit 5.

ANTILIBĂNUS, a chain of mountains in Syria, east of, and running parallel to, the chain called Libanus. Near it rises the Orontes. Strab.—Plin. 5, 20.

ANTILŎCHUS, a king of Messenia——The eldest son of Nestor, by Eurydice. He went to the Trojan war with his father, where he distinguished himself by his great valour, and where he killed some of the most illustrious of the Trojan chiefs. He displayed his agility at the games in honour of Patroclus, where he was repeatedly rewarded with the prize. He had been one of Helen's suitors; and he was at last killed by Memnon, the son of Aurora. Homer Il. 4, 6, 7, 13, 14, 15, 16, et 25. Odyss 3.—Pindar. Pyth 6.——A poet who wrote a panegyric upon Lysander, and received a hat filled with silver. Plut. in Lys——An historian commended by Dionys. Hal.

ANTIMĂCHUS, a lascivious person——An historian.——A Greek poet of Ionia, who flourished about 40[illegible] B C. He wrote a poem upon the Theban war; and before he had brought his heroes to the city of Thebes, he had filled 24 books. At a public recital of this piece, all his auditors deserted him except Plato, upon which Antimachus declared that he would read on, as Plato alone was equal to a whole audience. Quintilian [illegible] him next to Homer in epic poetry, but at a great distance. When his fame was almost forgotten, the emperor Adrian endeavoured to revive it, and to give him the priority to Homer; but a Roman emperor could not do this. He was surnamed Clarius, from Claros, a mountain near Colophon, where he was born. Paus. 9, 35.—Plut. in Lysand et Timol.—Propert. El. 2, 34, 45.—Quintil. 10, 1.——Another poet of the same name, surnamed Pecus, because he praised himself. Suidas——A Trojan whom Paris bribed to oppose the restoring of Helen to Menelaus and Ulysses, who had come as ambassadors to recover her. His sons, Hippolochus and Pisander, were killed by Agamemnon. Homer. Il. 11, 123, 12, 180.——A son of Hercules by a daughter of Thespius. Apollod. 2 et 3.——A native of Heliopolis, who wrote a poem on the creation of the world, in 3780 verses.

ANTIMENES, a son of Delphon. Paus. 2, 28.

ANTIOPE, one of the daughters of Pelias, whose wishes to restore her father to youthful vigour proved so fatal. Apollod. 1, 32.—Paus. 8, 11.

ANTINOEIA, annual sacrifices, and quinquennial games in honour of Antinous the Bithynian. They were instituted by the command of Adrian, the Roman emperor, as Mandines in Arcadia, where Antinous was honoured with a temple and divine worship. They were also celebrated at Argos

ANTINOOPOLIS, or ANTINOE, a town of Egypt, built in honour of Antinous, opposite Hermopolis Magna, on the eastern side of the Nile. It was originally an obscure place, named Besa, but became a magnificent city (Vid Antinous) It is now called Enseneh, and the shrine of a Christian saint has also caused it to obtain the name of Sheikh Abadeh

ANTINOUS, a youth of Bithynia, of whom the emperor Adrian was so extremely fond, that at his death he erected a temple to him, and wished it to be believed that he had been changed into a constellation Some have said that he fell accidentally into the Nile, as he was sailing on that river with the emperor, and was drowned According to another account, Adrian, consulting an oracle at Besa, was informed that he was threatened with great danger, unless a person that was dear to him was immolated for his preservation. Antinous offered himself for the victim, and the emperor accepted the sacrifice. The generous Antinous threw himself from a rock into the Nile; and Adrian, grateful for this instances of devotion, built Antinoopolis in honour of him, and ordered to be worshipped throughout the whole of his dominions —A native of Ithaca, son of Eupeithes, and one of Penelope's suitors. He was brutal and cruel in his manners, and excited his companions to destroy Telemachus, whose advice comforted his mother Penelope. When Ulysses returned home, he came to the palace in a beggar's dress, and begged for bread; which Antinous refused, and even struck him. After Ulysses had discovered himself to Telemachus and Eumæus, he attacked the suitors, who were ignorant who he was, and killed Antinous among the first. Homer. Odyss. 1, 16, 17 et 22.—Hygin. Fab. 2, 5, 7.

ANTIOCHIA, the name of a Syrian province. Meks. 1, 14.—A city of Syria, situated on the river Orontes, about 20 miles from the place where that river empties itself into the Mediterranean, and equally distant from Constantinople and Alexandria, or about 700 miles from each It was built by Seleucus Nicator, B.C. 300, who called it after his father, Antiochus. It soon became, and continued for many ages, the metropolis of the east, for the Syrian kings, and afterwards the Roman governors, who presided over the affairs of the eastern provinces, chose it for their place of residence; and in the Christian times it was the seat of the chief patriarch of Asia. It is here that the disciples of our Saviour first received the name of Christians, A. D 29, having been before commonly called Nazarenes and Galileans. Here also the gospel was preached to the Grecians, who were incorporated into the Christian church. Here also Barnabas and Saul were sent out by the church, to travel through Pagan cities, to give light to the Gentiles, and to publish Jesus for salvation to the ends of the earth. It may be observed, that the gospel acquires credibility from its having been first taught in the most populous, enlightened, and learned cities, never shunning the public eye, but challenging full examination; and that in those cities it gained numerous converts by conviction, without the aid of force or fraud. Antiochia was afterwards known by the name of Tetrapolis, being divided as it were into four quarters, each having its separate wall, besides a common one which enclosed them all. The first was built by Seleucus Nicator, the second by those who repaired thither on its being made the capital of the Syro-Macedonian empire, the third by Seleucus Callinicus, and the fourth by Antiochus Epiphanes. It was surnamed ad Orontem, from the river on which it stood; and ad Daphnen, from the neighbouring Daphne. It is now a small town full of gardens, known by the name of Antakia Dionys. Perieg ——A city called also Nisibis, in Mesopotamia, built by Seleucus, son of Antiochus. ——The capital of Pisidia, built by the Magnetes, and subsequently colonized by the Romans under Augustus, who called it Cæsarea. Its precise position remains undetermined by geographers, but it probably stood on the road leading from the coast of the Gulf of Adalia, to Iconium. ——A city at the foot of mount Cragus, called likewise Antiochia Isauriæ. —— Another near the river Tigris, 25 leagues from Seleucia on the west —— Another in Margiana, built by Antiochus the first, on the site of a city named Alexandria Here many of those Romans were confined, who were taken prisoners at the defeat of Crassus It is now called Merve, or Merou —— Another at the foot of mount Taurus, in the province of Syria called Panagerne. —— Another of Caria, on the river Meander.

ANTIOCHIS, the name of the mother of Antiochus, the son of Seleucus.——A tribe of Athens.

ANTIOCHUS, surnamed Soter, was son of Seleucus, and king of Syria and Asia. He made a treaty of alliance with Ptolemy Philadelphus, king of Egypt. He fell into a lingering disease, which none of his father's physicians could cure for some time, till it was discovered that his pulse was more irregular than usual, when Stratonices, his stepmother, entered his room, and that love for her was the cause of his illness. This was told to Seleucus, who willingly gave Stratonice to his son, together with a considerable part of his dominions, and caused them to be crowned king and queen of Upper Asia. Upon the death of his father, he succeeded to the whole empire, and resided at Antioch. He was called Soter, or Saviour, by the provinces of Lower Asia, from his having freed them from the Gauls, whom he defeated in battle. He died 291 B C after a reign of 19 years. Justin. 17, 2, &c.—Val. Max 5.—Polyb. 4.—Appian —The second of that name, surnamed Theos (God) by the Milesians, because he put to death their tyrant, Timarchus, was son and successor to Antiochus Soter. In the third year of his reign, a bloody war broke out between him and Ptolemy Philadelphus, king of Egypt. During this war, he lost all his provinces beyond the Euphrates, by a revolt of the Parthians and the Bactrians, who shook off the Macedonian yoke, and elected princes of their own In these circumstances of desertion and distress, Antiochus concluded a treaty of peace with Ptolemy, on the condition of divorcing his former wife, Laodice, and marrying Berenice, the daughter of Ptolemy. The male issue of this marriage were also to succeed to the crown The nuptials were solemnized with extraordinary magnificence at Seleucia. Within two years after this marriage Ptolemy died, and Antiochus repudiated Berenice, and restored

Laodice, who embraced this favourable opportunity of securing the succession to her son. With this view, she caused Antiochus to be poisoned, and suborned Artemon, whose features were similar to his, to represent him as king. Artemon, subservient to her will, pretended to be indisposed, and as king, called all the ministers, and recommended to them Seleucus, surnamed Callinicus, son of Laodice, as his successor. After this ridiculous imposture, it was made public that the king had died a natural death, and Laodice placed her son on the throne, and dispatched Berenice, and her son, 246 years before the Christian era. Appian.——The third of that name, surnamed the Great, brother to Seleucus Ceraunus, was king of Syria and Asia, and reigned 36 years. He was defeated by Ptolemy Philopater, at Raphia, and was obliged to surrender to him the whole of Coelosyria and Palestine. He was more successful, however, in Upper Asia, where he recovered possession of Media, and made treaties with the kings of Parthia and Bactria, who agreed to assist him in regaining his other provinces, if their respective kingdoms were confirmed to them. He crossed over also into India, where he renewed his alliance with the king of that country; and having marched through Arachosia, Drangiana, and Carmania, he returned to his capital, after an absence of seven years. Hearing of the death of Philopater, he endeavoured to crush his infant son, Epiphanes, but his guardians solicited the aid of the Romans, and Antiochus was compelled to resign his pretensions. He conquered the greatest part of Greece, but though some cities implored the aid of Rome, and gave a new turn to the state of the war, Annibal, who had taken refuge at his court, encouraged him to resist these formidable allies, and even to carry hostilities into the bosom of Italy. Antiochus felt and acknowledged the propriety of the Carthaginian's proposals, but his measures were dilatory, and his counsels guided by timidity rather than boldness of enterprise. He saw his numerous armies defeated at Thermopylæ, by Glabrio, the Roman general, and his conquests in Greece and Asia snatched away with astonishing rapidity from his feeble hands, whilst, to avoid the disgrace of captivity, he fled into the heart of his kingdom, and agreed to confine his authority to Asia, beyond mount Taurus, and to pay the Romans fifteen thousand Euboic talents for the expenses of the war. His revenue being unable to pay this heavy imposition, he attempted to plunder the temple of Belus, in Susiana, which so incensed the inhabitants, that they killed him, with his followers, 187 B C. In his character of king, Antiochus was humane and liberal, the patron of learning, and the friend of merit, and he published an edict, ordering his subjects never to obey him except his commands were consistent with the laws of the country. He had three sons, Seleucus Philopater, Antiochus Epiphanes, and Demetrius. The first succeeded him, and the two others were kept as hostages by the Romans. Justin. 31 et 32.—Strab. 16.—Liv. 34, 59.—Flor. 2, 1.—Appian. Bell Syr.——The fourth Antiochus, surnamed Epiphanes or Illustrious, was king of Syria, after the death of his brother Seleucus, and reigned eleven years. He destroyed Jerusalem, and was so cruel to the Jews, that they called him Epimanes, or Furious, and not Epiphanes. He attempted to plunder Persepolis without effect. He was of a voracious appetite and fond of childish diversions; he used for his pleasure to empty bags of money into the streets, to see the people's eagerness to gather it; he bathed in the public baths with the populace, and was fond of perfuming himself to excess. He invited all the Greeks he could at Antioch, and waited upon them as a servant, and danced with such indecency among the stage players, that even the most dissipated and shameless blushed at the sight. Polybius.—Justin. 34, 3.——The fifth, surnamed Eupator, succeeded his father, Epiphanes, on the throne of Syria, 164 B C. He made a peace with the Jews, and in the second year of his reign was assassinate' by his uncle, Demetrius, who said that the crown was lawfully his own, and that it had been seized from his father. Justin. 34.—Joseph. 12.——The sixth king of Syria was surnamed Entheus, or Noble. His father, Alexander Bala, intrusted him to the care of Malcus, an Arabian; and he received the crown from Tryphon, in opposition to his brother Demetrius, whom the people hated. Before he had been a year on the throne, Tryphon murdered him, 149 B. C., and reigned in his place for three years. Josephe. 13.——The seventh, called Sidetes, reigned nine years In the beginning of his reign he was afraid of Tryphon, and concealed himself, but he soon obtained the means of destroying his enemy. He made war against Phranates, king of Parthia, entered Parthia, and recovered the provinces which Phranates had separated from the Syrian empire; but whilst his troops were separated, and put into winter quarters, the inhabitants of that country massacred them all in one day, and Antiochus perished in the general slaughter, Justin 36, 1. —Appian. Bell Syr.——The eighth, surnamed Grypus, from his aquiline nose, was son of Demetrius Nicanor, by Cleopatra. His brother, Seleucus, was destroyed by Cleopatra, and he himself would have shared the same fate, had he not discovered his mother's artifice, and compelled her to drink the poison which was prepared for himself. He killed Alexander Zebina, whom Ptolemy had set to oppose him on the throne of Syria, and was at last assassinated, B C. 97, after having reigned, according to Josephus, twenty-nine, and according to Porphyrius, twenty-six years. Justin 39, &c.—Joseph. —Appian.——The ninth, surnamed Cyzicenus, from the city of Cyzicus, where he received his education, was son of Antiochus Sidetes, by Cleopatra. He disputed the kingdom with his brother Grypus, who ceded to him Coelosyria, part of his patrimony. He was at last conquered by his nephew, Seleucus, near Antioch; and rather than to continue prisoner in his hands, he killed himself, B.C. 93. While a private man, he seemed worthy to reign, but when on the throne, he was dissolute and tyrannical. He was fond of mechanics, and invented some useful military engines Appian.—Joseph.—The tenth, was ironically surnamed Pius, because he married Selena, the wife of his father and of his uncle. He was the son of Antiochus ninth, and he expelled Seleucus, the son of Grypus, from Syria, and was killed in a battle which he fought against the Parthians, in the cause of the Galatians. Joseph.—Appian.——After his death, the kingdom of Syria was torn to pieces by the factions of the royal family, or usurpers, who, under a good or false title, under the name of Antiochus or his relations established themselves for a little time as sovereigns either of Syria, or Damascus, or other dependent provinces. At last Antiochus, surnamed Asiaticus, the son of Antiochus the ninth, was restored to his paternal throne, by the influence of Lucullus, the Roman general, on the expulsion of Tigranes, king of Armenia, from the Syrian dominions; but four years after, Pompey deposed him, and observed, that he who had hid himself while an usurper sat upon his throne, ought not to be a king. From that time, B.C. 65, Syria became a Roman province, and the race of Antiochus was extinguished. Justin. 40 ——A philosopher of Ascalon, famous for his writings, and the respect with which he was treated by his pupils, Lucullus, Cicero, and Brutus. Plut. in Lucul.——An historian of Syracuse, son of Xenophanes, who wrote, besides other works, a history of Sicily, in nine books, in which he began at the age of king Cocalus Strab.—Diod. 12.——A rich king, tributary to the Romans in the age of Vespasian. Tacit. Hist. 2, 81 ——A sophist who refused to take upon himself the government of a state, on account of the vehemence of his passions.——A king conquered by Antony, &c. Cæs. Bell. Civ 3, 4.——A king of Messenia. Paus. 4.——A commander of the Athenian fleet, under Alcibiades, conquered by Lysander. Xenoph. Hist. Græc.——A writer of Alexandria, who published a treatise on comic poets Athen.——A sceptic of Laodicea. Diog. in Pyrrh.——A learned sophist. Philostrat.——A servant of Atticus Cic. ad Attic. Ep. 13, 33 ——A hair-dresser mentioned by Martial, Ep. 11, 65 ——A son of Hercules, by Medea. Apollod. 2, 7.——A stage player. Juv. 3, 98.——A sculptor, said to have made the famous statue of Pallas, preserved in the Ludovisi gardens at Rome.

ANTIÓPE, a daughter of Nycteus, king of Thebes, by Polyxo, was beloved by Jupiter, who, to deceive her, changed himself into a satyr. She became pregnant, and to avoid the resentment of her father, she fled to mount Cithæron, where she brought forth twins, Amphion and Zethus. She exposed them, to prevent discovery, but they were preserved by the kindness of some shepherds. After this she fled to Epopeus, king of Sicyon, who married her. Some say that Epopeus carried her away, for which action Nycteus made war against him, and at his death left his crown to his brother Lycus, entreating him to continue the war, and punish the ravisher of his daughter. Lycus obeyed his injunctions, killed Epopeus, and recovered Antiope, whom he loved, and married, though his niece. His first wife, Dirce, was jealous of his new connection; she prevailed upon her husband, and Antiope was delivered into her hands, and confined in a prison, where she was exposed to daily torments. Antiope, after many years of imprisonment, obtained means to escape, and went after her sons, who undertook to avenge her wrongs upon Lycus and his wife Dirce. They took Thebes, put the king to death, and tied Dirce to the tail of a wild bull, which dragged her till she died in the most excruciating tortures. Bacchus changed her into a fountain, and deprived Antiope of the use of her senses. In this forlorn situation she wandered all over Greece, and at last found relief from Phocus, son of Ornython, who cured her of her disorder, and married her. Hyginus, fab. 7, says that Antiope was divorced by Lycus, because she had been ravished by Epopeus, whom he calls Epaphus, and that after her repudiation she became pregnant by Jupiter. Meanwhile Lycus married Dirce, who suspected that her husband still kept the company of Antiope, upon which she imprisoned her. Antiope however escaped from her confinement, and brought forth on mount Cithæron. Some authors have called her daughter of Asopus, because she was born on the banks of that river. The scholast on Apollon. 1, 735, maintains that there were two persons of the name, one the daughter of Nycteus, and the other of Asopus, and mother of Amphion and Zethus. Paus. 2, 6. 9, 17.—Ovid. Met. 6, 110—Apollod. 3, 5. —Propert. El 3, 15.—Hom. Od. 11, 249—Hygin. fab. 7, 8, et 155.——A daughter of Thespius or Thestius, mother of Alopius, by Hercules. Apollod. 2, 7.——A daughter of Mars, queen of the Amazons, taken prisoner by Hercules, and given in marriage to Theseus. She is also called Hippolyte. (Vid Hippolyte.)——A daughter of Æolus, mother of Bœotus and Helen, by Neptune. Hygin. fab. 157.——A daughter of Pilon, who married Eurytus. Id. fab 14 ——A tragedy, written by Pacuvius, bore the name of Antiope. Pers. 1, 77.

ANTIÓRUS, a son of Lycurgus. Plut. in Lycurg.

ANTIPÁROS, a small island in the Ægean sea, opposite to Paros, and separated from it by a strait about seven miles wide. Its most ancient name was Olearos, and it was colonized by the Sidonians. This island is remarkable for its grotto, which is of great depth, and which, according to the relations of the ancient Greeks, communicates beneath the waters with some neighbouring islands.

ANTIPÁTER, son of Iolaus, was soldier under king Philip, and raised to the rank of a general under Alexander the Great. When Alexander went to invade Asia, he left Antipater supreme governor of Macedonia, and of all Greece. Antipater exerted himself in the cause of his king; he made a successful war against the Greeks, whom the absence of Alexander induced to rebel, and killed in battle Agis, king of Sparta His great services, however, were ill repaid by his master: Alexander grew jealous of his fame; and not only deprived him of his government, but commanded him to appear before him at Babylon, to explain and vindicate his conduct. Antipater obeyed with reluctance; but the death of Alexander, which happened soon after, was attributed to the machinations of the offended general. His sons, Cassander and Iolas, were in the camp; and it is said by some historians, that, to prevent the condemnation of their father, they administered poison to the unsuspecting king. After Alexander's death, his generals divided the empire among themselves, and Macedonia was allotted to Antipater. The wars which Greece, and chiefly Athens, had meditated during Alexander's life, now burst forth with uncommon fury, as soon as the news of his death was received. The Athenians levied an army of 30,000 men, and equipped 200 ships against Antipater, who was master of Macedonia. Their expedition was attended with much success, Antipater was routed in Thessaly, and even besieged in the town of Lamia. But when Leosthenes, the Athenian general, was mortally wounded under the walls of Lamia, the fortune of the war was changed. Antipater obliged the enemy to raise the siege, and soon after received a reinforcement from Craterus from Asia, with which he conquered the Athenians at Cranon, in Thessaly. After this defeat, Antipater and Craterus marched into Boeotia, conquered the Ætolians, and granted peace to the Athenians, on the conditions which Leosthenes had proposed to Antipater when besieged in Lamia, i. e. that he should be absolute master over them. Besides this, he demanded from their ambassadors, Demades, Phocion, and Xenocrates, that they should deliver into his hands the orators Demosthenes and Hyperides, whose eloquence had inflamed the minds of their countrymen, and had been the primary causes of the war. The conditions were accepted, a Macedonian garrison was stationed in Athens, but the inhabitants still were permitted the free use of their laws and privileges. Antipater and Craterus were the first who made hostile preparations against Perdiccas; and during that time Polyperchon was appointed over Macedonia. Polyperchon defeated the Ætolians, who had made an invasion upon Macedonia. Antipater gave assistance to Eumenes in Asia against Antigonus, according to Justin. 14, 2. At his death, B C 319, Antipater appointed Polyperchon master of all his possessions; and as he was the oldest of all the generals and successors of Alexander, he recommended that he might be the supreme ruler in their councils, that every thing might be done according to his judgment. As for his son Cassander, he left him in a subordinate station under Polyperchon. But Cassander was of too aspiring a disposition tamely to obey his father's injunctions. He recovered Macedonia, and made himself absolute. Antipater, like many of the great men of his age, cultivated and patronised literature; and as a proof of his learning, a letter of his to his son Cassander is highly extolled by Cicero, Off. 2, 14.—Curt 3, 4, 5, 6, 7 et 10.—Justin. 11, 14, 13, &c.—Diod 17, 18, &c.—C. Nep in Phoc. et Eumen.—Plut. in Eumen. Alexand. &c ——A son of Cassander, king of Macedonia, and son-in-law of Lysimachus. He killed his mother, because she wished his brother Alexander to succeed to the throne. Alexander, to revenge the death of his mother, solicited the assistance of Demetrius; but peace was re-established between the two brothers by the advice of Lysimachus, and soon after Demetrius killed Antipater, and made himself king of Macedonia, 294 B.C.—Justin. 26, 1.——A king of Macedonia, who reigned only 45 days, 277 B.C.——A king of Cilicia.——A powerful prince, father to Herod. He was appointed governor of Judea by Cæsar, whom he had assisted in the Alexandrine war.—Joseph.——An Athenian archon.——One of Alexander's soldiers, who conspired against his life with Hermolaus. Curt. 8, 6.——A celebrated sophist of Hierapolis, preceptor to the children of the emperor Severus.——A stoic philosopher of Tarsus, 144 years B. C.——A poet of Sidon, who could compose a number of verses extempore, upon any subject. He ranked Sappho among the Muses, in one of his epigrams. He had a fever every year on the day of his birth, of which at last he died. He flourished about 80 years B C. Some of his epigrams are preserved in the Anthologia Plin. 7, 51.—Val Max. 1, 10.—Cic. de Orat. 3. De Offic. 3. De Quæst. Acad. 4.——A philosopher of Phœnicia, preceptor to Cato of Utica. Plut. in Cat.——A stoic philosopher, disciple to Diogenes of Babylon. He wrote two books on divination, and died at Athens. Cic. de Div. 1, 3.—Ac. Quæst. 4, 6.—De Offic. 3. 12.——A disciple of Aristotle, who wrote two books of letters.——A poet of Thessalonica, in the age of Augustus.

ANTIPATRIA, a city of Macedonia, on the eastern confines, north-east of Nicæa. Liv. 31, 27.

ANTIPATRIDAS, a governor of Telmessus Polyæn. 5

ANTIPATRIS, formerly called Capharsabe, a town of Palestine, situate in Samaria, near the coast, south-east of Apollonias. It was enlarged and beautified by Herod the Great, who named it Antipatris, in honour of his father Antipater

ANTIPHANES, an ingenious statuary of Argos, whose statues of Erasus, Aphidas, and Elatus, were still seen and admired in the temple of Delphi, in the age of the Antonines Paus. 3, 17. 10, 9.——A comic poet before the age of Thespis, whose poems were called Antiphanian——Another of Rhodes, Smyrna, or Carystus, who was born B C. 408, of parents in the low condition of slaves. He composed upwards of 300 dramas, and was so popular in Athens, that on his decease a decree was passed to remove his remains from Chios to that city, where they were interred with public honours.——A physician of Delos, who used to say that diseases originated from the variety of food that was eaten. Clem. Alex.—Athen.

ANTIPHAS and THYMBRÆUS, two sons of Laocoon, called also Æthon and Melanthus, slain with their father by a serpent. Hygin. fab. 135.

ANTIPHATES, a king of the Læstrygones, descended from Lamus, who founded Formiæ. Ulysses returning from Troy, came upon his coasts, and sent three men to examine the country. Antiphates devoured one of them, and pursued the others, and sunk the fleet of Ulysses with stones, except the ship in which Ulysses was. Ovid. Met. 14, 232.——A son of Sarpedon. Virg. Æn. 9, 696 ——The grandfather of Amphiaraus. Homer. Odyss. 15, 242.——A man killed in the Trojan war by Leonteus. Homer. Il. 12, 191.

ANTIPHILI PORTUS, a harbour on the African side of the Red Sea. Strab. 16.

ANTIPHILUS, an Athenian who succeeded Leosthenes at the siege of Lamia against Antipater. Diod. 18.——An architect employed in building the public treasury of Sicyon in Elis. Paus. 6, 19.——A noble painter, who represented a youth leaning over a fire and blowing it, from which the whole house seemed to be illuminated. He was an Egyptian by birth; he imitated Apelles, and was disciple to Ctesidemus. Plin. 35, 10.

ANTIPHON, a poet ——An Athenian orator, born at Rhamnus in Attica, about B.C. 480. He was the first who wrote precepts on the art of oratory, and he first introduced the practice of pleading for hire. He exerted himself in establishing the tyranny of the 400 at Athens, and was for this offence condemned and executed Sixty orations under his name were once extant, but there now remain only fifteen. They are printed in the editions of the Greek orators. An orator who promised Philip, king of Macedonia, that he would set on fire the citadel of Athens, for which he was put to death, at the instigation of Demosthenes. Cic. de Div. 2.—Plut. in Alcib. et Demosth.——A poet who wrote on agriculture. Athen.——An author who wrote a treatise on peacocks.——A rich man introduced by Xenophon as disputing with Socrates.——

An Athenian who interpreted dreams, and wrote a history of his art. Cic. de Div. 1 et 2.——A foolish rhetorician.——A poet of Attica, who wrote tragedies, epic poems, and orations. Dionysius put him to death, because he refused to praise his compositions. Being once asked by the tyrant, what brass was the best? He answered, that with which the statues of Harmodius and Aristogiton are made. Plut.—Aristot.

ANTIPHŌNUS, a son of Priam, who went with his father to the tent of Achilles to redeem Hector. Homer. Il. 24.

ANTIPHUS, a son of Priam, killed by Agamemnon during the Trojan war.——A son of Thessalus, grandson to Hercules. He went to the Trojan war in 30 ships. Homer. Il. 2, 185——An intimate friend of Ulysses. Homer Od. 17.——A brother of Cimenus, was son of Ganyctor the Naupactian. These two brothers murdered the poet Hesiod, on the false suspicion that he had offered violence to their sister, and threw his body into the sea. The poet's dog discovered them, and they were seized and convicted of the murder. Plut de Solert. Anim.——A son of Pylemenes, who conducted the Maonians to the Trojan war. Homer. Il. 2.——A son of Myrmidon and Pisidice. Apollod. 1, 16.

ANTIPŒNUS, a noble Theban, whose daughters sacrificed themselves for the public safety. (Vid Androclea.)

ANTIPŌLIS, a city of Gaul, on the coast of the Mediterranean, south-east of the river Varus, founded by the Massilians. It is now Antibes Tacit. Hist. 2, 15.

ANTIRRHUM, a promontory on the Sinus Corinthiacus, or Gulf of Lepanto, opposite to Rhium, whence its name. These two promontories being fortified with castles, have been called the Dardanelles of Lepanto.

ANTISSA, a city of Lesbos, between the promontory Sigeum and Methymne. Having offended the Romans, it was destroyed by Labeo, and the inhabitants were transplanted to Methymne.——An island near it. Ovid. Met. 15, 287.—Plin. 2, 89.

ANTISTHENES an Athenian philosopher, the founder of the Cynic sect, flourished about 380 B C. He taught rhetoric, and had among his pupils the famous Diogenes; but when he had heard Socrates, he shut up his school, and told his pupils, "Go seek for yourselves a master; I have now found one." While he was a disciple of Socrates, he discovered his propensity towards severity of manners by the meanness of his dress, and frequently appeared in an old and ragged cloak. Socrates observing that he took pains to expose, rather than to conceal his tattered dress, said to him, "Why so ostentatious? through your rags, I see your vanity." He paid little respect to the gods and the religion of his country, though he seems to have entertained just notions concerning the Supreme Being. He wrote many books, of which none are extant, except two short orations entitled Ajax and Ulysses. These were published in the collection of ancient orators by H. Stephens, in 1575, and by J. J Reiske, in 1770—97. Cic. de Orat. 3, 35.—Diog. 6.—Plut. in Lyc.——A disciple of Heraclitus.——An historian of Rhodes. Diog.

ANTISTIUS LABEO, an excellent lawyer at Rome, who defended the liberties of his country against Augustus, whence Horace, paying court to Augustus, ridicules him for his insanity. Horat. Sat. 1, 3, 82.—Sueton. in Aug. 54.——Petro of Gabii, was the author of a celebrated treaty between Rome and his country in the age of Tarquin the proud Dionys Hal. 4.——C. Reginus, a lieutenant of Cæsar in Gaul. Cæs. Bell. G. 6 et 7.——A soldier of Pompey's army, so confident of his valour, that he challenged all the adherents of Cæsar. Hirt. Hisp. Bell. 25.

ANTITAURUS, a chain of mountains, extending from Armenia through Cappadocia to the west and south-west.

ANTITHEUS, an Athenian archon. Fasti, 7, 17.

ANTIUM, a maritime town of Italy, built by Ascanius, or, according to others, by a son of Ulysses and Circe, upon a promontory 32 miles east from Ostium. It was the capital of the Volsci, who made war against the Romans for above 200 years. Camillus took it, and carried all the beaks of their ships to Rome, and placed them in the Forum on a tribunal, which, from this circumstance, was called Rostra. This town was dedicated to the goddess of fortune, who had here a splendid temple. The famous Apollo Belvidere, the fighting gladiator, and many other statues, were discovered at Antium. It is now Anzo. Cic. de Div. 1.—Horat. Od. 1, 35.—Liv. 8, 14.

ANTOMĒNES, the last king of Corinth. After his death, magistrates with regal authority were chosen annually.

ANTŌNIA LEX was enacted by M. Antony, the consul, A. U. C. 708. It abrogated the lex Alia, and renewed the lex Cornelia, by taking away from the people the privilege of choosing priests, and restoring it to the college of priests, to which it originally belonged. Dio. 44.——Another by the same, A. U C. 703 It ordained that a new decury of judges should be added to the two former, and that they should be chosen from the centurions. Cic. in Philip. 1 et 5.——Another, by the same. It allowed an appeal to the people, to those who were condemned de majestate, or of perfidious measures against the state.——Another, by the same, during his triumvirate. It made it a capital offence to propose ever after the election of a dictator, and for any person to accept of the office. Appian. de Bell. Civ. 3.

ANTŌNIA, a daughter of M. Antony, by Octavia. She married Domitius Ænobarbus, and was mother of Nero and of two daughters.——A sister of Germanicus.——A daughter of Claudius and Ælia Petina. She was of the family of the Tubero's, and was repudiated for her levity. Sueton. in Claud. 1.—Tacit. Ann. 11.——The wife of Drusus, the son of Livia, and brother to Tiberius. She became mother of three children, Germanicus, Caligula's father; Claudius the emperor; and the debauched Livia. Her husband died very early, and she never would marry again, but spent her time in the education of her children. Some people suppose that her grandson Caligula ordered her to be poisoned, A. D. 33. Val. Max. 4, 3.——A tower or fortress of Jerusalem, situated at the north-west angle of the temple on a steep hill, and founded by Hyrcanus. It was originally named Baris; but Herod afterwards enlarged and fortified it, and called it Antonia, in honour of M. Antony.

ANTŌNII, a patrician and plebeian family, which were said to derive their origin from Antones, a son of Hercules, as Plut. in Anton. informs us.

ANTONINA, the wife of Belisarius, &c.

ANTONINOPOLIS, a city of Mesopotamia, north-east of Charræ and Edessa. It is supposed to have been founded by Severus or Caracalla, and named after the emperor Antoninus. It was subsequently called Constantia, from the emperor Constantius, who beautified and enlarged it.

ANTONINI VALLUM, the barrier erected by the Romans across the isthmus between the Forth and the Clyde. It was constructed A. D 140, and consisted of a ditch, from 12 to 14 feet wide, the wall being formed of the earth that was thrown up. A very considerable portion of the intrenchment may still be traced. Its modern name is Graham's Dyke.

ANTONINUS, or TITUS AURELIUS FULVIUS BOIONIUS ANTONINUS, surnamed Pius, was adopted by the emperor Adrian, to whom he succeeded in his fifty-second year. This prince is remarkable for all the virtues that can form a perfect statesman, a judicious philosopher, and a benevolent king. Directing the whole of his attention to the happiness of his people, he rebuilt whatever cities had been destroyed by wars in former reigns; and in cases of famine, or inundation, he relieved the distressed, and supplied their wants with his own money. He suffered the governors of the provinces to remain long in the administration, that no opportunity of extortion might be given to new comers. In his conduct towards his subjects, he behaved with affability and humanity, and listened with patience to every complaint brought before him. When told of conquering heroes, he said with Scipio, "I prefer the life and preservation of one citizen, to the death of a hundred enemies." He did not persecute the Christians like his predecessors, but his life was a scene of universal benevolence, ever active to spread order, happiness, and tranquillity over the whole earth. His last moments were easy, though preceded by a lingering illness. When consul of Asia, he lodged at Smyrna in the house of a sophist, who in civility obliged the governor to change his house at night. The sophist, when Antoninus became emperor, visited Rome, and was jocosely desired to use the palace as his own house, without any apprehension of being turned out at night. He extended the boundaries of the Roman province in Britain, by raising a rampart between the friths of Clyde and Forth (Vid. Antonini Vallum); but he waged no war during his reign, and only repulsed the enemies of the empire who appeared in the field. He died in the 75th year of his age, after a reign of 23 years, A.D. 161. He was succeeded by his adopted son, M. Aurelius Antoninus, surnamed the philosopher; a prince as humane and beloved as his father, though his virtues were of a severer and more laborious kind. The son acquired, by patient study and austere exercise, those high characters of temperance, moderation, and goodness, which in the father were the uncultivated fruits of nature and watchful experience.* Like Titus, the benign Marcus detested war as the disgrace and calamity of humanity; but he disdained to stoop to the insults of an enemy, or not to resent the ambiguous conduct of a perfidious friend. So highly finished a picture of moral excellence and universal benevolence do these two meritorious emperors afford to history, that they have drawn upon themselves the eyes and the admiration of posterity, as to a point where every thing that is great, perfect, venerable, just, and amiable, is happily centred. The 42 years during which they presided over the destinies of the empire, may be considered therefore as the most fortunate era of Rome, where absolute power and uncontrolled dominion were directed by wisdom and virtue to establish and to cement the happiness and the prosperity of a great nation. In conformity to the settlement recommended by Adrian, Marcus adopted and raised to the imperial dignity Verus, the son of Ælius Verus, a youth whose voluptuousness and dissipation were as conspicuous as the moderation of the philosopher. During their reign, the Quadi, Parthians, and Marcomanni were defeated. Antoninus wrote a book in Greek, entitled τα εἰς ἑαυτον, concerning himself. The most valued editions are those with Gataker's notes, particularly that of Cambridge, 4to, 1652; and of Oxford, 8vo, 1704. The best translation is that by R. Graves, M.A. After the war with the Quadi had been finished, Verus died of an apoplexy, and Antoninus survived him eight years, and died at Vindobona, now Vienna, apparently of a pestilential disease which prevailed in the army, in the 55th year of his age, after a reign of somewhat more than 19 years. Dio. Cass.

——Bassianus Caracalla, was son of the emperor Septimius Severus. He was appointed, with his brother Geta, to succeed to the empire, but the animosity of these two brothers against each other was so violent, that neither respect for their own character, nor deference to the voice of their mother, nor regard for the happiness of Rome, could produce a reconciliation. Geta's more popular conduct at last brought down upon him the malicious vengeance of his brother, and he was stabbed in his mother's arms. The innocent friends of this unfortunate youth felt too, in these turbulent times, the dangers of suspected confidence and not less than 20,000 were devoted to death for their pretended attachment to Geta. These foul crimes were avenged by the severe and unceasing tortures of conscience, which often pictured before the eyes of the affrighted murderer the phantoms of a bleeding brother and an upbraiding father. It is said, that this suspicious tyrant attempted to destroy the writings of Aristotle, observing that Aristotle was one of those who sent poison to Alexander. He married his mother, and publicly lived with her, which gave occasion to the people of Alexandria to say, that he was an Œdipus, and his wife a Jocasta. This joke was fatal to them; and the emperor, to punish their ill language, slaughtered many thousands in Alexandria. After assuming the name and dress of Achilles, and styling himself the conqueror of provinces which he had never seen, Caracalla was, to the universal joy of the Roman people, assassinated at Edessa, by Macrinus, whom he had devoted to death, April 8, in the 43d year of his age, A.D 217. His body was sent to his wife Julia, who stabbed herself at the sight. He was succeeded by his murderer. Dio. 77.—Herodian. 4.—Hist. August.——There is extant a Greek itinerary, and another book called Itin Britannicum, which some have attributed to the emperor Antoninus, though it was more probably written by a person of that name, whose age is unknown.

M. ANTONIUS GNIPHO, a poet of Gaul, who taught rhetoric at Rome. Cicero and other illustrious men frequented his school. He never asked anything for his lectures, whence he received more from the liberality of his pupils

Sueton. de Illustr. Gr. 7.——A famous orator, grandfather to the triumvir of the same name. He was slain during the disturbances raised by Marius and Cinna, and his head was stuck upon a pole, before that very rostrum where he had so often defended the cause of his country. Cicero says, that in him Rome might rival Greece itself for eloquence, and, when lamenting his fall, speaks as if ominously of the fate which awaited himself Cic. in Brut. 36. Orat 3, 8. Ad. Quas. post Red. 5 — Val Max 9, 2.— Lucan. 2, 121.—— Marcus, surnamed Cretacus, the eldest son of the orator of the same name, by means of Cotta and Cethegus, obtained from the senate the office of managing the corn on the maritime coasts of the Mediterranean, with unlimited power. This gave him many opportunities of plundering the provinces and enriching himself He died of a broken heart, it is said, upon being vanquished by the Cretans, against whom he had unjustly waged war. Cic. Verr. 2, 3 — Liv. 97.— Sallust. Frag ——Caius, a son of the orator of that name, who obtained a troop of horse from Sylla, and plundered Achaia He was carried before the prætor M Lucullus, and banished from the senate by the censors for pillaging the allies, and refusing to appear when summoned before justice ——Caius, son of Antonius Caius, was consul with Cicero, and assisted him to destroy the conspiracy of Catiline in Gaul, though he has been suspected by some of favouring the traitor, because he delivered the command of the army to his lieutenant Petreius He went to Macedonia, as his province, and fought with ill success against the Dardani On his return, he was accused by Cælius of plundering the provinces, and upon full conviction was sent into perpetual exile. Cic. Fat. 11. Cat. 31. Sallust. Catil. 24 et 59 — Liv. 105 ——Marcus, the triumvir, was grandson to the orator M. Antonius, and son of Antonius, surnamed Cretensis, from his wars in Crete. He was augur and tribune of the people, in which he distinguished himself by his ambitious views. He always entertained a secret resentment against Cicero, which arose from Cicero's having put to death Corn. Lentulus, who was concerned in Catiline's conspiracy. This Lentulus had married Antonius's mother after his father's death. When the senate was torn by the factions of Pompey's and Cæsar's adherents, Antony proposed that both should lay aside the command of their armies in the provinces; but as this proposition met not with success, he privately retired from Rome to the camp of Cæsar, and advised him to march his army to Rome. In support of his attachment, he commanded the left wing of his army at Pharsalia, and, according to a premeditated scheme, offered him a diadem, at the Lupercalia, in the presence of the Roman people When Cæsar was assassinated in the senate house, Antony was also apprehensive that the same fate awaited him, but his life was spared by the moderation of Brutus; and thus, as Cicero has observed, the conspirators left their work unfinished. When the ferment occasioned by Cæsar's death was abated, Antony at last came forth from his concealment, and so prevailed on the murderers by his artifice, that they were apparently reconciled to him. He gradually, however, threw off the mask, and, equally ambitious as Cæsar had been, to become the first man in Rome, he began to take such steps as might be necessary to supplant Brutus, who was the great obstacle to his views in the affections of the people. For this purpose he pronounced a funeral oration over the body of the dictator, in which he adverted to every circumstance that could move the pity, or rouse the indignation of the multitude, and succeeded so well, that the conspirators, to avoid the rage of the deluded populace, were under the necessity of retiring from the city. And having got possession of all Cæsar's papers, containing his journals of the past, and his plans for the future, and also of Faberius, the secretary, by whose hand they were written, he was able to regulate every thing in the army, the senate, and all other departments in the state, as he found most conducive to his own interests. Intent only to raise his power above that of the state, he advanced in the road of ambition, and, as if aiming for the public weal, he attacked and defeated the forces of his personal enemies. He besieged Mutina, which had been allotted to Decimus Brutus; and for this the senate declared him a public enemy, at the remonstrance of Cicero The consuls Hirtius and Pansa took the field against him, and along with Octavius, the heir of Cæsar, whom his harshness had exasperated, advanced to Mutina, in order to raise the siege. In the first engagement Antony had the advantage, and Pansa was mortally wounded, but he was defeated the same day by Hirtius, as he was returning to his camp. In a subsequent engagement, Antony was again vanquished, his lines were forced, and Octavius had an opportunity of distinguishing himself, Hirtius being slain in the action, and the whole command devolving on the former. Antony, after this check, retreated to the other side of the Alps, where Lepidus and Munatius Plancus were encamped; and having with some difficulty prevailed upon them to join him, he marched back into Italy with a large army. But Octavius, who perceived that Cicero, with whom he had hitherto been united, wished to restore the state to its former liberty, instead of opposing Antony, soon came to an accommodation with him: and at last these two generals, along with Lepidus, met, and divided among themselves the empire of the world, as if it had been their paternal inheritance. This was formed that infamous triumvirate, which makes such a dark and bloody figure in Roman history; and which was established with such cruel proscriptions, that Antony did not even spare his own uncle, that he might strike off the head of his enemy Cicero. The triumvirate divided the Roman empire among themselves, Lepidus was set over all Italy, Augustus had the west, and Antony returned into the east where he enlarged his dominions by different conquests. Antony had married Fulvia, whom he repudiated to marry Octavia, the sister of Augustus, and by this connexion to strengthen the triumvirate. He assisted Augustus at the battle of Philippi against the murderers of J. Cæsar, and he buried the body of M. Brutus, his enemy, in a most magnificent manner During his residence in the east, he became enamoured of the fair Cleopatra, queen of Egypt, and repudiated Octavia to marry her This divorce incensed Augustus, who now prepared to deprive Antony of all his power. Antony, in the mean time, assembled all the forces of the east, and with Cleopatra marched against Octavius. These two enemies met at Actium where a naval engagement soon began but Cleopatra, by flying with 60 sail, drew Antony from the battle and ruined his cause. After the battle of Actium, Antony followed Cleopatra into Egypt, where he was soon informed of the defection of all his allies and adherents, and saw the conqueror on his shores. Dreading the dishonour of being led in triumph by his victorious enemy, and sensible that all hopes of reconciliation were lost, he stabbed himself, and Cleopatra likewise killed herself by the bite of an asp. Antony died in the 56th year of his age, B. C. 30, and the conqueror shed tears when he was informed that his enemy was no more. Antony left seven children by his three wives. He has been blamed for his great effeminacy, for his uncommon love of pleasure, and his fondness of drinking. It is said that he wrote a book in praise of drunkenness. He was fond of imitating Hercules, from whom, according to some accounts, he was descended; and he is often represented as Hercules, with Cleopatra in the form of Omphale, dressed in the arms of her submissive lover, and beating him with her sandals. In his public character, Antony was brave and courageous, but with the intrepidity of Cæsar, he possessed all his voluptuous inclinations. He was prodigal to a degree, and did not scruple to call, from vanity, his sons by Cleopatra, kings of kings. His fondness for low company, and his licentiousness, form the best parts of Cicero's Philippics. It is said, that on the night of Cæsar's murder, Cassius supped with Antony; and, being asked whether he had a dagger with him, answered, yes, if you, Antony, aspire to sovereign power. Plutarch has written an account of his life. Virg. Æn. 8, 685. —Horat. Ep. 9.—Juv. 10, 123.—C. Nep in Attic —Cic. in Philip.—Justin. 41 et 42.—Julius, son of Antony the triumvir, by Fulvia, was consul with Paulus Fabius Maximus. He was surnamed Pompanus, and was put to death by order of Augustus, for his criminal conversation with Julia, the emperor's daughter. Some say that he killed himself. It is supposed that he wrote an heroic poem on Diomede, in twelve books. Horace dedicated the second Ode of the fourth book to him. Tacit Ann. 4, 44.—Lucius, the triumvir's brother, was besieged in Perusium by Augustus, and obliged to surrender himself, with 300 men, by famine. The conqueror spared his life. Some say that he was killed at the shrine of Cæsar.—A noble but unfortunate youth, grandson of the triumvir. His father, Julius, was put to death by Augustus, and he himself was removed by the emperor to Marseilles, on pretence of finishing his education. Tacit. Ann. 4, 44.—Felix, a freedman of Claudius, appointed governor of Judæa. He married Drusilla, the daughter of Antony and Cleopatra. Tacit. Hist. 4, 5.—Flamma, a Roman condemned for extortion under Vespasian. Tacit. Hist 4, 45.—Musa, a physician of Augustus. Plin. 29, 1.—Merenda, a decemvir at Rome in A. U. C. 304. Liv 3, 35.—Q. Merenda, a military tribune, A. U. C. 333. Liv. 4, 42.

ANTORIDES, a painter, disciple to Aristippus. Plin.

ANTRO CORACIUS. (Vid Coracius.)

ANTYLLA. (Vid Anthylla.)

ANUBIS, the faithful companion of Osiris and Isis, represented under the figure of a man with a dog's head, holding in one hand a branch of palm, in the other a caduceus. He was probably emblematical of Sirius, the dog-star, and was supposed to give warning of the approach of the Nile's inundation, as a dog rouses to vigilance by his barking. Temples and priests were consecrated to him, and his image was carried in all religious processions. His worship was introduced from Egypt into Greece and Italy. When Mundus had corrupted the priests of Anubis at Rome to offer violence to Paulina, the wife of Saturninus, the worship of the god was abolished, and the temple levelled with the ground. Dod. 1.—Lucan. 8, 831.—Ovid. Met. 9, 686.—Plut. de Isid. et Osirid.—Herod. 4.—Virg. Æn 8, 698.

ANXIUS, a river of Armenia, falling into the Euphrates.

ANXUR, a city of the Volsci, taken by the Romans, A. U. C 348. It was sacred to Jupiter Anxurus, who was there represented in the form of a beardless boy. It stood on the lofty rock at the foot of which the modern Terracina is situated. Liv 4, 59.—Horat. Sat 1, 5, 26.—Lucan. 3, 84.—Virg. Æn. 7, 799.

ANYTA, a Greek woman, some of whose elegant verses are still extant.

ANYTUS an Athenian rhetorician, who with Melitus and Lycon, accused Socrates of impiety, and was the cause of his condemnation. The so false accusers were afterwards put to death by the Athenians. Diog.—Ælian. V. H. 2, 13.—Horat, Sat. 2, 4, 3.—Plut. in Alcib.——One of the Titans. Paus. 8, 37.

ANZABAS, a river near the Tigris. Marcell. 18. (Vid. Zabatus.)

AOLLIUS, a son of Romulus by Hersilia, afterwards called Abillius.

AON, a son of Neptune, who came to Rubœa and Bœotia from Apulia, where he collected the inhabitants into cities and reigned over them. They were called Aones, and the country Aonia, from him.

AONES, the inhabitants of Aonia, called afterwards Bœotia. They, jointly with the Hyantes, succeeded the Ectenes. At the arrival of Cadmus, the Hyantes took up arms to oppose him, but the Aones submitted, and were incorporated with the Phœnicians. The muses were called Aonæ, from mount Helicon in Bœotia. Paus. 9, 5.—Ovid. Met. 5, 7, 10, 13. Trist. El. 5, 10. Fast 3, 456 4, 245.—Virg. G. 3, 11.

AONIA, one of the ancient names of Bœotia.

AORIS, a famous hunter, son of Aras king of Corinth. He was so fond of his sister Arathyrea, that he called part of the country by her name. Paus. 2, 12.——The wife of Neleus, called more commonly Chloris. Id. 9, 36.

AORNOS, AORNUS, AORNIS, a lofty rock in India, taken by Alexander. It was so high that birds were said to be unable to reach the summit, whence the name. Its strength was reputed to be so great, that Hercules, who had besieged it, was unable to take it; and Alexander would probably have never gained possession of it, but for some ingenious manœuvres, which frightened the garrison, and caused them to abandon it. It is now called Ohund. Dionys. Per. 1149.—Curt. 8, 11.—Arrian 4.—Strab. 15.—Plut in Alex.——Another in Bactriana, east of Zariaspa Bactra. It is now Telekan, situated on a high mountain called Nork-kok, or the mountain of silver.——A place in Epirus, with an oracle. Paus. 9, 30.——A certain lake near Tartessus.——Another near Baiæ and Puteoli, celebrated for the descent of Ulysses to the infernal regions, and said to have obtained its name from the exhalations of its waters proving fatal to birds. It was also called Avernus. Virg Æn. 5, 213

AORSI, a powerful and numerous people on the shores of the Caspian, who had the whole trade of the neighbouring countries in their hands, and who conducted upon their camels the merchandise of India and Babylon, which they received from the Armenians and Medes, to the eastern parts of Europe.

AOTI, a people of Thrace, near the Getæ, on the Ister. Plin. 4.

APAITÆ, a people of Asia Minor. Strab.

APAMA, a daughter of Artaxerxes, who married Pharnabazus, satrap of Ionia. ——A daughter of Antiochus. Paus. 1, 6.

APAMEA, the mother of Nicomedes, by Prusias king of Bithynia.——The mother of Antiochus Soter, by Seleucus Nicanor. Soter founded a city which he called by his mother's name.

APAMIA, or APAMEA, a city of Phrygia, founded by Antiochus Soter in honour of his mother, on the ruins of Cibotus. It was situated at the junction of the Marsyas and Maeander, only a mile or two from Celænæ, and became one of the greatest marts of trade in the whole of Asia Minor. It is now called Amphion-kara-hissar, or the black castle of opium, which narcotic is prepared in its neighbourhood. ——Another in Bithynia, founded by the Colophonians, and named Myrlæa. It was destroyed in the war between Prusias the Second, king of Bithynia, and Philip the Third of Macedon, but subsequently restored by Prusias, who called it Apamea, in honour of his queen. It was afterwards colonized by the Romans.——Another in Syria, at the confluence of the Orontes and Marsyas, which form a small lake. It was built by Antigonus, who called it Pella, after the famous city of that name in Macedonia, but Seleucus Nicator afterwards improved it, and named it Apamea, in honour of his wife. It was a place of such plenty, that Seleucus made it the great depot of his army, and kept in it five hundred elephants. It was ruined by the Saracens, and is now a very insignificant place called Famieh.——Another in Mesopotamia, on the Tigris, in a district which lay between the canal and the river, whence the epithet Mesenes applied to this city, because it was in the midst of that small territory which is now called Dujel. ——Another on the confines of Media and Parthia, not far from Ragæ. It was surnamed Raphane.——Another at the junction of the Euphrates and Tigris, now Corny.——Another at the pass of Zeugma, south-west of Edessa.

APARNI, a nation of shepherds near the Caspian sea. Strab.

APATURIA, a festival first celebrated by the Athenians, and afterwards by the rest of the Ionians, except those of Ephesus and Colophon. It is said to have received its name from ἀπάτη, deceit, because it was instituted in memory of a stratagem by which Melanthius, the Athenian king, overcame Xanthus, king of Boeotia. In memory of this success, Jupiter was surnamed Ἀπατούριος, deceiver. It being also pretended that a person habited in a black goat-skin had been seen before the engagement, Bacchus was surnamed Μελαναιγίς, and was honoured with a new temple, and the institution of this festival. It is, however, more probable that Ἀπατούρια was so called as if Ἀνατόρια, that is, ὁμογαστρία, because at this festival children accompanied their fathers that their names might be entered in the public register; or because they were in a certain sense ἀπάτορες, without fathers, till they had been publicly registered as the children of their fathers. The festival commenced on the twenty-second day of the month Πυανεψιών, and continued three days. The first day was called Δορπεία, from δόρπον, a supper; because in the evening of that day each tribe met, and had a sumptuous entertainment. The second day was named Ἀναῤῥύσεις, ἀπὸ τοῦ ἀνω ἑρύσαι, because on this day victims were offered to Jupiter Φράτριος and Ἀναστήσιος, and to Minerva, in whose sacrifices (as in all offered to the celestial deities) it was customary ἀνω ἑρύσαι τὰς κεφαλάς, to turn the heads of the victims upwards towards heaven. At this sacrifice the children enrolled among the citizens were placed close to the altar. It was usual also for persons richly attired to run about with lighted torches, and sing hymns in praise of Vulcan, who first taught men the use of that element. The third day was called Κουρεωτις, from κουρος, a youth or from κουρα, shaving, because the youth had their hair cut off, before they were presented to be registered. At this time the fathers were obliged to swear that both themselves and the mothers of the young men were freeborn Athenians. It was also customary to offer two ewes and a she goat in sacrifice to Diana, which they called Θύσια φρατριαν; the she-goat was termed αἶξ φράτριος, and the ewe ὄις φρατρία. The victim was to be of a certain weight; and because it once happened that the spectators cried out in jest, Μίκον, μίκον, too little, too little; it was afterwards called μῆκος, and the persons who offered it were denominated μεσαγωγοί. Aristoph. Schol Acharn.—Theophrast. Charact. Ethic. 4.—Hesych.—Athen. 4.——A surname of Minerva,——of Venus.

APEAUROS, a mountain of Peloponnesus. Polyb. 4.

APELLA, a word, Horat. 1, Sat 5, 10 which has given much trouble to critics and commentators. Some suppose it to mean circumcised, (sine pelle), an epithet highly applicable to a Jew. Others maintain that it is a proper name, upon the authority of Cicero ad Attic. Ep. 12, 19, who mentions a person of the same name.

APELLES, a celebrated painter of Cos, or, as others say, of Ephesus, son of Pithius. He flourished in the time of Alexander the Great, and was in such high favour with that prince, that no other painter was allowed to draw his portrait. Edicto vetuit, ne quis se praeter Apellem pingeret. Apelles was so devoted to his profession, that he never suffered a day to elapse without exercising his pencil, whence the proverb of Nulla dies sine linea. The most famous of all his paintings was the Venus Anadyomene, or Venus rising out of the sea. This piece was painted for the inhabitants of the isle of Cos, and was by them hung up in the temple of Æsculapius. It was purchased from them by Augustus, by the remission of a hundred talents of tribute. The lower part of the painting had been injured by length of time, and no painter could be found who would undertake to replace what was wanting. He made a painting of Alexander holding thunder in his hand so much like life, that Pliny, who saw it, says that the hand of the king with the thunder seemed to come out of the picture. This picture was placed in Diana's temple at Ephesus. He made another of Alexander, but the king expressed not much satisfaction at the sight of it, and at that moment a horse, passing by, neighed at the horse which was represented in the piece, supposing it to be alive, upon which the painter said, "One would imagine that the horse is a better judge of painting than your majesty." When Alexander ordered him to draw the picture of Campaspe, one of his mistresses, Apelles became enamoured of her, and the king permitted him to marry her. He wrote three volumes upon painting, which were still extant in the age of Pliny. It is said that he was acc[illegible] in Egypt of conspiring against the life of Ptolemy, and that he would have been put to death had not the real conspirator discovered himself, and saved the painter. Apelles never put his name to any pictures but three; a sleeping Venus, Venus Anadyomene, and an Alexander. It is said that he used only four colours, white, yellow, red, and black, but with such skill and judgment, that none of the ancients ever surpassed him in delicacy of colouring or sublimity of expression. The proverb of Ne sutor ultra crepidam, is applied to him by some. Plin. 35, 10.—Horat. Ep. 2, 1, 235.—Cic. in Famil 1, 9.—Ovid. de Art. Am 3, 401.—Val. Max. 8, 11.——A tragic writer. Suet. Calig. 33.——A Macedonian general.——A heretic of the second century, who denied the prophets, the law of Moses, and the resurrection.

APELLICON, a Teian peripatetic philosopher, who lived at Athens about 90 B.C. He was very rich, and spared no cost in purchasing books. He bought the works of Aristotle and Theophrastus. (Vid. Sneptis.) Conveying them to Athens, he there caused them to be copied; but the transcribers supplied such passages as were become illegible, and thus many corruptions were introduced into the text. After the death of Apellicon, Sylla, at the taking of Athens, seized his library, and ordered it to be conveyed to Rome. Apellicon seems to have taken more pains to obtain possession of the writings of philosophers than to understand them. Strabo calls him a lover of books, rather than a lover of wisdom:—φιλοβιβλος μαλλον η φιλοσοφος. Strab. 13.

APENNINUS, a chain of mountains in Italy, which leaving the Maritime Alps, in the neighbourhood of Genoa, runs diagonally across Italy, to the sources of the Arnus and Tiberis, whence it proceeds southward through its whole length, terminating in the promontory of Leucopetra, near Rhegium. The highest point of this chain is Mons Cumarus, now Monte Corno, which is about 8790 feet above the level of the sea. Lucan. 2, 390.—Ovid. Met. 2, 226.—Sil. Ital. 4, 743.—Strab. 2.—Mela, 2, 4.

APER, MARCUS, a Roman orator, who distinguished himself by his genius and eloquence, and occupied several important posts in the empire. The dialogue on the corruption of eloquence, inserted with the works of Tacitus and Quintilian, is attributed to him. He died about A.D. 85.——Another. (Vid. Numerianus.)

APEROPIA, a small island on the coast of Argolis. Pans. 2, 34.

APESUS, APESAS, or APESANTUS a mountain of Peloponnesus, near Lerna. Stat. in Theb. 3, 461.

APHACA, a town of Palestine, between Heliopolis and Byblus, celebrated for a temple of Venus, which was destroyed by Constantine the Great, on account of the wantonness of its votaries. Euseb. Vita Const. Mag. 3, 55.

APHÆA, a name of Diana, who had a temple in Ægina. Pans. 2, 30.

APHAR, the capital city of Arabia, situate on the coast of the Red sea. It is now Al-Farar, between Mecca and Medina. Arrian in Peripl.

APHARÉTUS, fell in love with Marpessa, daughter of Œnomaus, and carried her away.

APHAREUS, a king of Messenia, son of Perieres and Gorgophone, who married Arene, daughter of Œbalus, by whom he had three sons, Idas, Pisus, and Lynceus. He had reigned for some time conjointly with his brother Leucippus, but he soon afterwards seized upon the undivided sovereignty. He granted the maritime parts of his kingdom to Neleus, who settled there after he had been driven from Iolchos. Apollod. 1, 23. 3, 10.—Ovid. Met. 12, 345.—Pans. A. 1.——A relation of Isocrates, who wrote thirty seven tragedies.——A son of Caletor, killed by Æneas during the Trojan war. Homer. Il. 9, 83. 13, 478 et 541.

APHAS, a river of Greece, which falls into the bay of Ambracia. Plin. 4, 1.

APHELLAS, a king of Cyrene, who, with the aid of Agathocles, endeavoured to reduce all Africa under his power. Justin. 22, 7.

APHESAS, a mountain in Peloponnesus, whence, as the poets have imagined, Perseus attempted to fly to heaven. Stat. Theb. 3, 461.

APHETÆ, now Fetio, a city of Thessaly, at the entrance of the Sinus Pelasgicus, or Gulf of Volo, where Xerxes stationed his fleet previous to the battle of Artemisium, and from which the ship Argo is said to have taken her departure for Colchis. Apoll. Argon. 1, 591.—Herod. 7. 193 et 196.

APHIDAS, a son of Arcas, king of Arcadia who inherited Tegea and the neighbouring country, when he divided with his brothers the patrimony of their father. His son Aleus succeeded him on the throne. Pans. 8, 4.——A famous sleeper. Ovid Met. 12, 317.

APHIDNA, a part of Attica, which received its name from Aphidnus, one of the companions of Theseus. Herod.

APHIDNUS, a friend of Æneas, killed by Turnus. Virg. Æn. 9, 702.

APHNEUS, a surname of Mars, from a temple he had in Arcadia on mount Cresius, after his amour with Ærope, the daughter of Cepheus as mentioned by Pans. 8, 44.

APHOBÉTUS, one of the conspirators against Alexander. Curt. 6, 7.

APHRICES, an Indian prince, who defended the rock Aornus, with 20,000 foot and 15 elephants. He was killed by his troops, and his head sent to Alexander.

APHRODISIA, festivals in honour of Venus several of which were observed in different parts of Greece. The most remarkable of them was that at Cyprus, first instituted by Cinyras; out of whose family were elected certain priests of Venus, who for that reason were called συνεργάδαι. At this solemnity several mysterious rites were practised; and they who were initiated into them offered a piece of money to Venus as an harlot and received in token of the favour of the goddess a measure of salt, and a φαλλος: the former, because salt comes from the sea, whence the goddess herself sprang, and the latter, because she was the goddess of wantonness. At Amathus, a city of Cyprus, they offered to Venus solemn sacrifices, which were called καρπόκαυστα, from καρπὸς, fruit, perhaps because this goddess presided over generation. The festival of Venus was celebrated at both the Paph-not only by the inhabitants of those places, but by multitudes who resorted thither from other cities.' At Corinth it was celebrated by harlots. Strab. 14.—Athen. 13.—Arnob. 5.—Hesych. ——A town of Thrace, north of the Chersonesus Thracica, between Cardia and Heraclea.

APHRODISIAS, an island in the Persian gulf, sacred to Venus and Mercury.——A town of Caria, sacred to Venus. It lay east of Alabanda, on the borders of Phrygia. Now Ghera. Tacit. Ann. 3, 62.——Another in Cilicia, which appears to have been of some consequence in the time of Antiochus Magnus. Liv. 33, 20.

APHRODISUM an island on the coast of Bœtica.——A promontory of Caria, near Cnidus.

APHRODITE, the Grecian name of Venus, from ἀφρος, froth, because Venus is said to have been born from the froth of the ocean. Hesiod. Th. 193.—Plin. 36, 5.

APHRODITOPŌLIS, a city of Egypt, the capital of the 36th Nome, sacred to the goddess Aphrodite, and celebrated for the worship of a white heifer. Its name is still preserved in the modern Afsteh, but its ruins are found at Doulab-el-Hafseh.——Another in the same country, the capital of the 42d Nome, now Ifu.——Another in the same country, belonging to the Nome Hermonthites, now Asfun.

APHYTE, or APHYTIS, a city of Thrace, in the peninsula of Pallene, on the Sinus Thermaicus, where Jupiter Ammon was worshipped. Lysander besieged the town, but the god of the place appeared to him in a dream, and advised him to raise the siege, which he not only immediately did, but introduced the worship of the god with greater ceremonies among his countrymen. Theophrastus speaks of the vine of Aphyte. Herod. 7, 123.—Paus. 3, 18.—Theophrast. 3, 20.

APIA, an ancient name of Peloponnesus, which it received from king Apis. It was afterwards called Ægialea, Pelasgia, Argia, and at last Peloponnesus, or the island of Pelops. Homer Il. 1, 270.——Also the name of the earth, worshipped among the Lydians as a powerful deity. Herod. 4, 59.

APIANUS, or APION, was born at Oasis in Egypt, whence he went to Alexandria, of which he was deemed a citizen. He succeeded Theus in the profession of rhetoric in the reign of Tiberius, and wrote, among other works, a book against the Jews, which Josephus refuted. Apion rendered himself ridiculous for his great vanity. He not only abused the learning which he possessed, in trifling and unprofitable researches, but he often made his page the vehicle of abusive language and intemperate satire, and he was not ashamed to boast that he conferred immortality on those to whom he dedicated any of his writings. Aul. Gellius, 1 et 5.—Senec Ep. 88.—Plin. Præf. in Hist. Nat.

APICĀTA, married Sejanus, by whom she had three children. She was repudiated. Tacit. Ann. 4, 3.

APICIUS, the name of three celebrated Roman gluttons. The first lived in the time of the republic, about the age of Sylla; the second in the reign of Augustus and Tiberius; and the third, who had an admirable secret of pickling oysters, under Trajan. The second was the most noted of these epicures. He kept a kind of school of gluttony, and spent in splendid entertainments a hundred million of sesterces (millies sestertium) or about L.853,601 sterling; but finding his finances reduced to about L.80,000, he poisoned himself for fear of starving. There is extant a treatise de re culinaria, with the name of Apicius prefixed; but it is thought to be spurious. Tacit. Ann. 4, 1.—Senec. ad Helviam, 10.—Juv 11, 3.—Martial. 2, 69. 3, 22 10, 73.

APIDĀNUS, one of the chief rivers of Thessaly, which, after receiving the Enipeus, enters the right bank of the Peneus, a little west of Larissa. It is now the Salatdge. Eurip. Hec. 450.—Lucan. 6, 374.

APINA, and APINÆ, a city of Apulia, destroyed with Trica, in its neighbourhood, by Diomedes; whence came the proverb of Apina et Trica, to express trifling things. Martial. 14, 87. —Plin. 3, 11.

APIŌLA and APIOLÆ, a town of Italy, taken by Tarquin the proud. The Roman capitol was begun with the spoils taken from that city. Plin. 3, 5.

APION, a surname of Ptolemy, one of the descendants of Ptolemy Lagus.——A grammarian. (Vid. Apianus.)

APIS, one of the ancient kings of Peloponnesus, son of Phoroneus and Laodice. Some say that Apollo was his father, and that he was king of Argos, while others call him king of Sicyon, and fix the time of his reign above 200 years earlier, which is enough to show that he is but obscurely known, if known at all. He was a native of Naupactum, and descended from Inachus. He received divine honours after death, as he had been munificent and humane to his subjects. The country where he reigned was called Apia; afterwards it received the name of Pelasgia, Argia, or Argolis, and at last that of Peloponnesus, from Pelops. Some, amongst whom are Varro and St Augustine, have imagined that Apis went to Egypt with a colony of Greeks, and that he civilized the inhabitants, and polished their manners, for which they made him a god after death, and paid divine honours to him under the name of Serapis. This tradition, according to some of the moderns, is without foundation. Æschyl in Suppl.—August de Civ. Dei. 18, 5.—Paus. 2, 5.—Apollod. 2, 1.—— A son of Jason, born in Arcadia; he was killed by the horses of Etolus. Paus 5, 1.——A town of Egypt, on the lake Mareotis.——A god of the Egyptians, worshipped under the form of an ox. Some say that Isis and Osiris are the deities worshipped under this name, because during their reign they taught the Egyptians agriculture. The Egyptians believed that the soul of Osiris was really departed into the ox, where it wished to dwell, because that animal had been of the most essential service in the cultivation of the ground, which Osiris had introduced into Egypt. The ox that was chosen was always distinguished by particular marks; his body was black; he had a square white spot upon the forehead, the figure of an eagle upon the back, a knot under the tongue like a beetle, the hairs of his tail were double, and his right side was marked with a whitish spot, resembling the crescent of the moon. Without these an ox could not be taken as the god Apis; and it is to be imagined that the priests gave these distinguishing characteristics to the animal on which their credit and even prosperity depended. The festival of Apis lasted seven days; the ox was led in a solemn procession by the priests, and every one was anxious to receive him into his house, and it was believed that the children who smelt his breath received the knowledge of futurity. The ox was conducted to the banks of the Nile with much ceremony, and if he had lived to the time which their sacred books allowed, they drowned him in the river, and embalmed his body, and buried it in solemn state in the city of Memphis. After his death, which sometimes was natural, the greatest cries and lamentations were heard in Egypt, as if Osiris was just dead; and the priests shaved their heads, which was a sign of the deepest mourning. This continued till another ox appeared with the proper characteristics to succeed as the deity, which was followed with the greatest acclamations, as if Osiris were returned to life. This ox, which was found to represent Apis, was left 40 days in the city of the Nile before he was carried to Memphis, during which time none but women were permitted to appear before him, and this they performed, according to their superstitious notions, in a wanton and indecent manner. There was also an ox worshipped at Heliopolis, under the name of Mnevis, some suppose that he was Osiris, but others maintain that the Apis of Memphis was sacred to Osiris, and Mnevis to Isis. When Cambyses came into Egypt, the people were celebrating the festivals of Apis with every mark of joy and triumph, which the conqueror interpreted as an insult upon himself. He called the priests of Apis, and ordered the deity itself to come before him. When he saw that an ox was the object of their veneration, and the cause of such rejoicings, he wounded it on the thigh, ordered the priests to be chastised, and commanded his soldiers to slaughter such as were found celebrating such riotous festivals. The god Apis had generally two stables, or rather temples. If he eat from the hand, it was a favourable omen; but if he refused the food that was offered him, it was interpreted as unlucky. From this, Germanicus, when he visited Egypt, drew the omens of his approaching death. When his oracle was consulted, incense was burnt on an altar, and a piece of money placed upon it, after which the people that wished to know futurity applied their ear to the mouth of the god, and immediately retired, stopping their ears till they had departed from the temple. The first sounds that were heard, were taken as the answer of the oracle to their questions. Paus 7, 23.—Herod 2 et 3.—Plin. 8, 38, &c.—Strab. 7.—Plut. in Isid et Osir.—Apollod 1, 7. 2. 1.—Mela, 1, 9.—Plin. 8, 39, &c.—Strab. 7.—Ælian. V. H. 4 et 6.—Diod 1.

APHAON, son of Hippasus, assisted Priam against the Greeks, at the head of a Paeonian army, and was killed by Lycomedes. Homer il. 17, 348.——Another on the same side, killed by Eurypilus. Id. 11, 576.

APHIUS GALBA, a celebrated buffoon in the time of Tiberius. Juv. 5, 4.

APOLLINARES LUDI, games celebrated at Rome in honour of Apollo. They originated from the following circumstance: an old prophetic poem informed the Romans, that if they instituted yearly games to Apollo, and made a collection of money for his service, they would be able to expel the enemy whose approach already threatened their destruction. The first time they were celebrated, Rome was alarmed by the approach of the enemy, and instantly the people rushed out of the city, and saw a cloud of arrows discharged from the sky on the troops of the enemy. With this heavenly assistance they easily obtained the victory. The people generally sat crowned with laurel at the representation of these games, which were usually celebrated at the option of the prætor, till the year A. U. C. 545, when a law was passed to settle the celebration yearly on the same day about the nones of July. When this alteration happened, Rome was infested with a dreadful pestilence, which, however, seemed to be appeased by this act of religion. These games were merely scenical, and not unlike the puppetshows of modern times. Liv. 25, 12. 27, 23.

APOLLINARIS, C. Sulpitius, a grammarian of Carthage, flourished in the second century, under the Antonines. He was succeeded in his profession by his pupil, Helvius Pertinax, who afterwards became emperor. He also had among his pupils Aulus Gellius, who speaks in the highest commendation of his learning, and admires that modesty and diffidence in him which does not impose upon the world, but rather conceals, superiority of talents and greatness of genius. Jul Capitol. in Pertin.—Aul. Gell 13, 4.——A writer better known by the name of Sidonius. (Vid Sidonius.)

APOLLINIDES, a Greek in the wars of Darius and Alexander, &c. Curt 3, 5.

APOLLINIS ARX, a place at the entrance of the Sibyl's cave. Virg. Æn 6.——Promontorium, was situate on the coast of Africa, east of Utica, and north of Carthage. It is now Ras-Zebud. Liv. 30, 24.——Templum, a place in Thrace,——in Lycia. Ælian. V. H. 6, 9.

APOLLINIS FANUM, a town of Lydia, west of Thyatira.——A town of Africa Propria, north-east of Taracca.

APOLLINOPOLIS MAGNA, the capital of the 52d Egyptian Nome, in the southern part of Upper Egypt, about 25 miles nearly north of the great cataracts. Its inhabitants worshipped Apollo, and were inveterate enemies to the crocodile, which they took in nets and destroyed. Its remains are yet to be seen at the town or village of Edfou.

APOLLINOPOLIS PARVA, a city of Egypt, in the 8th Nome of Coptos, north-west of Thebes. It is now Kous.

APOLLO a son of Jupiter and Latona, called also Phœbus. According to Cicero, de Nat. Deor. 3, 23, there were four persons of this name. The first was son of Vulcan, and the tutelary god of the Athenians. The second was son of Corybas, and was born in Crete, for the dominion of which he disputed even with Jupiter himself. The third was son of Jupiter and Latona, and came from the nations of the Hyperboreans to Delphi. The fourth was born in Arcadia, and called Nomion, because he gave laws to the inhabitants. To the son of Jupiter and Latona all the actions of the others seem to have been attributed. The Apollo, son of Vulcan, was the same as the Orus of the Egyptians, and was the most ancient, from whom the actions of the others have been copied. The three others seem to be of Grecian origin. The tradition that the son of Latona was born in the floating island of Delos, is taken from the Egyptian mythology, which asserts that the son of Vulcan, which is supposed to be Orus, was saved by his mother Isis from the persecution of Typhon, and intrusted to the care of Latona, who concealed him in the island of Chemmis. When Latona was pregnant by Jupiter, Juno, who was ever jealous of her husband's amours, raised the serpent Python to torment Latona, who was refused a place to give birth to her shaven, till Neptune, moved at the severity of her fate, raised the island of Delos from the bottom of the sea, where Latona brought forth Apollo and Diana. Apollo was the god of all the fine arts, of medicine, music, poetry, and eloquence, of all which he was deemed the inventor. He had received from Jupiter the power of knowing futurity, and he was the only one of the gods whose oracles were in general repute over the world. His great dexterity in the management of the bow is celebrated; and in every part of the world he received homage as the president of the muses, the oracle of poets and musicians, and the patron of every liberal and ingenuous profession in arts and sciences. His amours with Leucothoe, Daphne, Issa, Bolina, Coronis, Clymene, Cyrene, Chione, Acacallis, Calliope, &c. are well known, and the various shapes he assumed to gratify his passion. He became father of Hyreus, Hyperenor, and Eleuthera, by Æthusa, daughter of Neptune; by Clymene he had Phaeton; by Thya or Melene, Delphus; by Coryeia, Lycoreus; and Phylacis, Philander, and Nazus, by Acacallis. The nymph Cyrene bore him Aristæus and Idmon; Coronis, Æsculapius; Chione, the musician Philammon; and by him Calliope, according to some, became mother of Orpheus; and Urania, of Linus. He was also father of Argeus, by Eubœa, daughter of Macareus; of Ilius, by Urasea, daughter of Neptune; and of Euripides, by Cleobula. He was very fond of young Hyacinthus, whom he accidentally killed with a quoit; as also of Cyparissus, who was changed into a cypress tree. When his son Æsculapius had been killed with the thunders of Jupiter, for raising the dead to life, Apollo, in his resentment, killed the Cyclops who had fabricated the thunderbolts. Jupiter was incensed at this act of violence, and he banished Apollo from heaven, and deprived him of his dignity. The exiled deity came to Admetus king of Thessaly, and hired himself to be one of his shepherds, in which ignoble employment he remained nine years; from which circumstance he was called the god of shepherds, and at his sacrifices a wolf was generally offered, as that animal is the declared enemy of the sheepfold. During his residence in Thessaly, he rewarded the tender treatment of Admetus. He gave him a chariot drawn by a lion and a bull, with which he was able to obtain in marriage Alceste the daughter of Pelias; and soon after, the Parcæ granted, at Apollo's request, that Admetus might be redeemed from death, if another person laid down his life for him. He assisted Neptune in building the walls of Troy; and when he was refused the promised reward from Laomedon, the king of the country, he destroyed the inhabitants by a pestilence. He also assisted Alcathous, son of Pelops, in erecting the fortress of Megara in Attica; and the stone on which the god had placed his lyre, when employed in the work, was still shown in the age of Pausanias, and remarked as possessing, when touched, a sweet melodious sound. As soon as he was born, Apollo destroyed with arrows the serpent Python, which Juno had sent to persecute Latona; hence he was called Pythius; and he afterwards vindicated the honour of his mother, by putting to death the children of the proud Niobe. (Vid. Niobe.) He was not the inventor of the lyre, as some have imagined, but Mercury gave it him, and received as a reward the famous caduceus with which Apollo was wont to drive the flocks of Admetus. His contest with Pan and Marsyas, and the punishment inflicted upon Midas are well known. He received the surnames of Phœbus, Delius, Cynthius, Pœan, Delphicus, Nomius, Lycius, Clarius, Ismenius, Vulturius, Smintheus, &c., for reasons which are explained under those words. Apollo is generally represented with long hair, and the Romans were fond of imitating his figure, and therefore in their youth they were remarkable for their fine heads of hair, which they cut short at the age of seventeen or eighteen. He is always represented as a tall beardless young man, with a handsome shape, holding in his hand a bow, and sometimes a lyre; his head is generally surrounded with beams of light. He was the deity who, according to the notions of the ancients, inflicted plagues, and in that moment he appeared surrounded with clouds. His worship and power were universally acknowledged: he had temples and statues in every country, particularly in Egypt, Greece, and Italy. His statue, which stood upon mount Actium, as a mark to mariners to avoid the dangerous coasts, was particularly famous, and it appeared at a great distance at sea. Augustus, before the battle of Actium, addressed himself to it for victory. The animals consecrated to him were the wolf and hawk, from their piercing eyes; the crow and raven, from their supposed faculty of predicting futurity; the cock, from his announcing the dawn of day; the grasshopper, on account of his tuneful powers; and the swan, from its fabulous vocal powers in death; and in his sacrifices, wolves and hawks were offered, as they were the natural enemies of the flocks over which he presided. Bullocks and lambs were also immolated to him. As he presided over poetry, he was often seen on mount Parnassus with the nine muses. His most famous oracles were at Delphi, Delos, Claros, Tenedos, Cyrrha, and Patara. His most splendid temple was at Delphi, where every nation and individual made considerable presents when they consulted the oracle. Augustus, after the battle of Actium, built him a temple on mount Palatine, which he enriched with a valuable library. He had a famous colossus in Rhodes, which was one of the seven wonders of the world. Apollo has been taken for the sun; and though many passages in ancient writers might prove that Apollo, the Sun, Phœbus, and Hyperion, were all different characters and deities, yet it must be evident that mythology considered the son of Latona as the god who guided the chariot of the sun; and received, as that universally beneficent luminary, the homage of the various nations of the earth, though under different appellations and in various characters. Ovid. Met. 1, fab 9 et 10. 4, fab. 3 et 6.—Paus. 2. 7. 5, 7. 7, 20. 9, 30, &c.—Hygin. fab. 9 14, 50, 93, 140, 161, 202, 203, &c.—Stat. Theb 1, 560.—Tibull. El. 2, 3.—Plut. de Amor.—Hom. Il et Hymn in Apoll. Virg. Æn. 2, 3 &c. G. 4, 323.—Horat Od. 1, 10.—Lucian. Dial Mer. et Vulc.—Propert. El. 2, 28.—Callimach. in Apoll.—Apollod. 1, 3, 4. et 9. 2, 5. 3, 5. 10, et 12.——One of the ships in the fleet of Æneas. Virg. Æn. 10, 171.——Also a temple of Apollo upon mount Leucas, which appeared at a great distance at sea; and served as a guide to mariners, and reminded them to avoid the dangerous rocks that were along the coast. Virg Æn. 3, 275.

APOLLOCRATES, a friend of Dion, supposed by some to be the son of Dionysius.

APOLLODORUS, a famous grammarian and mythologist of Athens, son of Asclepias, and disciple to Aristarchus the grammarian, and the two Stoic philosophers, Panætius, and Diogenes the Babylonian. He flourished about 115 years before the Christian era, and wrote an history from the destruction of Troy to his own age, a space of 1040 years; besides other works mentioned by Fabricius. But of all his compositions, nothing is extant but his Bibliotheca, a valuable work, divided into three books. It is an abridged history of the gods, and of the ancient heroes, of whose actions and genealogy it gives a true and faithful account. The best edition is that of Heyne, Goett. in 8vo. 4 vols 1782. Athen.— Plin. 7, 37.—Diod. 4 et 13.——A tragic poet of Cilicia, who wrote tragedies entitled Ulysses, Thyestes, Hymtides, &c; some fragments of which are preserved in Suidas and Athenæus. Deipnos. 15.——A comic poet of Gela in Sicily, in the age of Menander, who wrote 47 plays; of which, the Mysteries, Sisyphus, the Cheats, the Philadelphi, &c., are mentioned. Terence copied his Hecyra and Phormio from the works of this writer. Gyrald. de Poet. G. 7.—Donat. ad Terent.——A famous architect of Damascus, who lived under Trajan and Adrian. He was employed by the former to build the great bridge over the Danube, and other structures. His bluntness proved his ruin, for when Adrian sent him the design of a temple of Venus, which he had just built, the architect found that it was too small for the size of the statues, and said, that if the goddesses should take a fancy to rise and go out, they could not. This sarcasm cost him his life.——A writer who composed a history of Parthia.——A disciple of Epicurus, the most learned of his school, and deservedly surnamed the Illustrious. He wrote about forty volumes on different subjects. Diog. 7 et 10.——A painter of Athens, to whom Zeuxis was a pupil. He highly distinguished himself, and was particularly respectable for that liberality of sentiment which commends, but envies not, a rival. So far from detracting from the fame of Zeuxis, he not only confessed himself inferior to him, but wrote verses to recommend his pieces. Two of his paintings were admired at Pergamus, in the age of Pliny; a priest in a suppliant posture, and an Ajax struck with lightning. Plin. 35, 9——A statuary in the age of Alexander. He was of such an irascible disposition, that he destroyed his own pieces upon the least provocation. Plin. 34, 8.——A rhetorician of Pergamus, preceptor and friend to Augustus, who wrote a book on rhetoric. Strab. 13.——A tragic poet of Tarsus.—— A Lemnian who wrote on husbandry ——A physician of Tarentum.—c—Another of Cytium.

APOLLONIA, a festival at Ægialea in honour of Apollo and Diana. It arose from this circumstance: these two deities came to Ægialea, after the conquest of the serpent Python; but they were frightened away, and fled to Crete. Ægialea was soon visited with an epidemical distemper, and the inhabitants, by the advice of their prophets, sent seven chosen boys, with the same number of girls, to entreat them to return to Ægialea. Apollo and Diana granted their petition, in honour of which a temple was raised to vesta, the goddess of persuasion; and ever after a number of youths, of both sexes, were chosen to march in solemn procession, as if anxious to bring back Apollo and Diana. Pausan. in Corinth.——A town of Illyria, near the mouth of the river Aous. It was founded by a colony of Corinthians from Corcyra, and after wards restored by the Corinthians, when assistance had been in vain asked from Corcyra; which proceeding on the part of Corinth, was the first cause of the Peloponnesian war. It was continually depressed by its Illyrian neighbours, frequently recruited by new settlers from Greece; and willingly received the aid of the Romans, when the Illyrian princes had nearly subdued it. The Romans allowed its inhabitants the unin terrupted enjoyment of their civil constitution, which is praised by Strabo, and the town possessed a considerable trade, as well as a respectable school of Greek learning, frequented by young Romans of the higher classes. Its ruins still retain the name of Pollina. Strab. 7.—Diod Sic. 18.—Herod. 9, 92.—Suet. Aug. 10.—Vell. Paterc. 2, 59.——Another in Macedonia, north of Chalcis, now Polina It is mentioned in the Acts of the Apostles, St Paul having passed through it on his way from Philippi to Thessalonica.——Another in Thrace, on the coast of the Euxine, called afterwards Sozopolis, now Sizebol. It was a Milesian colony. It was celebrated for a colossal statue of Apollo, which was carried to Rome by M. Crassus, on his conquering the inhabitants.——Another in Bithynia, on a lake which receives the Rhyndacus, now Abulionte.——Another in Assyria, on the Delas, north-east of Artemita. It is now Shahruhan. ——Another in Cyrenaica It derived all its importance from the Ptolemies, who made it a city of the Pentapolis, and gave it many immunities. In the lower ages it was called Sozousa, and hence its modern name Marsa Susa, or Sousah.

APOLLONIADES, a tyrant of Sicily, compelled to lay down his power by Timoleon.

APOLLONIAS, the wife of Attalus, king of Phrygia, to whom she bore four children

APOLLONIDES, a writer of Nicæa.——A physician of Cos at the court of Artaxerxes, who became enamoured of Amytis, the monarch's sister, and was some time after put to death for slighting her after the reception of her favours.

APOLLONIUS, a Stoic philosopher of Chalcis, sent for by Antoninus Pius, to instruct his adopted son Marcus Antoninus. When he came to Rome, he refused to go to the palace, observing that the master ought not to wait upon his pupil, but the pupil upon him. The emperor hearing this, said, laughing, "It was then easier for Apollonius to come from Chalcis to Rome, than from Rome to the palace."——A geometrician of Perga in Pamphylia, who lived about 242 years before the Christian era. After studying at Alexandria, under the disciples of Euclid, he composed various geometrical works, which obtained him the name of the Great Geometrician The only work of his which remains is a treatise on conic sections. The four first books of this, which were all that were known in Europe till 1638, contain the properties observed previously to his time; but the three following ones, which were brought from the east and translated from the Arabic, give his own discoveries They are principally on the greatest and least lines which can be drawn from any point to the curve of a conic section. They show wonderful powers in the management of the ancient geometry, and though it might be imagined that the instrument was scarcely capable of such results, they lead to the borders of the modern theories of evolute curves and centres of osculation. The best edition of Apollonius is Dr Halley's, Oxon. fol. 1710. Vossius de H. Gr. 2.——A poet of Alexandria in Egypt, generally called Apollonius of Rhodes, because he lived for some time there. He was pupil, when young, to Callimachus and Panætius; and succeeded Eratosthenes as third librarian of the famous library of Alexandria, under Ptolemy Euergetes. He was ungrateful to his master Callimachus, who wrote a poem against him, in which he denominated him Ibis, borrowing the appellation of an Egyptian bird which indelicately assists nature by the application of its bill. Of all his works, nothing remains but his poem on the expedition of the Argonauts, in four books. In this poem the author, though greatly inferior to Homer in majesty and sublimity, yet displays many beauties and much variety. The passion of Medea is so finely and exquisitely pourtrayed, that Virgil has borrowed largely from his predecessor, and incorporated the most delicate and pathetic parts into his account of Dido. For this work, the Rhodians honourably rewarded the poet with the freedom of their city, when he came to reside among them. The Argonautics of Apollonius have been translated into English by F. Fawkes and W. Preston. The best edition of the original is that of Schaefer, 2 vols. 8vo. Lips 1810—12. Quintil. 10, 1.—Vossius de Poet. Gr.—Longinus de Subl.——A Greek orator, surnamed Molo, was a native of Alabanda in Caria. He opened a school of rhetoric at Rhodes and Rome, and had J. Cæsar and Cicero among his pupils. He discouraged the attendance of those whom he supposed incapable of distinguishing themselves as orators, and recommended to them pursuits more congenial to their abilities. He wrote an history, in which he did not candidly treat the people of Judea, according to the complaint of Josephus contra Apion.—Cic. de Orat. 1, 28, 75, 26, et 130. Ad Famil. Ep. 3, 16. De Invent. 1, 81.—Quintil 3, 1. 12, 6.—Suet. in Cæs. 4.—Plut in Cæs.——A Greek historian about the age of Augustus, who wrote upon the philosophy of Zeno and of his followers. Strab. 14.——A Stoic philosopher, who attended Cato of Utica in his last moments. Plut. in Cat.——An officer set over Egypt by Alexander. Curt 4, 8.——A wrestler. Paus 5.——A physician of Pergamus, who wrote on agriculture. Varro.——A grammarian of Alexandria, in the 2d century, author of a work on syntax.——A writer in the age of Antoninus Pius.——Thyaneus, a Pythagorean philosopher, and notorious impostor, born at Tyana in Cappadocia, three or four years before the Christian era. By renouncing the common and regular indulgences of his age, and affecting singularity by letting his hair grow, wearing nothing but linen, and appearing barefoot, he aspired to the name of a reformer of mankind. Being one day haranguing the populace at Ephesus, he suddenly exclaimed, "Strike the tyrant, strike him; the blow is given—he is wounded, and fallen!" As at that very moment the emperor Domitian had been stabbed at Rome, the magician acquired much reputation when the circumstance was known. He was courted by kings and princes, and commanded unusual attention by his numberless artifices. His friend and companion, called Damis, wrote his life, which 200 years after engaged the attention of Philostratus. In his history the biographer relates so many curious and extraordinary anecdotes of his hero, that many have justly deemed it a romance, yet for all this, Hierocles had the presumption to compare the impostures of Apollonius with the miracles of Jesus Christ.——A sophist of Alexandria, distinguished for his Lexicon Græcum Iliadis et Odyssem, a book that was beautifully edited by Villoison, in 4to. 2 vols. Paris, 1773. Apollonius was one of the pupils of Didymus, and flourished in the beginning of the first century.——A physician.——A son of Sotades, at the court of Ptolemy Philadelphus.——Syrus, a Platonic philosopher.——Herophilius, wrote concerning ointments.——A sculptor of Rhodes, who, conjointly with his countryman Tauriscus, is conjectured to have completed that vast group called the Farnese Bull. It was discovered near the Antonine baths, in the time of Paul III., and remained for a long time unnoticed in the Farnese palace. Dirce is represented in the act of being bound to the horns of the enraged animal, in order to precipitate her into the sea, by Zethus and Amphion, the sons of the repudiated Antiope, who is likewise there, and a fifth figure of a young man sitting, who expresses horror of so cruel a punishment.

APOLLOPHANES, a Stoic, who greatly flattered king Antigonus, and maintained that there existed but one virtue, prudence. Diog.——A physician in the court of Antiochus. Polyb. 5.——A comic poet. Athan. Anim 6

APOMYIOS, a name under which Jupiter and Hercules were worshipped at the Olympic games, being supplicated to destroy or drive away the vast numbers of flies which always attended great sacrifices. The sacrifice to the Apomyios Deus on these occasions was always the first, that he might drive away the flies from the rest.

APONIANA, an island near Lilybæum. Hirt. Afric. 2.

M. APONIUS, a governor of Mœsia, rewarded with a triumphal statue by Otho, for defeating 9000 barbarians. Tacit. Hist. 1, 79.

APONUS, now Abano, a fountain with a village of the same name near Patavium in Italy. The waters of the fountain, which were hot, were wholesome, and were supposed to have an oracular power. It is celebrated by Martial as the birth-place of Livy. Lucan. 7, 194.—Suet. in Tiber. 14.—Mart. 1, 62.

APOSTROPHIA, a surname of Venus in Bœotia, who was distinguished under these names, Venus Urania, Vulgaria, and Apostrophia. The former was the patroness of a pure and chaste love; the second of carnal and sensual desires, and the last incited men to illicit and unnatural gratifications, to incests, and rapes. Venus Apostrophia was invoked by the Thebans, that they might be saved from such unlawful desires. She is the same as the Verticordia of the Romans. Paus. 9, 16.—Val. Max. 8, 15.

APOTHEOSIS, a solemnity among the ancients, by which a man was raised to the rank of the gods. The custom of their placing mortals who had rendered their country important service among the deities, was very ancient among the Greeks, who generally followed, in so doing, the advice of an oracle. On their coins, most of the founders of cities and colonies are immortalised as gods; and, in subsequent times, living princes assumed this title. The Romans imitated their example, and not only deified the most prudent and humane of their emperors, but also the most cruel and profligate. Herodian, 4, 2, has left us an account of the apotheosis of a Roman emperor. After the body of the deceased had been burned with the usual ceremonies, they placed an image of wax, perfectly like him, but of a sickly aspect, on a large bed of ivory, covered with a cloth of gold, in the vestibule of the palace. The greatest part of the day the senate sat ranged on the left side of the bed, dressed in robes of mourning; the ladies of the first rank sitting on the right side, in plain white robes, without ornaments. This continued for seven days successively, during which time the physicians came regularly to visit the sick emperor, reporting each time that he grew worse, till they reported that he was dead. When the death was announced, a band of young senators carried the couch and image to the Campus Martius, where it was deposited on an edifice in the form of a pyramid, where spices and combustible materials were thrown. After this the knights walked round the pile in solemn procession, and the images of the most illustrious Romans were drawn in state, and immediately the new emperor, with a torch, set fire to the pile, and was assisted by the surrounding multitude. Meanwhile an eagle was let fly from the middle of the pile, which was supposed to carry the soul of the deceased to heaven, where he was ranked among the gods. If the deified was a female, a peacock, and not an eagle, was sent from the flames.

APPIA AQUA, an aqueduct, constructed during the censorship of Appius Claudius Cæcus, A.U.C. 441. It began seven miles from Rome, and after running under ground for a considerable distance, introduced a supply of water into the very heart of the city.

APPIA VIA, a great Roman road, called, by way of eminence, regina viarum. It commenced at the Porta Capena. It was constructed by Appius Claudius Cæcus, who was censor, A.U.C. 441. In his time it went as far as Capua, but was afterwards carried on to Brundusium. It passed by Aricia, Terracina, Fundi, Formiæ, Minturnæ, Capua, and Beneventum. Its whole length was reckoned at 350 miles. Trajan did a good deal to repair it, whence part of it was sometimes called Via Trajana, as did Antoninus Pius. In some places it is still entire, after a lapse of more than two thousand years. (Vid Via.) Stat. Silv. 2, 2, 12.—Liv. 9, 29.—Diod. Sic 5.—Strab 6.

APPIADES, a name given to these five deities, Venus, Pallas, Vesta, Concord, and Peace, because a temple was erected to them near the Appian road. The word Appias in the singular is applied by Cicero to Venus alone; and it expresses also the Appian aqueduct, through which water was discharged near the temple of Venus. Ovid de Art. am. 3, 452.—Cic Fam. 3, 1.

APPIANUS, a Greek historian of Alexandria, who flourished in the beginning of the second century, during the reigns of Adrian, Trajan, and Antoninus Pius. Having left his native city, and settled at Rome in the time of Trajan, he acquired such celebrity as a pleader, that he was appointed to the respectable office of governor of a province. His history of Roman affairs is comprised in 24 books, several of which exist only in fragments, and is written in Greek, in the order of the countries in which the events happened. He has been charged with many errors, and with copying without acknowledgment from Polybius, Plutarch, and others; but he has received universal credit for the conciseness and simplicity of his style, his knowledge of military affairs, and the persuasive eloquence which characterizes all his orations. The best edition is that of Schweighæuser, 3 vols. 8vo. Argent 1785.

APPII FORUM, now Borgo Longo, a town of the Volsci in Latium, built by the consul Appius Claudius Cæcus. It was the second resting-place of Horace, in his journey to Brundusium. Horat Sat 1, 5.—Cic ad Att. 1, 15.—Plin. 3, 5.

APPIUS, the prænomen of an illustrious family at Rome.——A censor of that name, A.U.C. 442. Horat Sat. 1, 6.

APPIUS CLAUDIUS, a Roman senator, appointed a decemvir upon the meeting of the laws of the twelve Tables. By his advice his colleagues retained their office; but this arbitrary and oppressive conduct proved the source of great commotions in Rome. The soldiers refused to fight in defence of their country, and thus to maintain an usurped power; but Appius added insolence and brutality to his oppression. He attempted the chastity of Virginia, and when his base purposes failed, he claimed and would have obtained her as the slave of one of his favourites, had not her father Virginius stabbed her to the heart to save her from ignominy. This event opened the eyes of the Romans; the decemvirs were stripped of their authority, and Appius destroyed himself when cited to appear before the tribunal of his country. Liv 3, 33.——Claudius Cæcus, a Roman orator, who built the Appian way, and many aqueducts in Rome. In his second consulship, A.U.C. 458, he defeated the Samnites and Etrurians. When Pyrrhus, who was come to assist the Tarentines against Rome, demanded peace of the senators, Appius, grown old in the service of the republic, caused himself to be carried to the senate house, and by his authority dissuaded his country from granting a peace which would prove dishonourable to the Roman name. Ovid. Fast. 6, 203.—Cic. in Brut. et Tusc. 4.——A Roman, who, when he heard that he had been proscribed by the triumvirs, divided his riches among his servants, and embarked with them for Sicily. In their passage the vessel was shipwrecked, and Appius alone saved his life. Appian. 4.— Claudius Crassus, a consul, who, with Sp. Naut Rutilius, conquered the Celtiberians, and was defeated by Perseus, king of Macedonia. Liv.—Claudius Pulcher, a grandson of Ap. Cl. Cæcus, consul in the age of Sylla, retired from grandeur to enjoy the pleasures of a private life.——Clausus, a general of the Sabines, who, upon being ill treated by his countrymen, retired to Rome with 5000 of his friends, and was admitted into the senate in the early ages of the republic. Plut in Poplic.——Herdonius, seized the capitol with 4000 exiles, A.U.C. 292, and was soon after overthrown. Liv 3, 15.—Flor. 3, 19.——Claudius Lentulus, a consul with M. Perpenna.——A dictator, who conquered the Hernici.——The name of Appius was common in Rome, and particularly to many consuls, whose history is not marked by any uncommon event. (Vid Claudius.)

APPULA, an immodest woman, &c. Juv. 6, 64

APRIES and APHIUS, a king of Egypt, after Psammis, 596 B.C. He is supposed by some to be the Pharaoh Hophra of the scriptures. He took Sidon, and lived in great prosperity till his subjects revolted to Amasis, by whom he was conquered and strangled. Herod. 2, 159, &c. —Diod. 1.

APSINTHII, a people of Thrace, between the river Melas and the Hebrus. They received their name from the river Apsinthus, which flowed through their territory. Dionys. Perieg. —Herod. 6, 34. 9, 119.

APSINUS, an Athenian sophist in the third century, author of a work called Præceptor de Arte Rhetorica

APSUS, a river of Macedonia, falling into the Ionian sea between Dyrrhachium and Apollonia. Now Crevasta. Lucan. 5, 46.

APTERA, an inland town of Crete, west of Cydonia. Its name was supposed to be derived from a contest waged by the Sirens and Muses in its vicinity, when the former being vanquished in the trial of musical skill, were so overcome with grief, that their wings dropped from their shoulders. Strab. 10.—Steph. de Urb.

APULEIA VARILIA, a grand-daughter of Augustus, convicted of adultery with a certain Manlius, in the reign of Tiberius. Tacit. Ann 2, 50.

APPULEIÆ LEGES, proposed by L. Appuleius Saturninus, A. U. C. 652, tribune of the commons; about dividing the public lands among the veteran soldiers, settling colonies, punishing crimes against the state, furnishing corn to the poor people at 10-12ths of an as, a bushel. Aurel. Vict de Vir. Illustr. 73.—Cic pro Balb. 21.—De Orat. 2, 25 et 49.—Ad Herenn. 1, 12.—De Leg. 2, 6.

APULEIUS, a Platonic philosopher of the second century, born at Madaura in Africa. He studied at Carthage, Athens, and Rome, where he devoted himself so closely to study, that he acquired Latin without the assistance of a master He was so expensive in the younger part of his life, that he was obliged to pawn his clothes to provide himself necessaries. His wants were however soon removed by a marriage with Pudentilla, a rich widow, who possessed neither youth nor beauty. This connexion was considered as so extraordinary, that the philosopher was accused by some of her relations of using magic to gain her affections. His apology, which is still extant, is a masterly composition. The most famous of his works extant is the Golden Ass, in eleven books, an allegorical piece replete with morality. One of the best editions of Apuleius, is that published at Leyden, in 3 vols. 4to. in 1786—1823. The first volume, containing the Metamorphoses, was edited by Oudendorp and Ruhnken. The second and third volumes, containing the remaining works of Apuleius, were edited chiefly by Boscha.—— Saturninus, a tribune of the people, in the time of Marcus, frequently mentioned by Cicero APULIA, now la Puglia, a country of Magna Græcia in Italy, bounded on the north by the Tifernus, on the east and south by the sea, and on the west by the Bradanus and the eastern limits of Samnium It was called Japygia by the Greeks, but this name appears to have been applied in a confined sense. Apulia Proper comprehended the northern part of the province, as far as the river Cerbalus; then followed Daunia, reaching as far south as mount Vultur and Cannæ; Peucetia, extending to Egnatia, and the upper course of the Bradanus; and Japygia, including the remainder of the province Its principal rivers were the Frento, Cerbalus, Aufidus, and Bradanus; its chief mountains Garganus and Vultur. Apulia was famed for its wool, and is said to have derived its name from Apulus, an ancient king of the country. Its inhabitants were probably descended from the Osci and Illyrian Liburni. Plin. 3, 11.— Cic. de Div. 1, 44. —Strab. 6.—Mela, 2, 4.—Manilius on Apoph. 155.

APUSCIDĂMUS, a lake of Africa. All bodies, however heavy, were said to swim on the surface of its waters. Plin. Jd, 2.

AQUÆ AUGUSTÆ TARBELLICÆ, now Dax a town of modern Gascony, famed for its baths. ——Calidæ or Solis, a town of Britain, famous for its waters, now Bath —— Sextiæ, now Aix in Provence, a town at the east of the Rhone, founded by C. Sextius, and famous for its warm mineral waters. In its neighbourhood, Marius defeated the Teutones and Cimbri with great slaughter.

AQUARIUS, one of the signs of the zodiac, rising in January, and setting in February. Some suppose that Ganymede was changed into this sign. Virg. G. 3, 303.

AQUILA, a freedman of Mæcenas, whose assistance he employed to diffuse the knowledge of his invention of writing short hand. Dio. 55, 7. ——Pontius, one of the conspirators against Cæsar. Cic. Phil. 11, 6.

AQUILARIA, a place of Africa. Cæs. Bell. Civ. 2, 23.

AQUILEIA or AQUILEGIA, a town founded by a Roman colony, sometimes called, from its grandeur, Roma secunda, and situated on the northern coast of the Sinus Tergestinus, or Gulf of Trieste. It is famous for the obstinate resistance which it made to Attila, king of the Huns, by whom, however, it was taken, A. D. 452. The Romans built it chiefly to oppose the frequent incursions of the barbarians. The Roman emperors enlarged and beautified it, and often made it their residence; but its splendour has long since vanished, and its ruins and poverty mournfully exhibit a lasting proof of the vicissitudes of empires as well as of men. Ital. 8, 605. —Martial Ep. 4, 25.—Mela, 2, 4.

AQUILIUS NIGER, an historian mentioned by Sueton. in Aug. 11.——Marcus, a Roman consul who had the government of Asia Minor. Justin 36, 4 ——Sabinus, a lawyer of Rome, surnamed the Cato of his age. He was father to Aquilia Severa, whom Heliogabalus married. —— Severus, a poet and historian in the age of Valentinian.

AQUILLIA and AQUILIA, a patrician family at Rome, supposed to have received their name from their dark colour, ab aquilo colore.

AQUILO, a wind blowing from the north-north-east point of the horizon. Its name is derived, according to some, from aquila, on account of its keenness and velocity. Virg. G. 3, 196, &c.

AQUILONIA, a city of the Hirpini in Italy. Liv 10, 38.

AQUINILS, a poet of moderate capacity. Cic. Tusc. 5.

AQUINUM, now Aquino, a town of Latium, south-west of Venafrum It was the birth-place of Juvenal.—— that poet himself informs us. Strab. 6.—Sil. Ital. 8, 401 —Juv. 3 319.

AQUITANIA, a country of Gaul, between the Ligeris, or Loire, and Pyrenees It was subdivided into Aquitania Prima, Aquitania Secunda, and Novempopulana The opulence and extensive commerce of the Aquitani made them corrupt and effeminate, and rendered them an easy prey to the Roman arms. Plin. 4, 19.— Strab 4.

ARA, a constellation, consisting of seven stars near the tail of the Scorpion Ovid. Met. 2, 143.

ARA LUGDUNENSIS, a place at the confluence of the Arar and Rhone. Juv. 1, 44.

ARABARCHES, a vulgar person among the Egyptians, or perhaps an usual expression for the leaders of the Arabians, who resided in Rome. Juv. 1, 130. Some believe that Cicero, Ep. 2, 17, ad Attic. alluded to Pompey under the name of Arabarches ARABIA, an extensive country of Asia, bounded on the east by the Persian gulf, on the south by the Erythræan sea, on the west by the Arabian gulf or Red sea, and on the north by Babylonia and Syria. It was divided into Arabia Petræa, Arabia Felix, and Arabia Deserta, which names are still used to distinguish the same portions of country. Its length, from the cape of Babelmandel to the extreme angle on the Euphrates, is about 1600 British miles, and its mean breadth 600. In the plains the soil is sandy and barren; but in the mountains, and particularly where there is no want of water, it is extremely fertile Arabia was famous in former days for its gold, precious stones, pearls, frankincense, myrrh, aloes, and spices It probably took its name from its inhabitants being a mixed race, composed of the Cushites, Ishmaelites, Midianites, and Amalekites, the word Arab signifying in the Hebrew language to mix or mingle. The Arabians recognise for their ancestors Joktan, or Kahtan, the son of Eber, and Ishmael, the son of Abraham and Hagar. The knowledge of the one living and true God, which could not but have been possessed by all the posterity of Abraham, was soon corrupted by the Arabians, who fell into the common and fatal superstition of adoring the sun, moon and stars Arabia was often invaded by the great Asiatic powers, but it was never conquered. Alexander the Great, it is said, wished to place in it the seat of his empire, but died at Babylon before he could carry his project into execution. The Arabians for some time supported the splendour of literature, which was extinguished by the tyranny and superstition which prevailed in Egypt, and to them we are indebted for the invention of algebra, or the application of signs and letters to represent lines, numbers, and quantities, and also for the numerical characters of 1, 2, 3, &c., which were first used in Europe, A.D. 1253, in the Alphonsian tables made by Alphonso, k. of Castile. The Arabs had received these figures from the Indians in 900, and they were communicated to the rest of the western nations by the Spaniards They were universally used in England, according to Dr Wallis, about the year 1130. Herod. 1, 2, 3, &c —Diod. 1 et 2.—Plin 12 et 14.—Strab 16.—Xenoph — Tibull. 2, 2.—Curt. 5, 1 —Virg G. 3, 57.——Also the name of the wife of Ægyptus. Apollod.

ARABICUS SINUS, that part or branch of the Mare Erythræum, which interposes between Egypt and Arabia. Its length is about 1200 miles, and its broadest part 170. It is now called Golf de Mecca, or more commonly the Red Sea. The meaning of this latter appellation must be looked for in the name of Idumea, or the land of Edom, whose coasts this sea touches on the north Edom in the Hebrew signifies red, and was the name given to Esau, for selling his birthright for a mess of pottage. This country, which his posterity possessed, was called after his name, and so was the sea which adjoined it; but the Greeks, not understanding the reason of the appellation, translated what is in Hebrew the sea of Edom, into Ἐρυθρὰ θάλασσα; hence the Latins Mare Rubrum, and we the Red Sea. The navigation of the Red Sea was rendered very dangerous and difficult, on account of the sand banks and sunk rocks with which it abounded Its northern part was divided into two arms or heads; the eastern, called Ælaniticus Sinus, from the town Ælana, which stood at the head of it; and the western, Heroopoliticus Sinus, from the city Heroopolis at its northern extremity. It was over this latter arm that it pleased God to show his almighty power, by causing the children of Israel to pass through it on dry ground, after he had divided the waters, that they were as a wall unto them on their right hand and on their left; whilst the Egyptians, who pursued after them, were utterly destroyed, by the sea returning to its strength Plin. 5, 11 — Strab.

ARABIUS, ARABIS, or ARBIS, a river of Gedrosia, running into the Erythræan sea, now Pooralee. Arrian. 6, 21.

ARABS and ARABUS, a son of Apollo and Babylone, who first invented medicine, and taught it in Arabia, which is called after his name Plin. 7, 56.

ARACCA and ARECCA, a town of Susiana, on the eastern bank of the Tigris, not far from its mouth, now Want. It is conjectured to be the same with Erech, one of the cities built by Nimrod in the land of Shinar. Tibull. 4, 1.

ARACHNE, a woman of Colophon, daughter to Idmon, a dyer of purple. She was so skilful in weaving, that she challenged Minerva, the goddess of the art, to a trial of skill. In vain did Minerva, in the form of an old woman, forewarn her of the consequences of her folly. The contest began, and Arachne prepared, with much skill, a web which represented the amours of Jupiter & This irritated Minerva, who tore the web in pieces, and struck Arachne on the head with the shuttle. Arachne hung herself in despair. The goddess restored her to life, but changed her into a spider. Ovid. Met. 6, 1, &c. ——A city of Thessaly.

ARACHOSIA, now Arrochash, a province of Persia, west of the Indus, and north of Gedrosia. The Parthians called it India Alba, from the circumstance of its inhabitants, who were white people, having been at one time under the control of an Indian monarch.

ARACHOTÆ and ARACHŌTI, a people of India, who received their name from the river Arachotus, which flows down from mount Caucasus. Dionys. Perieg.—Curt. 9, 7.

ARACHŌTUS, the metropolis of Arachosia, built by Semiramis, and called by her Cophen It still preserves its name in Rokedy ——A river of Arachosia, rising in the Paruetī Montes, and after a westerly course of 200 miles, connecting itself with a little lake, called Arachotus Fons Now Lora.

ARACHTHUS, ARÆTHUS, and ARÆTHON, one of the four capital rivers of Epirus, near Nicopolis, falling into the bay of Ambracia Ambracia stood on its left bank. Now, the Arta Strab. 7.

ARACILLUM, a town of Hispania Tarraconensis. Flor. 4, 12.

ARACOSII, an Indian nation. Justin 13, 4.

ARACYNTHUS, now Zigos, a mountain of Ætolia, north-west of Calydon, towards the river Achelous Plin 4, 2.——Another in Bœo tus, called Actæus, because it is near the shore. Virg Ecl. 2, 24.

ARADUS, a city in an island of the same name, on the coast of Phœnicia, founded by fugitives from Sidon. It is supposed to be the same with Arvad, the country of the Arvadites, mentioned in the Old Testament. It is now Ruad Dionys Perieg.

ARÆ. (Vid. Ægimurus.)

ARÆ PHILÆNORUM. (Vid. Philæni.)

ARAR, a slow running river of Gaul, rising near Mons Vorcsus, and after a southern course, joining the Rhodanus at Lugdunum. Now, the Saone. Cæs Bell. Gall. 1, 12.—Sil. 3, 432.

ARARUS, a river of Scythia, east of the Tiaranitus, flowing from north to south, and falling into the Ister It is now the Sereth. Herod. 4, 48.

ARATHYREA, a small province of Achaia, afterwards called Asophis, with a city of the same name. Homer Il 2.—Strab. 8.

ARĂTUS, a Greek poet, born at Pompeiopolis, in Cilicia, about 270 B C. He appears to have resided principally at the court of Antigonus Gonatus, son of Demetrius Poliorcetes, king of Macedonia, at whose desire he is said to have composed his poem, entitled Phænomena, in which he has given us, in correct and elegant verse, all that was then known of the heavens, with their signs and appearances. The esteem which the ancients had for this poem, appears from the fact, that it was translated by Cicero, Cæsar Germanicus, and Avienus. Eratosthenes, with many other great astronomers, wrote commentaries on it. The best editions are by Fell, Oxford, 1672, 8vo, and by Buhle, Leipsic, 1793—1801, 2 vols. 8vo Cic. de Nat. D. 2, 41.—Paus 1, 2.—Ovid. Am. 1, 15, 26.——The son of Clinias and Aristodama, was born at Sicyon in Achaia, near the river Asopus. When he was but seven years of age, his father, who held the government of Sicyon, was assassinated by Abantidas, who made himself absolute. After some revolutions, the sovereignty came into the hands of Nicocles, whom Aratus murdered, to restore his country to liberty. He was so jealous of tyrannical power, that he even destroyed a picture which was the representation of a tyrant. He joined the republic of Sicyon to the Achæan league, which he strengthened, by making a treaty of alliance with the Corinthians, and with Ptolemy king of Egypt. He was chosen chief commander of the forces of the Achæans, and drove away the Macedonians from Athens and Corinth. He made war against the Spartans, but was conquered in a battle by their king Cleomenes. To repair the losses he had sustained, he solicited the assistance of king Antigonus, and drove away Cleomenes from Sparta, who fled to Egypt, where he killed himself. The Ætolians soon after attacked the Achæans; and Aratus, to support his character, was obliged to call to his aid Philip king of Macedonia. His friendship with this new ally did not long continue Philip showed himself cruel and oppressive, and put to death some of the noblest of the Achæans, and even seduced the wife of the son of Aratus Aratus, who was now advanced in years, showed his displeasure by withdrawing himself from the society and friendship of Philip. But this rupture was fatal. Philip dreaded the power and influence of Aratus, and therefore he caused him and his son to be poisoned. Some days before his death, Aratus was observed to spit blood; and when apprized of it by his friends, he replied, 'such are the rewards which a connexion with kings will produce." He was buried with great pomp by his countrymen; and two solemn sacrifices were annually made to him, the first on the day that he delivered Sicyon from tyranny and the second on the day of his birth. During those sacrifices, which were called Aratrea, the priests wore a ribbon bespangled with white and purple spots, and the public schoolmaster walked in procession at the head of his scholars, and was always accompanied by the richest and most eminent senators, adorned with garlands. Aratus died in the 63d year of his age, B C. 213. He wrote a history of the Achæan league, much commended by Polybius. Plut. in vita.—Paus. 2, 8.—Cic. de Offic. 2, 23.—Strab. 14.—Liv 27, 31. —Polyb. 2.

ARAXES, a river of Armenia Major, now the Aras. It rises in the Anti-Taurus, only a few miles from the northern source of the Euphrates, and having joined the Cyrus, flows with an easterly course of 600 miles into the Caspian sea. ——Another in Persia, running by Persepolis, and falling into the Medus; now Bend Emir. The river Chaboras appears to be called Araxes by Xenophon, in his account of the younger Cyrus. (Vid. Chaboras.) Xen. Anab 1

ARAXUS, a promontory of Elis, opposite the mouth of the Achelous, now Cape Papas

ARBĂCES, a Mede who revolted with Belesis against Sardanapalus, and founded the empire of Media upon the ruins of the Assyrian power, 820 years before the Christian era. He reigned above fifty years, and was famous for the greatness of his undertakings, as well as for his valour. Justin. 1, 3.—Paterc. 1, 6

ARBĒLA, a city of Assyria, in the district Adiabene, on the eastern side of the Zabatus, renowned for a decisive battle fought by Alexander the Great against Darius at Gaugamela, in its neighbourhood, B.C. 331. (Vid Gaugamēla.) Its modern name is Arbel. Curt. 5, 1. —Plut. in Alex.

ARBĒLA, a town of Sicily, whose inhabitants were very credulous: hence the proverb, Quid non fiet, Arbelas projectus? Erasm. in Adag.

ARBIS. (Vid Arabius.)

ARBOCĀLA, a city taken by Annibal as he marched against Rome.

ARBUSCŬLA, an actress on the Roman stage, who laughed at the hisses of the populace, while she received the applauses of the knights Hor. Sat. 1, 10, 77.

ARCA, a city of Phœnicia, north of the Eleutheros, where Alexander Severus was born.

ARCĂDIA, a country in the centre of the Peloponnesus, bounded on the north by Achaia, on the west by Elis, on the east by Argolis, and on the south by Laconia and Messenia. It was very mountainous, though, at the same time, diversified with fruitful valleys, and well watered by an abundance of streams The Arcadians were for the most part shepherds; hence their love o. music, and hence also the worship of Pan, as the tutelary deity of the land. They were brave and warlike, and fought, when they had no wars of their own, in the service of other states. Arcadia was anciently called Drymotis, from the word ἀρῦς, quercus, owing to its producing such a number of oaks, but it was subsequently named Lycaonia and Pelasgia It was also occasionally called Parrhasia, from the Parrhasii, who inhabited the south-western part of the province.

The name of Arcadia itself was said to have been derived from Arcas, a son of Jupiter. The Arcadians had settled in the country from such an early period, as to induce them to boast of their having sprung from the earth, and of their being older than the moon. They were at first ruled by hereditary kings of the house of Arcas; but in the second Messenian war, the last Arcadian king, Aristocrates II., having betrayed his allies, was in consequence stoned to death by his subjects, and the kingship was abolished in Arcadia, B.C. 668. Arcadia then crumbled into as many small states as it contained cities, with their separate districts, among those Tegea and Mantinea were the chief. It eventually joined the Achæan league, and fell under the Roman power. Polyb. 4, 20.—Thucyd. 7, 57.—Plin. 4, 5.—Paus. 8, 4.—Ovid Fast. 1, 478. 2, 272.—Apoll. Argon. 4, 264.—Virg. Ecl. 4, 58.

ARCADIUS, eldest son of Theodosius the Great, succeeded his father A D 395, who at his death divided the empire between his two sons, allotting to Arcadius the eastern, and to Honorius the western part. After this separation of the Roman empire, the two powers looked upon one another with indifference; and soon after their indifference was changed into jealousy, and contributed to hasten their mutual ruin. In the reign of Arcadius Alaricus attacked the western empire, and plundered Rome. Arcadius married Eudoxia, a bold ambitious woman, and died in the 31st year of his age, after a reign of 13 years, in which he bore the character of an effeminate prince, who suffered himself to be governed by favourites, and who abandoned his subjects to the tyranny of ministers, while he lost himself in the pleasures of a voluptuous court.

ARCANUM, a villa of Quintus Cicero's, near Minturnæ. Cic. ad Att. 7, 10.

ARCAS, a son of Jupiter and Callisto He nearly killed his mother, whom Juno had changed into a bear. He reigned in Pelasgia, which from him was called Arcadia, after his uncle Nyctimus, and communicated to his subjects the instruction he had received from Triptolemus and Aristæus, and taught them agriculture and the art of spinning wool. After his death, Jupiter made him a constellation with his mother. As he was one day hunting, he met a wood nymph, who begged his assistance, because the tree over which she presided, and on whose preservation her life depended, was going to be carried away by the impetuous torrent of a river. Arcas changed the course of the waters, and preserved the tree, and married the nymph, by whom he had three sons, Azan, Aphidas, and Elatus, among whom he divided his kingdom. The descendants of Azan planted colonies in Thrace. Aphidas received for his share Tegea, which on that account has been called the inheritance of Aphidas; and Elatus became master of mount Cyllene, and some time after passed into Phocis. Paus. 8, 4.—Hygin. fab. 155 et 176.—Apollod. 3 8.—Strab. 8.—Ovid Fast. 1, 470.——One of Actæon's dogs.

ARCE, a daughter of Thaumas, son of Pontus and Terra. Ptolem. Hep.

ARCENA, a town of Phœnicia, where Alexander Severus was born

ARCENS, a Sicilian who permitted his son to accompany Æneas into Italy, where he was killed by Mezentius. Virg. En. 9, 581, &c.

ARCESILAUS, son of Battus, king of Cyrene, was driven from his kingdom in a sedition, and died B.C. 575 The second of that name died B C. 550. Pulyæn. 8, 43.—Herod. 4, 159.——One of Alexander's generals, who obtained Mesopotamia at the general division of the provinces after the king's death.——A chief of Catana, which he betrayed to Dionysius the elder. Diod. 14.——A Grecian philosopher, born at Pitane, in Æolia, B C. 316 He was sent to Athens to study rhetoric, but philosophy attracted him more. He enjoyed the instructions of Aristotle, Theophrastus, Polemon, and Crantor; with the latter of whom he formed an intimate friendship. After the death of Crates, he took the charge of the academy, and made important innovations, which gave rise to a new school, called, in reference to the school of Plato, the second academy; and, with respect to a subsequent innovation by Carneades, the middle academy. His doctrine was, that whatever certainty there may be in the nature of things, every thing is uncertain to the human understanding. He maintained that, truth has no certain characters by which it may be distinguished from error, and, consequently, that opposite opinions may be supported by arguments of equal weight. He disputed against the testimony of the senses, and the authority of reason, but at the same time allowed that they are capable of furnishing probable opinions sufficient for the conduct of life. Arcesilaus was kind to the distressed, and a friend to pleasure. A rival of Aristippus, he divided his time between Venus, Bacchus, and the Muses, without ever filling a public office. He died from intemperate indulgence in wine, 75 years old, B.C. 241. The Athenians, however, honoured his memory with a public funeral. Diog. in vita — Pernus. 3, 78.—Cic de Fin —The name of two painters.—— A statuary of the Augustan age, born in Magna Græcia He excelled in modelling in pipe-clay, from the most esteemed antiques, and is said never to have begun a statue without having previously modelled it, having attained to the greatest perfection in the plastic art. Plin. 35, 11 36, 5.——A Bœotian leader, killed by Hector. Homer. Il. 2 et 15 ——A comic and elegiac poet ARCESIUS, son of Jupiter, was grandfather to Ulysses. Ovid. Met. 13, 144.

ARCHÆA, a city of Æolia.

ARCHÆANAX of Mitylene, was intimate with Pisistratus, tyrant of Athens He fortified Sigæum with a wall from the ruins of ancient Troy. Strab 13.

ARCHÆATIDAS, a country of Peloponnesus. Polyb.

ARCHAGATHUS son of Archagathus, was slain in Africa by his soldiers, B. C 285. He killed his grandfather Agathocles, tyrant of Syracuse Diod. 20.—Justin. 22, 5, &c. says, that he was put to death by Archesilaus ——A physician at Rome, B.C 219.

ARCHANDER, father-in-law to Danaus Hesiod. 2. 98.

ARCHANDROS, a town of Egypt.

ARCHE, one of the muses, according to Cicero

ARCHIGETES, a surname of Hercules.

ARCHELÄUS, a name common to some kings of Cappadocia One of them was conquered by Sylla, for assisting Mithridates. — A person of that name married Berenice, and made himself king of Egypt, a dignity he enjoyed only six months, as he was killed by the soldiers of Gabinius, B.C 56. He had been made priest of Comana by Pompey. His grandson was made king of Cappadocia by Antony, whom he assisted at Actium, and he maintained his independence under Augustus, till Tiberius perfidiously destroyed him. Liv. 76 et 82.——A king of Macedonia, who succeeded his father Perdiccas the second. As he was but a natural child, he killed the legitimate heirs to gain the kingdom. He proved himself to be a great monarch; but he was at last killed by one of his favourites, because he had promised him his daughter in marriage, and given her to another, after a reign of 23 years. He patronized the poet Euripides. Diod. 14.—Justin 7, 4.—Ælian V. H. 2, 8, 12, 14.——A king of the Jews, son of Herod the Great. He married Glaphyre, daughter of Archelaus, king of Macedonia, and widow of his brother Alexander. His reign is described as most tyrannical and bloody. The people at length accused him before Augustus, Judea being then dependent upon Rome. The emperor, after hearing his defence, banished him to Vienna, or Vienne, in Gaul, where he died. To avoid the fury of this monster Joseph and Mary retired to Nazareth Dio ——A king of Lacedemon, son of Agesilaus. He reigned 42 years with Charilaus, of the other branch of the family Herod. 7, 204.—Paus 3, 2 ——A general of Antigonus the younger, appointed governor of the Acrocorinth, with the philosopher Persæus Polyæn. 6, 5.——A celebrated general of Mithridates, defeated by Sylla. Id. 8, 9 ——A philosopher, born either at Miletus or Athens, son of Apollodorus, and successor to Anaxagoras. He was preceptor to Socrates, and was called Physicus, the natural philosopher, from the celebrity he acquired in teaching the doctrines of Anaxagoras, concerning natural bodies. In physics, he taught that the universe is infinite, that heat and cold are the immediate causes of production, and that animals were produced from the earth, which was at first a muddy mass. In ethics, he maintained the dangerous position that the distinction between right and wrong is not founded in nature, but in positive institution, and consequently that all actions are indifferent until human laws declare them to be good or evil Cic. Tusc. 5.—Diog. in vita—Augustin. de Civ. Dei, 8.——A man set over Susa by Alexander, with a garrison of 3000 men. Curt. 5, 2. ——A Greek philosopher, who wrote a history of animals, and maintained that goats breathed not through the nostrils, but through the ears Plin 8, 50.——A son of Electryon and Anaxo Apollod 2 ——A Greek poet, who wrote epigrams. Varro de R. R. 3, 16.——A sculptor of Priene, in the age of Claudius. He made an apotheosis of Homer, a piece of sculpture highly admired, and said to have been discovered under ground, A. D. 165? ——A writer of Thrace.

ARCHEMACHUS, a Greek writer, who published an history of Eubœa. Athen 6.——A son of Hercules——of Priam. Apollod. 2 et 3

ARCHEMORUS, or OPHELTES, son of Lycurgus, king of Nemæa, in Thrace, by Eurydice, was brought up by Hypsipyle, queen of Lemnos, who had fled to Thrace, and was employed as a nurse in the king's family. Hypsipyle was met by the army of Adrastus, who were going against Thebes; and she was forced to show them a fountain where they might quench their thirst. To do this more expeditiously, she put down the child on the grass, and at her return found him killed by a serpent. The Greeks were so affected at this misfortune, that they instituted games in honour of Archemorus, which were called Nemæan, and king Adrastus enlisted among the combatants, and was victorious. Apollod. 2 et 3. —Paus 8 48.—Stat Theb. 6

ARCHEPOLIS, a man in Alexander's army, who conspired against the king with Dymnus. Curt 6, 7.

ARCHEPTOLEMUS, son of Iphitus, king of Elis, went to the Trojan war, and fought against the Greeks. As he was fighting near Hector, he was killed by Ajax son of Telamon It is said that he re-established the Olympic games. Homer. Il 8, 128

ARCHESTRATUS, a tragic poet, whose pieces were acted during the Peloponnesian war. Plut. in Arist ——A man so small and lean, that he could be placed in a dish without filling it, though it contained no more than an obolus.—— A follower of Epicurus, who wrote a poem in commendation of gluttony.

ARCHETIMUS, the first philosophical writer in the age of the seven wise men of Greece. Diog.

ARCHETIUS, a Rutulian, killed by the Trojans. Virg. Æn. 12, 457

ARCHIA, one of the Oceanides, wife to Inachus. Hygin fab 143

ARCHIAS, a Corinthian, descended from Hercules. He founded Syracuse, B C. 732. Being told by an oracle to make choice of health or riches, he chose the latter. Dionys. Hal. 2.—— A poet of Antioch, intimate with the Luculli, Metelli, Catuli, Crassi, and other noble families in Rome, whither he came in the consulship of Marius and Catullus, B C. 102. He obtained the rank and name of a Roman citizen by the means of Cicero, who defended him in an elegant oration, when his enemies had disputed his privileges of citizen of Rome. He wrote a poem on the Cimbrian war, and began another concerning Cicero's consulship, which are now lost. Some of his epigrams are preserved in the Anthologia. He is better known as the friend of the eloquent Cicero, than as the author of the few verses preserved under his name. Cic pro Arch.——A polemarch of Thebes, assassinated in the conspiracy of Pelopidas, which he could have prevented, if he had not deferred to the morrow the reading of a letter which he had received from Archias, the Athenian high priest, and which gave him information of his danger. Plut in Pelop.——A high priest of Athens, contemporary and intimate with the polemarch of the same name. Id ibid.——A Theban taken in the act of adultery, and punished according to the law, and tied to a post in the public place, for which punishment he abolished the oligarchy Aristot.

ARCHIBIADES, a philosopher of Athens, who, by his dress and his long beard, affected the manners of the Spartans, and showed himself very inimical to the views and measures of Phocion. Plut. in Phoc.——An ambassador of Byzantium, &c. Polyæn. 4, 44.

ARCHIBIUS, the son of the geographer Ptolemy.

ARCHIDAMIA, a priestess of Ceres, who on account of her affection for Aristomenes, restored him to liberty when he had been taken prisoner by her female attendants at the celebration of their festivals Paus 4, 17 ——A daughter of Cleadas, who, upon hearing that her countrymen, the Spartans, were debating whether they should send away their women to Crete, against the hostile approach of Pyrrhus, seized a sword, and ran to the senate house, exclaiming that the women were as able to fight as the men. Upon this the decree was repealed. Plut. in Pyrrh.—Polyæn. 8, 8

ARCHIDAMUS, son of Theopompus king of Sparta, died before his father Paus ——Another, king of Sparta, son of Anaxidamus, succeeded by Agasicles.——Another, son of Agesilaus, of the family of the Proclidæ ——Another, grandson of Leotychidas, by his son Zeuxidamus He succeeded his grandfather, and reigned in conjunction with Plistoanax. He conquered the Argives and Arcadians, and privately assisted the Phocians in plundering the temple of Delphi. He was called to the aid of Tarentum against the Romans, and killed there in a battle, after a reign of thirty-three years. Diod. 16.—Xenoph ——Another, son of Eudamidas.——Another, who conquered the Helots, who had made an insurrection, after a violent earthquake. Diod. 11. ——A son of Agesilaus, who led the Spartan auxiliaries to Cleombrotus at the battle of Leuctra. His assistance was implored against the Phocians, who had pillaged the temple of Apollo at Delphi; and because he refused, it was said that he exposed himself to the resentment of the god, and therefore he was killed in a battle against the Lucanians in Italy, B.C 338, and his body left without the honours of burial. He left two sons, Eudamidas and Agis, by Dimeha. Paus. 3, 10.——A son of Xenius Theopompus. Paus.

ARCHIDAS, a tyrant of Athens, killed by his troops.

ARCHIDEMUS, a stoic philosopher, who willingly exiled himself among the Parthians. Plut. de Exil.

ARCHIDEUS a son of Amyntas, king of Macedonia. Justin. 7, 4.

ARCHIDIUM, a city of Crete, named after Archidius son of Tegeates. Paus. 8, 53.

ARCHIGALLUS, the high priest of Cybele, always chosen from one of the most distinguished families.

ARCHIGENES, a physician, born at Apamea, in Syria He lived in the reign of Domitian, Nerva, and Trajan, and died in the 73d year of his age He wrote on pharmacy, on local affections, on the cure of chronic diseases, &c. Various fragments of his writings exist in the collections of Ætius and Amida. Juv. 6, 235.

ARCHILOCHUS, a poet of Paros, who wrote elegies, satires, odes, and epigrams, and was the first who introduced Iambics in his verses. He had courted Neobule, the daughter of Lycambes, and had received promises of marriage; but the father gave her to another, superior to the poet in rank and fortune, upon which Archilochus wrote such a bitter satire that Lycambes hung himself in a fit of despair. The Spartans condemned his verses on account of their petulance, and banished him. He gained the laurel crown, however, at the Olympic games, for a hymn to Hercules. Archilochus did not greatly distinguish himself as a warrior. In a battle he threw down his arms, and saved his life by a dishonourable flight; and so regardless was he of military merit, that he defended his conduct, and thus threw down upon him the scorn of some of his contemporaries He flourished 658 B.C., and it is said that he was assassinated Some fragments of his poetry remain, which display vigour and animation, boldness and vehemence, in the highest degree; from which reason perhaps Cicero calls virulent edicts, Archilochia edicta. Cic. Tusc 1.—Quintil 10, 1.—Horod. 1, 12.—Horat. Art. Poet 79 – Athen. 1, 2, &c —— A son of Nestor, killed by Memnon in the Trojan war. Homer. Il. 2.——A Greek historian, who wrote a chronological table, and other works, about the time of the 20th or 3 th olympiad.

ARCHIMEDES a famous geometer and mechanician of Syracuse, born at out 287 B C., and related to king Hiero. He enriched mathematics with discoveries of the highest importance, upon which the moderns have founded their admeasurements of curvilinear surfaces and solids. Euclid, in his elements, considers only the relation of some of these magnitudes to each other, but does not compare them with surfaces and solids bounded by straight lines. Archimedes has developed the propositions necessary for effecting this comparison, in his treatises on the sphere and cylinder, the spheroid and conoid, and in his work on the measurement of the circle. He rose to still more abstruse considerations, in his treatise on spiral lines, which, however, even those acquainted with the subject can with difficulty comprehend His discoveries in mechanics and hydrostatics were scarcely less important than those which he made in geometry. He first taught the principle, that two bodies, equal in bulk, and immersed in a fluid lighter than themselves, lose equal quantities of their weight, and determined by means of it, how much alloy an artist had fraudulently added to a crown, which king Hiero had ordered to be made of pure gold. He discovered the solution of this problem while bathing, and it is said to have caused him so much joy, that he hastened home from the bath undressed, and exclaiming "εὕρηκα ! εὕρηκα ! "I have found it, I have found it!" He seems to have turned much of his attention to the construction of machines of extraordinary powers; and he boasted of the unlimited extent of his art in the well known exclamation, δὸς ποῦ στῶ καὶ τὸν κόσμον κινῶ, "give me a place where I may stand, and I will move the globe." He is said to have invented the compound pulley, the endless screw, &c. During the siege of Syracuse, he devoted all his talents to the defence of his native country. Polybius, Livy, and Plutarch speak very circumstantially of the machines with which he repelled the attacks of the Romans. They say not a word about burning the Roman fleet by means of burning-glasses, a thing which is in itself very improbable, and mentioned only in the later writings of Lucian and Galen. At the moment when the Romans, under Marcellus, gained possession of the city by assault, Archimedes was sitting in the market place, absorbed in the contemplation of a mathematical diagram which he had drawn in the rand To a Roman soldier, who addressed him, he is related to have cried out, "disturb not my circle!" but the rough warrior little heeded his request, and struck him down. As the conquest of Syracuse is placed in the year 212 B.C., Archimedes must have been 75 years old when he lost his life. On his tombstone was placed a cylinder, with a sphere inscribed in it, thereby to immortalize his discovery of their mutual relation, on which he set particular value. Cicero, who was appointed quæstor over Sicily, found this monument in a thicket which concealed it. The best edition of his works is that of Joseph Torelli, fol Oxford, 1792. Cic. Tusc. 1, 25.—De Nat. D. 2, 34.—Liv. 24, 34 —Quintil. 1, 10.—Vitruv. 9, 3.—Polyb. 7. —Plut. in Marcell.—Val Max 8, 7

ARCHINUS, a man who, when he was appointed to distribute new arms among the populace of Argos, raised a mercenary band, and made himself absolute. Polyæn. 3, 8 ——A rhetorician of Athens.

ARCHIPĔLĂGO, a part of the sea where islands in great number are interspersed, such as that part of the Mediterranean which lies between Greece and Asia Minor, and is generally called Mare Ægeum. It is doubted whether the name Archipelago is derived from Ægeo Pelago, or Ago Pelago; the former being a corruption of the word Ægeum, and the latter arising from the number of religious houses at the foot of mount Athos.

ARCHIPŎLIS, or ARCHEPOLIS, a soldier who conspired against Alexander with Dymnus. Curt. 6, 7.

ARCHIPPA, a famous courtezan who gained the affections of Sophocles in his old age. Her attachment to the poet drew the ridicule of Smicrines, her former lover, who observed that she was like owls which love to perch on tombs. Athen. 13.

ARCHIPPE, a city of the Marsi destroyed by an earthquake, and lost in the lake of Fucinus. Plin. 3, 19.

ARCHIPPUS, a king of Italy, from whom perhaps the town of Archippe received its name. Ital. Æn 7, 752.——A philosopher of Thebes, pupil to Pythagoras ——An archon at Athens. ——A comic poet of Athens, of whose eight comedies only one obtained the prize.——A philosopher in the age of Trajan.

ARCHITIS, a name of Venus, worshipped on mount Libanus.

ARCHON, one of Alexander's generals, who received the provinces of Babylon, at the general division, after the king's death. Diod. 18.

ARCHONTES, the name of the chief magistrates of Athens. They were nine in number, and were elected by lots. Their appointment was preceded, or immediately followed, by two examinations, one in the senate-house, called εὐθυνα, the other in the forum before the Heliastæ, named δοκιμασία. They were obliged to prove that they were descended from ancestors who had been citizens of Athens for three generations; to declare to what tribe and hundred they belonged, to show that they had always paid a proper veneration to their parents; that they had borne arms in the service of their country; were possessed of a competent estate, and were without any personal defect. They took a solemn oath that they would observe the laws, administer justice impartially, and accept no presents, or, if they received any, that they would dedicate a statue of gold of equal weight with themselves to the Delphian Apollo. They possessed the entire power of punishing malefactors with death. The chief among them was called Archon, by way of eminence, and sometimes Eponymus, because the year took its denomination from him, as it did from the consuls at Rome. He determined all causes between married people, parents and children, and disputes relating to wills, dowries, and legacies. He took care of orphans, and provided tutors and guardians for them. He heard the complaints of those who had been injured by their neighbours, punished persons addicted to drunkenness, and took the first cognizance of certain public actions, such as ἐπαγγελίαι, φάσεις, ἀπαγωγαὶ ἀφ' ὑβρεως. He was punished with death, if proved to have been overcome with drink at any time during his office The second of these magistrates was called Basileus, or king. He decided all disputes between the priests and families sacred by inheritance, as the Ceryces, Eteobutadæ, &c. Those accused of impiety, or of profaning the mysteries or temples, were brought before him. He assisted in the celebration of the Eleusinian and Lenæan festivals, and in those of the Panathenæa, Hephæstia, and Promethea; and offered public sacrifices for the safety and prosperity of the state It was requisite that his wife, who was termed Basilissa, or queen, should be a legitimate citizen of Athens, and a virgin at the time of her nuptials. He had a vote among the Areopagites, but was obliged to sit among them without his crown. The third of the archons was named Polemarch. He had under his care all the strangers and sojourners in Athens, and provided a sufficient maintenance, from the public treasury, for the children of those who had lost their lives in the service of their country. Each of these three magistrates made choice of two Paredri, or assessors, who were men of gravity and judgment, well skilled in the administration of the laws, and sat with the archons on the bench, as their name imports, and assisted them in their decisions. The remaining six archons were denominated Thesmothetæ, or legislators They received complaints against persons guilty of false accusations, of calumny, bribery, or impiety. Disputes between citizens, strangers, and merchants, were brought before them; and they were appointed to guard the rights of the people, and, as their name implies, to vindicate the laws. They publicly examined several magistrates, and took the votes in the assemblies. They ratified all public contracts, appointed days on which the judges were to transact business, and prosecuted those who attempted to mislead the ignorant and unwary into any act injurious to the state. They were accustomed to walk about the city by night, for the purpose of maintaining order and tranquillity These officers of state were chosen after the death of king Codrus. Their power was originally for life, but afterwards it was limited to ten years, and at last to one year. After some time, the qualifications which were required to be an archon were not strictly observed. Adrian, before he was elected emperor of Rome, was made archon at Athens, though a foreigner; and the same honours were conferred upon Plutarch. The perpetual archons, after the death of Codrus, were Medon, whose office began B. C. 1070; Acastus, 1038; Archippus, 1014; Thespippus, 995; Phorbas, 954; Megacles, 923; Diognetus, 893; Pherecles, 865; Ariphron, 846; Thespieus, 820; Agamestor, 799; Æschylus, 778; Alcmæon, 756; after whose death the archons were decennial, the first of whom was Charops, who began 753; Æsimedes, 744; Clidicus, 734; Hippomenes, 724; Leocrates, 714; Apsander, 704, Eryxias, 694; after whom the office became annual, and of these annual archons Creon was the first. Aristoph in Nub. et Avib.—Vell. Paterc. 1, 2.—Justin. 2, 6.—Meursius de Arch.—Euseb. Chr. 1.—Potus.

8, 9.—Sigon. de Rep. Athen. 4, 3.—Scholiast Aristoph.—Plut. Sympos. 1.—Æschin.—Demosth.—Lysias.

ARCHYLUS THURIUS; a general of Dionysius the elder. Diod. 14

ARCHYTAS, a musician of Mitylene, who wrote a treatise on agriculture. Ding.——A Pythagorean philosopher, the son of Hestiæus of Tarentum, and the friend and contemporary of Plato. He flourished about 400 B. C. So high was his reputation for wisdom and valour, that, contrary to an express law, which required that no person should hold the command of the army more than once, he was chosen general seven times. He discovered the method of finding two mean proportionals between two given lines, and the duplication of the cube by means of the conic sections. He constructed several hydraulic machines, a winged automaton of wood, &c. Aristotle is said to have been indebted to him for the ten categories, and for many of his ethical principles. Horace celebrates him as an eminent geographer and astronomer, and records, in one of his poems, his sad fate, in being drowned on the coast of Apulia. Horat. Od. 1, 28.—Diog. in vit.—Cic. de Orat. 3, 34.—Fin. 2 14 et 5, 29.—Tusc. 5, 22.

ARCITENENS, an epithet applied to Apollo, from his bearing a bow, with which, as soon as born, he destroyed the serpent Python. Virg. Æn. 3, 75

ARCTINUS, a Milesian poet, said to be pupil to Homer. Dionys. Hal. 1

ARCTOPHYLAX, a star near the great Bear, called also Bootes. Cic. de Nat. D. 2, 42.

ARCTOS a mountain near Propontis, inhabited by giants and monsters.——Two celestial constellations near the north pole, commonly called Ursa Major and Minor, supposed to be Arcas and his mother, who were made constellations. Virg. G. 1.—Aratus.—Ovid. Fast. 3, 107.

ARCTURUS, a star near the tail of the great bear, whose rising and setting were generally supposed to portend great tempests. Horat. Od. 3, 1. The name is derived from its situation, Ἄρκτος ursus, οὐρὰ cauda. It rises now about the beginning of October, and Pliny tells us it rose in his age on the 12th, or, according to Columella, on the 5th of September.

ARDALUS, a son of Vulcan, said so have been the first who invented the pipe. He gave it to the Muses, who on that account have been called Ardalides and Ardaliotides. Paus. 2, 31

ARDANIA, a country of Egypt. Strab.

ARDAXANUS, a small river of Illyricum. Polyb.

ARDEA formerly Ardua, a town of Latium, near the coast, south-east of Lavinium, built by Danae, or, according to some, by a son of Ulysses and Circe. It was the capital of the Rutuli. Some soldiers set it on fire, and the inhabitants publicly reported, that their city had been changed into a bird, called by the Latins Ardea. It was rebuilt, and it became a rich and magnificent city, whose enmity to Rome rendered it famous. Tarquin the proud was pressing it with a siege, when his son ravished Lucretia. Its site answers to a miserable place bearing the name Ardia. C. Nep. in Attic 18.—Liv. 1, 57 3 71. 4, 9, &c.—Virg. Æn. 7, 412.—Ovid. Met. Jab. 1, 573.—Strab. 5.

ARDERICCA, a small town on the Euphrates, north of Babylon.

ARDIÆI, a town of Dalmatia, in Illyricum, whose capital was called Ardia. Strab. 7

ARDISCUS, a river of Thrace, falling into the Hebrus at Adrianopolis. Now the Arda

ARDONEA, a town of Apulia. Liv. 21, 20.

ARDUA, an ancient name of Ardea. Virg. Æn. 7, 411.

ARDUENNA, the largest forest of Gaul, extending from the Rhenus, through the country of the Trevери, to the territory of the Remi and Nervii. Large remains of it are yet standing, and that part of it which is on the frontiers of France and the Netherlands, retains still the name Forest of Ardennes. Tacit. Ann. 8, 42.—Cæs. Bell. Gall. 6, 29.

ARDUINE, the goddess of hunting among the Gauls. She was represented with the same attributes as the Diana of Rome, and probably received her name from the forest Arduenna. Gesner Thes.—Erud. Lang. Lat.

ARDYRNES, a nation near the Rhone. Polyb. 3.

ARDYS, a son of Gyges, king of Lydia, who reigned 49 years, took Priene, and made war against Miletus. Herod. 1, 15.

AREA, a surname of Minerva, from a temple she had on Mars' hill (Ἄρης), erected by Orestes, after he had been acquitted by the Areopagites. Paus. 1, 28

AREACIDÆ, a nation of Numidia. Polyb.

AREAS, a general chosen by the Greeks against Ætolia. Justin 24, 1.

ARGONIS the mother of Mopsus by Ampyx. Orph. in Argon.

ARENTHIOS, a king of Arne in Peloponnesus, father, by Philomedusa, of Menestius, who perished at the Trojan war by the hand of Paris. Homer. Il. 7, 9.——Another warrior, the attendant of Rigmus, son of Pires of Thrace who assisted Priam against the Greeks. Id. 20, 486

ARELATUM, or ARELAS, a town of Gallia Narbonensis, situated on the Rhodanus. It was a favourite place of resort for the Romans, and so greatly ornamented, as to have been called Gallula Roma. It was hither that the emperor Honorius transferred the seat of the prætorian præfecture of Gaul, when Augusta Treverorum, sacked by the barbarians, was no longer able to maintain this distinction. It is now Arles. Plin. 10, 42.—Strab. 4.—Mela, 2, 5.—Auson. in Urb. 8, 2.

ARELLIUS, a celebrated painter of Rome, in the age of Augustus. He painted the goddesses in the form of his mistresses. Plin. 35, 10.—A miser in Horace ARENORICA, a part of Gaul, at the north of the Loire, now called Brittany. Plin. 4.

ARENA and ARENE, a city of Messenia, in Peloponnesus. Homer. Il. 2

ARENACUM, a fortified place on the Rhine, in the territories of the Batavi, not far from where the river separates to form the Vahalis. It is now Arnhem. Tacit. Hist. 5, 20.

AREOPAGITÆ, the judges of the Areopagus, a seat of justice on a small eminence near Athens, whose name is derived from Ἄρεως πάγος, the hill of Mars, because Mars was the first who was tried there, for the murder of Halirrhothius, who had offered violence to his daughter Alcippe. Some say that the place received the name of Areopagus, because the Amazons pitched their camp there, and offered sacrifices to their progenitor Mars, when they besieged Athens; and others maintain, that the name was given to the place, because Mars is the god of bloodshed, war, and murder, which were under the cognizance of that court. At what period this celebrated seat of justice was first instituted is uncertain. It is said by some to have been founded by Solon, while others assert that it was established by Cecrops the founder of Athens, or by Cranaus, one of his successors. The number of judges in this venerable assembly seems to have been varied at different times. At first it consisted of nine persons; they were afterwards increased, however, so that some have reckoned them at thirty-one; others at fifty-one, and others at five hundred. A seat in it was held for life. The members were chosen from among the most worthy and religious of the Athenians, and from such archons, or chief magistrates, as had discharged their duty with zeal and fidelity. If any of them were convicted of immorality, if they were seen sitting in a tavern, or had used any indecent language, they were immediately expelled from the assembly, and held in the greatest disgrace. In the later ages of the republic, however, these regulations were often neglected, and men of vicious and profligate lives were elected judges. The Areopagites took cognizance of murder, impiety, and immoral behaviour, and particularly of idleness, which they deemed the cause of all vice. They watched over the due execution of the laws, had the management of the public treasury, and the liberty of rewarding the virtuous; and, by their authority, parents were compelled to educate their children in a manner suitable to their condition in society. They held their meetings in the open air, partly because it was considered unlawful that the criminal and accuser should be under the same roof, and partly that the judges, whose persons were sacred, might contract no pollution by conversing with profane and wicked men. They heard causes, and passed sentence at night, and in darkness, that they might not be influenced in favour of either the plaintiff or defendant, and that no one might know the number, or discern the countenances of the judges. In the ancient periods of the republic, the parties spoke for themselves; but in later ages they were allowed counsel to plead for them. The judges, however, strictly prohibited warm and ornamented harangues, lest they should charm their ears and corrupt their judgment. Hence their decisions were just and impartial, and were always deemed inviolable. The Areopagites at first sat on the twenty-seventh, twenty-eighth, and twenty-ninth days of every month, and afterwards almost every day. Their authority continued in its original state, till Pericles, who was refused admittance among them, resolved to lessen their consequence, and destroy their power. From that time the morals of the Athenians were corrupted, and the Areopagites were no longer conspicuous for their virtue and justice; and when they censured the debaucheries of Demetrius, one of the family of Phalerus, he plainly told them, that if they wished to make a reform in Athens, they must begin at home. Juv. 9, 102.—Paus. 1, 28.—Lys de Eratos.—Cic de Off. 1, 2.—Ad Att. 1, 14.—Suidas in verbo.—Ælian. V. H. 5, 15 et 18.—Pollux, 8, 9 et 10.

AREOPAGUS, a hill in the neighbourhood of Athens. (Vid Areopagites.)

ARESCUSA, a woman said to have been changed into a man, and to have consequently received the name of Arescon. Plin. 7, 4.

ARESTÆ, a people of India, conquered by Alexander. Justin 12, 8.

ARESTHANES, a countryman, whose goat suckled Æsculapius, when exposed by his mother. Paus. 2, 26.

ARESTORIDES, a patronymic given to the hundred-eyed Argus, as son of Arestor. Ovid. Met. 1, 584.

ARETA, the mother of Aristippus, the philosopher. Laert 2.——A daughter of Dionysius, who married Dion. She was thrown into the sea. Plut. in Dion.——A female philosopher of Cyrene, B C. 377.——A daughter of Ithexenor, descended from Neptune, who married her uncle Alcinous, by whom she had Nausicaa. Homer. Od 7 et 8.—Apollod 1.

ARETÆUS, a physician of Cappadocia. He practised medicine at Rome, but at what period is uncertain, probably about the reign of Vespasian. He wrote upon acute and chronic diseases, in eight books, which are come down to us in an imperfect state. They contain much excellent description of the diagnostics and symptoms of diseases, and many valuable observations respecting their cure, from which he appears to have been a bold and decisive practitioner. The best edition of his works is that of Boerhaave, Lug. Bat. 1731, fol. A translation by John Moffat, M D was printed in 1765, 8vo.

ARETAPHILA, the wife of Melanippus, a priest of Cyrene. Nicocrates murdered her husband to marry her. She, however, was so attached to Melanippus, that she endeavoured to poison Nicocrates and at last caused him to be assassinated by his brother Lysander, whom she married. Lysander proved as cruel as his brother, upon which Aretaphila ordered him to be thrown into the sea. After this she retired to a private station. Plut de Virtut Mulier.—Polyæn. 8, 38.

ARETALES, a Cnidian, who wrote an history of Macedonia, besides a treatise on islands. Plut.

ARETE. Vid Areta.

ARETES, one of Alexander's officers. Curt. 4, 15.

ARETHUSA, a nymph of Elis, daughter of Oceanus, and one of the attendants of Diana. As she returned one day from hunting, she sat near the Alpheus, and bathed in the stream. The god of the river was enamoured of her, and pursued her over the whole country; when Arethusa, ready to sink under fatigue, implored the aid of Diana, who transformed her into a fountain. The Alpheus immediately mingled his streams with hers, and Diana opened a secret passage under the earth and under the sea, where the waters of Arethusa disappeared, and rose in the island of Ortygia, near Syracuse, in Sicily. The river Alpheus followed her also under the sea, and rose also in Ortygia: so that, as mythologists relate, whatever is thrown into the Alpheus in Elis rises again, after some time, in the fountain Arethusa near Syracuse. (Vid. Alpheus.) Ovid Met fab 5, 10.—Athen 7.—Paus.——One of the Hesperides. Apollod. 2, 5.——A daughter of Herileus, mother of Abas, by Neptune. Hygin. fab. 157.—— One of Actæon's dogs. Hygin. fab. 181.——A lake of upper Armenia, near the fountains of the Tigris. Nothing can sink under its waters. Plin. 2, 103.——A town of Thrace.——Another in Syria.

ARETINUM, a Roman colony in Etruria. Itin. 5, 143 &c.

ARETUS, a son of Nestor and Anaxibia. Homer. Od. 3, 413 ——A Trojan against the Greeks He was killed by Automedon. Homer Il 17, 493.——A famous warrior, whose only weapon was an iron club. He was treacherously killed by Lycurgus, king of Arcadia Paus. 8, 11.

AREUS, a king of Sparta, preferred in the succession to Cleonymus, brother of Acrotatus, who had made an alliance with Pyrrhus. He assisted Athens when Antigonus besieged it, and died at Corinth. Paus. 3, 6.—Plut.——A king of Sparta, who succeeded his father Acrotatus II, and was succeeded by his son Leonidas, son of Cleonymus.——A philosopher of Alexandria, intimate with Augustus. Sueton.——A poet of Laconia.——An orator mentioned by Quintil

ARGÆUS and ARGEUS, a son of Apollo and Cyrene. Justin. 13, 7.——A son of Perdiccas, who succeeded his father in the kingdom of Macedonia Justin. 7, 1.——A mountain of Cappadocia, covered with perpetual snow, and so high, that from its summit, according to the ancients, both the Mediterranean and Euxine seas were visible. It is now called Erdjish, and at its foot stood Mazaca, the metropolis of Cappadocia, called by Tiberius, in honour of Augustus, Cæsarea ad Argæum, a name which it has preserved to the present day in that of Kasaria——A son of Ptolemy, killed by his brother. Paus. 1. ——A son of Licymnius. Apollod. 2.

ARGĂLUS, a king of Sparta, son of Amyclas Paus. 3, 1.

ARGATHŌNA, a huntress of Clos in Bithynia, whom Rhesus married before he went to the Trojan war. She endeavoured to dissuade him from going to the field, but the love of fame prevailed over his fondness for Argathona; who, when she heard of his death, died in despair. Parthen. Erotic. 36.

ARGATHONIUS, a king of Tartessus, near Cadiz; who reigned eighty years, and, according to Pliny, lived 120; according to Anacreon, mentioned by Pliny, 150; and 300, according to Silius Italicus. Plin. 7, 48 —Ital. 3, 396.

ARGE, a beautiful huntress, changed into a stag by Apollo. Hygin. fab. 205.——One of the Cyclops. Hesiod——A daughter of Thespius, by whom Hercules had two sons. Apollod 2, 35. ——A nymph, daughter of Jupiter and Juno Apollod. 1.

ARGEA, a place at Rome where certain Argives were buried, and where also some sacred ceremonies were observed in honour of the gods. Liv. 1, 21.—Ovid. Fast 3, 791.—Varro de L. L 4, 8.

ARGEÆTHÆ, a village of Arcadia. Paus. 8, 23.

ARGENNUM, a promontory of Ionia, near Halicarnassus.——Also a promontory of Sicily, on the eastern side, now Capo St. Alesso

ARGENTĂRIUS, a mountain of Etruria, now Argentaro.

ARGENTINUS, an imaginary deity at Rome, called the son of the goddess Pecunia, and invoked by those who were engaged in commercial affairs. August de Civ D 4, 21.

ARGENTORATUM, now Strasbourg, an ancient town of Gaul, near which Julian defeated the Alemanni.

ARGES, a son of Cœlus and Terra, who had only one eye in his forehead. Apollod. 1, 1.

ARGESTRĀTUS, a king of Lacedæmon, who reigned 45 years

ARGEUS, a son of Perdiccas, king of Macedonia, who obtained the kingdom when Amyntas was deposed by the Illyrians. Justin. 7, 2.

ARGI, (plur. masc.). Vid Argos.

ARGIA, daughter of Adrastus, married Polynices, whom she loved with uncommon tenderness. When he was killed in the war, she buried his body in the night, against the positive orders of Creon, for which pious action she was punished with death. Theseus revenged her death by killing Creon. Hygin. fab 69 et 72.—Stat. Theb 12 (Vid Anugone, at 1 Creon)——A country of Peloponnesus, called also Argolis, of which Argos was the capital.——One of the Oceanides. Hygin praef——The wife of Inachus, and mother of Io Id. fab. 145——The mother of Argus, by Polybus Id. fab. 145.—— A daughter of Autesion, who married Aristodemus, by whom she had two sons, Eurysthenes, and Procles. Apollod. 2.—Paus. 4, 3

ARGIAS, a man who founded Chalcedon, A U.C 148.

ARGILETUM, a place at Rome, near the Circus Maximus, where the tradesmen generally kept their shops The name is said by some to have been derived from Argus, a friend of Evander, who was slain here, but others deduce it from the abundance of argilla, or clay, found in the vicinity. Virg. Æn. 8, 345.—Martial. Ep. 1, 4.

ARGILIUS, a youth beloved and protected by Pausanias. He revealed his master's correspondence with the Persian king, to the ephori; and thus was the cause of his disgrace and death. C. Nep. in Paus.

ARGILLUS, a mountain of Egypt, near the Nile.

ARGILUS, a town of Thrace, near the Strymon, built by a colony of Andrians. Thucyd 4, 103.—Herod 7, 115.

ARGINUSÆ, three small islands south-east of Lesbos, lying off the promontory of Cana, or Colonæ. They were rendered famous for the great naval victory gained near them by the Athenians over the Lacedæmonians, B. C. 406. Strab. 13.

ARGIÓPE, a nymph of mount Parnassus, seduced by the musician Philammon, the son of Apollo; by whom she had Thamyris. Paus. 4, 33.

ARGIPHONTES, a surname given to Mercury, because he killed the hundred-eyed Argus by order of Jupiter

ARGIPPÆI, or ARIMPHÆI, a people of Sarmatia, born bald, and with flat noses. They lived on the fruits of trees, particularly on that of the tree called Pontieus, from which, when ripe, they obtained a black juice called Asche, which they mixed with milk. Of the thick dregs they made cakes. The Argippæi settled all disputes between their neighbours, and whoever took refuge among them was sure of protection. Herod. 4, 23.

ARGIVA, a surname of Juno worshipped at Argos She had also a temple at Sparta, consecrated to her by Eurydice, daughter of Lacedæmon. Paus. 4, 13.—Virg. Æn. 3, 547.

ARGIVI, the inhabitants of the city of Argos and the neighbouring country. The word is indiscriminately applied by the poets to all the inhabitants of Greece.

ARGIUS, a steward of Galba, who privately interred the body of his master in his gardens. Tacit Hist. 1, 49.

ARGO, the name of the famous ship which carried Jason and his 54 companions to Colchis, when they resolved to recover the golden fleece. The derivation of the word Argo has been often disputed Some derive it from Argos, the person who first proposed the expedition, and who built the ship. Others maintain that it was built at Argos, whence its name. Cicero, Tusc. 1, 20, calls it Argo, because it carried Grecians, commonly called Argives Diod. 4, derives the word from ἀργὸς, which signifies swift. Ptolemy says, but falsely, that Hercules built the ship, and called it Argo, after a son of Jason, who bore the same name The ship Argo had fifty oars. According to many authors, she had a beam on her prow, cut in the forest of Dodona by Minerva, which, as it had the power of giving oracles to the argonauts, warned them that they never should reach their country, till Jason had been purified of the murder of Absyrtus. This ship was the first that ever sailed on the sea, as some report. After the expedition was finished, Jason ordered her to be drawn aground at the isthmus of Corinth, and consecrated to the god of the sea. The poets have made her a constellation in heaven Jason was killed by a beam which fell from the top, as he slept on the ground near it Hygin fab 14. A P 2, 37.—Catul de Nupt Pel et Thet.—Val. Flacc 1, 93, &c.—Pherec fab 4 b. —Seneca in Medea.—Apollon. Argon.—Apollod. 1.—Ov de Nat. D.—Plin. 7, 56.—Manil 1.

ARGOLICUS SINUS, a bay on the coast of Argolis, now the Gulf of Napoli.

ARGŌLIS and ARGIA, a country of Peloponnesus, bounded on the east by the Saronic gulf, on the north by Corinthia, on the west by Arcadia, and on the south by Laconia. Its original inhabitants were Pelasgi, who, on the arrival of an Egyptian colony under Danaus, changed their name to Danai, and afterwards to Argivi and Argolici. Argolis at first acknowledged the authority of one sovereign; but after the lapse of two generations, it was divided into the small kingdoms of Argos, Mycenæ, and Tiryns, which were all finally re-united in the person of Atreus, son of Pelops. This hero acquired the possession of nearly the whole Peloponnesus, which ample territory he transmitted to his son Agamemnon, who is called by Homer the king of many islands and of all Argos. The government, however, afterwards assumed a republican form. The Argives were engaged in frequent hostilities with the Spartans, sometimes about the possession of the small district Cynuria, and at others from a constant jealousy of their wily neighbours, and a determination to oppose their attempts at aggrandisement. They joined the Achæan league, and continued to form a part of this confederacy till its final dissolution by the Romans. Europ. Archel. Frag. 2. Orest. 921. - Hom Il. 2, 108.

ARGON, one of the descendants of Hercules, who reigned in Lydia 505 years before Gyges Herod 1, 7.

ARGONAUTÆ, a name given to those ancient heroes who went with Jason on board the ship Argo to Colchis, about 79 years before the taking of Troy, or 1263 B.C. The causes of this expedition arose from the following circumstances:—Athamas, king of Thebes, had married Ino, the daughter of Cadmus, whom he divorced to marry Nephele, by whom he had two children, Phryxus and Helle. As Nephele was subject to certain fits of madness, Athamas repudiated her, and took a second time Ino, by whom he had soon after two sons, Learchus and Melicerta. As the children of Nephele were to succeed to their father by right of birth, Ino conceived an immortal hatred against them, and she caused the city of Thebes to be visited by a pestilence, by poisoning all the grain which had been sown in the earth. Upon this the oracle was consulted, and as it had been corrupted by means of Ino, the answer was, that Nephele's children should be immolated to the gods. Phryxus was apprized of this, and he immediately embarked with his sister Helle, and fled to the court of Æetes, king of Colchis, one of his near relations. In the voyage Helle died, and Phryxus arrived safe at Colchis, and was received with kindness by the king. The poets have embellished the flight of Phryxus, by supposing that he and Helle fled through the air on a ram which had a golden fleece and wings, and was endowed with the faculties of speech This ram, as they say, was the offspring of Neptune's amours, under the form of a ram, with the nymph Theophane. As they were going to be sacrificed, the ram took them on his back, and instantly disappeared in the air. On their way Helle was giddy, and fell into that part of the sea which from her was called the Hellespont. When Phryxus came to Colchis, he sacrificed the ram to Jupiter, or, according to others, to Mars, to whom he also dedicated the golden fleece He soon after married Chalciope the daughter of Æetes; but his father-in-law envied him the possession of the golden fleece, and therefore to obtain it he murdered him. Some time after this event, when Jason the son of Æson, demanded of his uncle Pelias the crown which he usurped, (Vid. Pelias, Jason, Æson,) Pelias said that he would restore it to him, provided he avenged the death of their common relation Phryxus, whom Æetes had basely murdered in Colchis. Jason, who was in the vigour of youth, and of an ambitious soul, readily undertook the hazardous enterprise, and was joined by the most illustrious young men of Greece. They sailed with favourable winds, from Aphetæ, at the entrance of the Sinus Pelasgicus, in the ship Argo. They reached the island of Lemnos, where they remained two years, and raised a new race of men from the Lemnian women, who had murdered their husbands. (Vid. Hypsipyle.) After they had left Lemnos, they visited Samothrace, where they offered sacrifices to the gods, and thence passed to Troas and to Cyzicum Here they met with a favourable reception from Cyzicus, the king of the country The night after their departure, they were driven back by a storm again on the coast of Cyzicum, and the inhabitants, supposing them to be their enemies, the Pelasgi, furiously attacked them. In this nocturnal engagement the slaughter was great, and Cyzicus was killed by the hand of Jason, who, to expiate the murder he had ignorantly committed, buried him in a magnificent manner, and offered a sacrifice to the mother of the gods, to whom he built a temple on mount Dindymus. From Cyzicum they visited Bebrycia, otherwise called Bithynia, where Pollux accepted the challenge of Amycus, king of the country, in the combat of the cestus, and slew him. They were driven from Bebrycia by a storm, to Salmydessa, on the coast of Thrace, where they delivered Phineus, king of the place, from the persecution of the harpies Phineus directed their course through the Cyanean rock or the Symplegades, (Vid. Cyaneæ,) and they safely entered the Euxine sea. They visited the country of the Mariandynians, where Lycus reigned, and lost two of their companions, Idmon, and Tiphys their pilot. After they had left this coast, they were driven upon the island of Arecia, where they found the children of Phryxus, whom Æetes their grandfather had sent to Greece to take possession of their father's kingdom. From this island they at last arrived safe in Æa, the capital of Colchis. Jason explained the causes of his voyage to Æetes, but the conditions on which he was to recover the golden fleece, were so hard, that the Argonauts must have perished in the attempt, had not Medea, the king's daughter, fallen in love with their leader. She had a conference with Jason, and after mutual oaths of fidelity in the temple of Hecate, Medea pledged herself to deliver the Argonauts from her father's hard conditions, if Jason married her, and carried her with him to Greece. He was required to tame two bulls, having brazen feet and horns, and vomiting forth fire; he was required also to yoke them to a ploughshare of adamant, and turn up the soil of two acres of ground that had never before been cultivated. After this he was to sow in the furrows the teeth of a dragon, from which an armed multitude were to rise up, and to be all destroyed by his hands. This done, he was to kill an ever-watchful dragon, that guarded the tree on which the golden fleece was hung. All these labours were to be performed in one day, and Medea's assistance, whose knowledge of herbs, magic, and potions, was unparalleled, easily extricated Jason from all danger, to the astonishment and terror of his companions, and of Æetes, and the people of Colchis, who had assembled to be spectators of this wonderful action. He tamed the bulls with ease, ploughed the field, sowed the dragon's teeth, and when the armed men sprang from the earth, he threw a stone in the midst of them, and they immediately turned their weapons one against the other, till they all perished. After this he went to the dragon, and by means of enchanted herbs, and a draught which Medea had given him, he lulled the monster to sleep, and obtained the golden fleece, and immediately set sail with Medea. He was soon pursued by Absyrtus, the king's son, who came up to them, and was seized and murdered by Jason and Medea. The mangled limbs of Absyrtus were strewed in the way through which Æetes was to pass, that his farther pursuit might be stopped. After the murder of Absyrtus, they entered the Palus Mæotis, and by pursuing their course towards the left, according to the foolish account of poets who were ignorant of geography, they came to the island Peucestes, and to that of Circe. Here Circe informed Jason, that the cause of all his calamities arose from the murder of Absyrtus, of which she refused to expiate him. Soon after, they entered the Mediterranean by the columns of Hercules, and passed the straits of Charybdis and Scylla, where they must have perished, had not Tethys, the mistress of Peleus, one of the Argonauts, delivered them. They were preserved from the Sirens by the eloquence of Orpheus, and arrived in the island of the Phæacians, where they met the enemy's fleet, which had continued their pursuit by a different course. It was therefore resolved that Medea should be restored, if she had not been actually married to Jason, but the wife of Alcinous, the king of the country, being appointed umpire between the Colchians and Argonauts, had the marriage privately consummated by night, and declared that the claims of Æetes to Medea were now void. From Phæacia the Argonauts came to the bay of Ambracia, whence they were driven by a storm upon the coast of Africa, and after many disasters, at last came in sight of the promontory of Melea, in the Peloponnesus, where Jason was purified of the murder of Absyrtus, and soon after arrived safe in Thessaly. The impracticability of such a voyage is well known. Apollonius Rhodius gives another account, equally improbable. He says, that they sailed from the Euxine up one of the mouths of the Danube, and that Absyrtus pursued them by entering another mouth of the river. After they had continued their voyage for some leagues, the waters decreased, and they were obliged to carry the ship Argo across the country to the Adriatic, upwards of 150 miles. Here they met with Absyrtus, who had pursued the same measures, and conveyed his ships in the same manner over the land. Absyrtus was immediately put to death; and soon after the beam of Dodona (Vid. Argo,) gave an oracle, that Jason should never return home, if he was not previously purified of the murder. Upon this they sailed to the island of Æa, where Circe, who was the sister of Æetes, purified him without knowing who he was. There is a third tradition which maintains, that they returned to Colchis a second time, and visited many places of Asia. This famous expedition has been celebrated in the ancient ages of the world; it has employed the pen of many writers, and among the historians, Diodorus Siculus, Strabo, Apollodorus, and Justin; and among the poets, Onomacritus, more generally called Orpheus, Apollonius Rhodius, Pindar, and Valerius Flaccus, have extensively given an account of its most remarkable particulars. The number of the Argonauts is not exactly known. Apollonius and Diodorus say that they were 54; Tzetzes admits the number of 50; but Apollodorus mentions only 45. The following list is drawn from the various authors who have made mention of the Argonautic expedition: Jason, son of Æson, as is well known, was the chief of the rest. His companions were, Acastus son of Pelias, Actor son of Hippasus, Admetus son of Pheres, Æsculapius son of Apollo, Æthalides son of Mercury and Eupolemé, Almenus son of Mars, Amphiaraus son of Œcleus, Amphidamus son of Aleus, Amphion son of Hyperasius, Anceus son of Lycurgus, and another of the same name Areus, Argus the builder of the ship Argo, Argus son of Phryxus, Armenus, Ascalaphus son of Mars, Asterion son of Cometes, Asterius son of Neleus, Augeas son of Sol, Atalanta daughter of Schoneus, disguised in a man's dress, Autolycus son of Mercury, Azorus, Buphagus, Butes son of Teleon, Calais son of Boreas, Canthus son of Abas, Castor son of Jupiter, Ceneus son of Elatus, Cepheus son of Aleus, Cius, Clytius and Iphitus sons of Eurythus, Coronus, Deucalion son of Minos, Echion son of Mercury and Antianira, Ergynus son of Neptune, Euphemus son of Neptune and Mæonassa, Eribotes, Eurydus son of Cisteus, Eurydamus and Eurythion sons of Iras, Eurytus son of Mercury, Glaucus, Hercules son of Jupiter, Idas son of Aphareus, Iolmenus son of Mars, Idmon son of Abas, Iolaus son of Iphi-eius, Iphiclus son of Thessius, Iphicius son of Philacus, Iphis son of Alcetor, Lynceus son of Aphareus, Iritus son of Naubolus, Laertes son of Arceisius, Laocoon, Leodatus son of Bias, Leitus son of Alector, Meleager son of Œneus, Menœtius son of Actor, Mopsus son of Amphycus, Nauplius son of Neptune, Neleus the brother of Peleus, Nestor son of Neleus, Oileus the father of Ajax, Orpheus son of Œager, Palemon son of Æolus, Peleus and Telamon sons of Æacus, Periclymenes son of Neleus, Peneleus son of Hipalmus, Philoctetes son of Pœan, Phlias, Pollux son of Jupiter, Polyphemus son of Elates, Poras son of Thaumacus, Phanus son of Bacchus, Phalerus son of Alcon, Phocus and Priasus sons of Ceneus one of the Epithæ, Talaus, Tiphys son of Aginus, Staphilus son of Bacchus, two of the name of Iphitus, Theseus son of Ægeus, with his friend Pirithous. Among these Æsculapius was physician, and Tiphys was pilot. Bryant considers the Argonautic expedition as one of those corrupt traditions in which the recollection of the deluge, and the preservation of mankind in the ark, was long preserved. Jason, therefore, he believes to be the arkite deity, and the name of Argo to be connected with and derived from the ark itself. Sir Isaac Newton thinks that it was an embassy sent by the Greeks to persuade the nations along the Euxine and Mediterranean seas to throw off the yoke of Amenophis, king of Egypt, during his absence in Ethiopia. Many consider it to have been a mere commercial enterprise. Dr Gillies supposes that it was a confederacy formed by the states of Greece, under the influence of the Amphictionic council, to repel the invasions of their barbarous neighbours, and to enrich themselves with foreign plunder. He the object of the Argonauts, however, what it might, their undertaking appears to have been attended with a considerable and a happy effect on the manners and character of the Greeks. From the era of this expedition, we may discover not only a more daring and more enlarged spirit of enterprise, but a more decisive and rapid progress towards civilization and humanity. The chiefs who had hitherto been the isolated leaders of barbarous hordes, and owed their pre-eminence principally to their physical strength and ferocious courage, when combined in a joint expedition, practically learned the value of the political virtues, and found that to retain their superiority, it was necessary to brighten the lustre of martial spirit by the more valuable virtues of justice and humanity.

ARGONAUTICA (-orum), the account of the expedition of the Argonauts for the recovery of the golden fleece; such as that of Valerius Flaccus, Orpheus, &c.

ARGOS, (sing. neut et Argi, masc. plur.), the capital of Argolis in Peloponnesus, about two miles from the sea, on the bay called Argolicus Sinus. Its walls were built by seven Cyclopians who came from Lycia. It was surrounded by strong fortifications, and protected by two citadels, one of which was called Larissa, from a daughter of Pelasgus. It was a very flourishing and splendid city, and produced some of the finest sculptors in the world. Music was also highly cultivated here, and in the reign of Darius its inhabitants were accounted the first musicians of the age. The goddess Juno was worshipped at Argos with especial honour, and her attachment to its interests is frequently recorded in the ancient poets. The excellence of its horses is shown also by the epithet ευκτίβοτος, equos pascens, which Homer so constantly applies to Argos. The term Argos in the Macedonian and Thessalian dialects signified a field, or plain, and was frequently adopted by the Pelasgi in their various settlements. Europ Troad. 10-7. Herc. Fur. 15.—Paus. 2, 23.—Liv. 34, 25.—Herod. 3, 151.—Virg. Æn. 1, 24.—Hor. Carm. 1, 7, 8.—Hom Il 3, 76.—Strab 8.——A town of Thessaly, called Pelasgicon by the Pelasgians. Lucan. 6, 355.——A city of Acarnania, called Argos Amphilochium, at the south-eastern extremity of the Sinus Ambracius, built by Amphilochus, son of Amphiaraus. According to others, it was founded by Alcmæon, brother to Amphilochus. Its ruins are known by the name of Ambrakus.

ARGUS, a son of Arestor, whence he is often called Arestoriades. He married Ismene, the daughter of the Asopus, and distinguished himself so much by his strength, that he killed a bull which laid waste Arcadia, destroyed a satyr equally terrible, and also the Echidna, a dreadful monster, half a nymph and half a serpent. As he had an hundred eyes, of which only two were asleep at one time, Juno set him to watch Io, whom Jupiter had changed into a heifer; but Mercury, by order of Jupiter, slew him, by lulling all his eyes asleep with the sound of his lyre. Juno put the eyes of Argus on the tail of the peacock, a bird sacred to her divinity. Moschus Idyll.—Ovid Met 1, fab. 12 et 13.—Propert. 1, 587, &c., el. 3.—Apollod. 1, 9. 2, 1.——A son of Agenor. Hygin. fab. 145.——A son of Danaus, who built the ship Argo. Id 14.——A son of Jupiter and Niobe, was the first child which the father of the gods had by a mortal. He succeeded Phoroneus as king of the country, and built Argos, which became the capital of his dominions. He married Evadne, the daughter of Strymon and Neœra, by whom he had Jasius, Pisanthus, Epidaurus, Criasus, &c. Id. 145 et 155.—Apollod. 2, 1.—Paus. 2, 16 et 22.——A son of Pyras and Callirhoe. Hygin. fab 145.——A son of Phryxus. Id 3.——A son of Polybus. Id. 14.——One of Actæon's dogs. Apollod.——A dog of Ulysses, which knew his master after an absence of 20 years. Homer. Odyss. 17, 300.

ARGYLLÆ, an ancient name of Cære, in Etruria. Virg. Æn. 7, 652. 8, 478.

ARGYNNIS, a name of Venus, which she received from Argynnus, a youth who was greatly beloved by Agamemnon, and was drowned in the Cephisus. Propert. El. 3, 5, 32.—Athen. 13. 8.

ARGYRA, a nymph greatly beloved by a shepherd called Selimnus. She was changed into a fountain, and the shepherd into a river of the same name, whose waters made lovers forget the object of their affections. (Vid. Selimnus.) Paus. 7, 23.——A city of Troas.——Also the native place of Diodorus Siculus in Sicily.

ARGYRASPIDES, a Macedonian legion which received this name from their silver helmets. Curt. 4, 13.

ARGYRE, a country of India, on the other side of the Ganges.——Also a town of India, and the capital of the island Jabadii, or Sumatra.* It is called by Ptolemy Argentea, and its site corresponds with the modern Achem.

ARGYRIPA, a town of Apulia built by Diomedes after the Trojan war, and called by Polybius Argyrona. Only ruins remain to show where it once stood, though the place still pre erves the name of Arpi Virg. Æn. 11, 246.

ARIA, a province of Ariana, touching to the east upon the Paropamisadæ, to the north upon Margiana, to the west upon Parthia, and to the south upon Drangiana. It derived its name from its chief tribe the Arii It was much famed for its excellent wine. Mela 1, 2 2, 7 ——The heroic wife of Cæcinna Pætus, of Padua, a Roman senator, who, being suspected of a conspiracy against the emperor Claudius, was ordered to destroy himself Perceiving him hesitate, she plunged a dagger into her breast, and presented it to her husband with these words: "Pete, non dolet"—Pætus, it is not painful. Plin 7.

ARIADNE, daughter of Minos II., king of Crete, by Pasiphae, fell in love with Theseus, who was shut up in the labyrinth to be devoured by the Minotaur, and gave him a clue of thread, by which he extricated himself from the difficult windings of his confinement. After he had conquered the Minotaur, he carried her away according to the promise he had made, and married her, but when he arrived at the island of Naxos he forsook her, though she was already pregnant, and repaid his love with the most endearing tenderness. Ariadne was so disconsolate upon being abandoned by Theseus, that she hung herself, according to some; but Plutarch says that she lived many years after, and had some children by Onarus the priest of Bacchus According to some writers, Bacchus loved her after Theseus had forsaken her, and he gave her a crown of seven stars, which, after her death was made a constellation The Argives showed Ariadne's tomb, and when one of their temples was repaired, her ashes were said to have been found in an earthen urn. Homer. Odyss 11. 320, says that Diana detained Ariadne at Naxos. Plut. in Thes.—Ovid. Met 8, fab 2 Heroid. 10. De Art Am. 2 Fast. 3, 462.—Catull. de Nupt Pel. et Thet Ep. 61.—Hygin. fab. 14, 43, 270—Apollod 3, 1.

ARIÆUS, an officer who succeeded to the command of the surviving army after the death of Cyrus the younger, after the battle of Cunaxa. He made peace with Artaxerxes. Xenoph

ARIAMNES, a king of Cappadocia, son of Ariarathes III

ARIANA, a country of Asia, bounded on the south by Gedrosia, on the east by India, on the north by Bactriana and Scythia, and on the west by Parthia and Carmania. It was divided into five principal provinces, namely, Drangiana, Arachosia, the Paropamisadæ, Aria, and Margiana. It derived its name from Aria, the most fertile of its districts. It corresponded with the western part of the modern Cabul.

ARIANTAS, a king of Scythia, who, in order to ascertain the number of the Scythians, ordered each of his subjects on pain of death, to present him with the point of an arrow. The heap thus collected was left as a monument of the transaction. Herod 4, 81

ARIARATHES, a king of Cappadocia, who joined Darius Ochus in his expedition against Egypt, where he acquired much glory.——His nephew, the 2d of that name, defended his kingdom against Perdiccas, the general of Alexander, but he was defeated and hung on a cross in the 81st year of his age, 321 B.C.——His son Ariarathes III. escaped the massacre which attended his father and his followers; and after the death of Perdiccas, he recovered Cappadocia, by conquering Amyntas the Macedonian general. He was succeeded by his son Ariamnes.——Ariarathes IV. succeeded his father Ariamnes, and married Stratonice, daughter of Antiochus Theos. He died after a reign of twenty-eight years, B.C. 220, and was succeeded by his son Ariarathes V., a prince who married Antiochia, the daughter of king Antiochus, whom he assisted against the Romans. Antiochus being defeated, Ariarathes saved his kingdom from invasion by paying the Romans a large sum of money remitted at the instance of the king of Pergamus ——His son, the 6th of that name, called Philopater, from his piety, succeeded him 166 B C.—An alliance with the Romans shielded him against the false claims that were laid to his crown by one of the favourites of Demetrius, king of Syria. He was maintained on his throne by Attalus, and assisted his friends of Rome against Aristonicus the usurper, of Pergamus, but he was killed in the war B C. 130, leaving six children, five of whom were murdered by his surviving wife Laodice ——. The only one who escaped, Ariarathes VII., was proclaimed king, and soon after married Laodice, the sister of Mithridates Eupator, by whom he had two sons. He was murdered by an illegitimate brother, upon which his widow Laodice gave herself and kingdom to Nicomedes king of Bithynia. Mithridates made war against the new king, and raised his nephew to the throne.——The young king, who was the 8th of the name of Ariarathes, made war against the tyrannical Mithridates, by whom he was assassinated in the presence of both armies, and the murderer's son, a child eight years old, was placed on the vacant throne. The Cappadocians revolted, and made the late monarch's brother, Ariarathes IX., king, but Mithridates expelled him, and restored his own son. The exiled prince died of a broken heart, and Nicomedes of Bithynia, dreading the power of the tyrant, interested the Romans in the affairs of Cappadocia. The arbiters wished to make the country free; but the Cappadocians demanded a king, and received Ariobarzanes, B C 91. On the death of Ariobarzanes, his brother ascended the throne, under the name of Ariarathes X.; but his title was disputed by Sisenna, the eldest son of Glaphyra, by Archelaus priest of Comana. M. Antony, who was umpire between the contending parties, decided in favour of Sisenna; but Ariarathes recovered it for a while, though he was soon after obliged to yield in favour of Archelaus, the second son of Glaphyra, B C 36. Diod. 18.—Justin. 13 et 29.—Strab. 12.

ARIBBÆUS, a general mentioned by Polyæn. 7, 29.

ARICIA, an Athenian princess, niece to king Ægeus, whom Hippolytus married after he had been raised from the dead by Æsculapius He built a city in Italy, which he called by her name He had a son by her called Virbius. Ovid. Met 15, 544.—Virg. Æn. 7, 762, &c — A very ancient town of Italy, now Ricia built by Hippolytus son of Theseus, after he had been raised from the dead by Æsculapius, and transported into Italy by Diana. In a grove in the neighbourhood of Aricia, Theseus built a temple to Diana, where he established the same rites as were in the temple of that goddess in Tauris. The priest of this temple, called Rex, was always a fugitive, and the murderer of his predecessor, and went always armed with a dagger, to prevent whatever attempts might be made upon his life by one who wished to be his successo

The Arician forest, frequently called nemorensis or nemoralis sylva, was very celebrated, and no horses would ever enter it, because Hippolytus had been killed by them Egeria, the favourite nymph, and invisible protectress of Numa, generally resided in this famous grove, which was situated on the Appian way, beyond mount Albanus Ovid. Met. 15. Fast. 3, 263.—Lucan. 6, 74.—Virg. Æn. 7, 761, &c.

ARICINA, a surname of Diana, from her temple near Aricia. (Vid Aricia.)——The mother of Octavius Cic Phil 3, 6.

ARIDÆUS, a companion of Cyrus the younger After the death of his friend, he reconciled himself to Artaxerxes, by betraying to him the surviving Greeks in their return Diod.——An illegitimate son of Philip, who, after the death of Alexander, was made king of Macedonia, till Roxane, who was pregnant by Alexander, brought into the world a legitimate male successor. Aridæus had not the free enjoyment of his senses, and therefore Perdiccas, one of Alexander's generals, declared himself his protector, and even married his sister to strengthen their connexion He was seven years in possession of the sovereign power, and was put to death with his wife Eurydice, by Olympias. Justin 9, 8.—Diod.

ARIENIS, daughter of Alyattes, married Astyages king of Media Herod 1, 74.

ARIETIS FRONS, or, in Greek, Criu-metopon, a promontory in the Chersonesus Taurica, opposite to Carambis in Paphlagonia.

ARIGÆUM, a town of India, which Alexander found burnt, and without inhabitants. Arrian 4.

ARII, a savage people of India——of Arabia Plin 6.——of Scythia. Herod——of Germany. Tacit.

ARÏMA, a place of Cilicia or Syria where Typhœus was overwhelmed under the ground. Homer. Il. 2.

ARIMANIUS, a god of Persia and Media, who presided over the evils and disorders of human life, in the same manner as Oromagdes, another divinity, presided over the moral and physical order of things. Zoroast. in Plut de Isid. et Osir

ARIMASPI, a people who inhabited the country which bordered upon Arimaspian, a river of Scythia. The name is derived from two Scythian words, arima, one, and spou, an eye, from their having been said to have only one eye. The appellation of one-eyed was probably given from the circumstance of their being expert archers. They are said to have waged a continual contest with the griffins, monstrous animals who collected the gold from the river Arimaspian. Plin 7. 2.—Herod. 3 et 4.—Strab. 1 et 13.

ARIMASTHÆ, a people near the Euxine sea. Orpheus, Argon.

ARIMÄZES, a powerful prince of Sogdiana, who treated Alexander with much insolence, and even asked, whether he could fly to aspire to so extensive a dominion. He surrendered, and was cruelly exposed on a cross with his friends and relations Curt. 7, 11.

ARIMI, a nation of Syria. Strab.

ARIMÏNUM, a city of Umbria in Italy, at the mouth of the river Ariminus, on the coast, not far to the south-east of the Rubicon. It was founded by the Umbri, and afterwards inhabited partly by them and partly by the Pelasgi. The Romans sent a colony to it, A.U.C. 481. From that time, it was considered as a most important place, and the key of Italy on the eastern coast: hence a Roman army was generally placed there during the Gallic and Punic wars. It was here that Tib Sempr. Gracchus landed from Sicily to reinforce Scipio after the battle of the Ticinus It was the first city taken by Cæsar after his crossing the Rubicon Among its antiquities is the suggestum, or pedestal, from which he is said to have harangued his soldiers. It is now called Rimini. Appian. Bell. Civ. 2, 11.—Polyb. 2, 23 3, 77.—Liv. 21, 51.—Hor. Epod. 5, 42.

ARIMINUS, a river of Italy, rising in the Appennine mountains, and falling into the sea at Arminum. It is now the Marecchia. Plin. 3, 15.

ARIMPHÆI Vid. Argippæi

ARIMUS, a king of Mysia Varro

ARIOBARZANES, a man made king of Cappadocia by the Romans, after the troubles which the false Ariarathes had raised, had subsided. Mithridates drove him from his kingdom, but the Romans restored him He followed the interest of Pompey, and fought at Pharsalia against Julius Cæsar. He and his kingdom were preserved by means of Cicero. Cic. Ep. ad Attic. 5, 20.—Horat. Ep. 6, 38.—Flor. 3, 5.——A satrap of Phrygia, who, after the death of Mithridates, invaded the kingdom of Pontus, and kept it for 26 years. He was succeeded by the son of Mithridates. Diod. 17.——A general of Darius, who defended the passes of Susa with 15,000 foot against Alexander. After a bloody encounter with the Macedonians, he was killed as he attempted to seize the city of Persepolis. Diod. 17.—Curt 4 et 5.——A Mede, of elegant stature, and great prudence, whom Tiberius appointed to settle the troubles of Armenia Tacit. An. 2, 4.——A mountain between Parthia and the country of the Massagetæ——A satrap, who revolted from the Persian king.

ARIOMANDES, son of Gobryas, was general of Athens against the Persians. Plut. in Cim.

ARIOMARDUS, a son of Darius, in the army of Xerxes when he went against Greece Herod. 7, 78.

ARIOMÈDES, a pilot of Xerxes

ARION, a famous lyric poet and musician, son of Cyclos, of Methymna, in the island of Lesbos. After having resided at the court of Periander, in Corinth, he travelled into Italy and Sicily, and acquired great wealth by the profession of music. On his return to Greece, the sailors of the Corinthian vessel in which he was carried, tempted by his treasures, conspired to throw him overboard. Arion requested and received permission to play one tune before his death, and, as soon as it was finished, he threw himself into the sea. A number of dolphins had been attracted round the ship by the sweetness of his music; and it is said that one of them carried him safe on its back to Tænarus, whence he hastened to his friend Periander, who ordered all the sailors to be crucified at their return. Ovid. Fast. 2, 93.—De Art. Art 3.—Martial. 8, 5. —Plin 9, 8.—Aul. Gell. 16, 19.—Hygin. 194, &c. ——A horse, sprung from Ceres and Neptune. Ceres, when she travelled over the world in quest of her daughter Proserpine, had taken the figure of a mare, to avoid the importuning addresses of Neptune. The god changed himself also into a horse, and from their union arose a daughter called Hera, and the horse Arion, which had the power of speech, the feet on the right side like those of a man, and the rest of the body like a horse. Arion was brought up by the Nereides, who often harnessed him to his father's chariot, which he drew over the sea with uncommon swiftness. Neptune gave him to Copreus, who presented him to Hercules. Adrastus, king of Argos, received him as a present from Hercules, and with this wonderful animal he won the prize at the Nemæan games. Arion, therefore, is often called the horse of Adrastus. Paus. 8, 25. — Propert. El. 2, 34, 37. — Apollod. 3, 6.

ARIOVISTUS, a king of the Germans, who assisted the Gauls against the Romans, and was defeated by J. Cæsar. Cæs. Bell. Gall. 1. — Tacit. Hist. 4.

ARIS, a river of Messenia. Paus 4, 31

ARISBA, a town of Lesbos, destroyed by an earthquake. Plin. 5, 31. — A colony of the Mitylenæans in Troas, destroyed by the Trojans before the coming of the Greeks. Virg. Æn. 9, 264. — Homer. Il. 7. —— The name of Priam's first wife, and mother of Æsacus, divorced that the monarch might marry Hecuba Apollod 3, 23.

ARISTÆNETUS, a Greek writer who lived in the fourth century. He was a native of Nicæa in Bithynia, and the friend of Libanius. He perished in an earthquake which happened at Nicomedia, A.D 358. He has left two books of elegant love epistles. The best edition is by Boissonade, Paris, 1822, 8vo.

ARISTÆNUS, a prætor of the Achæan league. Liv. 32, 16

ARISTÆUM, a city of Thrace, at the foot of mount Hæmus. Plin. 4, 11.

ARISTÆUS, son of Apollo and the nymph Cyrene, was born in the deserts of Libya, and brought up by the Seasons, and fed upon nectar and ambrosia. His fondness for hunting procured him the surname of Nomius and Agreus. After he had travelled over the greatest part of the world, Aristæus came to settle in Greece, where he married Autonoe, the daughter of Cadmus, by whom he had a son called Actæon. The unfortunate death of this son rendered him inconsolable, and he passed into Sardinia, attended by some Greeks; from whence he visited Sicily and the island of Cos, where some of his children settled. He, as Hyginus and Virgil relate, fell in love with Eurydice, the wife of Orpheus, and when she rejected his addresses, he pursued her in the fields. She was stung by a serpent that lay in the grass, and died, for which the gods destroyed all the bees of Aristæus. In this calamity he applied to his mother, who directed him to seize the sea-god Proteus, and consult him how he might repair the losses he had sustained. Proteus advised him to appease the manes of Eurydice by the sacrifice of four bulls and four heifers, and as soon as he had done it and left them in the air, swarms of bees immediately sprang from the rotten carcasses, and restored Aristæus to his former prosperity Some authors say, that Aristæus had the care of Bacchus when young, and that he was initiated in the mysteries of this god. Aristæus went to live on mount Hæmus, where he died. He was, after death, worshipped as a demi god. Aristæus is said to have learned from the nymphs the cultivation of olives, and the management of bees, &c., which he afterwards communicated to the rest of mankind Virg. G. 4, 317 — Diod. 4 — Justin 13, 7. — Ovid Fast. 1, 363 — Cic. de Nat. D. 3, 18. — Paus. 8, 17. — Hygin. fab. 161, 1.0, 247 — Apollod. 3, 4. — Herod. 4, 4, &c. — Polyæn 1, 24. —— A general who commanded the Corinthian forces at the siege of Potidæa. He was taken by the Athenians and put to death.

ARISTAGÓRAS, a writer who composed a history of Egypt. Plin. 36, 12. — A son-in-law of Histiæus, tyrant of Miletus, who revolted from Darius, and incited the Athenians to take up arms against the Persians, and restore the Grecian cities of Ionia to their native independence. In this undertaking he, with the assistance of his allies, attacked Sardis, which he reduced to ashes; but the Persian monarch was so exasperated at this act of hostility from the Athenians, that every evening before supper he ordered his servants to remind him of punishing the Athenians. Aristagoras at last, after displaying great powers of mind in his endeavours to restore liberty to Asia, was killed in Thrace, in a battle against the Persians, 15 C. 499 Herod 5, 30, &c. 7, 8. — Polyæn. 1, 24. —— A man of Cyzicus. —— Another of Cumæ. Herod. 4.

ARISTANDER, a celebrated soothsayer, greatly esteemed by Alexander. Plut. in Alex — Plin. 17, 25. —— An Athenian, who wrote on agriculture.

ARISTANDROS, a statuary of Sparta. Paus. 3, 18.

ARISTARCHE, a matron of Ephesus, who by order of Diana sailed to the coasts of Gaul with the Phocæans, and was made priestess. Strab 4.

ARISTARCHUS, a celebrated grammarian, was a native of Samothrace. He lived the greatest part of his life at Alexandria, and Ptolemy Philometor entrusted him with the education of his son. He was famous for his critical powers; and he revised the poems of Homer with such severity, that ever after all severe critics were called Aristarchi. He criticised also the works of Pindar, Aratus, and other poets. It is said by the ancient commentators on Homer, that Aristarchus first divided the Iliad and Odyssey into books, answering to the order and number of the Greek letters. It was his practice to condemn those verses as spurious, which did not appear to him to be worthy of Homer, and to mark them with an obelisk; and, on the contrary, to distinguish those which he thought particularly excellent with an asterisk. He wrote about eight hundred books of commentaries on different authors, much esteemed in his age. In his old age he became dropsical, upon which he starved himself, and died in his 72d year, B.C. 157, in the isle of Cyprus. He left two sons called Aristarchus and Aristagoras, both famous for their stupidity. The first of these was sold as a slave, but out of respect for the merits of his father, the Athenians restored him to liberty. Horat. de Art. Poet. 450 — Ovid. Ep. ex Pont 3, 9, 24. — Cic. Ep. ad Fam 3, 11 ad Attic 1, 14. — Quintil. 10, 1 —— A tragic poet of Tegea in Arcadia, about 454 years B.C. He composed 70 tragedies, of which two only were rewarded with the prize One of them called Achilles, was imitated by Ennius, and also by Plautus in his Pœnulus. Suidas —— A physician to queen Berenice, the widow of Antiochus. Polyæn. 8. —— An orator of Ambracia. —— An astronomer of Samos, who flourished about 280 B.C. He is said to have been the first who asserted the rotation of the earth upon its axis, and its motion about the sun He also maintained that the orbit of the earth is a mere point, compared with the distance of the fixed stars. He found that the diameter of the earth bears a greater proportion to that of the moon, than that of 108 to 43, but less than that of 60 to 19, a result sufficiently exact. He estimated the diameter of the sun at the 180th part of the zodiac, but some very considerable error must have been committed in his observation, as it is only the 720th part of the zodiac. The only work of Aristarchus now extant is a treatise on the magnitudes and distances of the sun and moon. The best edition is that of Wallis, Oxon 8vo, 1688.

ARISTAZANES, a noble Persian in favour with Artaxerxes Ochus. Died 16*9*

ARISTEAS, a poet of Proconnesus, who, as fables report, appeared seven years after his death to his countrymen, and 340 years after to the people of Metapontum in Italy, and commanded them to raise him a statue near the temple of Apollo. He wrote an epic poem on the Arimaspi in three books, and some of his verses are quoted by Longinus. Herod. 4, 13.—Strab. 14.—Max. Tyr. 22.——A physician of Rhodes.——A geometrician, intimate with Euclid.——A poet, son of Demochares, in the age of Croesus.——An officer under Ptolemy Philadelphus. He is said to have been a Jew by birth, and to have had a principal share in getting the Hebrew scriptures translated into Greek, which version is called the Septuagint. A history of that version is ascribed to him though its authority is questionable. It was printed at Oxford in 1692, in 8vo ARISTERA, an island south-east of the peninsula of Argolis. It is now Hydra. Plin. 4, 34.

ARISTEUS, a man of Argos, who excited king Pyrrhus to take up arms against his countrymen, the Argives. Polyæn 8, 68.

ARISTIENES, a shepherd who found Æsculapius, when he had been exposed in the woods by his mother Coronis.

ARISTHUS, an historian of Arcadia. Duorys Hal 1.

ARISTIBUS, a river of Pæonia Polyæn. 4, 12

ARISTIDES, a celebrated Athenian, son of Lysimachus, whose great temperance and virtue procured him the surname of Just. He was rival to Themistocles, by whose influence he was banished for ten years, B C. 484; but before six years of his exile had elapsed, he was recalled by the Athenians. He was at the battle of Salamis, and was appointed chief commander with Pausanias against Mardonius, who was defeated at Platæa. He died so poor, that the expenses of his funeral were defrayed at the public charge, and his two daughters, on account of their father's virtues, received a dowry from the public treasury when they were come to marriageable years. Poverty, however, seemed hereditary in the family of Aristides, for the grandson was seen in the public streets, getting his livelihood by explaining dreams. The Athenians became more virtuous in imitating their great leader, and from the sense of his good qualities, at the representation of one of the tragedies of Æschylus, on the mentioning of a sentence concerning moral goodness, the eyes of the audience were all at once turned from the actor to Aristides. When he sat as judge, it is said that the plaintiff, in his accusation, mentioned the injuries his opponent had done to Aristides, "Mention the wrongs you have received," replied the equitable Athenian, "I sit here as judge, and the lawsuit is yours, and not mine." C. Nep. et Plut. in Vit.——An historian of Miletus, fonder of stories, and of anecdotes, than of truth. He wrote a history of Italy, of which the 46th volume has been quoted by Plut in Parall——An athlete, who obtained a prize at the Olympian, Nemean, and Pythian games. Paus 6, 16.——A painter of Thebes in Bœotia, contemporary with Apelles, whose skill was displayed in delineating the affections and emotions of the soul. Pliny speaks of some of his paintings which were still extant in his age, and mentions that Attalus offered for one 6000 sesterces Plin. 7, 39. 35, 10 et 11.——Ælius, a sophist of the second century, born at Adrianum in Bithynia. When Smyrna was destroyed by an earthquake, he wrote so pathetic a letter to M. Aurelius, that the emperor ordered the city immediately to be rebuilt. The inhabitants showed their gratitude for this service, by erecting a statue to his memory He died about the 60th year of his age. His works consist of hymns in prose in honour of the gods, funeral orations, apologies, panegyrics, and harangues, the best edition of which is that of Jebb, 2 vols. 4to. Oxon. 1722, and that of Dindorf, 3 vols. 8vo. Leip. 1829.——A man of Locris, who died by the bite of a weasel. Ælian. V. H. 14.——A philosopher of Mysia, intimate with M Antoninus. ——An Athenian, who wrote treatises on animals, trees, and agriculture.

ARISTILLUS, a philosopher of the Alexandrian school, who about 300 years B C. attempted with Timocharis to determine the place of the different stars in the heavens, and to trace the course of the planets.

ARISTIO, a sophist of Athens, who by the support of Archelaus, the general of Mithridates, seized the government of his country, and made himself absolute. When driven from his usurpation by the success of Sylla, he destroyed himself by poison Liv. 81 et 82.

ARISTIPPUS, the elder, a philosopher of Cyrene, disciple to Socrates, and founder of the Cyrenaic sect, who flourished about 400 B.C. He had, when he first attended Socrates, an inclination for self-indulgence, which that philosopher eventually succeeded in rendering more elevated, without being able to eradicate. He was the first disciple of the Socratic school who took money for his instructions. Being obliged to leave Athens in consequence of the irregularity of his conduct, he visited the island of Ægina, where he met with the celebrated Lais, whom he accompanied to Corinth. During his passage from Corinth to Asia, he was shipwrecked on the island of Rhodes He afterwards repaired to Syracuse, to the court of Dionysius, where he insinuated himself into the royal favour, by the politeness and flexibility of his manners. He left Syracuse before the expulsion of the tyrant; but whether he went back into his own country, and when or from what cause he died, are circumstances concerning which nothing certain is known. Aristippus made the chief good of man to consist in enjoyment, accompanied with good taste and freedom of mind. Many of his apparentees and maxims are recorded by Diogenes Laertius. Hor Epist 1, 17, 23.—Cic Ep. Fam. 9, 26. Fin 2, 7. 5, 123 Tusc Quæst. 2, 6. 3, 13 Of 3, 33.—Diog. Laert.——His grandson of the same name, called the younger, was a warm defender of his opinions, and supported that the principles of all things were vain and pleasure. He flourished about 364 years B C. Cic Fin. 2,

3. Orat. 3, 17.—Horat. Ep. 1, 17, 14.——A tyrant of Argos, whose life was one continued series of apprehension. He was killed by a Cretan in a battle against Aratus, B C 212 Dung.——A man who wrote a history of Arcadia Dung. 2

M. ARISTIUS, a tribune of the soldiers in Cæsar's army. Cæs Bell Gall. 7, 42 ——Another Id. Fuscus)——A satirist, who wrote a poem called Cyclops

ARISTO Id. Ariston.

ARISTOBOLA, a name given to Diana by Themistocles.

ARISTOBŬLUS, a name common to some of the high priests and kings of Judea, &c. One of them was led in triumph by Pompey. Plut in Pomp.—Flor 3, 5.—Eutrop. 6, 15.—Joseph.—— A brother of Epicurus.——A king of Armenia Minor Tacit Ann 13, 17.——One of Alexander's attendants who wrote the king's life, replete with adulation and untruth. Arrian followed his authority in several instances Plut in Dem &c——A Jew of Alexandria, who lived in the reign of Ptolemy Philometor. He was an admirer of the Greek philosophy, and united the study of the Aristotelian system with that of the laws of Moses.

ARISTOCLEA, a beautiful woman, seen naked by Strato, as she was offering a sacrifice. She was passionately loved by Callisthenes, and was equally admired by Strato. The two rivals so furiously contended for her hand, that she died during their quarrel, upon which Strato killed himself, and Callisthenes was never seen after. Plut in Amat.

ARISTOCLES, a peripatetic philosopher of Messenia, who reviewed, in a treatise on philosophy, the opinions of his predecessors The 14th book of this treatise is quoted, &c. He also wrote on rhetoric, and likewise nine books on morals. ——A grammarian of Rhodes.——A stoic of Lampsacus ——A historian Strab 4. ——A musician Athen &c ——A prince of Tegæa, &c. Polyæn ——This name is common to many Greeks, of whom few or no particulars are recorded ARISTOCLIDES, a tyrant of Orchomenus, who, because he could not win the affection of Symphaïs, killed her and her father, upon which all Arcadia took up arms and destroyed the murderer.

ARISTOCRĀTES, a king of Arcadia, put to death by his subjects for offering violence to the priestess of Diana. Paus. 8, 5. His grandson, of the same name, was stoned to death for taking bribes, during the second Messenian war, and being the cause of the defeat of his Messenian allies, B. C. 682. Id. Ibid.——A Rhodian ——A man who endeavoured to destroy the democratical power at Athens.——An Athenian general, sent to the assistance of Corcyra with 25 galleys. Diod. 15.——An Athenian, who was punished with death for flying from the field of battle.—— A Greek historian, son of Hipparchus. Plut in Lyc.

ARISTOCREON, the writer of a book on geography.

ARISTOCRITUS, wrote a treatise concerning Miletus

ARISTODEME, a daughter of Priam.

ARISTODEMUS, son of Aristomachus, was one of the Heraclidæ. He, with his brothers Temenus and Cresphontes, invaded Peloponnesus, conquered it, and divided the country among themselves, 1104 years before the Christian era, He married Argia, daughter of Autesion, by whom he had the twins Procles and Eurysthenes, who married two twins. He was killed by a thunderbolt at Naupactum; though some say that he died at Delphi in Phocis, and others that he was murdered by the sons of Pylades and Electra. Apollod. 2, 37.—Paus. 2, 18. 3, 1 et 16.—Herod 7, 204. 8, 131.——A king of Messenia, who maintained a famous war against Sparta After some losses, he recovered his strength, and so effectually defeated the enemy's forces, that they were obliged to prostitute their women to repeople their country. The offspring of this prostitution were called Partheniæ, and 30 years after their birth they left Sparta, and seized upon Tarentum Aristodemus put his daughter to death for the good of his country; but being afterwards persecuted in a dream by her manes, he killed himself, after a reign of six years and some months, in which he had obtained much military glory, B C. 724 His death was lamented by his countrymen, who did not appoint him a successor, but only invested Damis, one of his friends, with absolute power to continue the war, which was at last terminated after much blood shed and many losses on both sides. Paus in Messen ——A tyrant of Cumæ.——A philosopher of Ægina.——An Alexandrian, who wrote some treatises, &c.——A Spartan, who taught the children of Pausanias.——A man who was preceptor to the children of Pompey.——A tyrant of Arcadia.——A Carian, who wrote a history of painting.——A philosopher of Nysa, B C. 65.

ARISTOGENES, a physician of Cnidos, who obtained great reputation by the cure of Demetrius Gonatas, king of Macedonia ——A Thasian, who wrote 24 books on medicine.

ARISTOGITON, a citizen of Athens, whose name was rendered memorable by a conspiracy formed in conjunction with his friend Harmodius, against the tyrants Hippias and Hipparchus, the sons of Pisistratus They succeeded in killing Hipparchus; but, not being seconded by the people, Harmodius was despatched by the guards, and Aristogiton taken prisoner. Hippias instituted a severe inquisition into the plot, and put Aristogiton to the torture, in order to make him confess his confederates; upon which he is reported to have named the most intimate friends of the tyrant in succession, who were instantly put to death. On being asked by Hippias if there were any more, "there now remains," said Aristogiton, with a smile, "only yourself worthy of death." Hippias being expelled three years after, the Athenians paid the greatest honours to the two friends, Harmodius and Aristogiton, placing in the forum their statues by Praxiteles, singing hymns to their praise at the Panathenæa, and decreeing that no slave should ever bear their names. Paus 1, 29.—Herod. 5, 55.—Plut. de, 10, Orat.——An Athenian orator, surnamed Canis, from his impudence. He wrote orations against Timarchus, Timotheus, Hyperides, and Thrasyllus, ——A statuary. Paus.

ARISTOLAUS, a painter Plin. 35. 11.

ARISTOMĀCHE, the wife of Dionysius of Syracuse Cic. Tusc 5, 20——The wife of Dion.——A poetess. Plut. Symp.——A daughter of Priam, who married Critolaus. Paus 10, 26.

ARISTOMĀCHUS, an Athenian, who wrote concerning the preparation of wine Plin. 14. 9.

—One of Hippodamia's suitors. Paus. 6, 21. —A son of Talaus and Lysimache, the daughter of Abas. Apollod. 1, 25.—The father of Hippomedon, one of the seven chiefs against Thebes. Id. 3, 11 —A chief of Crotona, who prevailed upon his party to deliver their city to Hannibal. Liv. 24, 2 et 3.—A man so excessively fond of bees, that he devoted 58 years of his life in raising swarms of them Plin. 11, 9 —The son of Cleodæus, and grandson of Hyllus, whose three sons, Cresphontes, Timenus, and Aristodemus, called Heraclidæ, conquered Peloponnesus Paus 2, 7. 3, 15 —Herod. 6. 7 c. 8.—A man who laid aside his sovereign power at Argos, at the persuasion of Aratus. Plut. 2, 8.

ARISTOMEDES, a Thessalian general in the interest of Darius III. Curt. 3, 9.

ARISTOMENES, a commander of the fleet of Darius on the Hellespont, conquered by the Macedonians. Curt 4, 1.——A celebrated Greek, the son of Nicomedes, and descended from the royal family of Messene. Indignant at the grievous servitude under which his countrymen were held by the Spartans, he excited them to take up arms; and thus commenced the second Messenian war, B.C. 685 which terminated, B.C. 668. In the first engagement, which was not ended with any decisive result, Aristomenes acquired so much reputation, that his countrymen unanimously saluted him king. He refused, however, to assume the title, and was satisfied with that of general. He once defended the virtue of some Spartan women, whom hisgoldiers had attempted; and when he was taken prisoner and carried to Sparta, the women whom he had protected interested themselves so warmly in his cause, that they procured his liberty He acquired the surname of Jul. from his equity, which he joined the true valour, sagacity, and perseverance of a general. He often entered Sparta without being known, and was so dexterous in eluding the vigilance of the Lacedæmonians, who had taken him captive, that he twice escaped from them After the conclusion of the second Messenian war, which brought his country under the domination of Sparta, he sent the Pythian gods to Sicily, where they built the city of Messene, while he remained in Greece himself, to watch for an opportunity to retaliate on the Spartans. Such was his reputation, that when Damaratus, the king of Hyssus, in the island of Rhodes, was ordered by an oracle to marry the daughter of the most illustrious Greek, he unhesitatingly chose the daughter of Aristomenes. As a present to his son-in law, Aristomenes was desirous of a distemper which put an end to his life. Paus. 4, 15 —Paus. in Messen.——A Spartan, who, by the assistance of Dionysius. Polyæn. 2.

ARISTON, the son of Agasicles, king of Sparta, being unable to raise children by two wives, he married another famous for her beauty by whom he had never seven months, a son Demaratus, whom he had the imprudence to call not his own. Herod. 6, 61, &c ——A general of Ætolia. ——A sculptor ——A Corinthian, who assisted the Syracusans against the Athenians.——An officer in Alexander's army.——A tyrant of Methymna, who, being ignorant that Chios had surrendered to the Macedonians, entered the harbour, and was taken and put to death. Curt 4, 9.——A stoic philosopher of Chios, who lived about 260 B.C. He attempted to form a sect of his own, and treated logic and physics as useless. He taught that all actions are indifferent in themselves, though he maintained that virtue is the chief good. He died in consequence of the scorching rays of the sun striking upon his bald head Cic. de Fin. 4, 27. ——A lawyer in Trajan's reign, whose eulogium has been written by Pliny, 22 epist lib. 1 ——A peripatetic philosopher of Alexandria, who wrote concerning the course of the Nile. Strab. ——A wrestler of Argos, under whom Plato performed some exercises.——A musician of Athens. ——A tragic poet.——A peripatetic philosopher of Ceos, who flourished about 200 B.C. He was the author of Amatory Epistles, quoted by Athenæus Cic de Fin 5, 5.—Athen. 10.—— A native of Pella, in the age of Adrian, who wrote on the rebellion of the Jews.

ARISTONAUTÆ, a small town of Achaia, on the shore of the Sinus Corinthiacus, or Gulf of Corinth. Paus 2.

ARISTONICUS, son of Eumenes, by a concubine of Ephesus, 126 B.C., invaded Asia and the kingdom of Pergamus, which Attalus had left by his will to the Roman people. He was conquered by the consul Perperna, and strangled in prison. Justin 36, 4 —Flor. 2, 20 ——A musician of Olynthus.——A grammarian of Alexandria, who wrote a commentary on Hesiod and Homer, besides a treatise on the museum established in Alexandria by the Ptolemies ARISTONIDES, a noble statuary. Plin 34, 14.

ARISTONUS, a captain of Alexander's cavalry. Curt 9, 5.

ARISTONYMUS, a comic poet under Philadelphus, keeper of the library at Alexandria He died of a retention of urine, in his 77th year, Athen.——One of Alexander's musicians Plut. in Alex.

ARISTOPHANES, a celebrated comic poet, the son of Philippus, a native of Rhodes, according to some writers, was born about B.C. 460. Others state that he was a native of Ægina; and all agree that he was not born at Athens, though domiciliated there in early life. He obtained by his talents the privileges of an Athenian citizen. He wrote fifty four comedies, of which eleven have been preserved. The first of these in order of time is the Acharnians, which was represented in the sixth year of the Peloponnesian war, B.C. 425 It is altogether a political piece, abounding in allusions to the state of parties, and seems to have been written for the express purpose of recommending to the Athenians the cause of peace. The Equites, performed B. C. 424, was written against the demagogue Cleon, an Athenian general, who, by his oratory, had made himself a great favourite with the populace of Athens. It is said that no one could be found daring enough to act the part of Cleon, or to make a mask which resembled him, and that Aristophanes was himself compelled to appear on the stage in that character, with his face merely painted. The Nubes, exhibited for the first time, B C. 423, contains an attack on the schools of the sophists. The notion that the exhibition of Socrates in this play was the cause of his death, and that Aristophanes was the leagued accomplice of Melitus, has of late been frequently and satisfactorily refuted. The simple consideration that Socrates survived the attack for upwards of twenty years, affords a sufficient answer to any such charge In the Peace and Lysistrate, Aristophanes again reverts to the evils of the Peloponnesian war and the advantages of peace. In the Wasps, the Birds, and the Ecclesiazousæ, he takes cognizance of the internal concerns of the state; in the Thesmophoriazousæ, and the Ranæ, he attacks the poet Euripides; and in the Plutus he institutes a comparison between the relative advantages of poverty and riches. Aristophanes is distinguished by the keenness of his wit, his strong humour, and the purity and elegance of his diction. He employs, when it suits his purpose, every variety of dialect, coins new words for the occasion, makes puns without ceasing, and displays, at the same time, all the riches and beauties of the Greek language. It must be confessed, however, that his writings have never been a favourite study in this country, partly because his allusions to manners and customs are necessarily obscure, and partly also because his expressions are often grossly indelicate The exact place which he ought to hold among ancient comic poets it is difficult to assign, as none of their entire works have been preserved; but if we are inclined to believe Plutarch, he was in every respect inferior to Menander. Plato, however, is said to have had a high admiration of Aristophanes, and recommended the perusal of his plays to Dionysius the younger, as the best mode of acquiring the purity of the Attic dialect So fond, indeed, was Plato of his works, that they are said to have been found under his pillow after his death. The best editions of the works of Aristophanes, are Kuster's, fol. Amst. 1710; that of Brunck, 4 vols 8vo. Argent. 1781—3, that of Invernizius, 3 vols 8vo Lips. 1794; and that of Bekker, 5 vols 8vo. Lond. 1829 The Knights, Acharnians, and the Wasps, have been translated into English verse by T. Mitchell (Lond. 1822); and the Clouds, by R. Cumberland (1797). There are several prose translations of single plays; Plutus, by H Fielding and Dr Young, the Frogs, by Mr Dunster; the Birds, by a member of one of the Universities (Lond. 1818), Acharnians, Knights, Wasps, and Birds, by a graduate of Oxford (Oxf 1830). Quintil. 10, 1.—Patere. 1, 16. —Horat. Sat. 1, 4, 1.——A grammarian of Byzantium, keeper of the library of Alexandria under Ptolemy Euergetes. He is said to have invented the Greek accents, and to have introduced a system of punctuation. He was born about B.C. 240. Diog. in Plat et Epic.—Athen 9.——A Greek historian of Bœotia, quoted by Plut. de Herod. Malig.——A writer on agriculture.

ARISTOPHILIDES, a king of Tarentum, in the reign of Darius son of Hystaspes. Herod. 3

ARISTOPHON, a painter in the age of Socrates. He drew the picture of Alcibiades softly reclining on the bosom of the courtezan Nemea, and all the people of Athens ran in crowds to be spectators of the masterly piece. He also made a painting of Mars leaning on the arm of Venus. Plut in Alc—Athen. 13.—Plin. 35, 11.—A comic poet in the age of Alexander, many of whose fragments are collected in Athenæus.

ARISTOR, the father of Argus the hundred-eyed keeper of Io.

ARISTORIDES, the patronymic of Argus. Ovid. Met 1, 624.

ARISTOTELEIA, a yearly festival in honour of Aristotle, instituted by the inhabitants of Stagira, in gratitude for his having procured from Alexander the rebuilding of that town, which had been demolished by king Philip

ARISTOTELES, a famous philosopher, born at Stagira, in Macedonia, B C. 384. From the place of his nativity he obtained the name of the Stagyrite. His father Nicomachus was a physician, and the friend of Amyntas, king of Macedon. Nicomachus left a considerable fortune to his son, who, at the age of seventeen or eighteen, went to Athens, and devoted himself to the study of philosophy under Plato. His penetrating understanding, and diligent application to study, endeared him to his master, who called him the "soul of his school," and distinguished him above his other disciples. The industry of Aristotle in perusing and copying manuscripts was unexampled, and almost incredible and he was named, by way of excellence, the student or reader. Alike regardless of the honours of a court, to which the rank and connexions of his family might have entitled him in Macedonia, and indifferent to the glory of a name, which his great abilities might have attained, he continued to reside with Plato for twenty years, till the death of that philosopher, to whose memory he erected a monument Little regard is due to the story of a quarrel between him and Plato, and also to that of his setting up a school in opposition to his master during his life. On the death of Plato, Aristotle, disgusted that Speusippus should succeed his uncle, left Athens, and went to reside with his friend and fellow-disciple Hermias, whom the king of Persia had appointed governor of Assus and Atarna in Mysia. After passing three years with Hermias, he withdrew to Mitylene, the capital of Lesbos, where he resided till Philip made choice of him as preceptor of his son Alexander, which trust he discharged with so much ability, that he obtained the warm affection of his pupil, and the high esteem and confidence of Philip. The letter which Philip wrote to Aristotle, when he requested his acceptance of the tuition of his son, was couched in the following terms: "Be informed that I have a son. I am very thankful to the gods, not so much for his birth, as that he was born in the same age with you; for if you will take the charge of his education he will become worthy both of us, and of the kingdom which he will inherit." Upon the accession of Alexander to the throne, when he formed the design of conquering Asia, Aristotle declined to accompany him in his expedition, and returned to Athens The separation did not dissolve the bond of affection between the royal pupil and his preceptor. A friendly correspondence was carried on between them; and Alexander, to furnish Aristotle materials for his natural history, sent him, at a vast expense, from different countries, a large collection of animals. At Athens, Aristotle obtained permission to open a school in the Lyceum, a building which had been appropriated to military exercises. As he usually walked, whilst discoursing with those who came to receive his instructions, his followers were called Peripatetics. The doctrine which he taught was of two kinds; the exoteric, embracing rhetoric, logic, and politics, delivered to all young men without distinction; and the acroamatic, or esoteric, intended for the private ear of his select disciples. The former lectures were given in the evening, the latter in the morning; whence Aristotle was said to have his morning and his evening walk. The auditors of both were numerous. The talents and virtues of Aristotle exposed him to envy and calumny. After having taught thirteen years in the Lyceum with the greatest reputation, he was charged with irreligion before the Areopagus Though the accusation was extremely frivolous, yet he was condemned, but escaped punishment by leaving the country. He withdrew from Athens, assigning as a reason, that he was unwilling to give the Athenians an occasion of being guilty of injustice a second time against philosophy. Accompanied by a few friends, he retired to Chalcis in Eubœa, where he died soon after of chagrin and disappointment, in the sixty-third year of his age, B. C. 322 His body was conveyed to Stagyra, and a tomb and altar were erected to his memory by his fellow-citizens Aristotle was twice married; first to Pythias the sister of Hermias, and afterwards to Herpilis, a native of Stagyra By his second wife he had a son named Nicomachus, to whom he addressed one of his treatises on morals. In his person he was slender, and of middle stature: he had a shrill voice, small eyes, and a high nose Through a natural weakness of stomach he was subject to frequent indisposition, but he corrected the infirmities of his constitution by temperance. Aristotle had many rivals and enemies, who loaded his character with reproach, but the high reputation which he enjoyed in every situation during his life, and the honours which were paid to his memory, afford a strong presumption that the charges brought against him were mere calumnies. His love of truth is emphatically expressed in the adage commonly ascribed to him, Amicus Plato, amicus Socrates, sed magis amica veritas Of above four hundred treatises which he composed, forty eight only have been transmitted to the present age; but many of these consist of several books. His writings embrace moral and natural philosophy, mathematics, mechanics, grammar, criticism, and politics. His style is frequently rendered harsh and obscure by the nature of his subjects, and the conciseness of his diction. It has been observed that his philosophy is rather the philosophy of words than of things, and that the study of his writings tends more to perplex the understanding with subtile distinctions, than to enlighten it with real knowledge. However, his ethics, his politics, and his observations on poetry, may be read with great advantage, as they contain much useful information, and many just observations on men and manners. The works of Aristotle were bequeathed by him, together with his library, to his friend Theophrastus, who preserved them with the utmost care Theophrastus, at his death, left them to Neleus of Scepsis. Some of them were sold to Ptolemy, king of Egypt, and shared the fate of the Alexandrian library The heirs of Neleus, in order to secure the rest from the king of Pergamus, who was collecting a library, buried them in a vault, where they lay a hundred and thirty years, and sustained great injury. They were afterwards sold to Apellicon of Teos, who conjecturally supplied their deficiencies. It is impossible to know how far Apellicon has corrupted and obscured the text. After the death of Apellicon, Sylla, the Roman dictator, brought them from Athens to Rome, where they subsequently came into the possession of Tyrannio and Andronicus of Rhodes, who caused copies to be transcribed, and by whom they were introduced to the attention of the Roman philosophers. The best editions of Aristotle's entire works are, that of Sylberg, 5 vols. 4to, Frankfort, 1584—7; that of Duval, 2 vols. fol. Paris, 1619—29; and that of Buhle, not yet completed. The best separate edition of the Poetics is that of Tyrwhitt, 4to, Oxon 1794; of the Ethics that of Wilkinson, 8vo, Oxon. 1715; and of the Politics, that of Schneider, 2 vols. 8vo, Francof. 1809. Mr Pye and Mr Twining have given translations of the Poetics. The Ethics, Politics, and Rhetoric have been translated by Dr Gillies. Diog in vita — Plut in Alex. et de Alex. fort. &c.— Cic. Acad. Quæst 4, 38. De Orat. 3, 35. De Finib. 5, 4 — Quintil. 1, 2, 5, 10.—Ælian. V. H. 4.— Justin 12.—Justin. Martyr.—August. de Civ. Dei, 8.—Plin. 2, 4, 5, &c —Athen — Val. Max. 5, 6, &c.——There were besides eight of the same name. A magistrate of Athens ——A commentator on Homer's Iliad.——An orator of Sicily, who answered the panegyric of Isocrates. ——A friend of Æschines.——A man of Cyrene, who wrote on poetry.——A schoolmaster, mentioned in Plato's life, written by Aristoxenus. ——An obscure grammarian. Diog de Aristot. ——A governor of Antiochus, stationed at Chalcis Liv. 36, 21.

ARISTOTIMUS, a tyrant of Elis, 271 years B C. Paus. 5, 5.

ARISTOXENUS, a Grecian philosopher and musician, was a native of Tarentum, and the disciple of Aristotle. He flourished about 324 B C. Of all his works, a treatise on Harmonic Elements only remains, which may be found in the Antiquæ Musicæ Scriptores. Cic. de Orat 3, 33. Ad Att 8, 4 ——A philosopher of Cyrene. Athen.——A physician, whose writings are quoted by Galen ——A poet of Selinus.——A Pythagorean philosopher

ARISTUS, a Greek historian of Salamis, who wrote an account of Alexander's expedition. Strab. 14 — Arrian. 7.

ARISTYLLUS, an obscure poet. Aristoph.—— An astronomer of Alexandria, 292 B.C.

ARIUS, a river of Aria, on the banks of which was situate Artacoana, the capital of the country. It is now Heri.——The founder of the Arian sect, was a native of Libya, and flourished about A D. 315. He denied the proper divinity of Christ, but allowed him to be the first and noblest of all created beings, and next to God This doctrine was condemned in the council of Alexandria, in 320, and in that of Nice in 325, by the orthodox church, which attributed to the Son of God perfect equality of essence with the Father. Though Arius was banished, he found means to procure powerful adherents; and Constantine the Great, from a desire of peace, wished to bring about his restoration to the Catholic communion, when he died suddenly in 336 It is generally supposed that he fell a victim to the resentment of his enemies.

ARMENES, a son of Nabis, led in triumph to Rome. Liv. 34, 1.

ARMENIA, a large country of Asia, divided into Armenia Major and Minor. The first, which is the modern Turcomania, and is still sometimes called Armenia, was bounded on the north by Iberia and Albania; on the east by Media; on the south by Assyria and Mesopotamia; and on the west by Armenia Minor and Pontus. Armenia Minor, now called Aladulia or Pegnan, is bounded by Cappadocia, Armenia Major, Syria, Cilicia, and the Euphrates. Armenia appears to have been subjected, in turn, by the Assyrians, Medes, Persians, and Macedonians. After the death of Alexander, it became part of the kingdom of Syria, and so remained till the defeat of Antiochus the Great, when it fell into the hands of different rulers, and was divided into Major and Minor. Armenia Major was exposed to many attacks. The Romans and Parthians fought a long time for the right of giving a successor to the throne, and it was governed at one period by Parthian princes, at another, by those whom the Romans favoured, until Trajan made it a Roman province. It afterwards recovered its independence, and was under the rule of its own kings. Sapor, king of Persia, attempted its subjugation in vain, and it remained free until A. D 630, when it was conquered by the Arabians. After this, it several times changed its masters, among whom were Gengis-Khan and Tamerlane. In 1514, Selim II. conquered it from the Persians, and the greater part has since remained under the Turkish dominion Armenia Minor has also had several rulers, among whom Mithridates was first distinguished From him Pompey took the kingdom, and gave it to Dejotarus, &c. On the decline of the Roman empire in the East, it was conquered by the Persians, and, A D. 950, fell into the hands of the Arabians, since which time it has shared the same fate as Armenia Major, and was made, A.D 1514, a Turkish province, by Selim I Herod. 1, 194. 5, 49 —Curt 4, 12. 5, 1.—Strab 1 ot 11.—Mela, 3, 5 et 8.—Plin. 6, 4, &c —Lucan. 2

ARMENTARIUS, a Cæsar in Diocleslan's reign.

ARMILLATUS, one of Domitian's favourites. Juv. 4, 53.

ARMILUSTRIUM, a festival at Rome on the 19th of October, during which they sacrificed fully armed, and to the sound of trumpets. It was intended for the expiation of the armies, and the prosperity of the arms of the Roman people. It was first observed among the Athenians. Varro de L. L. 5, 3 —Liv 27, 37

ARMINIUS, called the Deliverer of Germany, was the son of Segimer, a chieftain of the Catti. He served in the Roman armies, and was favoured by Augustus; but his attachment to his native country prevailed over all other considerations, and at his instigation the Germans revolted against the Romans. By his contrivance Varus fell into an ambuscade, where he perished with nearly all his forces, A. D 16. Germanicus then marched to revenge the death of Varus, and after a variety of fortune, Arminius was treacherously assassinated in the 37th year of his age, A D. 21 Dio. 56 —Tacit. Ann. 1, &c.

ARMORICA, a name originally given by the Romans to the whole of the northern and western coasts of Gaul, from the Pyrenees to the Rhine; it was afterwards confined to that part of the coast which lay between the rivers Ligeris and Sequana, now the Loire and the Seine, but, at last, Britany alone was called Armorica. The word is derived from the Celtic ar mor, which means near the sea Cæs. Bell G.

ARNE, a city of Lycia, called afterwards Xanthus.——A town of Umbria in Italy.—A daughter of Æolus, who gave her name to two towns, one in Thessaly, the other in Bœotia. Neptune changed himself into a bull to enjoy her company. Strab. 1 et 2.—Paus. 9, 40.—Ovid. Met. 6, fab. 4.—Homer. Il. 2, 307.

ARNI, a people of Italy, destroyed by Hercules.

ARNIENSES, a tribe in Rome. Liv. 6.

ARNOBIUS, a teacher of rhetoric at Sicca, in Numidia, about A D. 300. It is said that the famous Lactantius was one of his disciples. He was at first an enemy to Christianity, but afterwards became a convert, and wrote a treatise, entitled Adversus Gentes, against the Gentiles, in which he defends the Christian religion, and shows the folly and absurdity of the heathen worship When, or how he died, is not known. The best edition of his work is that of Orellius. 2 vols. 8vo. Lips 1816.

ARNUS, a river of Etruria, rising in the Apennines, not very far from Florentia, or Florence, and flowing into the Tuscan sea, four miles below Pisæ, or Pisa. Is is now the Arno. Luc. 2, 2

ARŒA, a town of Achaia. Paus 7.

ARŒMA a town of Caria—— of Cappadocia

ARŒMATA, or ARŒMATUM PROMONTORIUM, the most eastern point of the continent of Africa, now Cape Guardafui.

ARPI, a city of Apulia, built by Diomedes after the Trojan war. It is said to have been called Argyrippa by the inhabitants, and that this was a modification of Argos Hippion, a name given to it by its founder in remembrance of his native city. Now Argita. Justin. 20, 1.—Virg. Æn 10, 28.

ARPINUM, now Arpino, a town of the Volsci in Latium, south-east of Anagnia. It is remarkable for having given birth to C Marius and M Tullius Cicero The words Arpinæ chartæ are sometimes applied to Cicero's works. Mart Ep. 10, 19.—Juv 8, 237.—Cic Rull. 3.——A town of Magna Græcia.

ARRÆI, a people of Thrace Plin.

ARRHABÆUS, the king of a nation in the neighbourhood of Macedonia, who greatly distressed Archelaus. Aristot Polit. 5, 10.

ARRIA Vid Aria

ARRIA GALLA, a beautiful but immodest woman in the reign of the emperors. Tacit. 15, 59.

ARRIANUS, a Greek historian of Nicomedia, in Bithynia, who flourished in the second century, under Adrian and the Antonines He was first a priest of Ceres and Proserpine; but, at Rome, he became a disciple of Epictetus He was honoured with the citizenship of Rome and appointed prefect of Cappadocia by the emperor Adrian, who patronized him on account of his learning. In this capacity, he distinguished himself in the war against the Alani and Massagetæ, and was afterwards advanced to the senatorial, and even consular dignities. Like Xenophon, he united the character of a man of letters with that of a warrior. No less than seven of the epistles of Pliny the younger are addressed to Arrian. His historical writings were numerous; but of these, with the exception of some fragments in Photius, only two remain. The first is his history of the expedition of Alexander the Great, which, though composed in an age when genius and taste were on the decline, is not unworthy the purest times of attic literature. To this work is added an account of the affairs of India, which pursues the history of Alexander, but is not deemed of equal authority with the former. A letter from Arrian to Adrian is also extant, entitled Periplus Ponti Euxini, probably written while he was prefect of Cappadocia. There are, besides, under the name of Arrian, a treatise on hunting; a work on tactics; a Periplus of the Erythrean sea, and his Enchiridion, a beautiful piece of morality, containing the discourses of Epictetus The best editions of Arrian's Expeditio Alexandri are that of Gronovius, Greek and Latin, 1704, 8vo, and that of Schmieder, Hal. 1798, 8vo. Of the Historia Indica, that of Schmieder, Lips. 1798, 8vo. Of his Enchiridion, the most valuable edition is that of Schweighæuser, Greek and Latin, Lipsiæ, 1799, 6 vols 8vo. The expedition of Alexander has been translated into English by Mr John Rooke (Lond. 1729), the Periplus of the Euxine sea, by Dr William Falconer (Lond. 1805), and the treatise on coursing, by a graduate of medicine (Lond 1831) ——A Greek historian, mentioned by Julius Capitolinus in his life of the emperor Gordian.——An Athenian, who wrote a treatise on hunting, and the manner of keeping dogs ——A poet, who wrote an epic poem in twenty-four books on Alexander, also another poem on Attalus, king of Pergamus. He likewise translated Virgil's Georgics into Greek verse.

ARRIUS, a friend of Cicero, whose sumptuous feast Horace describes, Sat 2, 3, 86.——Aper, a Roman general, who murdered the emperor, &c.

ARRIUS and ARIUS, a philosopher of Alexandria, who so ingratiated himself with Augustus, after the battle of Actium, that the conqueror declared the people of Alexandria owed the preservation of their city to three causes, because Alexander was their founder, because of the beauty of the situation, and because Arrius was a native of the place. Plut. in Anton

ARRUNTIUS, a Roman consul ——A famous geographer, who, upon being accused of adultery and treason, under Tiberius, opened his veins, and bled to death. Tacit Ann. 6.

ARSABES, a satrap of Armenia,——of Persia Polyæn.

ARSACES, a man of obscure origin, who excited the Parthians to revolt from Antiochus Theos, and was elevated to the throne on account of his successes. He defeated and made captive Seleucus Callinicus, and laid the foundation of the Parthian empire, about 250 B C. He added the kingdom of the Hyrcani to his newly acquired possessions, and spent his time in establishing his power, and regulating the laws. After death he was made a god of his nation, and all his successors were called in honour of his name, Arsacides Justin. 41, 5 et 6.—Strab. 11 et 12.——His son and successor bore the same name. He carried war against Antiochus the son of Seleucus, who entered the field with 100,000 foot and 20,000 horse. He afterwards made peace with Antiochus, and died B. C. 217. Id. 41, 5.——The third king of Parthia, of the family of the Arsacidæ, bore the same name, and was also called Priapatius. He reigned twelve years, and left two sons, Mithridates and Phraates. Phraates succeeded as being the elder, and at his death he left his kingdom to his brother, though he had many children; observing that a monarch ought to have in view, not the dignity of his family, but the prosperity of his subjects. Justin. 31, 5.——A king of Pontus and Armenia, in alliance with the Romans. He fought long with success against the Persians, till he was deceived by the snares of king Sapor, his enemy, who put out his eyes, and soon after deprived him of life. Marcellin ——The eldest son of Artabanus, appointed over Armenia by his father, after the death of king Artaxias. Tacit Hist. 6.——A servant of Themistocles.

ARSACIDÆ, a name given to some of the monarchs of Parthia, in honour of Arsaces, the founder of the empire Their power subsisted till the 223th year of the Christian era, when they were conquered by Artaxerxes king of Persia. Justin. 41.

ARSAMENES, a satrap of Persia, at the battle of the Granicus

ARSAMERES, a river of Asia, near Parthia. Tacit. Ann 15.

ARSAMOSATA, a town of Armenia Major, in the south-western corner of the province Sophene, 70 miles from the Euphrates. It is now Samsat. Tacit Ann. 15

ARSANES, the son of Ochus, and father of Codomanus.

ARSANIAS, a river of Armenia Major, which descended from Mons Capotes, and, after running through Sophene, entered the Euphrates. It is now the Arsen Plin 5, 24.

ARSENA, a marsh of Armenia Major, whose fishes are all of the same sort Strab

ARSES, the youngest son of Ochus, whom the eunuch Bagoas raised to the throne of Persia, and destroyed with his children, after a reign of three years Diod. 17.

ARSIA, a wood of Etruria, famous for a battle between the Romans and the Veientes. Plut in Popl —Liv. 2, 7.—— A small river, which separated Histria from Illyricum. It was the eastern limit of Italy. Now, the Arsa ——A river of Italy, flowing through Campania.

ARSIDÆUS, a son of Datames, &c.

ARSINOE, daughter of Leucippus and Philodice, was mother of Æsculapius by Apollo, according to some authors She received divine honours after death at Sparta. Apollod. 3—Paus. 2, 26. 3, 12.——A daughter of Phlegeus, promised in marriage to Alemæon. Apollod 3, 7.——A fountain of Peloponnesus Paus. Messen.——The sister and wife of Ptolemy Philadelphus, worshipped after death under the name of Venus Zephyritis. Dinochares began to build her a temple with loadstones, in which there stood a statue of Arsinoe suspended in the air by the power of the magnet; but the death both of the king and of the architect prevented the completion of the edifice. Plin 34, 14.——A daughter of Ptolemy Lagus, who married Lysimachus king of Macedonia. After her husband's death, Ceraunus, her own brother, married her, and ascended the throne of Macedonia He previously murdered Lysimachus and Philip, the sons of Arsinoe by Lysimachus, in their mother's arms. Arsinoe was some time after banished to Samothrace. Justin. 17, 1, &c.——A younger daughter of Ptolemy Auletes, sister to Cleopatra. Antony dispatched her to gain the good graces of her sister. Hirt. Alex. 4.—Appian.——The wife of Magas king of Cyrene who committed adultery with her son-in-law. Justin. 26, 3.——A daughter of Lysimachus. Paus ——A town of Egypt, south-east of the lake Mœris It was formerly called Crocodilopolis, because the inhabitants worshipped crocodiles, and reared some of the species in the neighbouring lakes It corresponds to the modern Fayoum. (Vid Crocodilopolis.)——Another in Egypt, on the west side of the Sinus Arabicus, near its extremity, and not far from the modern Suez Strab.——A town of Cilicia,——of Æolia, near Canopa,——of Syria,——of Cyprus, between old and new Paphos, afterwards called Ammochostos,——of Africa, in Cyrenaica, between Leptis and Ptolemais, &c.

ARSISA PALUS, a large lake in the south eastern part of Armenia Major, at the foot of mount Niphates. It is now known as the Lake of Van.

ARSITES, a satrap of Paphlagonia.

ARTABANUS, son of Hystaspes, was brother to Darius I. He dissuaded his nephew Xerxes from making war against the Greeks, and, at his return, he assassinated him with the hopes of ascending the throne Darius the son of Xerxes was murdered in a similar manner; and Artaxerxes, his brother, would have shared the same fate, had not he discovered the snares of the assassin, and punished him with death. Diod. 11. —Justin. 3, 1, &c —Herod 4, 38 7 10, &c —— A king of Parthia, after the death of his nephew Phraates II He undertook a war against a nation of Scythia, in which he perished. His son Mithridates succeeded him, and merited the appellation of Great Justin. 42, 2.——A king of Media, and afterwards of Parthia, after the expulsion of Vonones, whom Tiberius had made king there. He invaded Armenia, from whence he was driven away by one of the generals of Tiberius. He was expelled from his throne, which Tiridates usurped, and some time after he was restored again to his ancient power, and died A. D. 48 Tacit. Ann. 5, &c ——A king of Parthia, very inimical to the interest of Vespasian. ——Another king of Parthia, who made war against the emperor Caracalla, who had attempted his life on pretence of courting his daughter He was murdered, and the power of Parthia abolished, and the crown translated to the Persian monarchs. Dio.—Herodian

ARTABAZÂNES, or ARTAMÊNES, the eldest son of Darius, when a private person. He attempted to succeed to the Persian throne, after his father's death, but it was determined that Xerxes was the proper heir of the monarchy, because, though younger, he was eldest of the children born to Darius when king Justin.

ARTABÁZUS, a son of Pharnaces, general in the army of Xerxes. He fled from Greece upon the ill success of Mardonius Herod. 7, 8 et 9. ——A general, who made war against Artaxerxes and was defeated. He was afterwards reconciled to his prince, and became the familiar friend of Darius III After the murder of this prince, he surrendered himself up with his sons to Alexander, who treated him with much humanity and confidence. Curt 5, 9 et 12 6, 5. 7, 3 et 5 8, 1.——An officer of Artaxerxes, against Datames. Diod. 15

ARTÁBRI and ARTABRITÆ, a people of Lusitania, who received their name from Artabrum, a promontory on the coast of Spain, now Cape Finisterre Sil. 3. 362

ARTACÆUS, an officer in the army of Xerxes, the tallest of all the troops, the king excepted.

ARTACÆNA, a city of Asia, near Aria.

ARTÁCE, a town and sea-port near Cyzicus. It did not exist in the age of Pliny. There was in its neighbourhood a fountain called Artacia. Herod. 4, 14 —Procop. de Bell. Pers. 1, 25.—Strab. 13.—Plin. 5, 32.——A city of Phrygia. ——A fortified place of Bithynia.

ARTACENE, a country of Assyria near Arbela, where Alexander conquered Darius. Strab. 16.

ARTACIA, a fountain in the country of the Lestrygones. Tibull. 4, 1, 60.

ARTACOÂNA, the metropolis of Aria, situate on the river Arius. It is now Herat

ARTÆI, a name by which the Persians were called among their neighbours. Herod. 7, 61.

ARTAGÉRA, or ARTAGICERTA, now Ardis, a town of Armenia Major, north east of Amida, where Caius Cæsar, a grandson of Augustus, received a mortal wound. Vell. Paterc. 2, 103. —Strab.

ARTAGERSES, a general in the army of Artaxerxes, killed by Cyrus the younger Plut in Artax.

ARTÂNES a king of the southern parts of Armenia. Strab. 11 ——A river of Thrace, flowing into the later of Danube. It is now the Vid. Herod. 4, 49.——A river of Bithynia

ARTAPHERNES, a general whom Darius sent into Greece with Datis He was conquered at the battle of Marathon, by Miltiades. Vid Datis. C. Nep. in Milt.—Herod

ARTÂTUS, a river of Illyria. Liv. 43, 19.

ARTAVASDES, a son of Tigranes king of Upper Armenia, who wrote tragedies, and distinguished himself as an elegant orator and faithful historian He lived in alliance with the Romans, but Crassus was defeated partly on account of his delay. He betrayed M. Antony in his expedition against Parthia, for which Antony reduced his kingdom, and carried him to Egypt, where he adorned the triumph of the conqueror led in golden chains. He was some time after murdered. Strab. 11.——The crown of Armenia was given by Tiberius to a person of the same name, who was expelled.——Augustus had also raised to the throne of Armenia, a person of the same name Tacit. Ann 2.

ARTAXA and ARTAXIAS, a general of Antiochus the Great, who erected the province of Armenia into a kingdom, by his reliance on the friendship of the Romans. King Tigranes was one of his successors. Strab 11

ARTAXÂTA, a strongly fortified city of Armenia Major, situate on an elbow of the river Araxes. It was said to have been built by Hannibal for Artaxias, the king of the country, after whom it received its name. It was taken and burnt by the Romans under Corbulo, and rebuilt by Tiridates, who gave it the name of Neronia, in compliment to Nero. It is now called Ardashat. Strab. 11.

ARTAXERXES I., succeeded to the kingdom of Persia, after his father Xerxes. Herodotus informs us that the name Artaxerxes signifies in the Persian language, "a great warrior" Ammianus Marcellinus interprets it as "conqueror of wars." He cut off Artabanus, who had murdered Xerxes, and attempted to destroy the royal family to raise himself to the throne. He made war against the Bactrians, and re-conquered Egypt, that had revolted, with the assistance of the Athenians. In his private character Artaxerxes was humane and benevolent, and during the 39 years of his reign, he was greatly beloved by his subjects, and respected by his allies. Some think that the surname of Μακρόχειρ, or the long-handed, was given him by reason of the extent of his dominions, as it is commonly said that princes have long hands; but others maintain that he had really longer hands or arms than usual, and that when he stood upright, he could touch his knees. He is said to have been the handsomest man of his time He was favourable to the Jews, and is supposed to be the Persian king called Ahasuerus in the book of Esther He died B. C. 425. C. Nep in Reg.—Plut in Artax.——The 2d of that name, king of Persia, was surnamed Mnemon, on account of his strong memory. He was son of Darius II., by Parysatis the daughter of Artaxerxes Longimanus, and had three brothers, Cyrus, Ostanes, and Oxathres. His original name was Arsaces, which he changed into Artaxerxes when he ascended the throne. His brother Cyrus was of such an ambitious disposition, that he resolved to make himself king, in opposition to Artaxerxes. Parysatis always favoured Cyrus; and when he had attempted the life of Artaxerxes, she obtained his pardon by her entreaties and influence. Cyrus, who had been appointed over Lydia and the sea coasts, assembled a large army under various pretences, and at last marched against his brother at the head of 100,000 barbarians and 13,000 Greeks. He was opposed by Artaxerxes with 900,000 men, and a bloody battle was fought at Cunaxa, in which Cyrus was killed, and his forces routed. It has been reported, that Cyrus was killed by Artaxerxes, who was so desirous of the honour, that he put to death two men for saying that they had killed him The Greeks, who had assisted Cyrus against his brother, though at the distance of above 600 leagues from their country, made their way through the territories of the enemy; and nothing is more famous in the Grecian history, than the retreat of the ten thousand. (Vid. Xenophon.) After he was delivered from the attacks of his brother, Artaxerxes, remembering the powerful assistance that had been brought against him by Grecian auxiliaries, excited dissensions among those restless Europeans, and prevailed upon them to declare war against Sparta, hoping that from their mutual quarrels their influence would be diminished, and his own dominions enjoy the greater security. He married two of his own daughters, called Atossa and Amestris, and named his eldest son Darius to be his successor. Darius however conspired against his father, and was put to death; and Ochus, one of the younger sons, called also Artaxerxes, made his way to the throne, by causing his elder brothers Ariaspes and Arsames to be assassinated. It is said that Artaxerxes died of a broken heart, in consequence of his son's unnatural behaviour, in the 94th year of his age, after a reign of 46 years, B.C 358. Artaxerxes had 150 children by his 350 concubines, and only four legitimate sons. Plut. in vita.—C Nep in Reg.—Justin. 10, 1, &c.—Diod. 13, &c.——The 3d, surnamed Ochus, succeeded his father Artaxerxes II., and established himself on his throne by murdering above 80 of his nearest relations. He punished with death one of his officers who conspired against him, and recovered Egypt, which had revolted, destroyed Sidon, and ravaged all Syria. He made war against the Caduasii, and greatly rewarded a private man called Codomanus for his uncommon valour. But his behaviour in Egypt, and his cruelty towards the inhabitants, offended his subjects, and Bagoas at last obliged his physician to poison him, B.C. 337, and afterwards gave his flesh to be devoured by cats, and made handles for swords with his bones Codomanus, on account of his virtues, was soon after made king by the people; and that he might seem to possess as much dignity as the house of Artaxerxes, he reigned under the name of Darius III. Justin. 10, 3.- Diod. 17.—Ælian V.H 6, 8.

ARTAXERXES, or ARTAXÄRES I., a common soldier of Persia, who killed Artabanus, the last of the Arsacidæ, and founded the dynasty of the Sassanidæ, A.D. 226. As soon as his authority was well established, he asserted his right to all the countries once contained in the Persian empire, and assembled a great army to enforce it. Alexander Severus attacked and defeated him, and wrested from him several of his provinces. Artaxerxes, however, recovered these provinces, and, after swaying the sceptre with great reputation for the space of fourteen years, died in peace. Herodian. 5.— One of his successors, son of Supor II., bore his name, and reigned 11 years, during which he distinguished himself by his cruelties.

ARTAXIAS, son of Artavasdes, king of Armenia, was proclaimed king by his father's troops. He opposed Antony, by whom he was defeated, and became so odious, that the Romans, at the request of the Armenians, raised Tigranes to the throne.——Another, son of Polemon, whose original name was Zeno. After the expulsion of Vonones from Armenia, he was made king by Germanicus. Tacit Ann. 6, 31.——A general of Antiochus. Vid. Artaxa.

ARTAYCTES, a Persian appointed governor of Sestos by Xerxes. He was hung on a cross by the Athenians for his cruelties, after his son had been stoned to death before his face. Herod. 7 et 9.

ARTAYNTA, a Persian lady, whom Xerxes gave in marriage to his son Darius She was one of the mistresses of her father-in-law. Herod. 9, 109, &c.

ARTAYNTES, a Persian appointed over a fleet in Greece, by Xerxes. Herod 8 13. 9, 107

ARTEMBARES, a celebrated Mede in the reign of Cyrus the Great. Herod. 1 et 9.

ARTEMIDORUS, a geographer of Ephesus, who flourished about 104 B.C. He wrote a description of the earth, which is often cited by Strabo, Pliny, and other writers. Some fragments of this geographer are collected in the first volume of Hudson's Minor Greek Geographers——A physician in the age of Adrian.——A native of Ephesus, in the reign of Antoninus Pius He was naturally of a superstitious turn of mind, and in indulging his fondness for the interpretation of dreams, and the prognostication of future events, he travelled over several countries in endeavours to enlarge and confirm this singular science. The fruit of his labours was at last delivered to the world; but though this work displays great erudition, and curious research, yet it is ridiculous from its inutility and its fanciful and childish conclusions. It is still extant, divided into five books, the best edition of which is that of J. G. Reiff, Lipsiæ, 2 vols. 8vo, 1805. Plut. in Cors.——A famous pugilist. Paus. El 2.—Martial. 6, 77, 3.——A man of Cnidus, son to the historian Theopompus. He had a school at Rome, and he wrote a book on illustrious men, not extant As he was the friend of J. Cæsar, he wrote down an account of the conspiracy which was formed against him. He gave it to the dictator from among the crowd as he was going to the senate, but J Cæsar put it with other papers which he held in his hand, thinking it to be of no material consequence. Plut in Cors.

ARTEMIS, the Greek name of Diana.

ARTEMISIA, daughter of Lygdamis of Halicarnassus, reigned over Halicarnassus and the neighbouring country She attended Xerxes in his expedition against Greece, B.C 480, and furnished five ships, which were second only to those of the Sidonians. In the council of war before the battle of Salamis, she strongly represented to Xerxes the folly of risking a naval engagement, and the event justified her opinion. In the combat she displayed such valour, that Xerxes exclaimed, "that his men behaved like women, and his women like men." The Athenians were so ashamed of fighting against a woman, that they offered a reward of 10,000 drachms for her head. It is said that she was fond of a youth of Abydos, called Dardanus, and that to punish his disdain, she put out his eyes while he was asleep, and afterwards leaped down the promontory of Leucas. Herod. 7, 99 & 68, &c.—Justin. 2, 12.——There was also another queen of Caria of that name, often confounded with the daughter of Lygdamis. She was daughter of Hecatomnus king of Caria or Halicarnassus, and was married to her own brother Mausolus, famous for his personal beauty. She was so fond of her husband, that at his death she drank in her liquor his ashes after his body had been burned, and erected to his memory a monument, which, for its grandeur and magnificence, was considered one of the seven wonders of the world. It was called mausoleum from the name of her husband, and hence the name mausoleum is often applied to funeral monuments. She proposed two prizes, one in tragedy, and another in oratory, to those who should pronounce the best panegyric on her husband, and among the competitors, were Theopompus, Theodectes, and Naucrates. The prizes were adjudged to Theopompus and Theodectes. She was so inconsolable for the death of her husband, that she died through grief two years after. Vitruv.—Strab. 14.—Plin. 25, 7. 36, 5.—Aul. Gell. 10, 18.

ARTEMISIA, a festival in honour of Artemis, Diana. It was celebrated in several cities of Greece, particularly at Delphi, where they offered to the goddess a mullet, which was thought to bear some relation to her, because it is said to hunt and kill the sea hare. The bread offered to the goddess was termed λαγὼς; and the women who performed the sacred rites were called λαγήφοι. Another solemnity of the same name was observed at Syracuse, and celebrated during three days with sports and banquets. Athen. 7.—Hesych.—Liv. 23.

ARTEMISIUM, a promontory of Eubœa, on the north-western side of the island. It derived its name from a temple dedicated to Diana, which stood on the headland. It is famous for the naval victory gained in its neighbourhood by the Greeks over the Persians, on the same day that the Spartans won the battle of Thermopylæ. It is now called Capo Syrochori. Herod. 7, 176 et 192. 8, 6.—Plut. in Themist.—Plin. 4, 12.——Artemisium near the grove Aricia, with a temple sacred to Artemis, whence the name.

ARTEMITA, a city of Assyria, a few miles to the southward of Apollonia, now Beladroud.——Another in Armenia Major, near its southern boundary, built by Semiramis. It is now Van.——An island opposite the mouth of the Achelous. Strab.

ARTEMON, an historian of Pergamus.——A native of Clazomenæ, who was with Pericles at the siege of Samos, where it is said he invented the battering ram, the testudo, and other equally valuable military engines.——A man who wrote a treatise on collecting books.——A native of Magnesia, who wrote the history of illustrious women.——A physician of Clazomenæ.——A painter.——A Syrian, whose features resembled in the strongest manner those of Antiochus Theos. The queen, after the king's murder, made use of Artemon to represent her husband in a lingering state, that, by his seeming to die a natural death, she might conceal her guilt, and effect her wicked purpose. Vid. Antiochus.

ARTIMPASA, a name of Venus among the Scythians. Herod. 4, 59.

ARTOBARZANES, or ARTABAZANES, a son of Darius, who endeavoured to ascend the throne in preference to his brother Xerxes, but to no purpose. (Vid. Artabazanes.) Herod. 7, 2 et 3.

ARTOCHMES, a general of Xerxes, who married one of the daughters of Darius. Herod. 7, 73.

ARTONA, a town of the Latins, taken by the Æqui. Liv. 2, 43.

ARTONIUS, a physician of Augustus who, on the night previous to the battle of Philippi, saw Minerva in a dream, who told him to assure Augustus of victory. Val Max 1, 7.

ARTONTES, a son of Mardonius. Paus in Bœotic.

ARTOXARES, an eunuch of Paphlagonia, in the reign of Artaxerxes I., cruelly put to death by Parysatis.

ARTURIUS, an obscure fellow, raised to honours and wealth by his flatteries, &c. Juv 3, 27.

ARTYNES, a king of Media.

ARTYNIA, a lake of Asia Minor.

ARTYSTONA, a daughter of Darius. Herod. 3, 88.

ARUÆ, a people of Hyrcania, where Alexander kindly received the chief officers of Darius. Curt. 6, 4.

ARUERIS, a god of the Egyptians, son of Isis and Osiris. According to some accounts, Osiris and Isis were married together in their mother's womb, and Isis was pregnant of Arueris before she was born. Diod. 1.—Plut. de Is et Osir.

L. ARUNCULEIUS COSTA, an officer sent by J. Cæsar against the Gauls, by whom he was killed. Cæs Bell Gall.

ARUNS, an Etrurian soothsayer in the age of Marius. Lucan 1, 586.——A soldier, who slew Camilla, and was killed by a dart of Diana. Virg. Æn 11, 759.——A brother of Tarquin the Proud. He married Tullia, who murdered him to espouse Tarquin, who had assassinated his wife.——A son of Tarquin the Proud, who in the battle that was fought between the partisans of his father, and the Romans, attacked Brutus the Roman consul, who wounded him and threw him down from his horse. Liv. 2, 6.——A son of Porsenna king of Etruria, sent by his father to take Aricia. Liv. 2, 14.——A native of Clusium who, to resent the violence offered to his wife by Lucumo, one of his countrymen, invited the Gauls to invade Italy, by giving them the wine of the country, and describing to them the richness and fertility of its soil. It is said, that he conducted the invaders over the Alps, and directed their attack against Clusium. Liv. 5, 33.

ARUNTIUS, a Roman who ridiculed the rites of Bacchus, for which the god inebriated him to such a degree that he offered violence to his daughter Medullina, who murdered him when she found that he acted so dishonourably to her virtue. Plut. in Parall.——A man who wrote an account of the Punic wars in the style of Sallust in the reign of Augustus. Tacit. Ann. 1.—Senec.

ep. 14.——Another Latin writer. Senec. de Benef. 6.——Paterculus, a man who gave Æmylius Censorinus, tyrant of Ægesta, a brazen tomb to torment criminals. The tyrant made the first experiment upon the body of the donor. Plut. in Parall.——Stella, a poet descended of a consular family, in the age of Domitian.

ARUPINUS, a maritime town of Istria. Tibull. 4, 1, 110.

ARUSPEX. Vid. Haruspex.

ARVALES, or AMBARVALES, a name given to twelve priests who celebrated the festivals called Ambarvalia This order of priests is said to have been instituted by Romulus, in honour of his nurse Acca Laurentia, who had twelve sons, and when one of them died, Romulus, to console her, offered to supply his place, and called himself and the rest of her sons, Fratres Arvales. Their office was for life, and, continued even in captivity and exile. They wore a crown made of the ears of corn, and a white woollen wreath around their temples. Varro de L. L. 4.—Aul. Gell 6, 7.—Plin 17, 2. Vid Ambarvalia.

ARVERNI, a powerful people of Gaul, whose territories lay between the sources of the Elaver, or Allier, and Duranius, or Dordogne, branches of the Liger and Garumna. The district is now Auvergne. Their chief city was Augustonemetum, now Clermont, a little north of Gergovia, which so long resisted the attacks of Cæsar. They pretended to be descended from the Trojans. Lucan. 1, 427.—Cæs. Bell. Gall 7.—Strab. 14.—Plin. 4, 19. 7, 50.

ARVIRAGUS a king of Britain, in the age of Domitian. He was buried at Gloucester, in a temple built by him in honour of Claudius. Juv. 4, 127.

ARVISIUM and ARVISUS, a promontory of Chios, famous for its wine. Virg. Ecl. 5

ARXATA, a town of Armenia Major, situate on the Araxes, east of Artaxata, on the confines of Media. Strab. 11.

ARYANDES, a Persian, appointed governor of Egypt by Cambyses. He was put to death by Darius for having refined and coined silver. Herod. 4, 166.

ARYBAS, a native of Sidon, whose daughter was carried away by pirates. Homer Od. 15, 425.——A king of the Molossi, who reigned ten years.

ARYPTÆUS, a prince of the Molossi, who privately encouraged the Greeks against Macedonia, and afterwards embraced the party of the Macedonians.

ASANDER, a man who separated, by a wall, Chersonesus Taurica from the continent. Strab. 7.

ASBESTÆ and ASBYSTÆ, a people of Lybia, south of Cyrene, where the temple of Ammon is built Jupiter is sometimes called, on that account, Asbystius Herod. 4, 170.—Ptol. 4, 3.

ASBOLUS, (black hair), one of Actæon's dogs. Ovid. Met. 3, 218.

ASCALAPHUS, a son of Mars and Astyoche, who was among the Argonauts, and went to the Trojan war at the head of the Orchomenians, with his brother Ialmenus. He was killed by Deiphobus. Homer. Il. 2. 13. 9, 82. 13, 518 —— A son of Acheron by Gorgyra or Orphne, stationed by Pluto to watch over Proserpine in the Elysian fields. When Ceres had obtained from Jupiter her daughter's freedom and return upon earth, provided she had eaten nothing in the kingdom of Pluto, Ascalaphus discovered that she had eaten some pomegranates from a tree; upon which Proserpine was ordered by Jupiter to remain six months with Pluto, and the rest of the year with her mother. Proserpine was displeased with Ascalaphus, that she sprinkled water on his head, and immediately turned him into an owl. Apollod. 1, 5. 2, 5.—Ovid. Met. 5, 8.

ASCALON, a maritime town of Palestine, fourteen miles north of Gaza, and thirty south-west of Jerusalem. It was of great note for a temple dedicated to Derceto, the mother of Semiramis, who was worshipped here under the form of a mermaid; and for another of Apollo, in which Herod the father of Antipater, and grandfather of Herod the Great, served as priest. In the primitive ages of Christianity, it was an episcopal see; and during the holy wars, it was beautified with a new wall, and many fair buildings, by our king Richard I. It is now a very inconsiderable village, called Scalona. Joseph. de Bell. Jud. 3, 2.—Theophrast. H. Pl. 7, 4.

ASCANIA, an island of the Ægean sea.——A city of Troas, built by Ascanius.

ASCANIUS, called also Iulus, son of Æneas by Creusa, was saved from the flames of Troy by his father, whom he accompanied in his voyage to Italy. He behaved with great valour in the war which his father carried on against the Latins, and succeeded Æneas in the kingdom of Latinus, and built Alba, to which he transferred the seat of his empire from Lavinium. The descendants of Ascanius reigned in Alba for above 420 years, under 14 kings, till the age of Numitor. Ascanius reigned 38 years; 30 at Lavinium, and 8 at Alba; and was succeeded by Sylvius Posthumus, son of Æneas by Lavinia. Iulus, the son of Ascanius, disputed the crown with him; but the Latins gave it in favour of Sylvius, as he was descended from the family of Latinus. and Iulus was invested with the office of high priest, which remained a long while in his family. Liv. 1, 3.—Virg. Æn. 1, &c.——According to Dionys. Hal. 1, 15, &c., the son of Æneas by Lavinia was also called Ascanius.——A river of Bithynia, by which the lake Ascanius discharged its waters into the sea. At the eastern extremity of the lake stood Nicæa, now Isnik. Virg. G. 3, 270.

ASCII, from a pri ativo, and σκια, a shadow, is the name given to those inhabitants of our earth, who, at particular seasons of the year have no shadow. All the inhabitants of the torrid zone are Ascii, as the sun is vertical to them twice every year.

ASCLEPIA, festivals in honour of Asclepius, or Æsculapius, celebrated all over Greece, when prizes for poetical and musical compositions were honourably distributed. At Epidaurus they were called by a different name. Meurs Gr.—Pollux. 1, 1.

ASCLEPIADES, a rhetorician in the age of Eumenes, who wrote an historical account of Alexander. Arrian.——A disciple of Plato —— A Greek philosopher, was born at Phlia in Peloponnesus, and flourished about B.C. 350. He and his friend Menedemus, studied under Stilpo at Megara, and Phædo of Elis While at the latter place, their poverty was so great, that they were obliged to work at the mill in the night to enable them to attend the academy in the day. This being mentioned to the magistrates, they presented the young disciples with two hundred drachmas. Asclepiades died at a very advanced age, after having lost his sight. Plut.—Cic. Tusc. 5, 39.——A native of Prusa in Bithynia, B.C. 90, who, after teaching rhetoric for some years, applied himself to the more lucrative practice of medicine. He was so celebrated in his profession at Rome, that he became the head of a school of medicine, and ranked inferior only to the great Hippocrates. Without the affectation of empiricism, he recommended to his patients abstinence and exercise, those two great preservers of health, and in certain disorders permitted the free use of wine. He relied so much upon his skill, that he laid a wager he should never be sick, and he won it, as he died of a fall from a stair, in a very advanced age. Nothing of his medical treatises is now extant. Plin. 26, 3. 7, 37.—Apuleius Flor. 19.—Cic. Orat. 1, 14.——An Egyptian, who wrote hymns to the gods of his country, and also a treatise on the coincidence of all religions.——A native of Alexandria, who gave a history of the Athenian archons.——The writer of a treatise on Demetrius Phalereus.——A disciple of Isocrates, who wrote six books on those events which had been the subject of tragedies. It is probable that he also wrote tragedies, and that he first made use of that sort of verse which from him has been called Asclepiadæum, of which the first ode of Horace is a beautiful specimen. Plut. in Isocr. Dionied. 3, pag. 408.——A physician, and friend of Cæsar Octavianus, by whose advice the latter left his camp the evening before the battle of Philippi, and thereby probably saved his life, as that part of the army was cut to pieces by Brutus. Asclepiades perished by shipwreck, and a magnificent monument was erected to his memory at Smyrna by the emperor.——Another physician of Bithynia, under Trajan. He lived 70 years, and was a great favourite at the emperor's court.

ASCLEPIODŌRUS, a painter in the age of Apelles, twelve of whose pictures of the gods were sold for 300 minæ each, to an African prince. Plin. 35, 10.——A soldier, who conspired against Alexander with Hermolaus. Curt. 8, 6.

ASCLEPIODŌTUS a general of Mithridates.

ASCLEPIUS. Vid. Æsculapius.

ASCLETARION, a mathematician in the age of Domitian, who said that he should be torn by dogs. The emperor ordered him to be put to death, and his body carefully secured; but as soon as he was set on the burning pile, a sudden storm arose which put out the flames, and the dogs came and tore to pieces the mathematician's body. Sueton. in Domit. 15.

ASCLUS, a town of Italy. Ital. 8.

ASCŌLIA, a festival in honour of Bacchus, celebrated about December, by the Athenian husbandmen who generally sacrificed a goat to the god, because that animal is a great enemy to the vine. They made a bottle with the skin of the victim, which they filled with oil and wine, and afterwards leaped upon it. He who could stand upon it first was victorious, and received the bottle as a reward. This was called ἀσκωλιάζειν, παρὰ τὸ ἐπὶ τῶν ἀσκῶν ἁλλεσθαι, leaping upon the bottle, whence the name of the festival is derived. It was also introduced in Italy, where the people besmeared their faces with the dregs of wine, and sang hymns to the god. They always hung some small images of the god on the tallest trees in their vineyards, and these images they called Oscilla. Some think that the Oscilla were small images of bark hung up from a belief on the part of the rustics, that in whatever direction they turned, under the impulse of the wind, they brought fertility. Virg. G. 2, 384.—Pollux. 9, 7.

ASCONIUS LABEO, a preceptor of Nero.——Pedianus, a Roman grammarian, was born at Padua, and lived in the time of Augustus. He was the friend of Virgil, and the acquaintance of Quintilian and Livy. His notes on Cicero's orations are full of valuable information, and still exist, though in a mutilated state. Some additional fragments have been lately discovered by Angelo Mai, in the Ambrosian library at Milan.

ASCRA, a town of Bœotia, founded, according to some, by the giants Otus and Ephialtes, at the foot of mount Helicon. At this place Hesiod resided, having removed thither from Cumæ in Asia Minor. Hence he is called Ascræus senex, and poetry after his style and subject, Ascræum Carmen. The town received its name from Ascra, a nymph, mother of Œolus by Neptune. Strab. 9.—Paus. 9, 29.—Propert. 1.—Flor. 1, 19. 3, 18.—Plin. 3, 13. 7, 43.—Virg. G. 2, 176.—Ovid Fast 6, 14.

ASCŪLUM, now Ascoli, a town of Picenum, situate upon a rock on the river Truentius, now Tronto. It sustained a long siege against Pompey, but was at last compelled to surrender. It was abandoned by Lentulus upon the approach of Cæsar, without the slightest resistance. Liv. Epit 76.—Vell. Paterc. 2, 21.—Cæsar. Bell. Civ. 1, 13.—Lucan. 2, 469.——Another in Apulia, north-west of Venusia, where an obstinate battle was fought between Pyrrhus and the Romans. Flor. 1, 18.—Plut. Pyrrh.—Plin. 3, 11.

ASDRŪBAL, a Carthaginian, son in law of Hamilcar. He distinguished himself in the Numidian war, and was appointed chief general on the death of his father-in-law, and for eight years presided with much prudence and valour over Spain, which submitted to his arms with cheerfulness. Here he laid the foundation of new Carthage on the shores of the Mediterranean, and saw it rise to consequence, and increase in population, under the fostering hand of the mother country. To stop his progress towards the east, the Romans, in a treaty with Carthage, forbade him to pass the Iberus, which was faithfully observed by the general. He was killed in the midst of his soldiers, B. C. 220, by a slave whose master he had murdered. The slave was caught and put to death in the greatest torments, which he bore with patience, and even ridiculed. Some say that he was killed in hunting. Ital. 1, 165.—Appian. Iberic.—Polyb. 2.—Liv. 21, 2, &c.——A son of Hamilcar, who came from Spain with a large reinforcement for his brother Annibal. He crossed the Alps and entered Italy; but some of his letters to Annibal having fallen into the hands of the Romans, the consuls M. Livius Salinator and Claudius Nero, attacked him suddenly near the Metaurus, in Umbria, and defeated him, B. C. 207. He was killed in the battle, and 56,000 of his men shared his fate, and 5,400 were taken prisoners, about 8000 Romans were killed. The head of Asdrubal was cut off, and some days after thrown into the camp of Annibal, who, in the moment that he was in the greatest expectation of a promised supply, exclaimed at the sight, in the deepest agony, "In losing Asdrubal, I lose all my happiness, and Carthage all her hopes." Asdrubal had before made an attempt to penetrate into Italy by sea, but had been defeated by the governor of Sardinia. Liv. 21, 23. 27, &c.—Polyb.—Horat. Od. 4, 4.——A Carthaginian general surnamed Calpus, appointed governor of Sardinia, and taken prisoner by the Romans. Liv.——Another, son of Giscon, appointed general of the Carthaginian forces in Spain, in the time of the great Annibal. He made head against the Romans in Africa, with the assistance of Scyphax, but he was soon after defeated by Scipio. He died B.C. 206. He was the father of Sophonisba. Liv.——Another, who advised his countrymen to make peace with Rome, and upbraided Annibal for laughing in the Carthaginian senate Liv.——A grandson of Masinissa, murdered in the senate house by the Carthaginians.——Another, who defended Carthage in its last siege by Scipio the younger, and, foreseeing its fate, surrendered himself to the Romans. When his wife, who was left behind with her two children in the temple of Æsculapius, perceived that the temple was set on fire, she appeared on the walls, magnificently adorned, with her two children; and having reproached and execrated her husband for basely deserting her, she first stabbed her children, and then threw herself into the flames. Liv. 51.——A Carthaginian general, conquered by L. Cæcilius Metellus in Sicily, in a battle in which he lost 130 elephants. These animals were led in triumph all over Italy by the conquerors.

ASELLIO, (SEMPRONIUS), an historian and military tribune, who wrote an account of the actions in which he was present. Dionys. Hal.

ASIA, one of the three parts of the ancient world, separated from Europe by the Ægean, the Euxine, the Palus Mæotis, the Tanais, or Don, and the Dwina, from Africa by the Red Sea and Isthmus of Suez. It received its name from Asia, one of the Oceanides, who married Iapetus, and became the mother of Atlas, Prometheus, &c. The origin of the name is derived by some from the Hebrew word Khasr, signifying the central land, but there seems little reason to justify this appellation. The name of Asia seems to have been originally used to denote the province of Lydia, for here, at the mouth of the Caystrus, we find the Asia Palus mentioned at a very early period, besides a tribe called Asiones, who latterly joined the Mæonians. It is thought likewise to have been first applied to the whole continent, after the Ionian colonists wandered from Greece to the shores of Asia or Lydia; when, from their being said by their countrymen to have settled in Asia, this name came finally to be applied to the continent itself. This part of the globe has given birth to many of the greatest monarchies of the universe; and to the ancient inhabitants of Asia we are indebted for most of the arts and sciences. The soil is fruitful, and abounds with all the necessaries as well as luxuries of life. Asia was divided into many different empires, provinces, and states, of which the most conspicuous were the Assyrian and Persian monarchies. The Assyrian monarchy, according to Eusebius, lasted 1240 years, and, according to Justin, 1300 years, down to the year of the world 3850. The empire of Persia existed 228 years, till the death of Darius III, whom Alexander the Great conquered. The empire of the Medes lasted 259 years, according to Eusebius, or less, according to others, till the reign of Astyages, who was conquered by Cyrus the Great, who transferred the power from the Medes, and founded the Persian monarchy. It was in Asia that the military valour of the Macedonians, and the bold retreat of the 10.000 Greeks, were so conspicuously displayed. It is in that part of the world that we are to look for the more visible progress of luxury, despotism, sedition, effeminacy, and dissipation. Asia was generally divided into Major and Minor. Asia Major was the more extensive, and comprehended all the eastern parts; and Asia Minor was a large country in the form of a peninsula, whose boundaries may be known by drawing a line from the bay of Issus, in a northern direction, to the eastern part of the Euxine Sea. Asia Minor has been subject to many revolutions. It was tributary to the Scythians for upwards of 1500 years, and was a long time under the power of the Lydians, Medes, &c. The western parts of Asia Minor were the receptacle of all the ancient emigrations from Greece, and it was totally peopled by Grecian colonies. The appellation Asia Minor was not in use among the ancients. The general name for Upper and Lower Asia was simply Asia. Lower Asia is now termed Anatolia, or Anadoli, as the Turks call it, from the Greek word Ἀνατολὴ, oriens. Strab.—Mela.—Justin.—Plin.—Tacit. &c.——One of the Oceanides, who married Iapetus, by whom she had Atlas, Prometheus, Epimetheus, and Menœtius, and gave her name to one of the three divisions of the ancient globe. Apollod 1, 2.——One of the Nereides. Hygin.——A mountain of Laconia. Paus 3, 24.

ASIA PALUS, a marsh in Lydia, which received the overflowings of the Cayster. Virg Æn. 7, 701.

ASIĀTICUS, a Gaul, in the age of Vitellius. Tacit Hist. 2——The surname of one of the Scipios, and others, from their conquests or campaigns in Asia.

ASILAS, an augur, who assisted Æneas against Turnus.——A Trojan officer. Virg. Æn 9, 10, &c.

ASĪNA, the surname of some of the Cornelian family. It is derived, as it is supposed by some authors, from one of the family, who, when required to produce sureties, brought into the forum an Ass loaded with money. Macrob Sat. 1, 6.——Vinnius, a man to whom Horace inscribes the 13th epistle of his first book.

ASINĀRIA, a festival in Sicily, in commemoration of the victory obtained over Demosthenes and Nicias, at the river Asinarius.

ASINĀRIUS, a river of Sicily, near which the Athenian generals, Demosthenes and Nicias, were taken prisoners. Now the Fahnnera

ASĪNE, a town of Argolis, north west of Hermione, on the Sinus Argolicus. It was founded by a colony of Dryopes, who once occupied the vales of Parnassus. Its ruins are to be seen near the little port of Vivares. Hom Il. 2, 559.——Another in Messenia, south-west of Messene, founded by the inhabitants of Asine in Argolis, when expelled from their city by the Argives. It is now Grisso. Pausan Messen. 34.—Thucyd. 4, 13.——Another in Cyprus.——Another in Cilicia.

ASINES, a river of Sicily. Strab. 8.

ASINIUS GALLUS, son of Asinius Pollio the orator, married Vipsania, after she had been divorced by Tiberius This marriage gave rise to a secret enmity between the emperor and Asinius, who starved himself to death, either voluntarily, or by order of his imperial enemy. He had six sons by his wife. He wrote a comparison between his father and Cicero, in which he gave a decided superiority to the former. He also wrote some epigrams, the wit and delicate humour of which have been admired by the ancients A poem upon Hippolytus, a youth who was one of his favourites, is quoted, but if it reflect credit upon the genius of the writer, it must be considered as disgraceful to his morality. Tacit Ann. 1 et 5 —Dio. 58.—Plin. Ep. 7, 4.—Marcellus, grandson of Asinius Pollio, was accused of some misdemeanors, but acquitted, &c. Tacit. Ann. 14.——Pollio, an excellent orator, poet, and historian, intimate with Augustus. He triumphed over the Dalmatians, and wrote an account of the wars of Cæsar and Pompey, in 17 books, besides poems. He refused to answer some verses written against him by Augustus, "because," said he, "you have the power to proscribe me, should my answer prove offensive." He died in the 80th year of his age, A. D 4. He was consul with Cn. Domitius Calvinus, A.U.C. 714 It is to him that the fourth of Virgil's Bucolics is inscribed. He is particularly celebrated as being the first who collected a library at Rome, which he adorned with the portraits of illustrious authors. Quintil.—Sueton. in Cæs. 30 et 55.—Dio. 37, 49, 55.—Senec. de Tranq. And. et Ep 100.—Plin. 7, 30—Tacit. 6. —Paterc. 2.—Plut. in Cæs.——A commander of Mauritania, under the first emperors, &c. Tacit. Hist 2 ——An historian in the age of Pompey. ——Another in the third century.——Quadratus, a man who published the history of Parthia, Greece, and Rome.

ASIUS, a son of Dymas, brother of Hecuba. He assisted Priam in the Trojan war, and was killed by Idomeneus. Homer. Il. 2, 342. 13, 95. 13, 384.——A poet of Samos, who wrote about the genealogy of ancient heroes and heroines. Paus. 7, 4.——A son of Imbracus, who accompanied Æneas into Italy. Virg. Æn 10, 123.

ASIUS CAMPUS, a place near the Cayster.

ASNÆUS, a mountain of Macedonia, near which the river Aous flows, before it falls into the Adriatic. Liv. 32, 5.

ASŌPHIS, a small country of Peloponnesus, near the Asopus.

ASŌPIA, the ancient name of Sicyon. Paus. 2, 1.

ASŌPIADES, a patronymic of Æacus, son of Ægina, the daughter of Asopus. Ovid. Met. 7, 494.

ASŌPIS, the daughter of the Asopus.——A daughter of Thespius, mother of Mentor. Apollod. 2. 7.

ASŌPUS, a river of Thessaly, rising in mount Œta, and falling into the Sinus Maliacus.——A river of Bœotia, rising in mount Cithæron, and running eastward into the Euripus. It was on the banks of this river that the battle of Platæa was fought, B C. 479 It still retains the name of Asopo. Hom. Il. 4, 383.—Herod. 9, 43.——A river of Asia Minor, flowing into the Lycus near Laodicea.——A river of Peloponnesus, rising in the mountains of Argolis, and discharging itself into the Sinus Corinthiacus or Gulf of Lepanto, east of Sicyon The games instituted by Adrastus, in honour of Apollo, were held on its banks. It is now the Basilico. Paus. 8.—Pind. Nem. 9, 21.——Another of Macedonia, flowing near Heraclea. Strab. &c.——A river of Phœnicia ——A son of Neptune, who gave his name to a river of Peloponnesus. Three of his daughters are particularly celebrated, Ægina, Salamis, and Thebene. Apollod. 1, 9, 3. 12.—Paus 2, 12.

ASPA, a town of Parthia, now Isp han, the capital of the Persian empire.

ASPAMITHRES, a favourite eunuch of Xerxes, who conspired with Artabanus to destroy the king, and the royal family, &c. Ctesias

ASPARAGIUM, a town near Dyrrhachium. Cæs Bell Civ. 3, 20.

ASPASIA, a daughter of Hermotimus of Phocæa, famous for her personal charms and elegance. She was mistress to Cyrus, and afterwards to his brother Artaxerxes Plutarch and Justin relate that Darius, the son of Artaxerxes, on being declared his successor, and, according to custom, allowed to demand a favour, asked Aspasia from his father; and that this female being permitted to make a choice between the father and son, preferred the latter. It is further added, that Artaxerxes made her a priestess of Diana, in order to keep her from his son, who thereupon rebelled. This story, however, is attended with some circumstances which weaken its credibility. Aspasia was called Milto, Vermullion, on account of the beauty of her complexion. Ælian. V. H. 12, 1.—Plut. in Artax. ——Another woman, daughter of Axiochus, born at Miletus. She came to Athens, where she taught eloquence, and Socrates was proud to be among her scholars. She so captivated Pericles, by her mental and personal accomplishments, that he became her pupil, and at last took her for his mistress and wife. He was so fond of her, that he made war against Samos at her instigation. The behaviour of Pericles towards Aspasia greatly corrupted the morals of the Athenians; and introduced dissipation and lasciviousness into the state. She, however, possessed the merit of superior excellence in mind as well as person, and Plato hesitates not to declare, that her instructions formed the greatest and the most eloquent orators of her age. Some have confounded the mistress of Pericles with Aspasia the daughter of Hermotimus. Plut. in Pericl.—Quintil. 11.——The wife of Xenophon was also called Aspasia, if we follow the improper interpretation given by some to Cic. de Inv. 1, 31.

ASPASIUS, a peripatetic philosopher in the 2d century, whose commentaries on different subjects were highly valued.——A sophist, who wrote a panegyric on Adrian.

ASPASTES, a satrap of Carmania, suspected of infidelity to his trust while Alexander was in the east. Curt. 9, 20.

ASPATHINES, one of the seven noblemen of Persia, who conspired against the usurper Smerdis. Herod. 3, 70, &c.——A son of Prexaspes Id. 7.

ASPENDUS, a town of Pamphylia, at the mouth of the river Eurymedon. The inhabitants sacrificed swine to Venus. Liv. 37, 23. 38, 15.—Cic. in Verr. 1, 20.

ASPHALTITES, a lake of Judæa. Vid. Mare Mortuum.

ASPIS, a satrap of Chaonia, who revolted from Artaxerxes. He was reduced by Datames. Cor Nep. in Dat.——A town of Hispania Terraconensis, north-west of Ilucia, now Aspe

ASPLEDON, a son of Neptune by the nymph Midea. He gave his name to a city of Bœotia north-east of Orchomenus, whose inhabitant went to the Trojan war. Hom. Il. 2, 18.—Paus 9 38

ASPORĒNUS, a district of Asia Minor, near Pergamus, where the mother of the gods was worshipped, and called Asporena. Strab. 13.

C. NONIUS ASPRĒNAS, a young nobleman at Rome, famed in the public diversions called Ludus Troje. Suet. Aug. 43.——Lucius, a proconsul of Africa, under the emperors. Tacit. Ann. 1, 53. The family of the Asprenates enjoyed the consulship, though few particulars are recorded concerning their history. Plin. 30, 7.

ASSA, a town in the island of Cephalenia.

ASSARINUS, the Jupiter of the Arabians. Plin. 12, 19

ASSĀRACUS, a Trojan prince, son of Tros by Callirhoe, or Acallis. He was father to Capys, the father of Anchises The Trojans, especially the followers of Æneas, were frequently called the descendants of Assaracus, gens Assaraci. Homer. Il. 20, 232.—Virg. Æn 1, 284 ——Two friends of Æneas in the Rutulian war. Virg. Æn 10, 124

ASSERINI, a people of Sicily.

ASSŌRUS, a town of Sicily, east of Enna, on the river Chrysas.——A town of Macedonia, in Mygdonia

ASSOS, a town of Mysia, west of Adramyttium, founded by Methymna. Now Asso.

ASSYRIA, a kingdom of Asia, formerly of great celebrity It was bounded on the west by Mesopotamia, on the north by mount Niphates and Armenia the Greater, on the east by part of Media and the mountains Choatra and Zagros, and on the south by Susiana. Assyria derived its name from Assur, the second son of Shem. It is called by some of the ancients Aturia, and by others Adiabene. It is now called Kourdistan, from the Carduchi, a tribe who, at a remote period, inhabited the northern parts. The Assyrian empire is the most ancient in the world. It was founded by Ninus or Belus, B. C 2059, according to some authors, and lasted till the reign of Sardanapalus, the 31st sovereign since Ninus, B. C 820. According to Eusebius, it flourished for 1240 years; according to Justin, 1360 years; but Herodotus, who is followed by Volney, says that its duration was not above 520 year.. Among the different monarchs of the Assyrian empire, Semiramis greatly distinguished herself, and extended the boundaries of her dominions as far as Æthiopia and Libya. In ancient authors the Assyrians are often called Syrians, and the Syrians Assyrians The Assyrians are said to have assisted Priam in the Trojan war, and to have sent him a numerous army under the command of Memnon. The king of Assyria generally styled himself king of kings, as a demonstration of his power and greatness. (Vid. SYRIA.) Strab. 16.—Herod. 1 et 2.—Justin. 1.—Plin 6, 13 et 26.—Ptol. 1, 2.—Diod. 2.—Mela 1, 2.

ASTA, a town of Spain, in Bætica, near the left arm of the Bætis. Liv 39, 21.——Pompeia, a town of Liguria, now Asti.

ASTABŌRAS, a river of Egypt, rising in the Lunæ Montes, or the Gebel Komri, and forming, by its junction with the Astapus, the river Nile. It is now Bahr el Abiad, or the white river.

ASTACENI, a people of India, near the Indus. Strab. 15

ASTĀCUS, a town of Bithynia, north of Nicæa, on the Sinus Astacenus, founded by a colony from Megara, at the command of an oracle, but subsequently increased by another colony from Athens, and then called Olbia, or the blessed. Lysimachus destroyed it, and carried the inhabitants to the town of Nicomedia, which was then lately built. It is now called Dragomestre

Pans. 5, 12.—Arrian.—Strab. 17.——A city of Acarnania. Plin. 5.

ASTAPA, a town of Hispania Bætica, east of Hespalis, celebrated for the brave defence made by its inhabitants against the Romans under Marius, A.U.C. 646. It is now Estepa la Vieja. Liv. 38, 20

ASTĀPUS, a river of Æthiopia, rising in the Lunæ Montes, or mountains of the moon, and forming, by its junction with the Astaboras, the Nile. It is now called Bahr el Asreque, or the blue river.

ASTARTE, the name of one of the Syrian goddesses, corresponding with the Venus of the Greeks, the Mithra of the Persians, the Isis of the Egyptians, &c. She had a famous temple at Hierapolis in Syria, which was served by 300 priests, who were constantly employed in offering sacrifices She is represented on some medals with a long habit, covered with a mantle, which is tucked up on the left arm; one of her hands is stretched forward, and in the other is placed a crooked staff in the form of a cross. Sometimes she is exhibited as a half naked female, sometimes in a chariot, and at other times seated on a lion, with a thunderbolt in her hand. Lucian. de Dea Syria.—Cic. de Nat. D. 3, 23.—Dion. 79.

ASTER, a dexterous archer of Methone, who offered his services to Philip king of Macedonia. Upon being slighted, he retired into the city, and aimed an arrow at Philip, who pressed it with a siege. The arrow, on which was written "aimed at Philip's right eye," struck the king's eye, and put it out; and Philip, to return the pleasantry, threw back the same arrow, with these words, "if Philip takes the town, Aster shall be hanged." The conqueror kept his word. Lucian de Hist Scrib.

ASTERIA, a daughter of Ceus, one of the Titans, by Phœbe, daughter of Cœlus and Terra. She married Perses son of Crius, by whom she had the celebrated Hecate. She enjoyed for a long time the favours of Jupiter, under the form of an eagle; but falling under his displeasure, she was changed into a quail, called Ortyx by the Greeks; whence the name of Ortygia, given to that island in the Archipelago, where she retired. (Vid. Delos) Ovid. Met 6, fab. 4.—Hygin. fab. 53.—Apollod. 1, 2, &c.——A town of Greece whose inhabitants went to the Trojan war. Homer. Il. 2, 782 ——One of the daughters of Danaus, who married Chætus, son of Ægyptus. Apollod. 2.——One of the daughters of Atlas, mother of Œnomaus, king of Pisa. She is called Sterope by some. Hygin. fab. 250.——A mistress of Gyges, to whom Horace wrote three odes to comfort her during her lover's absence.

ASTERION and ASTERIUS, a river of Peloponnesus, which flowed through the country of Argolis This river had three daughters, Eudora, Prosymna, and Acræa, who nursed the goddess Juno, of whom the first and the last gave their name to two hills on the borders of the river. At the foot of the first of these was a temple of Juno, served only by women Stat. Theb. 4, 122 et 714.—Paus. 2, 17.——A son of Cometes, who was one of the Argonauts. Apollon. 1.——A centaur, son of Æschylus. Paus ——A son of Minos II., king of Crete, by Pasiphae. He was killed by Theseus, though he was thought the strongest man of his age. Apollodorus supposes him to be the same as the famous Minotaur According to some, Asterion was son of Teutamus, one of the descendants of Æolus, and they say that he was surnamed Jupiter, because he had carried away Europa, by whom he had Minos I. Diod. 4.—Apollod. 3.—Paus. 2, 31.——A son of Neleus and Chloris. Apollod 1, 12.

ASTERODIA, the wife of Endymion. Paus. 5, 1.

ASTEROPE and ASTEROPÆA, one of the Pleiades, who were beloved by the gods and most illustrious heroes, and made constellations after death.——A daughter of Pelias, king of Iolchos, who assisted her sisters to kill her father, whom Medea promised to restore to life. Her grave was seen in Arcadia, in the time of Pausanias, 8, 11.——A daughter of Deion by Diomede Apollod. 1.——The wife of Æacus. Id. 3.

ASTEROPÆUS, a king of Pæonia, son of Pelegon. He assisted Priam in the Trojan war, and was killed, after a brave resistance, by Achilles. Homer. Il 17, 217 21, 140.

ASTEROUSIUS, a mountain at the south of Crete.——A town of Arabia Felix

ASTII, a people of Thrace. Liv 38, 40.

ASTINOME, the wife of Hipponous.

ASTIOCHUS, a general of Lacedæmon, who conquered the Athenians near Cnidus, and took Phocæa and Cumæ, B.C. 411.

ASTRÆA, a daughter of Astræus, king of Arcadia, or, according to others, of Titan, Saturn's brother, by Aurora. Some make her daughter of Jupiter and Themis, and others consider her to be the same as Rhea, wife of Saturn. She was called Justice, of which virtue she was the goddess. She lived upon the earth, as the poets mention, during the golden age, which is often called the age of Astræa; but the wickedness and impiety of mankind drove her to heaven in the brazen and iron ages. She was, however, the last of the divinities who retired from the habitations of men; and after her return to heaven, she was placed among the constellations of the zodiac, under the name of Virgo or Erigone. She is represented as a virgin, with a stern, but majestic countenance, holding a pair of scales in one hand, and a sword in the other. Senec. in Octav.—Ovid Met. 1, 149.—Arat. Phænom. 1, 98.—Hesiod. Theog.—Aul Gell 14, 4.—Manil. 4, 542.

ASTRÆUS, one of the Titans who made war against Jupiter. He was the son of Crios and Eurybia, and married Aurora, by whom he had the winds known by the names of Zephyr, Boreas, Notus, and Argestes. Hesiod in Theog. 375 et seq.—Apollod. 1, 5.——A river of Macedonia, running between Berœa and Thessalonica, and falling into the Ludias. It is now the Vistritza. Ælian. V. H. 15, 2.

ASTU, a Greek word which signifies city, generally applied by way of distinction to Athens, which was the most capital city of Greece The word urbs is applied with the same meaning of superiority to Rome, and urbs to Alexandria, the capital of Egypt, as also to Troy. C. Nep. 7, 6, 9, 4.—Cic. Leg 2, 2.

ASTUR, an Etrurian who assisted Æneas against Turnus. Virg. Æn. 10, 180.

ASTURA, a small river and village of Latium, near the coast, below Antium. In the neighbourhood was a villa of Cicero, to which he withdrew from the proscription of Antony, and whence he sought to escape from his enemies. Vid. Cicero.

ASTURES, a people of Hispania Terraconensis, lying west and south-west of the Cantabri They occupied the western part of modern Asturias, and the northern part of Leon. They were famed for a breed of ambling horses, and as miners in the mountains, by which their country was intersected. Lucan. 4, 298.—Ital. 1, 230.

ASTYAGE, a daughter of Hypseus, who married Periphas, by whom she had some children, among whom was Antion, the father of Ixion. Diod. 4.

ASTYAGES, son of Cyaxares, was the last king of Media. He was father to Mandane, whom he gave in marriage to Cambyses, an ignoble person of Persia, because he was told by a dream, that his daughter's son would dispossess him of his crown. From such a marriage he hoped that none but mean and ignorant children could be raised; but he was disappointed, and though he had exposed his daughter's son in consequence of a second dream, he was deprived of his crown by his grandson, after a reign of 35 years. Astyages was very cruel and oppressive; and Harpagus, one of his officers, whose son he had wantonly murdered, encouraged Mandane's son, who was called Cyrus, to take up arms against his grandfather, and he conquered him and took him prisoner, 559 B C. Xenophon, in his Cyropædia, relates a different story, and asserts that Cyrus and Astyages lived in the most undisturbed friendship together. Justin 1, 4, &c.—Herod. 1, 74, 75, &c.——A grammarian, who wrote a commentary on Callimachus.——A man changed into a stone by Medusa's head. Ovid. Met. 5, fab. 6.

AS; YLUS, a Trojan killed by Neoptolemus Homer. Il. 6.

ASTYANAX, a son of Hector and Andromache. He was very young when the Greeks besieged Troy; and when the city was taken, his mother saved him in her arms from the flames. Ulysses, who was afraid lest the young prince should inherit the virtues of his father, and one day avenge the ruin of his country upon the Greeks, seized him, and threw him down from the walls of Troy. According to Euripides, he was killed by Menelaus; and Seneca says, that Pyrrhus the son of Achilles put him to death. Hector had given him the name of Scamandrius; but the Trojans, out of gratitude to the father, their chief defender, and as a compliment to his valour, called the son Astyanax, or the prince of the city. Homer. Il. 6, 400. 22, 500.—Virg. Æn. 2, 457 3, 489.—Ovid. Met. 13, 415.——An Arcadian who had a statue in the temple of Jupiter, on mount Lyceus. Paus. 8, 38.——A son of Hercules. Apollod 2, 7.——A writer in the age of Gallienus.

ASTYCRATIA, a daughter of Æolus Homer. Il.——A daughter of Amphion and Niobe.

ASTYDAMAS, an Athenian, pupil to Isocrates He wrote 240 tragedies, of which only 15 obtained the poetical prize.——A Milesian, three time victorious at Olympia. He was famous for his strength, as well as for his voracious appetite He was once invited to a feast by king Ariobarzanes, and he eat what had been prepared for nine persons. He exhibited the power of his arms by breaking a large bar of iron. Athen. 10, 1.——Two tragic writers bore the same name, one of whom was disciple to Socrates.——A comic poet of Athens, who, on being honoured by his countrymen with a statue, grew proud of his popularity, and vainly celebrated his own praises, whence the proverb of Laudat teipsum Astydamas in modum. Erasmi Adagia.

ASTYDAMĪA, or ASTYADAMIA, daughter of Amyntor, king of Orchomenos in Bœotia, married Acastus, son of Pelias, who was king of Iolchos. She became enamoured of Peleus, son of Æacus, who had visited her husband's court; and because he refused to gratify her passion, she accused him of attempting her virtue. Acastus readily believed his wife's accusation, but as he would not violate the laws of hospitality, by punishing his guest with instant death, he wanted for a favourable opportunity, and dissembled his resentment. At last they went in a hunting party to mount Pelion, where Peleus was tied to a tree by order of Acastus, that he might be devoured by wild beasts. Jupiter was moved at the innocence of Peleus, and sent Vulcan to deliver him. When Peleus was set at liberty, he marched with an army against Acastus, whom he dethroned, and punished with death the cruel and false Astydamia. She is called by some Hippolyte, and by others Cretheis. Apollod. 3, 13.—Pindar. Nem. 4.——A daughter of Ormenus, carried away by Hercules, by whom she had Tlepolemus. Ovid. Heroid 9, 50.

ASTȳLUS, one of the Centaurs, who had the knowledge of futurity. He advised his brothers not to make war against the Lapithæ. Ovid Met. 12, 338.——A man of Crotona, who was victorious three successive times at the Olympic games. Paus.

ASTYMEDUSA, a woman whom Œdipus married after he had divorced Jocasta.

ASTYNOME, the daughter of Chryses the priest of Apollo, sometimes called Chryseis. She fell to the share of Achilles, at the division of the spoils of Lymessus.——A daughter of Amphion, ——of Talaus. Hygin

ASTYNOUS, a Trojan prince, killed by Diomedes during the war. Homer. Il. 5, 144.——Another Trojan, son of Protiaon. Id 15, 455.

ASTYOCHE and ASTYOCHIA, a daughter of Actor, who had by Mars, Ascalaphus and Ialmenus, who were at the Trojan war, and among the Argonauts, according to Apollod. 1, 47 — Homer. Il 2, 20 — Paus. 9, 37.——A daughter of Phylas king of Ephyre, who had a son called Tlepolemus, by Hercules. Hygin. fab. 97, 162 ——A daughter of Laomedon, by Strymo. Apollod. 3.——A daughter of Amphion and Niobe. Id 3, 4.——A daughter of the Simois, who married Erichthonius. Id 3, 12 ——The wife of Strophius, sister to Agamemnon. Hygin

ASTYPALÆA, one of the Sporades, midway between Thera and Cos, where divine honours were rendered to Achilles It was called Pyrrha when the Carians possessed it, and afterwards Polis. Its name Astypalæa is said to have been derived from that of a sister of Europa. It was also called ἄστυ πάντα, or the table of the gods, because its soil was fertile, and almost enamelled with flowers. It now bears the name of Stampalia. Cic. de Nat. D. 3, 18.—Paus. 7, 4.—Strab. 14.

ASTYPHILUS a soothsayer, well skilled in the knowledge of futurity. Phil. in Cim.

ASTYRA, a city of Mysia, north of Adramyttium, near which was a grove sacred to Diana. ——A town of Æolis.——Another in Phœnicia.

ASTYRON, a town built by the Argonauts, on the coast of Illyricum. Strab.

ASYCHIS, a king of Egypt, who succeeded Sesostris, and made a law, that whoever borrowed money, must deposit his father's body in the hand of his creditors, as a pledge of his promise of payment. He built a magnificent pyramid. Herod 2, 136.

ATLAS, a friend of Æneas, skilled in auguries. Virg. Æn. 9, 571. 10, 175.

ATYLLUS, a gladiator. Juv. 6, 266.

ATABULUS, a wind which was frequent in Apulia, and very destructive to the productions of the earth, which it scorched or withered up. It is the same with the modern Sirocco. Horat. 1, Sat. 5, 78.

ATABYRIS, a mountain in Rhodes, where Jupiter had a temple, whence he was surnamed Atabyrius. Strab. 14.

ATACINI, a people of Gallia Narbonensis, south and south-east of the Volcæ Tectosages. They inhabited the banks of the Atax, or Aude, whence their name. Their capital was Narbo, now Narbonne.

ATACINUS, P. Terentius Varro, a poet. Vid. Varro.

ATALANTA, a daughter of Schœneus king of Scyros. According to some she was the daughter of Jasus or Jasius, by Clymene; but others say that Menalion was her father. This uncertainty of not rightly knowing the name of her father has led the mythologists into error, and some have maintained that there were two persons of that name, though their supposition is groundless. Atalanta was born in Arcadia, and according to Ovid she determined to live in perpetual celibacy. Her beauty, however, gained her many admirers, and to free herself from their importunities, she, as being very swift-footed, proposed to run a race with them. They were to run without arms, and she was to carry a dart in her hand Her lovers were to start first, and whoever arrived at the goal before her, would be made her husband; but all those whom she overtook, were to be killed by the dart with which she had armed herself. As she displayed either her powers in running, many of her suitors perished in the attempt, till Hippomenes the son of Marcareus proposed himself as her admirer. Venus had presented him with three golden apples from the garden of the Hesperides, or according to others, from an orchard in Cyprus; and as soon as he had started in the course, he artfully threw down the apples at some distance one from the other. While Atalanta, charmed at the sight, stopped to gather the apples, Hippomenes hastened on his course, arrived first at the goal, and obtained Atalanta in marriage. These two fond lovers, in the impatience of consummating their nuptials, entered the temple of Cybele; and the goddess was so offended at their impiety, and at the profanation of her house, that she changed them into two lions. Apollodorus says, that Atalanta's father was desirous of raising male issue, and therefore she was exposed to wild beasts as soon as born. She was, however, suckled by a she-bear, and preserved by shepherds. She dedicated her time to hunting, and resolved to live in celibacy. She killed two centaurs, Hyleus and Rhœcus, who attempted her virtue. She was present at the hunting of the Calydonian boar, which she first wounded, and she received the head as a present from Meleager, who was enamoured of her. She was also at the games instituted in honour of Pelias, where she conquered Peleus; and when her father, to whom she had been restored, wished her to marry, she consented to give herself to him who could overcome her in running, as has been said above.

She had a son called Parthenopæus, by Hippomenes. Hyginus says, that that son was the fruit of her love with Meleager; and Apollodorus says she had him by Milanion, or, according to others by the god Mars. (Vid. Meleager.) Apollod. 1, 8, 2, 9, &c.—Paus. 1, 36, 45, &c.—Hygin. fab. 99, 174, 185, 270.—Ælian. V. H. 13.—Ovid. Met. 8, fab. 4, 10. fab. 11.—Eurip. in Phœnis.—Propert. 1, el. 1 ——An island near Eubœa and Locris. Paus.—Liv. 35, 37.

ATARANTES, a people of Africa, ten days' journey from the Garamantes, and the same distance from the Atlantes. There was in their country a hill of salt, with a fountain of sweet water upon it. Herod 4, 184

ATARBECHIS, a city of Egypt, sacred to Venus, in one of the small islands of the Delta, called Prosopitis

ATARGATIS, or ATERGATIS, called also Derceto, a goddess of the Syrians, represented like a mermaid, with the head and chest of a woman, but with the rest of the body like a fish. According to some, she was the Babylonian and Assyrian Venus, and, like the Astarte of the Phenicians, had her origin from Semiramis, the foundress of Babylon Lucian. de Dea Syr.—Strab. 16.

ATARNEUS, a town of Mysia, on the coast opposite to Lesbos. It was a village in Pliny's time.

ATAS and ATHAS, a youth of wonderful velocity, who is said to have run 74 miles between noon and the evening. Martial. Ep. 4, 19.—Plin. 7.

ATAX, now Aude, a river of Gallia Narbonensis, rising in the Pyrenean mountains and falling into the Mediterranean sea. Mela, 2.

ATE, the goddess of all evil, and daughter of Jupiter. She raised such jealousy and sedition in heaven among the gods, that Jupiter dragged her away by the hair, and banished her for ever from heaven, and sent her to dwell on earth, where she incited mankind to wickedness, and sowed commotions among them. Homer. Il 19. She is the same as the Discord of the Latins.

C. ATEIUS CAPITO, a tribune of the people, who endeavoured, by representing omens as unfavourable, to dissuade Crassus from going on his Parthian expedition. He was degraded by Appius for giving a false account of omens. Cic. D. 1, 16.—Dio. 39.

ATELLA, a town of Campania, south of Capua, famous for a splendid amphitheatre, where farces and interludes were first exhibited, and thence called Atellanæ Fabulæ. Liv 7, 2.—Juv. 6.

ATENOMARUS, a chieftain of Gaul, who made war against the Romans Plut. in Parall.

ATERNUM, now Pescara, a town of Picenum, at the mouth of the river Aternus, the south boundary of Picenum.

ATHAMANES, the name of an ancient people who inhabited Athamania, in Epirus. They seem to have existed a century before the Trojan war, and to have preserved their name and customs in the days of Alexander. It is said that there was a mountain in their territories, the waters of which became so sulphureous during the last quarter of the moon, that they burned wood. Strab. 7.—Plin. 2, 103.—Mela, 2, 3.—Ovid. Met. 15, 311.

ATHAMANIA, a country of Epirus, placed by D'Anville, on the declivity of mount Pindus.

ATHAMANTIADES, a patronymic of Melicerta, Phryxus, or Helle, children of Athamas. Ovid Met. 15, 319. Fast. 4, 903.

ATHAMAS, king of Thebes, in Bœotia, was son of Æolus. He married Themisto, whom some call Nephele, and Pindar, Demotice, and by her he had Phryxus and Helle. Some time after, on pretence that Nephele was subject to fits of madness, he married Ino, the daughter of Cadmus, by whom he had two sons, Learchus and Melicerta. Ino became jealous of the children of Nephele, because they were to ascend their father's throne in preference to her own therefore she resolved to destroy them; but they escaped from her fury to Colchis, on a golden ram. (Vid. Phryxus and Argonautæ.) According to the Greek scholiast of Lycophron, v. 22, Ino attempted to destroy the corn of the country and as if it were the consequence of divine vengeance, the soothsayers, at her instigation, told Athamas, that before the earth would yield her usual increase, he must sacrifice one of the children of Nephele to the gods The credulous father led Phryxus to the altar, where he was saved by Nephele The prosperity of Ino was displeasing to Juno, and more particularly because she was descended from Venus. The goddess therefore sent Tisiphone, one of the furies, to the house of Athamas, who became inflamed with such sudden fury, that he took Ino to be a lioness, and her two sons to be whelps. In this fit of madness, he snatched Learchus from her, and killed him against a wall; upon which, Ino fled with Melicerta, and, with him in her arms, she threw herself into the sea from a high rock, and was changed into a sea deity. After this, Athamas recovered the use of his senses; and as he was without children, he adopted Coronus and Alartus, the sons of Thersander his nephew. Hygin. fab. 1, 2, 5, 239.—Apollod. 1, 7 et 9.—Ovid. Met 4, 467, &c Fast. 6, 489.—Paus 9, 34. ——A servant of Atticus. Cic ad Attic Ep. 12, 10.——A stage dancer. Id Pis. 35.——A tragic poet. K. Pis. 20 ——One of the Greeks, concealed in the wooden horse at the siege of Troy. Virg. Æn. 2, 261.

ATHANASIUS, a native of Alexandria, who, though born of heathen parents, was educated in the christian faith, and at the age of twenty-eight became bishop of Alexandria, on the death of Alexander. He rendered himself celebrated for his sufferings, and the determined opposition he maintained against Arius and his doctrines. His writings, which were numerous, and some of which have perished, contain a defence of the mystery of the Trinity, the divinity of the Word and of the Holy Ghost, and an apology to Constantine. The creed which bears his name, is now generally allowed not to have been his Athanasius died 2d May, 373 A. D, after filling the archiepiscopal chair 47 years, and leading alternately a life of exile and of triumph The best edition of his works is that of Montfaucon, 3 vols. fol. Paris, 1698.

ATHANIS, a man who wrote an account of Sicily Athen. 3.

ATHEAS, a king of Scythia, who implored the assistance of Philip of Macedonia against the Istrians, and laughed at him when he had furnished him with an army. Justin 9, 2.

ATHENA, the name of Minerva among the Greeks; and also among the Egyptians, before Cecrops king of Athens had introduced the worship of the goddess into Greece. Paus. 1, 2.

ATHENÆ, a celebrated city of Attica, founded about 1556 years before the Christian era, by Cecrops and an Egyptian colony. At first it was called Cecropia, from the name of its founder; and afterwards Athenæ, in honour of the goddess Minerva, whom the Greeks called Athena, because she was the protectress of the city. It was first called Athens in the reign of Erichthonius. The city was first built on the summit of a high rock, probably to secure it from inundations. Afterwards, when the inhabitants increased in number, the whole plain was filled with buildings, which, on account of their situation, were called ἡ κάτω πόλις, or, the lower city; and Cecropia was then denominated ἡ ἄνω πόλις, or Ἀκρόπολις, the upper city. It was governed by seventeen kings in the following order:—After a reign of 50 years, Cecrops was succeeded by Cranaus, who began to reign 1506 B C; Amphictyon, 1497; Erichthonius, 1487; Pandion, 1437; Erichtheus, 1397; Cecrops II., 1347; Pandion II., 1307; Ægeus, 1283; Theseus, 1235, Menestheus, 1205; Demophoon, 1182, Oxyntes, 1149, Aphidas, 1137; Thymoetes, 1136, Melanthus, 112; and Codrus, 1091, who was killed after a reign of 21 years. The history of the twelve first of these monarchs is mostly fabulous After the death of Codrus, the monarchical power was abolished, and the state was governed by 13 perpetual, and 317 years after, by seven decennial, and lastly, 48 C 684, after an anarchy of three years, by annual magistrates, called Archons. (Vid. Archontes.) Under this democracy, the Athenians signalized themselves by their valour in the field, their munificence, and the cultivation of the fine arts. They were deemed so powerful by the Persians, that Xerxes, when he invaded Greece, chiefly directed his arms against Athens, which he took and burnt. Their military character was most conspicuously displayed in the battles of Marathon, of Salamis, of Platæa, and of Mycale. After these immortal victories, they rose in consequence and dignity, and they demanded the superiority in the affairs of Greece. The town was rebuilt and embellished by Themistocles, and a new and magnificent harbour erected. Their success made them arrogant, and they raised contentions among the neighbouring states, that they might aggrandize themselves by their fall. The luxury and intemperance which had been long excluded from the city by the salutary laws of their countrymen, Draco and Solon, crept by degrees among all ranks of people, and soon after all Greece united to destroy that city, which claimed a sovereign power over all the rest. The Peloponnesian war, though at first a private quarrel, was soon fomented into a universal war; and the arms of all the states of Peloponnesus (Vid. Peloponnesiacum Bellum), were directed against Athens, which, after 28 years of misfortunes and bloodshed, was totally ruined, the 24th April, 404 years before the Christian era, by Lysander. After this, the Athenians were oppressed by 30 tyrants, and for a while laboured under the weight of their own calamities. They recovered something of their usual spirit in the age of Philip, and boldly opposed his ambitious views; but their short-lived efforts were not of great service to the interest of Greece, and they fell into the hands of the Romans, B C. 86. The Athenians have been admired in all ages for their love of liberty, and for the great men that were born among them; but favour there, was attended with danger; and there are very few instances in the history of Athens, that can prove that the jealousy and frenzy of the people did not persecute and disturb the peace of the man who had fought their battles, and exposed his life in the defence of his country. Perhaps not one single city in the world can boast, in such a short space of time, of such a number of truly illustrious citizens, equally celebrated for their humanity, their learning, and their military abilities. The Romans, in the more polished ages of their republic, sent their youths to finish their education at Athens, and respected the learning, while they despised the military character of the inhabitants. The reputation which the Athenian schools had acquired under Socrates and Plato, was maintained by their degenerate and less learned successors; and they flourished with diminished lustre, till an edict of the emperor Justinian suppressed, with the Roman consulship, the philosophical meetings of the academy. It has been said by Plutarch, that the good men whom Athens produced, were the most just and equitable in the world, but that its bad citizens could not be surpassed in any age or country, for their impiety, perfidiousness, or cruelties. Their criminals were always put to death by drinking the juice of hemlock. The reputation for learning, for military valour, and for polished elegance, which Athens enjoyed during the splendid administration of Pericles, was tarnished by the corruption which this celebrated hero introduced. Prosperity was the forerunner of luxury and universal dissipation, every possible delicacy was drawn from distant nations, the wines of Cyprus, and the snows of Thrace, garlands of roses, perfumes, and a thousand effeminate arts of buffoonery and wit, which disgraced a Persian court, were introduced, instead of the coarse meals, the herbs and plain bread, which the laws of Solon had recommended, and which had nourished the heroes of Marathon and Salamis. The ancients, to distinguish Athens in a more particular manner, called it Asia, one of the eyes of Greece, the learned city, the school of the world, the common patroness of Greece. The Athenians thought themselves the most ancient nation of Greece, and supposed themselves the original inhabitants of Attica, for which reason they were called αὐτόχθονες, produced from the same earth which they inhabited, γηγενεῖς, sons of the earth, and ἀκρίται, grasshoppers. They sometimes wore golden grasshoppers in their hair, as badges of honour, to distinguish them from other people of later origin, and less noble extraction, because those insects are supposed to be sprung from the ground. The number of men able to bear arms in Athens, in the reign of Cecrops, was computed at 20,000, and there appeared no considerable augmentation in the more civilized age of Pericles; but in the time of Demetrius Phalereus, there were found 21,000 citizens, 10,000 foreigners, and 400,000 slaves. Among the numerous temples and public edifices none was more celebrated than that of Minerva, which after being burnt by the Persians, was re-built by Pericles, with the finest marble, and still exists a venerable monument of the hero's patriotism, and of the abilities of the architect. Cic. ad Attic. in Verr. &c.—Thucyd. 1, &c.—Justin. 2, &c.—Died 15, &c.—Elian V. H. 4, 6.—Plin 7, 56 —Xenoph. Memorab. —Plut. in vitis, &c —Strab. 9, &c.—Paus 1, &c. —Val. Max.—Luc, 3), &c.— C. Nep. in Milt, &c. —Polyb —Patercul.

ATHENÆA, festivals celebrated at Athens in honour of Minerva. One of them was called Panathenæa, and the other Chalcea; for an account of which see those words.

ATHENÆUM, a place at Athens, sacred to Minerva, where the poets, philosophers, and rhetoricians generally declaimed and repeated their compositions. It was public to all the professors of the liberal arts. The same thing was adopted at Rome by Adrian, who made a public building for the same laudable purposes. The Athenæa were built in the form of amphitheatres.——A promontory of Italy.——A fortified place between Ætolia and Macedonia. Liv. 35, 1. 39, 25

ATHENÆUS, a Greek cosmographer.——A peripatetic philosopher of Cilicia in the time of Augustus. Strab.——A Spartan sent by his countrymen to Athens, to settle the peace during the Peloponnesian war——A grammarian of Naucratis, who composed an elegant and miscellaneous work, called Deipnosophistæ, replete with very curious and interesting remarks and anecdotes of the manners of the ancients, and likewise valuable for the scattered pieces of ancient poetry which it preserves. The work consists of fifteen books, of which the two first and part of the third are come down to the present times only in an epitome. Athenæus wrote, besides this, a history of Syria, and other works now lost. He died A.D. 194. The best editions of his works are, that of Casaubon, Lugd. 1612, in 2 vols. fol.; that of Schweighæuser, Argent 1801—7, in 14 vols. 8vo; and that of Dindorf, Leip 1827, in 3 vols. 8vo.——A historian, who wrote an account of Semiramis. Diod.——A brother of king Eumenes II., famous for his paternal affection.——A mathematician, who flourished about B.C. 200. He wrote a treatise on engines of war, which he dedicated to Marcellus, the conqueror of Syracuse, and which still remains.——A physician of Cilicia, in the age of Pliny, who ascribed the human pulse to the agency of a spirit, or principle of vitality, which he supposed to be a fifth element in nature.

ATHENAGORAS, a Greek in the time of Darius, to whom Pharnabazus gave the government of Chios, &c. Curt. 8, 5.——A writer on agriculture. Varro.——An Athenian philosopher, who was converted to Christianity in the age of Aurelius, and wrote a treatise on the resurrection, and an Apology for the Christians, still extant. These writings prove him to have been a man of great erudition extensive application, and truly a master of the Attic style. He died A.D. 177. The best edition of his works is that of Dechair, 8vo, Oxon. 1706. The romance of Theagenes and Charia is falsely ascribed to him.

ATHENAIS, a Sibyl of Erythræa, in the age of Alexander. Strab.——A daughter of the philosopher Leontius.

ATHENION, a peripatetic philosopher, 103 B.C.——A general of the fugitive slaves in Sicily; whence Clodius is called by that name, as being the leader of slaves and low people at Rome. Cic. Verr. 3, 54. Horat. 1*l.* 2, 12.——A tyrant of Athens, surnamed Ariston.——A Greek historical painter, who flourished B.C. 300. Plin. Hist. Nat. 35, 40.——A comic poet. Athen. 24, 80.

ATHENOCLES, a general, &c Polyæn. 6.——A turner of Mitylene. Pen. 34.

ATHENODORUS, a philosopher intimate with Augustus, born at Cana near Tarsus in Cilicia. The emperor often profited by his lessons, and was advised by him always to repeat the twenty-four letters of the Greek alphabet, before he gave way to the impulse of anger. Zosimus ascribes the wisdom and moderation of Augustus' reign to the influence of the counsels of Athenodorus. Athenodorus died in his 82d year, much lamented by his countrymen, for whom he had obtained relief from some of the taxes by which they were oppressed. Suet.——A poet, who wrote comedy, tragedy, and elegy, in the age of Alexander. Plut. in Alex——A stoic philosopher of Tarsus, who lived about B.C. 50. He was keeper of the public library at Pergamus, and the intimate friend of Cato of Utica, by whom he was persuaded to take an active part in the war which the latter had undertaken for the restoration of Roman liberty. He died with Cato. Strab.——A marble sculptor.——A man assassinated at Bactra for making himself absolute.

ATHEOS, a surname of Diagoras and Theodorus, because they denied the existence of a deity. Cic de Nat. D. 1, 1.

ATHERIUS, or ATERIUS, a lawyer in the time of Cicero. Cic. Fam. 9, 18.

ATESIS, a river of Cisalpine Gaul, rising in the Rhætian Alps, and falling into the Adriatic sea, a little north of the Po. It is now the Adige. Virg. Æn. 9, 680.

ATHOS, a mountain in the Chalcidian district of Macedonia. It is situated between the Sinus Strymonicus, or Gulf of Contessa, and the Sinus Singiticus, or Gulf of Monte Santo, on a mountainous promontory, which is connected with the mainland by an isthmus of twelve stadia. Plutarch and Pliny have both asserted that it is so high as to project its shadow, during the summer solstice, into the market place of Myrina in Lemnos, a distance of 87 miles. On this account a brazen cow was erected at the termination of the shadow, with this inscription:

Ἄθως καλλύτρει πλευρὰ λημνίας βοός.

In the first armament of the Persians against Greece, the fleet of Mardonius, in doubling the promontory of Athos, was dispersed by a storm, and lost no less than 300 vessels, and 20,000 men. Xerxes, in his expedition, was resolved to secure himself against this danger, and he cut a canal through the mountain, sufficient to admit two galleys abreast, each of three banks of oars. Antiquity has not failed to extol in terms of wonder this great work: and though Juvenal ranks it with the other fables to which the expedition of Xerxes gave rise, its existence is too well attested by Herodotus, and subsequent writers, as well as by the remains of it which are yet visible, to be considered as a subject of doubt. We must not here omit the daring proposal of Dinocrates, an engineer in the service of Alexander, who offered to convert the whole mountain into a statue of that prince. The enormous figure, which must have been in a sitting posture, was to hold a city in his left hand, containing 10,000 inhabitants, and in the right, an immense basin, whence the collected torrents of the mountain should issue in a mighty river. But the project was thought to be too extravagant, even by Alexander. Athos is now called Monte Santo, from the number of religious houses built round it. Herod. 6, 44. 7, 21, &c —Juv. Sat. 10, 174.—Lucan. 2, 672.—Ælian de Anim. 13, 20, &c.—Plin. 4, 10.—Æschin. contra Ctesiph.

ATHULLA, a town of Arabia. Strab.

ATHYMBRA, a city of Caria, af erwards called Nysa. Strab. 14.

ATHYR, an Egyptian deity, the same as Venus, or the Urania of the Greeks. Plut. in Is. et Osirid

ATIA, a city of Campania.——A law enacted A.U.C. 690, by T. Atius Labienus, the tribune of the people It abolished the Cornelian law, and put in full force the Lex Domitia, by transferring the right of electing priests from the college of priests to the people ——The mother of Augustus, daughter of Atius Balbus, by Julia, Julius Cæsar's sister. The family of the Atii, to which she belonged, is made, by the flattery of Virgil, to descend from Atys the companion of Ascanius Vid Accia.

ATILIA LEX gave the prætor and a majority of the tribunes power of appointing guardians to those minors who were not previously provided for by their parents. It was enacted about A. U. C. 560.——Another, A. U. C 443, which gave the people power of electing 20 tribunes of the soldiers in four legions. Liv 9, 30 ——The family of the Atilii was plebeian, but distinguished by the military conduct of some of its members One of them, Marcus, is mentioned by Livy, 1, 17, and 19, and another by Cicero, Fin. 2, 34.

ATILIUS, a freedman, who exhibited combats of gladiators at Fidenæ The amphitheatre, which contained the spectators, fell during the exhibition, and about 50,000 persons were either killed or mutilated. Tacit. Ann. 4, 62.

ATILLA, the mother of the poet Lucan. She was accused of conspiracy by her son who expected to clear himself of the charge Tacit. Ann 15, 56.

ATINA, an ancient town of the Volsci, one of the first which began hostilities against Æneas. Virg. Æn 7, 630.

ATINAS, a friend of Turnus, &c. Virg. Æn. 11, 490.

ATINIA LEX, was enacted by the tribune Atinius, A U C 623. It gave a tribune of the people the privileges of a senator, and the right of sitting in the senate.——Another, which permitted the reclaiming of stolen goods, &c. Cic. Varr. 1, 42.—Gellius. 17, 7.

ATLANTES, a people of Africa, in the neighbourhood of mount Atlas, who lived chiefly on the fruits of the earth, and were said not to have their sleep at all disturbed by dreams. They daily cursed the sun at his rising and at his setting, because his excessive heat scorched and tormented them. Herod.

ATLANTIADES, a patronymic of Mercury as grandson of Atlas Ovid Met. 1, 639.

ATLANTIDES, a people of Africa, near mount Atlas. They boasted of being in possession of the country in which all the gods of antiquity received their birth. Uranus was their first king, whom on account of his knowledge of astronomy, they enrolled in the number of their gods Diod 3 ——The daughters of Atlas, seven in number, Maia, Electra, Taygeta, Asterope, Merope, Alcyone, and Celæno. They married some of the gods, and most illustrious heroes, and their children were founders of many nations and cities. The Atlantides were called nymphs, and even goddesses, on account of their great intelligence and knowledge. The name of Hesperides was also given them, on account of their mother Hesperis They were made constellations after death. (Vid. Pleiades.) Some of the ancients have called the Fortunate Islands Atlantides, and have placed there the Elysian fields. They are the same as the Hesperides of Pliny, which he describes as situate in the Atlantic ocean.

ATLANTIS, an island mentioned by the ancients. Plato gives an account of it in his Timæus and Critias. He describes it as a large island in the western ocean, 30,000 stadia in length, and 2000 in breadth; as lying opposite to the straits of Gades, or Gibraltar, as exceedingly fertile and productive, and abounding in metals and trees. He further states that it was governed by a race of mighty conquerors, who subdued all Europe as far as the borders of Asia Minor, and all Libya to the frontiers of Egypt. At last, however, it sunk under water, and for a long time afterwards the sea in that quarter was full of shoals. Its reality and local situation have given occasion to many different opinions. Amongst those who have maintained its actual existence, some have conjectured that it referred to America, and others to certain lands which once united Ireland to the Azores, and the latter to the mainland of the New World. Others, however, are of opinion that Atlantis is the same with the peninsula of Sweden and Norway, while some have not scrupled to place it even in more desolate regions, at Iceland, Greenland, Nova Zembla, or Spitzbergen. But it appears far more probable that it never had any existence except in the fanciful imaginations of the poets, or the conjectural speculations of calculating philosophers. Plat in Timæo —Aristot. Meteor. 2, 1. De cœlo, 2, 13.—Ælian. V. Hist. 3, 17.— Strab. 2. —Plin 2, 90. 6, 31.

ATLAS, one of the Titans, son of Japetus and Clymene, one of the Oceanides He was brother to Epimetheus, Prometheus, and Menœtius. His mother's name, according to Apollodorus, was Asia. He married Pleione, daughter of Oceanus, or Hesperis, according to others, by whom he had seven daughters, called Atlantides. (Vid. Atlantides.) He was king of Mauritania, and master of a thousand flocks of every kind, as also of beautiful gardens, abounding in every species of fruit, which he had entrusted to the care of a dragon. Perseus, after the conquest of the Gorgons, passed by the palace of Atlas, and claimed his hospitality; but the king, having been warned by an oracle that he should be dethroned by a descendant of Jupiter, not only refused to admit Perseus, but treated him with great violence. Perseus, being altogether unequal in strength to his adversary, showed him Medusa's head, and thus changed him instantly into a large mountain, which was imagined to have been so high that the heavens rested upon its top, and Atlas was therefore said to bear the world on his shoulders. Hyginus says, that Atlas assisted the giants in their wars against the gods for which Jupiter compelled him to bear the world on his shoulders. The fable concerning Atlas is thought to have arisen from his cultivation of astronomy, and his intimate knowledge of the motions of the heavenly bodies, which induced him to frequent elevated places, for the sake of making observations When the daughters of Atlas were carried away by Busiris, king of Egypt, and recovered by Hercules, the latter hero received, as a reward from the father, the knowledge of astronomy, and having communicated this knowledge to the Greeks, he was said in mythological language, to have eased for some time the labours of Atlas, by taking the whole weight of the heavens upon his shoulders.

According to some authors, there were two other persons of that name, a king of Italy, father of Electra, and a king of Arcadia father of Maia, the mother of Mercury. Virg. Æn. 4. 48. 8, 186.—Ovid. Met. 4, fab 17.—Diod. 3.—Lucan. 9, 607.—Val. Flacc. 5, 409.—Hygin 83, 125, 155, 167, 192.—Aratus in Antron.—Apollod 1.—Hesiod. Theog. 508, &c.——A river flowing from mount Hæmus into the Ister. Herod. 4, 49.

ATOSSA, a daughter of Cyrus, who was one of the wives of Cambyses, of Smerdis, and afterwards of Darius, by whom she had Xerxes. She was cured of a dangerous cancer by Democedes. She is supposed by some to be the Vashti of scripture Herod 3, 68, &c.

ATRACES, a people of Ætolia, who received their name from Atrax, son of Ætolus. Their country was called Atracia.

ATRAMYTTIUM, a town of Mysia.

ATROPES, an officer of Alexander, who, at the general division of the provinces, received Media. Diod. 18.

ATRAX, son of Ætolus, or, according to others, of the river Peneus. He was king of Thessaly, and built a town which he called Atrax or Atracia. This town became so famous that the word Atracius has been applied to any inhabitant of Thessaly. He was father of Hippodamia, who married Pirithous, and whom we must not confound with the wife of Pelops, who bore the same name. Propert El. 1, 8, 25.—Stat. Theb. 1, 106.—Ovid. Met 12, 209.—Val. Flacc. 6, 447.——A city of Thessaly, whence the epithet of Atracius.——A giver of Ætolia, which falls into the Ionian sea.

ATREBATÆ, a people of Britain, south west of the Trinobantes. They are placed by some antiquaries in what is now Berkshire, by others in Oxfordshire, and by others in part of both. Their capital was Calliva, now Wallingford

ATREBATES, a people of Gaul, who together with the Nervii, opposed J. Cæsar with 15,000 men. They were conquered, and Comius, a friend of the general, was set over them as king. They were reinstated in their former liberty and independence, on account of the services of Comius Their chief city was Nemetacum, afterwards Atrebates, now Arras Cæs Bell Gall. 2, &c.

ATRENI, a people of Armenia.

ATREUS, a son of Pelops by Hippodamia, daughter of Œnomaus, king of Pisa, was king of Mycenæ, and brother to Pittheus, Trœzen, Thyestes, and Chrysippus. As Chrysippus was an illegitimate son and at the same time a favourite of his father, Hippodamia resolved to destroy him. She persuaded her sons Thyestes and Atreus to murder him; and they accordingly threw him headlong into a well. Others, however, say that they resisted their mother's injunctions with horror; and that Hippodamia, exasperated at their refusal, embrued her own hands in the blood of Chrysippus. This murder was grievous to Pelops; he suspected his two sons, who fled away from his presence. Atreus retired to the court of Eurystheus, king of Argos, his nephew, and upon his death he succeeded him on the throne. He married, as some report, Ærope, his predecessor's daughter, by whom he had Plisthenes, Menelaus, and Agamemnon. Others affirm that Ærope was the wife of Plisthenes, by whom she had Agamemnon and Menelaus, who are the reputed sons of Atreus, because that prince took care of their education, and brought them up as his own (Vid. Plisthenes.) Thyestes had followed his brother to Argos, where he lived with him, and debauched his wife, by whom he had two, or, according to some, three children. This incestuous commerce offended Atreus, and Thyestes was banished from his court. He was, however soon after recalled by his brother, who determined cruelly to revenge the violence offered to his bed. To effect this purpose, he invited his brother to a sumptuous feast, where Thyestes was served up with the flesh of the children he had had by his sister-in-law the queen After the repast was finished, the arms and the heads of the murdered children were produced, to convince Thyestes of what he had feasted upon This action appeared so cruel and impious, that the sun is said to have shrunk back in his course at the bloody sight. Thyestes immediately fled to the court of Thesprotus, and thence to Sicyon, where he ravished his own daughter Pelopea, in a grove sacred to Minerva, without knowing who she was. This incest he committed intentionally, as some report, to revenge himself on his brother Atreus, according to the words of the oracle, which promised him satisfaction for the cruelties he had suffered, only from the hand of a son who should be born of himself and his own daughter. Pelopea brought forth a son, whom she called Ægisthus, and soon after she married Atreus, who had lost his wife. Atreus adopted Ægisthus, and sent him to murder Thyestes, who had been seized at Delphi, and imprisoned Thyestes knew his son, and made himself known to him; he made him espouse his cause, and instead of becoming his father's murderer, he rather avenged his wrongs, and returned to Atreus, whom he assassinated. (Vid. Thyestes, Ægisthus, Pelopea, Agamemnon, and Menelaus) Hygin fab. 83, 86, 87, 88 et 258.—Euripd. in Orest. in Iphig. Taur.—Virg. in Parall.—Paus 9, 40.—Apollod. 3, 10.—Senec in Atr.—Pindar Olymp.

ATRIDÆ, a patronymic given by Homer to Agamemnon and Menelaus, as being the sons of Atreus. This is false, upon the authority of Hesiod, Lactantius, Dictys of Crete, &c., who maintain that these princes were not the sons of Atreus, but of Plisthenes, and that they were brought up in the house and under the eye of their grandfather. Vid Plisthenes.

ATRONIUS, a friend of Turnus, killed by the Trojans. Virg. Æn 10.

ATROPATENE, or ATROPATIA, a name given to the north-western part of Media, between mount Taurus and the Caspian sea. It is said to have taken this name from Atropates, a governor of this province, who, after the death of Alexander, rendered himself independent, and assumed the title of king, which his successors enjoyed for a long period of time. It was a cold, barren, and inhospitable country, and on that account allotted by Shalmanezer for the residence of many captive Israelites, after the conquest of their kingdom. Its inhabitants were good soldiers, and its kings could bring into the field 40,000 foot and 20 000 horse. It is now called Aserbyan Its chief city was Gaza, now known as Tabriz. Strab 11.—Polyb 5

ATROPOS, one of the Parcæ, daughters of Nox and Erebus. According to the derivation of her name, (a non, τρέπω muto) she is inexorable and inflexible, and her duty among the three sisters is to cut the thread of life without any regard to sex, age, or quality. She was represented by the ancients in a black veil, with a pair of scissars in her hand. (Vid Parcæ.) Stat. Theb. 3, 67. 4. Sylv. 8, 18.—Hesiod. Theog. 217.

T. Q ATTA, a writer of merit in the Augustan age, who seems to have received this name from some deformity in his legs or feet. His compositions, dramatical as well as satirical, were held in universal admiration, though Horace speaks of them with indifference. He was buried two miles from Rome, on the road that leads to Praeneste Only one verse is preserved of all his compositions. Horat. 2*sep.* 1, 79.

ATTALIA, a city of Pamphylia, south-west of Perga, built by king Attalus. It was visited by St Paul during his labours in Asia Minor. It is now Adalia, or Satalia. Strab.

ATTALICUS. Vid Attalus III.

ATTALUS I, king of Pergamus, succeeded Eumenes I. He defeated the Gauls who had invaded his dominions, and extended his conquests to mount Taurus. He made an alliance with the Romans, whom he vigorously assisted in their two wars against Philip of Macedon. In conjunction with the Athenians, he invaded Macedonia, and recalled Philip from his enterprise undertaken against Athens; a service which gained him a profusion of honours from the Athenians, who even named one of their tribes after him. He died at Pergamus, after a reign of 44 years, B C 197 Liv. 26, 27, 28, &c —Polyb. 5.—Strab. 13.——The 2d of that name was sent on an embassy to Rome by his brother Eumenes II., and at his return was appointed guardian to his nephew Attalus III, who was then an infant. Prusias made successful war against him, and seized his capital; but the conquest was stopped by the interference of the Romans, who restored Attalus to his throne. Attalus, who has received the name of Philadelphus, from his fraternal love, was a munificent patron of learning, and the founder of several cities. He was poisoned by his nephew in the 82d year of his age, B. C. 133. He had governed the nation with great prudence and moderation for 20 years. Strab 13.—Polyb. 5.——The 3d succeeded to the kingdom of Pergamus, by the murder of Attalus II, and made himself odious by his cruelty to his relations, and his wanton exercise of power. He was son to Eumenes II., and surnamed Philometer, from his affection towards his mother. He left the cares of government to cultivate his garden, and to make experiments on the melting of metals. He lived in great amity with the Romans; and as he died without issue by his wife Berenice, he left in his will the words Ionorum meorum Populus Romanus heres esto, which the Romans interpreted to mean the kingdom of Pergamus, and therefore took possession of it, B.C. 133, and made of it a Roman province, which they governed by a proconsul. From this circumstance, whatever was valuable as an acquisition, or ample and magnificent as a fortune, was always called by the epithet of Attalicus. Attalus, as well as his predecessors, made themselves celebrated for the valuable libraries which they collected at Pergamus, and for the patronage which merit and virtue always found at their court. Liv. 24, &c —Plin 7, 8, 33, &c.—Propert. 3, el. 18, 19.—Justin 39.—Horat. Od. 1, 1 ——An officer in Alexander's army. Curt. 4, 13.——Another, very inimical to Alexander. He was put to death by Parmenio, and Alexander was accused of the murder. Curt. 6, 9. 6, 1.——A philosopher, preceptor to Seneca Senec. ep. 108 ——An astronomer of Rhodes.

ATTARRAS, an officer who seized those that had conspired with Dymnus against Alexander. Curt 6.

ATTEIUS CAPITO, a consul in the age of Augustus, who wrote treatises on sacerdotal laws, public courts of justice, and the duty of a senator. Vid. Ateius

ATTES, a son of Calaus of Phrygia, who was born impotent. He introduced the worship of Cybele among the Lydians, and became a great favourite of the goddess. Jupiter was jealous of his success, and sent a wild boar to lay waste the country and destroy Attes. Paus 7, 17.

ATTHIS, a daughter of Cranaus II., king of Athens, who gave her name to Attica, according to Apollod. 3, 14.—Paus 1, 2.——A girl beloved by Sappho. Ovid. Ep. 15, 18.

ATTICA, a country of Greece, bounded on the west by Megaris; on the north by Bœotia and the Euripus; on the east by part of the Ægean sea; and on the south by the Sinus Saronicus. It extended in length about sixty miles, and in breadth about fifty six. It is said to have derived its name from Atthis, a daughter of Cranaus, one of its earliest kings, or from Aktè, littus, owing to its maritime situation, but its earlier appellations were Mopsopia, from the hero Mopsopus, and Cecropia, from its king Cecrops. The most famous of its cities is called Athens, whose inhabitants sometimes bear the name of Attici. The face of the country was partly level and partly mountainous, and the unfruitfulness of the soil so great as to require indefatigable industry to produce the common necessaries of life. Attica was anciently divided into four φυλαι, or tribes, which were afterwards increased to ten, and latterly to twelve, each being named after some Athenian hero, and having its separate chief; these were again subdivided into δημοι, or townships, to the number of one hundred and seventy-four. (Vid. Athenæ.) Strab. 9.—Plin. 4, 7. 7, 56.—Paus. 1, 2.—Apollod. 3. 26, &c.—Lucan. 3, 286.—Ovid. Met. 6, 70.—Mart. 11, ep. 43.—Horat. Od. 2, 1, 12.

ATTICUS, one of Galba's servants, who entered his palace with a bloody sword, and declared he had killed Otho. Tacit. Hist. 1.——(Te Pomponius) a celebrated Roman knight to whom Cicero wrote a great number of letters, which contained the general history of the age. They are now extant, and divided into 17 books. In the time of Marius and Sylla, Atticus retired to Athens, where he so endeared himself to the citizens by his kindness and liberality, that his departure was the signal for general mourning, and statues were erected to his honour, in commemoration of his great munificence. He was such a perfect master of the Greek writers, and spoke their language so fluently, that he was surnamed Atticus, and as a proof of his learning, he favoured the world with some of his compositions. He behaved in such a disinterested manner, that he offended neither of the inimical parties at Rome, and both were equally anxious of courting his approbation. He lived in the greatest intimacy with the illustrious men of his age, and was such a lover of truth, that he not only abstained from falsehood even in a joke, but treated with the greatest contempt and indignation a lying tongue. Neither the fear of tyrants, nor the jealousy of adversaries, made him forget the feelings of friendship; he not only protected, but also relieved Brutus in his distresses, when the whole empire had deserted his cause for that of his more successful rival; and he extended his regard and his liberality with the same humane views to Cicero, as well as to Fulvia, the wife of his inveterate enemy. It is said that he refused to take aliments when unable to get the better of a painful disorder of the intestines, and died in his 77th year, B. C 32, after bearing the amiable character of peace-maker among his friends. Atticus married in his 53d year and had an only daughter, whom he married to Agrippa the friend of Augustus. His grand-daughter by this marriage, as soon as born, was betrothed by Augustus to Tiberius. Cornelius Nepos, one of his intimate friends, has written a minute account of his life, and without doubt, in that circumstantial history, the character of Atticus appears, next to Socrates, the most humane, amiable, and benevolent amongst the records of the heathen ages Cic. ad Attic &c.——Herodes, an Athenian in the age of the Antonines, descended from Miltiades, and celebrated for his munificence His great richness arose from a marriage with a woman of opulence, as well as from an immense treasure which he discovered buried under an old house, and which the virtuous Nerva, rather than claim, permitted him to use as he pleased. His son of the same name was honoured with the consulship, and he generously erected an aqueduct at Troas, of which he had been made governor by the emperor Adrian, and raised in other parts of the empire several public buildings, as useful as they were magnificent. Philostrat in vit. 2, p. 548.—A. Gell. Noct Att ——A consul in the age of Nero, &c. Tacit Ann 15.

ATTILA, a celebrated king of the Huns, a nation in the southern parts of Scythia, who invaded the Roman empire in the reign of Valentinian with an army of 500 000 men and laid waste the provinces. He took the town of Aquileia, and marched against Rome; but his retreat and peace were purchased with a large sum of money by the feeble emperor. Attila, who boasted in the appellation of the scourge of God, died A.D. 453, of an uncommon effusion of blood the first night of his nuptials. He had expressed his wish to extend his conquests over the whole world; and he often feasted his barbarity by dragging captive kings in his train. Attila's body, deposited in a golden coffin, cased by another of silver, and a third of iron, was buried in the midst of a large plain; and like that of Alaric his grave was filled with the most magnificent spoils obtained by conquest and war; and after the ceremony, the barbarous Huns, desirous of concealing the tomb of their monarch, slaughtered all those who had attended the funeral. Jornand. de Reb. Get.

ATTILIUS, a Roman consul in the first Punic war. Vid. Regulus.——Calatinus, a Roman consul who fought the Carthaginian fleet.——Marcus, a poet, who translated the Electra of Sophocles into Latin verse, and wrote comedies whose unintelligible language procured him the appellation of Ferreus.——Regulus, a Roman censor who built a temple to the goddess of concord. Liv. 23, 23, &c.——The name of Attilius was common among the Romans, and many of the public magistrates are called Attili; their life, however, is not famous for any illustrious event.

ATTINAS, an officer set over Bactriana by Alexander. Curt. 8.

ATTIUS PELIGNUS, an officer of Cæsar. Cæs. Bell. Civ. 1.——Tullius, the general of the Volsci, to whom Coriolanus fled when banished from Rome. Liv.——Varus, seized Auximum in Pompey's name, whence he was expelled. After this he fled to Africa, which he alienated from J. Cæsar. Cæs Bell Civ. 1.——A poet. Vid. Accius.——The family of the Attii was descended from Atys, one of the companions of Æneas, according to the opinion which Virgil has adopted. Æn. 5, 568.

ATURUS, a river of Gaul, now the Adour, which runs at the foot of the Pyrenean mountains into the bay of Biscay. Lucan 1, 420.

ATYADÆ, the descendants of Atys the Lydian.

ATYS, an ancient king of Lydia, who sent away his son Tyrrhenus, with a colony of Lydians, who settled in Italy. Strab 5.—Herod. 1, 7 ——A son of Croesus king of Lydia He was forbidden the use of all weapons by his father, who had dreamt that he was killed by some military weapon Some time after this, Atys prevailed on his father to permit him to go to hunt a wild boar which laid waste the country of Mysia, and he was killed in the attempt by Adrastus, whom Croesus had appointed guardian over his son, and thus the apprehensions of the monarch were realised. Herod. 1, 34, &c. (Vid. Adrastus.)——A Trojan, who came to Italy with Æneas, and is supposed to be the progenitor of the family of the Attii at Rome. Virg. Æn. 5, 568 ——A youth, to whom Ismene the daughter of Œdipus was promised in marriage. He was killed by Tydeus before his nuptials Stat. Theb 8, 598.——A son of Limniace, the daughter of the river Ganges, who assisted Cepheus in preventing the marriage of Andromeda, and was killed by Perseus with a burning log of wood. Ovid. Met. 5, 47.——A celebrated shepherd of Phrygia of whom the mother of the gods, generally called Cybele, became enamoured. She entrusted him with the care of her temple, and made him promise that he always would live in celibacy. He violated his vow by an amour with the nymph Sangaris, for which the goddess punished him by making him so delirious, that he castrated himself with a sharp stone. This was afterwards intentionally done by his sacerdotal successors in the service of Cybele, to prevent their breaking their vows of perpetual chastity. This account is the most general and most approved. Others say, that the goddess became fond of Atys, because he had introduced her festivals in the greatest part of Asia Minor, and that she herself mutilated him. Pausanias relates, in Achaic. 17, that Atys was the son of the daughter of the Sangar, who became pregnant by putting the bow of an almond tree in her bosom. Jupiter, as the passage mentions, once had an amorous dream, and some of the impurity of the god fell upon the earth, which soon after produced a monster of an human form, with the characteristics of the two sexes. This monster was called Agdistis, and was deprived by the gods of those parts which distinguish the male sex. From the mutilated parts which were thrown upon the ground, rose an almond tree, one of whose branches a nymph of the Sangar gathered, and placed in her bosom as mentioned above. Atys, as soon as born, was exposed in a wood, but preserved by a she-goat. The genius Agdistis saw him in the wood, and was captivated with his beauty. As Atys was going to celebrate his nuptials with the daughter of the king of Pessi-nus, Agdistis, who was jealous of his rival, inspired by his enchantments the king and his future son-in-law with such an uncommon fury, that they both attacked and mutilated one another in the struggle. Ovid says, Met. 10, fab. 2, &c., that Cybele changed Atys into a pine-tree, as he was going to lay violent hands upon himself, and ever after that tree was sacred to the mother of the gods After his death, Atys received divine honours, and temples were raised to his memory, particularly at Dymæ Catull. de Aty et Berec.—Ovid. Met 10, fab. 3. Fast. 4, 223, &c.—Lucian. in Dea Syria ——Sylvius, son of Albius Sylvius, was king of Alba Liv 1, 3.

AUFEIA AQUA, called afterwards Marcia, was the sweetest and most wholesome water in Rome, and it was first conveyed into the city by Ancus Martius.

AUFIDENA, a town of Samnium, and the capital of the Caraceni, situate on the Sagrus, or Sangro It was taken by the Romans, A U C. 454. Liv. 10 12.

AUFIDIA LEX, was enacted by the tribune Aufidius Lurco, A U.C. 692. It ordained, that if any candidate, in canvassing for an office, promised money to a tribe, and did not pay it, he should be excused; but if he did pay it, he should be obliged to pay to every tribe a yearly fine of 3000 sesterces as long as he lived.

AUFIDIUS, an effeminate person of Chios. Juv. 9, 25 ——Bassus, a famous historian in the age of Quintilian, who wrote an account of Germany, and of the civil wars.——Cn., a senator of prætorian rank, who, though blind, used to deliver his opinion in the senate, and wrote a Greek history. When very old, he adopted Orestes. Cic Tusc. 5, 39. Fin. 19.—Dom. 113.——M. Lurco, a man who made an annual income of 60,000 sesterces, by fattening peacocks. Varro. R. R. 3, 6.—Plin. 10, 20.——Lucius, a man obscurely born, and made a prætor of Fundi, in the age of Horace 1 Sat. 5, 34.

AUFIDUS, a river of Apulia, falling into the Adriatic sea, and now called Ofanto. It was on its banks that the Romans were defeated by Hannibal at Cannæ. The spot on which the battle was fought, which is on the north side of the river, is still shown by the inhabitants to the curious traveller, and bears the name of the field of blood. Horat. Od. 3, 30. 4, 9.—Virg. Æn. 11, 405.

AUGA and AUGE and AUGEA, daughter of Aleus king of Tegea, by Neæra, was ravished by Hercules, and brought forth a son, whom she exposed in the woods to conceal her amours from her father The child was preserved and called Telephus Aleus was informed of his daughter's shame, and gave her to Nauplius to be put to death. Nauplius refused to perform the cruel office, and gave Auga to Teuthras, king of Mysia, who, being without issue, adopted her as his daughter. Some time after the dominions of Teuthras were invaded by an enemy, and the king promised his crown and daughter to him who could deliver him from the impending calamity. Telephus, who had been directed by the oracle to go to the court of Teuthras, if he wished to find his parents, offered his services to the king, and they were accepted. As he was going to unite himself to Auge, in consequence of the victory he had obtained, Auge rushed from him with secret horror, and the gods sent a serpent to separate them. Auge implored the aid of Hercules, who made her son known to her, and she returned with him to Tegea. Pausanias says, that Auge was confined in a coffer with her infant son, and thrown into the sea, where, after being preserved and protected by Minerva, she was found by king Teuthras. Apollod. 2 et 3.—Paus. 8, 4.—Hygin. fab. 99 et 100.

AUGARUS, an Arabian, who for his good offices, obtained the favours of Pompey, whom he wisely deceived. Dio.——A king of Osroene, whom Caracalla imprisoned, after he had given him solemn promises of friendship and support Dio 78.

AUGEÆ, a town of Laconia. Paus. 3, 21.——Another of Locris.

AUGIAS and AUGEAS, son of Eleus, or Elius, was one of the Argonauts, and afterwards ascended the throne of Elis. He had an immense number of oxen and goats, and the stables in which they were kept had never been cleaned for 30 years, so that the task seemed an impossibility to any man. Hercules undertook it, on promise of receiving as a reward the tenth part of the herds of Augias, or something equivalent. The hero changed the course of the river Alpheus, or, according to others, of the Peneus, which immediately carried away the dung and filth from the stables. Augias refused the promised recompense on pretence that Hercules made use of artifice, and had not experienced any labour or trouble, and he farther drove his own son Phyleus from his kingdom, because he supported the claims of the hero. The refusal was a declaration of war. Hercules conquered Elis, put to death Augias, and gave the crown to Phyleus. Pausanias says, 5, 2 et 3, that Hercules spared the life of Augias for the sake of his son, and that Phyleus went to settle in Dulichium, and that at the death of Augias, his other son, Agasthenes, succeeded to the throne. Augias received, after his death, the honours which were generally paid to a hero, Augias has been called the son of Sol, because Elius signifies the sun. The proverb of Augean stable is now applied to an impossibility. Hygin. fab. 14, 30, 157.—Plin. 17, 9.—Strab 8.—Apollod 2

AUGILÆ, an oasis in the deserts of Marmarica, with a town called Augila.

AUGINUS, a mountain of Liguria. Liv. 39, 2.

AUGUR, SENT. a poet Vid. Sentius

AUGURES, certain officers at Rome who foretold future events, whence their name, ab avium garritu. They were first created by Romulus, to the number of three Servius Tullius added a fourth, and the tribunes of the people, A U. C. 454, increased the number to nine; and Sylla added six more during his dictatorship They had a particular college, and the chief amongst them was called Magister collegii. Their office was honourable; and if any one of them was convicted of any crime, he could not be deprived of his privileges; an indulgence granted to no other sacerdotal body at Rome. The robe of an augur was a mixture of purple and scarlet, called the trabea He wore a conical cap; and when exercising the duties of his office, he held in his hand the lituus, a staff neatly incurvated at the top. He made his observations on the heavens usually in the dead of night, or about twilight. He took his station on an eminence, where the view was open on all sides; and to make it so, buildings were sometimes pulled down. Having first offered up sacrifices, and uttered a solemn prayer, he sat down with his head covered, and with his face directed to the east, or, according to Varro, to the south With his lituus he circumscribed a space in the sky, beyond which he suffered not his eyes to wander. This imaginary space was named templum. There were generally five things from which the augurs drew omens: the first consisted in observing the appearances in the sky, such as thunder, lightning, comets, &c The second kind of omen was drawn from the singing or flight of birds The third was from the sacred chickens, whose eagerness or indifference in eating the food which was set before them, was looked upon as lucky or unlucky. The fourth was from the motions of particular quadrupeds, such as a wolf carrying something in his mouth, a hare crossing a road, a strange dog coming into a house, &c The fifth was from uncommon accidents, which were called diræ, such as sneezing, spilling oil, salt, or honey, &c Omens on the left were generally accounted propitious by the Romans; but the Greeks thought omens on the right more favourable. The reason commonly assigned for this apparent discrepancy, is, that the former looked towards the south, and the latter to the north, when they made observations; so that the east, the quarter whence they looked for happy omens, was to the right of the one, and to the left of the other. Cic de Div.—Liv. 1, &c.—Dionys Hal.—Ovid Fast.

AUGUSTA AUSCIORUM, a town of Gaul, now Auch.——Emerita, a town of Lusitania, built on the Anas, and colonized by veteran soldiers. It is now Merida.——Prætoria, a town of Gallia Cisalpina, built on the site of Varro's camp, and colonized by Prætorian soldiers. It is now Aosta——Rauracorum, a town of Gaul, on the Rhenus, or Rhine, now Augst——Suessionum, a town of Gaul, on the Axona, or Aisne, now Soissons.——Taurinorum, a town of Gallia Cisalpina, or the Padus, or Po, now Turin.——Trevirorum, a town of Belgica Prima, on the Mosella, or Moselle, now Treves——Vagiennorum, a town of Liguria, now Bene——Veromanduorum, a town of Belgica Secunda, now St Quentin——Vindelicorum, the metropolis of Vindelicia, at the junction of the Licus, or Lech, and the Vindo, or Wertach. It is now Augsburg.——London, as capital of the country of the Trinobantes, was called Augusta Trinobantina.——Messalina, famous for her debaucheries, was called Augusta, as wife of the emperor Claudius. Jun. 6, 118.

AUGUSTĀLIA, a festival at Rome, in commemoration of the day on which Augustus returned to Rome, after he had established peace over the different parts of the empire. It was celebrated on the 27th of September.

AUGUSTINUS, a native of Tagestum, the wildness and debaucheries of whose early years threatened the most fatal consequences to the honour and peace of his family By the repeated admonitions of a pious mother, however, and his own reflections, he applied himself to study, and having passed into Italy, he became, from a heathen reprobate, a convert to christianity, and a most devout and zealous supporter of the doctrines and morality of the religion which he embraced. He was at last admitted priest, in 391; and soon after became bishop of Hippo in Africa. In his character, Augustin was mild and humane, he betrayed no intemperate violence against heretics, but wisely considered that every liberal allowance should be made for the failings and prejudices of mankind. In his works, which are numerous, he displayed the powers of a great genius, and an extensive acquaintance with the philosophy of Plato. He died in the 76th year of his age, A. D. 430. The best edition of his works is that of the Benedict. fol. Ant. 1700 to 1703, 12 vols.

AUGUSTODŪNUM, now Autun, a town of Gaul, the capital of the Ædui.

AUGUSTORĪTUM, a town of Aquitania, now Limoges

AUGUSTŪLUS, son of Orestes, a general of the Roman emperor Julius Nepos. Orestes deposed the emperor, and placed his son upon the throne, A. D 475 In the following year, Odoacer, a commander of the German forces in the Roman service, revolted, put Orestes to death, obliged Augustulus to resign, and thus put an end to the Roman empire in the west.

AUGUSTUS OCTAVIANUS CÆSAR, second emperor of Rome, was son of Octavius a senator, and Accia, daughter of Julius, and sister to Julius Cæsar He was adopted by his uncle Cæsar, and inherited the greatest part of his fortune. He lost his father at the age of four, and though only eighteen when his uncle was murdered, he hastened to Rome, where he ingratiated himself with the senate and people, and received the honours of the consulship two years after, as the reward of his hypocrisy. Though his youth and his inexperience were ridiculed by his enemies, who branded him with the appellation of boy, yet he rose in consequence by his prudence and valour, and made war against his opponents, on pretence of avenging the death of his murdered uncle. But when he perceived that by making him fight against Antony, the senate wished to debilitate both antagonists, he changed his views, and uniting himself with his enemy, soon formed the second triumvirate, in which his cruel proscriptions shed the innocent blood of 300 senators and 200 knights, and did not even spare the life of his friend Cicero By the divisions which were made among the triumvirs, Augustus retained for himself the more important provinces of the west, and banished, as if it were, his colleagues, Lepidus and Antony, to more distant territories. But as long as the murderers of Cæsar were alive, the reigning tyrants had reasons for apprehension, and therefore the forces of the triumvirate were directed against the partisans of Brutus and the senate. The battle was decided at Philippi, where it is said that the valour and conduct of Antony alone preserved the combined armies, and effected the defeat of the republican forces. The head of the unfortunate Brutus was carried to Rome, and in insolent revenge thrown at the foot of Cæsar's statue. On his return to Italy, Augustus rewarded his soldiers with the lands of those that had been proscribed; but among the sufferers were many who had never injured the conqueror of Philippi, especially Virgil, whose modest application procured the restitution of his property The friendship which subsisted between Augustus and Antony was broken as soon as the fears of a third rival vanished away, and the aspiring heir of Cæsar was easily induced to take up arms by the little jealousies and resentment of Fulvia. Her death, however, retarded hostilities; the two rivals were reconciled; their united forces were successfully directed against the younger Pompey; and to strengthen their friendship, Antony agreed to marry Octavia, the sister of Augustus! But as this step was political, and not dictated by affection, Octavia was slighted, and Antony resigned himself to the pleasures and company of the beautiful Cleopatra. Augustus was incensed, and immediately took up arms to avenge the wrongs of his sister, and perhaps more eagerly to remove a man whose power and existence kept him in continual alarms, and made him dependent. Both parties met at Actium, B.C. 31, to decide the fate of Rome. Antony was supported by all the power of the east, and Augustus by Italy. Cleopatra fled from the battle with 60 ships, and her flight ruined the interest of Antony, who followed her into Egypt. The conqueror soon after passed into Egypt, besieged Alexandria, and honoured, with a magnificent funeral, the unfortunate Roman and the celebrated queen, whom the fear of being led in the victor's triumph at Rome had driven to commit suicide. After he had established peace all over the world, Augustus shut up the gates of the temple of Janus, about the time that our Saviour was born. It is said he twice resolved to lay down the supreme power, immediately after the victory obtained over Antony, and afterwards on account of his ill health; but his friend Mecænas dissuaded him, and observed, that he would leave it to be the prey of the most powerful, and expose himself to ingratitude and to danger. He died at Nola, in the 76th year of his age, A.D. 14, after he had held the sovereign power during 44 years. Augustus was an active emperor, and consulted the good of the Romans with the most anxious care. He visited all the provinces except Africa and Sardinia, and his consummate prudence and experience gave rise to many salutary laws, but it may be said that he finished with a good grace, what he began with cruelty. While making himself absolute, he took care to leave his countrymen the shadow of liberty, and if, under the character and office of perpetual tribune, of priest and imperator, he was invested with all the power of sovereignty, he guarded against offending the jealous Romans, by not assuming the regal title. His refusal to read the letters which he found after Pompey's defeat, arose more from fear than honour, and he dreaded the discovery of names which would have perhaps united to sacrifice his ambition. His good qualities, and many virtues, which he perhaps never possessed, have been transmitted to posterity by the pen of adulation or gratitude, in the poems of Virgil, Horace, and Ovid. To distinguish himself from the obscurity of the Octavii, and, if possible, to suppress the remembrance of his uncle's violent fate, he aspired after a new title, and the submissive senate yielded to his ambition, by giving him the honourable appellation of Augustus. He has been accused of licentiousness and adultery, by his biographer; but the goodness of his heart, and the fidelity of his friendship, which in some instances he possessed, made some amends for his logical foibles. He was ambitious of being thought handsome; and as he was publicly reported to be the son of Apollo, according to his mother's declaration, he wished his flatterers to represent him with the figure and attributes of that god. Like Apollo, his eyes were clear, and he affected to have it thought that they possessed some divine irradiation; and was well pleased if, when he fixed his looks upon any body, they held down their eyes as if overcome by the glaring brightness of the sun. He distinguished himself by his learning; he was a perfect master of the Greek language, and wrote some tragedies, besides memoirs of his life, and other works, all now lost. He was married three times; to Claudia, to Scribonia, and to Livia; but he was unhappy in his matrimonial connexions, and his only daughter Julia, by Scribonia, disgraced herself and her father by the debauchery and licentiousness of her manners. He recommended, at his death, his adopted son Tiberius as his successor, and left in his papers, as a solemn advice to future emperors, either through fear or envy, that they should not attempt to extend the boundaries of the empire beyond its present state. He left his fortune partly to Tiberius, and to Drusus, and made donations to the army and to the Roman people. Virgil wrote his heroic poem at the desire of Augustus, whom he represented under the amiable and perfect character of Æneas. Sueton. in vita.—Horat.—Virgil.—Paus.—Tacit.—Patercul.—Dio. Cass.—Ovid.—— The name of Augustus was afterwards given to the successors of Octavianus in the Roman empire as a personal, and the name of Cæsar, as a family distinction. In a more distant period of the empire, the title of Augustus was given only to the emperor, while that of Cæsar was bestowed on the second person in the state, who was considered as presumptive heir.

AULERCI. Under this name are reckoned four nations of Gaul. The Aulerci Brannovices, contiguous to the Ædui, and under their protection.—The Aulerci Cenomanni, situate between the Sarta, or Sarle, and the Ledus, two of the northern branches of the Liger. Their chief city was Vindinum, now Lemans—The Aulerci Diablintes, above the Arvii, in Maine, whose capital was Neodunum, now Jublains.—The Aulerci Eburovices, above the Lexovii, on the left bank of the sequana, or Seine, whose capital was Mediolanum, now Evreux AULESTES, a king of the Etrurians when Æneas came into Italy. Virg. Æn. 12. 290.

AULETES, a general who assisted Æneas in Italy, with 100 ships. Virg. Æn. 10, 209.—— The surname of one of the Ptolemean kings, father to Cleopatra.

AULIS, a daughter of Oxyges. Paus Beotic.——A sea-port town of Bœotia, on the Euripus, opposite to Chalcis in Eubœa. Here the Greeks were detained by contrary winds in the commencement of their expedition against Troy; nor could they sail till the anger of Diana, whose favourite stag had been killed by Agamemnon, had been appeased by the sacrifice of his daughter Iphigenia. Aulis is now reduced to a village, the name of which, Vathi, is derived from a deep bay (βαθύς) close to it; in which probably the Grecian fleet anchored, for the harbour of Vathi itself will not contain more than fifty ships. Virg. Æn. 4, 426.—Ovid. Met. 12, 9, &c.—Homer. Il. 2, 303.

AULON, a hill of Apulia, north-east of Tarentum, whose wine equalled the Falernian. Horat. 2, od. 6, 18.—— A town of Macedonia, near the Strymon, now Valona. Thucyd. 4, 103.—— A district of Messenia, lying on the borders of Triphylia and Arcadia. Paus.—— A valley of Syria, between the ridges of Libanus and Anti-Libanus. Now El Bekar——Another in Syria, extending along the banks of the Jordan, called also Magnus Campus. Now El Ghor.

AULONIUS, a surname of Æsculapius.

AULUS, a prænomen common among the Romans, and generally marked by the letter A.——Gellius. Vid. Gellius.

AUNUS, a Ligurian, the father of a warrior slain by Camilla. Virg. Æn. 11, 700.

AURA, a celebrated mare at the Olympic games. Her master Phidolas having lost his seat at the beginning of the race, the animal continued the course, and after outstripping all the others, she stood before the umpires, as if to claim the victory. The prize was adjudged to Phidolas, whose statue and that of his faithful mare were erected at Olympia, by the permission of the Eleans. Pausc. 6, 14.

AURAS, an European river, flowing into the Ister from mount Hæmus. Herod. 4, 49.

AURASIUS, a mountain in the south of Numidia, now Jabel Auras.

AUREA CHERSONESUS, a peninsula of India beyond the Ganges, now Malacca, or Malaya.

AURELIA LEX, was enacted by L. Aurelius Cotta, prætor, A. U. C. 683, and ordained that judices or jurymen should be chosen from the Senators, Equites, and Tribuni Ærarii.——Another, by C. Aurelius Cotta, consul, A U.C. 678. It abrogated a clause of the Lex Cornelia, and permitted the tribunes to hold other offices after the expiration of the tribuneship.

AURELIA, a town of Hispania Bætica.——The mother of J. Cæsar Suet. in Cæs. 74.——A fish woman Juv 4, 98.

AURELIANI Vid. Genabum.

AURELIANUS, emperor of Rome after Flavius Claudius, was austere, and even cruel in the execution of the laws, and punished his soldiers with unusual severity He rendered himself famous for his military character, and his expedition against Zenobia, the celebrated queen of Palmyra, gained him great honours. He beautified Rome, was charitable to the poor, and the author of many salutary laws. He was naturally brave, and in all the battles he fought, it is said, he killed no less than 800 men with his own hand. In his triumph he exhibited to the Romans, people of fifteen different nations, all of which he had conquered. He was the first emperor who wore a diadem. After a glorious reign of six years, as he marched against the northern barbarians, he was assassinated near Byzantium, A.D. 275, 29th January, by his soldiers, whom Mnestheus had incited to rebellion against their emperor. This Mnestheus had been threatened with death, for some ill behaviour to the emperor, and therefore he meditated his death. The soldiers, however, soon repented of their ingratitude and cruelty to Aurelian, and threw Mnestheus to be devoured by wild beasts.——A physician of the fourth century.

AURELIUS, emperor of Rome. Vid. Antonius Basianus.——A painter in the age of Augustus. Plin 35.——Victor, an historian in the age of Julian, two of whose compositions are extant, an account of illustrious men, and a biography of all the Cæsars to Julian. He was a native of Africa, and of obscure origin; but by his talents raised himself to the most important offices in the state. He was consul with Valentinian, A. D. 369. The best editions of his works are the 4to of Artzenius, Amst. 1733, and the 8vo of Gruneus, Coburg. 1757. Among the best editions of his account of illustrious men is that of Wachterus, Lemgov. 8vo, 1792.——Antoninus, an emperor. Vid. Antoninus.

AURÉOLUS, a general who assumed the purple in the age of Gallienus.

AURINIA, a prophetess held in great veneration by the Germans. Tacit. Germ. 8.

AURORA, a goddess, daughter of Hyperion and Thia or Thea, or according to others, of Titan and Terra. Some say that Pallas, son of Crius, and brother to Perses, was her father; hence her surname of Pallantias. She married Astræus, by whom she had the winds, the stars, &c. Her amours with Tithonus and Cephalus are also famous; by the former she had Memnon and Æmathion, and Phaeton by the latter. (Vid Cephalus and Tithonus.) She had also an intrigue with Orion, whom she carried to the island of Delos, where he was killed by Diana's arrows Aurora is generally represented by the poets drawn in a rose coloured chariot, and opening with her rosy fingers the gates of the east, pouring the dew upon the earth, and making the flowers grow. Her chariot is generally drawn by white horses, and she is covered with a veil. Nox and Somnus fly before her, and the constellations of heaven disappear at her approach. She always sets out before the sun, and is the forerunner of his rising. The Greeks call her Eos Homer. Il. 8. Odyss. 10. Hymn in Vener. —Ovid. Met 3, 184. 281, 600. 9, 420. 15. 189, &c. —Apolod 1, 3.—Virg. Æn. 6, 535.—Varro de L. L. 5, 6, et 91.—Hesiod Theog. 371—Hygin. præf. fab.

AURUNCI, a people of Latium, who, after some wars with the Romans, were finally incorporated with the republic, A U.C. 429 Hence Suessa, now Sessa, in Campania, to which some of the Aurunci fled, took the name of Aurunca. Liv. 2, 16 et 17. 8, 16

AUSCHISÆ, a people of Libya. Herod 4, 171.

AUSCI, a people of Gallia Aquitania. Their chief city was Climberris or Augusta, afterwards Auscі, now Auch, on the Ger, one of the southern branches of the Garumna, or Garonne.

AUSER, AUSERIS, and ANSER, a river of Etruria, which at one time fell into the Arnus, near Pisa, but which now enters the Tuscan sea, about six miles north of the mouth of the Arnus It is now the Serchio

AUSES a people of Africa, whose virgins yearly fight with sticks in honour of Minerva She who behaves with the greatest valour receives unusual honour, &c. Herod 4, 180.

AUSETANI, a people at the north-east of Hispania Tarraconensis, near the sea-coast, between the Sambroca, or Ter, and the Rubricatus, or Llobregat

AUSON, a son or Ulysses and Calypso, from whom the Ausones, a people of Italy, are descended.

AUSONA, the capital of the Ausones, north of Minturnæ. It was taken by the Romans, who massacred its inhabitants Liv 9, 25.

AUSONES, a people of Italy, who at one time occupied the whole southern portion of the country, but who were afterwards confined within very narrow bounds. Their name, according to some, is derived from Auson, son of Ulysses and Calypso; according to others, from Auson, son of Italus. They were a very ancient people, and possibly descended from the Sicani. Plin. 3, 10. —Virg. Æn. 8, 328 11, 252.

AUSONIA, one of the ancient names of Italy, which it received from the Ausones, one of its most ancient nations. Stat. Silv. 3, 2, 20.—Virg. Æn. 4, 349. 10, 563.—Sil. Ital. 9, 187.—Ovid. Fast. 2, 94.

AUSONIUS, DECIMUS MAGNUS, a Latin poet of the 4th century, was born at Burdigala, now Bourdeaux, about A.D. 309. He studied under several distinguished masters, and became, at last, professor of rhetoric in his native city, whence his reputation extended through the whole empire. The emperor Valentinian entrusted to him the education of his son Gratian, and rewarded him with many honours, even with the consulship. After the death of Gratian, Ausonius retired into rural life, and devoted his time to the composition of poems. His works consist of epigrams, elegies to the memory of friends and literary acquaintances, idylls, and many minor poems. Critics are not unanimous on the subject of his poetical merits. He is, undeniably, learned and ingenious, but his style and versification have the blemishes of the age, and his Latin is impure. The most valuable edition of his works is that of Tollius, 8vo. Amst. 1671, or that of Jaubert, with a French translation, 4 vols. 12mo, Paris, 1769

AUSPICES, a sacerdotal order at Rome, nearly the same as the Augurs. Vid. Augures.

AUSTER, one of the winds blowing from the south, whose breath was pernicious to flowers as well as to health. He was parent of rain. Virg. Ecl. 2, 58. Vid. Venti AUSTESION, a Theban, son of Tisamenus. His son Theras led a colony into an island which, from him, was called Thera. Herod. 4. —Paus.

AUTOBULUS, a painter. Plin. 35.

AUTOCHTHONES from αὐτος, ipse, and χθων, terra, a name assumed by several ancient nations, and in particular by the Athenians, signifying that they were produced from the earth which they inhabited. In reference to this derignation, some of the Athenians wore golden grasshoppers in their hair, as badges of honour, to distinguish them from other people of later origin and less noble extraction, because these insects were supposed to be the product of the soil. Eurip. Ion. 5, 89.—Thucyd. 1, 6.

AUTOCLES, an Athenian, sent by his countrymen with a fleet to the assistance of Alexander of Pheræ.

AUTOCRATES, an historian mentioned by Athen. 9 et 11.

AUTOCRATOR, from αὐτὸς, itself, and κράτος, power, an appellation given to the Athenian general, when, in particular cases, unlimited authority over the troops was entrusted to him, and he was not bound to render an account of his proceedings. Thus Aristides was an autocrator in the battle of Platæa. Βοιωτῶν αὐτοκράτωρ were Athenian ambassadors with full powers, corresponding to our plenipotentiaries. Suid.—Plut. Aristid.

AUTOLALÆ, or AUTOLOLES, a people of Mauritania Tingitana, descended from the Gætuli. Lucan 4, 677.—Sil. Ital. 2, 63. 3, 306.

AUTOLYCUS, a son of Mercury by Chione, a daughter of Dædalion. He was one of the Argonauts. His craft as a thief has been greatly celebrated. He stole the flocks of his neighbours, and mingled them with his own, after he had changed their marks. He did the same to Sisyphus son of Æolus; but Sisyphus was as crafty as Autolycus, and he knew his own oxen by a mark which he had made under their feet. Autolycus was so pleased with the artifice of Sisyphus, that he immediately formed an intimacy with him, and even permitted him freely to enjoy the company of his daughter Anticlea, who became pregnant of Ulysses, and was soon after married to Laertes. (Vid. Sisyphus, Laertes.) Hygin. fab. 200, &c.—Ovid Met. 1, fab. 8. —Apollod. 1.—Homer. Odyss. 14 ——A son of Phrixus and Chalciope. Hygin fab. 14 ——A Greek mathematician, born at Pitane, in Æolia, about B C. 320. He was the instructor of Arcesilaus, the disciple of Theophrastus, and wrote several treatises on astronomy, of which two are still extant, the one de sphæra mobili, and the other de ortu et occasu siderum Diog. Laert.

AUTOMEDE, one of the Cyclades, called also Hera. Plin. 2, 37.——A daughter of Danaus.

AUTOMATIA, a goddess of fortune, worshipped by Timoleon. Cic. in Timol. 4.

AUTOMEDON, a son of Diores, who went to the Trojan war with ten ships He was the charioteer of Achilles, after whose death he served Pyrrhus in the same capacity, and from his dexterity in guiding a chariot, the word Automedon has been used as most expressive of superior agility in the chariot race. Ovid. Trist. 5, el. 6, 16. De Art. A. 1, 5 —Juv. 1, 61.— Homer. Il. 9, 16, &c.— Virg. Æn. 2, 477.

AUTOMEDUSA, daughter of Alcathous, killed by Tydeus, married Iphicles the father of Protesilaus. Apollod 2.

AUTOMENES, one of the Heraclidæ, king of Corinth. At his death, B.C. 779, annual magistrates, called Prytanes, were chosen at Corinth, and their power continued 90 years, till Cypselus and his son Periander made themselves absolute.

AUTOMOLI, a nation of Æthiopia. Herod, 2.

AUTONOE, a daughter of Cadmus, who married Aristæus, by whom she had Actæon, often called Autonoeus heros. The death of her son (Vid. Actæon) was so painful to her, that she retired from Bœotia to Megara, where she soon after died. Paus. 1, 44 — Hygin. fab. 179.— Ovid. Met. 3, 720.——One of the Danaides, who married Eurylochus Apollod. 2.——One of the Nereides. Hesiod. Theog.——A female servant of Penelope. Homer. Odyss. 18, 181.——The name of a play mentioned by Juv. 6, 72.

AUTOPHRADATES, a satrap of Lydia, who revolted from Artaxerxes. Diod.

AUTRICUM, a town of Gaul, the capital of the Carnutes, now Chartres.

AUTRIGONES, a people of Hispania Terraconensis, among the Cantabri. Their chief town was Flaviobriga, now Santander

P. AUTRONIUS PÆTUS, a Roman elected consul with P Sylla, A.U.C. 687, but accused of bribery, and consequently condemned as incapable of holding any public office. He joined Catiline in his conspiracy, and after his death, fled into Greece, where Cicero dreaded the effect of his enmity. Cicero speaks of him as an orator, but only as having a good voice. Cic. Att 3, ep. 2 et 7. Brut. 68.—Sallust. Cat. 17 et 18.—Suet. Cæs. 9.— Dio. 36.

AUTURA, a river of Gaul, which falls into the Sequana, or Seine. Now, the Eure.

AUXESIA and DAMIA, two virgins who came from Crete to Trœzene, where the inhabitants stoned them to death in a sedition. The Epidaurians raised them statues by order of the oracle, when their country was become barren. They were held in great veneration at Trœzene. Herod. 5, 82.—Paus. 2, 30

AVANTICUM, a town of the Helvetii, now Avenche. Tacit. H. 1, 68.

AVARICUM, a strong and fortified town of Gaul, the capital of the Bituriges, now Bourges. It received its name from the river Avara, or Eure, one of the southern branches of the Liger. It was taken by Cæsar during the Gallic wars, and its inhabitants massacred. Cæs Bell. G. 7.

AVELLA, a town of Campania, abounding in nuts whence nuts have been called avellanæ. Sil. It. 5, 45, &c.—Virg Æn 7, 740.

AVENTINUS, a son of Hercules, by Rhea, who assisted Turnus against Æneas, and distinguished himself by his valour. Virg Æn. 7, 657.—— A king of Alba, buried upon mount Aventine. Ovid Fast. 4, 51.—One of the seven hills on which part of the city of Rome was built. It was 18 stadia in circumference, and was given to the people to build houses upon, by king Ancus Martius. It was not reckoned within the precincts of the city till the reign of the emperor Claudius, because the soothsayers looked upon it as a place of ill omen, as Remus had been buried there, whose blood had been criminally shed. Its name is derived from a great number of different sources: 1st, from Aventinus Sylvius, king of Alba, who was buried on it; 2dly, from the word adventus, because great crowds thronged thither, to a temple of Diana, 3dly, from aves, because birds flew thither from the Tiber, 4thly, from adcertus, because when the bull was separated from the rest by marshes, the only passage to it was by boats, 5thly, from Aventa, the river which watered the district, whose inhabitants were transplanted thither. It was also called Murcius, from Murcia, the goddess of sloth, who had a temple here; and Collis Dianæ, from the temple of Diana on it, as well as Remurcius, from Remus, who wished the city to be founded here. Juno, Lucina, Diana, Bona Dea, Hercules, and the goddess of Victory and Liberty, had magnificent temples built upon it. It is now occupied by gardens, though here and there a solitary church, built out of the fragments of ancient edifices. Varro de L. L. 4. —Virg. Æn. 8, 235.—Liv. 1, 33

AVERNUS, or AVERNA, a lake of Campania, near Baiæ, called by the modern Italians Lago di Tripergola, whose waters were so unwholesome and putrid, that no birds were seen on its banks: hence its original name was ἄορνος, from ἀ privative, and ὄρνις, a bird. The ancients made it the entrance of hell, as also one of its rivers. It is said to be about a mile and a half in circumference, and in many places nearly 190 feet deep The waters of the Avernus were indispensably necessary in all enchantments and magical processes. It may be observed that all lakes, whose stagnated waters were putrid and offensive to the smell, were indiscriminately called Averna. Virg. Æn. 4, 5, 12, &c 6, 201, &c. Mela, 2, 4.—Strab. 5.—Diod. 4.—Aristot. de Adm

AVERRUNCUS, a god, who averted misfortunes. Aul. Gell. 5, 12.—Varro de L. L. 6, 5.

AVESTA, a book composed by Zoroaster.

AVIDIENUS, a rich and sordid man, whom Horat styles happy, 2 Serm. 2, 55

AVIDIUS CASSIUS, a man saluted emperor, A.D. 175. He reigned only three months, and was assassinated by a centurion. He was called a second Catiline, from his excessive love of bloodshed. Diod

AVIENUS, RUFUS FESTUS, a Latin poet of the fourth century, who translated the phenomena of Aratus, the Periegesis of Dionysius, the history of Livy, and Æsop's Fables into verse; and wrote also a poetical "Description of the Maritime Coasts," and some other pieces. Some of those productions still remain, and show him to have been a tolerable versifier. His geographical works, and a few others, have been edited by Wernsdorf, in the Poetæ Latini Minores. The best edition of the Fables is that of Cunnegetier, Amst. 1731, in 8vo.

AVITUS, a governor of Britain under Nero. Tacit. Ann 14.——Alpheus, a Latin poet, of whose poetry a few fragments, to the number of eight verses, are preserved in the Corpus Poetarum.——Alcimus, bishop of Vienna in France, and nephew to Marcus Maecilius Avitus, emperor of the west, flourished at the beginning of the sixth century. He was the friend of Clovis, the first christian king of France, and contributed to his conversion. He was a great enemy to the Arians He wrote letters on various subjects, chiefly controversial; sermons; and poems on the Mosaic history, and in praise of virginity. His works were published by Sirmond, in 8vo, 1643. His poems have been printed separately, at Frankfort in 1507, at Paris in 1500, and at Lyons in 1536.

AVIUM, a city between Tyre and Sidon. Strab. 16

AXENUS, the ancient name of the Euxine sea. It was denominated Ἄξεινος, inhospitable, on account of the savage manners of the people who inhabited its coasts; but when they became civilized by intercourse with foreign nations, and by the numerous colonies which had been planted among them, it changed its name to Εὔξεινος, hospitable. (Vid Euxinus Pontus.) Ovid. Trist. 4, 4, 56.

AXILLA, a surname of the Servilii, which, by dropping the X, was changed into Ala. The mother of M. Brutus, to whom Cicero inscribed his book called Orator, was of the gens Servilia, and therefore he says Vester Axilla. Cic. Orat 45.

AXIŌCHUS, a philosopher, to whom Plato dedicated a treatise concerning death.

AXION, brother of Alphesiboea, murdered Alcmæon, his sister's husband, because he wished to recover from her a golden necklace. Vid. Alcmæon and Alphesiboea.

AXIOTEA, a woman who regularly went in a man's dress to hear the lectures of Plato.

AXIOTHEA, the wife of Nicocles, king of Cyprus. Polyæn. 8.

AXIS, a town of Umbria. Prop 4.

AXIUS, the principal river of Macedonia, rising in the chain of mount Scardus, and after a south-easterly course of 175 miles, falling into the Sinus Thermaicus, or Gulf of Salonica. It is now the Vardar. Hom Il. 2, 850.—Herod. 7, 123.—— Quintus, a senator, intimate with Cicero, who had a villa in the beautiful plains of Puteoli. He seems likewise to have been an usurer. Suetonius mentions a letter of Cicero's to him, which is not now extant. Gell. 7, 3.—Cic. ad Att. 1, 12. 4, 15.—Varro R. R. 3.—Suet. Cæs. 9.

AXONA, a river of Gallia Belgica, which joins the Isara, or Oise, and falls with it into the Sequana, or Seine It is now the Aisne

AXUR and ANXUR, a surname of Jupiter, who had a temple at Tracina in Thessaly. He was represented as a beardless youth. Virg. Æn. 7, 699. 10, 545.

AXUS, a town about the middle of Crete Apollod.

AZAN, a mountain of Arcadia, sacred to Cybele.——A son of Arcas, king of Arcadia, by Erato, one of the Dryades. He divided his father's kingdom with his brothers Aphidas and Elatus, and called his share Azania. There was in Azania a fountain called Chlorus, whose waters gave a dislike for wine to those who drank them. Vitruv. 8, 3.—Ovid. Met. 15, 322.—Paus. 8, 4

AZIRIS, a place of Libya, surrounded on both sides by delightful hills covered with trees, and watered by a river where Bacchus built a town Herod 4, 177.

AZONAX, a man who taught Zoroaster the art of magic. Plin. 30.

AZORUS, one of the Argonauts.

AZOTUS, a celebrated sea-port of Phœnicia, north-east of Ascalon. It withstood a siege of twenty-nine years against Psammitichus, king of Egypt, and was finally destroyed by Jonathan Asmonæus, who burnt it to the ground. It is now called Shdood. Herod. 2, 157.—Joseph. Ant. Jud. 15.

B

BABILIUS, a Roman, who, by the help of a certain herb, is said to have passed in six days from the Sicilian sea to Alexandria. Plin. Prem. 19.

BABILUS, an astrologer in Nero's age, who told the emperor to avert the danger which seemed to hang upon his head, from the appearance of a hairy comet, by putting all the leading men of Rome to death. His advice was faithfully followed. Sueton. in Ner. 36.

BABYLON, a son of Belus, who, as some suppose, founded a city which bears his name.——A celebrated city, the capital of the Assyrian empire, on the banks of the Euphrates. It had a hundred brazen gates; and its walls were 480 stadia or 60 miles in circuit, 87 feet in thickness, and 350 feet in height. They were built of bricks, and surrounded with a deep ditch. The form of the city was that of a regular square, with twenty-five gates on each side; and the streets ran in straight lines from gate to gate. It was taken by Cyrus, B.C. 538, after he had diverted the waters of the Euphrates into a new channel, and marched his troops by night into the town, through the ancient bed of the river; and it is said that the fate of the extensive capital was unknown to the inhabitants of the distant suburbs till the next evening. Babylon is memorable for the death of Alexander the Great, B C 323, and for the new empire which was afterwards established there, under the Seleucidæ (Vid Syria) Its greatness was so reduced in succeeding ages, according to Pliny's observations, that in his time it was but a desolate wilderness, and at present the precise place where it stood is unknown to travellers; so wonderfully fulfilled is the prophecy of Esaias 13, 19, &c. 14, 23, &c. Major Rennell and Mr Rich are of opinion that its site is near a town called Hillah, about forty-eight miles south of Baydad. Plin. 6, 26.—Herod. 1, 2, 3.—Justin. 1, &c.—Diod. 2.—Xenoph. Cyrop. 7. &c —Propert. El. 3, 11. 21.—Ovid. Met 4, fab 2.—Martial 9, ep. 77.——There is also a town of the same name near the Nile, in Egypt, north of Memphis, supposed to have been built by the Persians during the invasion of Cambyses. Its site is occupied by Old Cairo.

BABYLONIA, a large province of Asyria, of which Babylon was the capital. The inhabitants shook off the Assyrian yoke, and afterwards became very powerful.——The surname of Seleucia, which arose from the ruins of Babylon, under the successors of Alexander. Plin. 6, 26.

BABYLONII, the inhabitants of Babylon, famous for their knowledge of astrology, first divided the year into twelve months, and the zodiac into twelve signs.

BABYRSA, a fortified castle near Artaxata, where were kept the treasures of Tigranes and Artabanus. Strab. 11.

BABYTACE, a city of Armenia, whose inhabitants despised gold. Plin 6, 27.

BACABASUS, betrayed the snares of Artabanus, brother of Darius, against Artaxerxes. Justin. 3, 1

BACCHÆ, the priestesses of Bacchus. Paus. 2, 7.

BACCHANALIA, festivals in honour of Bacchus at Rome, the same as the Dionysia of the Greeks. Vid. Dionysia.

BACCHIANTES, priestesses of Bacchus, who are represented, at the celebration of the orgies, covered with the skins of tigers or goats, and more often naked, with garlands of ivy, with a thyrsus or lighted torch in the hand, and with dishevelled hair Their looks are wild; they utter dreadful sounds, and clashing different musical instruments together, they threaten or strike the affrighted spectators. They are also called Thyades, Menades, and Mimallonides. Plautus in Amph.—Ovid. Met. 6, 592.—Horat. 3, od. 25.—Propert. El. 3, 21.—Lucan. 1, 674.

BACCHI, a mountain of Thrace, near Philippi. Justin.

BACCHIADÆ or BACCHIDÆ, a Corinthian family descended from Bacchis, daughter of Dionysius, or more probably from Bacchis, son of Prumnis. In their nocturnal orgies, they, as some report, tore to pieces Actæon, son of Melissus; which so enraged the father, that before the altar he entreated the Corinthians to revenge the death of his son, and immediately threw himself into the sea. Upon this the Bacchiadæ were banished, and went to settle in Sicily, between Pachynum and Pelorus, where some suppose that they built Syracuse. Thucyd. 6.—Ovid. Met 5, 407.—Strab. 8.

BACCHIDES, a general who betrayed the town of Sinope to Lucullus. Strab. 12.

BACCHIS or BALUS, king of Corinth, succeeded his father Prumnides His successors were always called Bacchidæ, in remembrance of the equity and moderation of his reign. The Bacchidæ increased so much, that they chose one of their number to preside among them with regal authority; and as they contracted marriages only with the members of their family, they preserved their dignity, and for nearly 200 years the sovereign power continued in their hands. Cypselus overturned this institution by making himself absolute. Strab. 8.—Paus. 2, 4.—Herod. 5, 92. —Ovid. Met. 5, 407.

BACCHIUM, a small island in the Ægean sea, opposite Phocæa, at the entrance of the Smyrnæus Sinus. The temples and statues, with which it was richly adorned, were ransacked by the Romans. Plin. 5, 3.

BACCHIUS AND BITHUS, two celebrated gladiators of equal age and strength; whence the proverb to express equality, Bithus contra Bacchium. Sueton. in Aug.—Horat. 1, sat. 7, 20.

BACCHUS, was son of Jupiter and Semele, the daughter of Cadmus. After she had enjoyed the company of Jupiter, Semele was deceived, and perished by the artifice of Juno This goddess, always jealous of her husband's amours, assumed the shape of Beroe, Semele's nurse, and persuaded Semele that the lover whom she entertained was not Jupiter, but a false lover; and that to prove his divinity, she ought to beg of him, if he really were Jupiter, to come to her bed with the same majesty as when he courted the embraces of Juno. The artifice succeeded; and when Jupiter promised his mistress whatever she asked, Semele required him to visit her with all the divinity of a god. Jupiter was unable to violate his oath, and Semele unwilling to retract it; therefore, as she was a mortal, and unable to bear the majesty of Jupiter, she was consumed and reduced to ashes. The child, of which she had been pregnant for seven months, was with difficulty saved from the flames, and put in his father's thigh, where he remained the full time which he naturally was to have been in his mother's womb. From this circumstance Bacchus has been called Bimater. According to some, Diræ a nymph of the Achelous, saved him from the flames. There are different traditions concerning the manner of his education. Ovid says, that after his birth, he was brought up by his aunt Ino, and afterwards entrusted to the care of the nymphs of Nysa Lucian supposes, that Mercury carried him, as soon as born, to the nymphs of Nysa; and Apollonius says, that he was carried by Mercury to a nymph in the island of Eubœa, whence he was driven by the power of Juno, who was the chief deity of the place. Some support, that Naxus can boast of the place of his education, under the nymphs Philia, Coronis, and Clyda. Pausanias relates a tradition which prevailed in the town of Brasiæ in Peloponnesus; and accordingly mentions, that Cadmus, as soon as he heard of his daughter's amours, shut her up with her child lately born, in a coffer, and exposed them on the sea. The coffer was carried safe by the waves to the coast of Brasiæ; but Semele was found dead, and the child alive. Semele was honoured with a magnificent funeral, and Bacchus properly educated. This diversity of opinion shows that there were many of the same name. Diodorus speaks of three, and Cicero of a greater number, but among them all, the son of Jupiter and Semele seems to have obtained the merit of the first. Bacchus is the Osiris of the Egyptians, and his history is drawn from the Egyptian traditions concerning that ancient king. Bacchus assisted the gods in their wars against the giants, and was cut to pieces; but the son of Semele was not then born; this tradition therefore is taken from the history of Osiris, who was killed by his brother Typhon, and the worship of Osiris has been introduced by Orpheus into Greece, under the name of Bacchus. In his youth he was taken asleep in the island of Naxos, and carried away by some mariners, whom he changed into dolphins, except the pilot, who had expressed some concern at his misfortune. One of his first exploits was to redeem his mother from the infernal regions, and by the piety of her son, and the assistance of Jupiter, she was raised to immortal honours under the name of Thyone. The place through which he returned from Pluto's kingdom, was said to be seen under one of the altars consecrated to the infernal deities in the temple of Diana at Trœzene. But of all his achievements, his expedition into the east is most celebrated. He marched, at the head of an army composed of men as well as of women, all inspired with divine fury, and armed with thyrsuses, cymbals, and other musical instruments. The leader was drawn in a chariot by a lion and a tiger, and was accompanied by Pan and Silenus, and all the Satyrs. His conquests were easy, and without bloodshed; the people easily submitted, and gratefully elevated to the rank of a god the hero who taught them the use of the vine, the cultivation of the earth, and the manner of making honey. Amidst his benevolence to mankind, he was relentless in punishing all want of respect to his divinity; and the punishment he inflicted on Pentheus, Agave, Lycurgus, the daughter of Minyas, Cyanippus, and others, is well known. He has received the name of Liber, Bromius, Lyæus, Evan, Thyoneus, Psilax, Dionysus, Biformis, Brisæus, Iacchus, Dithyrambus, Messateus, Lampter, Agobolus, Nyctelius, Polites, Melanægis, &c., which are mostly derived from the places where he received adoration, or from the ceremonies observed in his festivals. As he was the god of vintage, of wine, and of drinkers, he is generally represented crowned with vine and ivy leaves, with a thyrsus in his hand. His figure is that of an effeminate young man, to denote the joys which commonly prevail at feasts; and sometimes that of an old man, to teach us that wine taken immoderately will enervate us, consume our health, render us loquacious and childish like old men, and unable to keep secrets. The panther is sacred to him, because he went in his expedition covered with the skin of that beast. The magpie is also his favourite bird, because in triumphs people were permitted to speak with boldness and liberty. Bacchus is sometimes represented like an infant, holding a thyrsus and clusters of grapes with a horn. He often appears naked, and riding upon the shoulders of Pan, or in the arms of Silenus, who was his foster father. He also sits upon a celestial globe, bespangled with stars, and is then the same as the Sun or Osiris of Egypt. The festivals of Bacchus, generally called Orgies, Canephoria, Phallica, Bacchanalia, or Dionysia, were introduced into Greece from Egypt by Danaus and his daughters. The infamous debaucheries which arose from the celebration of these festivals are well known. (Vid. Dionysia.) His priestesses were called by the several names of Menades, Thyades, Bacchantes, Mimallonides, and Bassarides, according to the peculiarity of either their dress or their gestures. The amours of Bacchus are not numerous. He married Ariadne, after she had been forsaken by Theseus in the island of Naxos; and by her he had many children, among whom were Ceranus, Thoas, Œnopion, Tauropolis, and Evanthe. He was also father of Carmon by Alexirhea, of Philias by Clothonophyte, and of Narcæus by Phiseoa of Elis According to some, he was the father of Hymenæus, whom the Athenians made the god of marriage. The Egyptians sacrificed pigs to him, before the doors of their houses. The fir tree, the yew-tree, the fig-tree, the ivy, and the vine, were sacred to him; and the goat was generally sacrificed to him, on account of the great propensity of that animal to destroy the vine. According to Pliny he was the first who ever wore a crown. His beauty is compared to that of Apollo, and, like him, he is represented with fine hair loosely flowing down his shoulders, and he is said to possess eternal youth. Sometimes he has horns, either because he taught the cultivation of the earth with oxen, or because Jupiter his father, appeared to him in the deserts of Libya under the shape of a ram, and supplied his thirsty army with water. The three persons of the name of Bacchus, whom Diodorus mentions, are, the one who conquered the Indies, and is surnamed the bearded Bacchus, a son of Jupiter and Proserpine who was represented with horns; and the son of Jupiter and Semele, called the Bacchus of Thebes. Those mentioned by Cicero, are, a son of Proserpine, a son of Nisus, who built Nysa; a son of Caprius, who reigned in the Indies; a son of Jupiter and the moon; and a son of Thyone and Nisus. Cic. de Nat D 2 et 3.—Paus 2, 22, 37, 3, 24 5, 19, &c —Herod. 1, 150. 2, 42, 44, 49 —Plut in Ind. et Oar.—Diod. 1, 3, &c.—Orpheus in Dionys.—Apollod 1, 9. 3, 4, &c —Ovid. Met. 3, fab. 3, &c.—Amor. 3, 3.—Fast. 3, 715.—Hygin fab 155, 167, &c.—Plin. 7, 56. 9, 2. 35, 5.—Homer, Il. 6.—Luc de Fals. Rel. 1, 22.—Virg. G 2, &c.—Eurip.d. in Bach.—Lucian. de sacrif de Baccho, in dial. deor.—Oppian in Cyneg —Philostrat. 1, Icon. 59.—Senec. in Chor. Œdip. —Martial. 8, ep 26. 14, ep. 107.

BACCHYLIDES, a Greek lyric poet, who was a native of Julis, a city in the Island of Cos, and nephew to the elder Simonides. His compositions consisted of hymns, dithyrambic poems, odes in celebration of the Pythian victors, amatory poems, &c all of which are now lost except a few small pieces, twenty in number. He flourished about 452 B.C and was the last of the nine lyric poets of Greece. Horace is said to have imitated him in several of his poems, particularly in the fifteenth ode of the first book. The fragments of Bacchylides have been published separately by C. F. Neue, Berlin, 1822, 8vo. They are translated in Merivale's edition of Bland's Greek Anthology

BACENIS, a wood in Germany. Cæs. Bell. Gall. 6, 10.

BACIS, a famous soothsayer of Bœotia, said to be inspired by the sea nymphs, because his prophecies were regularly fulfilled. Paus. 10, 12 —Suidas.—Cic de Div. 1, 34.——A king of Corinth, called also Bacchis. (Vid Bacchis.)——An athlete of Tarentum. Paus 6, 8 ——A famous bull consecrated to the sun, and worshipped with divine honours in Egypt. It was said that he had a symbolical resemblance to the sun, as his colour changed regularly each day, and his hair grew in a way contrary to that of other animals. Macrob. Sat. 1, 21.

BACTRA, the capital of Bactria or Bactriana, situate on the river Bactrus. It was anciently called Zariaspa. It is now called Balkh. Virg. G. 2, 138.——Strab 2. . .

BACTRIA and BACTRIANA, a kingdom of Asia, bounded on the south by the mountains of Paropamisus, on the east by the Emodi montes, on the north by Sogdiana, and on the west by Margiana. It derived its name from the river Bactrus. The Bactrians were reckoned good soldiers, and were always at war, either among themselves, or with their neighbours. They exposed their aged parents, when they could no longer support themselves, to be devoured by fierce mastiffs, which they trained for that purpose, and called sepulchral dogs. They allowed their daughterr to associate with any whom they liked, and incontinence was not disreputable even to the female character. They were conquered by Alexander the Great. Curt. 4, 6, &c. —Plin. 6, 23.—Plut. in Vitios. ad Infel. Suff.—Herod. 1 et 3.

BACTRUS, a river of Bactria, whence the country received its name. It is now the Dehash. Lucan 3, 267.

BACUNTIUS, a river of Pannonia, which runs into the Savus, or Save, near Sirmium It is now the Bosna.

BADACA, a town of Media. Diod 19.

BADIA, a town of Hispania Bretica. Pal Max. 3, 7.

BADIUS, a Campanian, who challenged T. Q. Crispinus, one of his friends, by whom he was killed. Liv 35, 18.

BADUHENNÆ, a place in the country of the Frisii, where 900 Romans were killed. Tacit. Ann. 4, 73.

BÆBIA LEX was enacted for the election of four prætors every other year. Liv. 40.——Another law by M Bæbius, a tribune of the people, which forbade the division of the lands, whilst it substituted a yearly tax to be paid by the possessors, and to be divided among the people. Appian 1

M. BÆBIUS, a Roman, in whose consulship the tomb of Numa was discovered. Plut. in Num. —Val. Max. 1, 1 ——Lucius, a Roman prætor, who, being surprised by the Ligurians, fled to Marseilles, where he died three days after. Liv. 37, 57

BÆCULA, a town of Hispania Terraconensis, in the territory or at least in the vicinity of the Autetani. Liv. 27, 18. 28, 13.

BÆTICA, one of the ancient divisions of Hispania, so called from its chief river, the Bætis. Vid Hispania.

BÆTIS, a river of Hispania, which had its source in the chain of Mons Orospeda. It was anciently called Tartessus, and now bears the name of Guadalquiver, or the Great River. The natives of the country called it Ciritium and Certis, and the Arabians Ciritus, derived from the oriental term Kiriath, a town, and signifying the river of towns, on account of the great number of cities which it watered in its progress to the sea. Paus. 6, 19 —Plin 3, ep. 3.—Liv. 28, 30.—Mela, 3, 1.—Strab. 3.—Ptol 2, 4

BÆTON, a Greek historian in the age of Alexander.

BAGISTÂNA, a town of Media, south-west of Ecbatana, at the foot of the mountains in which are the sources of the river Gyndes.

BAGISTANES, a friend of Bessus, whom he abandoned when he murdered Darius. Curtius, 13.

BAGISTÂNUS, a mountain of Asia, between Babylonia and Media, upon which Semiramis had her figure cut.

BAGŌAS and BAGŌSAS, an Egyptian eunuch in the court of Artaxerxes Ochus, so powerful that nothing could be done without his consent. He led some troops against the Jews, and profaned their temple. He poisoned Ochus, gave his flesh to cats, and made knife handles with his bones, because he had killed the god Apis. He placed on the throne Arses, the youngest of the slaughtered prince's children, and afterwards put him to death. He was at last killed, B.C.

235, by Darius Codomanus, whom, after raising to the crown, he had attempted to poison. Died. 16 et 17.——Another, greatly esteemed by Alexander. He was the cause that one of the satraps was put to death by the most excruciating torments. Curt 10, 1.—Plut. in Alex.——The name of Bagoas occurs very frequently in the Persian history; and it seems that most of the eunuchs of the monarchs of Persia were generally known by that appellation. Plin. 13, 4.—Quintil 5, 12.

BAGODARES, a friend of Bessus, whom he abandoned when he attempted the life of Darius. Diod. 17.

BAGOPHĀNES, a governor of Babylon, who, when Alexander approached the city, strewed all the streets, and burned incense on the altars, &c. Curt. 5, 1.

BAGRĀDA, now Mejerdah, a river of Africa, rising in the centre of Numidia, and falling into the Mediterranean sea a little below Utica. Here Regulus killed a huge serpent, which measured 120 feet in length Plin 8, 14.—Lucan. 4, 588.

BAIÆ, a city of Campania, situate on a small bay west of Neapolis, and opposite to Puteoli It is said to have derived its name from Baius, one of the companions of Ulysses. It was a favourite place of resort with the wealthy Romans. The great attractions of Baiæ were the beauty of its shores, the mild temperature of its climate, and the variety of its warm springs. It is now, owing to the incursions of barbarians and earthquakes, a mere desert compared to what it once was. Its modern name is Baia Martual. 14, ep. 81.—Horat. 1, ep 1.—Strab. 5.

BALA, a surname of Alexander king of Syria. Justin. 35, 1.

BALACRUS, an officer in Alexander's army, who took Miletus Curt. 4, 13 ——Another officer, who commanded some auxiliaries. Id. 4, 5

BALANAGRÆ, a town of Cyrene. Paus. 2, 26.

BALANEA, a town between Syria and Phœnicia. Plin. 5, 20.

BALANUS, a prince of Gaul, who assisted the Romans in their Macedonian war, A.U.C. 581 Liv. 44, 14.

BALARI, a people of Sardinia Liv. 41, 6

C. BALBILLUS, a learned and benevolent man, governor of Egypt, of which he wrote the history, under Nero. Tacit Ann. 13, 22.

BALBINUS, an admirer of Agna, mentioned Horat. Sat. 1, 6, 40.——A Roman, who, after governing provinces with credit and honour, assassinated the Gordians, and seized the purple He was some time after murdered by his soldiers, A.D. 238.

BALBUS, a mountain of Africa, between the town of Clupea and the sea, famous for the retreat of Masinissa, after he fought a battle against Syphax. Liv. 29, 31.

L. BALBUS, a lawyer, &c. one among the pupils of Scævola.——Two stoic philosophers at Rome, mentioned by Cic. de Orat 3, 21 N. D. 1, 7, &c.——A man killed by the assassins of the triumvirs.——A native of Cadis, who, on being made a citizen of Rome, took the name of Balbus, after L. Corn. Balbus, one of Julius Cæsar's friends. The influence of his friends, aided by his own merit, raised him to the consulship and to opulence, so that at his death he left each Roman citizen twenty-five denarii. Vell. 2, 51. —Dio. 48, 52.—Plin. 7, 43.—Cic. ad Att. 7, 3. In Balb.——Cornelius, a nephew of the preceding by his sister, and called Minor, to distinguish him from his uncle, called Major. He was engaged in the war against the Garamantes as questor to Astinius Pollio; and he built a theatre which bore his name. Sueton. Aug. 29.—Plin. 5, 5.—Dio. 54, 25 66, 24.

BALEARES, the ancient name of the islands of Majorca and Minorca, off the coast of Spain They derived their name from that of the inhabitants, who were denominated Baleares, as is generally supposed from βάλλειν, to throw, because they were very expert in the use of the sling. The Greeks called them Gymnesiæ, either because the inhabitants were quarel, naked, in summer, or because they went to battle armed only with a sling. They were reduced by the Roman consul, Q. Metellus, who took the surname of Balearicus The larger of these islands was called Balearis Major, now Majorca, and the smaller, Balearis Minor, now Minorca. In the former were Pollentia and Palma, both Roman colonies. In the latter were Iamno and Mago. Strab. 14.—Cæs. Bell. Gall 2, 7.—Virg. G. 1, 309.—Ovid. Met. 2, 72.—Plin 3, 5.—Flor. 3, 8.—Dion. 5.

BALETUS, a son of Hippo, who first founded Corinth, Patercul. 1, 3.

BALIUS, a horse of Achilles Homer. Il. 16, 146.

BALISTA, a mountain of Liguria. Liv 40, 41.

BALLI, NOTI, a people of European Sarmatia. Flacc 6, 160.

BALNEÆ (baths) were very numerous at Rome, private as well as public. In the ancient times simplicity was observed, but in the age of the emperors they became expensive; they were used after walking, exercise, or labour, and were deemed more necessary than luxurious Under the emperors it became so fashionable to bathe, that without this the meanest of the people seemed to be deprived of one of the necessaries of life. There were certain hours of the day appointed for bathing, and a small piece of money admitted the poorest, as well as the most opulent. In the baths there were separate apartments for the people to dress and to undress, and after they had bathed, they commonly covered themselves, the hair was plucked off the skin, and the body rubbed over with a pumice stone, and perfumed to render it smooth and fair. The Roman emperors generally built baths, and all endeavoured to eclipse each other in the magnificence of the building. It is said that Diocletian employed 40,000 christian soldiers in building his baths, and when they were finished, he destroyed all the workmen. Alexander Severus first permitted the people to use them in the night, and he himself often bathed with the common people. For some time both sexes bathed promiscuously and without shame, and the edicts of the emperors proved abortive for a while in abolishing that indecent custom, which gradually destroyed the morals of the people. They generally read in bathing, and we find many compositions written in the midst of this luxurious enjoyment.

BALVENTIUS, a centurion of great valour in Cæsar's army, killed by Ambiorix. Cæs. Bell. Gall. 5, 35.

BALYRAS, a river of Peloponnesus. Paus 4, 33.

BAMBALIO, a nickname applied to Fadius. Vid. Fadius.

BAMURNIUM, a people of Libya. Ital. 3, 303.

BANTIA, a town of Apulia, south-east of Venusia, whence Bantinus. Horat. 3, od. 4, 15.

L. BANTIUS, a gallant youth of Nola, whom Annibal found, after the battle of Cannæ, almost dead amongst the heaps of slain. He was sent home with great humanity, upon which he resolved to betray his country to so generous an enemy. Marcellus the Roman general heard of it, and rebuked Bantius, who continued firm and faithful to the interest of Rome. Liv 35. 15

BAPHYRUS, a river of Macedonia, which runs by Olympus, and falls into the Thermaicus Sinus. Liv. 44, 6.

BAPTÆ, the priests of Cotytto, the goddess of lasciviousness and debauchery at Athens. Her festivals were celebrated in the night; and so infamous and obscene was the behaviour of the priests, that they disgusted even Cotytto herself, though the goddess of obscenity. The name is derived from βάπτειν, to wash, because the priests bathed themselves in the most effeminate manner. Juv. 2, 91.——A comedy of Eupolis, on which men are introduced dancing on the stage, with all the indecent gestures of common prostitutes.

BARÆI, a people of Colchis and Iberia, who burned the bodies of their friends who died by disease, but gave to the fowls of the air such as fell in war. Ælian. 10, 20.

BARÄTHRUM, a deep and obscure gulf at Athens, into which condemned persons were thrown. It had sharp spikes at the top to prevent any one from escaping, and others at the bottom to wound and pierce those who were cast into it. Its depth and extent occasioned it to be used as a proverbial expression to signify a miser or a glutton, who is always craving and never satisfied. Aristoph. Plut. 476.—Lucret. 3.—Horat Sat. 1. 2.—Suidas.

BARBARI, a name originally applied to those who spoke inelegantly, or with harshness and difficulty. The Greeks and Romans generally called all nations, except their own, by the despicable name of Barbarians BARBARIA, a river of Macedonia. Liv. 44, 31. ——A name given to Phrygia and Troy. Horat. 1, ep 2, 7.

BARBATUS, the surname of a Roman family. Suet. Cl. 21.

BARBOSTHÈNES, a mountain of Peloponnesus, ten miles from Sparta Liv 35, 27.

BARBYTHACE, a city of Persia. Plin. 6, 27.

BARCA, a friend of Cato the elder. Plut. in Cat. Vid. Barcha.

BARCÆI, or BARCITÆ, a warlike nation of Africa, near the city of Carthage. Virg. Æn. 4, 43.

BARCE, the nurse of Sichæus. Virg. Æn. 4, 632.——A large country of Africa ——Also a city of Cyrenaica in Africa. According to Strabo and Pliny, it occupied the spot where Ptolemais was afterwards built; but Scylax and Ptolemy are of a different opinion. It is probable that it stood inland, and had a port on the coast. It was founded by the brothers of Arcesilaus III., king of Cyrene. It is now Barca Strab. 17.—Plin. 5, 5.—Ptol. 4, 4.——A small village of Bactriana, where the people who had been taken prisoners by Darius in Africa, were confined. Herod 4. 204.——A city of Media. Justin. 1, 7.

BARCHA, or BARCA, the surname of a noble family at Carthage, from which Annibal and Hamilcar were descended. By means of their bribes and influence, they excited a great faction, which is celebrated in the annals of Carthage by the name of the Barchinian faction, and at last raised themselves to power, and to the independent disposal of all the offices of trust or emolument in the state. Liv. 21, 2 et 9. 28, 12. 30, 7 et 42.—Cor Nep 21, 1.

BARDÆI, a people of Illyricum, concerned in the factions of Marius. Plut. in Mario.

BARDI, a celebrated sacerdotal order among the ancient Gauls, who praised their heroes, and published their fame in their verses, or on musical instruments. They were so esteemed and respected by the people, that, at their sight, two armies which were engaged in battle laid down their arms, and submitted to the bards. They censured, as well as commended the behaviour of the people.—Lucan 1, 447.—Strab. 4.—Marcell. 15, 24.

BARDUS CASSIUS, a friend of Cæsar's. Cic. Ph 13, 2.

BARDYLLIS, an Illyrian prince, whose daughter Birrenna married king Pyrrhus. Plut. in Pyrrh

BAREAS SORANUS, a youth killed by his tutor Egnatius, a Stoic philosopher. Juv. 3, 116.

BARES, a naval officer of Persia, who wished to destroy Cyrene, but was opposed by Amasis. Herod 4, 203.

BARGUSII, a people of Spain, at the east of the Iberus Liv. 21, 19 et 23.

BARGYLIÆ, a town of Caria, on the Sinus Bargyliacus. Liv. 32, 33. 37, 17.

BARINE, a prostitute whom Horace accuses of perjury. 2, od. 8

BARISSES, one of the seven conspirators against the usurper Smerdis. Clesias

BARIUM, a town of Apulia, on the Adriatic, now called Bari, and remarkable for its fine fish. Horat. Sat. 1, 5, 97

BARNUUS, a town of Macedonia, near Heraclea. Strab. 7.

BARRUS, a man ridiculed by Horace as proud of his beauty. Horat Sat. 1, 6, 80.

BARSINE and BARSENE, a daughter of Darius, who married Alexander, by whom she had a son called Hercules. Cassander ordered her and her child to be put to death. Justin. 13, 2 15, 2.—Arrian.

BARZAENTES, a satrap who revolted from Alexander, &c. Curt. 8, 13.

BARZANES, a king of Armenia, tributary to Ninus. Dod 2.

BASILEA, a daughter of Cœlus and Terra, who was mother of all the gods. Dod 3.——An island in the northern ocean, famous for its amber. Dod. 5.——An island in the Euxine sea. Plin. 4, 13.——A town on the Rhenus, in the territory of the Rauraci, now Basle

BASILIDÆ, European Sarmatians, descended from Hercules and Echidna. Mela, 2, 1.

BASILIDES, the father of Herodotus, who with others, attempted to destroy Strattes, tyrant of Chios. Herod. 8, 132.——A family who held an oligarchical power at Erythræ. Strab. 14.——A priest of mount Carmel, who foretold many momentous events to Vespasian, when he offered sacrifices. Tacit Hist. 2, 87.—Sueton. in Vesp. 7.——A divine born at Alexandria, in the second century, and founder of a sect which bore his name. Like Pythagoras, he enjoined five years of silence to his pupils, and seemed, to recommend great humility, and inward devotion. His writings are all lost. He died at Alexandria, A.D 130.

BASILĬPŌTĂMOS, the ancient name of the Eurotas, signifying the royal river. It is still called Basilico Potamo. Strab. 6.

BASĬLIS, an historian who wrote concerning India. Athen.——A city of Arcadia, built by Cypselus, near the river Alpheus. This town was in ruins in the age of Pausanias, and only a temple of Ceres remained to show its former consequence. Paus. 8, 29.

BASILIUS, a river of Mesopotamia, falling into the Euphrates. Strab.——A celebrated bishop of Africa, born at Cæsarea in Cappadocia, very animated against the Arians, whose tenets and doctrines he refuted with warmth, but great ability He was eloquent as well as ingenious, and possessed of all those qualities which constitute the persuasive orator, and the elegant writer. Erasmus has placed him in the number of the greatest orators of antiquity. He died in his 51st year, A.D. 379. The latest edition of his works is that of the Benedictines, fol. Paris, 1721—30.——A man who, though patronised and esteemed by Cæsar, yet conspired against him. Cic. Fam. 6, ep 15.

BASĬLUS, a general who assisted Antony. Lucan 4, 416 ——An insignificant lawyer. Juv. 7, 146.——A prætor who plundered the provinces. Id. 10, 222.

BASSÆ, a place of Arcadia, where Apollo had a temple. Paus. 8, 30 et 41.

BASSANĬA, a town of Macedonia near Illyricum Liv 44, 30.

BASSĂREUS, a surname of Bacchus, from the dress or long robe, called Bassara, which his priests wore Horat Od 1, 18, 11.

BASSĂRIDES, a name given to the votaries of Bacchus, and to Agave by Persius, which seems derived from Bassara, a town of Libya sacred to the god, or from a particular dress worn by her priestesses, and so called by the Thracians. Persius 1, 101.

BASSUS AUFIDIUS, an historian in the age of Augustus, who wrote on the Germanic war Quintil. 10, 1.——Cæsius, a poet in Nero's age, to whom Persius addressed his sixth satire. He distinguished himself by his lyric compositions, in the execution of which he proved so happy, that he has been ranked with Horace. Only two of his verses are extant. It is said that he was burnt in his villa by an eruption of mount Vesuvius. Paus. 6.——Saleius, an epic poet, who lived also in the age of Nero.——Julius, an orator in the reign of Augustus, some of whose orations have been preserved by Seneca ——A man spoken of by Horace 1, od 36, 14, and described as fond of wine and women.

BASTARNÆ and BASTERNÆ, a people who first inhabited that part of European Sarmatia, which corresponds with a part of Poland and Prussia, and who afterwards approached the more southern parts, and established themselves to the left and right of the Tyras. They are considered to have been the founders of the Russians and Sclavonians. Liv. 40, 58.—Ovid. Trist. 2, 198. Strab. 7

BĂSTIA, the wife of Metellus. Luc. cpit 89.

BATA, a sea-port of Asia, on the Euxine, opposite Sinope. Strab. 6.

BATĂVI, or BATĀVI, a people of Germany, who inhabited that part of the continent known under the modern name of Holland, and called by the ancients, Batavorum insula. Liv. 4, 15.—Lucan. 1, 431.

BATHOS, a town of Arcadia, near the river Alpheus. Paus. 8, 29.

BATHYCLES, a celebrated artist of Magnesia. Paus. 3, 19.

BATHYLLUS, a beautiful youth of Samos, greatly beloved by Polycrates the tyrant, and by Anacreon. Horat. ep. 14, 9 ——Mecænas was also fond of a youth of Alexandria, of the same name. Juv. 6, 63.——The poet who claimed as his own Virgil's distich, Nocte pluat tota, &c bore also the same name.——A fountain of Arcadia. Paus 8, 31.

LENT BATIĀTUS, a man of Campania, who kept a house full of gladiators who rebelled against him. Plut in Cras.

BATIA, a naiad who married Œbalus Apollod. 3, 10.——A daughter of Teucer, who married Dardanus. Id.

BATINA and BANTĪNA. Vid Bantia.

BATIS, a eunuch, governor of Gaza, who upon being unwilling to yield, was dragged round the city, tied by the heels to Alexander's chariot Curt. 4, 6.

BATO, a Dardanian, who revolted to Rome from king Philip. Liv 31, 28.

BATON of Sinope, wrote commentaries on the Persian affairs. Strab. 12.——A charioteer of Amphiaraus. Paus 5, 17.

BATRACHOMYOMACHĪA, a mock-heroic poem, describing the fight between frogs and mice This poem is commonly ascribed to Homer, and printed with the editions of the Iliad and Odyssey, but others have attributed it to Pigres, of Halicarnassus, in Asia Minor The best edition of it is that of Matthiæ, 8vo. Lips 1805

BATTĪADES, a patronymic of Callimachus, from his father Battus. Ovid. in Ibin 53 ——A name given to the people of Cyrene from king Battus Mel 3, 253.

BATTĪS, a girl of Cos, celebrated by Philetus the elegiac poet. Ovid Trist. 1, el 5, 2.

BATTUS 1st, a Lacedæmonian, who built the town of Cyrene, B.C. 630, with a colony from the island of Thera. He was son of Polymnestus and Phronime, and reigned in the town he had founded, and after death received divine honours The difficulty with which he spoke first procured him the name of Battus. Herod. 4, 155, &c.—Paus. 3, 14. 10, 15.——The 2d of that name was grandson to Battus 1st by Arcesilaus. He succeeded his father on the throne of Cyrene, and was surnamed Felix, and died 554 B C. Herod. 4, 159, &c.——A shepherd of Pylos, who promised Mercury that he would not discover his having stolen the flocks of Admetus, which Apollo tended. He violated his promise, and was turned into a pumice stone. Ovid. Met 2, 702 ——A general of Corinth against Athens. Thucyd. 4, 43.——A buffoon of Cæsar's. Plut Symp. 6.

BATŬLUM, a town of Campania, whose inhabitants assisted Turnus against Æneas. Virg. Æn 7, 739.

BATTŬLUS, a surname of Demosthenes, from his effeminacy when young. Plut. in Demosth.

BATYLLUS, a celebrated dancer in Domitian's reign Juv. 6 63.

BAUBO, a woman who received Ceres when she sought her daughter all over the world, and gave her some water to quench her thirst. Ovid, Met. 5, fab. 7.

BAUCIS, an aged and infirm woman of Phrygia, who with her husband Philemon, lived in a small cottage, in a penurious manner, when Jupiter and Mercury travelled in disguise over Asia. The gods came to the cottage, where they received the best things it afforded; and Jupiter was so pleased with their hospitality, that he metamorphosed their dwelling into a magnificent temple, of which Baucis and her husband were made priests. After they had lived happy to an extreme old age, they died both at the same hour, according to their request to Jupiter, that one might not have the sorrow of following the other to the grave. Their bodies were changed into trees before the doors of the temple. Ovid Met. 8, 631, &c.

BAULI, a small town of Latium, near Baiæ. Ital 12, 155.

BAVIUS and MÆVIUS, two stupid and malevolent poets in the age of Augustus. They attacked the superior talents of the contemporary writers, and have therefore become immortalised by the satire and ridicule which they drew upon themselves Virg. Ecl 3.

BAZAENTES, a friend of Bessus, &c.

BAZARIA a country of Asia. Curt. 8, 1.

BEBIUS, a famous informer in Vespasian's reign Juv 1, 35 Vid Babius.

BEBRYCE, a daughter of Danaus, who is said to have spared her husband Most authors, however, attribute that character of humanity to Hypermnestra. Vid. Danaides.

BEBRYCES and BEBRYCII, a nation of Asia near Pontus, of Thracian origin, and according to Arrian, descended from Bebryce. They were expert in the battle of the cestus. The Argonauts touched on their coasts in their expedition to Colchis, and at that time Amycus, son of Neptune, was king of the country. Virg. Æn 5, 373.—Apollod 1.—Strab 7 et 12.

BEBRYCIA, an ancient name of Bithynia, from Bebryce the daughter of Danaus. Strab 13.—Virg. Æn 5, 373.

BEBRYX, a king of part of Spain. His daughter Pyrene is supposed to have given her name to the Pyrenean mountains, which formed part of her father's dominions. Sil It 3, 420, &c.

BEDRIACUM, a small town of Italy, between Cremona and Mantua. It was famous for two successive defeats, that of Galba by Otho, and of Otho by Vitellius. It is now Cividale. Juv. 2, 106.—Tacit. Hist. 3, 1, 15.

BELEMINA, a town of Laconia. Paus. 3, 21.

BELENUS, a divinity of the Gauls, the same as the Apollo of the Greeks, and the Orus of the Egyptians.

BELEPHANTES, a Chaldean, who, from his knowledge of astronomy, told Alexander that, his entering Babylon would be attended with fatal consequences to him. Diod. 17.

BELERIUM, a promontory of Britain, now Land's End.

BELESIS, a priest of Babylon, who told Arbaces governor of Media, that he should reign one day in the place of Sardanapalus. His prophecy was verified, and he was rewarded by the new king with the government of Babylon, B.C. 826. Diod 2.

BELGÆ, a people of ancient Gaul, who inhabited the country extending from the Rhenus or Rhine, to the Liger or Loire. They seem to have been originally Scythians or Goths, who, after defeating the Cimbri, took possession of the north-west part of Gaul. According to the testimony of Cæsar, they were the most warlike of the Gauls. Cæs. de Bell. Gall. 1, 1. 2, &c.—Mela, 3, 1.—Strab. 4.——Some of the Britons were also called Belgæ, as no doubt descended from a Belgic colony. Cæs. B. Gall. 5, 12.

BELGICA, one of the four provinces of Gaul, near the Rhine, according to the division made by Augustus; but, according to Julius Cæsar, Belgica formed a third part of Gaul. Vid. Gallia.

BELGIUM, a part of Gallia Belgica, was originally the land of the Bellovaci, Atrebates, and Ambiani. These three tribes were the proper and genuine Belgæ. Cæs. B. G. 5, 24.

BELGIUS, a general of Gaul, who destroyed an army of Macedonians. Justin. 25, 2.—Polyb. 4.

BELIDES, a surname given to the daughters of Belus Ovid Met 4, 463

BELIDES, a name applied to Palamedes, as descended from Belus. Virg. Æn 2, 82.

BELISAMA, the name of Minerva among the Gauls, signifying queen of heaven. The ceremonies of her worship are unknown. She however was represented with a helmet on her head, but without either her ægis or a spear in her hand Cæs. Bell Gall. 6.

BELISARIUS, a celebrated general in the service of the emperor Justinian. After serving his country against the Persians, the Vandals in Africa, the Goths and the Huns in Italy, and every where displaying marks of wisdom, fortitude, bravery, and heroism, he was accused of rebellion, and dishonourably condemned by the weak emperor, who confiscated his estates. The story of his being blind, and begging for his bread, is of modern invention. He died A.D. 565.

BELISTIDA, a woman who obtained a prize at Olympia. Paus 6, 8.

BELITÆ, a nation of Asia. Curt. 4, 12.

BELLEROPHON, a son of Glaucus king of Ephyre, by Eurymede, was at first called Hipponous. The murder of his brother, whom some call Alcimenus or Beller, procured him the name of Bellerophon, or murderer of Beller. After this murder, Bellerophon fled to the court of Proetus king of Argos. As he was of a handsome appearance, the king's wife, called Antea or Stenobœa, fell in love with him; and as he slighted her passion, she accused him before her husband of attempts upon her virtue. Proetus unwilling to violate the laws of hospitality, by punishing Bellerophon, sent him away to his father-in-law Jobates king of Lycia, and gave him a letter, in which he begged the king to punish with death, a man who had so dishonourably treated his daughter. From that circumstance, all letters which are of an unfavourable tendency to the bearer, have been called letters of Bellerophon. Jobates, to satisfy his son-in-law, sent Bellerophon to conquer a horrible monster called Chimæra, in which dangerous expedition, he hoped, and was even assured, he must perish. (Vid. Chimæra) But the providence of Minerva supported him, and, with the aid of the winged horse Pegasus, he conquered the monster, and returned victorious. After this Jobates sent him against the Solymi, in hopes of seeing him destroyed; but he obtained another victory; and conquered afterwards the Amazons, by the king's order. At his return from this third expedition, he was attacked by a party sent against him by Jobates; but he destroyed all his assassins, and convinced the king that innocence is always protected by the gods. Upon this, Jobates no longer sought to destroy his life; but he gave him his daughter in marriage.

and made him his successor on the throne of Lycia, as he was without male issue. Some authors have supported, that he attempted to fly to heaven upon the horse Pegasus; but that Jupiter sent an insect, which stung the horse, and threw down the rider, who wandered upon the earth in the greatest melancholy and dejection till the day of his death, one generation before the Trojan war. Bellerophon had two sons, Isander, who was killed in his war against the Solymi, and Hippolochus, who succeeded to the throne after his death, besides one daughter called Hippodamia, who had Sarpedon by Jupiter. The wife of Bellerophon is called Philonoe by Apollodorus, and Achemone by Homer. Homer. Il. 6, 156, &c.—Juv. 10.—Apollod. 2, 3 3, 1.—Hygin. fab 157 et 243. P A 2, 18 Hesiod. Theog 325.—Horat. 4, od 11, 26—Paus 9, 31.

BELLEROUS and BELLER, a brother of Hippolous Vid. Bellerophon.

BELLIENUS, a Roman, whose house was set on flames at Cæsar's funeral. Ov. Phil 2, 36.

BELLONA, the goddess of war, daughter of Phoreys and Ceto She was called by the Greeks Enyo, and is often confounded with Minerva. She was anciently called Duellona, and was the sister of Mars, or according to some, his daughter, or his wife. She prepared his chariot when he was going to war, and drove his steeds through the tumult of the battle with a bloody scourge, her hair dishevelled, and a torch in her hand. The Romans paid great adoration to her; but she was held in the greatest veneration by the Cappadocians, chiefly at Comana, where she had above 3000 priests Her temple at Rome was near the Porta Carmentalis In it the senators gave audience to foreign ambassadors, and to generals returned from war. At the gate was a small column, called the column of war, against which they threw a spear whenever war was declared. The priests of this goddess consecrated themselves by making great incisions in their bodies, and particularly in the thigh, from which they received the blood in their hands to offer as a sacrifice to the goddess. In their wild enthusiasm, they often predicted bloodshed and wars, the defeat of enemies, of the besieging of towns Jun. 4, 124.—Marro de L. L. 5.—Herod. Theog. 276.—Paus 4, 30.—Virg. Æn. 8, 703.—Stat. Theb. 2, 715, 7, 73.—Val. 5, 221

BELLONARII, the priests of Bellona

BELLOVACI a people of Gaul; conquered by J. Cæsar Cæs. Bell 2, 4.

BELLOVESUS, a king of the Celtæ, who, in the reign of Tarquin Priscus, was sent at the head of a colony to Italy by his uncle Ambigatus. Liv. 5, 34

BELON, a general of Alexander's Curt 6, 11.

BELON—A city and river of Hispania Bætica. Strab 3

BELUS, one of the most ancient kings of Babylon, about 1800 years before the age of Semiramis, was made a god after death, and worshipped with much ceremony by the Assyrians and Babylonians He was supposed to be the son of the Osiris of the Egyptians. The temple of Belus was the most ancient and most magnificent in the world It was originally the tower of Babel, which was converted into a temple. It had forty towers, and it was enriched by all the succeeding monarchs till the age of Xerxes, who, after his unfortunate expedition against Greece, plundered and demolished it. Among the riches it contained, were many statues of massy gold, one of which was forty feet high. In the highest of the towers was a magnificent bed, where the priests daily conducted a woman, who, as they said, was honoured with the company of the god Joseph. Ant. Jud. 10.—Herod. 1, 181, &c.—Strab 16.—Arrian 7.—Diod. 1, &c.——A king of Egypt, son of Epaphus and Libya, and father of Agenor ——The father of Danaus and Ægyptus was also called Belus, and from him the daughters of Danaus were called Belides Ovid Met. 4, 463 ——Another, son of Phœnix the son of Agenor, who reigned in Phœnicia.——One of his descendants bore the same name, and was father to Dido, who founded Carthage. Virg. Æn. 1, 621.——A small river of Syria, falling into the Mediterranean near Ptolemais. It abounds in sand proper for the manufacture of glass; and it was there that the art of making glass was first discovered. Plin 5, 19 ss. 20.

BENACUS, a lake of Italy, now Lago di Garda, from which the Mincius flows into the Po Virg G 2, 160 Æn. 10, 205.

BENDIDIUM, a temple of Diana Bendis. Liv 38, 41

BENDIS, a name of Diana among the Thracians and their northern neighbours. Strab 9. ——Her festivals, called Bendidea, were introduced from Thrace into Athens, and celebrated the 20th of the month called Thargelion Liv. 38, 41.

BENEVENTUM, now Benevento, a town of the Hirpini, situated near the junction of the rivers Sabatus and Calor, and founded, as it is said, by Diomedes. It was anciently called Maleventum, on account of its unhealthy atmosphere, which name was changed by the Romans into Beneventum. In the neighbourhood of this place Pyrrhus was defeated by Curius Dentatus, B C. 270. Beneventum is still celebrated for its remains of ancient sculpture and architecture The most interesting relic of antiquity is Trajan's triumphal arch, which forms one of the entrances to the city, and is called the porta aurea Plin 3, 11.

BENTHESICYME, a daughter of Neptune, the nurse of Eumolpus Apollod. 3, 15.

BEPOLITANUS, a youth whose life was saved by the delay of the executioner, who wished not to stain the youth's fine clothes with blood. Plut. de Curi Mul.

BERBICES, a nation who destroyed their relations when arrived at a certain age. Ælian. V. H 4, 1.

BERECYNTHIA, a surname of Cybele, from mount Berecynthus in Phrygia, where she was particularly worshipped. She has been celebrated by Catullus, in a poem, entitled De Berecynthia et Aty Ovid Fast. 4, 335. Met. 11, 16.—Catull 64.—Plin 5, 29. 16, 15.—Dion. Hal.—Stat Theb 4, 782. Virg Æn. 9, 82.

BERENICE and BERONICE, a woman famous for her beauty, mother of Ptolemy Philadelphus by Lagus. Athen. D. Liv 13, 14.—Theocrit. Adon. 1, 7.—A daughter of Philadelphus, who married Antiochus king of Syria, after he had divorced Laodice, his former wife. After the death of Philadelphus, Laodice was recalled, and mindful of the treatment which she had received, she poisoned her husband, placed her son on the vacant throne, and murdered Berenice and her child at Antioch, whither she had fled, B C 246. ——A daughter of Ptolemy Auletes, who usurped her father's throne for some time, strangled her husband Seleucus, and married Archelaus, a priest of Bellona. Her father regained his power, and put her to death, B.C 55.——The wife of Mithridates, who, when conquered by Lucullus, ordered all his wives to destroy themselves, for fear the conqueror should offer violence to them. She accordingly drank poison, but this not operating soon enough, she was strangled by an eunuch.——The mother of Agrippa, who shines in the history of the Jews, as daughter-in-law of Herod the Great.——A daughter of Agrippa, who married her uncle Herod, and afterwards Polemon, king of Cilicia She was accused of committing incest with her brother Agrippa. It is said that she was passionately loved by Titus, who would have made her empress but for fear of the people. Jus 6, 157.—Suet Tit. 7.—Joseph Ant. 20, 5.—Tacit. Hist 2, 2 ——A wife of king Attalus.——Another daughter of Philadelphus and Arsinoe, who married her own brother Evergetes; whom she loved with much tenderness When he went on a dangerous expedition, she made a vow to devote her beautiful hair to the goddess Venus, if he returned safe Some time after his victorious return, the locks which were in the temple of Venus disappeared; and Conon, an astronomer, to make his court to the queen, publicly reported that Jupiter had carried them away, and had made them a constellation She was put to death by her son, B C 221 Catull 67.—Hygin. P. A 2, 24 —Justin. 26, 3.——This name is common to many of the queens and princesses in the Ptolemean family in Egypt.——A woman who was daughter, sister, and mother of persons who had been crowned at the Olympic games. In consequence of this she was the only woman admitted as a spectatress. Val. Max 8, 13.—Ælian V H. 10, 1.——A city of Libya Strab.—Mela, 3, 8.——Two towns of Arabia. Strab. 16 —— One in Egypt, on the shores of the Red Sea, where merchandise from India was debarked, and carried over land on camels to Coptos. Plin. 6, 23.——Another in Cyrenaica, likewise called Hesperis, near which were the famous gardens of the Hesperides. It is now Bengazi. Plin. 5, 5 —Strab. 17.

BERENICIS, a part of Africa, near the town of Berenice. Lucan 9, 523

BERGIÓN and ALBION, two giants, sons of Neptune, who opposed Hercules as he attempted to cross the Rhone, and were killed with stones from heaven. Mel., 2, 5.

BERGISTÂNI, a people of Spain, at the east of the Iberus. Liv. 34, 16.

BERIS and BARIS, a river of Cappadocia.——A mountain of Armenia.

BERMIUS, a mountain of Macedonia. Herod. 8, 138.

BERÖE, an old woman of Epidaurus, nurse to Semele. Juno assumed her shape when she persuaded Semele not to grant her favours to Jupiter, if he did not appear in the majesty of a god. Ovid Met. 3, 278 ——The wife of Doryclus, whose form was assumed by Iris at the instigation of Juno, when she advised the Trojan women to burn the fleet of Æneas in Sicily. Virg. Æn 5, 620.——One of the Oceanides, attendant upon Cyrene. Virg G 4, 341.

BERŒA, or BERRHŒA, a large and populous city of Macedonia, south of Edessa, and southwest of Pella, at the foot of mount Bermius. Its inhabitants were commended by St Paul for their reception of the gospel on a fair and impartial hearing of it. Acts 17, 10, &c.——A town of Syria, east of Antiochia. Its Syriac name was Chalybon, which was changed to Berœa, when it fell into the hands of the Macedonians It preserves its old name in Haleb, or, as the Franks call it, Aleppo.

BERONICE. Vid Berenice.

BEROSUS, a native of Babylon, priest to Belus. He passed into Greece, and remained a long time at Athens He composed a history of Chaldæa, and signalized himself by his astronomical predictions, and was rewarded for his learning with a statue in the gymnasium at Athens. The age in which he lived is not precisely known, though some fix it in the reign of Alexander, or 268 years B.C. Some fragments of his Chaldæan history are preserved by Josephus, contra Appion et in Antiq. Jud. 10. The book that is now extant under his name, and speaks of kings that never existed, is a supposititious fabrication, imposed upon the world by Annius. Plin. 7, 37.

BERŸTUS, an ancient town of Phœnicia, situated about 24 miles south of Byblus It was destroyed by Tryphon, and restored by the Romans, who raised it to the rank of a colony with the title of Felix Julia. It is now Beirout. Plin. 5, 20.

BESA, a fountain in Thessaly. Strab. 8.

BESIDLÆ, a town of the Bruttii Liv 30, 19.

BESSIPPO, a town of Hispania Bætica, east of Junonis Promontorium, where Mela was born. It is now Beier. Mela, 2. 6.

BESSI, a people of Thrace, inhabiting a district called Bessica, between Mons Rhodope and the northern part of the Hebrus. They were the most hardy and unprincipled of all the Thracians. Strab. 7.—Plin 3, 11.—Liv, 39, 53. Cic. Tus 14. Plin. 4, 11.—Ovid. Trist 4, el. 1, 67.—Herod 7, 111.

BESSUS, a governor of Bactriana, who, after the battle of Arbela, seized Darius, his sovereign, and put him to death After this murder, he assumed the title of king, and was some time after brought before Alexander, who gave him to Oxatres, the brother of Darius. The prince ordered his hands and ears to be cut off, and his body to be exposed on a cross, and shot at by the soldiers. Justin 12, 3.—Curt 6 & 7.——A parricide who discovered the murder he had committed upon destroying a nest of swallows, which, as he observed, reproached him with his crime. Plut.

L. BESTIA, a seditious Roman, who conspired with Catiline against his country Cic in Phil. 2.

BETIS, a river in Spain (Vid Bætis)——A governor of Gaza, who bravely defended himself against Alexander, for which he was treated with cruelty by the conqueror BETURIA, a part of Bætica in Spain, at the north of the river Bætis. Liv 39, 30.

BIA, a daughter of Pallas by Styx. Apollod. 1, 2.

BIANOR, a son of Tiberius and Manto the daughter of Tiresias, who received the surname of Ocnus, and reigned over Etruria. He built a town which he called Mantua, after his mother's name. His tomb was seen in the age of Virgil, on the road between Mantua and Andes. Virg. Pcl. 9 60. Æn 10, 198 ——A Trojan chief killed by Agamemnon. Homer Il. 11, 92.——A centaur killed by Theseus. Ovid. Met. 12, 342.

BIAS, son of Amythaon and Idomene, was king of Argos, and brother to the famous soothsayer Melampus. He fell in love with Perone, daughter of Neleus king of Pylos; but the father refused to give his daughter in marriage before he received the oxen of Iphiclus. Melampus, at his brother's request, went to seize the oxen, and was caught in the fact. He, however, in one year after received his liberty from Iphiclus, who presented him with his oxen as a reward for his great services. Bias received the oxen from his brother, and obliged Neleus to give him his daughter in marriage Homer. Odyss. 11.—Paus. 2, 6 et 18. 4, 34—Apollod. 1, 9.—A Grecian prince, who went to the Trojan war. Homer Il. 4, 13 et 20.——A river of Peloponnesus. Paus. 4, 34.——One of the seven wise men of Greece, son of Teutamus, born at Priene, in Ionia, about 570 B.C. He distinguished himself by the generosity of his disposition. Several young female captives from Messene having been brought for sale to Priene, Bias redeemed them, educated them at his own expense, and restored them with a dowry to their parents. He set a slight value on the goods of fortune, in comparison with those of the mind. During an invasion, when all persons but himself were collecting their valuables for flight, he replied to those who expressed their wonder at his indifference, "I carry every thing of mine about me." Bias is said to have written more than two thousand verses on the subject, "How Ionia might prosper" He died in the arms of his grandson, as he was pleading a cause in behalf of a friend. Diog. 1.—Plut in Symp.—Vit. Max 7, 2.—Paus 10, 24.—Cic. Amic. 16 Paradox. 1.

BIBACULUS, M. FURIUS, a Latin poet of Cremona, in the age of Cicero, intimate with the poet Gallus and Cato. He composed annals in Iambic verses, and wrote epigrams full of wit and humour, and other poems admired by the ancients for their ease, neatness, and elegance. It is said that Virgil imitated his poetry, and even copied some of his lines. Horace, however, has not failed to ridicule his verses. Only sixteen verses remain of his poetry. Horat. Sat 2, 5, 41.—Quintil. 10.—Suet. in Cæs.——A prætor, &c Val. Max 1, 1.

BIBESIA or POTINA, a goddess among the Romans, who presided over the liquors which were taken during meals Another divinity, called Edesia, presided over the taking of the solid food. Aug de Civ. D 4, 2

BIBLIA and BILLIA, a Roman lady famous for her chastity She married Dyllius.

BIBLIS, a woman who became enamoured of her brother Caunus, and was changed into a fountain near Miletus. Ovid. Met. 9, 6b2.

BIBLINA, a country of Thrace.

BIBLUS, a city of Phœnicia. Curt. 4.

BIBRACTE, a large and populous town of the Ædui in Gaul, upon the Arroux, one of the branches of the Ligeris, or Loire. It assumed the name of Augustodunum under Augustus, and is now called Autun. Cæs. Bell G. 7, 55, &c.

BIBRAX, a town of the Remi, north-west of Duapeortorum. It is now Bievre Cæs B. G. 2, 6.

BIBROCI, an ancient people of Britain, who are supposed to have occupied the south-east part of Berkshire. Cæs. B G. 5, 21.

BIBULUS, a son of M. Calpurnius Bibulus by Portia, Cato's daughter. He was Cæsar's colleague in the consulship, but of no consequence to the state, according to this distich mentioned by Suetos. in Jul. 20:

Non Bibulo quicquam nuper, sed Cæsare factum est:
Nam Bibulo fieri consule nil memini.

——One of the friends of Horace bore that name, Sat. 1, 10, 36.

BICES, a marsh near the Palus Mœotis. Flacc. 6, 68.

BICON, a Greek who assassinated Athenodorus, because he made himself master of a colony which Alexander had left at Bactra. Curt. 9, 7

BICORNIGER, an appellation of Bacchus, who is sometimes represented with horns, as symbols of the rays of the sun, or of the virtue which he imparts to wine

BICORNIS, the name of Alexander the Great among the Arabians, either expressive of his having added the eastern to the western empire, or in allusion to medals on which he is represented with horns, under the pretence that he was the son of Ammon.

BIFORMIS, (two forms,) a surname of Bacchus. He received it because he changed himself into an old woman, to fly from the persecution of Juno, or perhaps because he was represented sometimes as a young, and sometimes as an old man, or because wine, over which he presided, rendered men sorrowful and frantic, or gay and pleasant.——The same name is applied, but not frequently, to Janus. Ovid Fast. 1, 98

BIFRONS a surname of Janus, because he was represented with two faces among the Romans as acquainted with the past and future Virg. Æn. 7, 180.

BILBILIS, a town of Hispania Terraconensis, belonging to the Celtiberi, south-east of Numantia. It was the birth-place of the poet Martial. It is now Calatayud Mart 1, ep 50.——A river of Spain, whose waters were famed for the tempering of steel. It is now the Salo or Xalon. Justin 44, 3.

BIMATER, a surname of Bacchus, which signifies that he had two mothers, because when he was taken from his mother's womb, he was placed in the thigh of his father Jupiter. Ovid Met. 4, 12.

BINGIUM, a town of Gaul, in Germania Prima, about 18 miles west of Moguntiacum, or Mayne It is now Bingen Tacit. Hist 4, 70.

BION, a philosopher of Borysthenes in Scythia, who flourished in the reign of Antigonus Gonatus, B C. 276. He is said when young to have been slave to a rhetorician, who gave him his freedom, and left him a legacy which enabled him to study philosophy at Athens He was first an auditor of Crates, then of Theodorus the atheist, and finally of Theophrastus, but he chiefly followed the opinions of Theodorus He was skilled in music and poetry, and also distinguished himself by his repartees. He died at Chalcis in Eubœa Horat 2, ep 2, 60.—Diog in vita——A Greek bucolic poet, born in Smyrna, and contemporary with Theocritus. Moschus, his friend and disciple, mentions in a most beautiful and highly finished elegiac poem still extant, that he was taken off by poison Of his poems, besides some few fragments, and ludicrous and puerile imitations of a hatchet, an egg, wings, &c. in words, there are now extant only six idyllia, comprehended in about 170 lines, written with elegance, simplicity, and purity, and abounding with correct and pleasing imagery. The poems of Bion are generally annexed to those of Theocritus and Moschus. They have been published separately by Fr. Jacobs, Gotha, 1795; G. Wakefield, London, 1795; and J. C. F. Maas, Leipsic, 1807.——A soldier in Alexander's army, &c. Curt. 4, 13.——A native of Proponti, in the age of Pherecydes.——A native of Abdera, disciple to Democritus. He first found out that there were certain parts of the earth where there were six months of perpetual light and darkness alternately ——A man of Soli, who composed a history of Æthiopia.

BIRRHUS. Vid. Cœlius.

BISALTÆ, a people of Macedonia, above Amphipolis and the coast of the Sinus Strymonicus. Their country was called Bisaltia. Liv. 41, 4. 45, 29 —Plin. 4, 10.—Dion 24

BISALTES, a man of Abydos, &c. Herod. 6, 26.

BISALTIS, a patronymic of Theophane, by whom Neptune, under the form of a ram, had the golden ram Her father's name was Bisaltes. Ovid. Met 6, 177 —Hygin fab. 188

BISANTHE, a town on the confines of the Propontis, north-west of Perinthus. It was built by the Samians. It was called also Rhædestus, and is now Rodosto Herod. 7, 137

BISTON, son of Mars and Callirhoe, built Bistonia in Thrace, whence the Thracians are often called Bistones. Herod. 7, 110 —Plin 4, 14.—Lucan 7, 50).

BISTONIS, a lake of Thrace near Abdera. Herod 7, 109.

BITHUS. Vid Bacchius.

BITHYÆ, a certain race of women of Scythia, whose eyes, as Pliny reports, 7, 2, killed those who gazed upon them for some time.

BITHYNIA, a country of Asia Minor, formerly called Bebrycia It was bounded by the Pontus Euxinus on the north, on the south by Phrygia and Galatia, on the west by Mysia and the Propontis, and on the east by Paphlagonia. It was successively inhabited by the Phrygians, Mysians, and Bithynians. The latter people, who are said to have come from Thrace, gave it the name of Bithynia It was a beautiful and romantic country, intersected by lofty mountains and fertile plains, rich in fruits and wine, and abounding in forests. Strab 12.—Herod. 7, 75. —Mela, 1 et 2 According to Pliny, 5, 9, the inhabitants were descended from Mantinea, in Peloponnesus

BITIAS, a Trojan, son of Alcanor and Hiera, brought up in a wood sacred to Jupiter. He followed the fortune of Æneas, and, with his brother, was killed by the Rutuli in Italy. Virg. Æn. 9, 672, &c.——One of Dido's lovers, present when Æneas and the Trojans were introduced to the queen. Virg. Æn. 1, 742.

BITON, a Greek mathematician, who lived about 250 B.C He composed a treatise on the construction of Catapultæ, which is inserted in the Mathematici Veteres Vid. Cleobis.

BITUITUS, a king of the Allobroges, conquered by a small number of Romans, &c. Val. Max. 9, 6.—Flor. 3, 2.

BITUNTUM, a town of Spain. Mart. 4, ep. 55.

BITURIGES CUBI, the name of a people who occupied a considerable part of Aquitania Prima, and who had been much more powerful before the conquest of Gaul by Cæsar, than they were afterwards. Their chief city was Avaricum. Cæs. Bell. G. 7, 21.——Bituriges Vivisci, a people who inhabited the southern part of Aquitania Secunda. Their capital was Burdigala.

BITURICUM, a town of Gaul, formerly the capital of the Belgæ. Strab. 4.

BIZYA, a town on the Euxine, a little above Salmydessus, the residence of Tereus, the husband of Procne. Now Visa. Vid. Tereus.

BLÆNA, a fruitful country of Pontus, where the general of Mithridates Eupator destroyed the forces of Nicomedes the Bithynian. Strab. 12.

BLÆSII, two Romans who killed themselves because Tiberius deprived them of the præsthood Tacit Ann. 6, 40.

JUN. BLÆSUS, a governor of Gaul. Tacit.—— A surname given to Aristæus or Battus, the founder of Cyrene, from his stammering. Ovid. Ibin 541 —Justin. 13, 7.

BLANDENONA, a place near Placentia. Cic. 2, ep 15, ad Quin

BLANDUSIA, a famous fountain of Sicily, celebrated by Horace in the thirteenth ode of his third book, placed by some at his Sabine farm; but proved by the abbe Chaupy, to be near Venusia in Apulia.

BLEMMYES, the name of a people who appear to have inhabited part of Ethiopia; and who, probably from the circumstance of depressing their heads, and raising their shoulders, were represented by the ancients as without heads, and as having their eyes and mouths in their breasts. Mela, 1, 4.

BLENINA, a town of Arcadia. Paus. 8, 27.

BLITIUS CATULINUS, was banished into the Ægean sea, after Piso's conspiracy, &c. Tacit. Ann. 15, 71.

BLUCIUM, a castle where king Dejotarus kept his treasures in Bithynia. Strab. 12.

BOADICEA. Vid. Boudicea.

BOÆ and BŒA, a town of Laconia, at the extremity of the Bœaticus Sinus Paus. 3, 21.

BOAGRIUS, a river, or rather torrent, of the Locri Epicnemidi. It watered the town of Thronium. Strab. 9.

BOCALIAS, a river in the island of Salamis.

BOCCAR, a king of Mauritania. Jus. 4, 90, applies the word in a general sense to any native of Africa.

BOCCHORIS, a wise king and legislator of Egypt. Diod 1.

BOCCHUS, a king of Getulia, in alliance with Rome, who perfidiously delivered Jugurtha to Sylla, the lieutenant of Marius. Sallust, Jug.— Patere. 2, 12.

BODERIA, or BODOTRIA, the Frith of Forth in Scotland.

BODUOGNATUS, a leader of the Nervii, when Cæsar made war against them. Cæs. Bell. G. 2, 23.

BODUNI, a people of Britain who surrendered to Claudius. Dio. Cass. 60.

BOEA. Vid Boæ.

BŒBE, a town of Thessaly Ovid Met. 7, fab. 5.——A lake of Crete. Strab. 9.

BŒBEIS, a lake of Thessaly, near mount Ossa. Lucan. 7, 176

BŒBIA LEX was enacted to elect four prætors every year.——Another to insure proprietors in the possession of their lands ——Another, A. U. C. 571, against using bribes at elections.

BOEDROMIA, an Athenian festival, which received its name ἀπο τοῦ βοηδρομεῖν, from coming to help; because it was instituted in memory of Ion the son of Xuthus, who assisted the Athenians when invaded by Eumolpus, the son of Neptune.

Others say that it was observed in memory of a victory obtained by Theseus over the Amazons, in the month Boedromion. Suid.—Plutarch. in Thes.

BŒOTARCHÆ, the chief magistrates in Bœotia. Liv. 42, 43

BŒOTIA, a country of Greece, bounded on the north by Phocis and the country of the Locri Opuntii, on the south by Attica and Megaris, on the east by the Euripus, or strait of Eubœa; and on the west by the Halcyonian sea and Phocis. It has been successively called Aonia, Mesapia, Hyanthis, Ogygia, and Cadmeis, and now forms a part of Livadia. It was called Bœotia, according to some, from Bœotus, son of Itonus; or, according to others, from βοῦς, bos, owing to Cadmus having been led by an ox to the spot where he built Thebes. Bœotia was perhaps the richest and most fertile country in Greece. Its inhabitants were noted for their natural dullness and stupidity, even to a proverb (Bœotia ſ.), yet it will be found that no single province in Greece, save Attica, could furnish a list of poets and other writers in which are included such names as Hesiod, Corinna, Pindar, and Plutarch. Herod. 2, 49. 5, 57.—Ovid. Met 3, 10.—Paus 9, 1, &c.—C. Nep. 7, 11.—Strab. 9.—Justin. 3, 6. 8, 4.—Horat. 2, ep 1, 244.—Diod. 19.—Luc. 27, 30, &c.

BŒOTUS, a son of Itonus by Menalippa Paus. 9, 1.

BŒOBORISTAS, a man who made himself absolute among the Getæ, by the strictness of his discipline Strab 7.

BOETHIUS, ANIC. MANL. TORQUATUS SEVERINUS, a celebrated Roman, banished and afterwards punished with death, on suspicion of conspiracy, by Theodoric king of the Ostrogoths, A. D. 525. In his exile he was accompanied by his wife Elpis, who soothed his misfortunes, and who deserved his affection not less by her fondness for literature and poetry, than her great mental fortitude. He left two sons, Patricius and Hypatius, who preserved their rank and consequence in the Roman state. It was during his imprisonment that he wrote his celebrated poetical treatise De consolatione philosophiæ, in five books. It may be said that with this respectable writer the Latin tongue, and the last remains of Roman dignity, sunk in the western world. The best edition of his works is that of Basle, in 2 vols. fol. 1570. Vossius de P. Latin.

BOETUS a foolish poet of Tarsus, who wrote a poem on the battle of Philippi. Strab. 14.——A river of Spain, more properly called Bætis. Vid. Bætis.

BOGUS, one of the Heraclidæ

BOGUS and BORS, a Persian who destroyed himself and family when besieged by the Athenians. Herod. 7, 107.—Paus. 8, 8.

BOGUD, a king of Mauritania in the interest of Cæsar. Cæsar. Alex 59

BOGUS, a King of the Maurusii, present at the battle of Actium. Strab. 8.

BOII, a people of Celtic Gaul, who migrated into Cisalpine Gaul, and the north of Italy on the banks of the Po. Cæs. Bell. G 1, 28. 7, 17.—Sil 4, 188.

BOIOCALUS, a general of the Germans in the age of Tiberius, &c. Tacit Ann. 13, 55.

BOLA, a town of the Æqui in Italy. Virg. Æn 6, 775.

BOLANUS, a man whom Horace represents, I Sat. 9, 11, as of the most irascible temper, and the most inimical to loquacity. Some, however, imagine that he was of a very patient and phlegmatic temper, that would endure without dissatisfaction any impertinence.——Marcus, a friend of Cicero's. Cic. ad Fam. 13 ep. 77.

BOLBE, a marsh near Mygdonia. Thucyd. 1, 58.

BOLBITINUM, one of the mouths of the Nile, with a town of the same name. Naucratis was built near it. Herod. 1, 17.

BOLGIUS, a general of Gaul, in an expedition against Ptolemy king of Macedonia. Paus. 10, 19.

BOLINA, a virgin of Achaia, who rejected the addresses of Apollo, and threw herself into the sea to avoid his importunities. The god made her immortal. There is a city which bears her name in Achaia. Paus. 7, 23.

BOLINÆUS, a river near Bolina. Paus. 7, 23

BOLISSUS, a town and island near Chios. Thucyd 8, 24.

BOLUS, a king of the Cimbri, who killed a Roman ambassador Liv. ep 67.

BOMIENSES, a people near Ætolia Thucyd. 3, 96.

BOMILCAR, a Carthaginian general, son of Amilcar He was suspected of a conspiracy with Agathocles, and hung in the forum, where he had received all his dignity Diod 20.—Justin. 22, 7.——An African, for some time the instrument of all Jugurtha's cruelties. He conspired against Jugurtha, who put him to death. Sallust. Jug

BOMONICA: youths that were whipt at the altar of Diana Orthia during the festivals of the goddess. He who bore the lash of the whip with the greatest patience, and without uttering a groan, was declared victorious, and received an honourable prize. (Vid. Diamastigosis.) Paus. 3, 16.—Plut. in Lyc.

BONA DEA, a name given to Ops, Vesta, Cybele, and Rhea, by the Greeks, and by the Latins, to Fauna, or Fatua. This goddess was so chaste that no man but her husband saw her after her marriage; from which reason her festivals were celebrated only in the night by the Roman matrons in the houses of the highest officers of the state, and all the statues of the men were carefully covered with a veil where the ceremonies were observed In the latter ages of the republic, however, the sanctity of these mysteries was profaned by the intrusion of men, and by the introduction of lasciviousness and debauchery. The celebration was on the first of May. Jun. 6, 313.—Propert 4, 10, 25.—Ovid. de Art. Am. 3, 637

BONONIA, anciently called Felsina, a town of Gallia Cisalpina, north of the Apennines. It is now called Bologna. Plin. 3, 15.—Sil Ital 8, 599.—Luc. 33, 37.——A town of Pannonia, on the Danube, north of Sirmium. Its site corresponds with the position of Illok.——A town of the Morini, in Gaul. It was anciently named Gesoriacum, and is now Boulogne.

BONOSUS, an officer of Probus, who assumed the imperial purple in Gaul.

BONOSUS a bishop of Dacia, known in ecclesiastical history as the author of a heresy, which prevailed for upwards of 200 years. He died A. D. 410.

BONUS EVENTUS, a Roman deity, whose worship was first introduced by the peasants. He was represented holding a cup in his right hand.

and in his left, ears of corn. His power was supposed to extend only over particular events, and not like that of Fortune over the whole of human life. His statue, as well as that of good Fortune, made by the hand of Praxiteles, was placed in the capitol. Varro de R. R. 1.—Plin 34. 8

BOOSCRA (bovis cauda), a town of Cyprus, where Venus had an ancient temple. Strab

BOOTES, a northern constellation near the Ursa Major, also called Bubuleus and Arctophylax. Some suppose it to be Icarus, the father of Erigone, who was killed by shepherds for intoxicating them. Others maintain that it is Arcas, whom Jupiter placed in heaven, or else Erichthonius king of Athens. Ovid. Fast 3, 405 —Cic de Nat. D 2, 42.

BOOTUS and BŒOTUS, a son of Neptune and Menalippe, exposed by his mother, but preserved by shepherds Hygin. fab 186.

BORA, a mountain of Macedonia, between Illyria and Epirus. Liv 45, 29

BORBETOMAGUS, a town of Germany, on the west side of the Rhine. It was the capitol of the Vangiones. Now Worms. Ptol.

BORCOVIUM, a town of Britain, now Berwick, at the mouth of the Tweed in Scotland.

BOREA, a town taken by Sextus Pompey. Cic 16, ad Att ep. 4

BORÆADES, the descendants of Boreas, who long possessed the supreme power and the priesthood in the island of the Hyperboreans. Diod 1 et 2.

BOREAS, the name of the north wind blowing from the Hyperborean mountains According to the poets, he was son of Astræus and Aurora, but others make him son of the Tyrannus. He was passionately fond of Hyacinthus, (Vid. Hyacinthus), and carried away Orithyia, who refused to receive his addresses, and by her he had Zetes and Calais, Cleopatra and Chione. He was worshipped as a deity, and represented with wings and white hair, and with distended mouth blowing snow, storms, cold, hail, and all the inclement blasts of a northern climate. The Athenians dedicated altars to him, and to the winds, when Xerxes invaded Europe, and rewarded his supposed services by erecting him a temple on the banks of the Ilissus He was also particularly honoured by the people of Megalopolis, and a large space of ground was set apart and consecrated to his divinity. Boreas changed himself into a horse, to unite himself with the mares of Dardanus, by which he had twelve mares so swift, that they ran or rather flew over the sea, without scarce wetting their feet. Homer Il 20, 2.2.—Hesiod. Theog 379 —Apollod 3, 15 — Herod. 7, 189.—Ovid Met 6 700 Trist. 3, el. 10 11, 45 Ex Pont 4, el 10, 41.—Aud. Geil 2, 22.—Virg. Ec 7 51. G 1. 93, 370. 2, 316. 3, 278 Æn 10, 350 12, 365.—Callimac. in Delum.—Paus 1. 19. 8, 36.

BOREASMI, a festival at Athens, in honour of Boreas, who, as the Athenians supposed, was related to them on account of his marriage with Orithyia, the daughter of one of their kings (Vid. Orithya) They attributed the overthrow of the enemy's fleet to the respect which he paid to his wife's native country. There were also sacrifices at Megalopolis in Arcadia, in honour of Boreas Paus Attic. et Arcad.

BORGUS, a Persian, &c. Polyæn. 7. 40

BORGES, a Persian, who burnt himself, rather than submit to the enemy, &c. Polyæn 7, 24.

BORNOS, a place of Thrace. C. Nep. in Alcib. 7.

BORSIPPA, or BARSITA, a town of Babylonia, sacred to Diana and Apollo Its inhabitants were particularly fond of the flesh of bats. Strab 16.

BORUS, a son of Perieres, who married Polydora the daughter of Peleus. Apollod. 3, 13.—Homer. Il 16, 177.

BORYSTHENES, a large river of Scythia, falling into the Euxine sea, now called the Dnieper. According to modern geography, it rises in the Valdai hills, near the sources of the Dune, and after a winding course of about 800 miles, it flows into the Black Sea, a little to the east of the Dniester. Major Rennell suspects that Herodotus was not apprised of the famous cataract of this river, which occur at the height of two hundred miles above its mouth, and are said to be thirteen in number; for he seems to consider the navigation as being uninterrupted during forty days upwards from the sea. Plin. 4, 12.—Dionys. Per 311.—Strab. 1 et 7.—Propert. 3, el. 7, 18.—Ovid de Pont 4, el. 10, 54 ——There was a city of the same name on the borders of the river, built by a colony of Milesians, 655 years before the Christian era. It was also called Olbia Salvia. Mela, 2 1 et 7.——A horse with which the emperor Adrian used to hunt. At his death he was honoured with a monument. Dio

BOSPHORUS, or BOSPORUS, from βους, ox, and πορος, a passage, is a name given to a strait by which two seas communicate with each other; particularly to the Thracian Bosphorus, or the Channel of Constantinople, which connects the Propontis with the Euxine sea; and also to the Cimmerian Bosphorus, or Straits of Caffa, which unites the Palus Mæotis with the Euxine sea. These straits are supposed to have obtained this name from their being so narrow that an ox could easily swim across them. The Thracian Bosphorus extends from the Cyanean rocks to the harbour of Byzantium or Constantinople. It is about fifteen miles in length, and its ordinary breadth may be computed at about 1½ miles. The Cimmerian Bosphorus is about four leagues broad Plin. 4, 12. 6, 1.—Ovid Trist. 3, el. 4, 49.—Mela, 1, 1.—Strab. 12.—Virg. Æn. 6, 1.—Herod. 4, 85 The people who lived near it were called Bosphorani, and Mithridates is thence called Bosphoranus rex. Tacit. Ann. 12, 15 — Ovid. Trist 2, 208

BOSTAR, a Carthaginian prophet, mentioned by Sil. Ital. 3, 647

BOTER, a freedman of Claudius. Suet Claud

BOTTIA, a colony of Macedonians in Thrace. The people were called Bottiæi. Plin. 4, —Herod. 7, 185, &c.—Thucyd. 2. 99.

BOTTIEIS a country at the north of Macedonia, on the bay of Therma. Herod. 7, 123, &c.

BOUDICEA, a queen of the Brigantes in Britain, who rebelled upon being insulted by the Romans. Her revolt proved very destructive to the Roman forces in Britain; but at last the valour and superior experience of Suetonius prevailed over the undisciplined Britons, and Boudicea, after in vain re-asserting the liberty of her country, and seeing 80,000 of her countrymen slaughtered in one battle, poisoned herself, A. D. 61. Tacit. Ann 14, 31.

BOVIÂNUM, an ancient colony of the Samnites, at the foot of the Appenines, not far from Beneventum. It is now called Buano. Liv. 9, 28.

BOVILLÆ, a town of Latium, near Rome. Ovid. Fast. 3, 697. —Another in Campania.

BRACHMANES, Indian philosophers, who derive their name from Brahma, one of the three beings whom God, according to their theology, created, and with whose assistance he formed the world. They devoted themselves totally to the worship of the gods, and were accustomed from their youth to endure labours, and to live with frugality and abstinence. They never eat flesh, and abstained from the use of wine and all carnal enjoyments. After they had spent thirty-seven years in the greatest trials, they were permitted to marry, and indulge themselves in a more free and unbounded manner. The Brahmins were a tribe or numerous family, descended from one common ancestor, who existed at some remote period and was different from the progenitors of the people among whom they lived. Some have supposed that this progenitor was the patriarch Abraham, whom in their language they call Brachma, or Brama. (Id. Gymnosophistæ.) Strab. 15.—Curt. 17.

BRÆSIA, a daughter of Cinyras and Metharme Apollod. 3, 14.

BRANCHIADES, a surname of Apollo.

BRANCHIDÆ, a people of Asia, near the river ——, put to the sword by Alexander. They were originally of Miletus, near the temple of Branchus, but had been removed from thence by Xerxes. Strab. 11.—Curt. 7, 5.——The priests of Apollo Didymæus, who gave oracles in Caria. Plin. 5, 29.

BRANCHYLLÍDES, a chief of the Bœotians. Paus. 9, 13.

BRANCHUS, a youth of Miletus, son of Smicrus, beloved by Apollo, who gave him the power of prophecy. He gave oracles at Didyme, which became inferior to none of the Grecian oracles, except Delphi, and which exchanged the name of Didymean for that of Branchidæ. The temple, according to Strabo, was set on fire by Xerxes, who took possession of the riches it contained, and transported the people into Sogdiana, where they built a city which was afterwards destroyed by Alexander. Strab. 15.—Stat. Theb 3, 479.—Lucian. de Domo.

BRASIÆ, a town of Laconia. Paus. 3, 24.

BRASIDAS, a famous general of Lacedæmon, son of Tellus, who, after many great victories over Athens and other Grecian states, died of a wound at Amphipolis, which Cleon, the Athenian, had besieged, B.C. 422. A superb monument was raised to his memory. Paus. 3, 24.—Thucyd 4 et 5.—Diod. 3.——A man of Cos. Theocrit. Id. 7.

BRASIDEIA, annual festivals held at Sparta, in honour of Brasidas. They were celebrated with sacrifices and games, in which only free-born Spartans were allowed to contend; and he who neglected to be present at the solemnities was fined.

BRASÍLAS, a man of Cos. Theocr 7.

BRATUSPANTIUM, a town of the Bellavaci in Gaul, now Beauvais.

BRAURIS, a woman who assisted in the murder of Pittacus, king of the Edoni. Thucyd. 4, 107.

BRAURON, a town of Attica where Diana had a temple. The goddess had three festivals called Brauronia, celebrated once every fifth year by ten men, who were called hyperetæ. They sacrificed a goat to the goddess, and it was usual to sing one of the books of Homer's Iliad. The most remarkable that attended were young virgins in yellow gowns, consecrated to Diana. They were about ten years of age, and not under five, and therefore their consecration was called ἐπαετήσεις, from δέκα, ten; and sometimes ἀρκτήσεις, as the virgins themselves, bore the name of ἄρκοι, bears, from this circumstance. There was a bear in one of the villages of Attica, so tame, that he ate with the inhabitants, and played harmlessly with them. This familiarity lasted long, till a young virgin treated the animal too roughly, and was killed by it. The virgin's brother killed the bear, and the country was soon after visited by a pestilence. The oracle was consulted, and the plague removed by consecrating virgins to the service of Diana. This was so faithfully observed, that no woman in Athens was ever married before a previous consecration to the goddess. The statue of Diana of Tauris, which had been brought into Greece by Iphigenia, was preserved in the town of Brauron. Xerxes carried it away when he invaded Greece. Paus 8, 46.—Strab. 9.

BRENNI and BRENUI, a people of Italy, dwelling north of the Lacus Larius, about the Rhætian Alps, near the source of the Ticinus. Plin. 3, ed. 14.

BRENNUS, a general of the Galli Senones, who invaded Italy, defeated the Romans at the river A——a, and entered their city without opposition. The Romans fled into the capitol, and left the whole city in the possession of the enemies. The Gauls climbed the Tarpeian rock in the night, and the capitol would have been taken had not the Romans been awakened by the noise of geese which were before the doors, and immediately repelled the enemy. (Id. Manlius.) Camillus, who was in banishment, marched to the relief of his country, and so totally defeated the Gauls, that not one remained to carry the news of their destruction. Liv. 5, 36, &c.—Plut. in Camil.——Another Gaul, who made an irruption into Greece with 150,000 men, and 15,000 horse, and endeavoured to plunder the temple of Apollo at Delphi. He was destroyed, with all his troops, by the god, or more properly, he killed himself in a fit of intoxication, B.C. 278, after being defeated by the Delphians. Paus. 10, 22 et 23.—Justin 24, 6, &c.

BRENTHE, a ruined city of Arcadia. Paus 8, 28.

BRESCIA, a city of Italy, which had gods peculiar to itself.

BRETTII, a people of Italy. Strab. 6.

BRIÁREUS, a famous giant, son of Cœlus and Terra, who had 100 hands and 50 heads and was called by men Ægeon, and only by the gods Briareus. When Juno, Neptune, and Minerva conspired to dethrone Jupiter, Briareus ascended the heavens, and seated himself next to him, and so terrified the conspirators by his fierce and threatening looks that they desisted. He assisted the giants in their war against the gods, and was thrown under mount Ætna, according to some accounts. Hesiod Theog 148.—Apollod. 1, 1.—Homer. Il. 1, 403.—Virg. Æn. 6, 287. 10, 565.——A Cyclop, made judge between Apollo and Neptune, in their dispute about the isthmus and promontory of Corinth. He gave the former to Neptune, and the latter to Apollo. Paus. 2, 1.

BRIAS, a town of Pisidia.

BRICA, or BRIGA, the Celtic term for a town.

BRIGANTES, a people of Britain. They were the greatest, most powerful, and most ancient of the British tribes. They possessed the country from sea to sea, comprising the counties of York, Lancaster, Westmoreland, Durham, with parts of Cumberland and Northumberland. Their chief city was Eboracum, or York. Juv. 14, 196.—Plin. 8, 41

BRIGANTINUS, a lake of Rhætia between the Alps, now the Lake of Constance, or Boden Sea. The town on its eastern side is now Bregenz, anciently called Brigantium. Plin. 9, 17.

BRILESSUS, a mountain of Attica. Thucyd. 2, 23.

BRIMO, (terror), a name given to Proserpine and Hecate, because they were supposed to cause the terrors which alarm the weak and superstitious during the night. Stat. Sylv. 2, 3, 30. - Propert. 2, 2, 11.

BRISEIS, a woman of Lyrnessus, called also Hippodamia. When her country was taken by the Greeks, and her husband Mines, and her brother killed in the fight she fell to the share of Achilles, in the division of the spoils. Agamemnon took her away some time after from Achilles, who made a vow to absent himself from the field of battle. Briseis was very faithful to Achilles, and when Agamemnon restored her to him, he swore he had never offended her chastity. She is described by Dares as well proportioned in her figure, amiable in her manners, and fascinating in her looks Homer. Il 1, 2, &c.—Ovid Heroid. de Ast Am. 3, 2 et 3 —Propert 2, el. 8, 20 et 28 —Paus. 5, 24.—Horat. 2, od. 4.

BRISES, a man of Lyrnessus, brother to the priest Chryses. His daughter Hippodamia was called Briseis, from him.

BRISEUS, a surname of Bacchus, from his nurse Brisa, or his temple at Brisa, a promontory at Lesbos. The poet Persius bestows the appellation of Briseus on Accius, either on account of the tragedy of Bacchus which he had written, or because the god was supposed in a more particular manner to patronise the efforts of tragical writers Persius 1, 76

BRITANNI, the inhabitants of Britain. (Vid Britannia.)——A man in Gallia Belgica. Plin 4, 17.

BRITANNIA, an island in the northern ocean, the greatest in Europe, conquered by J. Cæsar, during his Gallic wars, B.C. 55, and first known to be an island by Agricola, who sailed round it. It was a Roman province from the time of its conquest till the 418th year of the Christian era. The inhabitants, in the age of Cæsar, used to paint their bodies, to render themselves more terrible in the eyes of their enemies. The name of Britain was unknown to the Romans before Cæsar conquered it. Cæs Bel. G. 4 — Dion. 5. — Pous. 1, 33.—Tacit. in Agric 10.—Plin. 34, 17.

BRITANNICUS, a son of Claudius Cæsar by Messalina, so called because under that emperor part of Britain had been conquered by the Romans. Nero was raised to the throne in preference to him, by means of Agrippina, and caused him to be poisoned. His corpse was buried in the night, but it is said that a shower of rain washed away the white paint which the murderer had put over his face, so that it appeared quite black, and discovered the effects of poison. Tacit. Ann. 11, 12, et 13.— Sueton. in Ner. 33.

BRITOMARTIS, a beautiful nymph of Crete, daughter of Jupiter and Charme, who devoted herself to hunting, and became a great favourite of Diana She was loved by Minos, who pursued her so closely, that to avoid his importunities, she threw herself into the sea. Paus. 2, 30. 3, 14 —— A surname of Diana.

BRITOMARUS, a chief of the Galli Insubres conquered by Æmilius. Flor 2, 4

BRITONES, the inhabitants of Britain. Juv. 15, 124.

BRIVATES, a famous harbour in the north-west extremity of Gaul, now Brest.

BRIXELLUM, a town of Gallia Cisalpina, north-east of Parma, where Otho slew himself when defeated. It is now Brescello. Tacit. Hist. 2, 32.

BRIXIA, now Brescia, a town of Italy, north-west of Mantua. It was the capital of the Cenomani. Justin 20, 5.

BRIZO, the goddess of dreams, worshipped by the women of Delos. She was invoked to protect the ships of the island, and to inspire her votaries with pleasant and propitious dreams; and in her festivals she was gratefully presented with offerings of fruits, and all other things except fish. Athen. 8, 3.

BROCCHUS, a governor of Syria, who fled to Alexander, when Darius was murdered by Bessus Curt 5, 13.

BROMIUS, a surname of Bacchus, from βρέμειν, frendere, alluding to the groans which Semele uttered when consumed by Jupiter's fire, or, with equal probability, to the noise and shouts of the Bacchantes in the celebration of the orgies. Dionys. 4.—Ovid. Met. 4, 11 ——A son of Ægyptus. Apollod 2, 1.

BROMUS, one of the Centaurs. Ovid Met. 12, 459.

BRONGUS, a river falling into the Ister. Herodot. 4, 49.

BRONTES, (thunder) one of the Cyclops. Virg. Æn 8, 425.—Hesiod. Theog 142

BRONTINUS, a Pythagorean philosopher —— The father of Theano, the wife of Pythagoras. Diog.

BROTEAS and AMMON, two men famous for their skill in the cestus. Ovid. Met 5, 108—— One of the Lapithæ Id. 12, 262.

BROTHEUS, a son of Vulcan and Minerva, who burned himself to avoid the ridicule to which his deformity subjected him. Ovid. in Ib. 517.

BRUCTERI, a people of Germany, between the Amasia, or Ems, and the Lacus Flavus or Zuyder Zee. They were powerful and warlike Tacit. Ann. 1, 51. Hist. 4, 21 G 33.

BRUMALIA, festivals celebrated at Rome in honour of Bacchus, about the month of December. They were first instituted by Romulus, and derived their name either from Bromius, one of the surnames of the god, or from an allusion to the cold time (bruma) of their celebration.

BRUNDUSIUM, now Brundisi, a city of Calabria, on the Adriatic sea, where the Appian road was terminated. It was founded by Diomedes after the Trojan war, or, according to Strabo, by Theseus, with a Cretan colony. The Romans generally embarked at Brundusium for Greece. It is famous for the birth of the poet Pacuvius, and the death of Virgil, and likewise for its harbour, which is capacious, and sheltered by the land, and by a small island at the entrance, against the fury of the winds and waves. Little remains of the ancient city, and even its harbour has now been choked up by the negligence of the inhabitants. Justin. 3, 4. 12, 2.—Strab. 5.—Cæs. Bell. Civ. 1, 24.—Cic. ad Attic. 4, ep. 1.—Mela, 2, 4 et 7.—Lucan. 2, 603. 5, 406.

BRUTIDIUS, a man dragged to prison in Juvenal's age, on suspicion of his favouring Sejanus. Juv. 10, 82.

BRUTII, a people in the farthest parts of Italy, who were originally shepherds of the Lucanians, but revolted, and went in quest of a settlement. They received the name of Bruti, from their stupidity, and cowardice in submitting, without opposition, to Annibal in the second Pugic war. They were ever after held in the greatest disgrace, and employed in every servile work. Justin. 23, 9.—Strab. 6.—Diod 16.

BRUTULUS, a Samnite, who killed himself, upon being delivered to the Romans for violating a treaty. Liv 8, 39.

BRUTUS, L. JUNIUS, a son of M. Junius and Tarquinia, second daughter of Tarquin Priscus The father, with his eldest son, were murdered by Tarquin the proud, and Lucius, unable to revenge their death, pretended to be insane. The artifice saved his life; he was called Brutus for his stupidity, which he however soon after showed to be feigned. When Lucretia killed herself, B.C. 509, in consequence of the brutality of Tarquin, Brutus snatched the dagger from the wound, and swore, upon the reeking blade, immortal hatred to the royal family. His example animated the Romans, the Tarquins were proscribed by a decree of the senate, and the royal authority vested in the hands of consuls chosen from patrician families. Brutus, in his consular office, made the people swear they never would again submit to kingly authority; but those first who violated their oath were in his own family. His sons, Titus and Tiberius, conspired with the Tuscan ambassador to restore the Tarquins, and when discovered, they were tried and condemned before their father, who himself attended at their execution. Some time after, in a combat that was fought between the Romans and Tarquins, Brutus engaged with Aruns, and so fierce was the attack, that they pierced one another at the same time. The dead body was brought to Rome, and received as in triumph; a funeral oration was spoken over it, and the Roman matrons showed their grief by mourning a year for the father of the republic. Flor. 1, 9.—Liv. 1, 56. 2, 1, &c.—Dionys. Hal. 4 et 5.—C. Nep. in Attic. 8.—Kutrop. de Varq.—Virg. Æn. 6, 818.—Plut. in Brut. et Cæs.—— Marcus Junius, father of Cæsar's murderer, wrote three books on civil law. He followed the party of Marius, and was conquered by Pompey After the death of Sylla, he was besieged in Mutina by Pompey, to whom he surrendered, and by whose orders he was put to death. He had married Servilia, Cato's sister, by whom he had a son and two daughters. Cic. de Orat. 55.—Plut. in Brut.——His son of the same name by Servilia, sometimes called Q. Cæpio, because adopted by his maternal uncle Q. Servilius Sapio, was lineally descended from J. Brutus, who expelled the Tarquins from Rome. He seemed to inherit the republican principles of his great progenitor, and in the civil wars joined himself to the side of Pompey, though he was his father's murderer, only because he looked upon him as more just and patriotic in his claims. At the battle of Pharsalia, Cæsar not only spared the life of Brutus, but he made him one of his most faithful friends. He however forgot the favour, because Cæsar aspired to tyranny. He conspired with many of the most illustrious citizens of Rome against the tyrant, and stabbed him in Pompey's Basilica. The tumult which this murder occasioned was great; the conspirators fled to the capitol, and by proclaiming freedom and liberty to the populace, they re-established tranquility in the city. Antony, whom Brutus, contrary to the opinion of his associates, refused to seize, gained ground in behalf of his friend Cæsar, and the murderers, too inactive in their measures, were soon obliged to leave Rome. Brutus retired into Greece, where he gained himself many friends by his arms, as well as by persuasion, and he was soon after pursued thither by Antony, whom young Octavius accompanied. A battle was fought at Philippi. Brutus, who commanded the right wing of the republican army, defeated the enemy, and even took the camp of Octavius, but Cassius, who had the care of the left, was overpowered by the persevering valour of Antony, and as he knew not the situation of his friend, and grew desperate, he ordered one of his freedmen to run him through. Brutus deeply deplored his fall, and in the fulness of his grief called him the last of the Romans. In another battle, the wing which Brutus commanded obtained a victory; but the other was defeated, and he found himself surrounded by the soldiers of Antony. He however made his escape, but hearing that many of his personal friends had deserted to the conquerors, and that their attempts to seduce his soldiers were incessant and too successful, he at last fell upon his sword, B.C. 42, exclaiming, "O virtue, thou art but an empty name. I have worshipped thee as a goddess, but thou art the slave of fortune." Antony honoured his remains with a magnificent funeral, and sent his ashes to his mother Servilia, but Suetonius says that Octavius sent his head to Rome, to be hung below the statue of Cæsar; which mark of triumph, however, was never exhibited, as the head, according to Dio, was thrown into the sea in a storm before the vessel reached Italy from Dyrrachium. Brutus is not less celebrated for his literary talents, than his valour in the field. When he was in the camp, the greatest part of his time was employed in reading and writing; and the day which preceded one of his most bloody battles, while the rest of his army was under continual apprehensions, Brutus calmly spent his hours till the evening, in writing an epitome of Polybius. He was fond of imitating the austere virtues of Cato, and in reading the histories of nations, he imbibed those principles of freedom which were so eminently displayed in his political career He was intimate with Cicero, to whom he would have communicated his conspiracy, had he not been apprehensive of his great timidity. He severely reprimanded him in his letters for joining the side of Octavius, who meditated the ruin of the republic. Plutarch mentions, that Cæsar's ghost made its appearance to Brutus in his tent, and told him that he would meet him at Philippi. Brutus married Claudia, whom he afterwards divorced without assigning any reason, for which his conduct was deservedly reprehended, and he immediately took for his second wife Porcia, the daughter of Cato, who killed herself, by swallowing burning coals, when she heard the fate of her husband. It is said that both Brutus and Cassius fell upon those very swords which they had raised against the life of Cæsar. C. Nep. in Attic. —Paterc. 2, 48 —Put in Brut. &c. Cæs. 1.—Dio. 4 ——D Jun. Albinus, also one of Cæsar's murderers, was distantly related to Marcus. It was he who prevailed upon the dictator to go to the senate-house, when he seemed doubtful in consequence of the unfavourable appearance of the omens. After the murder, he went to Cisalpine Gaul, which he bravely defended against Antony; and when besieged at Mutina, he boldly defied the attempts of the triumvirs, and he might have triumphed in his opposition, had not the consuls Hirtius and Pansa, who came to his assistance, been unfortunately slain. Decimus, on this fatal occasion, endeavoured to fly to Brutus in Greece, but he was deserted by his soldiers, and being betrayed into the hands of Antony, he was, though consul elect, put to death by the conqueror's directions. Appian 2 et 3 — Val. Max. 9, 13.—Vel Pat. 2, 64.—Dio. 46, 53.—Plut in Cæs. et Brut.——Jun. one of the first tribunes of the people. Liv.——One of Carbo's generals.

BRYAS, a general of the Argives against Sparta, put to death by a woman, to whom he had offered violence. Paus 2, 20. ——A general in the army of Xerxes. Herod. 7, 72.

BRYAXIS, a marble sculptor, who assisted in making the mausoleum. Paus. 1, 40.

BRYCE, a daughter of Danaus by Polyxo. Apollod 2, 1.

BRYGES, a people of Thrace, afterwards called Phryges. Strab. 7.

BRYGI, a people of Macedonia, conquered by Mardonius. Herod. 6, 45

BRYSEA, a town of Laconia Paus. 3, 20

BUBACENE, a country of Asia. Curt. 5.

BUBACES, an eunuch of Darius, &c. Curt. 5, 11.

BUBARIS, a Persian who married the daughter of Amyntas, against whom he had been sent with an army. Justin. 7, 13.

BUBASTIACUS, one of the mouths of the Nile.

BUBASTIS, an Egyptian goddess, corresponding with the Grecian Diana. She is said to have been the daughter of Osiris and Isis, and to have been preserved by Latona from the search of Typhon, in a floating island called Chemmis. Herod. 2, 137 et 156.——A city of Egypt, situated on the most eastern branch of the Nile, which was called, from this city, the Bubastic river or canal. This city is called in the Bible Pibeseth, and is now known as Tel Basta. It was noted for the worship of Diana Bubastis, who was said to have transformed herself into a cat, when the gods fled into Egypt; hence these animals were here held in the greatest veneration, and a regular burying place set apart for them, wherein after they had been embalmed they were interred with great solemnity. Herod. 2, 60.—Ovid. Met. 5, 6.—Strab. 17.

BUBASUS, a country of Caria, whence Bubasides applied to the natives. Ovid. Met. 9, 643.

BUBON, an inland city of Lycia. Plin. 5, 27.

BUCENTAURUS, a species of Centaurs, half of whose body was that of the ox.

BUCEPHALA, a town of India, on the west side of the river Hydaspes, built by Alexander on the site of his camp before his engagement with Porus, and so called in memory of his favourite horse Bucephalus, which was killed, as some say, in that action, or who died, according to Arrian, of old age, being about 30 years old, and was buried on this spot. Bucephala was situated on the road between Attock and Lahore. Curt. 9, 3. —Arrian 5, 19.—Justin. 12, 8.—Diod. 17.—Plut. 6, 20.

BUCEPHALUS, a horse of Alexander's, so named either because his head resembled that of an ox (βοὸς κεφαλὴ), or because he had a mark branded on his flank resembling the head of an ox. Alexander was the only one who could mount on his back, and he always knelt down to take up his master. He was present in an engagement in Asia, where he received a heavy wound, and hastened immediately out of the battle, and dropped down dead as soon as he had set down the king in a safe place. He was thirty years old when he died, and Alexander built a city which he called after his name. Plut. in Alex.—Curt.—Arrian 5, 8.—Plin. 8, 42.—Justin. 12, 8

BUCILANUS, one of Cæsar's murderers. Cic. ad Attic. 14.

BUCOLICA, a sort of poem which treats of the care of the flocks, and of the pleasures and occupations of the rural life, with simplicity and elegance. The most famous pastoral writers of antiquity are Moschus, Bion, Theocritus, and Virgil. The invention of Bucolics, or pastoral poetry, is attributed to a shepherd of Sicily.

BUCOLICUM, one of the mouths of the Nile, situate between the Sebennytic and Mendesian mouths. It appears to be the same as that which Strabo calls the Phatnetic. Herod. 2, 17.

BUCOLION, a king of Arcadia after Lalas. Paus 8, 5.——A son of Laomedon and the nymph Calybe.——A son of Hercules and Praxithea. He was also called Bucolus.——A son of Lycaon, king of Arcadia. Apollod 2 et 3.

BUCOLUS, a son of Hercules and Marse.—— A son of Hippocoon. Apollod. 2 et 3.

BUDII, a people of Media, supposed to be north of the Magi, and west of the source of the Choaspes. Herod. 1, 101.

BUDINI, a people of Sarmatia European. They were very numerous, and remarkable for their red hair and blue eyes. Herod.

BUDORUM, a promontory of Salamis. Thucyd. 2, 94.

BULBUS, a Roman senator, remarkable for his meanness. Cic. in Ver.

BULIS, a town of Phocis, built by a colony from Doris, on the shore of the Sinus Corinthiacus, south-east of Anticyra. Paus. 10, 37.——A Spartan given up to Xerxes, along with his countryman Sperthies, to atone for the offence which his countrymen had done in putting the king's messengers to death. Herod. 7, 144, &c.

BULLATIUS, a friend of Horace, to whom the poet addressed, 1. ep 11, in consequence of his having travelled over part of Asia.

BULLIS, a town of Illyricum, near the sea, south of Apollonia. The people are called Bullini. Liv. 36, 7. 44, 30.

BUMELLUS, a river of Assyria. Curt. 4, 9.

BUNEA, a surname of Juno.

BUNUS, a son of Mercury and Alcidamea, who obtained the government of Corinth when Æetes went to Colchis. He built a temple to Juno at Corinth, from which circumstance the goddess is often called Bunea. Paus. 2, 3 et 4.

BUPALUS, a statuary of Clazomenæ, brother to Anthermus. (Vid. Anthermus.) He obtained great celebrity; and some golden statues of the Graces in the temple of Nemesis at Smyrna, and likewise those in the possession of Attalus, reflected honour upon his taste and his merit. Paus. 9, 35 — Plin. 36. 5.

BUPHAGUS, a son of Japetus and Thornax, killed by Diana whose virtue he had attempted.

A river of Arcadia bears his name. Paus. 8, 24. ——A surname of Hercules, given him on account of his gluttony, of which he was accused by the Argonauts and for which he was banished from their company

BUPHONIA, a festival celebrated in honour of Jupiter, in the month of June. According to Pausanias, some grains of barley and wheat were placed on the altar of the god, of which the intended victim was permitted to eat, soon after which one of the priests brought him to the ground with the blow of the hatchet, and ran out of sight. The assistants, as if they had not seen who gave the blow, immediately made a formal trial of the bloody instrument; a ceremony which originated in the high veneration in which the people of Attica held the ox, the shedding of whose blood was regarded a capital crime. Paus. 1, 24.—Ælian. V. H. 8, 3.

BUPRÆSIUM, a town of Elis, north of the river Peneus, which gave name to a fruitful country in which it was situated It had ceased to exist in the time of Strabo. Homer. Il. 2, 615.—Theocr. Idyll. 25, 11.—Strab. 8.

BURA, a daughter of Jupiter, or according to others of Ion and Helice, from whom Bura or Buris, once a flourishing city of Achaia in Peloponnesus, received its name. Ceres, Isis, Lucina, and Bacchus had each temples there, and Hercules was worshipped in a grotto in the neighbourhood, where he delivered oracles. This city was destroyed by a prodigious influx of the sea, caused by a violent earthquake. Ovid Met. 15, 293 —Paus. 7, 25.—Strab. 1 et 8.—Dionys. 15.—Plin. 2, 92.

BURÆICUS, an epithet applied to Hercules, from his temple near Bura.——A river of Achaia. Paus. 7, 25.

BURDIGÆLA, the metropolis of Aquitania Secunda, situated on the mouth of the Garumna, and famed for its commerce. It was the birthplace of the poet Ausonius. It is now Bordeaux. Auson. in Urb 14, 40

BURGUNDIONES, a nation of Germany, part of the Vandali or Vandals. The place where they settled has been called Burgundy.

BURRHUS, AFRANIUS, a chief of the prætorian guards, put to death by Nero. Tacit Ann. 13, 42. 13 et 14.——A brother-in-law of the emperor Commodus.

BURSA, the capital city of Bithynia, supposed to have been called Prusa, from its founder Prusias. Strab 12.

BURSIA, a town of Babylonia. Justin. 12, 13.

BUSA, a woman of Apulia who entertained 1000 Romans after the battle of Cannæ. Val. Max. 4, 8.

BUSÆ, a people of Media, situate towards the south coast of the Caspian sea. Herod. 1, 181.

BUSIRIS, a king of Egypt, son of Neptune and Libya, or Lysianassa, who sacrificed all foreigners to Jupiter with the greatest cruelty. When Hercules visited Egypt, Busiris carried him to the altar bound hand and foot. The hero soon disentangled himself, and offered the tyrant his son Amphidamas, and the ministers of his cruelty, on the altar. Many Egyptian princes have borne the same name. Virg. G. 3, 5.—Stat. Theb. 12, 194.—Apollod. 2, 5.—Ovid. Art. Am. 1, 647.——A city of Egypt, situate in the middle of the Delta, on that branch of the Nile which was called Buriticus fluvius, and is said to have been built by the tyrant Busiris. Isis had a splendid temple erected to her in this city, some ruins of which are still remaining. Its modern name is Busir. Herod. 2, 59 et 61.

BUTA, a town of Achaia. Dionys. 20.

BUTEO, a surname of the Fabii, derived from a hawk (buteo) perching on the ship of one of them when commanding a fleet, which was reckoned a lucky omen. Plin 18, 3.—Liv. 30, 26. ——A Roman orator. Seneca.

BUTES, a son of Teleon and Zeuxippe, said by Virgil to be descended from Amycus king of the Bebryces, because, like them, he was very expert in the combat of the cestus. He is mentioned by the poet as having appeared among the combatants at the funeral games given in honour of Hector, in which he was conquered and slain by Dares; but others assert that he came to Sicily, where he was received by Lycaste, a beautiful harlot, by whom he had a son called Eryx. Lycaste, on account of her beauty, was called Venus, hence Eryx is often called the son of Venus. Apollodorus and Hyginus, however, place him in the number of the Argonauts, and add, that when he wished to swim to the island of the Sirens, whose songs had captivated him, Venus, who was enamoured of him, carried him away from the enchanted spot to Lilybæum, where she bore him Eryx Apollod 1, 9. —Hygin fab. 14 et 260.—Virg Æn. 5, 372. ——A Trojan slain by Camilla. Virg. Æn 11, 690 ——A son of Boreas who built Naxos. Dionys. 5.——A son of Pandion and Zeuxippe, priest of Minerva and Neptune. He married Chthonia, daughter of Erechtheus. Apolod 3, 14, &c.—— An armour-bearer to Anchises, and afterwards to Ascanius. Apollo assumed his shape when he descended from heaven to encourage Ascanius to fight. Butes was killed by Turnus. Virg. Æn. 9, 647. 12, 632 ——A governor of Darius, besieged by Conon the Athenian.

BUTHROTUM, a town of Epirus, situate on the river Xanthus, opposite to the island of Corcyra. It is said to have been founded by Helenus, the son of Priam, after the death of Pyrrhus. It was occupied by Cæsar during the civil wars, and was afterwards colonized by the Romans. It is now Butrinto. Virg. Æn 3, 293.—Ovid. Met. 13, 721.—Plin 4, 1.—Cic. Att 16, ep. 16.

BUTHROTUS, now Novito, a river of Italy, in the country of the Bruttii, near the Locri Epizephyrii. Liv. 29, 6.

BUTHYREUS, a noble statuary, disciple to Myron. Plin. 34, 8.

BUTOA, an island in the Mediterranean, near Crete. Plin. 4, 12.

BUTORIDES, an historian, who wrote concerning the pyramids. Plin. 36, 12.

BUTOS, a town of Egypt, at the Sebennytic mouth of the Nile. It was famous for an oracle of Latona, which was consulted by persons that resorted to it from all parts of Egypt. The shrine of the goddess was a cubic stone 160 cubits, or 240 feet in diameter; and had been conveyed from a quarry in the isle of Philæ near the cataracts, on rafts, through a distance of 200 leagues, to its place of destination. It occupied many thousand men for three years in its transportation, and seems to have been the heaviest weight ever moved by human power. Butos was also decorated with two temples in honour of Apollo and Diana. Herod. 2, 59 et 63.

BUTUNTUM, an inland town of Apulia. Plin. 3, 11.

BUTUS, a son of Pandion.

BUXENTUM, now Polycastro, a town of Lucania at the mouth of the river Pyxus. It was built by Miscythus, prince of Rhegium and Zancle and afterwards deserted. It was colonized by the Romans. Liv. 32, 29 et 34, 45. 39, 23.

BUZIGES, an Athenian who first ploughed with harnessed oxen; a practice said by others to have been first introduced by Triptolemus. Demophoon gave him the Palladium with which Diomedes had intrusted him, to be carried to Athens. Polyæn. 1, 5.

BYBLESIA and BYBASSIA, a country of Caria Herod 1, 171

BYBLIA, a name of Venus.

BYBLII, a people of Syria. Apollod. 2. 1.

BYBLIS, a daughter of Miletus and Cyanea or, according to some, of Eidotea, or Area. She fell in love with her brother Caunus, according to Ovid, and when he refused to gratify her passion, she destroyed herself. Some say that Caunus became enamoured of her, and fled from his country to avoid incest, and others report, that he fled from his sister's importunities, who sought him all over Lycia and Caria, and at last sat down all bathed in tears, and was changed into a fountain of the same name. Ovid. de Art. Am. 1, 244. Met. 9, 451.—Hygin. fab. 243.—Paus. 7, 5.—A small island in the Mediterranean.

BYBLOS, or BYBLUS, a maritime town of Phœnicia, situate between Berytus and Botrys. It was celebrated for the worship of Adonis, and in its vicinity was the small river Adonis, now Nahr Ibrahim The waters of this stream, at the anniversary of the death of Adonis, when killed by a wild boar on Libanus, were said to be tinged with red, owing, as it was fancied, to his wounds bleeding afresh, but actually to the ochrous earth, which, during the rainy season, rolled down from the mountains. Strab 16.

BYLLIONES, a people of Illyricum.

BYRRHUS, a robber, famous for his dissipation. Horat. Sat. 1, 4, 29.

BYRSA, a citadel in the middle of Carthage, on which was the temple of Æsculapius. Asdrubal's wife burned it when the city was taken. When Dido came to Africa, she bought of the inhabitants as much land as could be encompassed by a bull's hide. After the agreement, she artfully cut the hide into small thongs, and with them enclosed a large piece of territory, on which she built a citadel which she called Byrsa (βύρσα, a hide). Virg. Æn. 1, 371.—Strab. 17.—Justin 18, 5.—Flor. 2, 15.—Liv 34, 62.

BYZACIUM, a country of Africa Propria, called also Emporiæ, situate to the north of the Syrtis Minor. It was a very fruitful district, and is regarded, from the vast quantities of corn which it exported to Rome, as the principal granary of that city. Hor. Od. 1, 1, 10. Sat. 2, 6, 87.

BYZANTIUM, a town situate on the Thracian Bosphorus, founded by a colony of Megara, under the conduct of Byzas, 658 years before the Christian era. Paterculus says it was founded by the Milesians, and by the Lacedæmonians according to Justin, and according to Ammianus by the Athenians. The pleasantness and convenience of its situation were observed by Constantine the Great, who made it the capital of the eastern Roman empire, A.D. 328, and called it Constantinopolis, or the city of Constantine. Its Turkish name Stamboul, or Istamboul, is corrupted from the phrase ἡς τὴν πόλιν, used by the inhabitants to denote their going into the city. That part of the city which was the ancient Byzantium is now covered by the Sultan's seraglio. Constantinople was taken, A.D. 1453, by Mahomet II., since which time it has been the seat of the Turkish empire. A number of Greek writers, who have deserved or usurped the name of Byzantine historians, flourished at Byzantium, after the seat of the empire had been translated thither from Rome. Their works, which more particularly relate to the time in which they flourished, and are seldom read but by those who wish to form an acquaintance with the revolutions of the lower empire, were published in one large collection, in 36 vols. folio, 1648, &c. at Paris, and recommended themselves by the notes and supplement of Du Fresne and Du Cange. They were likewise printed at Venice, 1729, in 23 vols., though perhaps this edition is not so valuable as that of the French. Strab 1.—Plin. 4, 11.—Paterc. 2, 15.—C. Nep. in Paus. Alcib. et Timol.—Justin. 9, 1.—Tacit Ann. 12, 62 et 63.—Mela, 2, 2.—Marcel. 22, 8.

BYZAS, a son of Neptune and Cerossa daughter of Lycus king of Thrace. It is said that his father and Apollo assisted him in the building of the capital, to which he gave the name of Byzantium. Dionys. 4.

BYZERES, a people of Pontus, between Cappadocia and Colchis. Dionys. Perieg.—Flacc. 5, 153.

BYZES, a celebrated artist in the age of Astyages. Paus. 5, 10.

BYZIA a town on the Euxine, above Halmydessus, the citadel of Tereus, king of Thrace. It was shunned by swallows, on account of the crimes of Tereus. (Vid. Tereus.) Plin. 4, 11.

C

CAANTHUS, a son of Oceanus and Tethys. He was ordered by his father to seek his sister Malia, whom Apollo had carried away, and he burned in revenge the ravisher's temple, near the Isthmus. He was killed for this impiety by the god, and a monument was raised to his memory. Paus. 2, 30.

CABADES, a king of Persia, &c.

CABALA, a place of Sicily, where the Carthaginians were conquered by Dionysius. Diod. 15.

CABALACA, a town of Albania. Plin.

CABALES, a people of Africa. Herod.

CABALII, a people of Asia Minor. Id.

CABALINUS, a clear fountain on mount Helicon, sacred to the muses; and called also Hippocrene, as raised from the ground by the foot of Pegasus. Pers. Prol. 1.

CABALLA. Vid. Solymi.

CABALLINUM, a town of the Ædui, now Chalons. Cæs. Bell. G. 7, 42.

CABALLIO, a town of the Cavares on the Druentia, or Durance. Now Cavaillon.

CABALLUS, the surname of a family at Rome. Mart. 1, ep. 43, 17.

CABARNOS, a deity worshipped at Paros. His priests were called Cabarni. Hesychius applies the name also to the priests of Ceres; and Stephanus of Byzantium says, that the person who informed Ceres of the rape of Proserpine was called Cabarnos.

CABASSUS, a town of Cappadocia ——A village near Tarsus.

CABIRA, a wife of Vulcan, by whom she had three sons.——A town of Pontus, south-east of Amasia, upon the river Iris. It was here that Mithridates was defeated by Lucullus. Strab. 12.—Plut. Lucull.

CABIRI, certain deities held in the greatest veneration at Thebes, Lemnos, Macedonia, and Phrygia, but more particularly in the islands of Samothrace and Imbros. The number of these deities is uncertain. Some say there were only two, Jupiter and Bacchus; others mention three, and some four, Aschieros, Achiocheras, Achiocersus, and Camillus. It is unknown where their worship was first established; yet Phœnicia seems to be the place according to the authority of Sanchoniathon, and from thence it was introduced into Greece by the Pelasgi. The festivals or mysteries of the Cabiri, were celebrated with the greatest solemnity at Samothrace. None but the consecrated priests were permitted to enter the temple; but so extensive was the influence of the deities that all the ancient heroes and princes were generally initiated, that by this solemn act they might reconcile themselves to heaven, and have their persons and property protected against the accidents of shipwreck and storms. The obscenities which prevailed in the celebration have obliged the authors of every country to pass over them in silence, and say that it was unlawful to reveal them. These deities are often confounded with the Corybantes, Anaces, Dioscuri, &c. and according to Herodotus, Vulcan was their father. This author mentions the sacrilege which Cambyses committed in entering their temple, and turning to ridicule their sacred mysteries. They were supposed to preside over metals. Herod. 2, 51.—Strab. 10, &c.—Paus. 9, 22, &c.—Cic. de Nat. D. 1.

CABIRIA, a surname of Ceres.——The festivals of the Cabiri. Id. Cabiri.

CABURA, a fountain of Mesopotamia, where Juno bathed. Plin. 31, 3.

CABURUS, a chief of the Helvii. Cæs.

CACA, a goddess among the Romans, sister to Cacus, who is said to have discovered to Hercules where her brother had concealed his oxen. She presided over the excrements of the body The vestals offered sacrifices in her temple. Lactant. 1, 20.

CACHALES, a river of Phocis, which flowed near Tithorea. It is now called Kako-Reuma, or the evil torrent. Paus. 10, 32.

CACUS, a famous robber, son of Vulcan and Medusa, represented as a three-headed monster, and as vomiting flames. He resided in Italy, and the avenues of his cave were covered with human bones. He plundered the neighbouring country; and when Hercules returned from the conquest of Geryon, Cacus stole some of his cows, and dragged them backwards into his cave to prevent discovery. Hercules departed without perceiving the theft; but his oxen having lowed, were answered by the cows in the cave of Cacus, and the hero became acquainted with the loss he had sustained. He ran to the place, attacked Cacus, squeezed and strangled him in his arms, though vomiting fire and smoke. Hercules erected an altar to Jupiter Servator, in commemoration of his victory; and an annual festival was instituted by the inhabitants in honour of the hero, who had delivered them from such a public calamity. Ovid Fast. 1, 551 — Virg Æn. 8, 194.—Propert. 4, el. 10 —Juv. 5, 124.—Liv. 1, 7.—Dionys. Hal 1, 9.

CACUTHIS, a river of India, flowing into the Ganges. Now, the Goomty. Arrian. Indic.

CACYPARIS, a river of Sicily.

CADI, a town of Phrygia. Now Kedous. Strab. 12 ——Of Lydia. Propert. 4, el. 6, 7.

CADMÆA, a citadel of Thebes, built by Cadmus. It is generally taken for Thebes itself, and the Thebans are often called Cadmeans. Stat. Theb. 8, 601.—Paus. 2, 5 —C Nepos, 15.

CADMEIS, an ancient name of Bœotia.

CADMUS son of Agenor king of Phœnicia, by Telephassa or Agriope, was ordered by his father to go in quest of his sister Europa, whom Jupiter had carried away, and he was never to return to Phœnicia, if he did not bring her back. As his search proved fruitless, he consulted the oracle of Apollo, and was ordered to build a city where he should see a young heifer stop in the grass, and to call the country Bœotia. He found the heifer according to the directions of the oracle, and as he wished to thank the god by a sacrifice, he sent his companions to fetch water from a neighbouring grove. The waters were sacred to Mars, and guarded by a dragon, which devoured all the Phœnician's attendants. Cadmus tired of their seeming delay, went to the place, and saw the monster still feeding on their flesh. He attacked the dragon and overcame it by the assistance of Minerva, and sowed the teeth in a plain, upon which armed men suddenly rose up from the ground. He threw a stone in the midst of them, and they instantly turned their arms, one against another, till all perished except five, who assisted him in building his city. Soon after he married Hermione the daughter of Venus, with whom he lived in the greatest cordiality, and by whom he had a son, Polydorus, and four daughters, Ino, Agave, Autonoe, and Semele. Juno persecuted these children; and their well-known misfortunes so distracted Cadmus and Hermione, that they retired to Illyricum, loaded with grief, and infirm with age. They entreated the gods to remove them from the misfortunes of life, and they were immediately changed into serpents. Some explain the dragon's fable, by supposing that it was a king of the country whom Cadmus conquered by war; and the armed men rising from the field, is no more than men armed with brass, according to the ambiguous signification of a Phœnician word. Cadmus was the first who introduced the use of letters into Greece, but some maintain, that the alphabet which he brought from Phœnicia, was only different from that which was used by the ancient inhabitants of Greece. This alphabet consisted of sixteen letters, a β, γ, δ, ε, ι, κ, λ, μ, ν, ο. π ρ, σ, τ, υ, to which Simonides of Ceos added four, θ, ξ, φ, χ, and Epicharmus the Sicilian, the same number, ξ, ψ, ω. The worship of many of the Egyptian and Phœnician deities was also introduced by Cadmus, who is supposed to have come into Greece 1493 years before the Christian era, and to have died 61 years after. According to those who believe that Thebes was built at the sound of Amphion's lyre, Cadmus built only a small citadel which he called Cadmea, and laid the foundations of a city which was finished by one of his successors. Ovid. Met. 3, fab. 1, 2, &c.—Herod. 2, 49. 4, 147.—Hygin. fab 6, 76. 155, 179, 240, 275, &c.—Dnod. 1, fig.—Paus. 9, 5, &c.—Hesiod. Theog. 937, &c.——A son of Pandion of Miletus, celebrated as an historian in the age of Crœsus, and as the writer of an account of some cities of Ionia, in four books. He is called the ancient, in contradistinction from another of the same name and place, son of Archelaus, who wrote a history of Attica in sixteen books, and a treatise on love in fourteen books. Dnod. 1.—Dionys. Hal. 2.—Clement. Alexand. 3.—Strab. 1.—Plin. 5, 29.——A Roman executioner, mentioned Horat. 1. Sat. 5, 34.

CADRA, a hill of Asia Minor. Tacit.

CADUCEUS, a rod entwined at one end by two serpents, in the form of two equal semi-circles. It was the attribute of Mercury and the emblem of power, and it had been given him by Apollo in return for the lyre. Various interpretations have been put upon the two serpents round it. Some suppose them to be the symbol of Jupiter's amours with Rhea, when these two deities transformed themselves into snakes. Others say, that it originates from Mercury's having appeased the fury of two serpents that were fighting, by touching them with his rod. Prudence is generally supposed to be represented by these two serpents, and the wings are the symbol of diligence; both necessary in the pursuit of business and commerce, which Mercury patronised. With it Mercury conducted to the infernal regions the souls of the dead, and could lull to sleep, and even raise to life a dead person. Virg. Æn. 4, 242.—Horat 1, od. 10.—Plin. 29, 3.

CADURCI, a people of Gaul, at the east of the Garumna. Their country is now called Quercy. It was famous for its fine linen, whence the word Cadurcum not only was used to express superior materials, but a covering of a bed itself, or whatever was made of linen. Juv. 6, 536. 7, 221.—Plin. 19, 1.

CADUSCI, a people near the Caspian sea Plut.

CADYTIS, a town of Syria, probably the same as Jerusalem. Herod. 2, 159.

CÆA, an island of the Ægean sea among the Cyclades, called also Ceos and Cea, from Ceus the son of Titan. Ovid. Herod. 20.—Virg. G. 1, 12.

CÆCIAS, a wind blowing from the east-north-east.

CÆCILIA, the wife of Sylla. Plut. in Syl.—The mother of Lucullus. Id. in Luc.——A daughter of Atticus. Cic. ad Att. 6, ep. 2 et 4.

CÆCILIA CAIA, or Tanaquil. Vid. Tanaquil.

CÆCILIA LEX, was proposed A.U.C. 693, by Cæcil. Metellus Nepos, to exempt the city and Italy from taxes.——Another, called also Didia, A.U.C. 655, by the consul Q. Cæcilius Metellus, and T. Didius. It required that laws should be promulgated for three market-days, and that several distinct things should not be included in the same law.——Another, enacted by Cæcilius Metellus, the censor, concerning fullers. Plin. 35, 17.——Another, A.U.C. 711, to restore to the senate their original rights and privileges, which had been lessened by P. Clodius the tribune.——Another, called also Gabinia, A.U.C. 686, against usury.

CÆCILIANUS, a Latin writer before the age of Cicero.

CÆCILII, a plebeian family at Rome, descended from Cæcus, one of the companions of Æneas, or from Cæculus, the son of Vulcan, who built Præneste. The Cæcilii branched into other families, the best known of which are the Metelli. This family gave birth to many illustrious generals and patriots.

CÆCILIUS CLAUDIUS ISIDORUS, a man who left in his will to his heirs, 4116 slaves, 3600 yokes of oxen, 257,000 small cattle, 600,000 lbs. of silver. Plin. 33, 10.——Epirus, a freedman of Atticus, who opened a school at Rome, and is said to have first taught reading to Virgil and some other growing poets.——Q., a Sicilian, surnamed Niger, quæstor to Verres. Quintil. 7, 2.——The father-in-law of Pompey. Cic. Fam. 8, ep. 8.——Quintus, a name assumed by Atticus, when adopted into the family of the Cæcilii by his maternal uncle. Cor. Nep. in Att.—Cic. Att. 3, ep. 20.——Lucius, a tribune of the people who wished to mitigate the penalties inflicted on such as were guilty of bribery.——A Sicilian orator in the age of Augustus, who wrote on the servile wars, a comparison between Demosthenes and Cicero, and an account of the orations of Demosthenes.——Metellus. (Vid Metellus.)——Statius, a comic poet, originally a slave, but deservedly commended by Cicero and Quintilian for his wit and humour, though the orator, ad Attecum, calls him Malum Latinitatis auctorem. He was intimate with the learned of the age, and his abilities so highly esteemed, that Terence referred his compositions to his criticism as to a man of superior judgment Above thirty of his comedies are mentioned by ancient historians, among which are his Nauclerus, Phocius, Epicletus, Syracusius, Fœnerator, Fallacia, Pausimachus, Hypobolimæus, Cratinus, Hephæstion, Asotus, Anchor, Subditivus, Annales Venatorium, Umbra, Obolus, Synaristusæ, &c. He was a native of Gaul, and died at Rome 168 B.C. and was buried in the Janiculum. About 278 lines remain of his fragment in the collection of ancient Latin poets. Horat. 2, ep. 1.—Quintil.

CÆCINA, Tuscus, a son of Nero's nurse, made governor of Egypt. Suet. in Ner.——A Roman who wrote some physical treatises.——A citizen of Volaterræ defended by Cicero.

CÆCUBUS AGER, a district in the neighbourhood of Formiæ and Caieta in Latium, celebrated for its wines. The Cæcuban wine, which came from the poplar marshes of Amyclæ, was most esteemed, but it lost its repute through the negligence of the growers, and partly from the limited extent of the vineyards, which were nearly destroyed by the navigable canal begun by Nero from Avernus to Ostia. Strab. 5.—Horat. 1, od. 20. 2, od 14, &c.—Plin. 14, 6.

CÆCULUS, a son of Vulcan, conceived, as some say, by his mother, when a spark of fire fell into her bosom. He was called Æculus because his eyes were small. After a life spent in plundering and rapine, he built Præneste; but being unable to find inhabitants, he implored Vulcan to show whether he really was his father. Upon this a flame suddenly shone among a multitude who were assembled to see some spectacle, and they were immediately persuaded to become the subjects of Cæculus. Virgil, Æn. 7, 680, says that he was found in fire by shepherds, and on that account called son of Vulcan, who is the god of fire.

CÆCUS, a surname given to Appius Claudius, in consequence of his blindness.

Q. CÆDICIUS, a consul, A. U.C. 493.——Another, A. U.C. 665.——A military tribune in Sicily, who bravely devoted himself to rescue the Roman army from the Carthaginians, B C. 254. He escaped with his life.——A rich person, &c. Virg. Æn. 9, 362.——A friend of Turnus Virg. Æn. 10, 747.——A Roman centurion, appointed general by such of his countrymen as had fled to Veii upon the invasion of Rome by the Gauls. Liv 5. 45 et 46.——A severe judge in the reign of Vitellius. Juv. 13, 197

CÆLIA LEX, was enacted, A U.C. 635, by Cælius, a tribune. It ordained, that in judicial proceedings before the people, in cases of treason, the votes should be given upon tablets contrary to the exception of the Cassian law.

CÆLIUS, M RUFUS, an orator, disciple to Cicero. He died very young He accused Antony, Cicero's colleague in the consulship, of improper conduct in Macedonia, and obtained his condemnation; and afterwards he brought charges of bribery against L. Atratinus. In consequence of which the son of Atratinus criminated him with actions of public violence. Cicero defended him when he was accused by Clodius of being accessary to Catiline's conspiracy, and of having murdered some ambassadors from Alexandria, and carried on an illicit amour with Clodia the wife of Metellus. Orat. pro M. Cœl.——Quintil. 10, 1.——A man of Tarracina, found murdered in his bed. His sons were suspected of the murder, but acquitted. Val Max. 8, 1.——Aurelianus, an ancient physician, who was a native of Sicca, in Numidia, and belonged to the sect of medical philosophers called methodists. He wrote in Latin; and among his works none are extant except a treatise on chronic, and another on acute diseases, which have been published at Amsterdam, with the notes of Amelioven, and by Haller in the Artis Medicæ Principes, Lausanne 1744. He is supposed to have flourished about A. D. 150.——L. Antipater, wrote a history of Rome, which M. Brutus epitomised, and which Adrian preferred to the histories of Sallust. Cælius flourished 120 years B. C. Val. Max. 1, 7.—Cic 13, ad Attic ep. 8 ——Tubero, a man who came to life after he had been carried to the burning pile. Plin. 7, 52 ——Vibienus, a king of Etruria, who assisted Romulus against the Cæninenses, &c.——Sabinus, a writer in the age of Vespasian, who composed a treatise on the edicts of the curule ædiles. ——One of the seven hills on which Rome was built. Romulus surrounded it with a ditch and rampart, and it was inclosed by walls by the succeeding kings. It received its name from Cælius Vibenna, an Etruscan chief in alliance with Tarquinius Priscus, who, with his followers, settled in that quarter.

CÆMARO, a Greek, who wrote an account of India.

CÆNE, a small island in the Mediterranean Sea, between Sicily and Africa.

CÆNE, or CÆNOPOLIS, a town of Laconia, about 40 stadia from the promontory of Tænarus. and anciently called Tænarum. It had two temples, one dedicated to Ceres, and another to Venus.——A town of Egypt, in the Panopolitan nome, supposed to be the present Chenne or Kenne.

CÆNEUS, one of the Argonauts. Apollod. 1, 9.——A Trojan killed by Turnus. Virg.

CÆNIDES, a patronymic of Ection, as descended from Cæneus. Herod. 5, 92.

CÆNINA, now Monticelli, a town of Latium near Rome, on the banks of the Anio. The inhabitants, called Cæninenses, made war against the Romans when their virgins had been stolen away. Dionys Hal. 2, 9 —Plut. in Rom.—Ovid. Fast 2, 135 —Propert 4, el 11, &c.—Liv. 1, 9.

CÆNIS, a promontory of Italy, opposite to Pelorus in Sicily, a distance of about one mile and a half.

CÆNIS, a Thessalian woman, daughter of Elatus, whose beauty commanded the admiration of the neighbouring princes. She had rejected every suitor, when Neptune, who had solicited her in vain, offered her violence, and afterwards made atonement for the insult, by permitting her to change her sex, and to become invulnerable. She also changed her name, and was called Cæneus, and from that period devoted her time to manly exercises, and every pursuit which required dexterity and the exertion of strength. In the wars of the Lapithæ against the Centaurs, she offended Jupiter; and when 8 thousand darts were directed in vain against the invulnerable Cæneus, his enemies overwhelmed him with a huge pile of wood, from which, however, he escaped, by being suddenly changed into a beautiful bird of yellow plumage. Pans. 5. 10.—Ovid. Met 12, 172 et 479. 8, 305.—Virgil, Æn. 6, 448, says that she returned again to her pristine form.

CÆNOMANI, a people of Cisalpine Gaul, in the North of Placentia on the Padus

CÆPARIUS one of Catiline's friends in his conspiracy. Cic. Cat 3. 6

CÆPIO, Q. SERVILIUS, a Roman consul. A U.C. 648, in the Cimbrian war He plundered a temple at Tolosa, for which he was punished by divine vengeance, &c. Justin 32. 3.—Valerc. 2, 12.— A quæstor who opposed Saturninus. Cic. ad Her.——The surname of Cæpio properly belonged to the family of Servilii.

CÆRATUS, a town of Crete. Strab.——A river of Crete, now Carteso

CÆRE, CÆRES, anciently AGYLLA, now Cervetere, a city of Etruria, once the capital of the whole country. It was in being in the age of Strabo When Æneas came to Italy, Mezentius was king over the inhabitants called Cærites or Cærites; but they banished their prince, and assisted the Trojans. The people of Cære received with all possible hospitality the Romans who fled with the fire of Vesta, when the city was besieged by the Gauls, and for this humanity they were made citizens of Rome, but without the privilege of voting; whence the expressions, in tabulas Cæritum referre, to deprive one of his right of voting, and Cerrite cera digni, to denote worthless persons Virg. Æn 8, 597. 10, 183 —Liv 1, 2. b 5.—Strab 5.—Gellius, 16, 13.—Horat. 1, ep. 6. 62.—Plin. 3, 5.

CÆRESI, a people of Germany. Cæs.

CÆSAR, a surname given to the Julian family at Rome, either because the first of the name slew an elephant, which is called cæsa in Punic, or quod cæso mortuæ matris utero natus fuerit. This name, after it had been dignified in the person of Julius Cæsar, and of his successors, was given to the apparent heir of the empire, in the age of the Roman emperors. The twelve first Roman emperors were distinguished by the name of Cæsar. They reigned in the following order; Julius Cæsar, Augustus, Tiberius, Caligula, Claudius, Nero, Galba, Otho, Vitellius, Vespasian, Titus, and Domitian, in Domitian, or rather in Nero, the family of Julius Cæsar was extinguished. But after such a lapse of time, the appellation of Cæsar seemed inseparable from the imperial dignity, and therefore it was assumed by the successors of the Julian family. Suetonius has written an account of these twelve characters in an extensive and impartial manner.—C. Julius Cæsar, the first emperor of Rome, was son of L. Cæsar and Aurelia the daughter of Cotta. He was descended, according to some accounts, from Iulus the son of Æneas. When he reached his 15th year he lost his father, and the year after he was made priest of Jupiter. Sylla was aware of his ambition, and endeavoured to remove him; but Cæsar understood his intentions, and to avoid discovery changed every day his lodgings. He was received into Sylla's friendship some time after; and the dictator told those who solicited the advancement of young Cæsar, that they were warm in the interest of a man who would prove some day or other the ruin of their country and of their liberty. When Cæsar went to finish his studies at Rhodes, under Apollonius Molo, he was seized by pirates, who offered him his liberty for thirty talents. He gave them forty, and threatened to revenge their insults; and he no sooner was out of their power, than he armed a ship, pursued them, and crucified them all. His eloquence procured him friends at Rome; and the generous manner in which he lived equally served to promote his interest. He obtained the office of high priest at the death of Metellus; and after he had passed through the inferior employments of the state, he was appointed over Spain, where he signalised himself by his valour and intrigues. At his return to Rome, he was made consul, and soon after he effected a reconciliation between Crassus and Pompey. He was appointed for the space of five years over the Gauls, by the interest of Pompey, to whom he had given his daughter Julia in marriage. Here he enlarged the boundaries of the Roman empire by conquest, and invaded Britain, which was then unknown to the Roman people He checked the Germans, and soon after had his government over Gaul prolonged to five other years, by means of his friends at Rome, The death of Julia, and of Crassus, the corrupted state of the Roman senate, and the ambition of Cæsar and Pompey, soon became the causes of a civil war. Neither of these celebrated Romans would suffer a superior, and the smallest matters were sufficient ground for unsheathing the sword. Cæsar's petitions were received with coldness or indifference by the Roman senate; and, by the influence of Pompey, a decree was passed to strip him of his power. Antony, who opposed it as tribune, fled to Cæsar's camp with the news; and the ambitious general no sooner heard this, than he made it a plea of resistance. On pretence of avenging the violence which had been offered to the sacred office of tribune in the person of Antony, he crossed the Rubicon, which was the boundary of his province. The passage of the Rubicon was a declaration of war, and Cæsar entered Italy sword in hand. Upon this, Pompey, with all the friends of liberty, left Rome, and retired to Dyrrachium; and Cæsar, after he had subdued all Italy, in sixty days, entered Rome, and provided himself with money from the public treasury. He went to Spain, where he conquered the partisans of Pompey, under Petreius, Afranius, and Varro; and, at his return to Rome, was declared dictator, and soon after consul. When he left Rome, he went in quest of Pompey, observing that he was marching against a general without troops, after having defeated troops without a general in Spain. In the plains of Pharsalia, in Thessaly, B.C. 48, the two hostile generals engaged; Pompey was conquered, and fled into Egypt, where he was basely murdered. Cæsar, after he had made a noble use of victory, pursued his adversary into Egypt, where he for some time forgot his fame and character in the arms of Cleopatra, by whom he had a son. His danger was great while at Alexandria, but he extricated himself with wonderful success, and made Egypt tributary to his power. After several conquests in Africa, the defeat of Cato, Scipio, and Juba, at Thapsus, and that of Pompey's sons in Spain, at Munda, he entered Rome, and triumphed over five different nations, Gaul, Alexandria, Pontus, Africa, and Spain, and was created perpetual dictator. But now his glory was at an end, his uncommon success created him enemies, and the chief of the senators, among whom was Brutus his most intimate friend, conspired against him, and stabbed him in the senate-house on the ides of March. He died, pierced with twenty-three wounds, the 15th of March, B C 44, in the 56th year of his age. Casca gave him the first blow, and immediately he attempted to make some resistance; but when he saw Brutus among the conspirators, he submitted to his fate, and fell down at their feet, muffling up his mantle, and exclaiming, Tu quoque Brute! Cæsar might have escaped the sword of the conspirators, if he had listened to the advice of his wife, whose dreams on the night previous to the day of his murder were alarming. He also received, as he went to the senate-house, a paper from Artemidorus, which discovered the whole conspiracy to him; but he neglected the reading of what might have saved his life. When he was in his first campaign in Spain, he was observed to gaze at a statue of Alexander, and even shed tears at the recollection that that hero had conquered the world at an age in which he himself had done nothing. The learning of Cæsar deserves commendation, as well as his military character. He reformed the calender. He wrote his commentaries on the Gallic wars on the spot where he fought his battles; and the composition has been admired for the elegance as well as the correctness of its style. The valuable book was nearly lost; and when Cæsar saved his life in the bay of Alexandria, he was obliged to swim from his ship, with his arms in one hand, and his commentaries in the other. Besides the Gallic and civil wars, he wrote other pieces, which are now lost. The history of the war in Alexandria and Spain is attributed to him by some, and by others to Hirtius. Cæsar has been blamed for his debaucheries and superstition; and the first year he had a public office, the debts were rated at 800 talents, which his friends discharged; yet, in his public character, he must be reckoned one of the few heroes that surely make their appearance among mankind. His qualities were such that in every battle he could not but be conqueror, and in every republic, master; and to his sense of his superiority over the rest of the world, or to his ambition, we are to attribute his saying, that he would rather be first in a little village, than second at Rome.

It was after his conquest over Pharnaces, the son of Mithridates, at Zela in Pontus, in one day, that he made use of these remarkable words, to express the celerity of his operations; Veni, vidi, vici. Conscious of the services of a man who, in the intervals of peace, beautified and enriched the capital of his country with public buildings, libraries, and porticos, the senate permitted the dictator to wear a laurel crown on his bald head; and it is said, that to reward his benevolence, they were going to give him the title or authority of king all over the Roman empire, except Italy, when he was murdered. In his private character, Cæsar has been accused of seducing one of the vestal virgins, and suspected of being privy to Catiline's conspiracy; and it was his fondness for dissipated pleasures which made his countrymen say, that he was the husband of all the women at Rome, and the woman of all men. It is said that he conquered 300 nations, took 800 cities, and defeated three millions of men, one of which fell in the field of battle. Plin. 7, 25, says that he could employ at the same time, his ears to listen, his eyes to read, his hand to write, and his mind to dictate. His death was preceded, as many authors mention, by uncommon prodigies, and immediately after his death, a large comet made its appearance. Cæsar, when young, was betrothed to Cossutia, a rich heiress, whom he dismissed to marry Cornelia, the daughter of Cinna, by whom he had Julia. His attachment to Cornelia was so great, that he never could be prevailed upon by the arts or threats of Sylla to divorce her; but her attachment he boldly preferred to his own personal safety. After her early death, which he lamented with great bitterness of grief, he married Pompeia, the granddaughter of Sylla; and for his fourth wife he took Calpurnia, the daughter of the consul Piso, a connexion formed from political motives. The best editions of Cæsar's commentaries are, the magnificent one by Dr Clarke, fol. Lond. 1712; that of Cambridge, with a Greek translation, 4to, 1727; that of Oudendorpius, 2 vols. 4to, L. Bat. 1737; that of Elzevir, 8vo, L. Bat. 1635; and that of Oberlinus, 8vo, Lips. 1819. Sueton. et Plut. in vita.—Dio.—Appian.—Oronus.—Diod. 16 et 20 et 21 et 37.—Virg. G. 1, 466.—Ovid Met. 15, 702.—Marcell.—Flor. 3 et 4.—Lucius, was father to the dictator. He died suddenly, when putting on his shoes.—Octavianus (Vid Augustus.)—Caius, a tragic poet and orator, commended by Cic. in Brut. His brother C. Lucius was consul, and followed, as well as himself, the party of Sylla. They were both put to death by order of Marius.—Lucius, an uncle of M. Antony, who followed the interest of Pompey, and was proscribed by Augustus, for which Antony proscribed Cicero, the friend of Augustus. His son Lucius was put to death by J. Cæsar in his youth.—Two sons of Agrippa bore also the name of Cæsar, Caius and Lucius. (Vid. Agrippa.)—Augusta, a town of Spain, built by Augustus, on the Iberus, and now called Saragossa.

CÆSAREA, the name of several cities, of which the most celebrated are—Cæsarea, a town of Mauritania, which had a magnificent port on the Mediterranean. It gave the appellation Cæsariensis to one of the districts into which Claudius divided Mauritania, and it was originally called Iol. It was the residence of king Juba, who enlarged and beautified it, and changed its name to Cæsarea, in honour of Augustus. It is supposed to have occupied the site of the modern Shershell.—Cæsarea ad Argæum, anciently called Mazaca, and afterwards Eusebia, and denominated Cæsarea ad Argæum, by Tiberius, in honour of Augustus, was the capital of Cappadocia, and the residence of its kings. It was situate at the foot of mount Argæus, near the source of the river Melas. It is now called Kaisarea.—Cæsarea Philippi, anciently named Paneas, on the northern confines of Palestine, in the district of Trachonitis. It was built by Philip the tetrarch, son of Herod the Great, and made the place of his residence.—Cæsarea Stratonis, on the shores of the Mediterranean, about seventy-five miles north-west from Jerusalem. Herod the Great enlarged it, and it became the metropolis of Palestine, and the seat of the Roman proconsul. It is remarkable as the place where Herod Agrippa was smitten by the angel of God, where Cornelius the centurion resided, and where St Paul was imprisoned two years. It is now in utter desolation, though the vestiges of its former splendour are most extensive.

CÆSAREA INSULA, now the isle of Jersey.

CÆSARION, the son of J. Cæsar, by queen Cleopatra, was, at the age of thirteen, proclaimed by Antony and his mother, king of Cyprus, Egypt, and Cœlosyria. He was put to death five years after by Augustus. Suet. in Aug. 17, et Cæs. 52.

CÆSARODUNUM, now Tours, the capital of the Turones.

CÆSAROMAGUS, now Beauvais, the capital of the Bellovaci.—A town of Britain, now Brentwood.

CÆSENNIUS PÆTUS, a general sent by Nero to Armenia. Tac. Ann. 15, 6 et 25.

CÆSETIUS, a Roman who protected his children against Cæsar. Val. Max. 5, 7.

CÆSIA, a surname of Minerva.—A wood in Germany. Tac. Ann. 1, 50.

CÆSIUS, a Latin poet, whose talents were not of uncommon brilliancy. Catull. 14.—Bassus, a poet. Vid. Bassus.

CÆSO, a son of Q. Cincinnatus, who revolted to the Volsci.

CÆSONIA, a lascivious woman who married Caligula, and was murdered at the same time with her daughter Julia. Suet in Calig. 9.

CÆSONIUS MAXIMUS, was banished from Italy, by Nero, on account of his friendship with Seneca, &c. Tacit. Ann. 15, 71.

CÆTULUM, a town of Spain. Strab 2.

CAGACO, a fountain of Laconia. Paus. 3, 21.

CAICINUS, a river of Italy, in the country of the Brutii, near the Locri Epizephyri. It was in the neighbourhood of this river that the Athenians invaded the territory of the Locrians. It is supposed to be the present Amendolea. Theocrit. 3, 103.

CAICUS, a companion of Æneas. Virg. Æn. 1, 187. 9 35.—A river of Mysia, flowing north of the Hermus, and falling into the Ægean sea near the town of Elæa, opposite the island of Lesbos. It is supposed to be the present Germasti. Mela, 1, 18.—Plin. 5, 2.—Strab. 13.—Virg. G. 4, 370.—Ovid. Met. 2, 243.

CAIETA, a town and harbour of Latium, which received its name from Caieta, the nurse of Æneas, whose ashes were deposited there in a marble tomb, by the piety of her illustrious protector. According to Strabo, it received its name from the Laconian word Kaieta, a cave.

owing to a receding of the shore. Ovid. Met. 14, 443.—Virg. Æn. 7, 1.

CAIUS and CAIA, a prænomen very common at Rome to both sexes. C, in its natural position, denoted the man's name, and when reversed Ↄ, it implied Caia. Every new married woman, when entering her husband's house, was asked by him what her name was, and the general answer was, Ubi tu Caius, et ego Caia, Where you are master in the house, I am mistress. This formality was said to be after the example of Tanaquil the wife of Tarquin, whose name was Caia Cæcilia. Plin. 8, 48.—Quintil. 1, 7

CAIUS, a son of Agrippa by Julia. Vid. Agrippa.

Q. CALABER, called also Smyrnæus, wrote a Greek poem in fourteen books, containing 8718 verses, about the beginning of the third century. It is a continuation of Homer's Iliad, and after mentioning the several disasters which befel the Trojans after the death of their favourite Hector, the untimely fate of Achilles, and the ruin of Priam's kingdom, the poet concludes by the return of the victorious Greeks to their native land, and their escape from the dangers of the sea, where Ajax and other chiefs were overwhelmed. The best editions of this elegant and well-written book, are, that of Rhodoman, 12mo. Hanover, 1604, with the notes of Dausquetus, and that of Pauw, 8vo. L. Bat 1734.

CALABRIA, a country of Italy in Magna Græcia. It is supposed to have derived its name from the oriental word Kalab, or pitch, on account of the resin obtained from the pines of this country. It was also called Messapia, Japygia, Salentina, and Peucetia. The poet Ennius was born there. The country was fertile, and produced a variety of fruits, much cattle, and excellent honey. Virg G. 3, 425.—Horat. 1, 1, 29.—Plin. 3, 5. 1, ep. 7, 14.—Strab. 6.—Mela, 2, 4. Ptol. 3, 1. Plin. 8, 48.

CALABRIS, a river of Calabria. Plin. 6.

CALAGURRIS, now Calahorra, a town of the Nervii in Spain, on the south side of the Iberus. In the year of Rome 662, it was besieged by Afranius, one of Pompey's generals, but the inhabitants were reduced to such extremities, that they fed on their wives and children, which the Romans were wont to call any grievous famine panem Calagurritanam. Quintilian was a native here. Liv. 39, 21.—Plin. 3, 3.—Val. Max. 9, 6.

CALAGURIS and ZETHES. Vid Zethes.

CALAMIS, an excellent carver, whose works, especially a statue of Apollo, and some vases, are mentioned with high commendation though he is considered far inferior to Praxiteles by Cicero de Clar 70.—Paus 1, 3.—Ovid ex Pont. 4, ep. 1, 33.—Quintil 12, 10.—Plin. 34, 7 et 8.—Propert 3, el. 9, 19

CALAMINA, a place of Samos. Herod. 9.

CALAMOS, a town of Asia, near mount Libanus. Plin 5, 20.——A town of Phœnicia.——Another of Babylonia.

CALAMUS, a son of the river Mæander, who was tenderly attached to Carpo, the daughter of Erechtheus, and one of the Horæ. Their happiness was of short duration. Carpo was drowned in the Mæander, and Calamus, unable to bear her loss, entreated Jupiter to remove him from life, and he was consequently changed into a reed (calamus), which grows generally on the border of rivers. Paus. 9, 35.

CALANUS, a celebrated Indian philosopher, one of the gymnosophists. He followed Alexander in his Indian expedition, and being sick, in his 83d year, he ordered a pile to be raised, upon which he mounted, decked with flowers and garlands, to the astonishment of the king and of the army. When the pile was fired, Alexander asked him whether he had any thing to say? "No," said he, "I shall meet you again in a very short time." Alexander died three months after in Babylon, and the recollection on this event of what Calanus had said increased his reputation as a pretended prophet. The real name of this philosopher according to Plutarch, was Sphines, and he received that of Calanus from his saluting the Greeks in his own language with the word Cale, which signifies hail. Strab. 15.—Cic. de Div. 1, 23.—Arrian. et Plut. in Alex.—Ælian 2, 11. 3, 6.—Val. Max. 1, 8.

CALAON, a river of Asia, near Colophon. Paus. 7, 3.

CALARIS a city of Sardinia. Plor. 2, 6.

CALATHANA, a town of Macedonia. Liv. 32, 13

CALATHES, a town of Thrace, near Tomus, on the Euxine sea. Strab. 7.—Mela, 2, 2.

CALATHION, a mountain of Laconia. Paus. 3, 20

CALATHUS a son of Jupiter and Antiope.

CALATIA, a town of Campania, on the Appian way. It was made a Roman colony in the age of Julius Cæsar. Sil. 8, 543.—Liv 9, 2, 28, et 43, 24, 13 et 61. 26 16 27, 31.

CALATIÆ, a people of India, who eat the flesh of their parents. Herod. 3, 38.

CALAUREA and CALAURIA, an island in the Sinus Saronicus, opposite Troezene. Apollo, and afterwards Neptune, was the chief deity of the place, and his temple was served by a woman, whom nothing but marriage could remove from her sacred office. In the age of the Antonines there was still to be seen there the tomb of Demosthenes, who poisoned himself to fly from the persecutions of Antipater. Ancient tradition reports that Neptune received this island from Apollo in exchange for that of Delos, whence the proverb, "pro Delo Calauria" Ovid. Met. 7, 384.—Plin 4, 12.—Paus 1, 8. 2, 33.—Strab. 8.—Mela, 2, 7.

CALAVII, a people of Campania. Liv. 26, 27

CALAVIUS, a magistrate of Capua, who rescued some Roman senators from death, &c. Liv. 23, 2 et 3.

CALBIS, a river of Caria. Mela, 1, 16.

CALCE, a city of Campania. Strab. 5.

CALCHAS, a celebrated soothsayer, son of Thestor. He accompanied the Greeks to Troy, in the office of high priest; and he informed them that the city could not be taken without the aid of Achilles, that their fleet could not sail from Aulis before Iphigenia was sacrificed to Diana, and that the plague could not be stopped in the Grecian army, before the restoration of Chryseis to her father. He told them also that Troy could not be taken before ten years' siege. He had received the power of divination from Apollo; and the book of futurity was open before his eyes, and the flight or the language of birds equally revealed the will of fate to his comprehensive mind. Calchas was informed, that as soon as he found a man more skilled than himself in divination, he must perish; and this happened near Colophon, after the Trojan war. He was unable to tell how many figs were in the branches of a certain fig-tree; and when Mopsus mentioned the exact number, Calchas died through grief (Vid. Mopsus.) Homer. Il. 1, 84.—Æschyl. in Agam.—Eurip. in Iphig.—Paus. 1, 43.

CALCHEDONIA. Vid. Chalcedon.

CALCHINIA, a daughter of Leucippus. She had a son by Neptune, who inherited his grandfather's kingdom of Sicyon. Paus. 2, 5.

CALDIUS, a surname satirically applied to Tiberius by his army, because he was very partial to warm (caldus) drink. Suet. Tib 42.

CALDUS CÆLIUS, a Roman who killed himself when degraded by the Germans. Paterc. 2, 120. The appellation of Caldus is applied to men of a rash and violent disposition of mind. Cic. Inv. 2, 9.

CALE (ES), CALES (-IUM), and CALENUM, now Calvi, a town of Campania, whose wines were excellent as the ancient poets have mentioned. Horat. 4, od. 12, 14.—Juv 1, 65.—Sil. 5, 413.—Virg Æn. 7, 727.

CALEDONIA, the ancient name of that part of Great Britain now called Scotland. Various etymologies have been assigned to it. Camden derives it from the Celtic caled, hard, as allusive to the uncivilised state of the country. Buchanan obtains it from the Scottish cadlen, a hazle tree; and others compound it of the two British words Cael dun, Gauls of the mountains, or Gael doch, Gaul district. Caledonia comprehended all those countries which lay to the north of the Forth and Clyde. The large limbs, red hair, and blue eyes of its inhabitants, seemed to assert a Germanic extraction, according to Tacit. in vita Agric. It was never reduced to subjection by the Romans, although Agricola penetrated to the river Tay, and Severus into the very heart of the country. Mortlat 10, ep. 44.—Sil. 3, 598.—Ptolem. 2, 3.—Flacc. 1, 8.

CALENTUM, a town of Spain, where it is said bricks were made of an earth resembling pumice stone so light that they would not sink in water. Plin 35, 14.

CALENUS, a famous soothsayer of Etruria in the age of Tarquin Plin 28, 2.——A lieutenant of Cæsar's army. After Cæsar's murder, he concealed some that had been proscribed by the triumvirs, and behaved with great honour to them. Plut. in Cæs.—Q Fusius, a tribune of the people at Rome, who by a law procured the acquittal of Clodius, who had insulted the religion of his country, in the violation of the rites of Bona Dea Cic. Att. 1, ep. 14 et 16. Phil. 8, 8.

CALES. (Vid. Cale.)——A city of Bithynia on the Euxine. Arrian.

CALESIUS, a charioteer of Axylus, killed by Diomedes in the Trojan war. Homer Il. 16, 16.

CALETÆ, or CALETES, a people of Belgic Gaul. Their chief cities were Juliobona, now Lillebonne, and Caracotinum, now Harfleur Cæs. Bell. G. 2, 4.

CALETOR, a Trojan prince, slain by Ajax as he was going to set fire to the ship of Protesilaus. Homer. Il. 15, 419.—Paus 10, 14.

CALEX, a river of Asia Minor, falling into the Euxine sea. Thevpd. 4, 75.

CALIADNE, the wife of Ægyptus. Apollod. 2, 1.

CALICENI, a people of Macedonia.

M. CALIDIUS, an orator and praetorian who died in the civil wars, &c. Cæs. Bell. Civ. 1, 2——L. Julius, a man remarkable for his riches, the excellency of his character, his learning and poetical abilities. He was proscribed by Voluminus, but delivered by Atticus. C. Nep. in Attic. 12.

C. CALIGULA, the emperor, received this surname from his wearing in the camp the Caliga, a kind of shoe in use among the common soldiers. He was son of Germanicus by Agrippina, and grand-son to Tiberius, born A.D. 12. During the first eight months of his reign, Rome expected universal prosperity, the exiles were recalled, taxes were remitted, and profligates dismissed; but Caligula soon displayed his true character; he became proud, wanton, and cruel He built a temple to himself, and ordered his head to be placed on the images of the gods, while he wished to imitate the thunders and powers of Jupiter. The statues of all great men were removed, as if Rome would sooner forget their virtues in their absence, and the emperor appeared in public places in the most indecent manner, encouraged roguery, committed incest with his three sisters, and established public places of prostitution. He often amused himself with putting innocent people to death, he attempted to famish Rome, by a monopoly of corn, and as he was pleased with the greatest disasters which befel his subjects, he often wished the Romans had but one head, that he might have the gratification to strike it off. Wild beasts were constantly fed in his palace with human victims; and, as if to insult the feelings and the dignity of fallen Rome, a favourite horse was made high priest and consul, and kept in marble apartments, and adorned with the most valuable trappings and pearls which the Roman empire could furnish. Caligula built a bridge upwards of three miles in the sea; and though perhaps he have shown himself more tyrannical, had not Chærea and Cornelius Sabinus, both tribunes of the prætorian cohorts, formed a conspiracy against his life, with others equally tired with the cruelties and the insults that were offered with impunity to the persons and character of the Romans. In consequence of this, the tyrant was murdered January 24th, in his 29th year, after a reign of three years and ten months, A.D 41. It has been said that Caligula wrote a treatise on rhetoric; but his love of learning is better understood from his attempts to destroy the writings of Homer and of Virgil Dio.—Sueton. in vita.—Tacit Ann.

CALIPPUS, a mathematician of Cyzicus, who flourished 330 B.C. He is famous for having corrected the cycle or period of nineteen years, invented by Meton, for the purpose of showing the correspondence in point of time between the revolutions of the sun and moon, hence sometimes called the Calippic period.

CALIS, a man in Alexander's army, tortured for conspiring against the king. Curt 6, 11

CALLÆSCHERUS the father of Critias. Plut in Alcib.

CALLAICI, or CALLÆCI, a people of Hispania Terraconensis, in the north-western part of the country. They occupied Gallæcia and the Portuguese provinces of Tras-os-Montes and Entre-Douro-e-Minho. Orel Inst. 6, 461.

CALLAS, a general of Alexander. Died. 17——Of Cassander against Polyperchon. Id. 19.——A river of Rubœa.

CALLATEBUS, a town of Caria. Herod 7, 32.

CALLE, a sea port town of Hispania Terraconensis, at the mouth of the Durius It is now called Oporto. From Portus Calles the modern name of Portugal is said to be derived, CALLETERIA, a town of Campania.

CALLENI, a people of Campania.

CALLIA a town of Arcadia. Paus 8, 27.

CALLIADES, a magistrate of Athens when Xerxes invaded Greece. Herod. 8. 51

CALLIAS an Athenian appointed to make peace between Artaxerxes and his country. Diod. 12.——A son of Temenus, who murdered his father with the assistance of his brothers. Apollod. 2, 6 ——A Greek poet, son of Lysimachus. His compositions are lost, though the titles of some of his plays, Ata'anta, the Cyclops, the Frogs, the Grammarians, &c. are preserved. He was surnamed Schœnion, either because himself or his father were employed in twisting ropes (σχοινος), through poverty. Athen. 10.——A partial historian of Syracuse He wrote an account of the Sicilian wars, and was well rewarded by Agathocles, because he had shown him in a favourable view Athen. 12.—Dionys.——An Athenian greatly revered for his patriotism. Herod. 8, 121.——A soothsayer.——An Athenian, commander of a fleet against Philip, whose ships he took, &c.——A rich Athenian, who liberated Cimon from prison, on condition of marrying his sister and wife Elpinice. C. Nep. et Plut. in Cim.——A historian, who wrote an explanation of the poems of Alcæus and Sappho.

CALLIBIUS, a general in the war between Mantinea and Sparta. Xenoph Hist. G.

CALLICERUS, a Greek poet, some of whose epigrams are preserved in the Anthologia

CALLICHORUS, a place of Phocis, where the orgies of Bacchus were yearly celebrated.

CALLICLES, an Athenian, whose house was not searched on account of his recent marriage, when an inquiry was made after the money given by Harpalus, &c. Plut. in Demosth —— Æsch. ——A notary of Magnesia.

CALLICOLONE, a hill of Asia Minor, in the vicinity of the Simois. Strab 13.

CALLICRATES, an Athenian, who seized upon the sovereignty of Syracuse, by imposing upon Dion when he had lost his popularity. He was expelled by the sons of Dionysius, after reigning thirteen months. He is called Callippus by some authors. C. Nep in Dion.——An officer entrusted with the care of the treasures of Susa by Alexander. Curt. 5, 2 ——An artist of Lacedæmon, who made, with ivory, ants and other insects, so small that they could scarcely be seen. It is said that he engraved some of Homer's verses upon a grain of millet Plin. 7, 21. 35, 5 — Elian. V. H. 1, 17.——An Achæan, who, by his perfidy, constrained the Athenians to submit to Rome. Paus 7, 10.——A Syrian, who wrote an account of Aurelian's life ——A brave Athenian, killed at the battle of Platæa. Herod 9, 72.

CALLICRATIDAS, a Spartan, who succeeded Lysander in the command of the fleet. He took Methymna, and routed the Athenian fleet under Conon. He was defeated and killed near the Arginusæ, in a naval battle, B.C 406. Diod 13. —Xenoph Hist. G.—One of the four ambassadors sent by the Lacedæmonians to Darius, upon the rupture of their alliance with Alexander. Curt 3, 13.——A Pythagorean writer.

CALLIDIUS, a celebrated Roman contemporary with Cicero, who speaks of his abilities both as an orator and as a statesman with the highest commendation. Quintil. 10, 1. 12, 6.—Cic. in Brut. 74.—Paterc. 2, 36.

CALLIDROMUS, a place near Thermopylæ. Thucyd. 3, 6.

CALLIDRTUS, a man of Megara, received in his banishment by Pharnabazus. Thucyd. 3, 6.

CALLIMACHUS, an historian and poet of Cyrene, son of Battus and Mesatma, and pupil to Hermocrates the grammarian. He had, in the age of Ptolemy Philadelphus, kept a school at Alexandria, and had Apollonius of Rhodes among his pupils, whose ingratitude obliged Callimachus to lash him severely in a satirical poem, under the name of Ibis (Vid. Apollonius.) The Ibis of Ovid is an imitation of this piece. He wrote a work in 120 books on famous men, besides treatises on birds; but of all his numerous compositions, only 31 epigrams, an elegy, and some hymns on the gods, are extant; the best editions of which are, that of Ernestus, 2 vols. 8vo. L. Bat. 1761, and that of Bloomfield, 8vo. Lond 1815. Propertius admired his writings so highly that he styled himself the Roman Callimachus, and Catullus employed his pen in translating his poem on the hair of Berenice. The precise time of his death, as well as of his birth, is unknown. Propert. 3, el 1, 65.—Ov. Trist. 1, 84.—Horat. 2, ep. 2, 109.—Quintil. 10, 1.——An Athenian general, killed in the battle of Marathon. His body was found in an erect posture, all covered with wounds Plut ——A Colophonian, who wrote the life of Homer. Plut.——A statuary of Corinth, who spent the greater part of his life in beautifying the buildings of Athens. He is said to be the inventor of the Corinthian chapiter, which he used elegantly to adorn with the leaves of the acanthus. Paus 1, 16.——A Greek painter, whose ideas of beauty and perfection were so extravagant, that none of his pieces survived his criticism. Plin. 34, 8.

CALLIMEDON, a partisan of Phocion, at Athens, condemned by the populace.

CALLIMELES, a youth ordered to be killed and served up as meat by Apollodorus of Cassandrea. Polyæn. 6, 7.

CALLINUS, a Grecian orator and poet, said to have been the inventor of elegiac verse. He is supposed to have flourished 776 B.C. Some fragments of his poetry have been preserved in the collections of Stobæus. Athen.—Strab. 13.

CALLIOPE, one of the Muses, daughter of Jupiter and Mnemosyne, who presided over eloquence and heroic poetry. She is said to be the mother of Orpheus by Apollo, and also of Hymenæus and Ialemus by the same god according to others. Some call her also mother of the Corybantes by Jupiter, and of the Syrens by Achelous. She was represented with a trumpet in her right hand, and with books in the other, which signified that her office was to take notice of the famous actions of heroes, as Clio was employed in celebrating them; and she held the three most famous epic poems of antiquity, and appeared generally crowned with laurel. She settled the dispute between Venus and Proserpine, concerning Adonis, whose company these two goddesses wished both perpetually to enjoy. Hesiod. Theog.—Apollod 1, 3.—Horat. 3, od. 4. —Ovid. Fast. 5, 80.

CALLIPATIRA, daughter of Diagoras, and wife of Callianax the athlete, went disguised in man's clothes with her son Pisidorus to the Olympic games. When Pisidorus was declared victor, she discovered her sex through excess of joy, and was arrested, as women were not permitted to appear there on pain of death. The victory of her son obtained her release; and a law was instantly made, which forbade any wrestlers to appear but naked Paus. 5, 6. 6, 7

CALLIPPIDES, a proverbial epithet applied to such as promise much, but perform nothing Cic Att 13, ep. 12.—Suet. Tib 32.

CALLIPHON a painter of Samos, famous for his bi torical pieces. Plin 10. 20.——A philosopher, who made the summum bonum consist in pleasure joined to the love of honesty. This system was opposed by Cicero, Quæst. Acad. 4, 131 et 139. De Offic. 3, 119.

CALLIPHRON, a celebrated dancing master, who had Epaminondas among his pupils. C. Nep in Epam.

CALLIPIDÆ, a people of Scythia. Herod 4, 17.

CALLIPOLIS, a city of Thrace on the Hellespont, nearly opposite Lampsacus. Now Gallipoli. Sil. 14, 250 ——A town of Sicily, between mount Ætna and Naxos It was founded by the Naxians. It is now Gallipoli.——A city of Calabria on the coast of Tarentum on a rocky island, joined by a bridge to the continent It is now called Gallipoli, and contains 6000 inhabitants who trade in oil and cotton.

CALLIPUS, or CALIPPUS, an Athenian disciple to Plato. He destroyed Dion, &c. (Vid. Callicrates.) C Nep in Dion ——A Corinthian, who wrote a history of Orchomenos. Paus 9. 36.——A philosopher. Diog. in Zen.——A general of the Athenians, when the Gauls invaded Greece by Thermopylæ. Paus. 1, 3

CALLIPYGOS, a surname of Venus.

CALLIRHOE, a daughter of the Scamander, who married Tros, by whom she had Ilus, Ganymede, and Assaracus. Apollod.——A fountain of Attica, where Callirhoe killed herself (Vid Coresus.) Paus 7, 21.—Stat. Theb. 12, 620 —— A daughter of Oceanus and Tethys, mother of Echidna, Orthos, and Cerberus, by Chrysaor Hesiod. Theog.—Apollod 2 ——A daughter of Lycus tyrant of Libya, who kindly received Diomedes at his return from Troy He abandoned her, upon which she killed herself ——A daughter of the Achelous, who married Alcmæon (Vid. Alcmæon.) Paus 8, 24 ——A daughter of Phocus the Bœotian, whose beauty procures her many admirers Her father behaved with such coldness to her lovers that they murdered him. Callirhoe avenged his death with the assistance of the Bœotians. Paul. Amat Narr ——A daughter of Piras and Niobe. Hygin fab. 145 ——A fountain of Judæa whose waters were possessed of medicinal properties. Joseph. A. 17, 8.—Plin. 5, 16

CALLISTE an island of the Ægean sea called afterwards Thera, and now Santorin Plin. 4, 12.—Paus. 3, 1. Its chief town was founded 1150 years before the Christian era, by Theras

CALLISTEIA, (the rewards of beauty), a festival at Lesbos, during which all the women present ed themselves in the temple of Juno, and the fairest was rewarded in a public manner There was also an institution of the same kind among the Parrhasians, first made by Cypselus, whose wife was honoured with the first prize. The Eleans had one also, in which the fairest man received as a prize a complete suit of armour, which he dedicated to Minerva.

CALLISTHENES, a Greek who wrote a history of his own country in ten books, beginning from the peace between Artaxerxes and Greece, down to the plundering of the temple of Delphi by Philomelus. Diod. 14.——A man who with others attempted to expel the garrison of Demetrius from Athens. Polyæn 5, 17.——A philosopher of Olynthus, intimate with Alexander, whom he accompanied in his oriental expedition in the capacity of a preceptor, and to whom he had been recommended by his friend and master Aristotle. Possessed of the foolish vanity of learning, and without the conciliating arts of the courtier, Callisthenes affected to look with contempt on the victories of Alexander, and asserted that his own tongue would be more durable, erected on the basis of philosophy and historical composition. This blameable conduct, so unbecoming in a subject, should have been disregarded by a king; but Alexander, accustomed to dictate, could not bear to be treated with disrespect. When Callisthenes, with the dignity of a man, refused to pay divine honours to his master, as the vile insignificant flatterers of the court had done, he was eagerly accused of a conspiracy by those who observed the coldness of Alexander towards his late preceptor. The accusation was as easily credited, and the philosopher shamefully mutilated, and exposed to wild beasts was dragged about in chains, till Lysimachus gave him poison, which ended together his tortures and his life, B.C. 328. None of his compositions are extant Curt 8, 6.—Plut in Alex.—Arrian. 4.—Justin. 12, 6 et 7. 15, 3.——A writer of Styberis ——A freedman of Lucullus. It is said that he gave poison to his master. Plut. in Lucull

CALLISTO and CALISTO, called also Helice, was daughter of Lycaon king of Arcadia, and one of Diana's attendants. Jupiter saw her, and seduced her after he had assumed the shape of Diana. Her pregnancy was discovered as she bathed with Diana; and the fruit of her amour with Jupiter, called Arcas, was hid in the woods and preserved. Juno, who was jealous of Jupiter, changed Calisto into a bear, but the god, apprehensive of her being hurt by the huntsmen, made her a constellation of heaven, with her son Arcas, under the name of the bear. Ovid. Met 2, fab 4, 5, et 6. Fast 2, 155.—Apollod. 3, 8.—Hygin. fab 176 et 177. P. A 2.—Paus. 8, 3.

CALLISTONICUS, a celebrated statuary at Thebes. Paus. 9, 16.

CALLISTRATUS, an Athenian, appointed general with Timotheus and Chabrias against Lacedæmon. Diod. 15 ——An orator of Aphidna, in the time of Epaminondas the most eloquent of his age Nep in Epam.——An Athenian orator, with whom Demosthenes made an intimate acquaintance after he had heard him plead. Xenophon.——A Greek historian praised by Dionys Hal.——A comic poet, rival of Aristophanes ——A statuary. Plin 34, 8.——A secretary of Mithridates. *Plut in Lucull.*3.——A grammarian, who made the alphabet of the Samians consist of twenty-four letters. Some suppose that he wrote a treatise on courtezans

CALLIXENA, a courtezan of Thessaly, whose company Alexander refused, though requested by his mother Olympias. This was attributed by the Athenians to other causes than chastity, and therefore the prince's ambition was ridiculed

CALLIXENUS, a general who perished by famine ——An Athenian, imprisoned for passing sentence of death upon some prisoners. Diod 13.

CALON, a statuary. Quintil. 12, 10.—Plin. 34, 8.

CALOR, a river of Italy which rose in the mountains of the Hirpini, passed Beneventum, and discharged itself into the Vulturnus Now, the Calore Lac 24, 14.

CALPAS, a river and harbour of Bithynia on the shores of the Euxine. Strab 12.

CALPE, a lofty mountain in the most southern parts of Spain opposite to mount Abyla on the African coast These two mountains were called the pillars of Hercules. Calpe is now called Gibraltar, from the Arabic Jebel al Tath, the mountain of the entrance, because it was looked upon as the key of the Mediterranean, or from Jebel al Tarik, the mountain of Tarik, a Moorish general, who first led the Moors into Spain, A.D. 710

CALPHURNIA, a daughter of L Piso, who was Julius Cæsar's fourth wife. The night previous to her husband's murder, she dreamed that the roof of her house had fallen and that he had been stabbed in her arms, and on that account she attempted but in vain, to detain him at home After Cæsar's murder she placed herself under the patronage of M Antony. Sueton in Jul.

CALPHURNIUS BESTIA, a noble Roman bribed by Jugurtha. It is said that he murdered his wives when asleep Plin 27, 2.——Crassus, a patrician, who went with Regulus against the Marsyli. He was seized by the enemy as he attempted to plunder one of their towns and he was ordered to be sacrificed to Neptune Bocchus the king's daughter fell in love with him, and gave him an opportunity of escaping and of conquering her father Calphurnius returned victorious, and Bisaltia destroyed herself——A man who conspired against the emperor Nerva——Galerianus, son of Piso, put to death, &c Tacit. Hist. 4, 11 —— Piso condemned for using seditious words against Tiberius. Tacit. Ann. 6, 21 ——Another, famous for his abstinence. Val. Max. 4, 3.——Titus, a Latin poet born in Sicily in the age of Diocletian; seven of whose eclogues, consisting of 733 verses, and addressed to Nemesianus, are extant, and generally found with the works of the poets who have written on hunting. Though abounding in many beautiful lines they are however greatly inferior to the elegance and simplicity of Virgil The best edition is that of Beck, 8vo Lips. 1803.——A man surnamed Frugi, who composed annals, B C 130.

CALPURNIA or CALPHURNIA, a noble family in Rome, descended from Calpus son of Numa. It branched out in the ages of the commonwealth, and assumed the different surnames of Pisones, Bibuli, Flammæ, Cæsoninni, Asprenates, &c. The Pisos were again subdivided into the families of the Bestiæ, Frugi, and Cesonini. Vel. Pat. 2, 57.—Vid. Max 4, 3.—Plut in Num. et Cæs.

CALPURNIA and CALPHURNIA LEX, was enacted A.U.C. 604, severely to punish such as were guilty of using bribes, &c Cic. de Off. 2 ——A daughter of Marius, sacrificed to the gods by her father, who was advised to do it, in a dream, if he wished to conquer the Cimbri. Plut. in Parall——A woman who killed herself when she heard that her husband was murdered in the civil wars of Marius Paterc. 2, 26. ——The wife of J. Cæsar (Vid Calphurnia) ——A favourite of the emperor Claudius, &c. Tacit. Ann.——A woman ruined by Agrippina on account of her beauty, &c. Tacit.

CALVENA, a friend of Cæsar's. Cic. Att. 1. ep. 5.

CALVIA a female minister of Nero's lusts. Tacit Hist. 1 3.

CALVINA, a prostitute in Juvenal's age. 3, 134

CALVISIUS, a friend of Augustus. Plut. in Anton.——An officer whose wife prostituted herself in his camp by night, &c Tacit. Hist. 1, 48.

CALUMNIA and IMPUDENTIA, two deities worshipped at Athens. Calumny was ingeniously represented in a painting by Apelles.

CALUS. Vid Talus.

CALUSIDIUS, a soldier in the army of Germanicus When this general wished to stab himself with his own sword, Calusidius offered him his own, observing that it was sharper. Tacit. Ann. 1, 35

CALUSIUM a town of Etruria

CALVUS COHN LICINIUS, a famous orator, equally known for writing iambics. As he was both factious and satirical, he did not fail to excite attention by his animadversions upon Cæsar and Pompey, and from his eloquence, to dispute the palm of eloquence with Cicero. His abilities were called into action by the death of his favourite Quintilia, whose sudden and untimely fate he deplored in verses admired for their elegance, sublimity, and pathos. Calvus was of a diminutive stature, and of a feeble frame of body, yet his exertions in the forum were great and astonishing. He died in his youth. Only nine verses of his poetry are preserved in the collection of Latin poets. Cic. Inp.—Horat Sat. 1, 10. 19.—Quint.—Senec—Suetom——A name given to M Crassus Cic Att 1, ep. 16

CALYBE, a town of Thrace. Strab. 17.——The mother of Bucolion by Laomedon. Apollod. 3, 12.——An old woman priestess in the temple which Juno had at Ardea Virg Æn. 7, 419

CALYCADNUS, a river of Cilicia Trachea, which flowed into the sea a little to the east of the promontory of Sarpedon. It is now the Ghuk.

CALYCE, a daughter of Æolus, son of Helenus and Enarete daughter of Deimachus. She had Endymion, king of Elis, by Æthlius the son of Jupiter. Apollod. 1, 7.—Paus. 5, 1.——A Grecian girl, who fell in love with a youth called Evathlus. As she was unable to gain the object of her love, she threw herself from a precipice. This tragical story was made into a song by Stesichorus, and was still extant in the age of Athenæus. 14, 6 ——A daughter of Hecaton, mother of Cycnus Hygin fab. 157.

CALYDIUM, a town on the Appian way

CALYDNA, a single island, according to Steph. Byzant, but a group of islands, according to Homer, who seems to place them near Rhodes. Some have thought that the poet means Calymna and the islands around it. D Anville supposes that they are two rocks, which are still found, one before and the other to the right of the port of Tenedos. Homer. Il. 2, 677.—Strab. 10.

CALYDON, a city of Ætolia, where Œneus, the father of Meleager, reigned The Evenus flows through it, and it receives its name from Calydon the son of Æolus During the reign of Œneus, Diana sent a wild boar to ravage the country, on account of the neglect which had been shown to her divinity by the king. All the princes of the age assembled to hunt this boar, which is greatly celebrated by the poets under the name of the chase of Calydon, or the Calydonian boar. Meleager killed the animal with his own hand, and gave the head to Atalanta, of whom he was enamoured. The skin of the boar was preserved, and was still seen in the age of Pausanias, in the temple of Minerva Alea. The tusks were also preserved by the Arcadians in Tegea, and Augustus carried them away to Rome, because the people of Tegea had followed the party of Antony These tusks were shown for a long time at Rome. One of them was about half an ell long; and the other was broken. The names of the princes who assembled on this famous occasion are mentioned by Ovid, Hyginus, Apollonius Rhodius, and Apollodorus, and according to the last, whose opinion is more universally adopted, they were Meleager, Castor, and Pollux, Dryas son of Mars, Idas and Lynceus sons of Aphareus, Admetus son of Pheres, Theseus, Jason son of Æson, Ancæus and Cepheus sons of Lycurgus of Arcadia, Pirithous son of Ixion, Iphiclus son of Amphitryon, Peleus and Telamon sons of Æacus, Atalanta, Eurytion son of Actor, Amphiaraus son of Oicleus, and all the sons of Thestius (Vid Meleager and Atalanta) Apollod. 1, 8.—Paus. 8, 45.—Strab. 8.—Homer Il. 9, 577.—Hygin fab. 174.—Ovid. Met. 8, fab. 4 &c.——A son of Ætolus and Pronoe daughter of Phorbas. He gave his name to a town of Ætolia.

CALYDONIS, a name of Deianira, as living in Calydon. Ovid. Met. 9, fab. 4

CALYDONIUS, a surname of Bacchus

CALYMNA, an island of the Egean, north-west of Cos, celebrated for its honey. It was one of the islands called Calydnæ. Ovid Met 8, 222

CALYNDA, a town of Caria. Ptol. 5, 3

CALYPSO, one of the Oceanides, or one of the daughters of Atlas, according to some, was goddess of silence, and reigned in the island of Ogygia, whose situation and even existence is doubted. When Ulysses was shipwrecked on her coasts, she received him with great hospitality, and offered him immortality if he would remain with her as a husband. The hero refused, and after seven years delay, he was permitted to depart from the island by order of Mercury, the messenger of Jupiter. During his stay, Ulysses had two sons by Calypso, Nausithous and Nausinous. Calypso was inconsolable at the departure of Ulysses, and the grief that she felt, and her mournful situation, are beautifully and pathetically described by Propertius and by Homer. Homer Odyss 1, 52 7, 255, &c.—Hesiod. Theog. 360 et 1016.—Ovid de Pont. 4, ep 18.—Amor. 2, el. 17. De A A 2.—Propert. 1, el 18

CALYPSUS INSULA, or OGYGIA, has been placed by geographers in the Ionian sea, off the Lacinian promontory.

CAMALODUNUM, the first Roman colony established in Britain, supposed to be the modern Maldon.

CAMANTIUM, a town of Asia Minor.

CAMARACUM, a town of Belgæ Gaul, thought by some to be the capital of the Nervii. It is now Cambray.

CAMARINA, a town of Italy.——A lake of Sicily, with a town of the same name, built B.C. 553. It was destroyed by the Syracusans, and rebuilt by a certain Hipponous. In a time of drought, the stench of the lake produced a pestilence; upon which the inhabitants consulted an oracle, whether they should not drain it. The oracle dissuaded them; they notwithstanding drained it, and opened a way for their enemies to come and plunder their city: hence the proverb ne moveas Camarinam, that is, not to remove one evil to bring on a greater. Virg. Æn 3, 701.—Strab. 6.—Herod 7, 154.—Ital. 14, 198.

CAMBAULES, a general of some Gauls who invaded Greece. Paus 10, 19

CAMBERITUM, a town of the Iceni in Britain, almost on the spot where Cambridge now stands.

CAMBES a prince of Lydia, of such voracious appetite that he ate his own wife, and afterwards destroyed himself through grief, in the presence of his subjects. Ælian. V. H. 1, 27

CAMBRE, a place near Puteoli. Juv. 7, 154.

CAMBUNII, mountains of Macedonia, separating Elymiotis from Pelagonia. Liv. 42, 53.

CAMBYSES, a king of Persia, was son of Cyrus the Great. He conquered Egypt, and was so offended at the superstition of the Egyptians, that he killed their god Apis, and plundered their temples. When he wished to take Pelusium, he placed at the head of his army a number of cats and dogs, and the Egyptians refusing, in the attempt to defend themselves, to kill animals which they reverenced as divinities, became an easy prey to the enemy. Cambyses afterwards sent an army of 50,000 men from Thebes in upper Egypt to destroy the temple of Jupiter Ammon, but in their passage through the desert they were overwhelmed with a shower of sand and totally destroyed. He himself proceeded with the remainder of his army towards Ethiopia, but was compelled to return before he had gone a fifth part of the way, having already suffered so much from the want of provisions, that every tenth man was slain to furnish food for the rest. He killed his brother Smerdis from mere suspicion, and flayed alive a partial judge, whose skin, nailed on the judgment seat, and appointed his son to succeed him, telling him to remember where he sat. He died of a small wound he had given himself with his sword as he mounted on horseback; and the Egyptians observed that it was the same place on which he had wounded their god Apis, and that therefore he was visited by the hand of the gods. His death happened 521 years before Christ. He left no issue to succeed him, and his throne was usurped by the Magi, and ascended by Darius soon after. Herod 2, 3, &c.—Justin. 1, 9.—Val. Max 6, 3.——A person of obscure origin, to whom king Astyages gave his daughter Mandane in marriage. The king, who had been terrified by dreams which threatened the loss of his crown by the hand of his daughter's son, had taken this step in hopes that the children of so ignoble a bed would ever remain in obscurity. He was disappointed. Cyrus, Mandane's son dethroned him when grown to manhood. Herod. 1, 46, 107, &c.—Justin 1, 4.——A river of Asia, which flow from mount Caucasus into the Cyrus. Mela, 3, 5.

CAMELÂNI a people of Italy.

CAMELITÆ, a people of Mesopotamia.

CAMERA, a field of Calabria. Ovid. Fast. 3, 582.

CAMERINUM and CAMERTIUM, a town of Umbria, very faithful to Rome. The inhabitants were called Camertes. Liv 9, 36.

CAMERINUS a Latin poet, who wrote a poem on the taking of Troy by Hercules. Ovid. ex Pont. 4, 16, 19.——Some of the family of the Camerini were distinguished for their zeal as citizens, as well as for their abilities as scholars, among whom was Sulpicius, commissioned by the Roman senate to go to Athens, to collect the best of Solon's laws Liv 7, 99.

CAMERIUM, an ancient town of Italy near Rome, taken by Romulus. Plut. in Rom.

CAMERTES, a friend of Turnus killed by Æneas Virg. Æn. 10, 562. Vid. Camerinum.

CAMICUS a town of Sicily, on the banks of a river of the same name, north-west of Agrigentum Strab. 6.—Herod 7, 169 et 170.

CAMILLA, queen of the Volsci, was daughter of Metabus and Casmilla. She was educated in the woods, inured to the labours of hunting, and fed upon the milk of mares. Her father devoted her, when young, to the service of Diana. When she was declared queen, she marched at the head of an army, and accompanied by three youthful females of equal courage and dexterity with herself, to assist Turnus against Æneas, where she signalized herself by the numbers that perished by her hand She was so swift that she could run, or rather fly, over a field of corn, without bending the blades, and make her way over the sea without wetting her feet. She was wounded by Aruns in the breast, as she was tearing the arms of Chloreus, the aged priest of Cybele, and she expired soon after. Virg Æn. 7, 03. 11, 135.

CAMILLI and CAMILLÆ, boys and girls of ingenuous birth who ministered in the sacrifices of the gods, and especially those who attended the flamen dialis, or priest of Jupiter. The word seems borrowed from the ancient Etruscan language, where it was written camillus, and signified minister.

CAMILLUS, L. FURIUS, a celebrated Roman called a second Romulus, from his services to his country. He was banished by the people for distributing, contrary to his vow, the spoils he had obtained at Veii, a city which, after ten years' siege, yielded to his valour and perseverance During his exile, which he passed at Ardea, Rome was besieged by the Gauls under Brennus In the midst of their misfortunes, the besieged Romans remembered with regret the abilities of the ill treated Camillus, and elected him dictator. Ever attached to his native land, Camillus forgot their past ingratitude in their present danger, and he rapidly marched to the relief of his country, which he delivered, after it had been for some time in the possession of the enemy He died in the 80th year of his age, B.C. 365, after he had been five times dictator, once censor, three times interrex, twice a military tribune, and obtained four triumphs. He conquered the Hernici, Volsci, Latini, and Etrurians, and dissuaded his countrymen from their intentions of leaving Rome to reside at Veii. When he besieged Falisci, he rejected, with proper indignation, the offers of a schoolmaster, who had betrayed into his hands the sons of the most worthy citizens. Plut. in vita.—Liv. 5.—Vict 1, 13.—Diod. 14.—Virg. Æn. 6, 825.——A name of Mercury ——An intimate friend of Cicero.

CAMIRO and CLYTIA, two daughters of Pandarus of Crete. When their parents were dead, they were left to the care of Venus, who educated them, and loaded them with deserved favours. Juno also bestowed on them wisdom and beauty, Diana granted grace and elegance of stature, and Minerva taught the domestic arts and employments which become a female education. When they were grown up, the goddess, who had presided over their infancy, entreated Jupiter to grant them kind husbands; but he, to punish upon them the crime of their father, who was accessory to the impiety of Tantalus, ordered the harpies to carry them away and deliver them to the furies. Paus. 10, 30.—Homer, Od. 20, 48.

CAMIRUS and CAMIRA, a town of Rhodes, on the western coast, which received its name from Camirus, a son of Hercules and Iole. The inhabitants were led to the Trojan war by Tlepolemus. Mela, 2, 7.—Strab 14.—Vid 5, 2.—Homer, Il. 2, 168

CAMISSARES, a governor of part of Cilicia, father to Datames. C Nep in Dat.

CAMMA, a woman of Galatia, who avenged the death of her husband Sinetus upon his murderer Sinorix, by making him drink in a cup, of which the liquor was poisoned, on pretence of marrying him, according to the custom of their country, which required that the bridegroom and bride should drink out of the same vessel. She escaped by refusing to drink on pretence of illness. Polyæn. 8.

CAMŒNÆ, a name given to the muses from the sweetness and melody of their songs a canitu amœno, or, according to Varro, from carmen. Varro de L. L 5, 7

CAMPANA LEX, or Julian agrarian law, was enacted by J Cæsar, A U.C 691, to divide some lands among the people.

CAMPANIA, a country of Italy, south-east of Latium, celebrated for its genial climate and fertile soil. Its chief city was Capua It contained the greater part of what is now named Terra di Lavoro. Strab. 5.—Cic. de Leg. Ag 35. —Justin 20, 1. 22, 1.—Plin. 3, 5.—Mela, 2, 4. —Flor 1, 16.—Liv 2, 52

CAMPASPE, or PANCASTE, a beautiful concubine of Alexander, whom the king gave to Apelles, who had fallen in love with her, as he drew her picture in her naked charms. It is said it was from her great beauty that the painter copied the thousand charms with which he represented Venus rising from the sea. Plin 35, 10.

CAMPE, kept the 100 handed monsters confined in Tartarus. Jupiter killed her, because she refused to give them their liberty to come to his assistance against the Titans. Hesiod. Theog. 600.—Apollod 1, 2.

CAMPI DIOMEDIS, a plain situate in Apulia. Mart. 13, ep 93.

CAMPSA, a town near Pallene. Herod 7, 123

CAMPUS MARTIUS, a large plain at Rome, without the walls of the city, where the Roman youths performed their exercises, and learned to wrestle and box, to throw the discus, hurl the javelin, ride a horse, drive a chariot, &c. The public assemblies were often held there, and the officers of state chosen, and audience given to foreign ambassadors. It was adorned with statues, columns, arches and porticoes; and its pleasant situation made it very frequented. It was called Martius, because dedicated to Mars; and there also were celebrated festivals, called Equiria, in honour of the god, annually on the 27th of February and the 14th of March, when exhibitions of horse races and chariots were presented before the people It was sometimes called Tiberinus, from its closeness to the Tiber. It was given to the Roman people by a vestal virgin; but they were deprived of it by Tarquin the Proud, who made it a private field, and sowed corn in it. When Tarquin was driven from Rome, the people recovered it, and threw away into the Tiber the corn which had grown there, seeming it unlawful for any man to eat of the produce of that land. The sheaves which were thrown into the river stopped in a shallow ford, and by the accumulated collection of mud became firm ground, and formed an island, which was called the Holy Island, or the island of Æsculapius. Dead bodies were generally burnt in the Campus Martius. Strab. 5.—Liv. 2, 5. 6, 20. —Ovid. Fast. 2 857.

CAMULOGĪNUS, a Gaul, raised to great honours by Cæsar, for his military abilities. Cæs. Bell G. 7, 57.

CAMŬLUS, a surname of Mars among the Sabines and Etrurians, who represented him with a buckler in one hand and a spear in the other

CANA, a promontory of Æolia, with a small town of the same name adjoining to it. It was opposite the Argennuse Insulæ It is now Cape Colonn Mela, 1, 18 — A town of Galilee, situate between Sepphoris and Nazareth Here Jesus Christ performed his first miracle John 21. 2

CANĂCE, a daughter of Æolus and Enaretta, who became enamoured of her brother Macareus, by whom she had a child, whom she exposed The cries of the child discovered the mother's incest; and Eolus sent his daughter a sword, and obliged her to kill herself Macareus fled, and became a priest of Apollo at Delphi. Some say that Canace was ravished by Neptune, by whom she had many children, among whom were Epopeus Triops, and Alous Apollod 1.—Hygin. fab 242 et 242.—Ovid Heroid 11 Trist 2, 384.

CANĀCHE one of Actæon's dogs. The word expresses the noise of barking Ovid. Met. 3, 217 —Hygin. fab 181.

CANĀCHUS, a statuary of Sicyon, the pupil of Polycletus of Argos Among the works of his chisel, an Apollo for Thebes in Bœotia, and another for Miletus in Ionia, are mentioned with commendation. Plin. 34, 8.—Paus 6, 9.

CANÆ a city of Locris——of Æolia.

CANARĬA, the most important of the group of islands called by the ancients Fortunatæ Insulæ, and now the Canary Isles Some derive the name Canaria, from Canes, a dog, on account of the number of large dogs which were found in the island; while others deduce it from the Canaanites or Phœnicians, who are said to have often sailed from the continent to Carne, supposed to be a contraction of Canaria (Isl Fortunatæ Insulæ) Plin. 5, 1. 6, 32.

CANĀTHUS, a fountain of Nauplia where Juno yearly washed herself to recover her infant purity. Paus 2, 38.

CANDACE, a queen of Æthiopia in the age of Augustus as prudent and meritorious that her successors always bore her name. She was blind of one eye Plin 6 29.—Strab. 17.

CANDĀVIA a district of Macedonia mentioned by Cæsar and also by Seneca It was bounded on the east by the Candavian mountains, supposed to be the Cambarii Montes of Livy, and the Canalovii Montes of Ptolemy.

CANDAULES, or MYRSĬLUS, son of Myrsus, was the last of the Heraclidæ who sat on the throne of Lydia. His great imprudence proved his ruin, not satisfied himself to enjoy the company of his wife, he boasted of her incomparable beauties to his favourite minister Gyges, and even introduced him secretly into his chamber, that he might view her naked charms. The queen discovered the weakness of her husband, and she was so incensed that she commanded Gyges either to prepare for death, or to destroy his master, and succeed to his bed and throne. Candaules was accordingly murdered, 718 years before the Christian era, and after this murder, Gyges married the queen and ascended the throne. Justin. 1, 7.—Herod. 1, 7, &c.—Plut. Symp.

CANDĒI, a people of Arabia, who fed on serpents

CANDĬOPE, a daughter of Œnopion, ravished by her brother.

CANENS, a nymph called also Venilia, daughter of Janus, and wife to Picus king of the Laurentes. When Circe had changed her husband into a bird, she lamented him so much, that she pined away, and was changed into a voice. She was reckoned as a deity by the inhabitants Ovid. Met. 14 fab 9.

CANEPHŌRIA, festivals at Athens in honour of Bacchus, or according to others, of Diana, in which all marriageable women offered small baskets to the deity, and received the name of Canephoræ, whence statues representing women in that attitude were called by the same appellation Cic in Verr. 4

CANĒTHUM, a place of Eubœa.——A mountain in Bœotia

CANICULĀRES DIES, a certain number of days in the summer, preceding and ensuing the heliacal rising of Canicula, or the dogstar. The Egyptians supposed that this star rising with the sun and joining its influence to the fire of that luminary, was the occasion of the extraordinary heat which usually prevailed in that season, and accordingly they gave the name of dog days to about thirty or forty days of the hottest part of summer The Greeks held the same opinion The Romans sacrificed a brown dog annually to Canicula, at its rising, to appease its rage. Manilius.

CANĪDIA, a certain woman of Neapolis, against whom Horace inveighed as a sorceress. Horat. Epod.

CANĪDIUS, a tribune, who proposed a law to empower Pompey to go only with two lictors, to reconcile Ptolemy and the Alexandrians. Plut. in Pomp.

CANINEFĀTES, a people of Germania Prima, of common origin with the Batavi, and inhabiting the western part of the Insula Batavorum. Tacit Hist. 4, 15

C. CANĪNIUS REBĬLUS, a consul with J Cæsar, after the death of Trebonius. He was consul only for seven hours, because his predecessor died the last day of the year, and he was chosen only for the remaining part of the day; whence Cicero observed, that Rome was greatly indebted to him for his vigilance, as he had not slept during the whole time of his consulship Cic ad Fam. Ep 7, 33.—Plut in Cæs.—Plin. 7, 53 —— Lucius, a lieutenant of Cæsar's army in Gaul. Cæs. Bell. G. 7, 83.——Rufus, a friend of Pliny the younger. Plin 1. ep. 3.——Gallus, an intimate friend of Cicero.

CANĪSTIUS, a Lacedæmonian courier, who ran 1200 stadia in one day. Plin. 7 20.

CANĪTIS, a poet of Gades contemporary with Martial. He was so naturally merry that he always laughed. Mart. 1, ep 62.——A Roman knight who went to Sicily for his amusement, where he bought of Pytheas gardens well stocked with fish, which disappeared on the morrow. Cic. de Offic. 3, 14.

CANNÆ, a small village of Apulia near the Aufidus, where Hannibal conquered the Roman consuls, P. Æmylius and Terentius Varro, and slaughtered 30,000 Romans, on the 21st of May, B C. 216. The spot where this famous battle was fought is still known by the name of Il Campo di Sangue, the field of blood. Liv 22, 44, &c. —Flor. 2. 6 3 3.—Plut. in Annib. Plin. 15, 18.

CANOPICUM OSTIUM, one of the mouths of the Nile, twelve miles from Alexandria. Pous. 5 21.

CANOPUS, a city of Egypt, twelve miles from Alexandria, celebrated for the temple of Serapis. It was founded by the Spartans, and therefore called Amyclæa, and it received its name from Canopus, the pilot of the vessel of Menelaus, who was buried in this place. The inhabitants were so dissolute in their manners, that Juvenal used the word Canopus as most strongly expressive of effeminacy and debauchery. Virgil bestows upon it the epithet of Pellæus, because Alexander, who was born at Pella, built Alexandria in the neighbourhood The site of Canopus is occupied by the modern Aboukir, near which lord Nelson obtained his glorious victory over the French fleet, Aug. 1, 1798. Ital. 14, 433.—Mela, 1, 9. 2, 7.—Strab. 17.—Juv 6, 84. 15, 46. —Quintil. 1, 5.—Tacit Ann. 2, 60.—Stat. Sylv. 3, 2, 3.—Senera ep 51.—Plin. 5, 31.—Virg. G. 4, 287 —The pilot of the ship of Menelaus, who died in his youth on the coast of Egypt, by the bite of a serpent, and was honoured there with a monument by his master, on the spot where afterwards the town of the same name was built. Mela, 2. 7.

CANTABRA, a river falling into the Indus. Plin. 6, 20.

CANTABRI, a ferocious and warlike people of Spain, who held out against the Roman power for many years They inhabited Biscay and part of Asturias Ptol. 2, 6.—Horat. 2. od. 6 et 11. —Strab 2 et 3.—Cæs. B. G 3. Civ 1.—Mela, 3, 1 et 2.—Plin. 25, 8.—Ital 3, 346

CANTABRIÆ LACUS, a lake in Spain, where a thunderbolt fell, and in which twelve axes were found Suet. in Galb. 9

CANTHARUS, a famous sculptor of Sicyon, son of Alexis, and pupil to Eutycides. Some of his statues were preserved at Olympia, but Pliny speaks of them with great indifference. Plin. 34, 8.—Pans 6, 17.——A comic poet of Athens, whose compositions are lost, though the names of some of his plays are preserved; the Ants, Medea, Tereus, the Nightingale, the Symmachia, &c. Suidas.——Another Athenian, whose artifice and great dishonesty gave rise to the proverb, Cantharo astutior. Erasm. Adag.

CANTHUS, a son of Abas, one of the Argonauts.

CANTIUM, a country in the south-eastern extremity of Britain, now called Kent. Cæs. Bell. G. 5, 13 et 14.

CANULEIA, one of the four first vestals chosen by Numa. Plut.——A law. Vid. Canuleius

C. CANULEIUS, a tribune of the people of Rome, A U.C. 310, who made a law to render it constitutional for the patricians and plebeians to intermarry. It ordained also, that one of the consuls should be yearly chosen from the plebeians. Liv. 4, 3, &c —Flor. 1, 17.

CANULIA, a Roman virgin, who became pregnant by her brother, and killed herself by order of her father. Plut. in Parall.

CANUSIUM, now Canosa, a town of Apulia, whither the remains of the Roman army fled after their defeat at Cannæ. It was built by Diomedes, and its inhabitants have been called Bilingues, because they retained the language of the r founder, and likewise adopted that of their neighbours. Horace complained of the grittiness of their bread. The wools of the place, as well as the dark red coloured cloths manufactured with them, were in high estimation, so that Canusina vestis became expressive of excellence. Strab. 6.—Liv. 9, 20. 22, 36.—Cic. Or. B. 1.—Ptol. 3, 1.—Sueton. Ner. 30.—Martial. 9, ep. 23, 14, ep. 127.—Horat 1, Sat. 5, 93. Sat. 10, 30.—Mela, 2, 4.—Plin 8, 11.

CANUSIUS, a Greek historian under Ptolemy Auletes Plut.

CANUTIUS TIBERINUS, a tribune of the people, who, like Cicero, furiously attacked Antony, when declared an enemy to the state. His satire cost him his life. Patercul 2, 64.——A Roman orator. Plut in Brut.——An eloquent orator. Cic. Brut. 56

CAPANEUS, a noble Argive, son of Hipponous and Astinome, and husband to Evadne, daughter of Iphiclus. Euripides agrees with the other poets in praising his mili ary valour, but instead of painting him with Æschylus and Statius as an odious tyrant, and an arrogant and impious blasphemer, he represents him as mild in his manners, faithful in his friendship true to his engagements, and the enemy only of pride and perfidy. The bad character, however, has been considered as real by all antiquity, and Capaneus is described as painting on his shield the naked figure of a man, with the words, I will burn Thebes, in golden letters, and declaring, still more impiously, that he would take and destroy the besieged town even in spite of Jupiter. Such daring guilt offended the god, who confederated Jupiter to punish his arrogance, and the offender was immediately struck dead with a thunderbolt. His body was burnt separately from the others, when Theseus compelled the Thebans to grant funeral honours to the slaughtered Argives, and his wife threw herself on the burning pile to mingle her ashes with his. It is said that Æsculapius restored him to life. Ovid. Met 9, 404. Trist. 4, el. 3. 5, et 6.—Homer. Il. 5.—Apollod. 3.—Propert. 1, el. 15.—Paus. 10, 10. —Stat. Theb. 3, &c. Hygin. fab. 68 et 70.—Eurip. Phæn. et Suppl.—Æsch. sept ante Theb

CAPELLA, an elegiac poet in the age of J. Cæsar. Ovid. de Pont. 4, el. 16, 30.——Martianus Minius Felix, a Carthaginian, A.D. 490, who wrote a poem on the marriage of Mercury and Philology, and in praise of the liberal arts. Grotius, when only fourteen, published an edition of this poem, with great judgment and accuracy. The best edition is that of Gœs, 8vo. Norimb, 1794.——A gladiator. Juv. 6, 155.

CAPENA, a gate of Rome, so called because the road through it led to a small town of the same name on the western banks of the Tiber, east of Veii. The Porta Capena was also called Appia, as the Appian road began there, and Mafida, because it passed under one of the aqueducts which supplied Rome with water. Virg. Æn. 7, 697.—Mortial. 1, ep. 47.—Juv. 3, 11.—Ovid. Fast. 5, 192.

CAPERNAS, a small river of Italy. Stat. Theb. 13, 65.

CAPESSI, a people of Etruria, in whose territory Feronia had a grove and a temple. Virg. Æn. 7, 697.—Liv. 5, 8. 22, 1. 27, 4.

CAFER, a river of Asia Minor.

CAPERNAUM, a city of Galilee, situate on the banks of the sea of Tiberias, in the borders of Zebulun and Naphthali. Near it were a mountain and spring of the same name. It was chosen by our Saviour as his dwelling place, and in its vicinity he delivered the sermon on the mount. Nothing of it now remains

CAPETUS, a king of Alba, who reigned twenty-six years. Dionys.——A suitor of Hippodamia Paus. 6 21

CAPHAREUM, a lofty mountain and promontory in the south eastern part of Eubœa, where Nauplius king of the country, to revenge the death of his son Palamedes, slain by Ulysses set a burning torch in the darkness of night, which caused the Greeks to be shipwrecked on the coast. In the infancy of navigation, the doubling of this promontory was reckoned very dangerous, on account of the rocks and whirlpools on the coast. It is now called Capo d'Oro. Virg. Æn. 11, 260.—Ovid Met. 14, 481.—Propert 4, el. 1, 115

CAPHO, a soldier mentioned by Cic Ph. 10, 10. 11, 5.——A centurion in Antony's army. Id. 8, 8.

CAPHYÆ, a town of Arcadia. Paus. 8, 23

CAPIO, a Roman, famous for his friendship with Cato. Plut de Patr. Am

CAPITO, the uncle of Paterculus who joined Agrippa against Cassius Patercul. 2, 69.——Fonteius, a man of great abilities and elegant manners, sent by Antony to settle his disputes with Augustus Horat Sat. 1, 5, 34 ——A man accused of extort on in Cilicia, and severely punished by the senate. Jun. 8, 93 ——An epic poet of Alexandria, who wrote on love.——An historian of Lycia, who wrote an account of Isauria in eight books ——A poet, who wrote on illustrious men.——The family of the Ateii was called by this name CAPITOLINI LUDI games yearly celebrated at Rome in honour of Jupiter, who preserved the capitol from the Gauls.

CAPITOLINUS, a surname of Jupiter, from his temple on mount Capitolinus, which was considered by the Romans as the centre of the destinies of their empire ——A surname of M. Manlius who, for his ambition, was thrown down from the Tarpeian rock which he had so nobly defended.——A mountain at Rome, called also Mons Tarpeius, and Mons Saturni The Capitol was built upon it ——A man of lascivious morals, consul with Marcellus. Plut in Marcell.——Julius, an author in Diocletian's reign, who wrote an account of the life of Verus, Antoninus Pius, the Gordians, &c. most of which are lost.

CAPITOLIUM, a celebrated temple and citadel at Rome on the Tarpeian rock, the plan of which was made by Tarquinius Priscus It was begun by Servius Tullius, finished by Tarquinius Superbus, and consecrated by the consul M. Horatius Pulvillus, after the expulsion of the kings from Rome. It occupied a space of about eight plethra, or eight hundred feet, in circumference. Its length and breadth were nearly equal, being about 200 feet. It consisted of three cells, which were sacred to Jupiter, Juno, and Minerva. The ascent to it from the ground was by a hundred steps. The magnificence and richness of this building are almost incredible. All the consuls successively made donations to the capitol, and Augustus bestowed upon it at one time 2,000 pounds weight of gold. The gilding of the roof, which was undertaken after the destruction of Carthage, cost 21,000 talents. The thresholds were of brass, covered with plates of gold The pillars seem only to have been of stuccoed brick, but they were crowded with military trophies, among the most conspicuous of which may be numbered the silver shield of Asdrubal, weighing 138 pounds, and a statue of the same general suspended over the doors. This edifice was consumed by fire in the time of Sylla, who afterwards rebuilt it, but died before the dedication, which was performed by Q. Catullus. It was again destroyed in the troubles under Vitellius; and Vespasian, who endeavoured to repair it, saw it again in ruins at his death. Domitian raised it again, for the last time, and made it more grand and magnificent than any of his predecessors, and spent 12 000 talents in gilding it. When they first dug for the foundations, they found a man's head called Tolius, sound and entire in the ground and from thence drew an omen of the future greatness of the Roman empire. The hill was from that circumstance called Capitolium, a capite Toli. The consuls and magistrates offered sacrifices there, when they first entered upon their offices, and the procession in triumphs was always conducted to the capitol. Virg Æn. 6, 136. 8, 347.—Tacit. Hist. 3, 72.—Plut. in Popli —Liv. 1, 10, &c —Plin. 33, &c —Sueton in Aug 30.

CAPPADOCIA, a country of Asia Minor, bounded on the west by Phrygia, on the north by Galatia and Pontus, on the east by Armenia, and on the south by Cilicia Its eastern part being inhabited by Armenians, was called Armenia Minor. It receives its name from the river Cappadox, which separates it from Galatia, or, according to Herodian, from Cappadocus, the founder of this kingdom. The inhabitants, from their pale complexions, were called Leuco Syrians by the Greeks. They were of a dull and submissive disposition, and addicted to every vice, according to the ancients, who wrote this virulent epigram against them:

Vipera Cappadocem nocitura momordit, at illa
Gustato perit sanguine Cappadocis.

Their powers in eloquence were also so contemptible that another epigram in Greek was pointed against them, and declared that a flying tortoise or a white crow were more common than an orator of Cappadocia. Their ideas of native independence were equally gross; when offered their freedom by the Romans, they refused it, and begged of them a king, and they received Ariobarzanes. It was some time after governed by a Roman proconsul. Though the ancients have ridiculed this country for the unfruitfulness of its soil, and the manners of its inhabitants, yet it can boast of the birth of the geographer Strabo, among other illustrious characters. The horses of this country were in general esteem, and with these they paid their tributes to the king of Persia, while under his power, for want of money. Most of the slaves employed by the Romans were of Cappadocian origin, and as the country was occasionally called Syria, the word Syrus is frequently applied to slaves. The kings of Cappadocia mostly bore the name of Ariarathes. Horat 1, ep. 6. 39 et 72.—Plin. 6, 3. 8, 44.—Curt. 3 et 4.—Strab. 11 et 16.—Herod. 1, 73 & 49. 7, 72.—Nepos, 14, 1.—Justin. 2, 4. 6, 3. 37 3.—Paterc. 2, 39.—Mela, 1, 2. 3, 8.

CAPPADOX, a river of Cappadocia, bounding it on the side of Galatia, and falling into the Halys. Now, the Kouak. Plin. 6, 3.

CAPRARIA, a mountainous island in the Mediterranean, on the coast of Spain, about twelve miles south of Balearis Major, or Majorca, famous for its goats. It is now called Cabrera. Plin 3, 6.——Also one of the Insulæ Fortunatæ, or Canary Isles, now Gomera. Plin. 6, 32

CAPREÆ, now Capri, an island on the coast of Campania, abounding in quails, and famous for the residence and debaucheries of the emperor Tiberius, during the last seven years of his life. The island, in which nowaseveral medals are flung up expressive of the licentious morals of the emperor, is about forty miles in circumference, surrounded by steep rocks, and accessible only in one place. The watch-tower, or pharos, erected there, was destroyed by an earthquake a few days before the death of Tiberius. Ovid. Met. 15 709.—Suet in Tib.—Stat. Sylv 3, 5.

CAPRÆ PALUS, a place near Rome, where Romulus disappeared. Plut in Rom.—Ovid. Fast 2, 491.

CAPRICORNUS, a sign of the zodiac, in which appear 28 stars in the form of a goat, supposed by the ancients to be the goat Amalthæa which fed Jupiter with her milk. Some maintain that it is Pan, who changed himself into a goat when frightened at the approach of Typhon The ancients accounted Capricorn the tenth sign, and it made the winter solstice with regard to our hemisphere but the stars having advanced a whole sign towards the east, Capricorn is now rather the eleventh sign; and it is at the sun's entry into Sagittarius, that the solstice happens, though the ancient manner of speaking is still retained. Manil 2 et 4.—Horat. 2, od. 17, 19.—Hygin fab. 196. P. A. 2, 28.

CAPRIFICIALIA, a day sacred to Vulcan, on which the Athenians offered him money. Plin 11, 15

CAPRIMA, a town of Caria.

CAPRIPEDES, a surname of Pan, the Fauni and the Satyrs, from their having goats feet.

CAPRIUS, a great informer in Horace's age. Horat. 1, Sat 4, 66.

CAPROTINA, a festival celebrated at Rome in July in honour of Juno, at which women only officiated. (Vid Philotis.) Varro de L L 5.

CAPRUS, a harbour near mount Athos.

CAPSA, a town of Libya, in the district Byzacium, north of the Palus Tritonis, surrounded by vast deserts. Here Jugurtha deposited his treasures. It was taken and burnt by Marius but, being afterwards rebuilt, it rose to the rank of a colony under the Roman power. It is now Gafsa. Flor. 3, 1.—Sall. Bell. Jug 89.

CAPSAGE, a town of Syria. Curt 10.

CAPUA, the chief city of Campania in Italy, supposed to have been founded by Capys, the father, or rather the companion of Anchises. This city was very opulent and at one time so opulent that it even rivalled Rome, and was called altera Roma. The soldiers of Annibal, after the battle of Cannæ, were enervated by the pleasures and luxuries which powerfully prevailed in this voluptuous city and under a soft climate, and thence Capua was truly said to have been a Cannæ to Annibal. The revolt of Capua to the Carthaginians proved its ruin. When taken by the consuls Fulvius and Claudius, it was punished for its perfidy; and, after a gradual decay, it exhibits now a mournful monument of devastation. There is now a village near its site, called Santa Maria. Virg. Æn. 10, 145.—Liv. 4, 37. 7, 29. 8, 1. 22 et 23, 1. 24, 8.—C. Nepos in Ann. &c—Paterc 1, 7. 2, 44.—Flor. 1, 16.—Cic. in Philip. 12, 3.—Plut. in Ann.

CAPYS, a Trojan who came with Æneas into Italy, and founded Capua. He was one of those who, against the advice of Thymœtes, wished to destroy the wooden horse, which proved the destruction of Troy. Virg Æn 10, 145.——A son of Assaracus by a daughter of the Simois. He was father of Anchises by Themis. Ovid. Fast. 4, 33.—Homer Il. 20, 239.

CAPYS SYLVIUS, a king of Alba, who reigned twenty-eight years. Dionys. Hal. 1, 15.—Virg. Æn. 6, 765.

CAR, a son of Phoroneus, king of Megara, in whose reign first his subjects erected temples to Ceres. His tomb was seen in the age of the Antonines, on the road which leads from Megara to Corinth. Paus. 1, 39 et 40.——A son of Manes, who married Callithoe, daughter of the Mæander. Caria received its name from him. Herod. 1, 171.

CARACALLA. Vid Antoninus.

CARACATES, a people of Germania Prima, in Belgic Gaul. Their capital was Moguntiacum, now Maynz.

CARACTACUS, a king of the Britons, conquered by Ostorius Scapula, A D. 47, and sent in chains to Rome, where his manly and independent conduct gained the friendship and regard of the emperor Claudius. Tacit. Ann. 12, 33 et 37.

CARÆ, certain places between Susa and the Tigris, where Alexander pitched his camp

CARÆUS, a surname of Jupiter in Bœotia,——in Caria

CARALIS (or es, ium), the chief city of Sardinia, now Cagliari. Paus. 10, 17.

CARAMBIS, now Keempi, a promontory of Paphlagonia Mela, 1, 19.

CARANUS, one of the Heraclidæ, the first who laid the foundation of the Macedonian empire, B.C. 814. He took Edessa, and reigned twenty-eight years, which he spent in establishing and strengthening the government of his newly-founded kingdom. He was succeeded by Perdiccas. Justin 7, 1.—Paterc. 1, 6.—Liv. 45, 9.——A general of Alexander. Curt. 7.——An harbour of Phœnicia.

CARAUSIUS, a tyrant of Britain for seven years, A D. 293.

CARBO, a Roman orator, who killed himself because he could not curb the licentious manners of his countrymen. Cic. in Brut——Cneus, a son of the orator Carbo, who embraced the party of Marius, and after the death of Cinna succeeded to the government. He was killed in Spain in his third consulship, by order of Pompey. Val. Max 9, 13.——An orator, son of Carbo the orator, killed by the army when desirous of re establishing the ancient military discipline. Cic. in Brut.

CARCHEDON, the Greek name of Carthage.

CARCINUS, a Greek tragic poet of Athens, son of Theodectes, or, according to others, of Xenocles, in the age of Philip of Macedon. None of his plays remain, though Athenæus quotes verses from his Achilles, and his Semele. He is said to have written 160 pieces, of which only one was rewarded with the prize.——Another poet of Agrigentum, distinguished as a tragic, and, according to others, as a comic writer in the age of Æschylus, with whom he frequented the court of Dionysius of Syracuse.——Another of Naupactus, said to be the inventor of those poetical compositions called Naupactian among the Greeks.——A man of Rhegium, who exposed his son Agathocles, on account of some unseemly mon dreams during his wife's pregnancy. Aga thocles was preserved. Diod 19.——An Athenian general, who laid waste Peloponnesus in the time of Pericles. Id. 12.

CARCINUS, a constellation, the same as the Cancer. Lucan 9, 536.

CARDACES, a people of Asia Minor. Strab 15.

CARDIA, a town in the Thracian Chersonesus, at the top of the Sinus Melanis. It was destroyed by Lysimachus when he founded Lysimachia, a little south of it. It derived its name from the word καρδία cor, owing to the shape of the ground on which it stood resembling that of a heart. It was also called Hexamilitus, corrupted now into Exemil, from the width of the isthmus near which it stood. Plin. 4, 11.

CARDUCHI, a warlike people in the northern part of Assyria, now the Kourds, Died. 14.

CARES, a nation which inhabited Caria, and thought themselves the original possessors of that country. They became so powerful that their country was not sufficiently extensive to contain them all, upon which they seized the neighbouring islands of the Ægean sea. These islands were conquered by Minos king of Crete. Nileus son of Codrus invaded their country, and slaughtered many of the inhabitants. In this calamity, the Carians, surrounded on every side by enemies, fortified themselves in the mountainous parts of the country, and, soon after, made themselves terrible by sea They were anciently called Leleges. Herod. 1, 146 et 171. —Paus. 1, 10.—Strab. 13.—Curt. 6, 3.—Justin 13, 4.—Virg. Æn. 8, 725

CARESA, an island of the Ægean sea, opposite Attica.

CARESSUS, a river of Troas.

CARFINIA, an immodest woman, mentioned Juv. 2, 69.

CARIA, now Aidonelli, a country of Asia Minor bounded on the north by Ionia and Lydia, on the west by the Ægean sea, on the south by the Mediterranean sea, and on the east by Pisygia and Lycia. It was for some time called Phœnicia, because the Phœnicians had considerable establishments there; and afterwards it received the name of Caria from Car, one of its kings, who first practised augury. The chief towns were called Halicarnassus, where Jupiter was the chief deity, Heraclea, Antioch, Myndus Laodicea, Alabanda, &c. As Caria probably abounded in figs, a particular sort has been called Carica, and the words, in Care periculum, have been proverbially used to signify a thing of no great value when exposed to any danger. (Vid Cares.) Plin. 5, 29. 13, 5.—Ptol 5, 3.—Mela, 1, 16. 2, 7.—Oic. Flacc. 27. Dav. 1, 42. 2, 40. —A pest of Thrace. Mela, 2, 2.

CARIAS, a town of Peloponnesus.——A general. Vid. Laches.

CARIATÆ, a town of Bactriana, where the philosopher Callisthenes was imprisoned by Alexander, for refusing to pay him divine honours, and afterwards shamefully put to death.

CARILLA, a town of the Pisani, destroyed by Annibal, for its great attachment to Rome. Sil. Ital. 8.

CARINA, a virgin of Caria, &c. Polyæn. 8.

CARINÆ, a street of Rome, where Cicero, Pompey, and others of the principal Romans dwelt. It was curved at the top in the form of a ship's keel, whence the name. According to others, the roofs resembled the keels of ships reversed. Virg Æn 8, 361.—Horat. 1, ep. 7.

CARINE, a town near the Caicus in Asia Minor. Herod 7, 42.

CARINUS, M. AURELIUS, a Roman who attempted to succeed his father Carus as emperor. He was infamous for his voluptuousness and cruelty. Diocletian, elected emperor by the Roman army assembled at Chalcedon, encountered him in the vicinity of the Danube. On the first onset Carinus obtained the advantage, but one of his tribunes, whose wife he had seduced, seized the moment of revenge, by dispatching him with a single blow.

CARISIACUM, a town of ancient Gaul, now Cressy.

CARISSANUM, a place of Italy, near which Milo was killed. Plin. 2, 56.

CARMANA, the castle of Carmania, south-east of Persepolis. P. Now Kerman.

CARMANIA, a country of Asia, bounded by Persia on the west, Aria on the north, Gedrosia on the east, and the Erythræan sea on the south. Its name was derived from the Syriac word Carma, a vine, the country being famous for its grape. It is now called Kerman. Arrian.—Plin 6, 23.

CARMANOR, a Cretan, who purified Apollo of slaughter. Paus. 2, 30.

CARNE, a nymph, daughter of Eubulus and mother of Britomartis by Jupiter. She was one of Diana's attendants. Paus 2, 30.

CARNELUS, a deity of the Syrians, who dwelt near mount Carmel, situate between Syria and Judæa. Neither temples nor statues were raised to his honour, but merely an altar, on which prayers and sacrifices were regularly offered Vespasian was one of those who paid homage to this divinity; and he was informed by the priest called Basilides, that he would one day rise to the sovereignty of a powerful state, a prophecy which his elevation to the imperial purple soon fulfilled. Tacit. Hist. 2, 78.—Suet. Vesp 5.

CARMENTA and CARMENTIS, a prophetess of Arcadia, mother of Evander, with whom she came to Italy, and was received by king Faunus, about 60 years before the Trojan war. Her name was Nicostrata, and she received that of Carmentis from the wildness of her looks when giving oracles, as if carens mentis. She was the oracle of the people of Italy during her life, and after death she received divine honours. She had a temple at Rome, and the Greeks offered her sacrifices under the name of Themis. Ovid. Fast. 1, 467. 6, 530.—Plut. in Romul.—Virg. Æn 8, 339.—Liv. 5, 47.

CARMENTALES, festivals at Rome in honour of Carmenta, celebrated the 11th of January; near the Porta Carmentalis, below the Capitol This goddess was entreated to render the Roman matrons prolific, and their labours easy. Liv. 1, 7.—Ovid Fast. 1, 464.

CARMENTALIS PORTA, one of the gates of Rome in the neighbourhood of the Capitol. It was afterwards called Scelerata, because the Fabii passed through it in going to that fatal expedition where they perished. Virg. Æn. 8, 337.

CARMINDES, a Greek of an uncommon memory. Plin. 7, 24.

CARNA and CARDINEA, a goddess at Rome who presided over fingers, as also over the entrails and secret parts of the human body. She was originally a nymph called Grane, who employed herself in hunting, and deserved by her chastity and the simplicity of her life the surname of Diana, which she obtained among the inhabitants of the country. Janus offered violence to her person, and to make some atonement for the insult, he gave her the power of presiding over the exterior of houses, and of removing all noxious birds from the doors. Brutus erected a temple in her honour on mount Cœlius, and at a feast which was celebrated annually in June, the Romans offered her beans, bacon, and vegetables, to represent the simplicity of their ancestors. Ovid. Fast. 6, 101, &c.

CARNASIUS, a village of Messenia in Peloponnesus. Paus. 4, 33.

CARNEADES, an eminent Greek philosopher, founder of the third or new academy, was a native of Cyrene in Africa, and is supposed to have been born, B. C. 214. He studied first under Diogenes the stoic, but subsequently attended the lectures of Egesinus who explained the doctrines of Arcesilaus, and succeeding his master in the chair of the academy, he restored its reputation by softening the prevailing pyrrhonism, and admitting practical probabilities. The doctrine of Carneades specifically was, that as the senses, the understanding, and the imagination, frequently deceive us, they cannot be infallible judges of truth, or probabilities, which, with respect to the conduct of life, are sufficient guide. He was a strenuous opponent of Chrysippus, and attacked with vigour and acuteness the theology of the stoics. He was an advocate of free-will against their doctrine of fate, and urged just the same difficulties in reconciling divine prescience with the freedom of human actions, as have divided some contending sects of christians. Carneades was as celebrated as orator as a philosopher. His voice was remarkably strong, and his delivery vehement and rapid. One of the most distinguished events of his life was his being joined in an embassy to Rome with Diogenes the stoic, and Critolaus, the peripatetic, in order to gain the mitigation of a fine inflicted under the Roman authority upon the Athenians. This extraordinary embassy was successful, and Carneades so captivated the people by his eloquence, that Cato the censor, fearful of the effect on the Roman youth, persuaded the senate to send the philosophers back to their schools without delay. He died in the ninetieth year of his age, continually complaining of the shortness of life, and lamenting that the same nature which composed the human frame could dissolve it. Cic. ad Attic. 12, ep. 23. De Orat 1, 45 & 155. —Aul. Gell. 17, 12.—Plin. 7, 30. — Val. Max 8, 8.

CARNEIA, a festival observed in most of the Grecian cities, but more particularly at Sparta, where it was first instituted, about 675 B. C. in honour of Apollo surnamed Carneus. It lasted nine days, and was an imitation of the manner of living in camps among the ancients. Pæus. 2, 11. 3, 13.—Athen. 4, 4.

CARNION, a town of Laconia —— A river of Arcadia. Paus. 8, 34.

CARNUS, a prophet of Acarnania, from whom Apollo was called Carneus. Paus. 3, 13.

CARNUTES, a people of Gaul, south-west of the Parisii. Their chief city was Autricum, afterwards called Carnutes, and now Chartres. Cæs. B. G. 6, 4.

CARPATHUS, an extensive chain of mountains in the northern parts of Dacia, called also Alpes Bastarnicæ, now Mount Krapack.

CARPATHUS, an island in the Mediterranean, between Rhodes and Crete now called Scapanto. It has given its name to a part of the neighbouring sea, thence called the Carpathian sea, between Rhodes and Crete. Carpathus was at first inhabited by some Cretan soldiers of Minos. It was twenty miles in circumference, and was sometimes called Tetrapolis, from its four capital cities. Plin. 4, 12.—Herod. 3, 45.—Diod. 5.—Strab. 10.—Virg. G. 4, 387.

CARPIA, an ancient name of Tartessus Plin. 6, 19.

CARPIS, a river of Mysia. Herod.

CARPO, a daughter of Zephyrus, and one of the Seasons. She was loved by Calamus the son of Maander, whom she equally admired. She was drowned in the Maander, and was changed by Jupiter into all sorts of fruit. Paus. 9, 35.

CARPOPHORA, a name of Ceres and Proserpine in Tegea from the influence they possessed over the fertility and productions of the earth. Paus. 8, 53.

CARPOPHORUS, an actor greatly esteemed by Domitian. Mart. al.—Juv. 6, 198.

CARRÆ and CARRHÆ, a town of Mesopotamia, south-east of Edessa. It was here that Crassus, the Roman triumvir, lost his life, in his expedition against the Parthians, who cut off his head, and poured melted gold down his throat, B.C. 53. Its inhabitants were greatly addicted to Sabaism, or the worship of the host of heaven, particularly the moon, under the masculine denomination of Lunus. It is supposed to be the Charran of the Old Testament, whence Abraham departed for the land of Canaan, and is still known as Harran. Lucan, 1, 105.—Plin. 5, 14.

CARRINATES SECUNDUS, a poor but ingenious rhetorician, who came from Athens to Rome, where the boldness of his expressions, especially against tyrannical power, exposed him to Caligula's resentment, who banished him. Juv. 7, 205.

CARSEOLI, a town of the Æqui, at the west of the lake Fucinus. Among the inhabitants, called Carseolani, there was a law to forbid the keeping of a fox alive because a boy had accidentally burnt the standing corn of the country by setting fire to the tail of one of those animals. Ovid. Fast. 4, 683 et seq.

CARTEIA, formerly Carpessus, now Rocadilla, a town of Spain, in the vicinity of Calpe, where Cneius, the son of Pompey, took refuge after the battle of Munda. Sil. Ital. 3, 396.

CARTENA, a town of Mauritania, on the shores of the Mediterranean, now Tenes.

CARTHÆA, a town in the island of Ceos, whence the epithet of Cartheius. Ovid. Met. 7, 368.

CARTHAGINIENSES, the inhabitants of Carthage, a rich and commercial nation. Vid. Carthago

CARTHAGO a celebrated city of Africa, the rival of Rome, and long the capital of the country, and mistress of Spain, Sicily, and Sardinia. The precise time of its foundation is unknown, yet most writers seem to agree that it was first built by Dido, about 869 years before the Christian era, or, according to Patercul. 65, according to Justin 72, and according to Livy 38 years before the foundation of Rome. This city and republic flourished for 737 years, and the time of its greatest glory was under Annibal and Amilcar, whose valour and sagacity directed its forces to equal, and nearly to overturn its proud rival During the first Punic war, it contained no less than 700,000 inhabitants, and exercised its sovereignty over 300 dependent cities of Africa. It maintained three famous wars against Rome, called the Punic wars, (Vid. Punicum Bellum) in the third of which Carthage with more perfidy than justice, was totally destroyed by Scipio the second Africanus, B. C. 147, and only 5000 persons were found within the walls. It was 23 miles in circumference; and when it was set on fire by the Romans, it burned incessantly during seventeen days. After the destruction of Carthage, Utica became powerful, and the Romans thought themselves secure, and as they had no rival to dispute with them in the field, they fell into indolence and inactivity Cæsar planted a small colony on the ruins of Carthage. Augustus sent there 300 men, and Adrian, after the example of his imperial predecessors, rebuilt part of it, which he called Adrianopolis. Carthage was conquered from the Romans by the arms of Genserie, A. D. 439, and it was for more than a century the seat of the Vandal empire in Africa and fell into the hands of the Saracens in the 7th century. The Carthaginians were governed as a republic, and had two persons yearly chosen among them with regal authority. They were very superstitious, and generally offered human victims to their gods, an unnatural custom, which their allies wished them to abolish, but in vain. They bore the character of a faithless and treacherous people, and the proverb Punica fides is well known. Strab. 17.—Liv. Epit. 1 &c.—Mela, 1. &c.—Plin. 4, 5.—Justin. 4, 2.—Liv 4, 20, &c.—Polyæn. 1 et 2.—Plut. in Annib. &c.—Oic. in Agr. 2, 35 Roll. 2, 94.——Nova, a town built in Spain, on the coasts of the Mediterranean, by Asdrubal the Carthaginian general. It was taken by Scipio, when Hanno surrendered himself after a heavy loss. It now bears the name of Carthagena Mela, 1, 7.—Ptol 2 6.—Polyb. 10.—Liv. 26 43, &c.—Sil. 15, 220, &c.——A daughter of Hercules.

CARTHASIS, a Scythian, &c. Curt 7, 7.

CARTHEA a town of Cos. Ovid. Met 7, fab. 9.

CARUS a Roman emperor who succeeded Probus He was a prudent and active general; he conquered the Sarmatians, and continued the Persian war which his predecessor had commenced. He reigned two years, and died on the banks of the Tigris as he was going in an expedition against Persia, A D. 283 He made his two sons, Carinus and Numerianus, Cæsars; and as his many virtues said promised the Romans happiness, he was made a god after death. Eutrop.——One of those who attempted to scale the rock Aornus by order of Alexander. Curt 8, 11

CARVILIUS, a king of Britain, who attacked Cæsar's naval station by order of Cassivelaunus, &c. Cæs Bel. G. 5, 22.——Spurius, a Roman, who made a large image of the breast-plates taken from the Samnites, and placed it in the capitol. Plin 34, 7.——The first Roman who divorced his wife, during the space of about 600 years This was for barrenness, B. C 231. Dionys Hal. 2.—Val. Max 2, 1.

CARYA, a town of Arcadia. Liv. 31, 16.—A city of Laconia. Paus. 3, 10. Here a festival was observed in honour of Diana Caryatis It was then usual for virgins to meet at the celebration, and join in a certain dance, said to have been first instituted by Castor and Pollux. When Greece was invaded by Xerxes, the Lacedæmonians did not appear before the enemy for fear of displeasing the goddess, by not celebrating her festival. At that time the peasants assembled at the usual place, and sang pastorals called Βουκολιασμοι, from Βουκολος, a herdsman. From this circumstance, some suppose that Bucolics originated Stat. Theb 4, 225.

CARYANDA, a town and island on the coast of Caria, now Kasacoun.

CARYÆ, the inhabitants of Carya in Arcadia, who allied themselves with the Persians against the Grecian states. The Greeks, on the successful termination of the war, razed the treacherous city to the ground, put all the males to the sword, reduced the women to slavery, and, in order to perpetuate the memory of the transaction, employed their images in the servile office of supporting public buildings. Hence the Caryatides of ancient architecture. Vitruv 1, 1

CARYSTIUS ANTIGONUS, an historian, &c. B C. 248.

CARYSTUS, a maritime town on the south of Eubœa, famous for the quarries of marble found in mount Ocha, at the foot of which it was situated. It is now Castel Rosso. Strab. 10.—Plin. 4, 12 36 6.—Liv 31, 45. 32, 16.—Tibull 3 el 5, 15.—Ovid Fast 4, 282.—Lucan. 5, 232 – Stat. 2, 93.—Martial 9 ep 76.

CARYUM a place of Laconia, where Aristomenes preserved some virgins, &c. Paus 4 16.

CASCA SERVILIUS, one of Cæsar's assassins, who gave him the first blow. Plut. in Cæs.

CASCELLIUS AULUS, a lawyer of great merit in the Augustan age. Horat. Art. Poet. 371

CASILINUM, a town of Campania. When it was besieged by Hannibal, a mouse sold for 200 denarii, though Strabo says this price was given for a medimnus of corn, and that the avaricious seller perished, and the purchaser survived. The place was defended by 540 or 570 natives of Præneste, who, when half their number had perished either by war or famine, surrendered to the conqueror. Modern Capua is generally supposed to occupy its site. Val. Max. 7, 6.—Liv. 23, 19.—Strab 5.—Cic. de Sen. 2, 57.—Plin 3, 5.

CASINA and CASINUM, a town of Campania. Sil. 4, 227.—Liv. 9, 28. 23, 13.

CASIUS, a mountain near the Euphrates —— Another between Pelusium and Rhinocorura, projecting into the sea, and resembling at a distance large heaps of sand Pompey was slain near it, and there afterwards his tomb was raised by Adrian. Jupiter, surnamed Casius had a temple there. Strab. 16.—Plin. 5, 12.—Lucan. 8, 858 ——Another in Syria, below Antiochia, from whose summit the sun might be seen rising according to Pliny, at the fourth watch of the night, when the surrounding country was enveloped in darkness. Plin. 5, 22 6, 12.—Strab 16.—Mela, 1, 10. 2, 8.—Lucan. 8, 257.

CASMENÆ, a town built by the Syracusans in Sicily. Thucyd 6, 5.

CASMILLA, the mother of Camilla. Virg. Æn. 11, 543.

CASPERIA, wife of Rhœtus king of the Marrubii, committed adultery with her son-in-law. Virg. Æn. 10. 388 ——A town of the Sabines, now Aspra Virg Æn 7, 714.

CASPERCLA, a town of the Sabines. Sil. 8, 416

CASPIÆ PORTÆ, or PYLÆ, the Caspian pass, a name given by ancient writers to different passes at mount Caucasus. It was properly applied to a defile to the east of Rhagæ in Media. Dod. 1.—Plin. 5, 27. 6, 13.

CASPIANA, a country of Armenia, at the south-west of the Caspian sea.

CASPII, a Scythian nation near the Caspian sea. Such as had lived beyond their 70th year were starved to death. Their dogs were remarkable for their fierceness. Herod. 3, 92, &c. 7, 67, &c.—C. Nep 14, 8.—Curt. 4, 12.—Mela, 3, 5 —Virg Æn. 6, 798.

CASPIUM MARE, or HYRCANUM, a large sea in the form of a lake, which has no communication with other seas, and lies between the Caspian and Hyrcanian mountains, at the north of Parthia, receiving in its capacious bed the tribute of several large rivers. Ancient authors assure us, that it produced enormous serpents and fishes, different in colour and species from those of all other waters. The south-eastern part was termed Mare Hyrcanum, a name which the Greeks extended to the whole sea. The Tartars call it Akdengis, or the White Sea; the Georgians call it the Kurtschelhan Sea; and by the Persians it is styled Gursen, from the old Persian capital Gurgan, which stood in its vicinity. Its greatest length is 640 miles, and its average breadth 260; and though it receives the waters of several considerable rivers, among which is the Rha or Volga, it has no visible outlet. This sea has been observed, notwithstanding, to remain equally full, the true reason of which is perhaps to be sought in the porous nature of its bottom. There are no tides in it, and on account of its numerous shoals, it is navigable to vessels drawing only nine or ten feet water. It has strong currents, and, like inland seas, is liable to violent storms. Some navigators examined it in 1709, by order of the Czar Peter; and after the labour of three years, a map of its extent was published. Its waters are described as brackish, and near the shores not impregnated with salt so much as the wide ocean. Herod 1, 202. &c.—Curt. 3, 2. 6, 4 7, 3.—Strab. 11.—Mela, 1, 2. 3, 5 et 6.—Plin. 6, 13 —Dionys. Perieg 50.

CASPIUS MONS, a branch of mount Taurus, between Media and Armenia, at the east of the Euphrates. The Caspian Portæ passes through this mountain.

CASSANDANE, the mother of Cambyses by Cyrus. Herod 3, 1. 3, 2

CASSANDER, son of Antipater, made himself master of Macedonia after his father's death, where he reigned for eighteen years. He married Thessalonica, the sister of Alexander, to strengthen himself on his throne. Olympias, the mother of Alexander, wished to keep the kingdom of Macedonia for Alexander's young children; and therefore she destroyed the relations of Cassander, who besieged her in the town of Pydna, and put her to death. Roxane, with her son Alexander, and Barsena, the mother of Hercules, both wives of Alexander, shared the fate of Olympias with their children. Antigonus, who had been for some time upon friendly terms with Cassander, declared war against him; and Cassander, to make himself equal with his adversary, made a league with Lysimachus and Seleucus, and obtained a memorable victory at Ipsus, B.C. 301. He died three years after this victory, of a dropsy His son Antipater killed his mother; and for this unnatural murder, he was put to death by his brother Alexander, who, to strengthen himself, invited Demetrius, the son of Antigonus, from Asia. Demetrius took advantage of the invitation, and put to death Alexander, and ascended the throne of Macedonia. Paus 1, 25.—Diod 19.—Justin. 12, 13, &c

CASSANDRA, daughter of Priam and Hecuba, was passionately loved by Apollo, who promised to grant her whatever she might require, if she would gratify his passion. She asked the power of knowing futurity; and as soon as she had received it, she refused to perform her promise, and slighted Apollo. The god, in his disappointment, untied her lips with his tongue, and by this action effected that no credit or reliance should ever be put upon her predictions, however true or faithful they might be Some maintain that she received the gift of prophecy with her brother Helenus, by being placed when young one night in the temple of Apollo, where serpents were found wreathed round their bodies, and licking their ears, which circumstance gave them the knowledge of futurity. She was looked upon by the Trojans as insane, and she was even confined, and her predictions were disregarded Her beauty, however, procured her many admirers; and among them Coroebus son of Mygdon, and Othryneus, are mentioned as urging their suit by the powerful assistance they gave to Priam during the Trojan war. When Troy was taken she fled for shelter to the temple of Minerva, where Ajax found her, and offered her violence, with the greatest cruelty, at the foot of Minerva's statue. In the division of the spoils of Troy, Agamemnon, who was enamoured of her, took her as his wife, and returned with her to Greece. She repeatedly foretold to him the sudden calamities that awaited his return; but he gave no credit to her, and was assassinated by his wife Clytemnestra. Cassandra shared his fate, and saw all her prophecies but too truly fulfilled. (Vid Agamemnon.) Æschyl. in Agam. —Homer. Il. 13, 363 Odyss. 4.—Hygin. fab. 117.—Virg. Æn 2, 246, &c.—Q. Calab. 13, 421. —Eurip. in Troad —Paus. 1, 16. 3, 19.

CASSANDRIA, a town of the peninsula of Pallene in Macedonia, called also Potidæa. Paus. 5, 23

CASSIA LEX, was enacted by Cassius Longinus, A U C. 649. By it no man condemned by the people, or deprived of military power, was permitted to enter the senate house.——Another, enacted by C Cassius, the prætor, to choose some of the plebeians to be admitted among the patricians.——Another, A.U.C 616, to make the suffrages of the Roman people free and independent. It ordained that they should be received upon tablets. Cic. in Leg ——Another, A U.C 267, to make a division of the territories taken from the Hernici, half to the Roman people, and half to the Latins ——Another, enacted A.U.C. 596, to grant a consular power to P. Anicius and Octavius on the day they triumphed over Macedonia. Liv.

CASSIODORUS, M. AURELIUS a great statesman and writer in the sixth century. He recommended himself by his prudence and abilities to Theodoric king of the Goths in Italy, by whom he was made governor of Sicily, and afterwards entrusted with the highest offices of the state. Athalaric, the son and successor of Theodoric, equally respected his talents; but he was disgraced under Vitiges, and retired to Calabria in a monastery which he had founded, and there devoted himself to literature and science. He was also fond of mechanics, and employed himself occasionally in the construction of sun-dials, water-clocks, curious lamps, &c. He wrote, besides letters, two books De duratu lectionibus, a treatise on orthography, and twelve books De rebus gestis Gothorum, preserved only in the mutilated abridgment of Jornandes. He died A.D. 562, at the age of 101. His works were edited by Chandler, 8vo. London, 1722.

CASSIOPE and CASSIOPEA, married Cepheus, king of Æthiopia, by whom she had Andromeda. She boasted herself to be fairer than the Nereides; upon which Neptune, at the request of these despised nymphs, punished the insolence of Cassiope, and sent a huge sea monster to ravage Æthiopia. The wrath of Neptune could be appeased only by exposing Andromeda, whom Cassiope tenderly loved, to the fury of this sea monster; and just as she was going to be devoured, Perseus delivered her (Vid Andromeda.) Cassiope was made a southern constellation, consisting of 13 stars called Cassiopeia. Cic. de Nat. D. 2. 43.—Apollod. 2. 4.—Ovid. Met. 4. 738.—Hygin. fab. 64.—Propert. 1. el. 17. 3. Manil. 1. 354.——A city of Epirus near Thesprotia. Plin. 3. 14.——Another in the island of Corcyra. Plin. 4. 12.——The wife of Epaphus. Stat. Silv.

CASSITERIDES, islands in the western ocean, where tin was found, supposed to be the Scilly islands of the moderns. The name Cassiterides is derived from the Greek word Κασσιτερος, signifying tin. Plin. 3. 22.

C. CASSIUS LONGINUS, a celebrated Roman, who made himself known first by being quæstor to Crassus in his expedition against Parthia, from which he extricated himself with uncommon address. He followed the interest of Pompey, and when Cæsar had obtained the victory in the plains of Pharsalia, Cassius was one of those who owed their life to the mercy of the conqueror. He married Junia the sister of Brutus, and with him he resolved to murder the man to whom he was indebted for his life, on account of his oppressive ambition, and before he stabbed Cæsar, he addressed himself to the statue of Pompey, who had fallen by the avarice of him whom he was going to assassinate. When the provinces were divided among Cæsar's murderers, Cassius received Africa, and when his party had lost ground at Rome, by the superior influence of Augustus and M. Antony, he retired to Philippi, with his friend Brutus and their adherents. In the battle that was fought there, the wing which Cassius commanded was defeated, and his camp was plundered. In this unsuccessful moment he suddenly gave up all hopes of recovering his losses, and concluded that Brutus was conquered and ruined as well as himself. Fearful to fall into the enemy's hands, he ordered one of his freedmen to run him through, and he perished by that very sword which had given wounds to Cæsar. His body was honoured with a magnificent funeral by his friend Brutus, who declared over him that he deserved to be called the last of the Romans. If he was brave, he was equally learned. Some of his letters are still extant among Cicero's epistles. He was a strict follower of the doctrines of Epicurus. He was often too rash and too violent, and many of the wrong steps which Brutus took are to be ascribed to the prevailing advice of Cassius. He is accused by Paterculus to have been a better commander than Brutus, though a less sincere friend. The day after Cæsar's murder he dined at the house of Antony, who asked him whether he had then a dagger concealed in his bosom; yes, replied he, if you aspire to tyranny. Cassius had been even from his youth remarkable for his republican and independent spirit. When at school, he gave Faustus, Sylla's son, a violent box on the ear, for boasting of the greatness and absolute power of his father; and when called to account for this before Pompey, he with an undaunted boldness declared that if Faustus still dared to repeat the same words, he would repeat his blows. Though in his late years attached to the doctrines of Epicurus yet he always adhered to the temperance of the stoics, and drank nothing but water; whence Cæsar, when advised to beware of Antony and Dolabella, exclaimed, that he feared not the fat and the sleek, but rather the pale and the lean, alluding to Brutus and Cassius. Suetan. in Cæs et Aug.—Plut. in Brut. et Cæs.—Patercc. 2. 46.—Dio 40.——Lucius, brother to Catus, was made tribune, and [illegible]ibited by his brother [illegible]urder. Cic. Fam. 12. ep. 2. Att. 14. ep. 2.4.——Another of the same engaged to set Rome o[illegible]

ty before the conspira
Sall. in Cat.——A Roman citiz[illegible]

his son to death, on pretence of his raising commotions in the state. Val. Max. 5. 8.——A tribune of the people, who made many laws tending to diminish the influence of the Roman nobility. He was competitor with Cicero for the consulship.——One of Pompey's officers, who, during the civil wars, revolted to Cæsar with ten ships, though he might have secured his person, when he crossed the Hellespont, after the battle of Pharsalia.——A poet of Parma, of great genius. He espoused the cause of Brutus, and tius Marcus. According to the scholiast on Horace, however, he retired to Athens, where he was put to death by Varus, by the order of Augustus. His tragedies and other poems were much admired, and were edited by the poet Statius some time after. Horat Sat. 1. 10. 62. Ep. 1. 4. 3.——Spurius, Viscellinus, a Roman, put to death on suspicion of his aspiring to tyranny, after he had been three times consul B.C. 485. The cause of his condemnation probably was his proposing an agrarian law so offensive to the patricians, that they interpreted his popularity to views against the independence of his country. Cassius was the first who was made master of horse to a dictator. Dion. 11.—Val. Max. 6. 3.——Brutus, a Roman who betrayed his country to the Latins, and fled to the temple of Pallas, where his father confined him, and he was starved to death.——Q. Longinus, an officer of Cæsar. He had first sided with Pompey in the civil wars, but revolted to Cæsar, by whom he was made commander of the southern parts of Spain. His severity was so great, and his exactions so cruelly levied, that the Spaniards attempted to murder him; and he at last left the province in disgrace, and was drowned on his return in the mouth of the Iberus. Dio 41. 24. 42, 16.—Cæs Alex. 48.——A consul, to whom Tiberius married Drusilla, daughter of Germanicus. Suetan. in Cal. 57.——A lawyer whom Nero put to death because he bore the name of J. Cæsar's murderer. Suet in Ner 37.——L. Hemina, the most ancient writer of annals at Rome. He lived A.U.C. 608.——Lucius Longinus, a Roman lawyer, whose severity in the execution of the law has rendered the words Cassiana judicia applicable to rigid judges. He made a law to [illegible] people [illegible] the Comit[illegible] to be [illegible] by ballot not to [illegible] for treason. Cic. pro Rosc. 30.——Longinus, a critic. (Vid. Longinus.)——Lucius, a consul with C. Marius, slain with his army by the Tigurini, a people of Helvetia. It is generally supposed that he is the person who brought Jugurtha to Rome, on a public promise of safety, and made him depend upon his integrity as on the most solemn pledges of the state. Cæs. B. G. 1, 12 et 17.—Liv. 65.—Sallust Jug 33.——M. Scæva, a soldier of uncommon valour in Cæsar's army. Val. Max. 3, 2.——An officer under Aurelius, made emperor by his soldiers, and murdered three months after.——Peducæus, a tribune who appealed from the decision of Metellus upon the acquittal of some Vestal virgins for incest, and who caused them on a second trial to be condemned to death. Liv. 63.——Gaius Varus, a man who favoured the Manilian law, and was consul with Tit. Varro, when Verres was prætor in Sicily. Cic. Verr. 1, 23 & 41.——Felix, a physician in the age of Tiberius, who wrote on animals.——Severus, an orator who wrote a severe treatise on illustrious men and women. He died in exile, in his 25th year. (Vid Severus.) The family of the Cassii branched into the surname of Longinus, Viscellinus, Brutus, &c.

CASSIVELA[illegible] reign authority when J. Cæsar made [illegible] descent upon Britain. Cæs Bell G. 5, 19, &c.

CASSOTIS, a nymph and fountain of Phocis. Pans 10, 24.

CASTABÀLA, a city of Cilicia, east of Anazarbus, whose inhabitants made war with their dogs. It is now Karrabdat.——Another in Cappadocia, north east of Cybistra, famous for a temple of Diana Persica. It is now Sagdeh Strab. 12.

CASTÀLIA, a town near Phocis.——A daughter of the Achelous

CASTALIUS, a son of Terra, father of Thyas who became mother of Delphus by Apollo. Paus. 10, 6.

CASTÀLIUS FONS, or CASTALIA, a fountain of Parnassus, sacred to the Muses. The waters of this fountain were cool and excellent and they had the power of inspiring those who drank of them with the true spirit of poetry. The muses have received the surname of Castalides from this fountain. Eurip Ion 95.—Theocr. Idyl. 7, 14.—Hor. Carm 3, 4, 61.—Virg G. 3, 293. Another in Syria near Daphne. The waters of this fountain were said to have the power of communicating to those who drank of them a knowledge of futurity. The oracle at the fountain promised Adrian the possession of sovereign power when he was yet in a private station. Jealous of that distinguished favour, and fearing lest others should obtain the like, he ordered the fountain to be shut up with stones when he ascended the throne.

CASTANÆA, a town of Thessaly, at the foot of mount Pelion, whence the nuces Castaneæ received their name. Plin 4, 9

CASTELLUM MENAPIÒRUM, a town of Belgium on the Maese, now Kessel.——Morinorum, now Mount Cassel, in Flanders.——Cattorum, now Hesse Cassel.

CASTHENES, a bay of Thrace, near Byzantium.

CASTIANIRA, a Thracian mistress of Priam, and mother of Gorgythion. Homer Il 8.

CASTOR and POLLUX, were twin brothers, sons of Jupiter by Leda, the wife of Tyndarus. Jupiter, who was enamoured of Leda, changed himself into a beautiful swan, and desired Venus to metamorphose herself into an eagle. After this transformation the goddess pursued the god with apparent ferocity, and Jupiter fled for refuge into the arms of Leda, who was bathing in the Eurotas. Jupiter took advantage of his situation, and nine months after, Leda, who was already pregnant, brought forth two eggs, from one of which came Pollux and Helena, and from the other, Castor and Clytemnestra.

The two former were the offspring of Jupiter, and the latter were believed to be the children of Tyndarus. Some suppose that Leda brought forth only one egg, from which Castor and Pollux sprung. Mercury, immediately after [illegible]ied the two brothers to Pallene, [illegible]e educated, and as soon as they had arrived to years of maturity, they embarked with Jason to go in quest of the golden [illegible]

[illegible]rage; Pollux conquered and slew [illegible]he combat of the cestus, and was [illegible]ver alle[illegible]ckoned the god and patron of boxing [illegible] Castor distinguished himself in the management of horse. The brothers cleared the Hellespont and the neighbouring seas from pirates after their return from Colchis, from deemed the friends of navigation. During the Argonautic expedition, in a violent storm, two flames of fire were seen to play around the heads of the sons of Leda, and immediately the tempest ceased and the sea was calmed. From this occurrence their power to protect sailors was more firmly credited, and the two mentioned fires, which are very common in storms, have since been known by the name of Castor and Pollux, and when they both appeared, it was a sign of fair weather, but if only one was seen, it prognosticated storms and the aid of Castor and Pollux was consequently solicited. Castor and Pollux made war against the Athenians to recover their sister Helen, whom Theseus had carried away; and from their clemency to the conquered, they acquired the surname of Anaces, or benefactors. They were initiated in the sacred mysteries of the Cabiri, and in those of Ceres of Eleusis. They were invited to a feast when Lynceus and Idas were going to celebrate their marriage with Phœbe and Talaira, the daughters of Leucippus, who was brother to Tyndarus. Their behaviour after this invitation was cruel. They became enamoured of the two women whose nuptials they were to celebrate, and resolved to carry them away and marry them. This violent step provoked Lynceus and Idas: a battle ensued, and Castor killed Lynceus, and was killed by Idas. Pollux revenged the death of his brother by killing Idas; and, as he was immortal and tenderly attached to his brother, he entreated Jupiter to restore him to life, or to be deprived himself of immortality. Jupiter permitted Castor to share the immortality of his brother; and consequently as long as the one was upon earth, so long was the other detained in the infernal regions, and they alternately lived and died every day, or, according to others, every six months. This act of fraternal love Jupiter rewarded by making the two brothers constellations in heaven, under the name of

Gemini, which never appear together, but when one rises the other sets and so on alternately. Castor made Talaira mother of Anogon, and Phœbe had Mnaseleus by Pollux. They received divine honours after death, and were generally called Dioscuri, sons of Jupiter. White lambs were more particularly offered on their altars, and the ancients were fond of swearing by the divinity of the Dioscuri, by the expressions Ædepol and Ædastor. Among the ancients, and especially among the Romans, there prevailed many public reports, at different times, that Castor and Pollux had made their appearance their armies, and mounted on white steeds, had marched at the head of their troops, and furiously attacked the enemy. Their surnames were many, and they were generally represented mounted on two white horses, armed with a spear, and riding side by side, with their head covered with a bonnet, on whose top glittered a star They were called Dioscuri as sons of Jupiter, Anaces or Anactes for their clemency and benevolence to the Athenians, Ambulii from the extended duration of their life, Apheteri because they presided over boundaries, and (Ebali, Therapnæi, and Amyclæi fratres, from the residence they had made at those places in Greece. Theocr. Id. in Dac.—Pind. Nem. od. 10.—Val. Max 1, 8.—Ovid. Met 6, 10). Fast 5, 701. Am 3, el. 2, 54.—Hygin. fab. 77 et 78.—Homer Hymn in Jov. puer. 2.—Eurip in Helen. In Orest—Plut. in The.—Virg Æn. 6 121.—Manil Arg 2.—Luc. 2.—Dionys. Hal 6.—Justin 20, 3.—Horat. Sat. 2, 1 27.—Flor 2 12.—Cic de Nat D. 2, 2 3, 21.—Apollon 1 Argonaut. 1, 8, 9. 2, 4, 3, 11.—Paus 3, 24, 4 3 et 27.—An ancient physician.——A swift runner.——A friend of Æneas, who accompanied him into Italy. Virg Æn 10, 124.——An orator of Rhodes, said to be grandson to king Deiotarus, whom he accused before Cæsar of having conspired against his life. He wrote two books on Babylon, and one on the Nile. Cic in Dei 1.—Plut.——A gladiator. Horat. 1, ep 18, 10.

CASTRA ALEXANDRI, a place of Egypt about Pelusium. Curt. 4, 7.——Cornelia a maritime town of Africa, between Carthage and Utica, where Scipio Africanus Major first encamped when he landed in Africa. Mela, 1 7.——Annibalis, a town of the Bruttii, now Rocella. Plin. 3, 10.——Cyri, a country of Cilicia, where Cyrus encamped when he marched against Croesus. Curt. 3, 4.——Iovia, a town of Spain.——Posthumiana, a place of Spain. Hirt Hisp. 8.

CASTRATIUS a governor of Placentia during the civil wars of Marius. Val. Max. 6 2.

CASTRUM NOVUM, a place on the coast of Etruria. Liv. 36, 3 ——Truentinum, a town of Picenum, near the mouth of the Truentus. Cic. de Attic 8. ep 12.——Inui a town on the shores of the Tyrrhene sea. Virg. Æn. 6, 775.

CASTULO, a town of Hispania Bætica on the Bætis west of Corduba. It was the native place of Imilce wife of Annibal. Plut in Sert.—Liv. 24, 41.—Ital 3, 99 et 391.

CATABATHMUS, from the Greek word Κατα-βαθμος, a descent, a broad and deep valley, originally forming the limits between Cyrenaica and Egypt, and afterwards between Cyrenaica and Marmarica. It was surnamed Magnus, to distinguish it from a smaller Catabathmus in the Lybian nome. It is now called Akabe Oumbeid. Sallust. Jug. 17 et 19.—Plin. 5, 5.

CATADUPA, the name of the large cataracts of the Nile, whose noise was said by the ancients to be so terrible as to stun the ears of all travellers for some time, and totally to deprive the people who dwelled near them of the sense of hearing. Cic de Somn Scip. 5.

CATAMANTELES, a king of the Sequani, in alliance with Rome. &c. Cæs. Bell. G. 1, 3

CATANA, a town of Sicily at the foot of mount Ætna founded by a colony from Chalcis, 753 years before the Christian era. Hiero, king of Syracuse, having become master of the place, transferred the former inhabitants to Leontium, and settled in their territory at the foot of Ætna 5000 Peloponnesians and 5000 Syracusans. The name of the city he changed into Ætna. After his death, the city was taken by the Siculi, and wrested from these by the old inhabitants of Catana, who had been transplanted to Leontium. The city once more resumed the name of Catana. Ceres had here a temple, in which none but women were permitted to appear. It was large and opulent, and it is rendered remarkable for the dreadful overthrows to which it has been subjected from its vicinity to Ætna. It is now called Catania. Cic in Verr 4, 53. 5, 84.—Diod. 11 et 14.—Strab. 6.—Thucyd 6, 3.

CATAONIA, a country above Cilicia, near Cappadocia. C Nep in Dat 4.

CATARACTÆ, a river of Pamphylia, discharging its waters into the sea near Attalia. It derived its name from its impetuosity Now, the Duden.

CATENES, a Persian by whose means Bessus was seized. Curt 7, 43.

CATHÆA, a country of Asia, north-east of the Malli, in the vicinity of the Hydraotes. The chief city was Sangala.

CATHARI, certain gods of the Arcadians.——An Indian nation, where the wives accompany their husbands to the burning pile, and are burnt with them. Diod. 17.

CATIA, an immodest woman, mentioned Horat Sat. 1, 2, 93

CATIÆNA, a courtezan in Juvenal's age. Juv. 3 133

CATIENUS, an actor at Rome in Horace's age, Sat. 2, 3, 61 ——P. Plotinus, a freedman, so attached to his patron, that he threw himself on his funeral pile, though appointed heir of all his fortune and independence. Plin 7, 36.

CATILINA, L. SERGIUS, a noble Roman, of patrician rank, remarkable for the daring profligacy of his conduct He is represented as having been guilty even in his youth of the most shocking enormities During the sanguinary administration of Sylla, he was the chief instrument of his cruelties, and headed a band of assassins, who dragged out of the houses and temples persons, whose names were included in the list of proscription and cruelly murdered them in the presence of his employer. He was also active in searching out and assassinating many knights and senators, before they knew they were proscribed. By these and similar acts he recommended himself to Sylla, who appointed him prætor, B C 68, and the next year he obtained Africa for his province, where his rapacity and cruelty knew no bounds. For this he was accused on his return to Rome, but was saved by bribery. Sunk at last in infamy, he secretly meditated the ruin of his country and conspired with many of the most illustrious of the Romans, as dissolute as himself, to extirpate the senate, plunder the treasury, and set the city on fire. This conspiracy was timely discovered by the consul Cicero, whom he had resolved to murder; and Catiline, after he had declared his intentions in the full senate, and attempted to vindicate himself on seeing five of his accomplices arrested, retired to Gaul, where his partisans were assembling an army; while Cicero at Rome punished the condemned conspirators. Antonius, the other consul, who had formerly been of Catiline's faction, but who had been gained over to the side of the state by Cicero, pursued the insurgents with an army. Upon overtaking them, not daring to face Catiline himself, he pretended indisposition, and devolved the command on his lieutenant Petreius, who attacked Catiline's ill-disciplined troops, and routed them. The battle was fought at Pistoria, ment, fighting with bravery becoming a better cause, about the middle of December, B C 63. It has been reported that Catiline and the other conspirators drank human blood, to make their oaths more firm and inviolable. Sallust has Catil.—Virg. Æn. 8, 668

5, 10.

CATILLI, a people near the river Anio. Sil. 4. 221.

CATILLUS, or CATILUS, a son of Amphiaraus who came to Italy with his brothers Coras and Tiburtus, where he built the town of Tibur, frequently called Merula Catili, and assisted Turnus against Æneas. Virg. Æn. 7, 672.—Horat od. 1, 18, 2.

CATINA, a town of Sicily, called also Catana. (Vid Catana.)——Another of Arcadia

M CATIUS, an epicurean philosopher of Insubria, who wrote a treatise in four books, on the nature of things, and the summum bonum, and an account of the doctrine and tenets of Epicurus. But as he was not a sound or faithful follower of the epicurean philosophy, he has been ridiculed by Horat Sat. 2. 4.—Quintil 10, 1.——Vestinus, a military tribune in M. Antony's army. Cic. Dor. 10, 28

CATIVULCUS, a king of the Eburones, who poisoned himself that he might not fall into Cæsar's power. Cæs B. G 6.

CATIZI, a tribe among the Pygmæans supposed to have been driven from their country by cranes Plin. 4, 11.

CATO a surname of the Porcian family, rendered illustrious by M Porcius Cato a celebrated Roman born at Tusculum, afterwards called Censorius, from his having exercised the office of censor, and Major to be distinguished from his great-grandson of the same name. He rose to all the honours of the state, and the first battle he ever saw was against Annibal, in which though only in his seventeenth year, he behaved with uncommon valour. In his quæstorship, under Africanus against Carthage, and in his expedition in Spain against the Celtiberians, and in Greece, he displayed equal proofs of his courage and prudence. He was remarkable for his love of temperance; he drank nothing but water, and was always satisfied with whatever meats were laid upon his table by his servants, whom he never reproved with an angry word. During his censorship, which he obtained, though he had made many declarations of his future severity if ever in office, he behaved with the greatest rigour and impartiality, showed himself an enemy to all luxury and dissipation, and even accused his colleague of embezzling the public money. He is famous for the great opposition which he made against the introduction of the finer arts of Greece into Italy, and his treatment of Carneades is well known. This prejudice arose from an apprehension that the learning and luxury of Athens would destroy the valour and simplicity of the Roman people, and he often observed to his son that the Romans would be certainly ruined whenever they began to be infected with Greek. It appears, however, that he changed his opinion, for he made himself remarkable for the knowledge of Greek, which he acquired in his old age. He himself educated his son, and instructed him in writing and grammar. He taught him dexterously to throw the javelin, and inured him to the labours of the field, and to bear cold and heat with the same indifference, and to swim across the most rapid rivers with ease and boldness. He was universally deemed so strict in his morals, that Virgil makes him one of the judges of hell. His enmity towards Carthage, however, may be deservedly censured. When commissioned by the senate to settle the disputes between Masinissa and the capital of Africa, he viewed with a jealous eye the greatness and prosperity of the rival city; and instead of the impartial umpire, he acted the inveterate foe. In every speech he inveighed against Africa, and at every opportunity, in the senate and out of the senate, delenda est Carthago was his most emphatic expression. Rome at last yielded to prejudice, and, as Cato wished, Carthage was reduced to ruin; but she left to her conqueror, with her empire to inherit her pride, her insolence, and her luxuries. It is said that Cato repented only of three things during his life; to have gone by sea when he could go by land, to have passed a day inactive, and to have told a secret to his wife. A statue was raised to his memory, and he distinguished himself as much for his knowledge of agriculture as for his political life. In Cicero's age there were 150 orations of his, besides letters, and a celebrated work called Origines, of which the first book gave a history of the Roman monarchy, the second and third an account of the neighbouring cities of Italy; the fourth a detail of the first and the fifth of the second Punic war; and in the others the Roman history was brought down to the war of the Lusitanians, carried on by Ser. Galba. Some fragments of the Origines remain, supposed by some to be supposititious. Cato's treatise, De Re rustica, was edited by Auson. Pompeus, 8vo. Ant Plant. 1590; but the best edition of Cato, &c. seems to be Gesner's, 2 vols 4to. Lips. 1735. Cato died in extreme old age about 150 B.C.; and Cicero, to show his respect for him, has introduced him in his treatise on old age, as the principal character Plin. 7, 14 Plutarch and C. Nepos have written an account of his life. &c. Acad et de Senect. &c.——Marcus, the son of the Censor, married the daughter of P. Æmylius. He lost his sword in a battle, and though wounded and tired, he went to his friends, and, with their assistance, renewed the battle, and recovered his sword. Plut. in Cat.——A courageous Roman, grandfather to Cato the censor. He had five horses killed under him in battles. Plut. in Cat.——Valerius, a grammarian of Gallia Narbonensis, in the time of Sylla, who instructed at Rome many noble pupils, and wrote some poems, one of which only remains called Diræ, in 183 heroic lines, in which the author laments, in pathetic language, the time when he bid adieu to his native country and his favourite Lydia. Suet. de Ill. G. 11. —Ovid. Trist. 2, 1, 436.——Marcus, surnamed Uticensis, from his death at Utica, was great grandson to the censor of the same name. The early virtues, and the eager fondness for liberty, which appeared in his childhood, seemed to promise a great man; and, at the age of fourteen, he earnestly asked his preceptor Sarpedo for a sword, to stab the tyrant Sylla. He was austere in his morals, and a strict follower of the tenets of the stoics, he was careless of his dress, often appeared barefooted in public, and never travelled but on foot. He was such a lover of discipline, that in whatever office he was employed, he always reformed its abuses, and restored the pure regulations of ancient times. When he was set over the troops in the capacity of a commander, his removal was universally lamented, and deemed almost a public loss by his affectionate soldiers. His fondness for candour was so great, that the veracity of Cato became proverbial. In his visits to his friends he wished to give as little molestation as possible, and the importuning civilities of king Dejotarus so displeased him when he was at his court, that he hastened away from his presence. He was very jealous of the safety and liberty of the republic, and watched carefully over the conduct of Pompey, whose power and influence were great, and therefore suspected. He often expressed his dislike to serve the office of tribune, but when he saw Metellus Nepos, a man of corrupted principles, apply for it, he offered himself a candidate to oppose him, and obtained the tribuneship. In the conspiracy of Catiline, he supported the measures of Cicero, and was the chief cause that the conspirators were capitally punished. When the provinces of Gaul were decreed for five years to Cæsar, Cato observed to the senators, that they had introduced a tyrant into the Capitol. He was sent to Cyprus against Ptolemy, who had rebelled, by his enemies, at the head of whom was Clodius the tribune, who hoped that the difficulty of the expedition would injure his reputation. But his prudence extricated him from every danger. Ptolemy submitted, and after a successful campaign, Cato was received at Rome with the most distinguishing honours, which he, however, modestly declined. When the first triumvirate was formed between Cæsar, Pompey, and Crassus, Cato opposed them with all his might, and with an independent spirit, foretold to the Roman people all the misfortunes which soon after followed. After repeated applications, he was made prætor, but he seemed rather to disgrace than support the dignity of that office, by the meanness of his dress. He applied for the consulship, but could never obtain it. When Cæsar had passed the Rubicon, Cato advised the Roman senate to deliver the care of the republic into the hands of Pompey; though he was far from approving his general conduct, yet his motives he considered as less dangerous and more patriotic than those of Cæsar. Eager to show his attachment to his country, he with his son followed Pompey, as soon as he was invested with the chief command, to Dyrrachium, where, after a small victory, he was entrusted with the care of the ammunition, and of fifteen cohorts. After the battle of Pharsalia, Cato took the command of the Corcyrean fleet; and when he heard of Pompey's death on the coast of Africa, he traversed the deserts of Lybya, to join himself to Scipio. He refused to take the command of the army in Africa, a circumstance of which he afterwards repented, when he saw the weakness and the imprudence of young Scipio. The fatal battle of Thapsus, in which Juba and Scipio were defeated, added to his misfortunes, and he fled to Utica, where he hoped to collect the remains of the conquered army, and to withstand, by a bold and active defence, the rapidity of the victor. The people of the town, however, were unwilling to expose themselves to Cæsar's vengeance; and Cato, when his enemy approached near the city, disdained to fly, and rather than fall alive into the conqueror's hands, he stabbed himself, after he had read Plato's treatise on the immortality of the soul, B. C. 46, in the 49th year of his age. His first wife was Attilia the daughter of Soranus, a woman whose licentious conduct obliged him to divorce her. Afterwards he united himself to Martia, daughter of Philip. Hortensius, his friend, wished to raise children by Martia, and therefore obtained her from Cato. After the death of Hortensius, Cato took her again. This conduct was ridiculed by the Romans, who observed that Martia had entered the house of Hortensius very poor, but returned to the bed of Cato loaded with treasures. It was observed that Cato appeared in mourning, and never laid himself down at his meals since the defeat of Pompey, but always sat down, contrary to the custom of the Romans, as if depressed with the recollection that the supporters of republican liberty were decaying. Plutarch has written an account of his life. Lucan. 1, 128, &c. —Val. Max. 2, 10.—Horat. Od. 3, 21.—Virg. Æn. 6, 841. 8, 670.——A son of Cato of Utica, who was pardoned by Cæsar, and fell in the battle of Philippi, after he had acquired much honour. Plut. in Cat. Min.——Cæsus, the grandson of the censor and of Paulus Æmylius, was consul, and distinguished himself as an orator. He was accused of extortion, and condemned by the Mamilian law, and he retired in exile to Tarraco in Spain. Cic. Ver. 4, 10. Br. 28 et 34. Balb 11. ——Another of the same family, made tribune, A.U.C. 697. He opposed the restoration of Ptolemy to the kingdom of Egypt, and at the instigation of Pompey and Crassus, he attempted to resist the election of magistrates, because the consuls withstood his innovations with respect to the laws. Cic. Q. Fr. 2, ep. 6.—Liv. 105.

CATREUS, a king of Crete, killed by his son at Rhodes, unknowingly. Dicod 5.

CATTA, a woman who had the gift of prophecy. Suet. in Vitell. 14.

CATTI, a powerful nation of Germany, south of the Cherusci. They inhabited what is now Hesse, and part of Franconia and Westphalia. They were a warlike people, and their infantry was reckoned the best in Germany. Castellum Cattorum, now Cassel, and Bicurdium, now Erfurth, were settlements of the Catti. Tacit. Ann. 13, 57.

CATULIANA, a surname of Minerva, from L. Catulus, who dedicated a standard to her. Plin. 34, 6.

CATULLUS, C. or Q. VALERIUS, a poet of Verona, whose compositions, elegant and simple, are the offspring of a luxuriant imagination. He was descended of an illustrious family, and came to Rome with Manlius in his youth, to t his understanding, and more studiously to devote himself to the muses. His abilities recommended him to Cicero, whose friendship and hospitality he celebrated, and he gradually became acquainted with the most distinguished characters of his age. But whilst he sang the praises of his favourite Ipsithilla, or Clodia, to whom he paid his adoration under the feigned appellation of Lesbia, he also ridiculed the follies of the age; and, as it is reported, did not scruple to direct his satire against the profligacy of Cæsar, under the name of Romulus, whose only revenge was to invite the poet, and hospitably to entertain him at his table. Catullus was the first Roman who imitated with success the Greek writers, and introduced their numbers among the Latins, in iambic verses of eleven syllables. Though the pages of the poet are occasionally disfigured with licentious expressions, and all the bitterness of satire; yet the whole is written with great purity of style. Catullus died in the 46th year of his age, B.C. 40. His compositions were numerous, and those which have survived the ravages of the times have been divided by some commentators into three books; the first of lyrics, the second of elegiacs, and the third of epigrams, though more generally comprehended under the general appellation of epigrams, 113 in number, but of very unequal length. The most applauded of his poems among the ancients was that on the death of Lesbia's sparrow. The best editions are that of Vulpius, 4to, Patavii, 1747; that of Barbou, 12mo, Paris, 1754; and that of Doering, 2 vols. 8vo, Lipz. 1788–90. The poems of Catullus have been translated into English verse by the hon. G Lamb (London, 1821). Martial 1, ep. 62.—Ovid. Trist. 2, 427.——A man surnamed Urbicarius, was a mimographer. Juv. 13, 111.

CATULUS, Q. LUCTATIUS, went with three hundred ships during the first Punic war against the Carthaginians, and destroyed 600 of their ships under Hamilcar, near the Ægates. This celebrated victory put an end to the war.——An orator distinguished also as a writer of epigrams, and admired for the neatness, elegance, and polished style of his compositions. Some suppose that he is the person who was consul with Marius, and who shared in his victory and his triumph over the Cimbri. He espoused the party of Sylla against Marius, and the boldness of his opposition incited his victorious enemy to destroy him, even against the powerful intercession of his numerous friends. He put an end to his life by shutting himself in a room newly plastered, where he was suffocated with the smoke of burning coals. He left behind him well written memoirs of his consulship after the manner of Xenophon, besides several elaborate orations, but only a few verses are preserved of the fragments of the poet's compositions. Lucan. 2, 174.—Plut. in Mario.——His son of the same name became known by his patriotic attachment to the glories and liberties of Rome. He was consul and censor, and in every office he studied the happiness of the people, and the prosperity of the state. He dedicated the temple of Jupiter in the capitol, after it had been burnt, and after Catiline's conspiracy was suppressed, he boldly, with gratitude and animation, hailed Cicero as the father his country. He died in an advanced old age. Vic. Pam. 2, ep. 15, et passim.—Dio. 26, 13.—Suet. Aug. 94.—Liv 98.—Plut. in Pomp.——A Roman sent by his countrymen to carry a present to the god of Delphi, from the spoils taken from Antiochus. Liv. 37.

CATURIGES, a people of Gaul, near the source of the Durance, at the foot of the Cottian Alps. Their chief cities were Caturiges, now Chorges, and Ebredunum, now Embrun. Cæs. B. G. 1, 10.—Plin. 3, 20.

CAUCASUS, an extensive chain of mountains in Asia, which the ancients erroneously regarded as a continuation of the range of Taurus. According to Strabo, it extended from the Euxine to the Caspian sea, including, as within a wall, the isthmus that separated those seas. It divided Albania and Iberia towards the south from the level country of the Sarmatæ on the north. The inhabitants of these mountains were very numerous, consisting, according to some, of 70, according to others of 300 different nations, who spoke different languages, and lived in a savage state. The breadth of this range is about 400 miles, reckoning from the mouth of the Don to that of the Koama; about 750 between the straits of Caffa and the peninsula of Absheron; and about 350 from the mouths of the Phasis to the city of Derbend. The etymology of the name of Caucasus is not agreed upon, the most probable opinion is, that it is a compound of a Persian word Cau, signifying a mountain, and a Scythian word Casus, that is, a white mountain. The ancients compared Caucasus with the Alps in point of elevation. They have indeed some just resemblance, for the middle of the chain is covered with glaciers, or white with eternal snows. The most elevated summit is about 16,710 feet above the level of the sea, which is considerably higher than Mont Blanc. The two principal passes over Mount Caucasus are mentioned by the ancients under the name of the Caucasian and the Albanian gates. The first is the route which leads from Mosdok to Tiflis. It is the narrow valley of four days' journey, where, according to Strabo, the river Aragon, now called Arakul, flows. It is, as Pliny calls it, an enormous work of nature, which has cut out a long opening among the rocks, which an iron gate would be almost sufficient to close. It was by this passage that the barbarians of the north threatened both the Roman and the Persian empire. It is now called Dargil. The Albanian passage has been generally supposed to be the pass of Derbend, along the coast of the Caspian sea. Malte Brun, however, contends that the Albanian or Sarmatian pass must have been the defile passing along the frontier of Daghestan, near the sources of the Koisu. Besides these passes leading from south to north, there is a defile leading from Imeritia into Kartalinia, distinguished as the Iberian pass, and now called Shamopare, which was rendered practicable for an army by the Persians in the fourth century. Plin. 6, 11.—Strab. 11.—Herod. 4, 203, &c.—Virg. Ecl. 6. G. 2, 440. Æn. 4, 366.—Flacc. 5, 155.—Mela, 1, 15 et 19.—Ptol. 5, 9. 6, 12.

CAUCON, a son of Clinus, who first introduced the Ceres into Messenia from Eleusis. Paus. 4, 1.

CAUCONES, a people of Paphlagonia, originally inhabitants of Arcadia, or of Scythia, according to some accounts. Some of them made a settlement near Dyme in Elis. Herod. 1, 147.—Strab. 8, &c.

CAUDI and CAUDIUM, a town of the Samnites, near which, in a place called Caudinæ Furculæ, or Furcæ, the Roman army under T. Veturius Calvinus and Sp. Postumius was obliged to surrender to the Samnites, and pass under the yoke with the greatest disgrace. Liv. 2, 1, &c. —Lucan. 2, 138.

CAULONIA, or CAULON, a town of Italy near the country of the Bruttii, founded by a colony of Achæans, and destroyed in the wars between Pyrrhus and the Romans. Paus. 6, 3.—Virg. Æn. 3, 553.

CAUNUS, a man raised to affluence from poverty by Artaxerxes. Plut. in Artax.

CAUNUS, a son of Miletus and Cyane. He was passionately fond of, or, according to others, he was tenderly beloved by, his sister Byblis, and to avoid an incestuous commerce, he retired to Caria, where he built a city called by his own name (Vid. Byblis.) Ovid. Met. 9, fab. 11.—A very ancient city of Caria, at the foot of mount Taurus, west of the Sinus Glaucus. The air was particularly insalubrious in summer and autumn, by reason of the extreme heat, and the evil was increased by the abundance of its fruits. The musician Stratonicus observing the pale and sallow complexion of its inhabitants, humorously applied to them this quotation from Homer:

(Ὴε περ φύλλων γενεὴ, τοιήδε καὶ ἀνδρῶν.

On their complaining of this piece of ridicule he replied still more sarcastically, "How could I presume to stigmatise as unhealthy a town where even the dead walk?" The site of Caunus is now occupied by a village called Kaiguez or Kheuges Herod. 1, 172 et 176.—Strab. 14.—Luc. 45, 25.

CAUROS, another name for Andros. Vid. Andros.

CAURUS, or CORUS, in Greek Argeses, the west-north-west wind. Virg. G. 3, 356.

CAVARES, a people of Gaul, who inhabited the present province of Comtat in Provence.

CAVARILLUS, a commander of some troops of the Edui in Cæsar's army. Cæs. Bell. G. 7, 64.

CAVARINUS, a Gaul, made king of the Senones by Cæsar, and banished by his subjects. Cæs Bell G. 5, 54.

CAVII, a people of Illyricum. Liv 44, 30.

CAUCI, or CHAUCI, a nation of Germany, now people of Friesland and Groningen. Lucan.

CAICUS, a river of Mysia. Vid Caicus.

CAYSTER, or CAYSTRUS, a river of Asia Minor, which rises in a branch of mount Tmolus, passes through Lydia, and falls into the Ægean sea near Ephesus. According to the poets, the banks and neighbourhood of this river were much frequented by swans and other water-fowl. The Cayster is now called Kutchuck Mendere, or lesser Meander, from its wandering course. Ovid. Met. 2, 253. 5, 386.—Mart 1, ep. 54.—Homer. Il. 2, 461.—Virg. G. 1, 384.

CEA, or CEOS, an island near Eubœa, called also Cos. Vid. Cos.

CEADES a Thracian, whose son Euphemus was concerned in the Trojan war. Homer. Il. 2

CEBA, a town of Liguria, celebrated for its cheese. It is now called Ceva. Plin 11, 42.

CEBALLINUS, a man who gave information of the snares laid against Alexander. Diod 17.—Curt. 6, 7.

CEBARENSES, a people of Gaul. Paus. 1, 36.

CEBENNA, mountains of Gaul, now the Cevennes, separating the Arverni from the Helvii, and extending almost from the Garonne to the Rhone. Cæs. B. G. 7, 8.—Mela, 2, 5.

CEBES, a Theban philosopher, one of the disciples of Socrates, B.C. 405. He attended his learned preceptor in his last moments, and distinguished himself by three dialogues that he wrote; but more particularly by his tables, which contain a beautiful and affecting picture of human life, delineated with accuracy of judgment and great splendour of sentiment. Little is known of the character of Cebes from history. Plato says that he was a diligent inquirer after truth, and Xenophon speaks highly of his morals. The best edition of Cebes is that of Schweighauser, Lips, 1798, 8vo.

CEBREN, the father of Asterope. Apollod. 3 12.

CEBRENIA a country of Troas with a town of the same name, called after the river Cebrenus which is in the neighbourhood. Œnone, the daughter of the Cebrenus, receives the patronymic of Cebrenis. Ovid. Met 11, 769.—Stat. 1, Sylv 5, 21

CEBRIONES, one of the giants conquered by Venus.——An illegitimate son of Priam, killed with a stone by Patroclus. Homer Il 16, 727.

CEBRUS, or CIABRUS, now Zebrilza, a river running from south to north into the Danube and dividing Lower from Upper Mœsia.

CECIDAS, an ancient dithyrambic poet.

CECILIUS (Vid. Cæcilius)

CECINA, a river near Volaterra, in Etruria Mela, 2, 4.

A. CECINNA, a Roman knight in the interest of Pompey, who used to breed up young swallows, and send them to carry news to his friends as messengers. He was a particular friend of Cicero, with whom he corresponded. Some of his letters are still extant in Cicero. Plin 10 21.—Cic 16, ep 9b. Orat 29.——A scribe of Octavius Cæsar. Cic. 16 ad Attic ep 8.——A consular man suspected of conspiracy, and murdered by Titus after an invitation to supper. Suet in Tit. 6.

CECROPIA, the original name of Athens, in honour of Cecrops, its first founder. The ancients often use this word for Attica, and the Athenians are consequently called Cecropidæ Virg. Æn. 6, 21.—Ovid. Met. 7, 6?1. Fast. 2, 81.—Lucan. 3, 306.—Plin. 7, 56.—Catull. 64, 79.—Juv. 6, 186.

CECRÓPIDÆ, an ancient name of the Athenians, more particularly applied to those who were descended from Cecrops the founder of Athens The honourable name of Cecropidæ was often conferred as a reward for some virtuous action in the field of battle Virg. Æn. 6, 21.—Ovid. Met 7, 671

CECROPS, a native of Sais in Egypt, who led a colony to Attica, about 1556 years before the christian era, and reigned over part of the country which was called from him Cecropia. He softened and polished the rude and uncultivated manners of the inhabitants, and drew them from the country to inhabit twelve small villages which he had founded. He gave them laws and regulations, and introduced among them the worship of those deities which were held in adoration in Egypt He married the daughter of Actæus a Grecian prince, and was deemed the first founder of Athens. He taught his subjects to cultivate the olive, and instructed them to look upon Minerva as the watchful patroness of their city. It is said that he was the first who raised an altar to Jupiter in Greece, and offered him sacrifices After a reign of 50 years, spent in regulating his newly formed kingdom, and in enlightening the minds of his subjects, Cecrops died, leaving three daughters, Aglaurus, Herse, and Pandrosos He was succeeded by Cranaus, a native of the country. Some time after, Theseus, one of his successors on the throne, formed the twelve villages which he had established, into one city, to which the name of Athens was given. (Vid Athenæ.) Some authors have described Cecrops as a monster, half a man and half a serpent; and this fable is explained by the recollection that he was master of two languages, the Greek and Egyptian, or that he had the command over two countries, Egypt and Greece. Others explain it by an allusion to the regulations which Cecrops made amongst the inhabitants concerning marriage and the union of the two sexes. Paus 1, 5.—Strab 9.—Justin. 2, 6.—Herod. 8, 44.—Apollod. 3, 14.—Ovid Met. 11, 561.—Hygin. fab 166.——The second of that name was the seventh king of Athens, and the son and successor of Erichtheus. He married Metiadusa the sister of Dædalus, by whom he had Pandion He reigned 40 years, and died 1307 B C Apollod 3, 15.—Paus 1, 5

CECRYPHALEIA, a promontory of Peloponnesus, near which the Æginetæ were defeated by the Athenians with the loss of seventy galleys. Thucyd 1, 105.

CEDON, an Athenian general, killed in an engagement against the Spartans Diod 15.

CEDREATIS, the name of Diana among the Orchomenians, because her images were hung on lofty cedars.

CEDRUSII, an Indian nation Curt. 9 11.

CEGLUSA, the mother of Asopus by Neptune. Paus 2, 12.

CEI, the inhabitants of the island Cea.

CELADON, a man killed by Perseus, at the marriage of Andromeda. Ovid. Met. 5, 144 —— A river of Greece, flowing into the Alpheus. Strab 8.—Homer Il. 7, 133.

CELADUS, a river of Arcadia, falling into the Alpheus. Paus 8, 38 ——An island of the Auriatic sea. Mela, 3, 1.

CELÆNÆ, or CELÆNE, a city of Phrygia, of which it was once the capital. Cyrus the younger had a palace there, with a park filled with wild beasts where he exercised himself in hunting. The river Meander traversed this city, and also the Marsyas Xerxes withdrew within place after his defeat in Greece, and built a palace and citadel. The inhabitants of Celænæ were in after days carried off by Antiochus Soter to people the city of Apamea, founded by him a mile or two to the south-east, at the junction of the Marsyas and Meander. Strab. 12.—Liv 38, 13.—Xenoph. Anab 1. Marsyas is said to have contended in his neighbourhood against Apollo. Herod. 7, 26. —Lucan 3, 206.

CELÆNO, one of the daughters of Atlas, ravished by Neptune, and placed among the stars after death. Ovid. Fast 4, 173.——One of the Harpies, daughter of Neptune and Terra, who prophesied evils to the Trojans because they had destroyed the oxen of the islands called Strophades. Virg Æn 3, 245.——One of the Danaides. Apollod 2, 1.——A daughter of Neptune and Ergea. Hygin.——A daughter of Hyamus, mother of Delphus by Apollo. Paus 10, 6.

CELEÆ, a town of Peloponnesus. Paus 2, 14.

CELEIA and CELA, a town of Noricum, now Cilli. Plin. 3, 24.

CELELTES, a people of Liguria, who submitted to the Romans A U.C. 556, under the consulate of C. Cornelius and Q. Minutius. Liv 32, 29.

CELENDRÆ, CELENDRIS, and CELENDRIS, a colony of the Samians in Cilicia Traehea, south-west of Seleucia. It is now Chelendreh. Lucan. 8, 259.

CELENEUS, a Cimmerian who first taught with what ceremonies persons guilty of murder might be expiated Plaut. 3 406.

CELENNA, or CELÆNA, a town of Campania, where Juno was worshipped. Virg. Æn. 7, 739.

CELER, a man who with Severus undertook to rebuild Nero's palace after the burning of Rome. Tacit. Ann. 15, 12.——A man called Fabius, who killed Remus when he leaped over the walls of Rome, by order of Romulus It is said that Romulus pursued him for so hastily shedding his brother's blood, but that he escaped his vengeance, and in consequence of this his name was afterwards adopted to express quickness and haste. Ovid. Fast 4, 837.—Plut in Romul —— Metius, a noble youth to whom Statius dedicated a poem

CELERES. Vid. Equites

CELETRUM, a town of Macedonia, situated in a peninsula, with its walls encompassed by a lake. Liv. 31, 40.

CELEUS, a king of Eleusis, father to Triptolemus by Metanira He gave a kind reception to Ceres, who taught his son the cultivation of the earth (Vid. Triptolemus.) His rustic dress became a proverb The invention of several agricultural instruments made of osiers is attributed to him. Ovid Fast. 4, 508 5, 259.—Virg. G 1, 165 —Apollod. 1, 5.—Paus 1, 14 ——A king of Cephallenia CELMUS, a man who nursed Jupiter, by whom he was greatly esteemed He was changed into a magnet stone for saying that Jupiter was mortal Ovid. Met 4, 2 1.

CELONÆ, a place of Mesopotamia. Diod. 17.

CELSUS, an Epicurean philosopher in the second century, to whom Lucian dedicated one of his compositions He wrote a treatise against the Christian religion, which was answered by Origen ——Cornelius, a celebrated physician, who lived in the reigns of Augustus and Tiberius. Nothing is known with certainty of his personal history, but he is supposed from his name to have belonged to the patrician family of the Cornelii, and to have resided in the metropolis of the empire. He wrote on rhetoric, medicine, military tactics, and agriculture, and seems to have understood all these sciences perfectly. Of the eight books of Celsus which have come down to our times, the first four treat of internal maladies; the fifth and sixth of external; and the seventh and eighth of such diseases as come under the cognizance of the surgeon. Celsus was styled the Hippocrates of the Latins; and is universally admired for his extensive erudition, and the purity of his language The best editions of his work De Medicina are those of Almeloveen, Padua, 1722, 8vo; Krause, Lips 1766, 8vo; and Targa, Lugd. Bat. 1785, 2 vols 4to. A good English translation of Celsus was published by Dr Grieve in 1756.——Albinovanus, a friend of Horace, warned against plagiarism, 1, ep. 3, 15, and pleasantly ridiculed, in the 8th epistle, for his foibles. Some of his elegies have been preserved.——Juventius, a lawyer who conspired against Domitian.——Titus, a man proclaimed emperor, A.D. 265, against his will, and murdered seven days after.

CELTÆ, an ancient people, who appear at a very remote period to have extended themselves from Asia over several countries of Europe. Herodotus speaks of them as living beyond the pillars of Hercules, and as the farthest western Europeans. Strabo places them in Iberia near the Eutis and the Anas. Plutarch extends their dominion from the ocean to the Palus Mæotis. The name gradually became peculiar to fewer tribes, and in the time of Cæsar the Celtæ formed but a third part of the Gauls, who themselves formerly were but a part of the Celtæ. The territory inhabited by the Celtæ, according to the Roman dictator, reached from the ocean to the Rhenus, and from the rivers Matrona and Sequana to the Rhodanus, the Garumna, and the mountains of Cebenna. The Romans called this district Celtica, or Galatia. Herod 4, 49 Strab. 3.—Plut in Mario — Cæs. Bell. G. 1, 1, &c

CELTIBERI the inhabitants of Celtiberia, a country along the Iberus in the north east part of Spain. They formed the most numerous tribe in Spain, and originated from the Celtæ mixed with the Iberi. They were very brave, and their census was formidable even to the Romans. After a long resistance to the Carthaginians and Romans, they were finally subdued by the latter people, at the end of the Sertorian war. Dod Sic.—Flor. 2, 17.—Strab. 4.—Lucan. 4, 10.—Sil. It. 3, 339.

CELTICA, a well populated part of Gaul, inhabited by the Celtæ.

CELTICI, a people who inhabited the south of Lusitania. Their principal city was Emerita Augusta, now Merida.

CELTICUM, a promontory on the western coast of Spain, called also Artabrum and Nerium, now Cape Finisterre

CELTILLUS, the father of Vercingetorix among the Arverni. Cæs. Bell. G 7, 4.

CELTORII, a people of Gaul, near the Sennones. Plut

CELTOSCYTHÆ, a northern nation of Scythians Strab. 10.

CEMA, a mountain of Gaul, forming a part of the chain of the Alps. It is now Cotlole.

CEMMENUS, a lofty mountain of Gaul. Strab.

CEMPSI, a people of Spain at the bottom of the Pyrenean mountains. Dionys Perieg. 358.

CENABUM or GENABUM Vid Genabum.

CENÆUM, a promontory of Eubœa, where Jupiter Cenæus had an altar raised by Hercules. Ovid. Met. 9, 136.—Thucyd. 3, 93.

CENCHREÆ, now Kenchres, a port of Corinth on the Sinus Saronicus, or Gulf of Engia. In its vicinity was a spring of hot water, said to be salt, and called the bath of Helen.——A fortress of Argolis, on the frontiers of Arcadia, southwest of Argos. It defended the way from Argos to Tegea. Near this place lay the tombs of some Argives who fell in a battle against the Spartans. Strab 8.

CENCHRIS, the wife of Cinyras king of Cyprus, or, as others say, of Assyria. Hygin. fab. 58.

CENCHRIUS, a son of Neptune and Salamis, or as some say of Pyrene. He killed a large serpent at Salamis. Paus. 2, 2.—Dod. 4.

CENCHRIUS, a river of Ionia near Ephesus, where some suppose that Latona was washed after she had brought forth. Tacit Ann 3, 61.

CENTEPOLIS, a town of Spain, the same as Carthago Nova. Polyb.

CENEUS. Vid. Cænis.

CENIMAGNI, a people of Britain, north of the Trinobantes. Vid Iceni.

CENINA. Vid. Canina.

CENOMÂNI, a people of Gaul, belonging to the Aulerci, whose country corresponded to the diocese of Mans —— There was another people of the same name, who originally came from Transalpine Gaul, and settled in Italy a little after B C. 600.

CENON, a town of Italy. Liv. 2, 63.

CENSORES, two magistrates of great authority at Rome, first created A U.C. 312. Their office was to number the people, estimate the possessions of every citizen, reform and watch over the manners of the people, and regulate the taxes. Their power was also extended over private families; they punished irregularity, and inspected the management and education of the Roman youth. They could inquire into the expenses of every citizen, and even degrade a senator from all his privileges and honours, if guilty of any extravagance. This punishment was generally executed in passing over the offender's name in calling the list of the senators. The office of public censor was originally exercised by the kings. Servius Tullius, the sixth king of Rome, first established a census, by which every man was obliged to come to be registered, and give in writing the place of his residence, his name his quality, the number of his children, of his tenants, estates, and domestics, &c. The ends of the census were very salutary to the Roman republic, and while it gratified the pride of the great in proclaiming the number of their clients and dependants, it infused a spirit of public liberty, and of national independence into the whole. By means of these regular musters, the Romans became acquainted with their own strength, their ability to support a war, or to make a levy of troops, or raise a tribute. It was required that every knight should be possessed of 400,000 sesterces to enjoy the rights and privileges of his order; and a senator was entitled to sit in the senate, if he was really worth 800,000 sesterces. This laborious task of numbering and reviewing the people, was, after the expulsion of the Tarquins, one of the duties and privileges of the consuls. But when the republic was become more powerful, and when the number of the citizens was increased, the consuls were found unable to make the census, on account of the multiplicity of business. After it had been neglected for sixteen years, two new magistrates called censors were elected. They remained in office for five years, and every fifth year they made a census of all the citizens in the Campus Martius, and offered a solemn sacrifice, and made a lustration in the name of all the Roman people. This space of time was called a lustrum, and ten or twenty years were commonly expressed by two or four lustra. After the office of the censors had remained for some time unfilled the people jealous of their power, abridged the duration of their office, and a law was made A.U.C. 420, by Mamercus Æmilius, ordaining that they should still be elected every five years, but that their power should continue only a year and a half. After the second Punic war, they were always chosen from such persons as had been consuls; their office was more honourable, though less powerful, than that of the consuls; the badges of their office were the same, but the censors were not allowed to have lictors to walk before them as the consuls. When one of the censors died, no one was elected in his room till the five years were expired, and his colleague immediately resigned. This circumstance originated from the death of a censor in the lustrum in which Rome was taken by the Gauls, and was ever after deemed an unfortunate event to the republic. The emperors abolished the censors, and took upon themselves to execute their office.

CENSORINUS, Ap. Cl. was compelled after many services to the state, to assume the imperial purple by the soldiers, by whom he was murdered some days after, A. D. 270.——Martius, a consul, to whom, as a particular friend, Horace addressed his 4 od. 8.——A very learned and ingenious grammarian of the third century, whose book De die natali, is extant, being edited in two, by Havercamp, L. Bat. 1767. It treats of the birth of man, of years, months, and days.

CENSUS, the numbering of the people at Rome, performed by the censors, a censeo, to value. (Vid. Censores.)——A god worshipped at Rome, the same as Consus.

CENTARBTUS, a Galatian, who, when Antiochus was killed, mounted his horse in the greatest exultation. The horse, as if conscious of disgrace, immediately leaped down a precipice, and killed himself and his rider. Plin. 8, 42.

CENTAURI, a people of Thessaly, represented by mythologists as half men and half horses. They were the offspring of Centaurus, son of Apollo, by Stilbia, daughter of the Peneus. According to some, the Centaurs were the fruit of Ixion's adventure with the cloud in the shape of Juno, or, as others assert, of the union of Centaurus with the mares of Magnesia. This fable of the existence of the Centaurs, monsters supported upon the four legs of a horse, arises from the ancient people of Thessaly having tamed horses, and having appeared to their neighbours mounted on horseback, a sight very uncommon at that time, and which, seen at a distance, seems only one body, and consequently one creature. Some derive the name ἀπὸ τοῦ κεντεῖν ταύρους, goading bulls, because they went on horseback after their bulls which had strayed, or because they hunted wild bulls with horses. Some of the ancients have maintained, that monsters like the Centaurs can have existed in the natural course of things. Plutarch in Sympos. mentions one seen by Periander tyrant of Corinth; and Pliny, 7, 3, says, that he saw one embalmed in honey, which had been brought to Rome from Egypt in the reign of Claudius. The battle of the Centaurs with the Lapithæ is famous in history. Ovid has elegantly described it, and it has also employed the pen of Hesiod, Valerius Flaccus, &c; and Pausanias in Eliac. says, it was represented in the temple of Jupiter at Olympia, and also at Athens by Phidias and Parrhasius, according to Pliny, 36, 5. The origin of the battle was a quarrel at the marriage of Hippodamia with Pirithous, where the Centaurs, intoxicated with wine, behaved with rudeness, and even offered violence to the women that were present. Such an insult irritated Hercules, Theseus, and the rest of the Lapithæ, who defended the women, wounded and defeated the Centaurs, and obliged them to leave their country, and retire to Arcadia. Here their insolence was a second time punished by Hercules, who, when he was going to hunt the boar of Erymanthus, was kindly entertained by the Centaur Pholus, who gave him wine which belonged to the rest of the Centaurs, but had been given them on condition of their treating Hercules with it, whenever he passed through their territory. They resented the liberty which Hercules took with their wine, and attacked him with uncommon fury. The hero defended himself with his arrows, and defeated his adversaries, who fled for safety to the Centaur Chiron. Chiron had been the preceptor of Hercules, and therefore they hoped that he would desist in his presence. Hercules, though awed at the sight of Chiron, did not desist, but, in the midst of the engagement, he wounded his preceptor in the knee, who, in the excessive pain he suffered, exchanged immortality for death. The death of Chiron irritated Hercules the more, and the Centaurs that were present were all entirpated by his hand, and indeed few escaped the common destruction. The most celebrated of the Centaurs were Chiron, Eurytus, Amycus, Gryneus, Caumas, Lycidas, Arneus, Medon, Rhœtus, Pisenor, Mermeros, Pholus, &c. Diod. 4.—Hesiod. in Scut. Hercul.—Homer. Il. et Odyss.—Ovid. Met. 12.—Strab. 9.—Paus 5, 10, &c.—Ælian. V. H. 11, 2.—Apollod. 2, 3, 5.—Virg. Æn 6, 286.—Hygin. fab. 33 et 62.—Pindar Pyth. 2.

CENTAURUS, a ship in the fleet of Æneas, which had the figure of a Centaur. Virg. Æn. 5, 122.

CENTOBRICA, a town of Coltiberia. Vid. Mar. 5, 1.

CENTORES, a people of Scythia. Flacc.

CENTORIPA, or CENTUMPIA. Vid. Centuripa.

CENTRITES, a river of Armenia Major, flowing under the ramparts of Tigranocerta, and discharging itself into the Euphrates. Diodorus Siculus says that it flowed between Armenia and Media, and in Xenophon's Anabasis it is said to have separated Armenia from the country of the people called Carduchi. Its modern name is Khobour.

CENTRONES, a people of Gaul, among the Alpes Graiæ, who, along with the Graioceli and Caturiges, were defeated by Cæsar in several engagements. Their chief city was Forum Claudii Centronum, now Centron.——There was a people of Gaul of the same name subject to the Nervii, now supposed to be in the territory of Courtray. Cæs B. G. 1, 10. 5, 38.—Plin. 3, 20.

CENTRONIUS, a man who squandered his immense riches on useless and whimsical buildings. Jur 14, 86.

CENTUMCELLÆ, now Civita Vecchia, a sea-port town of Etruria, north-west of Cære. Trajan made this the place of his residence, where he entertained his friends and the great men of his court, with music, plays, and banquets, not sumptuous but moderate. In progress of time, he gave it importance by erecting a harbour, which he called after his own name. The harbour was formed by running out two piers into the sea, and constructing in the interval an island, which served to break the violence of the waves, and to secure the ships in the inner basin from storms and bad weather. Plin. 6, ep. 31.—Ruffi. 1, 247.

CENTUMVIRI, the members of a court of justice at Rome. They were originally chosen, three out of each of the thirty-five tribes of the people, and though 105, they were always called Centumviri. They were afterwards increased to 180, and still retained their original name. The prætor sent to their tribunal causes of the greatest importance, as their knowledge of the law was extensive. They were called together by setting up a spear; at first by those who had discharged the office of quæstor, afterwards by the decemviri who presided among them during the absence of the prætor. Trials before them were usually held in the Basilicæ, spacious halls built around the forum for the administration of justice. They continued to act as judges for a whole year. Cic. de Orat. 1, 35.—Quintil. 4, 5, et 11.—Plin 6, ep. 33.

CENTURIA, a division of the people among the Romans, consisting of a hundred. At first a century contained a hundred as the word implies, but not so afterwards. The Roman people were originally divided into three tribes, and each tribe into ten curiæ. Servius Tullius made a census; and when he had enrolled the place of habitation, name, and profession of every citizen, which amounted to 80,000 men, all able to bear arms, he divided them into six classes and each class into several centuries or companies of a hundred men. The first class consisted of eighty centuries, forty of which were composed of men from the age of forty-five and upwards, appointed to guard the city. The forty others were young men, from seventeen to forty-five years of age, appointed to go to war, and fight the enemies of Rome. Their arms were all the same, that is, a buckler, a cuirass, a helmet, cuishes of brass, with a sword, a lance, and a javelin, and as they were of the most illustrious citizens, they were called by way of eminence Classici, and their inferiors infra classem. They were to be worth 100 000 asses, or pounds of brass; or 10,000 drachmæ, according to the Greek way of computing, which sum is commonly reckoned equal to L.322 15s. 4d. sterling; but if we suppose each pound of brass to contain twenty-four asses, as was the case afterwards, it will amount to L. 7,750. The second, third, and fourth classes, consisted each of twenty centuries, ten of which were composed of the more aged, and the others of the younger sort of people. Their arms were a large shield, a spear, and a javelin; they were to be worth in the second class 75,000 asses, or about L. 121. In the third 50,000, or about L.80; and in the fourth 25,000, or about L.40. The fifth class consisted of thirty centuries three of which were carpenters by trade, and the others of different professions, such as were necessary in the camp. They were all armed with slings and stones. They were to be worth 11,000 asses, or about L.18. The sixth class contained only one centuria comprising the whole body of the poorest citizens, who were called Proletarii, as their only service to the state was procreating children. They were also called capite censi, as the censor took notice of their person, not of their estate. In the public assemblies in the Campus Martius, at the election of public magistrates, or at the trial of capital crimes, the people gave their vote by centuries, whence the assembly was called comitia centuriata. In these public assemblies, which were never convened, but only by the consuls at the permission of the senate, or by the dictator, in the absence of the consuls, some of the people appeared under arms, for fear of an attack from some foreign enemy. When a law was proposed in the public assemblies, its necessity was explained, and the advantages it would produce to the state were enlarged upon in a harangue; after which it was exposed in the most conspicuous parts of the city three market days, that the people might see and consider. Expostulo it to public view, was called propunere legem, and explaining it, promulgare legem. He who merely proposed it, was called lator legis; and he who dwelt upon its importance and utility, and wished it to be enforced, was called auctor legis. When the assembly was to be held, the auguries were consulted by the consul, who, after haranguing the people, and reminding them to have in view the good of the republic, dismissed them to their respective centuries, that their votes might be gathered. They gave their votes viva voce, till the year of Rome A.U.C 615, when they changed the custom, and gave their approbation or disapprobation by ballots thrown into an urn. If the first class was unanimous, the others were not consulted, as the first was superior to all the others in number; but if they were not unanimous they proceeded to consult the rest, and the majority decided the question. This advantage of the first class gave offence to the rest; and it was afterwards settled, that one class of the six should be drawn by lot, to give its votes first, without regard to rank or priority. After all the votes had been gathered, the consul declared aloud, that the law which had been proposed was duly and constitutionally approved. The same ceremonies were observed in the election of consuls, prætors, &c. The word Centuria is also applied to a subdivision of one of the Roman legions. Vid. Legio.

CENTURIPA, (æ, or æ, arum), now Centorbi, a town of Sicily on the eastern coast, at a small distance from Catana. Cic in Verr. 4, 23.—Ital. 14, 265.—Plin 3, 8.

CEOS and CEA, an island of the Ægean sea, one of the Cyclades, opposite the promontory of Sunium. It was peopled by an Ionian colony from Attica, and is said to have introduced a great degree of elegance in female dress. It once possessed four cities named Iulis, Carthæa, Coressia, and Poessa; but in the time of Strabo only the two former existed, the other two having been swallowed up by an earthquake. It is now Zea. Herod 8, 1 et 46.—Plin. 4, 12.

CEPHALÆ, a promontory of Africa, situate at the commencement of the Syrtis Major. It is thought to be the present Cape Mesurata.

CEPHALENIA and CEPHALLENIA, an island in the Ionian sea, below Corcyra, whose inhabitants went with Ulysses to the Trojan war. It was known in the time of Homer by the names of Samos and Black Epirus (Σάμος μέλαινα); and had anciently four cities, named Same, Prone, Cranii, and Talæ. It is said to have derived its name from Cephalus, husband of Procris. It is now called Cephalonia and is the largest of the Ionian Islands, as they are termed. Strab. 10.—Plin 4, 12.—Homer. Il. 2, 631.—Thucyd. 2. 30.—Paus. 6 15.

CEPHALEN, a noble musician, son of Lampus. Paus 10 7.

CEPHALO an officer of Eumenes. Diod. 19.

CEPHALŒDIS and CEPHALŒDIUM, now Cephalu, a town on the northern coast of Sicily. Sil 14, 253.—Cic. in Verr. 3, 51.

CEPHALON, a native of Ionia, who flourished in the reign of Adrian. He was the author of a history of Troy; and he likewise wrote an epitome of general history from the time of Ninus to that of Alexander the Great, which he divided into nine books, distinguished by the names of the nine Muses, probably in imitation of Herodotus. He is said to have affected not to know the place of his nativity; being induced by ridiculous vanity, to imagine that different cities would contend for the honour of having given birth to him, as in the case of Homer. Dionys. Hal. 1, 11.—Suidas.

CEPHALUS, son of Deioneus, king of Thessaly, by Diomede, daughter of Xuthus, married Procris, daughter of Erechtheus, king of Athens. Aurora fell in love with him, and carried him away; but he refused to listen to her addresses, and was impatient to return to Procris. The goddess sent him back; and to try the fidelity of his wife she made him put on a different form, and he arrived at the house of Procris in the habit of a merchant. Procris was deaf to every offer; but she suffered herself to be seduced by the gold of this stranger, who discovered himself the very moment that Procris had yielded up her virtue. This circumstance so ashamed Procris, that she fled from her husband, and devoted herself to hunting in the island of Eubœa, where she was admitted among the attendants of Diana, who presented her with a dog always sure of his prey, and a dart which never missed its aim, and always returned to the hands of its mistress of its own accord. Some say that the dog was a present from Minos, because Procris had cured his wounds. After this Procris returned in disguise to Cephalus, who was willing to disgrace himself by some unnatural concessions to obtain the dog and the dart of Procris. Procris discovered herself at the moment that Cephalus showed himself faithless, and a reconciliation was easily made between them. They loved one another with more tenderness than before, and Cephalus received from his wife the presents of Diana. As he was particularly fond of hunting, he every morning repaired early to the woods, and when tired with excessive toil and fatigue, he laid himself down in the cool shade, earnestly calling for Aura, or the refreshing breeze. This ambiguous word was mistaken for the name of a mistress, and some cruel informer reported to the jealous Procris, that Cephalus daily paid a visit to a mistress, whose name was Aura. Procris too readily believed the information, and secretly followed her husband into the woods. According to his daily custom, Cephalus retired to enjoy the cooling shade, and called after Aura. At the name of Aura, Procris eagerly lifted up her head to see her expected rival. Her motion occasioned a rustling among the leaves of the bush that concealed her; and as Cephalus listened, he thought it to be a wild beast, and he let fly his unerring dart. Procris was struck to the heart, and instantly expired in the arms of her husband, confessing that ill-grounded jealousy was the cause of her death. After this Cephalus fled to Amphitryon, who, pitying his case, not only received him kindly, but made him governor of the island, which from him was called Cephalonia or Cephalenia. According to Apollodorus there were two persons of the name of Cephalus; one, son of Mercury and Herse carried away by Aurora, with whom he dwelt in Syria, and by whom he had a son called Tithonus. The other married Procris, and was the cause of the tragical event, mentioned above. Cephalus was father of Arcesius by Procris, and of Phæton, according to Hesiod, by Aurora. Ovid Met. 7, fab. 26.—Hygin fab. 189.—Apollod 3, 15.——A Corinthian lawyer, who assisted Timoleon in regulating the republic of Syracuse. Diod. 16.—Plut. in Tim.——A king of Epirus. Liv. 45, 26.——An orator frequently mentioned by Demosthenes.

CEPHEIS, a name given to Andromeda as daughter of Cephus. Ovid. A. A. 1 193.

CEPHENES, an ancient name of the Persians. Herod. 7, 61.——A name of the Æthiopians, from Cepheus one of their kings. Ovid. Met. 5, 1.

CEPHEUS, a king of Æthiopia, father of Andromeda, by Cassiope. He was one of the Argonauts, and was changed into a constellation after his death. Ovid. Met. 4, 669 &c. 12.—Pers. 4, 35. 8, 4.—Apollod. 1, 9. 2, 1, 4 et 7. 3, 8, mentions one, son of Aleus, and another, son of Belus. The former he makes king of Tegea, and father of Sterope, and says, that he, with his twelve sons, assisted Hercules in a war against Hippocoon, where they were killed. The latter he calls king of Æthiopia, and father of Andromeda.——A son of Lycurgus present at the chace of the Calydonian boar. Apollod. 1, 8

CEPHISIA, a part of Attica, through which the Cephisus flows. Plin. 4, 7.

CEPHISIADES, a patronymic of Etecoles, son of Andreus and Evippe, from the supposition of his being the son of the Cephisus. Paus. 9, 34.

CEPHISIDORUS, a tragic poet of Athens, in the age of Æschylus.——An historian, who wrote an account of the Phocian war.

CEPHISION, the commander of some troops sent by the Thebans to assist Megalopolis, &c. Diod. 16.

CEPHISODOTUS, a disciple of Isocrates, a great reviler of Aristotle, who wrote a book of proverbs. Athen. 2.

CEPHISUS and CEPHISSUS, a celebra ed river of Greece, that rises at the foot of Parnassus, close to Lilæa, and after traversing the whole of Phocis, enters Bœotia, where it empties itself into the lake Copais. The Graces were said to be particularly attached to this river, and are hence called the goddesses of the Cephisus. There were two other rivers of the same name in Attica, one of which commenced north of Decelea, and after flowing through the Attic plains, and passing under the long walls, discharged itself into the sea near Phalerum; and the other took its source north of Phyle, and joined the Sinus Saronicus near Sunium. Strab. 9.—Plin. 4, 7.—Paus. 9, 24.—Homer Il. 2. 29.—Lucan. 3, 175.—Ovid. Met. 1, 367. 3, 18.——A man changed into a sea monster, by Apollo, when lamenting the death of his grandson. Ovid Met 7, 388

CEPHREN, a king of Egypt, who built one of the pyramids. Diod. 1.

CEPIO, or CÆPIO, a man who, by a quarrel with Drusus, caused a civil war at Rome, &c.——Servilius, a Roman consul, who put an end to the war in Spain. He took gold from a temple, and for this sacrilege the rest of his life was always unfortunate. He was conquered by the Cimbrians, his goods were publicly confiscated, and he died at last in prison.

CERAMBUS, a man changed into a beetle, or, according to others, into a bird on mount Parnassus, by the nymphs, before the deluge. Ovid, Met 7, fab 9.

CERAMICUS, now Keramo, a bay of Caria, north of the peninsula of Doris, receiving its name from Ceramus. Plin. 5, 29.—Mela, 1, 16.——A principal division of the city of Athens, it derived its name from Ceramus, the son of Bacchus and Ariadne, or more probably from the word κέραμος, owing to the number of potteries which were formerly situated in it. It was divided into two parts, one of which was within the city, and contained a great number of temples, theatres, porticoes, &c.; the other was in the suburbs, was a public burying place, and contained the academy and several other buildings. Plin. 35, 12.—Cic. de Fatub. 1, 11. Ad Att 1, ep. 10.—Paus. 1, 3.

CERAMICUS, a place of Rome, where Cicero's house was built. Cic. ad Attic

CERAMUS, a small town and fortress of Caria, east of Halicarnassus. It is now called Keramo.

CERANTÆ, a people of Cyprus, said to have been metamorphosed into bulls.

CERASUS (untis), now Keresoun, a city of Pontus on the sea coast, south-west of Trapezus. It was built by the inhabitants of Sinope in Paphlagonia to whom it paid a yearly tribute. It was much improved by Pharnaces, grandfather of Mithridates Eupator, who gave it the name of Pharnacia, though some distinguish Cerasus from the city of Pharnacia. According to Ammianus Marcellinus, the cherry (cerasum) derives its name from Cerasus, having been brought from thence by Lucullus. Martial 22, 13.—Plin. 15, 25, 16, 18, 17, 11.—Mela, 1, 19.

CERATON, a celebrated altar in the temple of Apollo at Delos. It was totally erected with the horns of stags, without the assistance of cement; and as it was the work of the god who presided over the temple, it not only commanded the attention of worshippers, but passed for one of the wonders of the world. It was said to exist still in the time of Plutarch. Theseus, on his victorious return from Crete visited Delos and offered sacrifices on the Ceraton, round which he led in solemn dance the band of Athenians who had accompanied his expedition. Ovid. Heroid 20, 99.—Plut. de Ind. Anim. et in Thes.—Callimac. in Apoll

CERAUNIA and CERAUNII, large mountains of Epirus, extending far into the sea, and forming a promontory which divides the Ionian and Adriatic seas. They were so called from being frequently struck with lightning. They are the same as the Acroceraunia. (Vid. Acroceraunium.)——Mount Taurus is also called Ceraunius. Plin. 5, 27.

CERAUNII, mountains of Asia, opposite the Caspian sea. Mela, 1, 19

——CERAUNUS, a surname of Ptolemy II., from his boldness. C. Nep. Reg. 3.——A surname given by Clearchus, tyrant of Heraclea in Pontus, to his son, in contempt of Jupiter's thunder. Justin 16, 5.

CERBALUS, a river of Apulia, now Cervaro. Plin 3, 11.

CERBERUS, a dog of Pluto the fruit of Echidna's union with Typhon. He had fifty heads, according to Hesiod, and three according to other mythologists. He was stationed at the entrance into hell, as a watchful keeper, to prevent the living from entering the infernal regions, and the dead from escaping from their confinement. It was usual for those heroes, who in their lifetime visited Pluto's kingdom, to appease the barking mouths of Cerberus with a cake. Orpheus lulled him to sleep with his lyre; and Hercules dragged him from hell when he went to redeem Alcestis. Homer speaks of this animal, but does not mention either his name, or the nature of his form; Hesiod, therefore, is the first who calls him Cerberus. Virg. Æn. 5, 134. 6, 417.—Homer. Odyss. 11, 622.—Paus. 2, 31. 3, 25.—Hesiod. Theog 312.—Tibull 1, el. 10, 35.

CERCAPHUS, a son of Æolus.——A son of Sol, of great power at Rhodes. Diod. 5.

CERCASORUM, a town of Egypt, where the Nile divides itself into the Pelusian and Canopic mouths. Now El Akaas. Herod 2. 17

CERCÆS, one of the Oceanides. Hesiod. Theog 355.

CERCESTES, a son of Ægyptus and Phœnissa. Apollod. 2, 1.

CERCIDAS, a native of Megalopolis, who wrote Iambics. Athen. 10.—Ælian V. H. 13

CERCINA and CERCINNA, now Kerkenno, a small island of the Mediterranean, near the smaller Syrtis, on the coast of Africa. Sallust. 1. Ann. 1, 53.—Strab 17.—Liv. 33, 48.—Plin. 5, 7.——A mountain of Thrace, towards Macedonia. Thucyd 2, 98.

CERCINIUM, a town of Thessaly. Liv 31, 41

CERCIUS and RHETUS, charioteers of Castor and Pollux

CERCOPES, a people of Ephesus, made prisoners by Hercules. Apollod 2, 6.——The inhabitants of the island Pithecusa, changed into monkeys on account of their dishonesty. Ovid Met. 14. 91.

CERCOPS, a Milesian, author of a fabulous history, mentioned by Athenæus.——A Pythagorean philosopher.

CERCYON and CERCYONES, a king of Eleusis, son of Neptune, or, according to others, of Vulcan. He obliged all strangers to wrestle with him; and as he was a dexterous wrestler, they were easily conquered and put to death. After many cruelties, he challenged Theseus in wrestling and he was conquered and put to death by his antagonist. His daughter, Alope, was loved by Neptune, by whom she had a child. Cercyon exposed the child, called Hippothoon; but he was preserved by a mare, and afterwards placed upon his grandfather's throne by Theseus. Ovid. Met. 7. 439.—Hygin fab. 187.—Plut. in Thes.—Paus. 1, 5 et 39.

CERCYRA. Vid. Corcyra

CERDYLIUM, a place near Amphipolis. Thucyd. 5, 6.

CERÆLIA, festivals in honour of Ceres; first instituted at Rome by Memmius the ædile and celebrated on the 19th of April. Persons in mourning were not permitted to appear at the celebration; therefore they were not observed after the battle of Cannæ. They are the same as the Thesmophoria of the Greeks. Vid. Thesmophoria.

CERES, the goddess of corn and of harvests, was daughter of Saturn and Vesta. She had a daughter by Jupiter, whom she called Pherephata, fruit-bearing, and afterwards Proserpine. This daughter was carried away by Pluto, as she was gathering flowers in the plains near Enna. The rape of Proserpine was grievous to Ceres, who sought her all over Sicily; and when night came, she lighted two torches in the flames of mount Ætna, to continue her search by night all over the world. She at last found her veil near the fountain Cyane; but no intelligence could be received of the place of her concealment, till at last the nymph Arethusa informed her that her daughter had been carried away by Pluto. No sooner had Ceres heard this, than she flew to heaven with her chariot drawn by two dragons, and demanded of Jupiter the restoration of her daughter. The endeavours of Jupiter to soften her by representing Pluto as a powerful god, to become her son-in-law, proved fruitless, and the restoration was granted, provided Proserpine had not eaten any thing in the kingdom of Pluto Ceres upon this repaired to Pluto, but Proserpine had eaten the grains of a pomegranate which she had gathered as she walked over the Elysian fields, and Ascalaphus, the only one who had seen her, discovered it to make his court to Pluto. The return of Proserpine upon earth was therefore impracticable, but Ascalaphus, for his unsolicited information, was changed into an owl. (Vid Ascalaphus.) The grief of Ceres for the loss of her daughter was so great, that Jupiter granted Proserpine to pass six months with her mother, and the rest of the year with Pluto. During the inquiries of Ceres for her daughter, the cultivation of the earth was neglected, and the ground became barren, therefore, to repair the loss which mankind had suffered by her absence the goddess went to Attica, which was become the most desolate country in the world, and instructed Triptolemus of Eleusis in every thing which concerned agriculture. She taught him how to plough the ground, to sow and reap the corn, to make bread, and to take particular care of fruit trees. After these instructions, she gave him her chariot and commanded him to travel all over the world, and communicate his knowledge of agriculture to the rude inhabitants, who hitherto lived upon acorns and the roots of the earth. (Id. Triptolemus.) Her beneficence to mankind made Ceres respected. Sicily was supposed to be the favourite retreat of the goddess, and Diodorus says, that she and her daughter made their first appearance to mankind in Sicily, which Pluto received as a nuptial dowry from Jupiter when he married Proserpine. The Sicilians made a yearly sacrifice to Ceres, every man according to his abilities, and the fountain of Cyane, through which Pluto opened himself a passage with his trident, when carrying away Proserpine, was publicly honoured with an offering of bulls, and the blood of the victims was shed in the waters of the fountain. Besides these, other ceremonies were observed in honour of the goddesses who had so peculiarly favoured the island. The commemoration of the rape was celebrated about the beginning of the harvest, and that of the search of Ceres at the time that corn is sown in the earth. The latter festival continued six successive days; and during the celebration, the votaries of Ceres made use of some free and wanton expressions, as that language had made the goddess smile while melancholy for the loss of her daughter Anthe, which had been so eminently distinguished by the goddess, gratefully remembered her favours in the celebration of the Eleusinian mysteries (Id. Eleusinia.) Ceres also performed the duties of a legislator, and the Sicilians found the advantages of her salutary laws; hence, her surname of Thesmophora. She is the same as the Isis of the Egyptians, and her worship, it is said, was first brought into Greece by Erechtheus. She met with different adventures when she travelled over the earth, and the impudence of Stellio was severely punished. To avoid the importunities of Neptune, she changed herself into a mare; but the god took advantage of the metamorphosis, and from their union arose the horse Arion. (Vid Arion.) The birth of this monster so offended Ceres, that she withdrew herself from the sight of mankind; and the earth would have perished for want of her assistance, had not Pan discovered her in Arcadia, and given information of it to Jupiter. The Parcæ were sent by the god to comfort her, and at their persuasion she returned to Sicily, where her statues represented her veiled in black, with the head of a horse, and holding a dove in one hand, and in the other a dolphin. In their sacrifices the ancients offered Ceres a pregnant sow, as that animal often injures and destroys the productions of the earth. While the corn was yet in the grass, they offered her a ram, after the victim had been led three times round the field. Ceres was represented with a garland of ears of corn on her head, holding in one hand a lighted torch, and in the other a poppy, which was sacred to her. She appears as a country-woman mounted on the back of an ox, and carrying a basket on her left arm, and holding a hoe, and sometimes she rides in a chariot drawn by winged dragons. She was supposed to be the same as Rhea, Tellus, Cybele, Bona Dea, Berecynthia, of the Phrygians, the Isis of the Egyptians, the Adargatis of the Syrians, the Hera of the Arcadians, &c. She was said to be the mother of Plutus the god of riches, whom she bore to Jasius son of Jupiter and Electra in Arcadia. The Romans paid her great adoration, and her festivals were yearly celebrated by the Roman matrons in the month of April, during eight days. These matrons abstained during several days from the use of wine and every carnal enjoyment. They always bore lighted torches in commemoration of the goddess; and whoever came to these festivals without a previous initiation, was punished with death. Ceres is metaphorically called bread and corn, as the word Bacchus is frequently used to signify wine. Apollod. 1, 5. 2, 1. 3, 12 et 14.—Plaut. 1, 31. 2, 34. 3, 23. 8, 25, &c.—Diod. 1, &c.—Ovid. Fast. 4, 400, &c. Met. 5, fab. 7, 8, &c.—Claudian. de Rapt. Pros.—Cic. in Verr. 7.—Callimach. in Cer.—Liv. 29 et 31.—Stat. Theb. 12.—Dionys. Hal. 1. 34.—Hygin. P. A. 2.—Hesiod. Theog. 454, 912, et 970.—Virg. G. 1, 147 et 343.

CERIALIS ANICIUS, a consul elect, who wished a temple to be raised to Nero, as to a god, after the discovery of the Pisonian conspiracy, &c. Tacit. Ann. 15. 74.

CERILLA, or CERILLÆ, now Cirella Vecchia, a town of the Bruttii, south-west of Pandosia. Strab. 6.—Sil. Ital. 8, 580.

CERINTHUS, now Kumi, a town of Eubœa, situated on the Euripus, north-east of Chalcis. Its inhabitants went to the Trojan war, headed by Elphenor, son of Chalcodon. Homer. Il. 2, 54.—Strab. 10.—A beautiful youth, long the favourite of the Roman ladies, and especially of Sulpitia, &c. Horat. Sat. 1, 2, 51.—One of the early heretics from christianity.

CERMANUS, a place where Romulus was exposed by one of the servants of Amulius. Plut. in Romul.

CERNE, an island without the pillars of Hercules, on the western coast of Africa. Hanno says, in his Periplus, that it was at the same distance from the pillars of Hercules that these were from Carthage. Here he planted a colony, and it was always the depot of the Carthaginians on the Atlantic coast of Africa. It appears to have been the same with the modern island of Suana. Strab. 1.—Plin. 5 et 6.

CERON, a fountain of Histiæotis, whose waters rendered black all the sheep that drank of them. Plin. 3, 2

CEROPASADES, a son of Phrastes king of Persia, given as a hostage to Augustus.

CERPHERES, a king of Egypt, who is supposed to have built the smallest pyramid.

CERRETANI, a people of Spain, inhabiting the district now called Cerdagne in Catalonia. Plin. 3, 3.

CERRHÆI, a people of Greece, who profaned the temple of Delphi. Phut. in Sol

CERSOBLEPTES, a king of Thrace, conquered by Philip king of Macedonia. Polyæn. 7, 31.

CERTIMA, a town of Celtiberia, which was taken by Gracchus Liv 40, 47.

CERTONIUM, a town of Asia Minor, between Adramyttium and the Caicus. Xenoph. Anab 7, 8, 4.

CERVARIUS, a Roman knight, who conspired with Piso against Nero. Tacit. Ann. 15, 50.

P. CERVIUS, an officer under Verres. Cic. in Verr 5, 44.

CERYCES, a sacerdotal family at Athens Thucyd. 8, 53.

CERYNEA, a town of Achaia, north west of Bura, whither the inhabitants of Mycenæ retired when their city was destroyed by the Argives Paus. 7, 25.

CESELLIUS BALBUS, a turbulent Carthaginian, who dreamt of money, and persuaded Nero that immense treasures had been deposited by Dido in a certain place, which he described. Inquiry was made, and when no money was found, Cesellius destroyed himself. Tacit. Ann. 16, 1, &c.

CESENNIA, an infamous prostitute, born of an illustrious family at Rome. Juv. 6, 135.

CESTIUS, an Epicurean of Smyrna, who taught rhetoric at Rhodes, in the age of Cicero.——A governor of Syria. Tacit. H. 5 ——Severus, an informer under Nero. Tacit. H. 4.——Proculus, a man acquitted of an accusation of embezzling the public money. Id Ann. 30 ——A bridge at Rome.

CESTRINA, a small district of Epirus. Paus 2, 23.

CESTRINUS, a son of Helenus and Andromache. After his father's death, he settled in Epirus, above the river Thyamis, and called the country Cestrina. Paus. 1, 11.

CETES, a king of Egypt, the same as Proteus Diod. 1.

CETHEGUS, the surname of one of the branches of the Cornelii.——Marcus, an eloquent orator called from his persuasive powers Suadæ Medulla. He was consul in the second Punic war Cic. in Brut. 15.——A tribune at Rome, of the most corrupted morals, who joined Catiline in his conspiracy against the state, and was commissioned to murder Cicero. He was apprehended, and, with Lentulus, put to death by the Roman senate. Phut. in Cic &c.——A Trojan, killed by Turnus. Virg. Æn. 12, 513.——P Corn. a powerful Roman, who embraced the party of Marius against Sylla. His mistress had obtained such an ascendancy over him, that she distributed his favours; and Lucullus was not ashamed to court her smiles, when he wished to be appointed general against Mithridates.——A senator put to death for adultery, under Valentinian.

CETII, a people of Mysia, who probably took their name from the river Cetius, which traversed their country, and discharged itself into the Adriatic.

CETIUS, a river of Mysia.——A ridge of mountains in Noricum, forming its eastern boundary. According to Busching it extended from near the source of the Save towards the Danube, about nine British miles on the west of Vienna. It is now called Kahlenberg.

CETO, a daughter of Pontus and Terra, who married Phorcys, by whom she had the three Gorgons, &c. Hesiod. Theog. 237.—Lucan. 9, 646.

CEUS and CÆUS, a son of Cœlus and Terra, who married Phœbe, by whom he had Latona and Asteria. Hesiod Theog. 135.—Virg Æn 4, 179 ——The father of Trœzen. Homer. Il. 2, 334.

CEYX, a king of Trachinia, son of Lucifer and husband of Alcyone. He was drowned as he went to consult the oracle of Claros. His wife was apprised of his misfortune in a dream, and found his dead body washed on the sea shore. They were both changed into birds, called Alcyons. (Vid Alcyone) Ovid Met. 11, 587. Hesiod. 18, 81.—Paus 1, 32. According to Apollod. 1, 7, 2, 7, the husband of Alcyone and the king of Trachinia were two different persons.

CHABERIS, a river of India, rising in the Western Ghauts, and after traversing the country of the Bati, or Coimbatoor, running with a south easterly course past Tallara, or Tanjore, into the bay of Bengal, which it enters by various mouths opposite the island of Ceylon. It is now the Cauvery.——A town of India, at the northern mouth of the river Chaberis, now Cauverypatam.

CHABINUS, a mountain of Arabia Felix. Diod 3.

CHABÔRAS or, as Strabo and Ammianus Marcellinus call it, Aborras, a river of Mesopotamia, rising in the lower part of mount Masius, and flowing with a circuitous course into the Euphrates near the town of Circesium It is called the Araxes by Xenophon, in his account of the expedition of the younger Cyrus. It is now the Khabour.

CHABRIA, a village of Egypt, near Pelusium.

CHABRIAS, an Athenian general and philosopher, who chiefly signalised himself when he assisted the Bœotians against Agesilaus. In this celebrated campaign, he ordered his soldiers to put one knee upon the ground, and firmly to rest their spears on the other, and to cover themselves with their shields, by which means he daunted the enemy, and had a statue raised to his honour in that same posture. He assisted also Nectanebus, king of Egypt and conquered the whole island of Cyprus; but he at last fell a sacrifice to his excessive courage, and despised to fly from his ship, when he had it in his power to save his life like his companions. B.C 376. C. Nep. in vita.—Diod. 16.—Plut. in Phoc.

CHABRYIS, a king of Egypt. Diod. 1.

CHÆREA, the name of one of Terence's enacters in his Eunuch.

CHÆREAS an Athenian, who wrote on agriculture.——An officer at Rome, who murdered Caligula, A. D. 41, to prevent the infamous death which was prepared against himself. In destroying the tyrant, Chæreas hoped to rouse his countrymen to assert their ancient liberties; but his efforts were vain, and the elevation of Claudius to the throne was followed by the death of the murderer and of his associates.——An Athenian, &c. Thucyd. 8, 74, &c.

CHÆRÆMON, a comic poet, and disciple of Socrates ——A stoic, who wrote on the Egyptian priests.

CHÆRÊPHON, a tragic poet of Athens, in the age of Philip of Macedonia

CHÆRESTRÂTA, the mother of Epicurus, descended of a noble family.

CHÆRINTHUS, a beautiful youth, &c. Horat. Serm 1, 2, 81.

CHÆRIPPUS, an extortioner, &c. Juv. 8, 96.

CHÆRO, the founder of Chæronea. Plut. in Syll

CHÆRONIA, CHÆRONEA, and CHERRONEA, a city of Bœotia, anciently called Arne, and situate on the Cephissus. It was memorable for the defeat of the Athenians by the Bœotians, B.C 447, and much more for their irretrievable defeat by Philip, B C 338, which put an end to the liberties of Greece. Here also Sylla defeated Archelaus, the lieutenant of Mithridates, with an army greatly inferior in number. It was the birth-place of Plutarch. It is now Kapourna Paus. 9, 40 —Plut. in Pelop &c —Strab 9.

CHALÆON, a port of the Locri Ozolæ, southwest of Crissa.

CHALCÆA, a town of Caria.——Of Phœnicia.

CHALCEA, an island with a town near Rhodes. Plin 5, 3 ——A festival at Athens. Vid Panathenæa.

CHALCÊDON and CHALCEDÔNIA, now Kadikeui, an ancient city of Bithynia, opposite Byzantium, built by a colony from Megara, seventeen years before the founding of Byzantium It was first called Procerastes, and afterwards Colpusa. Its situation, however, was so improperly chosen, that it was called the city of blind men, intimating the inconsiderate plan of the founders, in overlooking the more advantageous position of Byzantium. Strab. 7.—Plin. 5, 32.—Mela, 1, 19.

CHALCIDÊNE, a part of Syria, very fruitful. Plin 5, 24.

CHALCIDENSES, the inhabitants of the isthmus between Teos and Erythræ ——A people near the Phasis.

CHALCIDEUS, a commander of the Lacedæmonian fleet, killed by the Athenians, &c. Thucyd 8 8.

CHALCIDICE, a district of Macedonia, lying between the Sinus Strymonicus and Thermaicus. It comprehended three peninsulas, Acte, Sithonia, and Phlegra or Pallene.——Another in Syria

CHALCIDÎCUS, (of Chalcis), an epithet applied to Cumæ in Italy, as built by a colony from Chalcis Virg. Æn. 6, 17.

CHALCIOLUS, a surname of Minerva, because she had a temple at Chalcis in Eubœa, or because she had a brazen (χαλκεὸς) altar in one of her temples She was also called Chalcioecis and Chalcidica; and some of her festivals celebrated at Sparta also bore the same name. C. Nepos, 4 —Ælian V. H 9, 12.—Liv 35 36.

CHALCIOPE, a daughter of Æetes king of Colchis, who married Phryxus son of Athamas, who had fled to her father's court for protection She had some children by Phryxus and she preserved her life from the avarice and cruelty of her father, who had murdered her husband to obtain the golden fleece. (Vid. Phryxus.) Ovid. Heroid 17, 232.—Hygin. fab. 14, &c.——The mother of Tarssalus by Hercules. Apollod. 2, 7.——The daughter of Rhexenor, who married Ægeus. Id. 3, 1.

CHALCIS, now Egripo, the chief city of the island of Eubœa, situate in that part which is nearest to Bœotia. It was founded, according to some authors, by an Ionian colony from Athens, after the siege of Troy; but Homer speaks of it as existing before this event. The inhabitants were renowned for their skill in navigation, but they were very generally reproached on account of the dissoluteness of their manners. Chalcis was one of the three cities which Philip, son of Demetrius, used to call "the fetters of Greece." Strab 10.—Hom. Il. 2, 538.—Cic. N. D. 3, 19. ——Another of Macedonia ——Another of Ætolia, now Galata Hom. Il. 2, 640.——Another of Syria, now Kinnesrin.

CHALCITIS, a country of Ionia. Paus. 7, 5.

CHALCODON, a son of Egyptus, by Arabia. Apollod 2, 1.——A man of Cos, who wounded Hercules Id. 2, 7.——The father of Elephenor, one of the Grecian chiefs in the Trojan war. Hom Il. 2, 17.——A man who assisted Hercules in his war against Augias Paus 8, 15.

CHALCUS, a man made governor of Cyzicus by Alexander Polyæn

CHALDÆA, a country of Asia, towards Arabia and the Persian gulf and west of the mouth of the Tigris and Euphrates. Some writers make it a part of Babylonia. The Chaldæans, who are called in Hebrew Chasdim, were a Shemitic tribe. They were famous for their skill in the sciences, especially in astronomy. They are said to have recorded observations of the heavenly bodies above 4000 years before the Christian era. They were also soothsayers, and pretended to judge of future events by the study of the stars. Cic. de Div. 1, 1 —Diod. 2 —Strab. 2.—Plin. 6, 26.

CHALDÆI, the inhabitants of Chaldæa.

CHALEB, a herald of Busiris, put to death by Hercules. Apollod 2, 5.

CHALESTRA, a town of Macedonia, near the mouth of the Axius. Herod 7, 123.

CHALONITIS, a country of Media.

CHALYBES and CALYBES, a people of Asia Minor, in the south-east part of Pontus, once very powerful, and possessed of a great extent of country, abounding in iron mines, where the inhabitants worked naked. The Calybes attacked the ten thousand in their retreat, and behaved with much spirit and courage They were partly conquered by Crœsus, king of Lydia. They were sometimes called Chaldæi. Virg. Æn. 8, 421.—Strab. 12, &c.—Apollon 2, 375 —Xenoph. Anab. 4, &c.—Herod. 1, 28.—Justin 44, 3.

CHALYBON, now supposed to be Aleppo, a town of Syria, which gave the name of Chalybonitis to the neighbouring country. Vid. Berœa CHALYBONÎTIS, a country of Syria, so famous for its wines that the kings of Persia drank no other.

CHALYBS, now Parga, a river of Spain, where Justin 44, 3, places the people called Calybes.

CHAMAVI, a people of Germany, south-east of the Frisii. Tacit. in Germ.

CHANE, a river between Armenia and Albania, falling into the Caspian sea.

CHAON, a mountain of Peloponnesus. ——A son of Priam. Vid Chaonia.

CHAONES, a people of Epirus

CHAONIA, a mountainous part of Epirus, which receives its name from Chaon a son of Priam, inadvertently killed by his brother Helenus. There was a wood near, where doves (Chaonides aves) were said to deliver oracles. The words Chaonius victus are by ancient authors applied to acorns, the food of the first inhabitants. Lucan. 6, 426.—Claudian. de Pros. rapt 3, 47.—Virg. Æn 3, 335.—Propert. 1, el. 9.—Ovid. A. A. 1.

CHAONITIS, a country of Assyria.

CHAOS, a rude and shapeless mass of matter, and confused assemblage of inactive elements, which, as the poets suppose, pre-existed the formation of the world, and from which the universe was formed by the hand and power of a superior being. This doctrine was first established by Hesiod, from whom the succeeding poets have copied it; and it is probable that it was obscurely drawn from the account of Moses, by being copied from the annals of Sanchoniathon, whose age is fixed antecedent to the siege of Troy. Chaos was deemed, by some, as one of the oldest of the gods, and invoked as one of the infernal deities Virg. Æn. 4, 510.—Ovid. Met. 1, fab. 1.—Lucret. 1.—Diod. 1.

CHARADRA, a town of Phocis, situate on a high and rugged rock, about 20 stadia from Lilæa. Herod. 8, 33.

CHARADROS, a river of Phocis, which passed near the town of Charadra, and soon after discharged itself into the Cephisus. Stat. Theb 6, 46.

CHARADRUS, a place of Argos, where military causes were tried. Thucyd. 5, 60.

CHARÆADAS, an Athenian general sent with twenty ships to Sicily during the Peloponnesian war. He died 426 B.C &c. Thucyd. 3, 86.

CHARAX, a town of Armenia ——A philosopher of Pergamus, who wrote a history of Greece in 40 books.

CHARAXES and CHARAXUS, a Mitylenean, brother to Sappho, who became passionately fond of the courtezan Rhodope, upon whom he squandered all his possessions, and reduced himself to poverty, and the necessity of piratical excursions. Ovid. Herod. 15, 117.—Herod. 2, 135, &c.

CHARAXUS, one of the Centaurs who was present at the marriage of Pirithous. He was attacked by Rhœtus, who struck his head with a burning brand, and set his hair on fire, so that he died in the most excruciating torments. Ovid. Met. 12, 272.

CHARES, an Athenian general ——A statuary of Lindus, who was twelve years employed in making the famous Colossus at Rhodes. Plin. 34, 7.——A man who wounded Cyrus when fighting against his brother Artaxerxes.——An historian of Mitylene, who wrote a life of Alexander.——An Athenian, who fought with Darius against Alexander. Curt 4, 5.——A river of Peloponnesus. Plut in Arat.

CHARICLES, one of the thirty tyrants set over Athens by the Lacedæmonians. Xenoph. Memor. 1.—Arist Polit. 5, 6 ——A famous physician under Tiberius. Tacit. Ann. 6, 50.

CHARICLIDES, an officer of Dionysius the younger, whom Dion gained to dethrone the tyrant. Diod. 16.

CHARICLO, the mother of Tiresias, greatly favoured by Minerva. Apollod. 3, 6 ——A daughter of Apollo, who married the centaur Chiron. Ovid. Met. 2, 635.

CHARIDEMUS, a Roman exposed to wild beasts. Martial. 1, ep. 44 ——An Athenian banished by Alexander, and killed by Darius, &c.

CHARILA, a festival observed once in nine years by the Delphians. It owes its origin to this circumstance: In a great famine the people of Delphi assembled and applied to their king to relieve their wants. He accordingly distributed the little corn which he had among the noblest; but as a poor little girl, called Charila, begged the king with more than common earnestness, he beat her with his shoe, and the girl, unable to bear his treatment, hanged herself in her girdle. The famine increased; and the oracle told the king, that to relieve his people, he must atone for the murder of Charila. Upon this a festival was instituted, with expiatory rites. The king presided over this institution, and distributed pulse and corn to such as attended. Charila's image was brought before the king, who struck it with his shoe; after which it was carried to a desolate place, where they put a halter round its neck, and buried it where Charila was buried. Plut. in Quæst Græc.

CHARILAUS and CHARILLUS a son of Polydectes king of Sparta, educated and protected by his uncle Lycurgus. He made war against Argos, and attacked Tegea. He was taken prisoner, and released on promising that he would cease from war, an engagement which he soon broke. He died in the 64th year of his age Paus 2, 36, 6, 4.——A Spartan who changed the monarchical power into an aristocracy. Arist. Polit. 5, 12. ——A man of Palæpolis who betrayed his native city into the hands of Publ. Philo the Roman general Liv. 8, 25.

CHARILLUS, one of the ancestors of Leutychides. Herod. 6, 131.

CHARIS, a goddess among the Greeks surrounded with pleasures, graces, and delight. She was the wife of Vulcan. Homer Il. 18, 382.

CHARISIA, a town of Arcadia. Paus. 8, 3 ——A festival in honour of the Graces, with dances which continued all night. He who continued awake the longest was rewarded with a cake.

CHARISIUS, an orator at Athens. Cic. in B. 83

CHARISTIA, festivals at Rome, celebrated on the 20th of February, by the distribution of mutual presents, with the intention of reconciling friends and relations. Val. Max. 2, 1.—Ovid Fast. 2.

CHARITES and GRATIÆ, the Graces, daughters of Venus by Jupiter or Bacchus, are three in number, Aglaia, Thalia, and Euphrosyne. They were the constant attendants of Venus and they were represented as three young, beautiful, and modest virgins, all holding one another by the hand. They presided over kindness, and all good offices, and their worship was the same as that of the nine muses, with whom they had a temple in common. They were generally represented naked, because kindnesses ought to be done with sincerity and candour. The moderns explain the allegory of their holding their hands joined, by observing, that there ought to be a perpetual and never-ceasing intercourse of kindness and benevolence among friends. Their youth denotes the constant remembrance that we ought ever to have of kindnesses received: and their virgin purity and innocence teach us, that acts of benevolence ought to be done without any expectation of restoration, and that we ought never to suffer others or ourselves to be guilty of base or impure favours. Homer speaks only of two Graces, one of whom he calls the wife of Vulcan, and the other Pasithea; and the Lacedæmonians also worshipped only two, Cleta and Phaena. Theocr. Id. in Ch.—Paus. 9, 35 —

Hesiod. Th. 64 et 907.—Orpheus, Hymn.—Apollod. 1.—Hygin. præf. fab.—Homer. Il. 14.—Eurip. in Here. Fur. 673.—Horat. 1, od. 30, 5.—Seneca de Benef. 1, 4.—Aul. Gell. 14, 11.

CHARITON, a Greek author, was a native of Aphrodisium, and lived in the fourth century. He wrote a romance called "The Loves of Chæreas and Callirhoe," which has been much admired for its elegance and the originality of the characters it describes. There is a very learned edition of Chariton, by Reiske, with D'Orville's notes, 2 vols. 4to, Amst. 1750.

CHARMADAS, a philosopher of uncommon memory. Plin. 7, 24.

CHARME and CARME, the mother of Britomartis by Jupiter.

CHARMIDES, a Lacedæmonian, sent by his king to quell a sedition in Crete. Paus 3, 2.——A boxer. Id. 6, 7.——A philosopher of the third academy, B.C. 95.

CHARMINUS, an Athenian general, who defeated the Peloponnesians. Thucyd. 8, 42.——CHARMIONE, a servant maid of Cleopatra, who stabbed herself after the example of her mistress. Plut in Anton.

CHARMIS, a physician of Marseilles, in Nero's age, who used cold baths for his patients, and prescribed medicines contrary to those of his contemporaries. Plin. 21, 1.

CHARMOSYNA, a festival in Egypt. Plut. de Isid.

CHARMUS, a poet of Syracuse. His compositions were collected by Clearchus the disciple of Aristotle, but only a few scattered fragments are to be found in Athenæus.

CHARON, a Theban, who received into his house Pelopidas and his friends, when they delivered Thebes from tyranny, &c. Plut. in Pelop.——An historian of Lampsacus, son of Pythus, who wrote two books on Persia, besides other treatises, B.C. 479.——An historian of Naucratis, who wrote a history of his country, and of Egypt.——A Carthaginian writer, &c.——A god of hell, son of Erebus and Nox, who conducted the souls of the dead in a boat over the rivers Styx and Acheron to the infernal regions, for an obolus. Such as had not been honoured with a funeral were not permitted to enter his boat, without previously wandering on the shore for one hundred years. If any living person presented himself to cross the Stygian lake, he could not be admitted before he showed Charon a golden bough, which he had received from the Sybil; and Charon was imprisoned for one year, because he had ferried over, against his own will, Hercules without this passport. Charon is represented as an old robust man, with a hideous countenance, long white beard, and piercing eyes. His garment is ragged and filthy, and his forehead is covered with wrinkles. As all the dead were obliged to pay a small piece of money for their admission, it was always usual, among the ancients, to place under the tongue of the deceased a piece of money for Charon. This fable of Charon and his boat is borrowed from the Egyptians, whose dead were carried across a lake, where sentence was passed on them, and according to their good or bad actions, they were honoured with a splendid burial, or left unnoticed in the open air. (Vid. Acherusia.) Diod. 1.—Senec. in Herc. Fur. act. 3, 760.—Virg. Æn. 6, 298, &c.

CHARONDAS, a celebrated legislator of the Thurians, and a native of Catana in Sicily, flourished about 444 B.C. He forbade any citizen to appear armed in the assembly of the people; but one day going thither in haste, without thinking of his sword, he was no sooner made to observe his mistake, than he plunged it into his breast. Val. Max. 6, 5.

CHARONIUM, a cave near Nysa, where the sick were supposed to be delivered from their disorders by certain superstitious solemnities.

CHARONTUS, an epithet for caves, some of which are found in Italy and in other parts of the world, where the air is so loaded with a poisonous vapour that animals cannot live in them even for a few moments.

CHAROPS and CHAROPES, a Trojan killed by Ulysses. Homer. Il.——A powerful Epirot, who assisted Flaminius when making war against Philip the king of Macedonia, and sent his son to Rome to receive and finish there his education. Liv. 32, 6 et 11. 43, 5.—Plut. in Flam.——The first decennial archon at Athens. Paterc. 1, 8.

CHARYBDIS, a dangerous whirlpool on the coast of Sicily, opposite another whirlpool called Scylla, on the coast of Italy. It was very dangerous to sailors, and it proved fatal to part of the fleet of Ulysses. The exact situation of the Charybdis is not discovered by the moderns, as no whirlpool sufficiently tremendous is now found to correspond with the descriptions of the ancients. The words became a proverb, to show that in our eagerness to avoid one evil, we often fall into a greater. The name of Charybdis was properly bestowed on mistresses who repay affection and tenderness with ingratitude. It is supposed that Charybdis was an avaricious woman, who stole the oxen of Hercules, for which theft she was struck with thunder by Jupiter, and changed into a whirlpool.—Lycophr. in Cass.—Homer Odyss. 12.—Propert. 3, el. 11.—Ital. 14.—Ovid. in Ibin. de Ponto, 4, el. 10. Amor. 2, el. 16.—Virg. Æn. 3, 420.

Incidit in Scyllam qui vult vitare Charybdim,

CHAUCI, a people of Germany, north east of the Frisii, celebrated for their love of justice. They were divided into Majores and Minores. The latter dwelt between the Amisia, or Ems, and the Visurgis, or Weser; the former between the Visurgis and the Albis, or Elbe. Tacit. Germ. 35.

CHAURUS. Vid. Caurus.

CHELÆ, a Greek word, (χηλαὶ), signifying claws, which is applied to the Scorpion, one of the signs of the zodiac, and lies according to the ancients, contiguous to Virgo. Virg. G. 1, 33.

CHELIDON, a mistress of Verres. Cic. in Verr. 1, [illegible] 10.

CHELIDONIA, a festival at Rhodes, in which the boys walked from door to door, and sang a song called Chelidonisma, because it was begun with an invocation to the chelidon, or swallow. Athen. 8.——The Wind Favonius was called the Chelidonia, from the 5th of the ides of February to the 7th of the calends of March, the time when swallows first made their appearance. Plin. 2, 47.

CHELIDONIÆ, now Kelidoni a group of islands, south of the Sacrum Promontorium, upon the coast of Lycia, very dangerous to mariners. Dionys. Perieg. 500.—Plin. 5, 27 et 31.—Liv. 33, 41.

CHELIDONIS, a daughter of king Leon, thrice married Cleonymus, and committed adultery with Acrotatus. Plut. in Pyrr.

CHELIDÓNIUM PROMONTORIUM, probably the same with the Sacrum Promontorium.

CHELÓNE, a nymph changed into a tortoise by Mercury, for not being present at the nuptials of Jupiter and Juno, and condemned to perpetual silence for having ridiculed these deities CHELÓNIS, a daughter of Leonidas king of Sparta, who married Cleombrotus. She accompanied her father, whom her husband had expelled, and soon after went into banishment with her husband, who had in his turn been expelled by Leonidas. Plut in Agid. et Cleom.

CHELONOPHÁGI, a people of Caramania, who not only used the flesh of tortoises for food, but likewise covered their houses with the shells of these animals. There was also a people of the same name in Æthiopia. Plin 6, 23.

CHEMMIS, an island at the Sebennytic mouth of the Nile, situate on a deep lake adjoining the city of Butus. It was covered with palm trees, and distinguished by a temple of Apollo. Herod 2, 156.——A town of Upper Egypt, on the east bank of the Nile. Its Greek name is Panopolis, and Chemmis its Egyptian name, is still discovered in that of Ekhmin. (Vid. Panopolis.) Herod. 2, 91.

CHENION, a mountain in Asia Minor, from which the 10,000 Greeks first saw the sea. Diod. 14.

CHEOPS and CHEOSPES, a king of Egypt, after Rhampsinitus, who built famous pyramids, upon which 1060 talents were expended only in supplying the workmen with leeks, parsley, garlic, and other vegetables. Herod. 2, 124.

CHEPHREN, a brother of Cheops, who also built a pyramid. The Egyptians had so strong an aversion to the memory of these two royal brothers, that they would never mention their names, but always attributed their pyramids to one Philitis, a shepherd who fed his cattle in those parts. Herod 2, 127.

CHERÆMOCRATES, an artist who built Diana's temple at Ephesus, &c. Strab 14.

CHERISÓPHUS a commander of 800 Spartans, in the expedition which Cyrus undertook against his brother Artaxerxes. Diod 14.

CHERONÆA. Vid. Charonea.

CHERÓPHON, a tragic writer of Athens, in the age of Philip. Among his compositions there is a tragedy mentioned under the title of Heraclides. The application with which he studied had such effect upon his constitution, that from his paleness he was surnamed Byzinos. Philostr. vita.

CHERRONÉSUS. Vid Chersonesus.

CHERSIAS, an Orchomenian, [illegible] killed to Periander by Calo. Pausanias praises some of his poetry, 9, 38; the greater part of which was already lost, though partially preserved in the history of the Orchomenians CHERSIDAMAS, a Trojan, killed by Ulysses in the Trojan war. Ovid Met. 13, 259.

CHERSIPHRO, an architect, whose abilities were exercised in the construction of Diana's temple at Ephesus Plin 36, 14.

CHERSONÉSUS, a Greek word, from χέρσος, land, and νῆσος, an island, which signifies the same as Peninsula; or a tract of land encompassed by water on all sides, except where it is joined to the mainland by a narrow neck or isthmus. There were many of these among the ancients, of which these five were the most celebrated: one called Thracia, or Chersonesus; one called Taurica at the south of Thrace and west of the Hellespont, where Miltiades led a colony of Athenians, and built a wall across the isthmus. From its isthmus to its further shores, it measured 420 stadia, extending between the bay of Melas and the Hellespont. The third called Taurica, now Crim Tartary, was situate near the Palus Mæotis. The fourth, called Cimbrica, now Jutland, is in the northern parts of Germany; and the fifth, called Aurea now Malaya, lies in India, beyond the Ganges. Herod. 6, 33. 7, 58.—Liv. 31, 16.—*Cic.ad Br.*2.——Also a peninsula near Alexandria in Egypt. Hirt Alex. 10.

CHERUSCI, a people of Germany, between the Visurgis, or Weser, and the Albis, or Elbe, southeast of the Chauci. They were brave and powerful, but degenerated so far, in consequence of defeats which they suffered from the Romans and the Longobardi as to become subject to the latter people. Tacit.—Ger. B. G. 6, 9.

CHIDÓRUS, a river of Macedonia near Thessalonica, not sufficiently large to supply the army of Xerxes with water Herod 7, 127

CHILIARCHUS, a great officer of state at the court of Persia. C. Nep. in Conon.

CHILIUS and CHILÉUS, an Arcadian, who advised the Lacedæmonians, when Xerxes was in Greece, not to desert the common cause of their country. Herod. 9, 9.

CHILO a Spartan philosopher, son of Damagetus. He was called one of the seven wise men of Greece, and he distinguished himself by not only the delivery of excellent moral precepts, but by a temperate and exemplary life. He was short in his manner of speaking, from whence the epithet of Chilonian is applied to concise laconic expressions. The elegies he wrote did not amount to 200 verses; and nothing is extant besides his moral sentences and a letter to Periander, preserved by Diogenes Laertius. Three of his maxims, as conveying the purest morality, were inscribed in gold letters in the temple at Delphi, and fully deserved immortality. They were, Know thyself Desire nothing too much—and Misery is the sure companion of debt and strife. He died through excess of joy, in the arms of his son, who had obtained a victory at Olympia, B.C. 597, and the crowded assembly who assisted at the celebration, honoured the memory of the philosopher by attending his funeral. Laert 1, 72.—A. Gell. 1, 3.—Plin 7, 33.——One of the Ephori at Sparta, B C. 556

CHILONIS, the wife of Theopompus king of Sparta. Polyæn. 8.

CHIMÆRA, a celebrated monster, sprung from Echidna and Typhon, which had three heads, that of a lion, of a goat, and of a dragon, and continually vomited flames. The foreparts of its body were those of a lion, the middle was that of a goat, and the hinder parts were those of a dragon. It generally lived in Lycia, about the reign of Jobates, by whose orders Bellerophon, mounted on the horse Pegasus, overcame it. This fabulous tradition is explained by the recollection that there was a burning mountain in Lycia, called Chimæra, whose top was the resort of lions, on account of its desolate wilderness; the middle, which was fruitful, was covered with goats; and at the bottom the marshy ground abounded with serpents. Bellerophon is said to have conquered the Chimæra because he first made his habitation on that mountain. Plutarch says, that it was the captain of some pirates, who adorned their ship with the images of a lion, a goat, and a dragon. From the union of the Chimæra with Orthes, sprung the Sphinx, and the lion of Nemæa. Homer. Il. 6, 181.—Hesiod. Theog. 323.—Apollod. 1, 9. 2, 3.—Lucret. 5, 903.—Ovid. Met. 9, 646.—Virg. Æn. 6, 288.——One of the ships in the fleet of Æneas. Virg. Æn. 5, 118.

CHIMARUS, a river of Argolis. Paus. 2, 36.

CHIMERIUM, a mountain of Phthiotis, in Thessaly. Plin. 4, 8.

CHIOMARA, a woman who cut off the head of a Roman tribune when she had been taken prisoner, &c. Plut. de Virt. Mul.

CHION, a Greek writer, whose epistles were dited. cum notis, Coberg, 8vo, Lips. 1765.

CHIONE, a daughter of Daedalion, of whom Apollo and Mercury became enamoured. To enjoy her company, Mercury lulled her to sleep with his caduceus, and Apollo, in the night, under the form of an old woman, obtained the same favours as Mercury. From this embrace Chione became mother of Philammon and Autolycus, the former of whom, as being son of Apollo, became an excellent musician; and the latter was equally notorious for his robberies, of which his father Mercury was the patron. Chione grew so proud of her commerce with the gods, that she even preferred her beauty to that of Diana, for which impiety she was killed by the goddess, and changed into a hawk. Ovid. Met. 11, fab. 6.——A daughter of Boreas and Orythia, who had Eumolpus by Neptune. She threw her son into the sea, but he was preserved by his father. Apollod. 3, 15.—Paus. 1, 38.——A famous prostitute. Martial. 3, ep. 34.

CHIONIDES, an Athenian poet, supposed by some to be the inventor of comedy.

CHIOS, now Scio, an island in the Ægean sea, between Lesbos and Samos, on the coast of Asia Minor. According to Strabo, it is 900 stadia in circuit. It anciently bore the names of Æthalia, Macris, and Pityusa, but the most prevalent name was Chios, derived from the Greek word χίων, snow, because its mountains were often covered with it, or from the Syriac term signifying mastic, with which the island abounds. It was well inhabited, and could once equip 100 ships; and its chief town called Chios had a beautiful harbour, which could contain eighty ships. The wine of this island, so much celebrated by the ancients, is still in general esteem. Chios was one of the places which laid claim to the honour of having given birth to Homer. Plut. de Virt. Mul.—Horat. Od. 3, 19, 5. Sat. 1, 10, 34.—Paus. 7, 4.—Mela, 2, 2.—Strab. 2.

CHIRON, a centaur, half a man and half a horse, son of Philyra and Saturn, who had changed himself into a horse, to escape the inquiries of his wife Rhea. Chiron was famous for his knowledge of music, medicine, and shooting. He taught mankind the use of plants and medicinal herbs; and he instructed, in all the polite arts, the greatest heroes of his age, such as Achilles, Æsculapius, Hercules, Jason, Peleus, Æneas, &c. He was wounded in the knee by a poisoned arrow, by Hercules, in his pursuit of the centaurs. Hercules flew to his assistance; but as the wound was incurable, and the cause of the most excruciating pains, Chiron begged Jupiter to deprive him of immortality. His prayers were heard, and he was placed by the god among the constellations, under the name of Sagittarius. Hesiod. in Scuto—Homer. Il. 11.—Paus. 3, 18. 5, 19. 9, 31.—Ovid. Met. 2, 676.—Apollod. 2, 5. 3, id.—Horat. epod. 13.

CHLOE, a surname of Ceres at Athens. Her yearly festivals, called Chloeia, were celebrated with much mirth and rejoicing, and a ram was always sacrificed to her. The name of Chloe is supposed to bear the same signification as Flora, so often applied to the goddess of corn. The name, from its signification (χλόη, herba virens,) has generally been applied to women possessed of beauty, and of simplicity. Paus. 1, 22.

CHLORÆUS, a priest of Cybele, who came with Æneas into Italy, and was killed by Turnus. Virg. Æn. 11, 768.——Another, &c.

CHLORIS, the goddess of flowers, who married Zephyrus. She is the same as Flora. Ovid. Fast. 5.——A daughter of Amphion, son of Jasus and Persephone, who married Neleus king of Pylos, by whom she had one daughter and twelve sons, who all, except Nestor, were killed by Hercules. Homer. Odyss. 11, 280.—Paus. 2, 21. 9, 36.——A prostitute, &c. Horat. 3, od. 15.

CHLORUS, a river of Cilicia. Plin. 5, 27.——Constantine, one of the Cæsars, in Diocletian's age, who reigned two years after the emperor's abdication, and died July 25, A.D. 306.

CHOARINA, a country near India, reduced by Craterus, &c.

CHOASPES, a son of Phasis, &c. Flacc. 5, 555.——A river of India, falling into the Indus near the modern city of Attock. Curt. 5, 2.—A river of Susiana. Vid Eulæus.

CHOBUS, a river of Colchis. Arrian.

CHOERADES, islands in the Ionian sea, off the coast of Iapygia. Thucyd 7, 33.——Islands of the Euxine sea, near the Hellespont, supposed to be the same with the Cyanean isles.——Islands of the Sinus Persicus.——Islands on the coast of Eubœa, near mount Caphareus, where the Oilean Ajax is said to have suffered shipwreck, after having violated Cassandra.

CHOERAS, a place in the island of Eubœa. Herod. 6 101.

CHOERILUS, a tragic poet of Athens, who wrote 150 dramas, of which thirteen obtained the prize.——An historian of Samos.——Two other poets, one of whom was very intimate with Herodotus. He wrote a poem on the victory which the Athenians had obtained over Xerxes, and on account of the excellence of the composition, he received a piece of gold for each verse from the Athenians, and was publicly ranked with Homer as a poet. The other was one of Alexander's flatterers and friends. It is said the prince promised him as many pieces of gold as there should be good verses in his poetry, and as many also on his forehead as there were bad, and in consequence, this, scarce six of his verses in each poem were entitled to gold, while the rest were rewarded with the castigation. Plut. in Alex.—Horat., 2, 1, 232.

CHONNIDAS, a man made preceptor to Theseus, by his grandfather Pittheus king of Troezene. The Athenians instituted sacrifices to him for the good precepts which he had inculcated into his pupil. Plut in Thes.

CHONOPHIS an Egyptian prophet. Plut. de Sacrat. Gen.

CHORASMII, a people of Asia, between Sogdiana and the north-eastern shore of the Caspian. Their chief town was Chorasmia, or Gorgo, now Old Urganch. Herod 3, 93.

CHORINEUS, a man killed in the Rutulian war. Virg. Æn. 9, 571.——Another. Id 12, 298.——A priest with Æneas. Id.

CHOROEBUS, a man of Elis, who obtained a pine the first olympiad. (Vid. Corœbus.)——A youth of Mygdonia, who was enamoured of Cassandra. Virg. Æn. 2, 341.——A man who voluntarily devoted himself to death to free his native country Thebes from a pestilence. Stat. Theb. 2, 231. 6, 286.

CHOSROES, a king of Persia, who ascended the throne, A. D. 531. His memory is still venerated in the East, and his virtues obtained him the titles of the Magnanimous and the Just.—— The second of the same name was grandson to the preceding, and succeeded to the throne, A. D. 590. The first years of his reign were highly prosperous; but in the last six, his kingdom was overrun by foreign enemies, and himself deposed and put to death by his own son.

CHREMES, a sordid old man, mentioned in Terence's Andria. Horat. in Art. 94.

CHREMETES, a river of Libya, falling into the Atlantic ocean, now the Zaire.

CHRESPHONTES, a son of Aristomachus. Vid. Aristodemus.

CHRESTUS, an approved writer of Athens. &c. Colum de R. R. 1, 1.

CHRISTUS, the name of our blessed Saviour, derived from a Greek word signifying anointed. The heathen historians have repeatedly mentioned him and the character of his religion. His followers were called Christians first at Antioch, and the appellation then seemed to convey more reproach than respectability. Plin. 10, ep. 97.—Acts 11, 26.—Sueton.—Tacit Ann.

CHROMIA, a daughter of Nonus. Paus. 5, 1.

CHROMIOS, a son of Neleus and Chloris, who, with ten brothers, was killed in a battle by Hercules.——A son of Priam, killed by Diomedes. Apollod. 3, 12.

CHROMIS, a captain in the Trojan war. Homer. Il. 2, 865.——A young shepherd. Virg. Ecl. 6.——A Phrygian killed by Camilla. Id. Æneid 11, 675.——A son of Hercules. Stat. 6, 346

CHROMIUS, a son of Pterilaus. Apollod. 2, 4. ——An Argive, who, alone with Alcenor, survived a battle between 300 of his countrymen and 300 Spartans. Herod. 1, 82.

CHRONIUS, a man who built a temple of Diana at Orchomenos. Paus. 8, 48.

CHRONOS, the Greek name of Saturn, or time, in whose honour festivals called Chronia were yearly celebrated by the Rhodians, and some of the Greeks.

CHRYASUS, a king of Argos, descended from Inachus.

CHRYSA and CHRYSE, a town of Troas, south of the island of Tenedos, famous for a temple of Apollo Smintheus, and equally known for being the birth place of Chryseis the wife of Ection. Homer. Il. 1, 37 et 431.—Strab. 13.—Ovid. Met. 13, 174.——A daughter of Halmus, mother of Phlegias by Mars. Paus 9, 36.

CHRYSAME, a Thessalian, priestess of Diana Trivia. She fed a bull with poison, which she sent to the enemies of her country, who eat the flesh, and became delirious, and were an easy conquest. Polyæn.

CHRYSANTAS, a man who refrained from killing another, by hearing a dog bark. Plut. Quæst. Rom.

CHRYSANTHIUS, a philosopher in the age of Julian, known for the great number of volumes which he wrote.

CHRYSANTIS, a nymph who told Ceres when she was at Argos with Pelasgus, that her daughter had been carried away. Paus. 1, 14.

CHRYSAOR, a son of Medusa by Neptune. Some report, that he sprang from the blood of Medusa, armed with a golden sword, whence his name χρυσος ἀορ. He married Callirhoe, one of the Oceanides, by whom he had Geryon, Echidna, and the Chimæra. Hesiod. Theog. 295.——A rich king of Iberia. Diod. 4.——A son of Glaucus. Paus. 5, 21.

CHRYSAOREUS, a surname of Jupiter, from his temple at Stratonice, where all the Carians assembled upon any public emergency. Strab 4.

CHRYSAORIS, a town of Cilicia. Paus. 5, 21

CHRYSAS, a river of Sicily, falling into the Simæthus, and worshipped as a deity. Cic. in Verr. 4, 44.

CHRYSEIS, the daughter of Chryses. Vid. Chryses.

CHRYSERMUS, a Corinthian, who wrote a history of Peloponnesus, and of India, besides a treatise on rivers. Plut. in Parall.

CHRYSES, the priest of Apollo, father of Astynome, called from him Chryseis. When Lyrnessus was taken, and the spoils divided among the conquerors, Chryseis, who was the wife of Ection, the sovereign of the place, fell to the share of Agamemnon. Chryses, upon this, went to the Grecian camp to solicit his daughter's restoration; and when his prayers were fruitless, he implored the aid of Apollo, who visited the Greeks with a plague, and obliged them to restore Chryseis. It is with this pathetic story that the Iliad opens, and the manner in which Agamemnon resents the restitution, and provokes the indignation and the enmity of Achilles, gives interest to the poem, and produces the dreadful catastrophe which decides the fate of Troy. Homer Il. 1, 11, &c.——A daughter of Minos. Apollod 3, 1.

CHRYSIPPE, a daughter of Danaus. Apollod. 2, 1.

CHRYSIPPUS, a natural son of Pelops, highly favoured by his father, for which Hippodamia, his step-mother, ordered her own sons, Atreus and Thyestes, to kill him, and to throw his body into a well, on account of which they were banished. Some say that Hippodamia's sons refused to murder Chrysippus, and that she did it herself. They further say, that Chrysippus had been carried away by Laius, king of Thebes, to gratify his unnatural lusts, and that he was in his arms when Hippodamia killed him. Hygin. fab. 85.—Plato de Leg. 6.—Apollod. 3, 5.—Paus 6, 20 ——A Stoic philosopher, born at Soloe in Cilicia Campestris. Having spent his paternal fortune he devoted himself to philosophy at Athens, where he became a disciple of Cleanthes, the successor of Zeno. He was more remarkable for the subtlety than the soundness of his logic, and was led by his practice of taking opposite sides of a question by turns, to the maintenance of much paradox and absurdity. He has in this way been charged with maintaining some doctrines of the most licentious kind, whilst his own conduct was philosophically prudent and temperate. He engaged deeply in those disputes concerning moral and physical evil, fate, freewill, and power, which have at all times so much perplexed metaphysicians; and as might be expected, with more refinement than clearness. He wrote books on a great variety of subjects, but chiefly on the dialectic art. He died at an advanced age, B.C. 208. Val. Max. 8, 7. —Diod.—Horat. Sat. 2, 3, 40. There were also others of the same name. Laert.——A freedman of Cicero, reduced again to servitude in consequence of his bad conduct. Cic. ad Att. 7, ep. 2. 11, ep. 2.

CHRYSIS, a mistress of Demetrius. Plut in Demet. ——A priestess of Juno at Mycenæ. The temple of the goddess was burned by the negligence of Chrysis, who fled to Tegea, to the altar of Minerva. Paus. 2, 17.

CHRYSOASPIDES, soldiers in the armies of Persia, whose arms were all covered with gold to display the opulence of the prince whom they served, whence the name. Justin. 12, 7.

CHRYSOCĔRAS, or the Golden Horn, a long cove on the north-east side of Byzantium, forming an excellent harbour, whence its name.

CHRYSOGŌNUS, a freedman of Sylla. Cic. pro Rosc ——A celebrated singer in Domitian's reign. Juv. 6, 74.

CHRYSOLĀUS, a tyrant of Methymna, &c. Curt 4, 8.

CHRYSONDIUM, a town of Macedonia. Polyb 5.

CHRYSŌPŌLIS, now Scutari, a promontory and port of Asia Minor, opposite to Byzantium. The Athenians fortified this place, established a toll to be paid by the ships which came hither from the Euxine, and stationed a fleet here of thirty sail. Polyb. 4.

CHRYSORRHOAS, a river of Syria, near the city of Damascus, called also Bardines and Pharpar, and now Barrada. ——A river of Lydia Id Pactolus.

CHRYSOSTOM, JOHN, a native of Antioch, who became bishop of Constantinople, and one of the most illustrious fathers of the church. In eloquence and benevolence he was equally known; but the divisions of the age embittered in some degree his happiness, and he was banished from his see by his enemies, though afterwards restored. He died at Pityus, on the Euxine sea, A. D. 407, aged 53. His works were edited by Montfaucon, in 13 vols. fol.

CHRYSOTHĔMIS, a name which is given by Homer to Iphigenia daughter of Agamemnon and Clytemnestra. Il. 9, 145 ——A Cretan, who first obtained the poetical prize at the Pythian games. Paus. 10, 7.

CHRYXUS, a leader of the Boii, grandson to Brennus, who took Rome. Sil. 4, 148.

CITHONĬA, a daughter of Erechtheus, who married Butes. Apollod. 3, 15 ——A surname of Ceres, either from χθὼν, terra, because she was goddess of the earth, or, from a temple built to her by Cithonia, at Hermione. She had a festival there called by the same name, and celebrated every summer. During the celebration, the priests of the goddess marched in procession, accompanied by the magistrates, and a crowd of women and boys in white apparel, with garlands of flowers on their heads. Behind was dragged an untamed heifer, just taken from the herd. When they came to the temple, the victim was let loose, and the door-keepers, who till then had kept the temple gates open, having made all secure, four old women, armed with scythes, were left within, who pursued the heifer, and killed it as soon as they were able, by cutting its throat. A second, a third, and a fourth victim, were in a like manner dispatched by the old women; and it was observable, that they all fell on the same side. Paus. 2, 35.

CITHONIUS, a centaur, killed by Nestor in a battle at the nuptials of Pirithous Ovid. Met. 12, 441 ——One of the soldiers who sprang from the dragon's teeth, sown by Cadmus. Hygin. fab. 178. ——A son of Ægyptus and Calliadne. Apollod. 2, 1.

CIBĂLIS, now Fulanha, a town of Pannonia, north-west of Sirmium. It was famous for the defeat of Licinius by Constantine, and was also the birth-place of Gratian. Eutrop. 10, 4.—Marcell 30, 24.

CIBARĬTIS, a country of Asia, near the Mæander.

CIBYRA, a considerable trading city in the southern angle of Phrygia, between Caria and Lycia. It was called Major to distinguish it from another city of the same name in Pamphylia. It was originally colonized by the Lydians, and subsequently by the Pisidians, who removed it to a more advantageous situation. Its influence and power extended far over the adjoining country, and it could raise no less than 30,000 foot and 2000 horse. It was nearly destroyed by an earthquake, but was afterwards restored by Tiberius. Four different dialects were in use at Cibyra, viz. the Lycian, the Greek, the Pisidian, and the Lydian. Dr Cramer observes, that no traces of its site have as yet been discovered, but it is probable that they are to be found not far from Demirli. Strab 12.—Tacit. Ann 4, 13.—— A town of Pamphylia, south-east of Aspendus. Strab. 14.

C. CICERRIUS, a secretary of Scipio Africanus, who obtained a triumph over the Corsicans. Liv. 41 et 42.

M. T CICERO, born at Arpinum, was son of a Roman knight, and lineally descended from the ancient kings of the Sabines. His mother's name was Helvia. After displaying many promising abilities at school, he was taught philosophy by Philo, and law by Mutius Scævola. He acquired and perfected a taste for military knowledge under Sylla, in the Marsian war, and retired from Rome, which was divided into factions, to indulge his philosophic propensities. He was naturally of a weak and delicate constitution, and he visited Greece on account of his health; though perhaps, the true cause of his absence from Rome might be attributed to his fear of Sylla. His friends, who were well acquainted with his superior abilities, were anxious for his return; and when at last he obeyed their solicitations, he applied himself with uncommon diligence to oratory, and soon distinguished above all the speakers of his age in the Roman forum. When he went to Sicily as quæstor, he behaved with great justice and moderation; and the Sicilians remembered with gratitude the services of Cicero, their common patron, who had delivered them from the tyranny and avarice of Verres. After he had passed through the offices of ædile and prætor, he stood a candidate for the consulship, A. U. C. 691; and the patricians and plebeians were equally anxious to raise him to that dignity, against the efforts and bribery of Catiline. His new situation was critical, and required circumspection. Catiline, with many dissolute and desperate Romans, had conspired against their country, and combined to murder Cicero himself. In this dilemma, Cicero, in full senate, accused Catiline of treason against the state; but as his evidence was not clear, his efforts were unavailing. He, however, stood upon his guard and by the information of his friends, and the discovery of Fulvia, his life was saved from the dagger of Marcius and Cethegus, whom Catiline had sent to assassinate him. After this, Cicero commanded Catiline, in the senate to leave the city, and this desperate conspirator marched out in triumph to meet the 20,000 men who were assembled to support his cause. The lieutenant of C. Antony, the other consul, defeated them in Gaul, and Cicero, at Rome, punished the rest of the conspirators with death. This capital punishment, though inveighed against by J. Cæsar as too severe, was supported by the opinion of Lutatius Catulus and Cato, and confirmed by the whole senate. After this memorable deliverance, Cicero received the thanks of all the people, and was styled The father of his country and a second founder of Rome. The vehemence with which he had attacked Clodius, proved injurious to him; and when his enemy was made tribune by the influence of Cæsar and Pompey, he began to be apprehensive for his safety. Legal forms, however, and not immediate violence, were the arms which Clodius wished to use against Cicero; and, accordingly, a law was passed by means of the tribune, which enacted that whosoever had put to death a Roman citizen uncondemned, should be interdicted the use of fire and water. Cicero, though not named, saw that his measures against Catiline were called in question, and therefore, though the Roman knights, to the number of 20,000, and the senate, put on mourning on his account, and espoused his cause as their own, he, after much hesitation, determined to go into voluntary exile. His departure from Rome to Macedonia was followed by the plunder of his property, the destruction of his house, the ill-treatment of his wife and family, and the disgraceful promulgation of a law which forbade him, on pain of death, to approach within 468 miles of the city. He was not, however, neglected or despised in his banishment. Wherever he went, he was received with the highest marks of approbation and reverence, a circumstance, which perhaps, when he considered his unmerited treatment, might produce upon his spirits that dejection of mind, and those wailings of grief, so unworthy the greatness of his former character. The storm of adversity, however, which burst upon him was but momentary; and when the faction had subsided at Rome, and Pompey had exerted himself in his favour, the whole senate and people were unanimous for his return. After sixteen months' absence, he entered Rome with universal satisfaction; and, in the fulness of his gratitude, thanked the senate and people in two orations still extant. Though now frequently engaged in the defence of his clients and friends as an orator, he did not display that vigour of mind, and independence of conduct, which might have rendered him the censor of faction and conspiracy. He still knew that Clodius was his enemy, and while he attempted to flatter and conciliate the overgrown power of Cæsar and Pompey, and timidly to accommodate his opinions and measures to the necessities of the times, he contributed, by the respectability of his name, to forge those fetters which soon fatally shackled the liberties and independence of his country. When the vacant provinces were divided by lot among the senators, according to a law enacted by Pompey, Cicero received to his share Cilicia, with some of the neighbouring districts, and he conducted himself with so much integrity in his administration, and displayed so much prudence against the enemy, that for his successful campaign, at his return he was honoured with a triumph, which, however, the violence of party prevented him to enjoy. After much hesitation, during the civil commotions which arose between Cæsar and Pompey, he joined himself to the latter, and followed him to Greece. When victory had declared in favour of Cæsar at the battle of Pharsalia, Cicero went to Brundusium, and was reconciled to the conqueror, who treated him with great kindness and humanity. From this time Cicero retired into the country, and seldom visited Rome, particularly devoting himself to study and the composition of his philosophical books. When Cæsar had been stabbed in the senate, Cicero, who was present, recommended a general amnesty, and was the most earnest to decree the provinces to Brutus and Cassius. But when he saw the interest of Cæsar's murderers decrease, through their indolence and want of resolution, and the crafty Antony, by his intrigues and dissimulation, rise into power, he determined to retire to Athens, but went no farther than Syracuse. On his speedy return to Rome, he discovered that the country was more than usually distracted by private and public dissensions; but whilst he boldly opposed the views of Antony, he was not sufficiently circumspect against the schemes of young Octavius, afterwards called Augustus. His age, his influence, and respectability, were powerful associates in courting popularity, and therefore it is not surprising to find Augustus eager to obtain the approbation of Cicero, and expressing his wish to become his colleague in the consulship. That wish was not sincere; all former professions of friendship were quickly forgotten at the secret call of ambition, and while Cicero hoped for the firm re-establishment of the consular government and the independence of the senate, Augustus was silently making rapid strides towards the sovereign power. The death of the two consuls at Mutina, which Antony had besieged, exhibited the views of parties. Without hesitation, without regard for the opinion of his friends, Augustus joined his interest to that of Antony, and the triumvirate was soon after formed. The great enmity which Cicero bore to Antony was fatal to him; and Augustus, Antony, and Lepidus, the triumvirs, to destroy all cause of quarrel and each to dispatch his enemies, produced their lists of proscription. About two hundred were doomed to death, and Cicero was among the number upon the list of Antony. Augustus yielded a man to whom he partly owed his greatness, and Cicero was pursued by the emissaries of Antony, among whom was Popilius, whom he had defended upon an accusation of parricide. He had fled in a litter towards the sea of Caieta, and when the assassins came up to him, he put his head out of the litter, and it was severed from the body by Herennius. This memorable event happened the 7th of December, 43 B.C. after the enjoyment of life for 63 years, 11 months, and 5 days. The head and right hand of the orator were carried to Rome, and hung up in the Roman forum; and so inveterate was Antony's hatred against the unfortunate man, that even Fulvia the triumvir's wife, wreaked her vengeance upon his head, and drew the tongue out of the mouth, and bored it through repeatedly with a gold bodkin, verifying in this act of inhumanity what Cicero had once observed, that no animal is more revengeful than a woman. Cicero has acquired more real fame by his literary compositions than by his spirited exertions as a Roman senator. The learning and the abilities which he possessed, have been the admiration of every age and country, and his style has always been accounted as the true standard of pure latinity. The words nasutior poeta have been verified in his attempts to write poetry; and the satire of Martial, Carmina quæ scribit musis et Apolline nullo, though severe, is true. He once formed a design to write the history of his country, but he did not pursue the plan. He translated many of the Greek writers, poets as well as historians, for his own improvement. When he travelled into Asia, he was attended by most of the learned men of his age; and his stay at Rhodes in the school of the famous Molo, conduced not a little to perfect his judgment. Like his countrymen, he was not destitute of ambition, and the arrogant expectations with which he returned from his quæstorship in Sicily are well known. He was of a timid disposition, and he who shone as the father of Roman eloquence, never ascended the pulpit to harangue, without feeling a secret emotion of dread. His conduct during the civil wars is far from that of a patriot; and when we view him, dubious and irresolute, sorry not to follow Pompey, and yet afraid to oppose Cæsar, the judgment would almost brand him with the name of coward. In his private character, however, Cicero was of an amiable disposition; and though he was too elated with prosperity, and debased by adversity, the affability of the friend conciliated the good graces of all. He married Terentia, whom he afterwards divorced, and by whom he had a son and a daughter. He afterwards married a young woman, to whom he was guardian; and because she seemed elated at the death of his daughter Tullia, he repudiated her. The works of Cicero, which are very numerous, have been commonly distributed into four classes, comprehending rhetorical treatises, orations, philosophical works, and epistles. Of the first class, the most valuable are De Oratore, a dialogue laying down the principles and rules of the rhetorical art; De claris Oratoribus, entitled Brutus, giving a short character of the most eminent speakers of Greece and Rome; and the Orator, delineating the character of the perfect orator. The number of orations remaining under his name amount to fifty-six, and they comprise the whole period of his public life. They are a treasure not only of eloquence, but of historical and juridical matter. The matter of his philosophical works was taken from the Grecian schools; of these, the principal that treat of the philosophy of nature are De natura Deorum, a dialogue in which the various theories of heathen antiquity on the nature of the gods are clearly and eloquently displayed; De Divinatione et de Fato, in which he shows himself superior to the superstitions of his age and country; and Somnium Scipionis, a fancy piece, founded on the Platonic doctrines concerning the soul. One of the most elaborate of Cicero's works that relate to moral philosophy is entitled De Finibus, and discusses the several opinions entertained by the Grecian philosophers on the end of good and evil. His Tusculanæ Quæstiones treat of the contempt of pain and death, the remedies of grief and mental perturbation, and the sufficiency of virtue to a happy life. His essay De officiis is an excellent summary of practical ethics, chiefly upon the principles of the stoics. His Academicæ Quæstiones contain his own opinions more directly than any other of his works. His dialogues De Senectute and De Amicitia are very elegant pieces of moral writing. In his treatise De Legibus he explains the grounds of jurisprudence. In the part of his work De Republica, recently discovered, he discusses the different kinds of constitutions and their respective advantages, with a particular reference to that of Rome. The epistles of Cicero afford excellent specimens of the style adapted to such compositions, and abound with various information, political and domestic. The best editions of Cicero's entire works are, that of Elzevirius, 10 vols. 12mo, L. Bat. 1642; that of Verburgius, 2 vols. fol. Amst. 1724; that of Olivetus, 9 vols. 4to, Genev 1758; that of Ernesti, 8 vols. 8vo, Hal. 1774—7; and that of Schützius, 20 vols. 8vo, Lips. 1814—19. Among the numerous editions of his separate works the most worthy of notice are those of the De Oratore, by Pearcius and Müllerus; of the Orationes, by Grævius; of the De natura Deorum, by Klinderwaterus and Creuzerus; of the De Divinatione, De Legibus, Academicæ Quæstiones, and De Finibus, by Goerenius; of the Tusculanæ Quæstiones, by Wolfius, of the De Officiis, by Heusingerus; and of the Epistolæ, by Schützius. Most of his productions have been translated into various languages. Melmoth's versions of the Familiar Epistles, and of the treatises on Old Age and Friendship, are the happiest of these attempts in the English language. Plutarch. in vita — Quintil.— Dio. Cass.— Appian.— Florus.— C. Nep in Attic.— Eutrop.—Cic. &c —— Marcus, the son of Cicero, was taken by Augustus as his colleague in the consulship. He revenged his father's death, by throwing public dishonour upon the memory of Antony. He disgraced his father's virtues, and was so fond of drinking, that Pliny observes, he wished to deprive Antony of the honour of being the greatest drunkard in the Roman empire. Plut. in Cic.—— Quintus, the brother of the orator, was Cæsar's lieutenant in Gaul, and proconsul of Asia for three years. He was proscribed with his son at the same time as his brother Tully, but he might have escaped if he had fled with sufficient speed. When overtaken by Antony's emissaries, the son nobly offered himself to the sword of the assassins, refusing to discover his father; but the latter rescued his affectionate son from torture by betraying his hiding-place, and they enjoyed the mutual satisfaction of perishing both at the same moment by the hand of their merciless executioners. Plut. in Cic.— Appian.

CICERONIS VILLA, a place near Puteoli in Campania. Plin. 31, 2

CICONES, a people of Thrace near the Hebrus. Ulysses, at his return from Troy, conquered them, and plundered their chief city Ismarus, because they had assisted Priam against the Greeks. They tore to pieces Orpheus, for his obscene indulgences. Ovid. Met. 10, 83. 15, 313 —Virg. G. 4, 520, &c.— Mela, 2, 2.

CICOTA, an old avaricious usurer. Horat. Serm. 2, 3, 69.

CILICIA, a country of Asia Minor, bounded by Syria on the east, by Cappadocia and Phrygia on the north, by Pamphylia on the west, and by the Mediterranean on the south. Three narrow passes led into it, the Pylæ Ciliciæ on the side of Cappadocia, and on the east the Pylæ Amanicæ and Pylæ Syriæ. It was divided into Campestris and Trachea, or the level and rugged Cilicia. The former was one of the most fertile tracts in Asia, but the latter was remarkably sterile. The inhabitants enriched themselves by piratical excursions, till they were conquered by Pompey. The country was opulent, and was governed by kings, under some of the Roman emperors; but reduced into a province by Vespasian. Cicero presided over it as proconsul. It receives its name from Cilix, the son of Agenor. Apollod. 3, 1.—Varro, R. R. 2, 11.—Sueton. in Vesp. 8.—Herod. 2, 17, 34.—Justin. 11, 11.—Curt. 3, 4.—Plin. 5, 27.——Part of the country between Æolia and Troas is also called Cilicia. Strab. 13, calls it Trojan, to distinguish it from the other Cilicia. Plin. 5, 27.

CILIX, a son of Phœnix, or according to Herodotus, of Agenor, who after seeking in vain his sister Europa, settled in a country to which he gave the name of Cilicia. Apollod. 3, 1.—Herod. 7, 91.

CILLA, a town of Africa Propria. Diod. 20.——A town of Æolia. Herod. 1, 149.——Of Troas, which received its name, according to Theopompus, from a certain Cillus, who was one of Hippodamia's suitors, and was killed by Œnomaus. Homer. Il. 1, 38.—Ovid. Met. 13, 174.

CILLUS, a general of Ptolemy, conquered by Demetrius. Diod. 19.

CILLUS, a charioteer of Pelops, in whose honour a city was built. Strab 13.

CILO, JUN., an oppressive governor of Bithynia and Pontus. The provinces carried their complaints against him to Rome; but such was the noise of the flatterers that attended the emperor Claudius, that he was unable to hear them, and when he asked what they had said, he was told by one of Cilo's friends, that they returned thanks for his good administration; upon which the emperor said, Let Cilo be continued two years longer in his province. Dio 60.—Tacit. Ann 12, 21.

CIMBER, TULL, one of Cæsar's murderers. He laid hold of the dictator's robe, which was a signal for the rest to strike Plut in Cæs.

CIMBERIUS, a chief of the Suevi.

CIMBRI, a people of Germany, who invaded the Roman empire with a large army, and were conquered by Marius. They inhabited the Chersonesus Cimbrica, now Jutland. Flor. 3, 3.

CIMBRICUM BELLUM, was begun by the Cimbri, Teutones, and Ambrones, by an invasion of the Roman territories, B C. 109. These barbarians were so courageous, and even desperate, that they fastened their first ranks each to the other with cords. In the first battle they defeated the consul Papirius Carbo; in another they routed the consul M Junius Silanus; in a third, L. Cassius; and in a fourth, the brave M. Aurelius Scaurus, whom they took prisoner and put to death. After several other successes, they were totally defeated by the valour and policy of Marius and Catulus. Marius, in his second consulship, was chosen to carry on the war: he met the Teutones and Ambrones at Aquæ Sextiæ, where, after a bloody engagement, he left dead on the field of battle 20,000, and took 90,000 prisoners, B.C. 102. The Cimbri, who had formed another army, had already penetrated into Italy, where they were met at the river Athesis, by Marius and his colleague Catulus, a year after. An engagement ensued, and 140,000 of them were slain. This last battle put an end to this dreadful war, and the two consuls entered Rome in triumph. Flor. 3, 3.—Plin. 7, 23. 37, 1.—Mela, 3, 3.—Paterc. 2, 12.—Plut in Mario.

CIMINUS, now Viterbe, a lake and mountain of Etruria. Virg Æn. 7, 697.—Liv. 9, 36.

CIMMERII, a people near the Palus Mæotis, who invaded Asia Minor, and seized upon the kingdom of Cyaxares. After they had been masters of the country for twenty-eight years, they were driven back by Alyattes king of Lydia Herod. 1, 6, &c. 4, 1, &c.——Another nation on the western coast of Italy, generally imagined to have lived in caves near the sea-shore of Campania, and there, in concealing themselves from the light of the sun, to have made their retreat the receptacle of their plunder. In consequence of this manner of living, the country which they inhabited was supposed to be so gloomy, that, to mention a great obscurity, the expression of Cimmerian darkness has proverbially been used. Homer, according to Plutarch, drew his images of hell and Pluto from this gloomy and dismal country, where also Virgil and Ovid have placed the Styx, the Phlegethon, and all the dreadful abodes of the infernal regions. Homer. Odyss. 13.—Virg. Æn. 6, 107.—Ovid. Met. 11, 592, &c. —Strab. 5.

CIMMERIS, a town of Troas, formerly called Edonis. Plin. 5, 30.

CIMMERIUM, a town in the interior of the Taurica Chersonesus, north of mount Cimmerius. It is now Eski Crimm.——A town of Italy, in Campania, near the Lucrine and Avernian lakes.

CIMOLUS, one of the Cyclades, situate between Melos and Siphnus. It produced a kind of fuller's earth, of great use in whitening cloth. Its figs also were much esteemed. It is now Kimoli, though more generally known by the name of Argentiera. Ovid. Met. 7, 463.—Plin. 35, 15.

CIMON, an Athenian, son of Miltiades and Hegisipyle, famous for his debaucheries in his youth, and the reformation of his morals when arrived to years of discretion. When his father died, he was imprisoned, because unable to pay the fine levied upon him by the Athenians; but he was released from confinement by his sister and wife Elpinice. (Vid. Elpinice.) He behaved with great courage at the battle of Salamis, and rendered himself popular by his munificence and valour. He defeated the Persian fleet, and took 200 ships, and totally routed their land army, the very same day. The money which he obtained by his victories was not applied to his own private use; but with it he fortified and embellished the city. The greatness and goodness of his character, however, could not shield him against the jealousy and the illiberal suspicions of a fickle multitude; he was accused of treason, and though his life and general conduct were his best defence, he was, by the artifice and influence of his rival, Pericles, banished from his country, and war was declared against Lacedæmon, that a foreign quarrel, and not the contemplation of civil dissensions, might engage the attention of the Athenians. After some time Cimon was recalled from his exile, and at his return he effected a reconciliation between Lacedæmon and his countrymen. He was afterwards appointed to carry on the war against Persia in Egypt, and Cyprus, with a fleet of 200 ships; and on the coast of Asia he gave battle to the enemy, and totally ruined their fleet. He died as he was besieging the town of Citium in Cyprus, B.C. 449, in the 51st year of his age. He may be called the last of the Greeks, whose spirit and boldness defeated the armies of the barbarians. He was such an inveterate enemy to the Persian power, that he formed a plan of totally destroying it; and in his wars, he had so reduced the Persians, that they promised in a treaty, not to pass the Cheldonian islands with their fleet, or to approach within a day's journey of the Grecian seas. The munificence of Cimon has been highly extolled by his biographers, and he has been deservedly praised for leaving his gardens open to the public. Thucyd 1, 100 et 112. —Justin. 2, 15 —Diod. 11.—Plut et C. Nep. in vita —An Athenian, father of Miltiades. Herod 6, 34.——A Roman, supported in prison by the milk of his daughter.——An Athenian, who wrote an account of the war of the Amazons against his country.

CINARADAS, one of the descendants of Cinyras, who presided over the ceremonies of Venus at Paphos. Tacit. Hist. 2, 3.

CINCIA LEX, was enacted by M. Cincius Alimentus, tribune of the people, A.U.C. 549. By it no man was permitted to take any money as a gift or a fee in judging a cause. Liv. 34, 4.

L. Q. CINCINNATUS, a celebrated Roman, who was informed, as he ploughed his field, that the senate had chosen him dictator. Upon this he left his ploughed land with regret, and repaired to the field of battle, where his countrymen were closely besieged by the Volsci and Æqui. He conquered the enemy, and returned to Rome in triumph; and sixteen days after his appointment, he laid down his office, and retired back to complete the cultivation of his fields. In his 80th year, he was again summoned against Præneste as dictator; and after a successful campaign, he resigned the absolute power which he had enjoyed only twenty-one days, nobly disregarding the rewards that were offered him by the senate. He flourished about 460 years before Christ. Liv 3, 26.—Flor 1, 11.—Cic. de Finib. 4.—Plin. 18, 3.

L. CINCIUS ALIMENTUS, a prætor of Sicily in the second Punic war, who wrote annals in Greek. Dionys Hal. 1.——Marcus, a tribune of the people, A.U.C. 549, author of the Cincia lex.

CINEAS, a Thessalian, minister and friend to Pyrrhus king of Epirus. He was sent to Rome by Pyrrhus to sue for a cessation of hostilities, and for the permanent establishment of peace; but the Romans, though conquered, refused to listen to the proposal, whilst their enemy remained in possession of any part of the Italian territory. Cineas was a man of deep penetration and of a fascinating address, and he informed his master, who was inquisitive about the state of the hostile republic, that the Roman senate were a venerable assembly of kings; and he observed further, that to fight with them was to fight against another Hydra. He was of such a retentive memory, that the day after his arrival at Rome, he could salute every senator and knight by his name. Plut. 7, 24.—Cic. ad Fam 9, ep 25.——A king of Thessaly. Herod 5, 63

CINESIAS, a Greek poet of Thebes in Bœotia, who composed some dithyrambic verses. Athen. 12, 29.

CINETHON, a Spartan, who wrote genealogical poems, in one of which he asserted that Medea had a son by Jason, called Medus, and a daughter called Eriopis. Paus. 2, 18.

CINGA, now Cinca, a river of Spain, flowing from the Pyrenean mountains into the Iberus. Lucan. 4, 21.—Cæs B C. 1, 48.

CINGETÓRIX, a prince of Gaul, in alliance with Rome. Cæs. Bell. G. 5, 3.——A prince of Britain, who attacked Cæsar's camp, by order of Cassivelaunus. Id. ib. 22.

CINGULUM, now Cingoli, a town of Picenum, whose inhabitants are called Cingulani. Plin. 3, 13.—Cæs Bell. Civ. 1, 15.—Sil. It. 10, 34.—Cic. Att. 7, ep. 11.

CINNA, L. CORN., a Roman who distinguished himself by his enmity against Sylla, when engaged in the Mithridatic wars. The violence of his conduct armed the Romans against him, and he was forcibly expelled from the city by Octavius and the patricians. This disgrace, however, did not subdue his hatred against his enemies; he recalled Marius from banishment, and joining himself to Sertorius and Carbo, he raised a large force in Italy, and with his friends he approached Rome in four divisions. The entrance of these pretended friends to the city was the signal of slaughter. Rome exhibited the appearance of a town taken by storm, her citizens were butchered with indiscriminating fury, property was plundered, and the tyrannical Cinna and Marius appointed themselves consuls without the regular formalities of election. The death of Marius, though it weakened, yet it did not destroy the power of Cinna, his oppressions and cruelties were continued till Sylla, returning victorious from the conquest of Mithridates, and encouraged and inflamed by the complaints of the Romans, who fled from the persecution of his enemy, threatened the most formidable opposition. Cinna and his friend Carbo prepared the most vigorous defence; but private revenge prevented public punishment, and Cinna perished at Ancona by the secret dagger of an offended soldier. The name of Cinna became deservedly odious to the Romans, as conveying every thing that is cruel, arbitrary, and perfidious. Cinna's daughter, called Cornelia, married Julius Cæsar, by whom she had Julia. Plut. in Mar. Pomp. et Syll —Lucan. 4, 822 —Appian. Bell. Civ. 1.—Flor. 3, 21.—Paterc 2, 20, &c.—Plut. in Cæs.—One of Cæsar's murderers. Suet. Cæs. 85.——C. Helvius Cinna, a poet intimate with Cæsar. He went to attend the obsequies of Cæsar and being mistaken by the populace for the other Cinna, he was torn to pieces. He has been praised for his abilities and for the elegance of his verses; and it is said that he employed nine years in composing a poem called Smyrna, in which he made mention of the incest of Cinyras. Plut. in Cæs.——A grandson of Pompey. He conspired against Augustus, who pardoned him and made him one of his most intimate friends. He was consul, and made Augustus his heir. Dio —Senecs de Clem. 9.——A town of Italy taken by the Romans from the Samnites.

CINNADON, a Lacedæmonian youth, who resolved to put to death the Ephori, and seize upon the sovereign power. His conspiracy was discovered, and he was put to death. Aristot.

CINNAMUS, a hair-dresser at Rome, ridiculed by Martial, 7, ep. 63.

CINNIANA, a town of Lusitania, famous for the valour of its citizens. Val. Max 6, 4.

CINXIA, a surname of Juno, who presided over marriages, and was supposed to untie the girdles of new brides.

CINYPS and CINYPHUS, a small river of Africa, which rises in the Mons Charitum, and after crossing the country of the Macæ, empties itself into the sea. It is now the Khahan. Virg. G. 3, 312.—Herod. 4, 198.—Plin. 5, 4.—Martial, 7, *ep.*94.—Ovid. Met. 7, 272. 15, 755.

CINYRAS, a king of Cyprus, son of Paphus, who married Cenchreis, by whom he had a daughter called Myrrha. Myrrha fell in love with her father; and, in the absence of her mother at the celebration of the festivals of Ceres, she introduced herself into his bed by means of her nurse. Cinyras had by her a son called Adonis; and when he knew the incest which he had committed, he attempted to stab his daughter, who escaped his pursuit and fled to Arabia, where, after she had brought forth, she was changed into a tree which still bears her name. Cinyras, according to some, stabbed himself. He was so rich, that his opulence, like that of Crœsus, became proverbial. Ovid. Met. 10, fab. 9.—Plut. in Paralt.—Hygin. fab 242, 248, &c.——A son of Laodice. Apollod. 3, 9.——A man who brought a colony from Syria to Cyprus. Id 3, 14.——A Ligurian, who assisted Æneas against Turnus. Virg. Æn. 10, 186.

CIOS, a river of Thrace, rising in the north-western part of mount Rhodope, and discharging itself into the Ister. It is now the Esker. Plin. 5, 32.——A river of Bithynia, which waters a town of the same name.

CIPPUS, a noble Roman, who, as he returned home victorious is said to have found two horns suddenly growing on his head, a prodigy which a soothsayer explained, by informing him, that if he entered the city he must reign there. Unwilling to enslave his country, he assembled the senate without the walls, and banished himself for ever from the city, and retired to live upon a single acre of ground. Ovid. Met. 15, 565.

CIRCÆUM, a promontory of Latium, near a small town called Circeii, at the southern extremity of the Pontine marshes. It is celebrated in fable for having been the residence of Circe. It is now called Monte Circello Ovid Met. 14, 248.—Virg. Æn. 7, 799.—Liv 6, 17.—Cic. N. D. 3, 19.

CIRCE, a daughter of Sol and Perseis, celebrated for her knowledge of magic and venomous herbs. She was sister to Æetes king of Colchis, and Pasiphae the wife of Minos. She married a Sarmatian prince of Colchis, whom she murdered to obtain his kingdom. She was expelled by her subjects, and carried by her father upon the coasts of Italy, in an island called Ææa. Ulysses, at his return from the Trojan war, visited the place of her residence; and all his companions, who ran headlong into pleasure and vo[illegible]m. were changed by Circe's potions into filthy swine. Ulysses, who was fortified against all enchantments by an herb called moly, which he had received from Mercury, went to Circe, and demanded, sword in hand, the restoration of his companions to their former state. She complied, and loaded the hero with pleasures and honours. In this voluptuous retreat, Ulysses had by Circe one son called Telegonus, or two according to Hesiod, called Agrius and Latinus. For one whole year Ulysses forgot his glory in Circe's arms, and at his departure the nymph advised him to descend into hell, and consult the manes of Tiresias, concerning the fates that attended him. Circe showed herself cruel to Scylla her rival, and to Picus. (Vid. Scylla and Picus.) Ovid. Met. 14, fab. 1 et 5.—Horat. 1, ep. 2. 2, od. 17.—Virg. Ecl 8, 70. Æn. 3, 386. 7. 10.—&c.—Hygin fab. 125.—Apollon. 4, Arg.—Homer. Odyss. 10, 136, &c.—Apollod. 1, 9. —Hesiod. Th. 956.—Strab 5.

CIRCENSES LUDI, games performed in the circus at Rome. They were dedicated to the god Consus, and were first established by Romulus at the rape of the Sabines. They were in imitation of the Olympian games among the Greeks, and by way of eminence were often called the great games. Their original name was Consualia, and they were first called Circensian by Tarquin the elder after he had built the Circus. They were not appropriated to one particular exhibition; but were equally celebrated for leaping, wrestling, throwing the quoit and javelin, races on foot as well as in chariots, and boxing Like the Greeks, the Romans gave the name or Pentathlum or Quinquertium to these five exercises. The celebration continued five days, beginning on the 15th of September. All games in general that were exhibited in the Circus, were soon after called Circensian games. Some sea-fights and skirmishes, called by the Romans Naumachiæ, were afterwards exhibited in the Circus. Virg. Æn. 8, 636.

CIRCIUS, a part of mount Taurus. Plin. 5, 27. ——A rapid and tempestuous wind frequent in Gallia Narbonensis, and said to be unknown in any other country. Lucan. 1, 408.

CIRCUM PADANI AGRI, the country around the river Po. Liv. 21, 35.

CIRCUS, an edifice in use among the Romans for the exhibition of chariot races, and other games It was of an oblong form, straight at one end, and curved at the other, the length being about three times the breadth, or somewhat more. At the straight end were thirteen openings, or ostia, of which that in the middle, where the chariots entered, was the widest. On each side of this wider one were six openings called carceres, where the chariots stood previous to the start. On both sides of the circus, and on the curved end, were the seats of the spectators rising gradually one above another, like steps, and resting on strong arches At the foot of the seats there was a broad ditch, termed Euripus, to prevent the wild beasts from approaching the spectators. Within was an open space (arena), covered with sand, where the games were exhibited. This space was divided lengthways into two parts by a wall (spina), four feet high and twelve thick, adorned with little temples, altars, statues, obeliskes, pyramids, and conical towers. Of these last (metæ) there were three at each end, which served as goals, round which the chariots turned. Near the first meta, opposite the curved end of the Circus, there were seven other pillars, with oval balls (ova) on their summits One of these balls was removed every time the chariots reached the end of the course. On the outside, the Circus was surrounded with colonnades, galleries, shops, and public places. The largest of these buildings in Rome, the Circus Maximus, was situated in the valley which separates the Palatine and Aventine hills. It was built by Tarquinius Priscus. It was 2187 feet in length, and 960 in width. According to Dionysius, it contained room for 150,000 persons, Pliny says 260,000, and P. Victor even raises the number to 385,000. Cæsar enlarged it, and his example was followed by Augustus and Claudius. Under Nero, it was burnt, and under Antoninus Pius pulled down. Trajan rebuilt it, and Constantine made further additions to it. At present, but few vestiges of it remain. Liv. 1, 35.—Dionys. Hal. 3, 68.—Plin. 36, 15.—Suet. Cæs. 39. Claud 21.—Tacit. Ann 15, 38.

CIRIS, the name of Scylla daughter of Nisus, who was changed into a bird of the same name. Ovid. Met 8, 151.

CIRRÆATUM, a place near Arpinum, where C. Marius lived when young. Plut. in Mar.

CIRRHA and CYRRHA, a maritime town of Phocis, at the head of the Sinus Crissæus, serving as a harbour to Delphi, being sixty stadia distant from it. According to Sir W. Gell, its ruins are near the village of Xeno Pegadia. Lucan. 3, 179.

CIRTHA and CIRTA, the capital of Numidia, situated on a branch of the river Ampsagas, about 48 miles from the sea. It is said to have obtained its name from the Punic word Cartha, a city, because it was originally the only great city in the country. It was the residence of Syphax, Masinissa, and their successors. When Cæsar was prosecuting the war in Africa, and stood in some danger of being overpowered by Scipio and Juba, he was suddenly assisted in his operations by an attack made upon Cirtha by one Sittius. This adventurer had wandered from Rome with a band of soldiers, and had contrived with much good fortune to become possessed of such great power by mixing in the contentions of the Moors, that he took the capital with but little difficulty, and thus compelled Juba to employ all his force in the defence of his own kingdom. This diversion gave Cæsar an immense advantage; and, therefore, upon the termination of the war, he rewarded Sittius and his troops, by giving them Cirtha and the surrounding country. The city now took the name of Sittianorum Colonia. In the time of the emperor Constantine, having been nearly destroyed on account of its fidelity to that prince, he restored it, giving it the name of Constantina, which name is preserved to the present day in that of Cusantina. Strab 7.

CISALPINA GALLIA. Vid. Gallia.

CISPADANA GALLIA. Vid Gallia.

CISRHENANI, part of the Germans who lived nearest Rome, on the west of the Rhine. Cæs. B. G 6, 2.

CISSEIS, a patronymic given to Hecuba as daughter of Cisseus

CISSEUS, a king of Thrace, father to Hecuba, according to some authors. Virg. Æn. 7, 320. ——A son of Melampus, killed by Æneas. Id. En. 10, 317.

CISSIA, a country of Susiana, of which Susa was the capital. Herod. 5, 49.

CISSIÆ, some gates in Babylon. Id 3, 155

CISSIDES, a general of Dionysius sent with nine gallies to assist the Spartans, &c. Diod. 15.

CISSUS, a town of Macedonia, near Thessalonica, now Cismi. —— A mountain of Macedonia. ——A man who acquainted Alexander with the flight of Harpalus. Plut in Alex.

CISSUSA, a fountain where Bacchus was washed when young. Plut in Lys.

CISTENÆ, a town of Æolia.——A town of Lycia. Mela, 1, 18.

CITHÆRON, a king who gave his name to a mountain of Bœotia, situate at the south of the river Asopus, and sacred to Jupiter and the Muses, and also frequented by the priestesses of Bacchus in the celebration of their famous orgies. Actæon was torn to pieces by his own dogs on this mountain, and Hercules killed there the immense lion Virg Æn 4, 303.—Apollod. 1, 4.—Mela, 2, 3,—Strab. 9,—Paus. 9, 1, &c.—Plin 4, 7.

CITHARISTA, a harbour of Gallia Narbonensis, now the port of Celeste.

CITHARISTES, a promontory of Gaul, now Cape Sicier.

CITIUM, now Chiti, a town on the southern coast of the island of Cyprus, north-east of Amathus. According to Josephus, it was built by Chittim the son of Javan. It was the birthplace of the philosopher Zeno, and of the physician Apollonius, and in it Cimon died, during his campaign against the islanders. Plut. in Cim.—Thucyd. 1, 112.

J CIVILIS, a powerful Batavian, who raised a sedition against the Roman power during the controversy for empire between Vitellius and Vespasian. Tacit. Hist. 1, 59.

CIZYCUM, a city of Asia in the Propontis, the same as Cyzicus. Vid. Cizycus.

CLADEUS, now Stanco Kephali, a river of Elis, discharging itself into the Alpheus. Paus 5, 7.

CLANIS, a centaur killed by Theseus. Ovid Met. 12, 379.

CLANIS, now la Chiana, a river of Etruria, falling into the Tiber. Tacit. Ann. 1, 79.

CLANIUS, a river of Campania, rising in the Apennines above Nola, and discharging its waters into the sea near Liternum. It is now the Lagno. Virg. G. 2, 225.—Sil. Ital 8, 537.

CLARUS, or CLAROS, now Zilleh, a town of Ionia, famous for an oracle of Apollo. It was built by Manto, daughter of Tiresias, who fled from Thebes, after it had been destroyed by the Epigoni. She was so afflicted with her misfortunes, that a lake was formed with her tears, where she first founded the oracle. Apollo was from thence surnamed Clarius. Strab. 14.—Rutu. 7, 3.—Mela. 1, 7.—Ovid. Met. 1, 516 —— An island of the Ægean, between Tenedos and Scios. Thucyd. 3, 33 —— One of the companions of Æneas. Virg. Æn. 10, 126

CLASTIDIUM, now Casteggio, a town of Liguria, north-east of Dertona. It was celebrated as the spot where Claudius Marcellus gained the spolia opima, by vanquishing and slaying Viridomarus king of the Gesatæ. Strab. 5.

CLAUDIA, Gens, a patrician family at Rome, descended from Atta Clausus a chief of the Sabines, who is said to have removed to Rome soon after the expulsion of the Tarquins, with a great number of adherents to the amount of 5000, according to some writers. It gave birth to many illustrious patriots in the republic; and it is particularly recorded, that there were not less than twenty-eight of that family who were invested with the consulship, five with the office of dictator, and seven with that of censor, besides the honour of six triumphs and two ovations. Virg. Æn. 7, 708.—Sueton. in Tib.—Liv. 6, 41.

CLAUDIA a vestal virgin, grand-daughter of Appius Cæcus, accused of incontinence. To show her innocence, she offered to remove a ship which had brought the image of Vesta to Rome, and had stuck in one of the shallow places of the river. This had already baffled the efforts of a number of men, and Claudia, after addressing her prayers to the goddess, untied her girdle, and with it easily dragged after her the ship to shore, and by this action was honourably acquitted. Val. Max. 5, 4.—Propert. 4, el. 12, 52.—Ital. 17, 34.—Ovid, Fast. 4, 315. Ex.Ponto, 1, ep 2, 144.——A step-daughter of M. Antony, whom Augustus married. He dismissed her undefiled, immediately after the contract of marriage, on account of a sudden quarrel with her mother

Fulvia. Sueton. in Aug. 62.——The wife of the poet Statius. Stat Sylv. 3, 5.——A daughter of Appius Claudius, betrothed to Tib. Gracchus. ——The wife of Metellus Celer, sister to P. Clodius and to Appius Claudius ——An inconsiderable town of Noricum. Plin. 3, 14.——A Roman road, which parted from the Via Flaminia not far from the Pons Milvius, to the north of Rome, and passing through the more inland parts of Etruria, joined the Via Aurelia at Luna. Ovid 1, ex Pont el. 8, 44.——A tribe which received its name from Appius Claudius, who came to settle at Rome with a large body of attendants. Liv 2, 16.—Italic 5.——Quinta, a daughter of Appius Cæcus, whose statue in the vestibulum of Cybele's temple was unhurt when that edifice was reduced to ashes. Val. Max. 1, 8.—Tacit. Ann. 4, 64.——Pulchra, a cousin of Agrippina, accused of adultery and criminal designs against Tiberius. She was condemned. Tacit. Ann. 4, 52.——Antonia, a daughter of the emperor Claudius, married Cn. Pompey, whom Messalina caused to be put to death. Her second husband, Sylla Faustus, by whom she had a son, was killed by Nero, and she shared his fate, when she refused to marry his murderer.

CLAUDIA LEX, de comitiis, was enacted by M Cl. Marcellus, A. U. C. 703. It ordained that no one should be allowed to stand candidate for an office while absent thus taking from Cæsar the privileges granted him by the Pompeian law. ——Another, de usuris, by the emperor Claudius, which forbade people to lend money to minors, on condition of payment after the death of their parents.——Another, de naribus, by Q Claudius the tribune, A. U. C 535. It forbade any senator, or father of a senator, to keep a vessel above the burden of 300 amphoræ, or eight tons, for fear of their engaging themselves in commercial schemes. The same law also forbade the sanything to the scribes and the attendants of the quæstors, as it was naturally supposed that people who had any commercial connexions, could not be faithful to their trust, nor promote the interest of the state.——Another, A U. C. 573, to permit the allies to return to their respective cities, after their names were enrolled. Liv. 41, 9.——Another, to take away the freedom of the city of Rome from the colonists, which Cæsar had carried to Novicomum Sueton. in Jul 28.

CLAUDIÆ AQUÆ, the first water brought to Rome by means of an aqueduct of eleven miles, erected by the censor Appius Claudius, A. U. C. 441. Eutrop. 2, 4.—Liv 9, 29.

Claudianus, a celebrated poet, born at Alexandria in Egypt, in the age of Honorius and Arcadius, who seems to possess all the majesty of Virgil, without being a slave to the corrupted style which prevailed in his age. Scaliger observes, that he has supplied the poverty of his matter by the purity of his language, the happiness of his expressions, and the melody of his numbers. As he was the favourite of Stilicho, he removed from the court, when his patron was disgraced, and passed the rest of his life in retirement, and learned ease. His poems, which are numerous, consist of panegyrics on the consulship of Honorius and other illustrious men of that age, an account of the war against the Getæ, the Gildonic war, the praises of Stilicho, verses on Eutropius and Rufinus, on the rape of Proserpine, some idyllia and epigrams, &c. The poems on Rufinus and Eutropius have been considered as the best and most finished of his compositions. The best editions of his works are that of Gesner, 2 vols. 8vo. Lips. 1759, and that of Burman, 2 vols. 4to. Amst. 1760.

CLAUDIOPOLIS, a town of Cappadocia. Plin. 5, 24.

CLAUDIUS I. (Tiber. Drusus Nero), son of Drusus, Livia's second son, and Antonia, succeeded as emperor of Rome, after the murder of Caligula, whose memory he endeavoured to annihilate. He made himself popular for a while, by taking particular care of the city, and by adorning and beautifying it with buildings. He passed over into Britain, and obtained a triumph for victories which his generals had won, and suffered himself to be governed by favourites, whose licentiousness and avarice plundered the state and distracted the provinces. He married four wives, one of whom, called Messalina, he put to death on account of her lust and debauchery. He was at last poisoned by another called Agrippina who wished to raise her son Nero to the throne. The poison was conveyed in mushrooms, but as it did not operate fast enough, his physician by order of the empress made him swallow a poisoned feather. He died in the 63d year of his age, 13th October, A. D. 54, after a reign of thirteen years; distinguished neither by humanity nor courage, but debased by weakness and irresolution. He was succeeded by Nero. Tacit Ann 11, &c.—Dio. 60.—Juv 6, 619.—Suet. in vita.——The second emperor of that name, was a Dalmatian, who succeeded Gallienus. He conquered the Goths, Scythians, and Heruli, and killed no less than 300,000 in a battle, and after a reign of about two years, died of the plague in Pannonia. The excellence of his character, marked with bravery, and tempered with justice and benevolence, is well known by these words of the senate, addressed to him. Clavdi Auguste, tu pater, tu vater, tu amicus, tu bonus senator, tu vere princeps —— Nero, a consul with Liv. Salinator, who defeated and killed Asdrubal, near the river Metaurus, as he was passing from Spain into Italy, to go to the assistance of his brother Annibal Liv. 27, &c.—Horat. Od 4, 4, 37.—Suet in Tib.—— The father of the emperor Tiberius, quæstor to Cæsar in the wars of Alexandria.——Pollio, an historian. Plin. 7, ep. 31.——Pontius, a general of the Samnites, who conquered the Romans at Furcæ Caudinæ, and made them pass under the yoke. Liv. 9, 1, &c——Petilius, a dictator, A. U. C. 442.——Appius, an orator. Cic. in Brut. (Vid. Appius.)——A consul, A. U. C. 259. He was a zealous supporter of the privileges of the patricians against the plebeians; and when the tribunes were elected, he advised the senators to control their great power by bribery and secret influence. Liv. 2, 21, &c.——His son of the same name inherited the prejudices of his father against the common people, and he became so unpopular, and behaved with such severity to his soldiers, that in a war, which as consul he conducted against the Volsci, the Roman army, A. U. C. 283, suffered themselves to be defeated, to show their contempt of their general. He was accused by the tribunes, but defended himself with energy and success; but before his appearance at another trial, he was found dead. Liv 2 56.—— Caius, the son of the preceding, was consul, A. U. C. 294; and on the death of his colleague Valerius, he had the famous Cincinnatus appointed. He was a man of great moderation; though, like his family, he boldly resisted the encroachments of the people, and even recommended the use of arms to oppose the claims of the plebeians to appoint a consul from their own body. This motion was laid aside by choosing military tribunes from both patricians and plebeians. Liv. 3 et 4.——App. Cæcus, a Roman censor, who built an aqueduct A.U.C. 441, which brought water to Rome from Tusculum, at the distance of seven or eight miles. The water was called Appia, and it was the first that was brought to the city from the country. Before this age the Romans were satisfied with the waters of the Tiber, or of the fountains and wells in the city. (Vid. Appius.) Liv. 9, 29.—Ovid. Fast. 6, 203.—Cic. de Sen. 6.——A prætor of Sicily.——Publius, a great enemy to Cicero. (Vid. Claudius.)——Marcellus. (Vid. Marcellus.)——P. Pulcher, a consul, A.U.C. 505, who, when consulting the sacred chickens, ordered them to be cast into the sea because they would not eat. He was unsuccessful in his expedition against the Carthaginians in Sicily, and disgraced on his return to Rome. Liv. ep. 19.——App. Pulcher, a consul, A.U.C. 609, who conquered the Salassi, a nation of Gaul, after having first suffered from them a severe defeat. He obtained a triumph, against the authority of the senate and people, by means of his daughter or sister, who as a vestal virgin accompanied him in his chariot, and thus, by the sacredness of her character, prevented the interruption of his procession. Cic. Cæcil. 14.——Vol. Max. 5, 4.——Tiberius Nero, was elder brother of Drusus, and son of Livia Drusilla, who married Augustus after his divorce of Scribonia. He married Livia, the emperor's daughter by Scribonia, and succeeded in the empire by the name of Tiberius. (Vid. Tiberius.) Horat. 1, 3, 2.——The name of Claudius is common to many Roman consuls, and other officers of state; but nothing remarkable is recorded of them, and their name is but barely mentioned.

CLAUSUS, or CLAUDIUS, a king of the Sabines, who assisted Turnus against Æneas. He was the progenitor of that Appius Claudius, who retired to Rome, and became the founder of the Claudian family. Virg. Æn. 7, 707. 10, 345.

CLAVIENUS, an obscure poet in Juvenal's age, 1, 8.

CLAVIGER, a surname of Janus, from his being represented with a key (clavis).——Hercules received also that surname, as he was armed with a club (clava).

CLAZOMENÆ and CLAZOMENA, a city of Ionia, on the coast of the Ægean sea, west of Smyrna. It was founded by the Ionians and Dorians, who first settled on a site called Chytrium, which they quitted from fear of the Persians. It was the birth-place of the philosopher Anaxagoras, and other great men. Its ruins are to be seen a little to the north-east of Vourla. Ital. 1, 17.—Plin. 5, 29.—Strab. 14.—Liv. 38, 39.

CLEADAS, a man of Platæa, who raised tombs over those who had been killed in the battle against Mardonius. Herod. 9, 85.

CLEANDER, one of Alexander's officers, who killed Parmenio by the king's command. He was punished with death, for offering violence to a noble virgin, and giving her as a prostitute to his servants. Curt. 7. 2. 10 1.——The first tyrant of Gela. Aristot. Polit. 5, 12.——A soothsayer of Arcadia. Herod. 6, 83.——A favourite of the emperor Commodus, who was put to death, A.D. 190, after abusing public justice, and his master's confidence.

CLEANDRIDAS, a Spartan general, &c.——A man punished with death for bribing two of the Ephori.

CLEANTHES, a Stoic philosopher of Assos in Lydia, born 330 B.C. His first appearance was in the character of a wrestler. In this capacity he visited Athens, where the love of philosophy was diffused through all ranks of people. He soon caught the general spirit, and though he was possessed of no more than four drachmæ, he determined to put himself under the tuition of some eminent philosopher. His first master was Crates, the Academic. He afterwards became a disciple of Zeno, and a celebrated advocate of his doctrines. In order to devote the day to study, he used to draw water, and perform other laborious offices in the night, to gain a scanty subsistence. The Athenian citizens observing that, though he appeared strong and healthy, he had no visible means of subsistence, summoned him before the Areopagus, according to the custom of the city, to give an account of his manner of living. Upon this he produced a gardener for whom he drew water, and a woman for whom he ground meal, as witnesses to prove that he subsisted by the labour of his hands. His singular industry and perseverance drew upon him the admiration of his judges; but when they wished liberally to reward his merits with presents, he rejected them, observing that his labour was an inexhaustible treasure. From the manner in which this philosopher supported himself, he was called φρεάντλης, or, the well-drawer. For many years his poverty was so great, that he was obliged to write the heads of his master's lectures upon shells and bones, for want of money to buy paper. His natural faculties were slow, but resolution and perseverance enabled him to overcome every difficulty; and, at length, he became so complete a master of the Stoic philosophy, that he was chosen to be the successor of Zeno in his school. He wrote much, but none of his writings remain, except a hymn to Jupiter, preserved in the Anthology. Cicero calls him the father of the Stoics; and out of respect for his virtues, the Roman senate erected a statue to him at Assos. It is said that he starved himself in his 99th year, B.C. 240. Diog. Laert.——Val. Max. 8, 7.—Sen. Ep. 44.—Cic. de Fin. 2.

CLEARCHUS, a tyrant of Heraclea in Pontus, who was killed by Chion and Leonidas, Plato's pupils, during the celebration of the festivals of Bacchus, after the enjoyment of the sovereign power during twelve years, 353 B.C. Justin 16, 4.—Diod. 15.——The second tyrant of Heraclea of that name, died B.C. 286.——A Lacedæmonian sent to quiet the Byzantines. He was recalled, but refused to obey, and fled to Cyrus the younger, who made him captain of 13,000 Greek soldiers. He obtained a victory over Artaxerxes, who was so enraged at the defeat, that when Clearchus fell into his hands by the treachery of Tissaphernes, he put him to immediate death. Diod. 14.——A disciple of Aristotle, who wrote a treatise on tactics, &c. Xenoph.

CLEARIDES, a son of Cleonymus, governor of Amphipolis. Thucyd. 4, 134. 5, 10.

CLEMENS ROMANUS, one of the fathers of the church, said to be contemporary with St Paul. Several spurious compositions are ascribed to him, but the only thing extant is his epistle to the Corinthians, written to quiet the disturbances that had arisen there. It has been much admired for the spirit of meekness, forbearance, and reconciliation which it uniformly breathes. The best edition is that of Wotton, 8vo, Cantab. 1713.——Titus Flavius, another of Alexandria, called from thence Alexandrinus, who flourished 200 A.D. During the persecution of Severus, he fled from Egypt to Jerusalem and Antioch, where by his example, his eloquence, and his writings, he powerfully recommended and enforced the genuine precepts of christianity. His works are various, elegant, and full of erudition; the best edition of which is Potter's, 2 vols. fol. Oxon. 1715.——A senator who favoured the party of Niger against Severus.

CLEO, a Sicilian among Alexander's flatterers. Curt. 8, 5.

CLEOBIS and BITON, two youths, sons of Cydippe, the priestess of Juno at Argos. When oxen could not be procured to draw their mother's chariot to the temple of Juno, they put themselves under the yoke, and drew it 45 stadia to the temple, amidst the acclamations of the multitude, who congratulated the mother on account of the filial affection of her sons. Cydippe entreated the goddess to reward the piety of her sons with the best gift that could be granted to a mortal. They went to rest, and awoke no more; and by this the goddess showed, that death is the only true happy event that can happen to man. The Argives raised them statues at Delphi. Cic. Tusc. 1, 47 — Val. Max 5, 4.—Herod. 1, 31.—Plut. de Cons. ad Apoll.

CLEOBULA, the wife of Amyntor, by whom she had Phœnix.——A daughter of Boreas and Orithya, called also Cleopatra She married Phineus son of Agenor, by whom she had Plexippus and Pandion. Phineus repudiated her to marry a daughter of Dardanus. Apollod. 3, 15.

CLEOBULINA, a daughter of Cleobulus, remarkable for her genius learning, judgment, and courage. She composed enigmas, some of which have been preserved. One of them runs thus: "A father had 12 children, and these 12 children had each 30 white sons and 30 black daughters, who are immortal, though they die every day." In this there is no need of an Œdipus to discover that there are 12 months in the year, and that every month consists of 30 days, and of the same number of nights. Diog. Laert

CLEOBULUS, one of the seven wise men of Greece, son of Evagoras of Lindos, famous for the beautiful shape of his body. He wrote some few verses, and died in the 70th year of his age, B.C. 556. Diog. in vita.—Plut. in Symp ——An historian Plin. 5, 31 ——One of the Ephori. Thucyd.

CLEOCHARES, a man sent by Alexander to demand Porus to surrender Curt. 8, 13

CLEOCRITUS, a son of Hellus. Herod. 6, 52. 7, 204. 8, 131. He endeavoured to recover Peloponnesus after his father's death, but to no purpose

CLEODANTES, a Roman general under Gallienus.

CLEODORA, a nymph mother of Parnassus. Paus. 2, 6.——One of the Danaides, who married Lyxus. Apollod. 2, 1.

CLEODOXA, a daughter of Niobe and Amphion, changed into a stone as a punishment for her mother's pride Apollod. 3, 5.

CLEOLAUS, a son of Hercules, by Argele, daughter of Thestius, who, upon the ill success of the Heraclidæ in Peloponnesus, retired to Rhodes with his wife and children. Apollod. 2.

CLEOMANTES, a Lacedæmonian soothsayer. Plut. in Alex.

CLEOMBROTUS, son of Pausanias, was king of Sparta, after his brother Agesipolis I. He made war against the Bœotians, and fear lest he should be suspected of treacherous communication with Epaminondas, he gave that general battle at Leuctra, in a very disadvantageous place. He was killed in the engagement, and his army destroyed, B.C. 371. Diod. 15 —Paus. 9, 13.—Xenoph.——A son-in-law of Leonidas king of Sparta, who, for a while, usurped the kingdom, after the expulsion of his father-in-law. When Leonidas was recalled, Cleombrotus was banished, and his wife, Chelonis, who had accomplished her father, now accompanied her husband in his exile. Paus. 3, 6. — Plut in Ag. et Cleom.——A youth of Ambracia, who threw himself into the sea, after reading Plato's treatise on the immortality of the soul. Cic in Tusc. 1, 34 — Ovid in Ib. 493.

CLEOMEDES, a famous athlete of Astypalæa, above Crete In a combat at Olympia, he killed one of his antagonists by a blow with his fist. On account of this accidental murder, he was deprived of the victory, and he became delirious. In his return to Astypalæa, he entered a school, and pulled down the pillars which supported the roof, and crushed to death sixty boys. He was pursued with stones, and he fled for shelter into a tomb, whose doors he so strongly secured, that his pursuers were obliged to break them for access. When the tomb was opened, Cleomedes could not be found either dead or alive. The oracle of Delphi was consulted, and gave this answer, Ultimus heroum Cleomedes Astypalæus Upon this they offered sacrifices to him as a god. Paus. 6, 9 —Plut in Rom.

CLEOMENES I, king of Sparta, conquered the Argives, and burnt 5000 of them by setting fire to the grove where they had fled, and freed Athens from the tyranny of the Pisistratidæ By bribing the oracle, he pronounced Demaratus, his colleague on the throne, illegitimate, because he refused to punish the people of Ægina, who had deserted the Greeks. He killed himself in a fit of madness, 491 B.C. Herod. 5, 6 et 7 —Paus. 3, 3, &c.——The 3d, succeeded his brother Agesipolis II. He reigned 61 years in the greatest tranquillity, and was father to Acrotatus and Cleonymus, and was succeeded by Areus I, son of Acrotatus. Paus. 3, 6.——The 3d, succeeded his father Leonidas. He was of an enterprising spirit, and resolved to restore the ancient discipline of Lycurgus in its full force, by banishing luxury and intemperance. He killed the Ephori, and removed by poison his royal colleague Eurydamidas, and made his own brother, Eucleidas, king, against the laws of the state, which forbade more than one of the same family to sit on the throne. He made war against the Achæans, and attempted to destroy their league. Aratus, the general of the Achæans, who supposed himself inferior to his enemy, called Antigonus to his assistance; and Cleomenes, when he had fought the unfortunate battle of Selasia, B.C. 222, retired into Egypt, to the court of Ptolemy Evergetes, where his wife and children had fled before him. Ptolemy received him with great cordiality; but his successor, weak and suspicious, soon expressed his jealousy of the noble stranger, and imprisoned him. Cleomenes killed himself, and his body was flayed and exposed on a cross, B.C 213. Polyb 6 —Plut. in vita.—Justin. 28, 4.——A man appointed by Alexander to receive the tributes of Egypt and Africa. Curt. 4, 8.——A man placed as arbitrator between the Athenians and the people of Megara.——An historian.——A dithyrambic poet of Rhegium.——A Sicilian, contemporary with Verres, whose licentiousness and avarice he was fond of gratifying. &c. in Verr. 4, 12.——A Lacedæmonian general.

CLEON, an Athenian, who, though originally a tanner, became general of the armies of the state, by his intrigues and eloquence. He took Thoron in Thrace, and after distinguishing himself in several engagements, he was killed at Amphipolis, in a battle with Brasidas the Spartan general, 422 B.C. Thucyd. 3, 4, &c.—Diod. 12.——A general of Messenia, who disputed with Aristodemus for the sovereignty.——A statuary of Sicyon. Paus. 2, 8.——A poet who wrote a poem on the Argonauts.——An orator of Halicarnassus, who composed an oration for Lysander, in which he intimated the propriety of making the kingdom of Sparta elective. C. Nep. et Plut. in Lys.——A Magnesian, who wrote some commentaries, in which he speaks of portentous events, &c. Paus. 10, 4.——A Sicilian, one of Alexander's flatterers. Curt. 8, 5.——A tyrant of Sicyon.——A friend of Phocion.

CLEONE and CLEONA, a village of Peloponnesus, between Corinth and Argos. Hercules killed the lion of Nemæa in its neighbourhood, and thence it is called Cleonæus. It was made a constellation. Stat. Silv. 4, 4, 28.—Ovid. Met. 6, 417.—Sil. 3, 32.—Paus. 2, 15.—Plin. 36, 5.——A town of Phocis.

CLEONE, a daughter of Asopus. Diod 4, 72.

CLEONICA, a young virgin of Byzantium, whom Pausanias, king of Sparta, invited to his bed. She was introduced into his room when he was asleep, and unluckily overturned a burning lamp which was by the side of the bed. Pausanias was awakened at the sudden noise, and thinking it to be some assassin, he seized his sword, and killed Cleonica before he knew who it was. Cleonica often appeared to him, and he was anxious to make a proper expiation to her manes. Paus. 7, 17.—Plut. in Cim. &c.

CLEONICUS, a freedman of Seneca, &c. Tacit. Ann. 15, 45.

CLEONNIS, a Messenian, who disputed with Aristodemus for the sovereign power of his country. Paus. 4, 10.

CLEOPÆMUS, a son of Cleomenes II., who called Pyrrhus to his assistance, because Areus his brother's son had been preferred to him in the succession; but the measure was unpopular, and even the women united to repel the foreign prince. His wife was unfaithful to his bed, and committed adultery with Acrotatus. Plut in Pyrrh.—Paus. 1, 3.——A general, who assisted the Tarentines, and was conquered by Æmilius the Roman consul. Strab 6.——A person so cowardly that Cleonymo tumidor became proverbial. Stud.

CLEOPATRA, the grand-daughter of Attalus, betrothed to Philip of Macedonia, after he had divorced Olympias. When Philip was murdered by Pausanias, Cleopatra was seized by order of Olympias, and put to death. Dod. 16.—Justin. 9, 7.—Plut. in Pyrr.——A sister of Alexander the Great, who married Perdiccas, and was killed by Antigonus as she attempted to fly to Ptolemy in Egypt. Diod. 16 et 20.—Justin. 9, 6. 13, 6.——A mistress of Claudius Cæsar.——A daughter of Boreas. (Vid. Cleobula.)——A daughter of Idas and Marpessa, the daughter of Evenus, king of Ætolia. She married Meleager, son of king Œneus. Homer, Il. 9, 562.—Paus. 4, 2.——One of the Danaides. Apollod. 2, 1.——A daughter of Amyntas of Ephesus. Paus. 1, 44.——A wife of Tigranes king of Armenia, sister of Mithridates. Justin 38, 4.——A daughter of Tros and Callirhoe. Apollod 3, 12.——A daughter of Ptolemy Philometor who married Alexander Bala, and afterwards Nicanor. She killed Seleucus, Nicanor's son, because he ascended the throne without her consent. She was suspected of preparing poison for Antiochus her son, and compelled to drink it herself, B.C. 120.——A wife and sister of Ptolemy Evergetes, who raised her son Alexander, a minor, to the throne of Egypt, in preference to his elder brother, Ptolemy Lathurus, whose interest the people favoured. As Alexander was odious, Cleopatra suffered Lathurus to ascend the throne, on condition, however, that he should repudiate his sister and wife, called Cleopatra, and marry Selenea, his younger sister. She afterwards raised her favourite, Alexander, to the throne, but her cruelties were so odious, that he fled to avoid her tyranny. Cleopatra laid snares for him; and when Alexander heard it, he put her to death. Justin 39, 3 et 4.——A queen of Egypt, daughter of Ptolemy Auletes, and sister and wife to Ptolemy Dionysius, celebrated for her beauty and her cunning. She admitted Cæsar to her arms, to influence him to give her the kingdom in preference to her brother, who had expelled her, and she had a son by him called Cæsarion. As she had supported Pompey, Antony, in his expedition to Parthia, summoned her to appear before him at Tarsus in Cilicia, and to account for her conduct and her ingratitude to the memory of her murdered friend and patron, Cæsar. Cleopatra obeyed; but mindful of the charms which she possessed, and which had won the heart of Cæsar, she arrayed herself in the most magnificent apparel, and appeared before her judge in the most captivating attire. Her artifice succeeded; Antony became enamoured of her, and publicly married her, forgetful of his connexions with Octavia, the sister of Augustus. He gave her the greatest part of the eastern provinces of the Roman empire. This behaviour was the cause of a rupture between Augustus and Antony, and these two celebrated Romans met at Actium, where Cleopatra, by flying with sixty sail, ruined the interest of Antony, and he was defeated. Cleopatra had retired to Egypt, where soon after Antony followed her. Antony stabbed himself upon the false information that Cleopatra was dead; and as he survived his wound, he was carried to the queen, who drew him up by a cord from one of the windows of the monument, where she had retired and concealed herself. Antony soon after died of his wound; and Cleopatra, after she had received pressing invitations from Augustus, and even pretended declarations of love, destroyed herself by the bite of an asp, not to fall into the conqueror's hands. She had previously attempted to stab herself, and had once made a resolution to starve herself. In her character Cleopatra was voluptuous and extravagant. At one of the feasts she gave to Antony at Alexandria, she melted pearls into her drink to render her entertainment more sumptuous and expensive. She was fond of appearing dressed as the goddess Isis; and she advised Antony to make war against the richest nations to support her ex-beauty. Her beauty has been greatly commended, and her mental acquirements so highly celebrated, that she has been described as capable of giving audience to the ambassadors of seven different nations, and of speaking their various languages as fluently as her own. In Antony's absence, she improved the public library of Alexandria with the addition of that of Pergamus. Two treatises, De medicamine faciei ejusdem erotica, and De morbis muliebrum, have been falsely attributed to her. She died B.C. 30, after a reign of 24 years, in the 39th year of her age. Egypt became a Roman province at her death. Flor. 4, 11.—Appian. Bell. Civ. 5. —Plut. in Pomp. et Ant.—Horat. 1, od 37, 21, &c.—Strab. 17.——A daughter of Ptolemy Epiphanes, who married Philometor, and afterwards Physcon of Cyrene.

CLEOPATRIS, or ARSINOE, a fortified town of Egypt on the Arabian gulf Vid. Arsinoe.

CLEOPHANTHUS, a son of Themistocles, famous for his skill in riding.

CLEOPHIS, a queen of India, who submitted to Alexander, by whom, as some suppose, she had a son Curt. 8, 10.

CLEOPHON, a tragic poet of Athens.

CLEOPHILUS, a man whose posterity, it is said, saved the poems of Homer. Plut

CLEOPOMPUS, an Athenian, who took Thronium, and conquered the Locrians, &c. Thucyd. 2, 26 et 28.——A man who married the nymph Cleodora, by whom he had Parnassus As Cleodora was beloved by Neptune, some have supposed that she had two husbands. Paus 10, 6

CLEOPTOLEMUS, a man of Chalcis, whose daughter was given in marriage to Antiochus. Liv. 36, 11.

CLEORA, the wife of Agesilaus. Plut. in Ages.

CLEOSTRATUS, a youth devoted to be sacrificed to a serpent, among the Thespians, &c. Paus. 9, 26.——An ancient philosopher and astronomer of Tenedos, about 536 years before Christ He first found the constellations of the zodiac, and reformed the Greek calendar.

CLEPSYDRA, a fountain of Messenia, in mount Ithome. Paus. 4, 31

CLIMAX, a pass of mount Taurus, formed by the projection of a brow into the Mediterranean sea. The army of Alexander, which passed it in the winter, were in the utmost danger, being obliged to march for nearly a whole day up to their middles in water. Strab 14.

CLINIAS, a Pythagorean philosopher and musician 520 years before the Christian era. Plut. in Symp.—Ælian. V H. 14, 23.——A son of Alcibiades, the bravest man in the Grecian fleet that fought against Xerxes Herod. 8, 17.—— The father of Alcibiades, killed at the battle of Coronea. Plut. in Alc ——The father of Aratus, killed by Abantidas, B.C. 263 Plut. in Arat. ——A friend of Solon Id. in Sol.

CLINUS of Cos, was general of 7000 Greeks in the pay of king Nectanebus. He was killed, with some of his troops, by Nicostratus and the Argives, as he passed the Nile. Diod. 16.

CLIO, the first of the muses, daughter of Jupiter and Mnemosyne. She presided over history She is represented crowned with laurels, holding in one hand a trumpet, and a book in the other. Sometimes she holds a plectrum or quill, with a lute. Her name signifies honour and reputation, (*a*κλεος, gloria,) and it was her office faithfully to record the actions of brave and illustrious heroes. She had Hyacinthus by Pierus son of Magnes She was also mother of Hymenæus, and Ialemus, according to others. Hesiod. Theog. 75.—Apollod. 1, 3.—Strab. 14.——One of Cyrene's nymphs. Virg. G. 4, 341.

CLISITHERA, a daughter of Idomeneus, promised in marriage to Leucus, by whom she was murdered.

CLISTHENES, the last tyrant of Sicyon. Aristot.——An Athenian of the family of Alcmæon. It is said that he first established ostracism, and that he was the first who was banished by that institution. He banished Isagoras, and was himself soon after restored. Plut. in Arist.—Herod. 5, 66, &c.

CLITÆ, a people of Cilicia Campestris, who retired to mount Taurus in order to avoid paying tribute to Archelaus, king of Cappadocia, and maintained themselves there under their leader Trosobor, against the troops sent to reduce them. Tacit Ann. 6, 41. 12, 55.——A place near mount Athos. Liv. 44, 11.

CLITARCHUS, a man who made himself absolute at Ereteia, by means of Philip of Macedonia. He was ejected by Phocion.——An historian, who accompanied Alexander the Great, of whose life he wrote the history. Curt. 9, 5.

CLITE, the wife of Cyzicus, who hung herself when she saw her husband dead. Apollon 1.—Orpheus

CLITERNIA, a town of Italy. Mela, 2, 4.

CLITOMACHUS, a native of Carthage, who, fond of learning in his early years, visited Greece for the purpose of attending the schools of the philosophers. At Athens he became the disciple of Carneades, and succeeded him in the Academic chair. By diligent study he made himself master of the systems of the other schools; but professed the doctrine of suspension of assent, as it had been taught by his predecessor. Cicero relates, that he wrote four hundred books upon philosophical subjects. At an advanced age he was seized with a lethargy; but when he in some measure recovered his faculties, he said, "the love of life shall deceive me no longer," and laid violent hands upon himself. He entered upon the office of preceptor in the Academy immediately after the death of Carneades, and held it thirty years. According to Cicero, he taught that there is no certain criterion by which to judge of the truth of those reports which we receive from the senses, and that therefore a wise man will either wholly suspend his assent, or decline giving a peremptory opinion; but that, nevertheless, men are strongly impelled by nature to follow probability. His moral doctrine established a natural alliance between pleasure and virtue. He was a professed enemy to rhetoric, and thought that no place should be allowed in society to so dangerous an art. Lacert. 4, 67.—Cic. Ac. Qu. 4, 31 et 32. Tusc. Qu. 5, 30.—Sext. Emp. adv. Rhet. 20.

CLITOR, a son of Lycaon.——A son of Azan, who founded a city in Arcadia, to the west of Pheneus and south of Nonacris, called after his name Paus 8, 4.—Apollod. 3, 8. Ceres, Æsculapius, Lucina, and other deities, had temples in that city. There was also in the town a fountain called Clitorium, whose waters gave a dislike for wine Ovid. Met. 15, 322.—Plin. H. N. 32, 2.

CLITUMNUS, a river of Umbria, rising in the vicinity of Spoletum, and flowing into the Tiber It was celebrated for its waters communicating a white colour to the flocks of cattle that grazed upon its banks It is now the Clitumno. Virg. G. 2, 146.—Propert. 2, et 19, 25.—Sil. Ital. 8, 462.—Juv. 12, 13.

CLITUS, a familiar friend and foster-brother of Alexander the Great, whom he accompanied in his Asiatic expedition, and to whose esteem he recommended himself by his courage and military experience. In a severe battle which the Macedonians fought, the life of Alexander, who was generally foremost in danger, was saved by the timely and vigorous interference of Clitus; but this friendly event was forgotten in the hour of drunkenness and debauchery. Clitus, though the friend of Alexander, would not demean himself to become his flatterer, and when he presumed at a feast with the boldness and freedom of a blunt soldier, to extol the exploits of Philip above those of his son, the king's fury was kindled, and with a javelin he meanly stabbed to the heart the honest and unsuspecting veteran. When too late, Alexander became sensible and inconsolable for the loss of this valued friend, whose good opinion he ought to have merited by fresh acts of valour, and by new conquests over the enemies of Greece. Justin. 12, 6.—Plut. in Alex.—Curt. 4, 13. 8, 1, 2, 18.——A commander of Polyperchon's ships, defeated by Antigonus Diod 18.——An officer sent by Antipater, with 240 ships against the Athenians, whom he conquered near the Echinades. Diod. 18.——A Trojan prince, son of Pisenor, and charioteer to Polydamas. He was killed by Teucer. Homer. Il. 15, 445.

CLOACINA, a goddess at Rome, who presided over the Cloacæ. Some suppose her to be Venus, whose statue was found in the Cloacæ, whence the name. The Cloacæ were large receptacles for the filth of the whole city, begun by Tarquinius Priscus, and finished by Tarquinius Superbus. They were built under the city, and the arches were so high and broad that, according to Procopius, a man on horseback might ride through them even in the ordinary course of the channel, and a wagon loaded with hay might pass, and vessels sail in them. There were in the streets, at proper distances, openings for the admission of dirty water or any other filth, which persons were appointed always to remove, and also to keep the Cloacæ clean. The principal sewer, now existing, with which the rest communicated, was called Cloaca Maxima, and was principally the work of Tarquinius Superbus. It is formed of three concentric rows of enormous stones, laid over each other without any cement whatever. Its height is about fifteen feet, and its width is the same. The Cloacæ were at first carried through the streets, but through the want of regularity in rebuilding the city, after it was burned by the Gauls, they in many places passed under private houses. Under the republic, the censors had the charge of them; but under the emperors, Curatores cloacarum were appointed, and a tax was imposed for keeping them in repair, called Cloacarium. Lex. 1, 34 et 56.—Plin. 36. 15.—Strab. 5.

CLOANTHUS, one of the companions of Æneas, from whom the family of the Cluentii at Rome were descended. Virg. Æn. 5, 122.

CLODIA, the wife of Lucullus, repudiated for her lasciviousness. Plut. in Lucull.——An opulent matron at Rome, mother of D. Brutus. Cic. ad Attic.——A woman who married Q Metellus, and afterwards disgraced herself by her amours with Cœlius, and her incest with her brother Publius, for which he is severely and eloquently arraigned by Cicero. Cic. pro Cœl.

CLODIA LEX, de Cypro, was enacted by the tribune Clodius, A.U.C. 695, that the kingdom of Cyprus should be taken from Ptolemy, and made a Roman province. This was done in order to punish that king for having refused Clodius money to pay his ransom when taken by the pirates, and to remove Cato out of the way by appointing him to execute the law.——Another, de Magistratibus, A.U.C. 695, by Clodius the tribune. It forbade the censors to inflict any mark of infamy on any man who had not been first openly accused and condemned by their joint sentence.——Another, de Religione, by the same, A.U.C. 696, to deprive the priest of Cybele, a native of Pessinus, of his office, and confer the priesthood upon Brotigonus, a Gallogrecian.——Another, de Provinciis, A.U.C. 696, which nominated the provinces of Syria, Babylon, and Persia, to the consul Gabinius; and Achaia, Thessaly, Macedon, and Greece, to his colleague Piso, with proconsular power. It empowered them to defray the expenses of their march from the public treasury.——Another, A.U.C. 695, which required the same distribution of corn among the people gratis, as had been given them before at six asses and a trens the bushel ——Another, A.U.C. 695, by the same, de Judicus. It called to an account such as had executed a Roman citizen without a judgment of the people, and all the formalities of a trial. Cicero, although not named, was plainly pointed at by this law, and soon after, by means of a hired mob, was actually banished.——Another, by the same, to pay no attention to the appearances of the heavens, while any affair was before the people.——Another, to make the power of the tribunes free, in making and proposing laws.——Another, to re-establish the companies of artificers, which had been instituted by Numa, but since his time abolished.

CLODII FORUM, a town of Italy. Itin. 3, 15.

PB. CLODIUS, a Roman, descended from an illustrious family, and remarkable for his licentiousness, avarice, and ambition. He committed incest with his three sisters, and introduced himself in woman's clothing, into the house of J. Cæsar, whilst Pompeia, Cæsar's wife, of whom he was enamoured, was celebrating the mysteries of Ceres, where no man was permitted to appear. He was accused for this violation of human and divine laws; but he corrupted his judges, and by that means screened himself from punishment. He descended from a patrician into a plebeian family to become a tribune. He was such an enemy to Cato, that he made him go with praetorian power, in an expedition against Ptolemy, king of Cyprus, that, by the difficulty of the campaign, he might ruin his reputation, and destroy his interest at Rome during his absence. Cato, however, by his uncommon success, frustrated the views of Clodius. He was also an inveterate enemy to Cicero, who had appeared against him in the trial, and endeavoured to draw down the execration and vengeance of the people upon his enemities. By his influence and intrigues, the orator was banished from Rome, partly on pretence that he had punished with death, and without trial, the adherents of Catiline. Not satisfied with this seeming disgrace of his enemy, Clodius wreaked his vengeance upon Cicero's house, which he burned, and set all his goods to sale; which, however, to his great mortification, no one offered to buy. In spite of Clodius, Cicero was recalled, and all his goods restored to him by the decree of the people. Baffled and disappointed in one instance, Clodius soon found another to give vent to his enmity, and Milo, Cicero's friend, was attacked with all the virulence of party. From accusations Milo and Clodius had recourse to violence; and accidentally meeting on the Appian road near Bovillæ, a quarrel ensued between their respective attendants, in which the masters soon eagerly joined. Clodius was wounded in the affray, and carried to a neighbouring house, where Milo, with unjustifiable resentment, pursued his enemy, and ordered him to be dragged out and stabbed. The body of the murdered Clodius was left exposed in the public road, till Tedius a senator brought it to Rome, where the fatal catastrophe kindled and engaged the passions of the populace. Milo was summoned to a trial, and though defended by all the powers and eloquence of Cicero, he was condemned and banished. Clodius had by Fulvia a son, who bore his name, and was stepson of Antony. Plut. in Cic.—Appian de Civ. l. —Cic. pro Mil. et pro Dom ——Quirinalis, a rhetorician in Nero's age. Tacit. Hist 1, 7.——Sextus, a rhetorician of Sicily, intimate with M. Antony, whose preceptor he was. Suet. de Clar. Orat —Cic. in Philip.——Sextus, a kinsman of Publius. He brought the body of his relation naked, and with all the wounds dreadfully opened, into the senate, where he inflamed the mob by his speeches, and tearing up the seats and tables of the edifice, he made with them a funeral pile. The senate-house was destroyed in the conflagration of the pile, and Clodius accused for this seditious conduct, was banished, but recalled afterwards by Antony. Cic. Att. 14, 13.

CLŒLIA, a Roman virgin, given, with other maidens, as hostages to Porsenna, king of Etruria. She escaped from her confinement, and swam across the Tiber to Rome. Her unprecedented virtue was rewarded by her countrymen, with an equestrian statue in the Via Sacra. Liv. 2. 13 —Virg. Æn. 8, 651 —Dionys Hal. 5.—Jus. 8, 265.——A patrician family descended from Cloelius, one of the companions of Æneas. Dionys.

CLOELIUS GRACCHUS, a general of the Volsci and Sabines against Rome, conquered by Q. Cincinnatus the dictator.——Tullus, a Roman ambassador put to death by Tolumnius king of the Veientes. Liv. 4, 17.——Titus Siculus, one of the first tribunes appointed with consular power. Liv. 4, 7.

CLONIA, the mother of Nycteus. Apollod. 3, 10.

CLONIUS, a Bœotian, who went with 50 ships to the Trojan war Homer Il. 2.——A Trojan killed by Messapus in Italy. Virg. Æn 10, 749.——Another, killed by Turnus. Id 9, 574.

CLOTHO, the youngest of the three Parcæ, daughter of Jupiter and Themis, or according to Hesiod, of Night, was supposed to preside over the moment that we are born. She held the distaff in her hand, and spun the thread of life, whence her name (κλώθειν, to spin). She was represented wearing a crown with seven stars, and covered with a variegated robe. (Vid. Parcæ.) Hesiod. Theog. 218 — Apollod. 1, 3.

CLUACINA, a name of Venus, whose statue was erected in that place where peace was made between the Romans and Sabines after the rape of the virgins. Vid Cloacina.

CLUENTIUS, a Roman citizen, accused by his mother of having murdered his father-in-law Oppianicus, 54 years before Christ. He was ably defended by Cicero, in an oration still extant. The family of the Cluentii was descended from Cloanthus, one of the companions of Æneas. Virg. Æn. 5, 122.—Cic. pro Cluent.

CLUILIA FOSSA, a place five miles distant from Rome. Liv. 1, 23. 2. 39

CLUPEA and CLYPEA, now Kalibia, a maritime town of Africa Propria, about 22 miles east from Carthage, which received its name from the resemblance of the promontory on which it stood to a shield (clypeus) Lucan. 4, 586.—Strab. 17.—Liv. 27, 29.—Cæs. Civ. 2, 23

CLUSIA, a daughter of an Etrurian king, of whom V. Torquatus the Roman general became enamoured. He asked her of her father, who slighted his addresses; upon which he besieged and destroyed his town. Clusia threw herself down from a high tower, and came to the ground unhurt. Plut. in Parall.

CLUSINI FONTES, Clusia in Etruria, near Clusium. They are now called Bagni de S. Cantiano Horat. 1, ep 15, 9.

CLUSIUM, now Chiusi, a town of Etruria, at a small distance to the west of Perusia, on the banks of the Clanis. Its ancient name was Camers. The Gauls under Brennus besieged it but marched to Rome without taking it. It was near Clusium that Porsenna erected for himself the splendid mausoleum of which Pliny has transmitted to us a description on the authority of Varro. The whole account seems to bear no small appearance of fiction; for had such a stupendous work really existed, some traces of it would surely have remained, not merely in Pliny's day, but even in the present age. Liv. 10, 25.—Diod. Sic. 14.—Plin. H N. 36, 13.—Virg Æn 10, 167.

CLUSIUS, a river of Cisalpine Gaul, now La Chiese. Polyb. 2.——The surname of Janus, when his temple was shut. Ovid Fast. 1, 130.

CLUVIA, a noted debauchee, &c. Juv. 2, 49.

CLUVIUS RUFUS, a quæstor, A.U.C. 692. Cic. ad Fam. 13, ep. 56 ——A man of Puteoli, appointed by Cæsar to divide the lands of Gaul, &c. Cic. Div. 13, 7.

CLYMENE, a daughter of Oceanus and Tethys, who married Japetus, by whom she had Atlas, Prometheus, Menœtius, and Epimetheus. Hesiod. Theog 508, &c ——One of the Nereides, mother of Mnemosyne by Jupiter. Homer. Il. 18, 47.—Virg. G. 4, 345.——The mother of Thesimenus by Parthenopæus Hygin. fab. 71 —— A daughter of Mynias, mother of Atalanta by Jasus. Apollod. 3.——A daughter of Crateus, who married Nauplius. Id. 2.——The mother of Phaeton by Apollo. Ovid. Met. 1, 756.——A female servant of Helen, who accompanied her mistress to Troy, when she eloped with Paris. Ovid. Heroid. 17, 267 — Homer. Il. 3, 144.

CLYMENEIDES, a patronymic given to Phaeton's sisters, who were daughters of Clymene.

CLYMENUS, a king of Orchomenus, son of Presbon, and father of Erginus, Stratius, Arrhon, and Axius. He received a wound from a stone thrown by a Theban, of which he died. His son Erginus, who succeeded him, made war against the Thebans, to revenge his death. Paus. 9, 37.——One of the descendants of Hercules, who built a temple to Minerva of Cydonia. Id.

6, 21 ——A son of Phoroneus. Id. 2, 35.——A king of Elis. Id.——A son of Œneus, king of Calydon.——A name of Pluto. Ovid. Fast. 6, 789.

CLYSONĬMUS, a son of Amphidamas, killed by Patroclus. Apollod. 3, 13.

CLYTEMNESTRA, a daughter of Tyndarus king of Sparta, by Leda. She was born, together with her brother Castor, from one of the eggs which her mother brought forth after her amour with Jupiter, under the form of a swan. Clytemnestra married Agamemnon king of Argos. She had before married Tantalus, son of Thyestes, according to some authors. When Agamemnon went to the Trojan war, he left his cousin Ægysthus to take care of his wife, of his family, and all his domestic affairs. Besides this, a certain favourite musician was appointed by Agamemnon, to watch over the conduct of the guardian as well as that of Clytemnestra. In the absence of Agamemnon, Ægysthus made his court to Clytemnestra, and after he had criminally alienated her heart from her husband, he publicly lived with her. Her infidelity reached the ears of Agamemnon before the walls of Troy, and he resolved to take full revenge upon the adulterers at his return. He was prevented, however, from putting his schemes into execution. Clytemnestra, with her adulterer, murdered him at his arrival, as he came out of the bath; or, according to other accounts, as he sat down at a feast prepared to celebrate his happy return. Cassandra, whom Agamemnon had brought from Troy, shared his fate; and Orestes would also have been deprived of his life, like his father, had not his sister Electra removed him from the reach of Clytemnestra. After this murder, Clytemnestra publicly married Ægysthus, and he ascended the throne of Argos. Orestes, after an absence of seven years, returned to Mycenæ, resolved to avenge his father's murder. He concealed himself in the house of his sister Electra, who had been married by the adulterers to a person of mean extraction and indigent circumstances. His death was publicly announced; and when Ægysthus and Clytemnestra repaired to the temple of Apollo, to return thanks to the god for the death of the surviving son of Agamemnon, Orestes, who with his faithful friend Pylades had concealed himself in the temple, rushed upon the adulterers, and killed them with his own hand. They were buried without the walls of the city, as their remains were deemed unworthy to be laid in the sepulchre of Agamemnon. (Vid. Ægysthus, Agamemnon, Orestes, Electra.) Dict. 4.—Homer. Odyss. 11.—Apollod. 3, 10.—Paus. 2, 16 et 22.—Euripid Iphig in Aul.—Hygin. fab. 117 et 140.—Propert 3, el. 19.—Virg. Æn. 4, 471.—Philostr. Icon. 2, 9

CLYTIA, or CLYTIE, a daughter of Oceanus and Tethys, beloved by Apollo. She was deserted by her lover, who paid his addresses to Leucothoe, and this so irritated her, that she discovered the whole intrigue to her rival's father. Apollo despised her the more for this, and she pined away, and was changed into a flower, commonly called the Heliotrope, (ἥλιος and τρέπω,) or sunflower, which still turns its head towards the sun in its course, as in pledge of her love. Ovid. Met 4, fab. 3, &c.——A daughter of Amphidamas, mother of Pelops, by Tantalus.——A concubine of Amyntor, son of Phrastor, whose calumny caused Amyntor to put out the eyes of his falsely accused son Phœnix. Eurip. in Orest.—Homer. Il. 9.

CLYTIUS, a son of Laomedon by Strymo. Hom. Il. 10.——A youth in the army of Turnus, beloved by Cydon. Virg. Æn. 10, 325.——A giant, killed by Vulcan, in the war waged against the gods. Apollod 1, 6.——The father of Pireus, who faithfully attended Telemachus. Homer. Odyss. 15, 251.——A son of Æolus, who followed Æneas in Italy, where he was killed by Turnus. Virg Æn. 9, 774.——A son of Alcmæon, the son of Amphiaraus Paus. 8, 17.

CLYTUS, a Greek in the Trojan war, killed by Hector. Homer. Il. 11, 302

CNACADIUM, a mountain of Laconia, near which was situated the town of Las Paus. 3, 24.

CNACĂLIS, a mountain of Arcadia, where festivals were celebrated in honour of Diana. Id. 8, 23.

CNEMUS, a Macedonian general, unsuccessful in an expedition against the Acarnanians. Diod. 12.—Thucyd. 2, 66, &c.

CNEUS, or CNÆUS, a prænomen common to many Romans. The C in this word is pronounced as a G.

CNIDUS and GNIDUS, a town and promontory of Doris in Caria, which has successively borne the names of Triopia, Pegusa, and Stadia. It was founded by Triopas the son of Abas. Venus, surnamed the Cnidian, was the chief deity of the place, and had here a temple rendered famous by a marble statue of the goddess. This beautiful image was the masterpiece of Praxiteles, and of such exquisite workmanship, that travellers from all parts of the world visited it with admiration, and Nicomedes, king of Bithynia, offered to liquidate the debt of the city, which was very considerable, if the Cnidians would cede it to him. Cnidus was the birth-place of the famous mathematician Eudoxus, the philosopher Agathareides, the historian Theopompus, and the physician Ctesias. It is now a mass of ruins, and the modern name of the promontory is Cape Krio Diod. 5, 61.—Herod. 1, 174.—Paus. 1, 1, —Plin. 36, 5.—Strab 14

CNOSSIA, a mistress of Menelaus. Apollod. 3, 11.

CNOSSUS, or GNOSSUS, a town of Crete, on the northern coast, at a small distance from the sea. According to Strabo, it was fifty stadia in circuit. Here Minos held his court. A little village, called Gnossou, occupies part of the ancient site of Cnossus. Paus. 1, 27.—Hom. Odyssey 19.

COASTRÆ and COACTRÆ, a people of Asia, near the Palus Mœotis. Lucan. 6, 246.

COBARES, a celebrated magician of Media, in the age of Alexander. Curt. 7, 4.

COCALUS, a king of Sicily, who hospitably received Dædalus, when he fled before Minos. When Minos arrived in Sicily, the daughters of Cocalus destroyed him. Ovid. Met. 8, 261.—Diod. 4

COCCEIUS NERVA, a friend of Horace and Mecænas, and grandfather to the emperor Nerva. He was a distinguished jurist of the day, and one of those who settled the disputes between Augustus and Antony. He afterwards accompanied Tiberius in his retreat in Campania, and starved himself to death. Tacit Ann. 4, 58. 6, 26.—Horat. Sat. 1, 5, 27.——An architect of Rome, in the age of Augustus, one of whose buildings is still in being, the present cathedral of Naples.——A nephew of Otho. Plut.—— A man to whom Nero granted a triumph, after the discovery of the Pisonian conspiracy. Tacit. Ann. 15, 72.

COCCYGIUS, a mountain of Argolis, between Hasiæ and Hermione. It is said to have obtained its name from the Greek word κόκκυξ, cuculus, owing to Jupiter's having there metamorphosed himself into a cuckoo. Paus. 2, 36.

COCINTUM, a promontory of the Brutii, which marked the separation between the Ionian and Sicilian seas. It is now called Capo di Stilo. Polyb. 2, 14.

COCLES, PUB. HORAT., a celebrated Roman, who, alone, opposed the whole army of Porsenna at the head of a bridge, while his companions behind him were cutting off the communication with the other shore. When the bridge was destroyed, Cocles, though severely wounded in the leg by the darts of the enemy, leaped into the Tiber, and swam across with his arms. A brazen statue was raised to him in the temple of Vulcan, by the consul Publicola, for his eminent services. He had the use only of one eye, as Cocles signifies. Liv. 2, 10.—Val. Max. 3, 2—Virg. Æn. 8, 650.

COCYTUS, a river of Epirus, which blends its nauseous waters with those of the Acheron. The word is derived from κωκύειν, to weep and to lament, its etymology, the unwholesomeness of its water, and above all, its vicinity to the Acheron, have made the poets call it one of the rivers of hell; hence Cocytia virgo, applied to Alecto, one of the Furies. Virg. G. 3, 38. 4, 479. Æn. 6, 297. 323. 7, 479.—Pous. 1, 17.——A river of Campania, flowing into the Lucrine lake.

CODANUS SINUS, one of the ancient names of the Baltic sea. Mela represents it as diversified with large and small islands, the largest of which he calls Scandinavia. The modern name Baltic seems to be derived from the Celtic Balt, or Belt, denoting a collection of water. Mela, 3, 3.—Plin. 4. 13.

CODOMĀNUS, a surname of Darius the third, king of Persia.

CODRIDÆ, the descendants of Codrus, who went from Athens at the head of several colonies. Paus. 7, 2.

CODRUS, the 7th and last king of Athens, son of Melanthus. When the Heraclidæ made war against Athens, the oracle declared that the victory would be granted to that nation whose king was killed in battle. The Heraclidæ upon this gave strict orders to spare the life of Codrus; but the patriotic king disguised himself, and attacked one of the enemy, by whom he was killed. The Athenians obtained the victory, and Codrus was deservedly called the father of his country. He reigned twenty-two years, and was killed 1070 years before the Christian era. To pay greater honour to his memory, the Athenians made a resolution that no man after Codrus should reign in Athens under the name of king, and therefore the government was put into the hands of perpetual archons. Paterc. 1, 2.—Justin. 2, 6 et 7.—Pol. 1, 19. 7, 25.—Val. Max. 5, 6.——A man who, with his brothers, killed Hegesias, tyrant of Ephesus, &c. Polyæn. 6, 49.——A Latin poet in the reign of Domitian, whose poverty became a proverb. Juv 3, 203.——A shepherd in Virgil. Virg. Ecl. 7, 26

COECILIUS, a centurion. Cæs. Civ. Bell

COELA, a place in the bay of Eubœa. Liv. 31, 47.——A part of Attica. Strab. 10.

COELE, the northern division of Elis.——A town situated on the Hellespont, south of Sestos. It is remarkable for the naval victory which the Athenians obtained in its vicinity over the Lacedæmonians.——A place in the suburbs of Athens, appropriated to sepulchres. Cimon and Thucydides were both entombed here. Herod. 6, 103.—Paus. 1, 29.

COELESYRIA and COELOSYRIA, the Hollow Syria, a country of Syria, between the ranges of Libanus and Antilibanus, where the Orontes takes its rise. Its capital was Damascus.—— Antiochus Cyzicenus gave this name to that part of Syria which he obtained as his share, when he divided his father's dominions with Grypus. B.C. 112. Dionys. Perieg.

COELIA, the wife of Sylla. Plut in Syll. The Cœlian family, which was plebeian, but honoured with the consulship, was descended from Vibenna Cœles, an Etrurian, who came to settle at Rome in the age of Romulus.

COELIA LEX, a law enacted A.U.C 630, that in trials for treason the people should vote by ballot.

COELIUS, a Roman, defended by Cicero (Vid. Cœlius.)——Two brothers of Tarracina accused of having murdered their father in his bed. They were acquitted, when it was proved that they were both asleep at the time of the murder. Val. Max. 8, 1.—Plut. in Cic.——A lieutenant of Antony's.——A man who, after spending his all in dissipation and luxury, became a public robber with his friend Birrhus. Horat. Sat. 1, 4, 69.——A Roman historian, who flourished B.C. 121.——A hill of Rome. Vid. Cœlius.

COELUS or URANUS, an ancient deity, supposed to be the father of Saturn, Oceanus, Hyperion, &c. He was son of Terra, whom he afterwards married. The number of his children, according to some, amounted to forty-five. They were called Titans, and were so closely confined by their father, that they conspired against him, and were supported by their mother, who provided them with a scythe. Saturn armed himself with this scythe, and deprived his father of the organs of generation, as he was going to unite himself to Terra. From the blood which issued from the wound, sprang the giants, furies, and nymphs. The mutilated parts were thrown into the sea, and from them, and the foam which they occasioned, arose Venus the goddess of beauty. Hesiod Theog.

COENUS, an officer of Alexander, son-in-law to Parmenio. He died of a distemper, in his return from India. Curt. 9, 3.—Diod 17.

COERANUS, a stoic philosopher. Tacit. Ann. 14, 52.——A person slain by Ulysses. Ovid. Met. 13, 157.——A Greek, charioteer to Merion. He was killed by Hector. Homer. Il. 17, 610.

COES, a man of Mitylene, made sovereign master of his country by Darius. His countrymen stoned him to death. Herod. 5, 11 et 38

COEUS, a son of Cœlus and Terra. He was father of Latona, Asteria, &c. by Phœbe. Hesiod. Theog. 135 et 405.—Virg. G. 1, 279.—— A river of Messenia, flowing by Electra. Paus. 4, 33.

COGIDŪNUS, a king of Britain, faithful to Rome Tacit. Agric. 14.

COHORS. Vid. Legio

COLÆNUS, a king of Attica, before the age of Cecrops, according to some accounts. Paus. 1, 31.

COLAXAIS, one of the remote ancestors of the Scythians. Herod. 4, 5, &c.

COLAXES, a son of Jupiter and Ora. Flacc. 6, 48.

COLCHI, the inhabitants of Colchis.

COLCHIS and COLCHOS, a country of Asia, at the south of Asiatic Sarmatia, east of the Euxine sea, north of Armenia, and west of Iberia, now called Mingrelia. It is famous for the expedition of the Argonauts, and as the birth-place of Medea. It was fruitful in poisonous herbs, and produced excellent flax. The inhabitants were originally Egyptians, who settled here when Sesostris king of Egypt extended his conquests into the North. From the country arise the epithets of Colchus, Colchicus, Colchiacus, and Medea receives the name of Colchis. Juv. 6, 640.—Flacc. 5, 416.—Horat. 2, od. 13, 8.—Strab. 11.—Ptol. 5, 10.—Ovid. Met. 13, 24. Amor. 2, el. 14, 28.—Mela, 1, 19. 2, 3.

COLENDA, a town of Spain, among the Arevacæ, now probably Cuellar. Appian. B. Hisp. 99.

COLIAS, now Agio Nocolo, a promontory of Attica, in the form of a man's foot, where Venus had a temple. Herod 8, 96

COLLATIA, a town of Latium, to the north of Gabii, and colonised from Alba. It was rendered celebrated in Roman history, by the death of the chaste Lucretia. In the time of Strabo it appears to have been little more than a village. According to Nibby, some slight remains of it are still to be traced on a hill, which from thence has obtained the name of Castellaccio. Liv. 1, 58.—Strab. 5.——A town of Apulia, near mount Garganus, now Collatina. Plin 3, 11.

COLLATINUS, L. TARQUINIUS, a nephew of Tarquin the Proud, who married Lucretia, to whom Sext. Tarquin offered violence. He with Brutus, drove the Tarquins from Rome, and were made first consuls. As he was one of the Tarquins, so much abominated by all the Roman people, he laid down his office of consul, and retired to Alba in voluntary banishment. Liv. 1, 57. 2, 2.—Flor. 1, 9.

COLLINA, one of the gates of Rome, on mount Quirinalis, so called, a collibus Quirinali et Viminali Ovid. Fast. 4, 871.——A goddess at Rome, who presided over hills.——The name of one of the four regions into which Rome was divided by Servius Tullius. The other three were Suburana, Esquilina, and Palatina.

COLLUCIA, a lascivious woman, &c. Juv. 6, 306.

COLO, JUN., a governor of Pontus, who brought Mithridates to the emperor Claudius. Tacit Ann. 12, 21.

COLONA, a town of Mysia, in the territory of Lampsacus.——A town of Troas, north of Larissa. Strab. 13.

COLONIA, AGRIPPINA, a city of Germany, on the Rhine, now Cologne.——Equestris, a town on the lake of Geneva, now Nion.——Morinorum, a town of Gaul, now Terrouen in Artois.——Norbensis, a town of Spain, now Alcantara.——Trajana, or Ulpia, a town of Germany, now Kein, near Cleves.——Valentia, a town of Spain, which now bears the same name.

COLONOS, an eminence near Athens, where Œdipus retired during his banishment, from which circumstance Sophocles has given the title of Œdipus Coloneus to one of his tragedies.

COLOPHON, a city of Ionia, near the sea, north-west of Ephesus. It was founded by Mopsus, grandson of Tiresias, and in process of time, Damasichthon and Promethus sons of Codrus, conducted a colony hither It was destroyed by Lysimachus, and its inhabitants were sent to people Ephesus; but after his death it was rebuilt in a more convenient situation. The Colophonians were such excellent horsemen, that they usually brought victory to the side on which they fought; and hence the proverb, Κολοφὼν ἱππεῦσιν, Colophonem adsiere, i. e. to put a finish to any thing. Colophon was the native city of Mimnermus, Nicander, and Xenophanes, and one of the places which laid claim to the honour of having given birth to Homer. Apollo had a temple there. Strab. 14.—Plin. 7, 3.—Tacit. Ann. 2, 54.—Cic. pro Arch. Poet. 8—Ovid Met. 6, 8.

COLOSSE and COLOSSIS, a large town of Phrygia, near Laodicea, of which the government was democratical, and the first ruler called archon. One of the first Christian churches was established there, and one of St Paul's epistles was addressed to it. Colossæ was destroyed by an earthquake, together with Laodicea and Hierapolis, in the tenth year of the reign of Nero; but rose from its ruins, and was known in the tenth century under the name of Chonæ. Some remains of it are to be seen on the site now called Khonas Herod. 7, 30.—Strab. 12.

COLOSSUS, a celebrated brazen image at Rhodes, which ranked among the seven wonders of the world. It was the workmanship of Chares, a disciple of Lysippus, who spent twelve years in making it. Its height was seventy cubits, or 105 feet; there were few men who could encompass its thumb with their arms, and its fingers were thicker than ordinary statues. It was hollow, and in its cavities were immense stones, placed there to balance it on its pedestal. It stood at the entrance of the harbour, with its feet on two rocks, and it is said that vessels could pass under its legs. There was a winding staircase to go up to the top of it, from whence one might discover Syria, and the ships that went to Egypt. It was begun B. C 300, and after having stood about 66 years, was broken off at the knees, and thrown down by an earthquake. It remained in ruins for the space of 894 years; and the Rhodians, who had received several large contributions to repair it, divided the money among themselves, and frustrated the expectations of the donors, by saying that the oracle of Delphi forbade them to raise it up again from its ruins. In the year 672 of the Christian era, it was sold by the Saracens, who were masters of the island, to a Jewish merchant of Edessa, who loaded 900 camels with the brass. Allowing 800 pounds weight for each load, the brass, after the diminution which it had sustained by rust, and probably by theft, amounted to 720,000 pounds weight. Plin. 34, 18.—Strab. 14.

COLOTES, a Teian painter, disciple of Phidias. Plin. 35, 8.——A follower of Epicurus, accused of ignorance by Plut.——A sculptor, who made a statue of Æsculapius. Strab. 8.

COLUBRARIA, now Monte Colubre, a small island at the east of Spain, supposed to be the same as Ophiusa. Plin. 3, 5.

COLUMBA, a dove, the symbol of Venus among the poets. This bird was sacred to Venus, and received divine honours in Syria. Doves disappeared once every year at Eryx, where Venus had a temple; and they were said to accompany the goddess to Libya, whither she went to pass nine days, after which they returned. Doves were supposed to give oracles in the oaks of the forest of Dodona. Tibull. 1, el. 7, 17.—Ælian. V. H. 1, 15.

COLUMELLA (L. JUNIUS MODERATUS), an ancient writer, born at Gades in the reign of Augustus or Tiberius. Among other works, he composed a treatise on agriculture, in twelve books, of which the tenth, relative to gardening, is written in verse. The style is elegant, and the work displays the genius of a naturalist, and the labours of an accurate observer. The best edition of Columella is that of Schneider, in the Scriptores Res Rusticæ, Lips. 1794—97, 4 vols. 8vo.

COLUMNÆ HERCULIS, a name given to two mountains on the extreme east parts of Spain and Africa, at the entrance into the Mediterranean. They were called Calpe and Abyla, the former on the coast of Spain, and the latter on the side of Africa, at the distance of only 18 miles. They are reckoned the boundaries of the labours of Hercules, and they were supposed to have been joined, till the hero separated them, and opened a communication between the Mediterranean and Atlantic seas —— Protei, the boundaries of Egypt, or the extent of the kingdom of Proteus. Alexandria was supposed to be built near them, though Homer places them in the island Pharos. Odys. 4, 351.—Virg. Æn 11, 262.

COLUTHUS, a native of Lycopolis in Egypt, supposed to have lived about the beginning of the sixth century. He wrote a poem in three hundred and eighty-five verses which bears the title of "the Rape of Helen." This poem was discovered by Cardinal Bessarion along with that of Quintus Smyrnæus. The best editions are, that of Van Lennep, Leovard. 1747, 8vo, and that of Bekker, Berol 1816, 8vo.

COMAGENA, or COMMAGENE, now Kamash, a country on the northern extremity of Syria, between mount Amanus and the Euphrates. It was governed by its own kings till Vespasian united it to the Roman empire, some time after which, it was merged in the province called Euphratensis. Its chief town, and the residence of its kings, was Samosata. Strab. 11 et 17

COMANA (æ, et orum), a town of Pontus, on the Iris, south-east of Amasea, now Almons, remarkable for a magnificent temple, variously ascribed to Bellona, to Venus, and to Diana Taurica, the service of which was performed by 6,000 ministers of both sexes. The chief priest among them was very powerful, and acknowledged no superior but the king of the country. This office was generally conferred upon one of the royal family. Strab 12. – Hirt Alex. 34.—— Another in Cappadocia, on the Sarus, famous, like the Pontic Comana, for its temple of Bellona, called Taurica, the service of which was performed by 6,000 ministers, governed by a chief priest, who acknowledged no superior but the king of the country. It is now Al-Bostan. Strab. 12.—Hirt. Alex 66

COMARIA, the ancient name of Cape Comorin in India.

COMBE, a daughter of Ophlus who first invented a brasen suit of armour. She was changed into a bird, and escaped from her children, who had conspired to murder her. It is said that she had 100 children; whence the proverb of as many children as Combe, to denote a prolific mother Ovid. Met. 7, 382.

COMBREA, a town near Pallene Herod. 7, 123.

COMBUTIS, a general under Brennus. Paus. 10, 22.

COMETES the father of Asterion, and one of the Argonauts. Flacc. 1, 336.——One of the Centaurs, killed at the nuptials of Pirithous. Ovid Met. 12, 284.——A son of Thestius, killed at the chase of the Calydonian boar. Paus. 8, 45.——One of the Magi, intimate with Cambyses king of Persia. Justin. 1, 9.

COMÆTHO, a daughter of Pterilaus, who deprived her father of a golden hair in his head, upon which depended his fate. She was put to death by Amphitryon for her perfidy. Apollod. 2, 4.

Q. COMINIUS, a Roman knight, who wrote some illiberal verses against Tiberius. Tacit. Ann. 4, 34.

COMITIA, (orum), an assembly of the Roman people. The word is derived from Comitium, the place where they were convened, quasi a cum eundo. The Comitium was a large hall, which was left uncovered at the top, in the first ages of the republic; so that the assembly was often dissolved in rainy weather The Comitia were called, some consularia, for the election of the consuls; others prætoria, for the election of prætors, &c. These assemblies were more generally known by the name of Comitia, Curiata, Centuriata, and Tributa. The Curiata was when the people gave their votes by curiæ The Centuriata were not convened in later times. (Vid. Centuria.) Another assembly was called Comitia Tributa, where the votes were received from the whole tribes together. At first the Roman people were divided only into three tribes; but as their numbers increased, the tribes were at last swelled to thirty-five. The object of these assemblies was the electing of magistrates, and all the public officers of state. They could be dissolved by one of the tribunes, if he differed in opinion from the rest of his colleagues If one among the people was seized with the falling sickness, or epilepsy, the whole assembly was immediately dissolved, whence that disease is called morbus comitialis. After the custom of giving their votes viva voce had been abolished, every one of the assembly, in the enacting of a law, was presented with two ballots, on one of which were the letters U. R., that is uti rogas, be it as you request; on the other was an A., that is antiquo, which bears the same meaning as antiquam volo, I like the old law, I vote against the new. If the number of ballots with U. R was superior to the A.'s, the law was approved constitutionally; if not it was rejected. Only the chief magistrates, and sometimes the pontifices, had the privilege of convening these assemblies. There were only these eight of the magistrates who had the power of proposing a law, the consuls, the dictator, the prætor, the interrex, the decemvirs, the military tribunes, the kings, and the triumvirs. These were called majores magistratus; to whom one of the minores magistratus was added, the tribune of the people.

COMIUS, a man appointed king over the Atrebates, by J. Cæsar, for his services. Cæs Bell. G. 4, 21.

COMMAGENE. Vid. Comagena.

COMMODUS (L. AURELIUS ANTONINUS), son of M Antoninus, succeeded his father in the Roman empire; and as if to display the vast difference between virtue and vice, between a respectable father and a dissipated son, he disgraced himself and his family by the most flagitious crimes. Naturally cruel, he was fond of indulging his licentious propensities; and regardless of the instructions of philosophers, and of the occencies of nature, he corrupted his own sisters, and kept three hundred women, and as many boys, for his illicit pleasures. Desirous to be called Hercules, like that hero, he adorned his shoulders with a lion's skin, and armed his hand with a knotted club. Regardless of decency, he exhibited himself naked in public, and fought with the gladiators, boasting of his great dexterity in killing the wild beasts in the amphitheatre. Not satisfied with the applause of his flatterers, he required divine honours from the senate, and they were granted. He was wont to put such an immense quantity of gold dust in his hair, that when he appeared bare-headed in the sunshine, his head glittered as if surrounded with sunbeams. Martia, one of his concubines, whose death he had prepared, poisoned him; but as the poison did not quickly operate, he was strangled by a wrestler. He died in the 31st year of his age, and the 13th of his reign, A D. 192. It has been observed, that he never trusted himself to a barber, but always burnt his beard in imitation of the tyrant Dionysius. Herodian.

COMMORIS, a village of Cilicia. Cic. Fam. 15, ep. 4.

COMPITĀLIA, festivals celebrated by the Romans on the 2d of May, in the cross ways, in honour of the household gods called Lares. Tarquin the Proud, or according to some, Servius Tullius, instituted them on account of an oracle which ordered him to offer heads to the Lares. He sacrificed to them human victims; but J. Brutus, after the expulsion of the Tarquins, thought it sufficient to offer them only poppy heads, and men of straw. The slaves were generally the ministers, and during the celebration they enjoyed their freedom. Varro de L. L. 5, 3.—Ovid. Fast. 5, 140.—Dionys. Hal 4.

COMPSA, now Conza, a town of Samnium, on the southern confines of the Hirpini It revolted to Hannibal after the battle of Cannæ, and it was here that the general left his baggage and part of his army when advancing into Campania. Compsa was retaken by the Romans under Fabius two years afterwards. Liv. 23, 1. 24, 20.

COMPSATUS, a river of Thrace, falling into the lake Bistonis. Herod. 7, 109

COMUM, a town of Gallia Cisalpina, situated at the south western extremity of the Lacus Larius. It was originally a Gallic settlement, and continued to be an inconsiderable place until a Greek colony was established here by Pompeius Strabo and Cornelius Scipio, and subsequently by Julius Cæsar. It thenceforth took the name of Novum Comum. It is now Como. Strab. 5.—Suet. Cæs. 28.—Plin. Ep. 3, 6. 4, 13. 9, 24.

COMUS, the god of revelry, feasting, and nocturnal entertainments During his festivals, men and women exchanged each other's dress. He was represented as a young and drunken man, with a garland of flowers on his head, and a torch in his hand, which seemed falling. He is more generally seen sleeping upon his legs, and turning himself when the heat of the falling torch has scorched his side. Plut. Icon. 2.—Plut. Quæst. Rom. 55.

CONCANI, a people of Spain, among the Cantabri. Their food was milk mixed with horses' blood. Their chief town, Concana, is now called Santalana, or Cangas do Oms. Virg. G. 3, 463. —Sil. 3 361.—Horat. Od. 3, 4, 34.

CONCORDĪA, the goddess of peace and concord at Rome, to whom Camillus first raised a temple in the Capitol, where the magistrates often assembled for the transaction of public business. She had besides this, other temples and statues, and she was addressed to promote the peace and union of families and citizens. The goddess of concord was generally represented as young, crowned with garlands, holding a cup in one hand, and in the other a cornucopia, or a sceptre, from which appeared to issue forth all sorts of fruits. Sometimes she appears holding a bundle of small sticks, to intimate that these, when separated, are weak and useless, but when united, powerful and difficult to be broken. The most ordinary symbol, however, of concord is two hands joined together, holding a caduceus or a pomegranate. Plut. in Camill.—Plin. 33, 1.—Cic. pro Domo.—Ovid Fast. 1, 639. 6, 637.

CONDATE, a town of Gaul, now Rennes (Rhedonum urbs), in Britany.

CONDIVICNUM, a town of Gaul, now Nantes in Brittany. Vid. Namnetes.

CONDOCHĀTES, a river of India, which discharged itself into the Ganges opposite Palibothra. Now, the Gunduck.

CONDRŪSI, a people of Gallia Belgica, inhabiting the district Condros, in the bishopric of Liege. Cæs. Bell. G. 4, 6.

CONETODŪNUS and COTUATUS, two desperate Gauls, who raised their countrymen against Rome, &c. Cæs Bell G 7, 3.

CONFLUENTES, a town at the confluence of the Moselle and Rhine, now Coblentz.

CONFUCIUS, or CON-FU-TSE, a celebrated Chinese philosopher, born of an illustrious family, in the reign of the emperor Lu, about 550 B.C. At fifteen years of age he engaged in the study of the ancient learning of his country, and discovered such uncommon wisdom, that he was early advanced to the office of minister of state. Finding all his efforts to reform the corrupt manners of the court ineffectual, he retired from his public station, and instituted a school, in which he is said to have had several thousand disciples to whom he taught morals, the art of reasoning, and the principles of policy. His life is said to have been in every respect worthy of the character of a philosopher. He lived to the age of seventy-three. By his sage counsels, his moral doctrine, and his exemplary conduct, he obtained an immortal name as the reformer of his country. After his death, his name was held in the highest veneration; and his doctrine and writings are still regarded among the Chinese as the basis of all moral and political wisdom. His family enjoyed by inheritance the honourable title and office of Mandarins; and religious honours were paid to his memory.

CONIACI, a people of Spain, at the head of the Iberus. Strab. 3.

CONIMBRĪCA a town of Lusitania, near the sea-coast, on the river Monda, now Coimbra of Portugal.

CONISALTUS, a god worshipped at Athens, with the same ceremonies as Priapus at Lampsacus. Strab. 8.

CONNĪDAS, the preceptor of Theseus, in whose honour the Athenians instituted a festival called Connideia It was then usual to sacrifice to him a ram. Plut. in Thes.

CONNUS, a musician, who is said to have instructed Socrates. Cic. Fam. 9, 22.

CONON, a famous general of Athens, son of Timotheus. He was made governor of all the islands of the Athenians, and was detested in a naval battle by Lysander, near the Ægospota-

mos. He retired in voluntary banishment to Evagoras king of Cyprus, and afterwards to Artaxerxes king of Persia, by whose assistance he freed his country from slavery. He defeated the Spartans near Cnidos in an engagement, where Pisander, the enemy's admiral, was killed. By his means the Athenians fortified their city with a strong wall, and were bidding fair, under his guidance, to recover their former power, when with their wonted fickleness they accused him of a misappropriation of the money received by him from the king of Persia, and of other crimes for which there appears to have been little or no foundation. He did not, however, survive the accusation; but the manner and particular time of his death are not known, though it is generally supposed that he was murdered in prison. C Nep. in vita.—Plut. in Lys. et Artax.—Isocrates.——A Greek astronomer of Samos, who wrote an account of all the eclipses which had been observed by the Egyptians. To ingratiate himself with Ptolemy Evergetes, king of Egypt, by whom he was protected and patronised, he publicly declared that the queen's locks, which had been dedicated in the temple of Venus, and had since disappeared, were become a constellation. He was intimate with Archimedes, and flourished 247 B.C. Catull 67.—Virg. Ecl. 3 40 ——A Grecian mythologist in the age of Julius Cæsar, who wrote a book which contained forty fables, still extant, preserved by Photius.—— There was a treatise written on Italy by a man of the same name

CONSENTES, the name which the Romans gave to the twelve superior gods, the Dii majorum gentium. The word signifies as much as consentientes, that is, who consented to the deliberations of Jupiter's council. They were twelve in number, whose names Ennius has briefly expressed in these lines:

Juno, Vesta, Minerva, Ceres, Diana, Venus, Mars, Mercurius, Jovi, Neptunus, Vulcanus, Apollo.

In ancient inscriptions they are thus marked: J.O.M. (i. e. Jovi optimo maximo) CETERISQ. DIS CONSENTIBUS. Varro de R.R.

CONSENTIA, now Cosenza, a town in the country of the Brutii, near the source of the river Crathis. It was taken by Hannibal after the surrender of Petilia, but again fell into the hands of the Romans towards the end of the war. Strab 6.—Liv. 23, 30 29, 38.

CONSIDIUS ÆQUUS, a Roman knight, &c. Tacit.——Caius, one of Pompey's adherents, &c. Cæs. bell Civ. 2, 23.

CONSTANS, a son of Constantine. Vid. Constantinus.

CONSTANTIA, a grand-daughter of the great Constantine, who married the emperor Gratian.

CONSTANTINA, a princess, wife of the emperor Gallus

CONSTANTINOPOLIS, now Stamboul, formerly Byzantium, the capital of Thrace, a noble and magnificent city, built by Constantine the Great, and solemnly dedicated A.D. 330. It was the capital of the eastern Roman empire, and was called after its foundation, Roma Nova, on account of its greatness, which seemed to rival Rome. The beauty of its situation, with all its conveniences, have been the admiration of every age. Constantinople became long the asylum of science and of learned men, but upon its conquest by Mahomet II., 29th of May, 1453, the professors retired from the barbarity of their victors, and found in Italy the protection which their learning deserved. This migration was highly favourable to the cause of science, and while the Pope, the head of the house of Medicis, and the emperor, munificently supported the fugitives, other princes imitated their example, and equally contributed to the revival of literature in Europe.

CONSTANTINUS, surnamed the Great, from the greatness of his exploits, son of Constantius, by Helena, was born at Naissus in Dacia, though some historians consider Britain as the place of his nativity. On the death of his father, he succeeded to the title of Cæsar, the lower rank of the imperial dignity; and supported by his victories over the Germans and Barbarians, he soon after assumed the nobler appellation of Augustus, though Galliensus, his colleague on the throne, viewed with jealousy his elevation and promising talents. The division of a great empire among various masters, was a temptation to the ambitious and aspiring, and therefore Constantine, naturally endowed with strong resources of mind, and secure in the affections of his soldiery, prepared to claim the sovereignty of the world, without the fears of either a superior or an equal. With 40,000 men he marched against his colleague Maxentius, whose cruelties in Italy deserved the severest chastisement; and in the doubts which agitated his breast at this awful period, a miracle appeared, to inflame his ambition and to animate his troops. A luminous body of light, say historians, presented itself in the sky, in the form of a cross, to the astonished eyes of Constantine: and the inscription which it bore, τούτῳ νίκα, in hoc vince, reminded the monarch of his superstitious adherence to the heathen religion, and that moment made him a convert to christianity. The enemy were defeated, and the grateful emperor for ever after displayed at the head of his army a labarum, or cross, the holy standard under whose auspices he had obtained the victory. Yet though Constantine thus embraced the Christian faith, he rejected the purity of its practice; and unable to endure a rival in his brother-in-law Licinius, he made war against him, and after various treaties, in which neither confidence nor sincerity prevailed, he compelled him to abdicate the imperial power, and acknowledge him sole sovereign of the Roman world. Absolute power in the hands of a virtuous individual, may fortunately be directed to the happiness of the people, and the prosperity of the empire; and if Constantine wished to be without a rival, that he might more fully devote himself to advance and establish the public and private welfare, his ambition is excusable, and his views were noble and praiseworthy. The abuses in the state were certainly checked; and if the emperor had done nothing besides affording protection and toleration to the thousand meek and inoffensive individuals who had embraced the religion of Christ, his memory would deserve the noblest panegyrics of the historian. The views which he formed of the greatness of his empire were extensive and magnificent; and either to a secret jealousy of the antiquity and independent spirit of Rome, or to the contemplation of the superior advantages and more centrical situation of Byzantium as a capital, we are to ascribe the foundation of Constantinople. The plan was in the conception sublime, but while Constantine plundered the capital of Italy of her fairest honours, and transported her senate, her magistrates and her ensigns of dignity to her new rival he laid the foundations of jealousy and mutual hatred Rome and Constantinople, now equal in population and magnificence, by turns or accident occasionally honoured by the residence of the imperial family, began to look upon each other with an eye of envy; and soon after the age of Constantine, a separation was made of the two empires, and Rome was called the capital of the western, and Constantinopolis was called the capital of the eastern dominions of Rome. Constantine has been distinguished for personal courage, and liberally praised for the protection which he extended to the christians. Though at first he persecuted the Arians, he afterwards inclined to their opinions. His murder of his son Crispus has been deservedly censured; for whatever were the provocations either in temper or conduct which he might have received, the imputation of cruelty and of enormous guilt must attach to him, who, while he pretended to profess and practise the many virtues of christianity, did not hesitate to imbrue his hands in the blood of his family. By removing the Roman legions from the garrisons on the rivers, Constantine opened an easy passage to the barbarians, and rendered his soldiers unwarlike. He defeated 100,000 Goths, and received into his territories 300,000 Sarmatians, who had been banished by their slaves, and allowed them land to cultivate. Constantine was learned, and preached as well as composed, many sermons, one of which remains He died A. D. 337, after a reign of 31 years of the greatest glory and success. He left three sons, Constantinus, Constans, and Constantius, among whom he divided his vast empire. The first, who had Gaul, Spain, and Britain for his portion, was conquered by the armies of his brother Constans, and killed in the 25th year of his age, A D 340. Magnentius, the governor of the provinces of Rhætia, murdered Constans in his bed, after a reign of 13 years over Italy, Africa, and Illyricum, and Constantius, the only surviving brother, now become the sole emperor, A. D. 353, punished his brother's murderer, and gave way to cruelty and oppression. He visited Rome, where he displayed a triumph, and died A. D. 361, in his march against Julian, who had been proclaimed independent emperor by his soldiers.——The name of Constantine was very common to the emperors of the east, in a later period.

CONSTANTIUS CHLORUS, son of Eutropius, and father of the great Constantine, merited the title of Cæsar, which he obtained, by his victories in Britain and Germany. He became the colleague of Galerius, on the abdication of Diocletian; and after bearing the character of a humane and benevolent prince, he died at York, and made his son his successor, A. D. 306.——The second son of Constantine the Great. (Vid. Constantinus.)——The father of Julian and Gallus, was son of Constantius by Theodora, and died A D 337.——A Roman general of Nyssa, who married Placidia, the sister of Honorius, and was proclaimed emperor, an honour he enjoyed only seven months. He died universally regretted, 421 A.D and was succeeded by his son Valentinian in the west.

CONSUALES LUDI, or CONSUALIA, festivals at Rome in honour of Consus, the god of counsel, whose altar Romulus disenvered under the ground. This altar was always covered, except at the festival; when a mule was sacrificed, and games and horse-races exhibited in honour of Neptune. It was dur ng these festivals that Romulus carried away the Sabine women who had assembled to be spectators of the games. They were first instituted by Romulus. Some say, however, that Romulus only regulated and re-instituted them after they had been before established by Evander. During the celebration, which happened about the middle of August, horses, mules, and asses, were exempted from all labour, and were led through the streets adorned with garlands and flowers. Auson. 69, 9.—Ovid. Fast. 3, 199.—Liv. 1, 9.—Dionys. Hal. 1.

CONSUL, a magistrate at Rome, with regal authority for the space of one year. There were two consuls, a comendendo, annually chosen in the Campus Martius. The two first consuls were L. Jun. Brutus, and L. Tarquinius Collatinus, chosen A.U.C. 244, after the expulsion of the Tarquins. In the first ages of the republic, the two consuls were always chosen from patrician families, or noblemen; but the people obtained the privilege, A.U.C. 388, of electing one of the consuls from their own body; and sometimes both were plebeians. The first consul among the plebeians was L. Sextius. It was required that every candidate for the consulship should be 43 years of age, called legitimum tempus. He was always to appear at the election as a private man, without a retinue, and it was requisite before he canvassed for the office, to have discharged the inferior functions of quæstor, ædile, and prætor Sometimes these qualifications were disregarded. M. Val. Corvus was made a consul in his 23d year; Scipio Africanus the Elder in his 28th, and the Younger in his 38th, T. Quinctius Flaminius, when not quite 30; and Pompey, before he was full 36. The consuls were at the head of the whole republic. All the other magistrates were subject to them, except the tribunes of the commons. They assembled the people and the senate, laid before them what they pleased, and executed their decrees. The laws which they proposed and got passed, were commonly called by their name. They received all letters from the governors of provinces, and from foreign kings and states, and gave audience to ambassadors. The year was named after them, as it used to be at Athens from one of the archons. Their insignia were the same with those of the kings, except the crown, namely, the toga prætexta, sella curulis, the sceptre or ivory staff (scipio eburneus), and twelve lictors with the fasces and securis. He who had the greater number of suffrages was called consul prior, and his name was marked first in the calendar, he also had the fasces first, and usually presided at the election of magistrates for the next year. All persons went out of the way, uncovered their heads, dismounted from horseback, or rose up to the consuls as they passed by them. When a prætor happened to meet a consul, his lictors always lowered their fasces. Valerius Popilcola took away the securis from the fasces, i. e. he took from the consuls the power of life and death, and only left them the right of scourging at least within the city; for without the city, when invested with military command, they still retained the securis, i. e. the right of punishing capitally. Their provinces used anciently to be decreed by the senate after the consuls were elected or had entered on their office. But by the Sempronian law, passed A. U. C. 631, the senate always decreed two provinces for the future consuls before their election, which they, after entering on their office, divided by lot or agreement. Sometimes a certain province was assigned to some one of the consuls, both by the decree of the senate, and by the order of the people, and sometimes again the people had reversed what the senate had decreed concerning the provinces. They were not permitted to return to Rome without the special command of the senate, and they always remained in their province till the arrival of their successor. At their return they harangued the people, and solemnly protested that they had done nothing against the laws or interest of their country, but had faithfully and diligently endeavoured to promote the greatness and welfare of the state. No man could be consul two following years; yet this institution was sometimes broken, and we find Marius re-elected consul, after the expiration of his office, during the Cimbrian war. The office of consul, so dignified during the times of the commonwealth, became a mere title under the emperors, and retained nothing of its authority but the useless ensigns of original dignity. In retaining the badges of the ancient consuls, they indulged in even greater pomp; for they wore the toga picta or palmata, and had their fasces wreathed with laurel, which used formerly to be done only by those who triumphed. They also added the securis to the fasces. Even the office of consul, which was originally annual, was reduced to the space of two or three months by J. Cæsar. They who, after being elected on the 24th of October, the usual day of election, were admitted on the 1st of January, denominated the year, and were called ordinarii. Before they assumed the reins of government, between October and the 1st of January, they were called consules designati, and their successors during the year, whether appointed in consequence of death or abdication, were distinguished by the appellation of suffecti; but the year in the consular fasti was never called after their name. Tiberius and Claudius abridged the time of the consulship, and the emperor Commodus made no less than twenty five consuls in one year. Constantine the Great renewed the original institution, and permitted them to be a whole year in office.—Here is annexed a list of the consuls from the establishment of the consular power to the battle of Actium, in which it may be said that the authority of the consuls was totally extinguished.

The two first consuls, chosen about the middle of June, A.U.C. 244, were L. Jun. Brutus, and L. Tarq. Collatinus. Collatinus retired from Rome as being of the family of the Tarquins, and Pub Valerius was chosen in his room. When Brutus was killed in battle, Sp. Lucretius was elected to succeed him; and after the death of Lucretius, Marcus Horatius was chosen for the rest of the year with Valerius Publicola. The first consulship lasted about sixteen months, during which the Romans fought against the Tarquins, and the Capitol was dedicated.

A.U.C 246. Pub. Valerius Publicola 2; Tit. Lucretius Porsenna supported the claims of Tarquin. The noble actions of Cocles, Scævola, and Cloelia.

——— 247 P. Lucretius, or M. Horatius; P Valer. Publicola 3. The vain efforts of Porsenna continued.

——— 248. Sp Lartius; T. Herminius. Victories obtained over the Sabines.

A.U.C. 249 M. Valerius; P. Postumius. Wars with the Sabines continued.

——— 250. P. Valerius 3; T. Lucretius 2.

——— 251. Agrippa Menenius, P. Postumius 2. The death of Publicola.

——— 252. Opiter Virginius; Sp. Cassius. Sabine war.

——— 253. Postumius Cominus; T. Lartius. A conspiracy of slaves at Rome.

——— 254. Serv. Sulpicius, Manius Tullius.

——— 255. P. Veturius Geminus; T. Æbutius Elva.

——— 256. T. Lartius 2; Q Cloelius. War with the Latins.

——— 257. A. Sempronius Atratinus; M. Minucius.

——— 258. Aulus Postumius; Tit. Virginius. The battle of Regillæ.

——— 259. Ap Claudius; P. Servilius. War with the Volsci.

——— 260. A. Virginius; T. Veturius. The dissatisfied people retired to Mons Sacer

——— 261. Postumius Cominius 2; Sp. Cassius 2. A reconciliation between the senate and people, and the election of the tribunes.

——— 262. T. Geganius; P. Minucius. A famine at Rome.

——— 263. M. Minucius 2; Aul. Sempronius 2. The haughty behaviour of Coriolanus to the populace.

——— 264. Q Sulpicius Camerinus; Sp Lartius Flavus 2. Coriolanus retires to the Volsci.

——— 265. C Julius; P. Pinarius. The Volsci make declarations of war.

——— 266. Sp. Nautius, Sex. Furius Coriolanus forms the siege of Rome. He retires at the entreaties of his mother and wife, and dies.

——— 267. T. Sicinius; C. Aquilius. The Volsci defeated.

——— 268. Sp. Cassius 3; Proculus Virginius. Cassius aspires to tyranny.

——— 269 Serv. Cornelius; Q. Fabius. Cassius is condemned, and thrown down the Tarpeian rock.

——— 270. L. Æmilius; Cæso Fabius. The Æqui and Volsci defeated.

——— 271. M. Fabius; L. Valerius.

——— 272. Q. Fabius 2; C. Julius. War with the Æqui.

——— 273 Cæso Fabius 2; Sp Furius. War continued with the Æqui and Veientes.

——— 274. M. Fabius 2; Cn. Manlius. Victory over the Hernici.

——— 275 Cæso Fabius 3; A. Virginius. The march of the Fabii to the river Cremera ——— 276 L. Æmilius 2; C Servilius. The wars continued against the neighbouring states.

——— 277. C. Horatius, T. Menenius The defeat and death of the 300 Fabii.

——— 278. Sp. Servilius; Aul Virginius. Menenius brought to his trial for the defeat of the armies under him

——— 279. C. Nautius; P. Valerius.

——— 280. L. Furius, C. Manlius. A truce of 40 years granted to the Veientes.

——— 281. L. Æmilius 3; Virginius or Vopiscus Julius. The tribune Genutius murdered in his bed for his seditions.

——— 282. L. Pinarius; P. Furius.

——— 283. Ap. Claudius; T Quintius The Roman army suffer themselves to be defeated by the Volsci on account of their hatred to Appius, while his colleague is boldly and cheerfully obeyed against the Æqui.

A.U.C. 283. L. Valerius 2; Tib. Æmilius. Appius is cited to take his trial before the people, and dies before the day of trial.

——— 285. T. Numicius Priscus; A. Virginius.

——— 286. T. Quintius 2; Q Servilius.

——— 287. Tib. Æmilius 2; Q Fabius.

——— 288. Q Servilius 2, Sp Postumius.

——— 289. Q. Fabius 2, T Quintius 3. In the census made this year, which was the ninth, there were found 121,214 citizens in Rome.

——— 290. Aul. Postumius; Sp Furius.

——— 291 L Æbutius; P. Servilius. A plague at Rome

——— 292 T. Lucretius Tricipitinus, T. Veturius Geminus.

——— 293. P. Volumnius; Serv Sulpicius. Dreadful prodigies at Rome, and seditions.

——— 294. C. Claudius; P Valerius 2. A Sabine seizes the Capitol, and is defeated and killed. Valerius is killed in an engagement, and Cincinnatus is taken from the plough, and made dictator; he quelled the dissensions at Rome, and returned to his farm.

——— 295. Q. Fabius 3; L. Cornelius. The census made the Romans amount to 132,019.

——— 296. L. Minucius, C Nautius 2 Minutius is besieged in his camp by the Æqui, and Cincinnatus, being elected dictator, delivers him, obtains a victory, and lays down his power sixteen days after his election.

——— 297. Q. Minucius; C. Horatius. War with the Æqui and Sabines. Ten tribunes elect instead of five.

——— 298. M. Valerius; Sp. Virginius.

——— 299. T. Romilius, C Veturius.

——— 300. Sp. Tarpeius; A. Aternius.

——— 301. P. Curiatius; Sex. Quintilius.

——— 302. C. Menenius; P. Cestius Capitolinus. The Decemvirs reduce the laws into twelve tables.

——— 303 Ap. Claudius; T. Genutius, P Cestius, &c The Decemvirs assume the reins of government, and preside with consular power.

——— 304 and 305. Ap Claudius; Q. Fabius Vibulanus; M. Cornelius, &c. The Decemvirs continued. They act with violence. Appius endeavours to take possession of Virginia, who is killed by her father. The Decemvirs abolished; and Valerius Potitus, and M. Horatius Barbatus, created consuls for the rest of the year. Appius is summoned to take his trial. He dies in prison, and the rest of the Decemvirs are banished ——— 306. Lart. Herminius; T. Virginius.

——— 307. M. Geganius Macerinus; C. Julius. Domestic troubles.

——— 308. T. Quintius Capitolinus 4; Agrippa Furius. The Æqui and Volsci come near to the gates of Rome, and are defeated.

——— 309. M. Genucius; C. Curtius. A law passed to permit the patrician and plebeian families to intermarry.

——— 310. Military tribunes are chosen instead of consuls. The plebeians admitted among them. The first were A. Sempronius; L. Atilius; T. Cloelius. They abdicated three months after their election, and consuls were again chosen, L. Papirius Mugillanus; L. Sempronius Atratinus.

——— 311. M. Geganius Macerinus 2; T. Quintius Capitolinus 5. The censorship instituted.

A.U.C. 312. M. Fabius Vibulanus; Postumius Æbutius Cornicencis.

——— 313. C. Furius Pacilus; M. Papirius Crassus.

——— 314. P. Geganius Macerinus; L. Menenius Lanatus. A famine at Rome. Mælius attempts to make himself king.

——— 315. T. Quintius Capitolinus 6; Agrippa Menenius Lanatus.

——— 316. Mamercus Æmilius; T. Quintius; L. Julius. Military tribunes.

——— 317. M. Geganius Macerinus, Sergius Fidenas. Tolumnius, king of the Veientes, killed by Cossus, who takes the second royal spoils called Opima.

——— 318. M. Cornelius Maluginensis; L. Papirius Crassus.

——— 319 C. Julius, L. Virginius.

——— 320. C. Julius 2; L. Virginius 2 The duration of the censorship limited to eighteen months.

——— 321. M. Fabius Vibulanus; M. Fosius; L. Sergius Fidenas Military tribunes.

——— 322. L. Pinarius Mamercus; L. Furius Medullinus; Sp. Postumius Albus, Military tribunes

——— 323 T. Quintius Cincinnatus, C Julius Mento, consuls. A victory over the Veientes and Fidenates by the dictator Postumius.

——— 324 C Papirius Crassus, L. Julius.

——— 325. L. Sergius Fidenas 2; Horat. Luceret. Tricipitinus.

——— 326. A Cornelius Cossus; T. Quintius Pennus 2.

——— 327. Servilius Ahala; L Papirius Mugillanus 2.

——— 328 T. Quintius Pennus; C. Furius; M. Posthumius; A Corn. Cossus. Military tribunes, all of patrician families. Victory over the Veientes.

——— 329. A. Sempronius Atratinus; L. Quintius Cincinnatus; L. Furius Medullinus; L. Horat. Barbatus.

——— 330. A. Claudius Crassus, &c Military tribunes.

——— 331. C. Sempronius Atratinus; Q. Fabius Vibulanus. Consuls who gave much dissatisfaction to the people.

——— 332. L. Manlius Capitolinus, &c. Military tribunes

——— 333. Numerius Fabius Vibulanus; T Q. Capitolinus.

——— 334. L. Q. Cincinnatus 3; L. Furius Medullinus 2; M. Manlius; A. Sempronius Atratinus. Military tribunes.

——— 335 A. Menenius Lanatus, &c. Military tribunes.

——— 336. L. Sergius Fidenas; M. Papirius Mugillanus; C. Servilius

——— 337. A. Menenius Lanatus 2, &c.

——— 338. A. Sempronius Atratinus 3, &c.

——— 339. P Cornelius Cossus, &c

——— 340. Cn. Corn. Cossus, &c One of the military tribunes stoned to death by the army.

——— 341. M. Corn. Cossus; L. Furius Medullinus, consuls Domestic seditions.

——— 342. Q. Fabius Ambustus; C. Furius Pacilus.

——— 343. M Papirius Atratinus, C. Nautius Rutilus

344. Mamercus Æmilius; C. Valerius Potitus.

A.U.C. 345. Cn. Corn. Cossus; L. Furius Medullinus 2. Plebeians for the first time quæstors.

——— 346. C. Julius, &c. Military tribunes

——— 347. L. Furius Medullinus, &c. Military tribunes.

——— 348. P. and Cn. Cornelii Cossi, &c. Military tribunes. This year the Roman soldiers first received pay.

——— 349. T. Quintius Capitolinus, &c. Military tribunes. The siege of Veii begun.

——— 350. C. Valerius Potitus, &c. Military tribunes.

——— 351. Manlius Æmilius Mamercinus, &c. The Roman cavalry begin to receive pay.

——— 352. C Servilius Ahala, &c. A defeat at Veii, occasioned by a quarrel between two of the military tribunes.

——— 353. L. Valerius Potitus 4; M. Furius Camillus 2, &c. A military tribune chosen from among the plebeians.

——— 354. P. Licinius Calvus, &c.

——— 355. M. Veturius, &c.

——— 356. L. Valerius Potitus 5; M. Furius Camillus 3, &c.

——— 357. L. Julius Iulus, &c

——— 358 P. Licinius, &c. Camillus declared dictator. The city of Veii taken by means of a mine. Camillus obtains a triumph.

——— 359. P. Corn. Cossus, &c. The people wished to remove to Veii.

——— 360. M. Furius Camillus, &c. Falisci surrendered to the Romans.

——— 361. L. Lucret. Flaccus; Servius Sulpicius Camerinus, consuls, after Rome had been governed by military tribunes for fifteen successive years Camillus strongly opposes the removing to Veii, and it is rejected, ——— 362. L. Valerius Potitus; M. Manlius. One of the censors dies.

——— 363. L. Lucretius, &c. Military tribunes. A strange voice heard, which foretold the approach of the Gauls. Camillus goes into banishment to Ardea. The Gauls besiege Clusium, and soon after march towards Rome.

——— 364. Three Fabii military tribunes. The Romans defeated at Allia, by the Gauls. The Gauls enter Rome, and set it on fire. Camillus declared dictator by the senate, who had retired into the Capitol. The geese save the Capitol, and Camillus suddenly comes and defeats the Gauls.

——— 365. L. Valerius Poplicola 3; L. Virginius, &c. Camillus declared dictator, defeats the Volsci, Æqui, and Tuscans.

——— 366 T. Q. Cincinnatus; Q. Servilius Fidenas; L. Julius Iulus.

——— 367. L. Papirius; Cn. Sergius; L. Æmilius, &c

——— 368. M. Furius Camillus, &c.

——— 369. A. Manlius; P. Cornelius, &c. The Volsci defeated. Manlius aims at royalty.

——— 370. Ser. Corn. Maluginensis; P. Valerius Potitus; M. Furius Camillus. Manlius is condemned and thrown down the Tarpeian rock.

——— 371. L. Valerius; A. Manlius; Ser. Sulpicius, &c.

——— 372. Sp. and L. Papirii, &c.

——— 373. M. Furius Camillus; L. Furius, &c.

——— 374. L. and P. Valerii.

——— 375. C. Manlius, &c.

——— 376. Sp. Furius, &c.

A.U.C. 377. L. Æmilius, &c.

——— 378. } For five years anarchy at Rome.
——— 379. } No consuls or military tri-——— 380. } bunes elected, but only for ——— 381 } that time. L. Sextinus; C.
——— 382. } Licinius Calvus Stolo. Tribunes of the people

——— 383. L. Furius, &c.

——— 384. Q. Servilius; C. Veturius, &c. Ten magistrates are chosen to take care of the Sibylline books.

——— 385. L. Q Capitolinus; Sp. Servilius, &c.

——— 386. According to some writers, Camillus this year was sole dictator, without consuls or tribunes.

——— 387 A. Cornelius Cossus; L. Veturius Crassus, &c. The Gauls defeated by Camillus. One of the consuls for the future to be elected from among the plebeians.

——— 388 L. Æmilius, patrician; L. Sextius, plebeian, consuls. The offices of prætor, and curule ædile, granted to the senate by the people.

——— 389. L. Genucius; Q. Servilius. Camillus died.

——— 390. Sulpicius Peticus; C. Licinius Stolo.

——— 391. Cn Genutius; L. Æmilius.

——— 392. Q. Serv. Ahala 2; L. Genucius 2. Curtius devotes himself to the Dii manes.

——— 393. C Sulpicius 2, C. Licinius 2. Manlius conquers a Gaul in single battle.

——— 394. C. Petilius Balbus; M. Fabius Ambustus.

——— 395. M. Pop. Lænas· C. Manlius 2.

——— 396. C. Fabius, C. Plautius. Gauls defeated

——— 397. C. Marcinus; Cn. Manlius 2.

——— 398. M Fabius Ambustus 2; M. Popilius Lænas 2. A dictator elected from the plebeians for the first time.

——— 399. C. Sulpicius Peticus 3; M. Valerius Poplicola 2; both of patrician families ——— 400. M. Fabius Ambustus 3; T. Quintius.

——— 401. C. Sulpicius Peticus 4; M. Valerius Poplicola 3.

——— 402. M. Valerius Poplicola 4; C. Marcius Rutilus

——— 403 C. Sulpicius Peticus 5; T. Q Pennus. A censor elected for the first time from the plebeians.

——— 404. M. Popilius Lænas 3; L Corn Scipio.

——— 405. L. Furius Camillus; Ap. Claudius Crassus. Valerius surnamed Corvinus, after conquering a Gaul.

——— 406 M. Valer. Corvus; M. Popilius Lænas 4. Corvus was elected at 23 years of age, against the standing law. A treaty of amity concluded with Carthage.

——— 407. T. Manlius Torquatus; C. Plautius.

——— 408. M. Valerius Corvus 2; C. Patilius.

——— 409. M. Fabius Dorso; Ser. Sulpicius Camerinus.

——— 410. C. Marcius Rutilus; T. Manlius Torquatus.

——— 411. M. Valerius Corvus 3; A. Corn. Cossus. The Romans begin to make war against the Samnites, at the request of the Campanians. They obtain a victory.

A.U.C. 412. C. Marcius Rutilus 4; Q Servilius.

——— 413. C. Plautinus; L. Æmilius Mamercinus.

——— 414. T. Manlius Torquatus 3; P. Decius Mus. The victories of Alexander the Great in Asia. Manlius puts his son to death for fighting against his order. Decius devotes himself for the army, which obtains a great victory over the Latins.

——— 415. T Æmilius Mamercinus; Q. Publilius Philo.

——— 416. L. Furius Camillus; C. Mænius. The Latins conquered.

——— 417. C Sulpicius Longus; P. Ælius Pætus. The prætorship granted to a plebeian.

——— 418. L. Papirius Crassus; Cæso Duilius.

——— 419. M. Valerius Corvus; M. Atilius Regulus.

——— 420. T. Veturius; Sp. Posthumius.

——— 421. L. Papirius Cursor; C. Pætilius Libo.

——— 422. A. Cornelius 2; Cn. Domitius.

——— 423. M. Claudius Marcellus; C. Valerius Potitus.

——— 424. L. Papirius Crassus; C. Plautius Venno.

——— 425. L. Æmilius Mamercinus 2; C. Plautius.

——— 426. P. Plautius Proculus; P. Corn. Scapula.

——— 427. L. Corn. Lentulus; Q. Publilius Philo 2.

——— 428. C. Pætilius; L. Papirius Mugillanus

——— 429. L. Furius Camillus 2; D Jun. Brutus Scæva. The dictator Papirius Cursor is for putting to death Fabius, his master of horse, because he fought in his absence, and obtained a famous victory. He pardons him.

——— 430. According to some authors, there were no consuls elected this year, but only a dictator, L. Papirius Cursor.

——— 431. L. Sulpicius Longus; Q. Aulius Cerretanus.

——— 432. Q. Fabius; L. Fulvius.

——— 433. T. Veturius Calvinus 2; Sp. Posthumius Albinus 2. C. Pontius, the Samnite, takes the Roman consuls in an ambuscade at Caudium.

——— 434. L. Papirius Cursor 2; Q. Publilius Philo 3.

——— 435. L. Papirius Cursor 3; Q Aulius Cerretanus 2.

——— 436. M. Fossius Flaccinator; L. Plautius Venno.

——— 437. C. Jun. Bubulcus; L Æmilius Barbula.

——— 438. Sp Nautius; M. Popillius.

——— 439. L. Papirius 4; Q. Publilius 4.

——— 440. M. Pætilius; C. Sulpicius.

——— 441. L. Papirius Cursor 5; C. Jun. Bubulcus 2.

——— 442. M. Valerius; P. Decius. The censor Appius makes the Appian way and aqueducts. The family of the Potitii extinct ——— 443. C Jun. Bubulcus 3; Q. Æmilius Barbula 2.

——— 444. Q. Fabius 2; C. Martius Rutilus.

——— 445. According to some authors, there were no consuls elected this year, but only a dictator, L. Papirius Cursor.

A.U.C. 446. Q Fabius 3; P. Decius 2.

——— 447. Appius Claudius; L. Volumnius.

——— 448. P. Corn. Arvina; Q Marcius Tremulus.

——— 449. L. Posthumius; T. Minucius.

——— 450. P. Sulpicius Saverrio; Sempronius Sophus. The Æqui conquered.

——— 451. L. Genucius; Ser. Cornelius.

——— 452. M Livius; M Æmilius.

——— 453. Q. Fabius Maximus Rullianus; M. Val. Corvus; not consuls, but dictators, according to some authors.

——— 454. M. Valerius Corvus; Q Apulelius. The priesthood made common to the plebeians.

——— 455. M. Fulvius Pætinus; T. Manlius Torquatus.

——— 456. L. Corn. Scipio; Cn. Fulvius.

——— 457. Q. Fabius Maximus 4; P. Decius Mus 3. Wars against the Samnites.

——— 458. L. Volumnius 2; Ap. Claudius 2. Conquest over the Etrurians and Samnites.

——— 459 Q Fabius 5; P. Decius 4. Decius devotes himself in a battle against the Samnites and the Gauls, and the Romans obtain a victory.

——— 460 L Posthumius Megellus; M. Atilius Regulus.

——— 461. L. Papirius Cursor; Sp. Carvilius. Victories over the Samnites

——— 462. Q. Fabius Gurges; D. Jun. Brutus Scæva. Victory over the Samnites

——— 463. L. Posthumius 3; C Jun. Brutus. Æsculapius brought to Rome in the form of a serpent from Epidaurus.

——— 464. P. Corn. Rufinus; M. Curius Dentatus.

——— 465. M. Valerius Corvinus; Q. Caudicius Noctua.

——— 466. Q. Marcius Tremulus; P. Corn. Arvina.

——— 467. M. Claudius Marcellus; C. Nautius.

——— 468. M. Valerius Potitus; C. Ælius Pætus.

——— 469. C. Claudius Cænina; M. Æmilius Lepidus.

——— 470. C. Servilius Tucca; Cæcilius Metellus. War with the Senones.

——— 471. P. Corn. Dolabella; C. Domitius Calvinus. The Senones defeated

——— 472. Q Æmilius; C. Fabricius. War with Tarentum.

——— 473. L. Æmilius Barbula; Q. Marcius. Pyrrhus comes to assist Tarentum

——— 474. P. Valerius Lævinus; Tib Coruncianus. Pyrrhus conquers the consul Lævinus, and though victorious dies for peace, which is refused by the Roman senate. The census was made, and 272,222 citizens were found ——— 475. P. Sulpicius Saverrio; P Decius Mus. A battle with Pyrrhus.

——— 476. C. Fabricius Luscinus 2; Q. Æmilius Papus 2. Pyrrhus goes to Sicily. The treaty between Rome and Carthage renewed.

——— 477. P. Corn. Rufinus; C. Jun. Brutus. Crotona and Locri taken.

——— 478. Q Fabius Maximus Gurges 2; C. Genucius Clepsina. Pyrrhus returns from Sicily to Italy.

——— 479. M. Curius Dentatus 2; L. Corn Lentulus. Pyrrhus finally defeated by Curius.

——— 480. M. Curius Dentatus 3; Ser. Corn. Merenda.

A.U.C. 481. C. Fabius Dorso; C. Claudius Canina 2. An embassy from Philadelphus to conclude an alliance with the Romans.

——— 482. L. Papirius Cursor 2; Sp. Carvilius 2. Tarentum surrenders.

——— 483. L. Genucius; C. Quintius.

——— 484. C Genucius; Cn. Cornelius.

——— 485. Q. Ogulinus Gallus; C. Fabius Pictor. Silver money coined at Rome for the first time.

——— 486. P. Sempronius Sophus; Ap. Claudius Crassus.

——— 487 M. Attilius Regulus, L. Julius Libo. Italy enjoys peace universally.

——— 488. Numerius Fabius; D. Junius

——— 489. Q Fabius Gurges 3, L. Mamilius Vitulus. The number of the quæstors doubled to eight.

——— 490. Ap Claudius Caudex; M Fulvius Flaccus. The Romans and the Mamertines, which occasions the first Punic war. Appius defeats the Carthaginians in Sicily. The combats of gladiators first instituted.

——— 491 M Valerius Maximus, M Otacilius Crassus Alliance between Rome and Hiero king of Syracuse. A sun-dial first put up at Rome, brought from Catana.

——— 492. L. Posthumius Gemellus; Q. Mamilius Vitulus. The siege and taking of Agrigentum. The total defeat of the Carthaginians.

——— 493. L. Valerius Flaccus; T. Otacilius Crassus.

——— 494. Cn Corn Scipio Asina; C. D illius. In two months the Romans build and equip a fleet of 120 galleys. The naval victory and triumph of Duilius.

——— 495 L. Corn. Scipio; C. Aquilius Florus. Expedition against Sardinia and Corsica.

——— 496. A. Attilius Calatinus; C Sulpicius Paterculus The Carthaginians defeated in a naval battle.

——— 497. C. Attilius Regulus; Cn. Corn. Blasio.

——— 498. L. Manlius Vulso; Q. Cædicius. After death of Cædicius, M. Attilius Regulus 2, was elected for the rest of the year. The famous battle of Ronoma. The victorious consuls land in Africa.

——— 499. Serv. Fulvius Paulnus Nobilior; M. Æmilius Paulus. Regulus, after many victories in Africa, is defeated and taken prisoner by Xanthippus. Agrigentum retaken by the Carthaginians.

——— 500. Cn. Corn. Scipio Asina 2; A. Attilius Calatinus 2. Panormus taken by the Romans.

——— 501. Cn. Servilius Cæpio; C. Sempronius Blæsus. The Romans, discouraged by shipwrecks, renounce the sovereignty of the sea.

——— 502 C Aurelius Cotta; P. Servilius Geminus. Citizens capable to bear arms, amounted to 297,797.

——— 503. L. Cæcilius Metellus 2; C. Furius Pacilus. The Romans begin to recover their power by sea.

——— 504. C. Attilius Regulus 2; L. Manlius Volso 2. The Carthaginians defeated near Panormus in Sicily. One hundred and forty-two elephants taken and sent to Rome. Regulus advises the Romans not to exchange prisoners. He is put to death in the most excruciating torments.

A.U.C. 505 P. Clodius Pulcher; L. Jun. Pullus The Romans defeated in a naval battle. The Roman fleet lost in a storm.

——— 506. C. Aurelius Cotta 2; P. Servilius Geminus 2.

——— 507. L. Cæcilius Metellus 3; Num. Fabius Buteo. The number of the citizens 252,222.

——— 508. M. Otacilius Crassus; M. Fabius Licinus.

——— 509. M. Fabius Buteo; C. Attilius Balbus.

——— 510. A. Manlius Torquatus 2; C. Sempronius Blæsus.

——— 511. C. Fundanius Fundulus; C. Sulpicius Gallus. A fleet built by individuals at Rome.

——— 512. C. Lutatius Catulus; A. Posthumius Albinus. The Carthaginian fleet defeated near the islands Ægates. Peace made between Rome and Carthage. The Carthaginians evacuate Sicily.

——— 513. Q Lutatius Cereo; A Manlius Atticus Sicily is made a Roman province. The 59th census taken; the citizens amount to 260,000.

——— 514. C. Claudius Centho; M. Sempronius Tuditanus.

——— 515. C. Mamilius Turinus; Q. Valerius Falto.

——— 516. T. Sempronius Gracchus; P Valerius Falto. The Carthaginians give up Sardinia to Rome

——— 517. L. Corn. Lentulus Candinus; Q Fulvius Flaccus The Romans offer Ptolemy Evergetes assistance against Antiochus Theos

——— 518. P. Corn Lentulus Caudinus; Licinius Varus. Revolt of Corsica and Sardinia.

——— 519. C. Attilius Balbus 2; T. Manlius Torquatus. The temple of Janus shut for the first time since the reign of Numa, about 440 years. An universal peace at Rome.

——— 520. L. Postumius Albinus; Sp. Carvilius Maximus.

——— 521. Q. Fabius Maximus Verrucosus, M. Pomponius Matho. Differences and jealousy between Rome and Carthage.

——— 522. M. Æmilius Lepidus; M. Publicius Malleolus.

——— 523. M. Pomponius Matho 2; C. Papirius Maso. The first divorce known at Rome.

——— 524. M. Æmilius Barbula; M. Junius Pera. War with the Illyrians.

——— 525. L. Postumius Albinus 2; Cn. Fulvius Centumalus. The building of new Carthage

——— 526. Sp. Carvilius Maximus 2; Q. Fabius Maximus.

——— 527. P. Valerius Flaccus; M. Attilius Regulus. Two new prætors added to the other prætors.

——— 528. M. Valerius Messala, L. Apulius Fullo. Italy invaded by the Gauls. The Romans could now lead into the field of battle, 770,000 men.

——— 529. L Æmilius Papus; C Attilius Regulus. The Gauls defeat the Romans near Clusium. The Romans obtain a victory near Telamon.

——— 530. T Manlius Torquatus 2; Q. Fulvius Flaccus 2. The Boii, part of the Gauls, surrender ——— 531. C. Flaminius, P. Furius Philus.

A.U.C. 532. M. Claudius Marcellus; Cn. Corn. Scipio Calvus. A new war with the Gauls. Marcellus gains the spoils called opima.

——— 533. P. Cornelius; M. Minucius Rufus Annibal takes the command of the Carthaginian armies in Spain.

——— 534. L. Vetufius; C Lutatius. The Via Flaminia built.

——— 535. M. Livius Salinator; L. Æmilius Paulus. War with Illyricum

——— 536. P. Corn. Scipio; T. Sempronius Longus. Siege of Saguntum, by Annibal, the cause of the second Punic war. Annibal marches towards Italy, and crosses the Alps. The Carthaginian fleet defeated near Sicily. Sempronius defeated near Trebia, by Annibal.

——— 537. Cn. Servilius; C. Flaminius 2. A famous battle near the lake Thrasymenus. Fabius is appointed dictator. Success of Cn. Scipio in Spain.

——— 538. C. Terentius Varro; L. Æmilius Paulus 2. The famous battle of Cannæ. Annibal marches to Capua. Marcellus beats Annibal near Nola. Asdrubal begins his march towards Italy, and his army is totally defeated by the Scipios.

——— 539. Ti. Sempronius Gracchus; Q. Fabius Maximus 2. Philip of Macedonia enters into alliance with Annibal. Sardinia revolts, and is reconquered by Manlius The Carthaginians twice beaten in Spain by Scipio.

——— 540. Q. Fabius Maximus 3; M. Claudius Marcellus 3. Marcellus besieges Syracuse by sea and land.

——— 541. Q. Fabius Maximus 4, T. Sempronius Gracchus 2. The siege of Syracuse continued.

——— 542. Q. Fulvius Flaccus; Ap. Claudius Pulcher. Syracuse taken and plundered Sicily made a Roman province Tarentum treacherously delivered to Annibal. The two Scipios conquered in Spain.

——— 543. Cn. Fulvius Centumalus; P. Sulpicius Galba Capua besieged and taken by the Romans. P. Scipio sent to Spain with proconsular power ——— 544. M. Claudius Marcellus 4; M. Valerius Lævinus 2. The Carthaginians driven from Sicily. Carthagena taken by young Scipio.

——— 545. Q Fabius Maximus 5, Q. Fulvius Flaccus 4. Annibal defeated by Marcellus. Fabius takes Tarentum. Asdrubal defeated by Scipio.

——— 546. M. Claudius Marcellus 5; T. Quintius Crispinus. Marcellus killed in an ambuscade by Annibal. The Carthaginian fleet defeated.

——— 547. M. Claudius Nero; M. Livius 2. Asdrubal passes the Alps. Nero obtains some advantage over Annibal. The two consuls defeat Asdrubal, who is killed, and his head thrown into Annibal's camp. The Romans make war against Philip.

——— 548. L. Veturius, Q. Cæcilius. Scipio obtains a victory over Asdrubal, the son of Gisgo, in Spain. Masinissa sides with the Romans.

——— 549 P. Cornelius Scipio; P. Licinius Crassus. Scipio is empowered to invade Africa.

——— 550. M. Cornelius Cethegus; P. Sempronius Tuditanus. Scipio lands in Africa. The census taken, and 215,000 heads of families found in Rome.

A.U.C. 551. Cn Servilius Cæpio; C. Servilius Geminus. Scipio spreads general consternation in Africa. Annibal is recalled from Italy by the Carthaginian senate.

——— 552. M. Servilius; Ti. Claudius. Annibal and Scipio come to a parley; they prepare for battle. Annibal is defeated at Zama. Scipio prepares to besiege Carthage

——— 553. Cn. Corn. Lentulus; P. Ælius Pætus. Peace granted to the Carthaginians. Scipio triumphs

——— 554. P Sulpicius Galba 2; C. Aurelius Cotta. War with the Macedonians.

——— 555. L. Corn. Lentulus; P. Villius Tapulus. The Macedonian war continued.

——— 556. Sex. Ælius Pætus; T. Quintius Flaminius Philip defeated by Quintius ——— 557. C Corn. Cethegus; Q. Minucius Rufus Philip is defeated. Quintius grants him peace.

——— 558. L. Furius Purpureo; M. Claudius Marcellus. The independence of Greece proclaimed by Flaminius, at the Isthmian games.

——— 559. L. Valerius Flaccus; M. Porcius Cato. Quintius regulates the affairs of Greece. Cato's victories in Spain, and triumph. The Romans demand Annibal from the Carthaginians.

——— 560 P. Corn Scipio Africanus 2; T. Sempronius Longus. Annibal flies to Antiochus.

——— 561. L. Cornelius Merula; Q Minucius Thermus. Antiochus prepares to make war against Rome, and Annibal endeavours in vain to stir up the Carthaginians to take up arms.

——— 562 L. Quintus Flaminius; Cn. Domitius. The Greeks call Antiochus to deliver them.

——— 563. P. Corn. Scipio Nasica; Manius Acilius Glabrio. The success of Acilius in Greece against Antiochus.

——— 564. L. Corn. Scipio; C. Lælius. The fleet of Antiochus under Annibal defeated by the Romans. Antiochus defeated by Scipio.

——— 565 M. Fulvius Nobilior; Cn. Manlius Vulso. War with the Gallogræcians.

——— 566. M. Valerius Messala; C. Livius Salinator. Antiochus dies.

——— 567. M Æmilius Lepidus; C. Flaminius. The Ligurians reduced.

——— 568. Sp Postumius Albinus; Q. Marcius Philippus. The Bacchanalia abolished at Rome.

——— 569. Ap. Claudius Pulcher; M. Sempronius Tuditanus. Victories in Spain and Liguria.

——— 570. P. Claudius Pulcher; L. Porcius Licinius. Philip of Macedon sends his son Demetrius to Rome.

——— 571. M. Claudius Marcellus; Q. Fabius Labeo. Death of Annibal, Scipio, and Philopœmen. Gauls invade Italy.

——— 572. M Bæbius Tamphilus; L. Æmilius Paulus. Death of Philip ——— 573. P. Cornelius Cethegus; M. Bæbius Tamphilus. Expeditions against Liguria. The first gilt statue raised at Rome.

——— 574. A. Postumius Albinus Luscus; C. Calpurnius Piso. Celtiberians defeated.

——— 575. Q Fulvius Flaccus; L. Manlius Acidinus. Alliance renewed with Perseus the son of Philip.

——— 576. M. Junius Brutus; A. Manlius Vulso.

A.U.C. 577 C. Claudius Pulcher; T. Sempronius Gracchus. The Istrians defeated.
——— 578. Cn Corn. Scipio Hispalus; Q. Petillius Spurinus.
——— 579. P. Mucius; M. Æmilius Lepidus 2.
——— 580. Sp. Postumius Albinus; Q Mucius Scævola.
——— 581. L. Postumius Albinus; M. Popilius Lænas.
——— 582. C. Popilius Lænas; P. Ælius Ligur. War declared against Perseus.
——— 583. P. Licinius Crassus, C. Cassius Longinus. Perseus gains some advantage over the Romans.
——— 584. A. Hostilius Mancinus; A. Atilius Serranus.
——— 585. Q Marcius Philippus 2. Cn. Servilius Cæpio. The campaign in Macedonia.
——— 586. L. Æmilius Paulus 2; C Licinius Crassus. Perseus is defeated and taken prisoner by Paulus ——— 587. Q. Ælius Patus; M. Junius Pennus.
——— 588. M. Claudius Marcellus; C Sulpicius Galba.
——— 589 Cn. Octavius Nepos; T. Manlius Torquatus.
——— 590. Aulus Manlius Torquatus; Q Cassius Longus.
——— 591. Ti. Sempronius Gracchus; M Juvencius Thalna
——— 592. P. Corn. Scipio Nasica, C. Marcius Figulus. Demetrius flies from Rome, and is made king of Syria.
——— 593. M. Valerius Messala; C Fannius Strabo.
——— 594. L. Anicius Gallus, M Corn Cethegus.
——— 595. C. Cornelius Dolabella; M Fulvius Nobilior.
——— 596. M. Æmilius Lepidus; C. Popilius Lænas.
——— 597. Sex. Jul. Cæsar; L Aurelius Orestes. War against the Dalmatians.
——— 598. L. Corn. Lentulus Lupus; C. Marcius Figulus 2.
——— 599. P. Corn. Scipio Nasica 2; M. Claudius Marcellus 2.
——— 600. Q. Opimius Nepos, L. Postumius Albinus.
——— 601. Q. Fulvius Nobilior; T. Annius Luscus. The false Philip. Wars in Spain
——— 602 M. Claudius Marcellus 3; L. Valerius Flaccus.
——— 603. L. Licinius Lucullus; A. Postumius Albinus.
——— 604. T. Quinctius Flamininus; M. Acilius Balbus. War between the Carthaginians and Masinissa.
——— 605. L. Marcius Censorinus, M Manilius Nepos. The Romans declare war against Carthage. The Carthaginians wish to accept the hard conditions which are imposed upon them; but the Romans say that Carthage must be destroyed.
——— 606. Sp. Postumius Albinus; L. Calpurnius Piso. Carthage besieged.
——— 607. P. Corn. Scipio; C. Livius Drusus. The siege of Carthage continued with vigour by Scipio, ——— 608. Cn. Cornelius Lentulus; L. Mummius Carthage surrenders, and is destroyed. Mummius takes and burns Corinth.

A.U.C. 609. Q. Fabius Æmilianus; L. Hostilius Mancinius.
——— 610. Ser. Sulpicius Galba; L. Aurelius Cotta.
——— 611. Ap. Claudius Pulcher; Q. Cæcilius Metellus Macedonicus. War against the Celtiberians.
——— 612. L. Metellus Calvus, Q. Fabius Maximus Servilianus.
——— 613 Q. Pompeius; C Servilius Cæpio.
——— 614. C. Lælius Sapiens; Q Servilius Cæpio. The wars with Viriatus
——— 615. M. Popilius Lænas; C. Calpurnius Piso.
——— 616. P. Corn. Scipio Nasica; D Junius Brutus. The two consuls imprisoned by the tribunes.
——— 617. M. Æmilius Lepidus; C Hostilius Mancinus. Wars against Numantia.
——— 618. P. Furius Philus; Sex Atilius Serranus.
——— 619. Ser. Fulvius Flaccus; Q Calpurnius Piso.
——— 620. P. Corn. Scipio 2; C Fulvius Flaccus.
——— 621. P. Mucius Scævola; L. Calpurnius Piso Frugi. Numantia surrenders to Scipio, and is entirely demolished. The seditions of Ti. Gracchus at Rome.
——— 622. P Popilius Lænas; P. Rupilius.
——— 623. P. Licinius Crassus; L. Valerius Flaccus.
——— 624. C. Claudius Pulcher; M. Perpenna. In the census are found 318,823 citizens.
——— 625. C. Sempronius Tuditanus, M Aquilius Nepos.
——— 626. Cn. Octavius Nepos; T. Annius Luscus.
——— 627. L. Cassius Longus; L. Cornelius Cinna. A revolt of slaves in Sicily.
——— 628. L. Æmilius Lepidus; L. Aurelius Orestes.
——— 629. M. Plautius Hypsæus; M Fulvius Flaccus.
——— 630. C. Cassius Longinus; L. Sextius Calvinus.
——— 631. Q. Cæcilius Metellus; T. Quinctius Flamininus.
——— 632 C Fannius Strabo; Cn Domitius Ahenobarbus. The seditions of Caius Gracchus.
——— 633. Lucius Opimius; Q Fabius Maximus. The unfortunate end of Caius Gracchus. The Allobroges defeated.
——— 634. P. Manlius Nepos; C. Papirius Carbo.
——— 635. L. Cæcilius Metellus Calvus; L. Aurelius Cotta.
——— 636. M Portius Cato, Q. Marcius Rex.
——— 637. L Cæcilius Metellus; Q. Mutius Scævola
——— 638. C. Licinius Geta; Q. Fabius Maximus Eburnus.
——— 639 M. Cæcilius Metellus; M. Æmilius Scaurus.
——— 640. M. Acilius Balbus; C. Portius Cato.
——— 641. C. Cæcilius Metellus; Cn. Papirius Carbo
——— 642. M. Livius Drusus; L. Calpurnius Piso. The Romans declare war against Jugurtha.
——— 643. P. Scipio Nasica, L. Calpurnius

Bestia. Calpurnius bribed and defeated by Jugurtha.

A.U.C. 644. M. Minucius Rufus; Sp. Postumius Albinus.

——— 645. Q Cæcilius Metellus; M Junius Silanus. Success of Metellus against Jugurtha.

——— 646. Servius Sulpicius Galba; M. Aurelius Scaurus. Metellus continues the war.

——— 647. C. Marius; L Cassius. The war against Jugurtha continued with vigour by Marius.

——— 648. C. Atilius Serranus; Q. Servilius Cæpio. Jugurtha betrayed by Bocchus into the hands of Sylla, the lieutenant of Marius.

——— 649. P. Rutilius Rufus; Corn. Manlius Maximus. Marius triumphs over Jugurtha. Two Roman armies defeated by the Cimbri and Teutones.

——— 650. C. Marius 2; C. Flavius Fimbria. The Cimbri march towards Spain.

——— 651 C. Marius 3; L. Aurelius Orestes. The Cimbri defeated in Spain.

——— 652. C Marius 4; Q. Lutatius Catulus. The Teutones totally defeated by Marius.

——— 653 C. Marius 5; M. Aquilius. The Cimbri enter Italy, and are defeated by Marius and Catulus.

——— 654. C. Marius 6; L. Valerius Flaccus Factions against Metellus.

——— 655. M. Antonius; A. Postumius Albinus. Metellus is gloriously recalled.

——— 656. L. Cæcilius Metellus Nepos, T. Didius

——— 657. Cn. Corn. Lentulus; P. Licinius Crassus.

——— 658. Cn. Domitius Ahenobarbus; C. Cassius Longinus. The kingdom of Cyrene left by will to the Roman people.

——— 659. L. Licinius Crassus; Q. Mucius Scævola. Seditions of Norbanus.

——— 660. C. Cotius Caldus; L. Domitius Ahenobarbus.

——— 661. C. Valerius Flaccus; M Herennius. Sylla exhibited a combat of 100 lions with men in the Circus.

——— 662 C Claudius Pulcher; M. Perpenna. The allies wish to be admitted citizens of Rome.

——— 663. L. Marcius Philippus; Sex. Jul. Cæsar. The allies prepare to revolt.

——— 664. M. Julius Cæsar; P. Rutilius Rufus. Wars with the Marsi.

——— 665. Cn. Pompeius Strabo; L. Porcius Cato The great valour of Sylla surnamed the Fortunate.

——— 666. L. Cornelius Sylla; Q. Pompeius Rufus. Sylla appointed to conduct the Mithridatic war. Marius is empowered to supersede him; upon which Sylla returns to Rome with his army, and takes it, and has Marius and his adherents judged as enemies.

——— 667. Cn. Octavius; L. Cornelius Cinna. Cinna endeavours to recall Marius, and is expelled. Marius returns, and with Cinna marches against Rome. Civil wars and slaughter.

——— 668. C. Marius 7; L. Cornel. Cinna 2. Marius died, and L. Valerius Flaccus was chosen in his room. The Mithridatic war.

——— 669. L. Cornelius Cinna 3, Cn. Papirius Carbo. The Mithridatic war continued by Sylla.

——— 670. L. Cornelius Cinna 4; Cn. Papirius Carbo 2. Peace with Mithridates.

A.U.C 671 L. Corn. Scipio Asiaticus C. Norbanus. The capitol burnt. Pompey joins Sylla.

——— 672. C. Marius; Cn. Papirius Carbo 3 Civil wars at Rome between Marius and Sylla. Murder of the citizens by order of Sylla, who makes himself dictator.

——— 673. M. Tullius Decula; Cn. Corn. Dolabella. Sylla weakens and circumscribes the power of the tribunes. Pompey triumphs over Africa.

——— 674. L. Corn. Sylla Felix 2; Q. Cæcilius Metellus Pius. War against Mithridates.

——— 675. P. Servilius Vatia; Ap. Claudius Pulcher. Sylla abdicates the dictatorship.

——— 676. M. Æmilius Lepidus; Q. Lutatius Catulus. Sylla dies.

——— 677. D. Junius Brutus; Mamereus Æmilius Lepidus Livianus. A civil war between Lepidus and Catulus. Pompey goes against Sertorius in Spain.

——— 678. Cn Octavius; M. Scribonius Curio. Sertorius defeated.

——— 679. Cn Octavius; C Aurelius Cotta. Mithridates and Sertorius make a treaty of alliance together. Sertorius murdered by Perpenna.

——— 680. L. Licinius Lucullus; M. Aurelius Cotta. Lucullus conducts the Mithridatic war.

——— 681. M. Terentius Varro Lucullus; C. Cassius Varus Spartacus. The gladiators make head against the Romans with much success.

——— 682. L. Gellius Poplicola; Cn. Corn. Lentulus Clodianus. Victories of Spartacus over three Roman generals.

——— 683. Cn Aufidius Orestes; P. Corn. Lentulus Sura. Crassus defeats and kills Spartacus near Apulia.

——— 684. M. Licinius Crassus; Cn. Pompeius Magnus. Successes of Lucullus against Mithridates. The census amounts to above 900,000.

——— 685. Q. Hortensius 2; Q. Cæcilius Metellus. Lucullus defeats Tigranes King of Armenia, and meditates the invasion of Parthia.

——— 686 Q. Marcius Rex; L. Cæcilius Metellus. Lucullus defeats the united forces of Mithridates and Tigranes.

——— 687. M. Acilius Glabrio; C. Calpurnius Piso. Lucullus falls under the displeasure of his troops, who partly desert him. Pompey goes against the pirates.

——— 688. M. Æmilius Lepidus; L. Volcatius Tullus. Pompey succeeds Lucullus to finish the Mithridatic war, and defeats the enemy.

——— 689. L. Aurelius Cotta; L Manlius Torquatus Success of Pompey in Asia.

——— 690. L. Julius Cæsar; C. Martius Figulus. Pompey goes to Syria. His conquests there.

——— 691. M. Tullius Cicero; C. Antonius. Mithridates poisons himself. Catiline conspires against the state. Cicero discovers the conspiracy, and punishes the adherents.

——— 692. D. Junius Silanus; L. Licinius Murena. Pompey triumphs over the Pirates, and over Mithridates, Tigranes, and Aristobulus.

——— 693. M. Puppius Piso; M. Valerius Messala Niger.

——— 694. L. Afranius; Q. Metellus Celer. A reconciliation between Crassus, Pompey, and Cæsar

U.C. 695 C. Jul. Cæsar; M. Calpurnius Bibulus. Cæsar breaks the fasces of his colleague, and is sole consul. He obtains the government of Gaul for five years.

——— 696. C. Calpurnius Piso; A. Gabinius Paulus. Cicero banished by means of Clodius. Cato goes against Ptolemy king of Cyprus. Successes of Cæsar in Gaul.

——— 697 P. Corn Lentulus Spinther; Q. Cæcilius Metellus Nepos. Cicero recalled. Cæsar's success and victories.

——— 698. Cn Corn. Lentulus Marcellinus, L. Marcius Philippus. The triumvirate of Cæsar, Pompey, and Crassus

——— 699. Cn. Pompeius Magnus 2, M. Licinius Crassus 2 Crassus goes against Parthia. Cæsar continued for five years more in the administration of Gaul His conquest of Britain ——— 700. L. Domitius Ahenobarbus; Ap Claudius Pulcher. Great victories of Cæsar.

——— 701. Cn Domitius Calvinus; M Valerius Messala. Crassus defeated and slain in Parthia. Milo kills Clodius.

——— 702. Cn. Pompeius Magnus 3; the only consul. He afterwards took for colleague, Q. Cæcilius Metellus Pius Scipio. Revolts of the Gauls crushed by Cæsar.

——— 703. Ser. Sulpicius Rufus, M Claudius Marcellus. Rise of the jealousy between Cæsar and Pompey.

——— 704. L. Æmilius Paulus; P Claudius Marcellus. Cicero pro-consul of Cilicia. Increase of the differences between Cæsar and Pompey.

——— 705. C. Claudius Marcellus; L. Cornelius Lentulus. Cæsar begins the civil war. Pompey flies from Rome. Cæsar made dictator.

——— 706. C. Julius Cæsar 2; P. Servilius Isauricus. Cæsar defeats Pompey at Pharsalia. Pompey murdered in Egypt. The wars of Cæsar in Egypt.

——— 707. Q. Fusius Calenus; P. Vatinius. Power and influence of Cæsar at Rome. He reduces Pontus.

——— 708. C. Julius Cæsar 3; M Æmilius Lepidus. Cæsar defeats Pompey's partisans in Africa, and takes Utica.

——— 709. C. Julius Cæsar 4; consul alone. He conquered the partisans of Pompey in Spain, and was declared perpetual Dictator and Imperator, &c.

——— 710. C. Julius Cæsar 5; M. Antonius. Cæsar meditates a war against Parthia. Above 60 Romans conspire against Cæsar, and murder him in the senate-house. Antony raises himself to power. The rise of Octavius.

——— 711. C. Vibius Pansa; A. Hirtius. Antony judged a public enemy. He joins Augustus. Triumvirate of Antony, Augustus, and Lepidus.

——— 712. L. Minucius Planeus; M. Æmilius Lepidus 2. Great honours paid to the memory of J. Cæsar Brutus and Cassius join their forces against Augustus and Antony.

——— 713. L. Antonius; P Servilius Isauricus 2. Battle of Philippi, and the defeat of Brutus and Cassius.

——— 714. Cn. Domitius Calvinus; C. Asinius Pollio. Antony joins the son of Pompey against Augustus. The alliance of short duration.

——— 715. L. Marcius Censorinus; C. Cal. Sabinus. Antony marries Octavia the sister of Augustus, to strengthen their mutual alliances.

A U.C. 716 Ap Claudius Pulcher; C Norbanus Flaccus; to whom were substituted C Octavianus, and Q. Pedius. Sext. Pompey, the son of Pompey the Great, makes himself powerful by sea to oppose Augustus.

——— 717. M. Agrippa; L. Caninius Gallus. Agrippa is appointed by Augustus to oppose Sext. Pompey with a fleet. He builds the famous harbour of Misenum ——— 718. L. Gellius Poplicola, M Cocceius Nerva. Agrippa obtains a naval victory over Pompey, who delivers himself to Antony, by whom he is put to death.

——— 719. L. Cornificus Nepos; Sex. Pompeius Nepos, Lentulus removed from power by Augustus.

——— 720. L Scribonius Libo; M. Antonius 2. Augustus and Antony, being sole masters of the Roman empire, make another division of the provinces. Cæsar obtains the west, and Antony the east.

——— 721. C. Cæsar Octavianus 2, L. Volcatius Tullus. Octavia divorced by Antony, who marries Cleopatra.

——— 722 Cn. Domitius Ahenobarbus; C. Sosius. Dissensions between Augustus and Antony.

——— 723. C. Cæsar Octavianus 3, M Valer. Messala Corvinus. The battle of Actium, which, according to some authors, happened the year of Rome 721.—The end of the commonwealth.

CONSUS, a deity at Rome, who presided over councils. His temple was covered in the Maximus Circus, to show that councils ought to be secret and inviolable Some suppose that it is the same as Neptunus Equestris. Romulus instituted festivals to his honour called Consualia, during the celebration of which the Romans carried away the Sabine women. (Vid. Consualies Ludi.) Plut. in Rom.—Dionys. Hal. 1.—Liv 1, 9.

CONSYGNA, the wife of Nicomedes king of Bithynia, torn to pieces by dogs for her lascivious deportment. Plin. 8, 40

CONTADESDUS, a river of Thrace. Herod. 4, 90.

COON, the eldest son of Antenor, killed by Agamemnon. Homer. Il.

COPÆ, a small town of Bœotia, situated on the northern shore of the lake Copais, to which it gave name. It had temples of Bacchus, Ceres, and Serapis. Paus. 9, 24.

COPAIS LACUS, a lake of Bœotia, which received various appellations from the different towns situated along its shores. At Haliartus it was called Haliartius lacus; at Orchomenus, Orchomenius. Pindar and Homer distinguish it by the name of Cephissus. Stephanus Byzantinus says it also bore that of Leuconis. That of Copais, however, finally prevailed, as Copæ was situated near the deepest part of it. It was 380 stadia, or 47 miles in circuit, and received the rivers which issued from the mountains by which Bœotia was surrounded. According to Strabo there were several subterranean canals, connecting this lake with the Euboean sea; they had been caused by earthquakes, and prevented the lake from gaining upon the surrounding country. Strab. 9.—Plin. 16, 36.—Paus. 9, 24.

COPHAS, or COPHANTA, a port of Gedrosia, supposed to be the modern Gondel.

COPHONTIS, a burning mountain of Bactriana. Plin. 2, 106.

COPIA, the goddess of plenty, among the Romans, was represented as bearing in one hand a horn, out of which proceeded fruits, flowers, wreaths, &c., and in the other she held a bundle of different ears of corn. Her figure was that of a young blooming virgin, of a tall stature, and her head was crowned with flowers. The horn of plenty (cornu copiæ) was the horn of the goat Amalthæa, and it was presented to the nymphs who had nursed Jupiter, when the favourite animal was placed among the constellations of heaven by the gratitude of the god. The statues of some of the gods, as Bacchus, Hercules, Apollo, Ceres, &c., and of some of the greatest heroes of antiquity, are often represented with this celebrated horn in allusion to the services they may have rendered mankind. Hygin. F. A. 2, 13.

COPILLUS, a general of the Tectosagæ, taken by the Romans Plut. in Syll.

C COPONIUS, a commander of the fleet of Rhodes, at Dyrrachium, in the interest of Pompey Cic de Div. 1, 8.—Paterc 2, 85.

COPRATES, a river of Asia, falling into the Tigris Diod 19.

COPREUS, a son of Pelops, who fled to Mycenæ at the death of Iphitus. Apollod. 2, 5.

COPTUS and COPTOS, now Ghoust, a city of Upper Egypt, three miles distant from the Nile, and connected with it by a navigable canal. It was the centre of communication between Egypt and the Red Sea, by a north-east route to Myos Hormus, and by a south-east course to Berenice; which last place was the staple of the trade with India. According to Plutarch, Isis, upon receiving the account of the death of Osiris, cut off here one of her locks in token of her grief, and hence the place was named Coptus, this term denoting, in the Egyptian tongue, want or privation. Plin. 5, 9. 6, 23.—Strab. 16.—Plut. de Iud et Os.

CORA, a town of Latium, on the confines of the Volsci; built by a colony of Dardanians before the foundation of Rome. Lucan. 7, 392.—Virg Æn. 6, 775.

CORACESIUM, a seaport town of Pamphylia, where Pompey vanquished the pirates. It is now Alaya. Lac. 33, 20.

CORACONASUS, a town of Arcadia, where the Ladon falls into the Alpheus. Paus. 8, 25.

CORALETÆ, a people of Scythia. Flacc. 6, 61.

CORALLI, a people of Sarmatia Europæa, who inhabited the banks of the Euxine sea, near the Danube. Ovid. ex Pont. 4, el. 2, 37.

CORAS, a brother of Catillus and Tyburtus, who fought against Æneas. Virg. Æn. 7, 672.

CORAX, an ancient rhetorician of Sicily, who first demanded a salary of his pupils. Cic. in Brut.—Quintil. 3, 1.——A king of Sicyon.——A mountain of Ætolia. Liv. 36, 30.

CORBIS and ORSUA, two brothers, who fought for the dominion of a city, in the presence of Scipio in Spain. Liv. 28, 21.—Val. Max. 9, 11.

CORBULO, DOMITIUS, a Roman general, famous for his rigid observance of military discipline, and for the success of his arms, especially against the Parthians. On account of his great reputation, he became an object of suspicion and jealousy to Nero, who recalled him, under pretence of rewarding his merit When Corbulo reached Corinth, he met there an order to die. Reflecting on his own want of prudence and foresight, he fell upon his sword, exclaiming, I have well deserved this! A.D. 66. His name was given to a place (Monumentum) in Germany, which some suppose to be modern Groningen. Tacit. Ann. 11, 18.

CORCYRA, now Corfu, an island in the Ionian sea, off the coast of Epirus, famous for the shipwreck of Ulysses, and the gardens of Alcinous. Its more ancient names were Drepane and Scheria. Its greatest length is 36 miles, and its average breadth about eight. Its earliest inhabitants were the Phæaces, a people of Liburnian origin, possessing considerable skill in nautical affairs. It was colonized by the Colchians, and subsequently, about 750 B.C., by the Corinthians, to whom it owed all the importance it ever obtained. It became, however, sufficiently powerful to contend with the parent country; and it is asserted, that the first naval engagement, which took place on the seas of Greece, was fought between it and the Corinthians. It was otherwise remarkable for having given occasion to the Peloponnesian war, by the conduct it pursued with respect to its colony Epidamnus, and for a dreadful sedition raised by the public against the nobles. On its falling into the hands of the Romans, it became a valuable station for their ships of war, in their attacks on Macedonia and Asia. Homer. Odyss. 5, &c.—Thucyd 1, 13, &c.—Strab. 6.——An island in the Adriatic, on the coast of Illyricum, called Nigra (Black), in Greek Μέλαινα, to distinguish it from the more celebrated island of the same name. It is now Corzola.

CORDUBA, now Cordova, the metropolis of Hispania Bætica, on the river Bætis. It was the birth-place of the two Senecas, and the poet Lucan. Martial. 1, ep 62.—Mela, 2, 6.—Vell. Alex. 57.—Plin 3, 1

CORDYLA, a port of Pontus, a short distance to the south-west of Trapezus, supposed to give its name to a peculiar sort of fishes caught there (cordylæ). By cordylæ are meant "the fry of the tunny fish." Plin. 9, 15.—Martial. 13, ep. 1.

CORE, a daughter of Ceres, the same as Proserpine, from the Greek, κορὴ, puella Festivals called Coreia, were instituted to her honour in Greece.

CORESSUS, a hill near Ephesus. Herod. 5, 100

CORESUS, a priest of Bacchus at Calydon in Bœotia, who was deeply enamoured of the nymph Callirhoe, who treated him with disdain. He complained to Bacchus, who visited the country, with a pestilence. The Calydonians were directed by the oracle, to appease the god by sacrificing Callirhoe on his altar. The nymph was led to the altar, and Coresus, who was to sacrifice her, forgot his resentment, and slayed himself. Callirhoe, conscious of her ingratitude to the love of Coresus, killed herself on the brink of a fountain, which afterwards bore her name. Paus. 7, 21.

CORFINIUM, the capital of the Peligni, in Italy, about three miles from the Sagrus. In the time of the social war, it took the name of Italica, and had the honour of being styled the capital of Italy. Cæs. B C 1, 16.—Lucan. 2, 478.

CORIA, a surname of Minerva, among the Arcadians. Cic. de Nat. D. 3, 23.

CORINNA, a celebrated Grecian poetess, was born at Tanagra, in Bœotia, and flourished in the fifth century B.C. She was contemporary with Pindar, over whom she five times obtained the poetical wreath, to which triumph her beauty assisted. She composed a number of works, of which only a few fragments remain. Her countrymen erected a tomb to her honour, in the most conspicuous part of their city. Ælian. V. H. 13, 25.—Pans. 9, 22.

CORINNUS, an ancient poet in the time of the Trojan war, on which he wrote a poem. Homer, as some suppose, took his subject from the poem of Corinnus.

CORINTHI ISTHMUS, or, Isthmus of Corinth, between the Corinthiacus Sinus and Saronicus Sinus, and joining the Peloponnesus to the northern parts of Greece, or Græcia Propria. It is six modern Greek (nearly five British) miles broad, owing to which circumstance it has obtained its modern name of Hexamilion. A navigable canal was attempted to be cut across it by Demetrius, Julius Cæsar, Caligula, Nero, and Herodes Atticus, but always without success. Mela, 2, 3.—Plin. 4, 5.—Strab. 1.

CORINTHIACUS SINUS, or Gulf of Lepanto, an arm of the sea, running in between the coast of Achaia and Sicyonia to the south, and that of Phocis, Locris, and Ætolia to the north. It properly commenced from the mouth of the Achelous on the outside of the promontories of Rhium and Antirrhium, and extended inwards. It was in this anterior part of the gulf that the Christian and Ottoman fleets contended in 1571. Strab. 8.—Plin. 4, 2.

CORINTHUS, an ancient city of Greece, now called Corsto, or Corinth, and situate on the isthmus of the same name. It was first founded by Sisyphus son of Æolus, A.M. 2616, and received its name from Corinthus the son of Pelops. Its original name was Ephyre; and it obtained the epithet Bimaris, from being close to the Corinthian and Saronic gulfs, the great advantages of which situation occasioned it to be considered as the key of Peloponnesus. It was the seat of opulence and of the arts, when the rest of Greece was sunk in comparative barbarism; and it continued to maintain its rank amongst the most illustrious of the Greek cities, until it was burnt to the ground by the Romans, under the consul L. Mummius, 146 B.C. During the conflagration, all the metals which were in the city are reported to have melted, and, mixing together, to have formed that valuable composition since known as Corinthium Æs; this, however, may be more properly referred to the beautiful bronze, which the Corinthians carried to the highest perfection. There was at Corinth a famous temple of Venus, where lascivious women resorted, and sold their favours so dear, that many of their lovers were reduced to poverty; whence the proverb of to show that all voluptuous indulgences are attended with much expense. J. Cæsar planted a colony at Corinth, and endeavoured to raise it from its ruins, and restore it to its former grandeur. The government of Corinth was monarchical, till 776 years B.C., when officers called Prytanes were instituted. The war which has received the name of Corinthian war, because the battles were fought in the neighbourhood of Corinth, was begun B.C. 395, by the combination of the Athenians, Thebans, Corinthians, and Argives, against Lacedæmon. Pisander and Agesilaus distinguished themselves in that war; the former, in the first year of hostilities, was defeated with the Lacedæmonian fleet, by Conon near Cnidus; while a few days after Agesilaus slaughtered 10,000 of the enemy. The most famous battles were fought at Coronea and Leuctra, but Agesilaus refused to besiege Corinth, lamenting that the Greeks, instead of destroying one another, did not turn their arms against the Persian power. Martial, 9, ep. 58.—Sueton. Aug. 70.—Liv 45, 28.—Flor. 2, 16.—Ovid. Met. 2, 240.—Horat. 1, ep. 17, 36.—Plin. 34, 2.—Stat. Theb. 7, 106.—Paus. 2, 1, &c.—Strab. 8, &c.—Homer. Il. 15.—Cic. Tusc 3, 14. In Verr. 4, 44. De N. D. 3. ——An actor at Rome. Juv. 8, 197.

Non cuivis homini contingit adire Corinthum,

CORIOLÁNUS, the surname of C. Martius from his victory over Corioli, where, from a private soldier, he gained the amplest honours. When master of the place, he accepted as the only reward, the surname of Coriolanus, a horse, and prisoners, and his ancient host, to whom he immediately gave his liberty After a number of military exploits, and many services to his country, he was refused the consulship by the people, when his scars had for a while influenced them in his favour. This raised his resentment, and when the Romans had received a present of corn from Gelo king of Sicily, Coriolanus insisted that it should be sold for money, and not be given gratis. Upon this the tribunes raised the people against him for his imprudent advice, and even wished him to be put to death. The popular tumult, however, was for a while checked by the influence of the senators, and Coriolanus was summoned to appear before a prejudiced tribunal. His refusal to appear on the appointed day still more irritated his persecutors; he was banished by a majority of three tribes; and he immediately retired among the Volsci, to Attius Tullus his greatest enemy, from whom he met a most friendly reception. He advised him to make war against Rome, and he marched at the head of the Volsci as general. The approach of Coriolanus greatly alarmed the Romans, who, sensible of his superior abilities, and terrified by the defeats which their armies experienced against him, sent several embassies to reconcile him to his country, and to solicit his return. He was deaf to all proposals, and bade them prepare for unconditional submission. He pitched his camp only at the distance of five miles from the city; and his enmity against his country would have been fatal, had not his wife Volumnia, and his mother Veturia, been prevailed upon by the Roman matrons, to go and appease his resentment. The meeting of Coriolanus with his family was tender and affecting. He remained long inexorable; but at last the tears and entreaties of a mother and wife prevailed over the stern and obstinate resolutions of an enemy, and Coriolanus marched the Volsci from the neighbourhood of Rome. To show their sense of Volumnia's merit and patriotism, the Romans dedicated a temple to Female Fortune. The behaviour of Coriolanus, however, displeased the Volsci. He was summoned to answer for his conduct before the people of Antium; but the clamours which his enemies raised, were so prevalent, that he was murdered at the place appointed for his trial, B.C. 488. His body was honoured with a magnificent funeral by the Volsci, and the Roman matrons put on mourning for his loss. Some historians say that he died in exile, in an advanced old age. Plut. in vita.—Flor. 2, 22.

CORIOLI, an ancient town of the Volsci, between Velitræ and Lanuvium, from the capture of which C. Martius received the surname of Coriolanus. A hill, now known by the name of Comic Chorus, is thought to represent the site of Corioli. Liv. 2, 33. 3, 71.—Plin. 3, 5.

CORNASA, a town of Pisidia. Liv. 38, 15.

CORNELIA LEX, de Civitate, was enacted A.U.C. 670, by L. Corn. Sylla. It confirmed the Sulpician law, and required that the citizens of the eight newly elected tribes should be divided among the 35 ancient tribes.——Another, de Judiciis, A.U.C. 673, by the same. It ordained that the prætor should always observe the same invariable method in judicial proceedings, and that the process should not depend upon his will. ——Another, de Sumptibus, by the same. It limited the expenses which generally attended funerals. ——Another, de Religione, by the same, A.U.C. 677. It restored to the college of priests, the privilege of choosing the priests, which by the Domitian law, had been lodged in the hands of the people.——Another, de Municipiis, by the same; that the free towns which had sided with Marius should be deprived of their lands and the right of citizens; the last of which Cicero says could not be done ——Another, de Magistratibus, by the same; which gave the power of bearing honours and being promoted before the legal age, to those who had followed the interest of Sylla while the sons and partisans of his enemies, who had been proscribed, were deprived of the privilege of standing for any office of the state.——Another, de Magistratibus, by the same, A.U.C. 673. It ordained that no person should exercise the same office within ten years' distance, or be invested with two different magistracies in one year; and that no one should be prætor before being quæstor, nor consul before being prætor. ——Another, de Magistratibus, by the same, A.U.C. 673. It divested the tribunes of the privilege of making laws, interfering, holding assemblies, and receiving appeals. All such as had been tribunes were incapable of holding any other office in the state by that law.——Another, de Majestate, by the same, A.U.C. 670. It made it treason to send an army out of a province, or engage in a war without orders, to influence the soldiers to spare or ransom a captive general of the enemy, to pardon the leaders of robbers or pirates, or for the absence of a Roman citizen, to a foreign court, without previous leave. The punishment was, aquæ et ignis interdictio.—— Another, by the same, which gave the power to a man accused of murder, either by poison, weapons, or false accusations, and the setting fire to buildings, to choose whether the jury that tried him should give their verdict clam or palam, viva voce, or by ballot.——Another, by the same, which made it aquæ et ignis interdictio to such as were guilty of forgery, concealing and altering of wills, corruption, false accusations, and the debasing or counterfeiting of the public coin; all such as were accessary to this offence, were deemed as guilty as the offender.——Another, de Pecuniis repetundis, by which a man convicted of peculation or extortion in the provinces was condemned to suffer the aquæ et ignis interdictio. ——Another, by the same, which gave the power to such as were sent into the provinces with any government, of retaining their command and appointment, without a renewal of it by the senate, as was before observed. ——Another, by the same, which ordained that the lands of proscribed persons should be common, especially those about Volaterræ and Fesulæ in Etruria, which Sylla divided among his soldiers.——Another, by C. Cornelius, tribune of the people, A.U.C. 686; which ordained that no person should be exempted from any law, according to the general custom, unless 200 senators were present in the senate, and no person thus exempted, could hinder the bill of his exemption from being carried to the people for their concurrence.—— Another, by Nasica, A.U.C. 583, to make war against Perseus, son of Philip king of Macedonia, if he did not give proper satisfaction to the Roman people.

CORNELIA, a daughter of Cinna, who was the first wife of J. Cæsar. She became mother o. Julia. Pompey's wife, and was so affectionately loved by her husband, that at her death he pronounced a funeral oration over her body. Plut. in Cæs.——A daughter of Metellus Scipio, who married Pompey, after the death of her husband P. Crassus. She has been praised for her great virtues. When her husband left her in the bay of Alexandria, to go on shore in a small boat, she saw him stabbed by Achillas, and heard his dying groans without the possibility of aiding him. She attributed all his misfortunes to his connexion with her. Plut. in Pomp ——A daughter of Scipio Africanus, who married Sempronius Gracchus, and was the mother of Tiberius and Caius Gracchus. She was courted by a king; but she preferred being the wife of a Roman citizen, to that of a monarch. Her virtues have been deservedly commended, as well as the wholesome principles which she inculcated in her two sons. When a Campanian lady made once a show of her jewels at Cornelia's house, and entreated her to favour her with a sight of her own, Cornelia produced her two sons, saying, "These are the only jewels of which I can boast." She was continually urging them to perform some action worthy of them; and in their youth reproached them that she was still known only as the mother-in-law of Scipio, not as the mother of the Gracchi. She bore their death with magnanimity, and would speak of her loss without a sigh or a tear. Being once condoled with, she gravely answered, that "the woman who had given birth to the Gracchi could not be deemed unfortunate." After her decease, the Romans erected a statue to her memory, with this inscription, "To Cornelia, mother of the Gracchi." Plut. in Gracch.—Juv. 6, 167.—Val. Max 4, 4.—Cic. in Brut 58 ——A vestal virgin, buried alive in Domitian's age, as guilty of incontinence. Sueton. in Dom.

CORNELII, an illustrious family at Rome, of whom the most distinguished were, Caius Cornelius, a soothsayer of Padua, who foretold the beginning and issue of the battle of Pharsalia. ——Dolabella, a friend and admirer of Cleopatra. He told her that Augustus intended to remove her from the monument, where she had retired.——An officer of Sylla, whom J. Cæsar bribed to escape the proscription which threatened his life.——Cn., a man chosen by Marcellus to be his colleague in the consulship. ——Cossus, a military tribune during the time that there were no consuls in the republic. He offered to Jupiter the spoils called opima, after having slain Lar Tolumnius, king of the Veientes, A.U.C. 318. Liv. 4, 19.——Balbus, a man of Gades, intimate with Cicero, by whom he was ably defended when accused.——Scipio, a man appointed master of the horse, by Camillus, when dictator.——Gallus, an elegiac poet. (Vid. Gallus.)——Merula, was made consul by Augustus, in the room of Cinna.——Marcellus, a man killed in Spain by Galba.——C. Nepos, an his torian. (Vid. Nepos.)——Merula, a consul sent against the Boii in Gaul. He killed 1400 of them. His grandson followed the interest of Sylla; and when Marius entered the city he killed himself, by opening his veins.——Severus, an epic poet in the age of Augustus, of great genius. He wrote a poem on mount Ætna, and on the death of Cicero. Quintil. 10, 1.——Thuscus, a mischievous person.——Lentulus Cethegus, a consul.——Aur Celsus, wrote eight books on medicine, still extant, and highly valued. (Vid. Celsus.)——Cn and Publ. Scipio. (Vid. Scipio.)——Lentulus, a high priest, &c.

CORNICŪLUM, a town of Latium. Dion. Hal.

CORNIFICIUS, a poet and general in the age of Augustus, employed to accuse Brutus, &c. His compositions were highly valued for their ease and elegance, but nothing remains but a few letters inserted with those of his friend Cicero. His sister Cornificia, was also blessed with a poetical genius. Plut. in Brut.——A lieutenant of J. Cæsar. Id. in Cæs.——A friend of Cicero, and his colleague in the office of augur. Cic. Att. 1, ep 1.

CORNIGER, a surname of Bacchus.

CORNŪTUS, a native of Africa, who lived and taught philosophy at Rome at the beginning of Nero's reign. His tenets were those of the Stoic sect, and his name was not without distinction in that school of philosophy. He excelled in criticism and poetry; but his principal studies were of a philosophical character. His merit as a teacher of the Stoic doctrine sufficiently appears from his having been the preceptor of that honest advocate for virtue, the satirist Persius. Under Nero, he was driven into exile for his freedom of speech. Pers 5, 36 · Aul. Gell 6, 2.——A prætor of Rome, in the age of Cicero. Cic. Fam. 10, ep 12.——A Roman, saved from the proscription of Marius, by his servants, who hung up a dead man in his room, and said it was their master. Plut. in Mario CORŒBUS, a Phrygian, son of Mygdon and Anaximena. He assisted Priam in the Trojan war, with the hopes of being rewarded with the hand of Cassandra for his services. Cassandra advised him in vain to retire from the war. He was killed by Peneleus. Paus. 10, 27.—Virg. Æn. 2, 341, &c.——A courser of Elis, killed by Neoptolemus. He obtained a prize at Olympia, B.C. 776, from which time the regular dates of the olympiads begin. (Vid Olympia.) Paus. 5, 8.——A hero of Argolis, who killed a serpent called Pœne, sent by Apollo to avenge Argos, and reckoned by some among the Furies. His country, when afflicted with the plague, consulted the oracle of Delphi, which commanded him to build a temple, where a tripod which was given him, should fall from his hand. Paus. 1, 43.

CORONA, now Coron, a town of Messenia, on the western shore of the Sinus Messeniacus. Its original name was Æpea; but this was changed to Corone, after the restoration of the Messenians. The haven of this town was called the Port of the Achæans. Liv. 39, 49.—Plin. 4, 5.

CORONEA, a town of Bœotia, to the south-east of Chæronea, on a branch of the Cephisus. It was famous as the spot near which the Thebans and their allies were defeated by the Spartans under Agesilaus, B.C. 394. C. Nep. in Ages.—Paus. 9, 34.—Dicod. 12.——A town of Thessaly, near Pharsalus.

CORONIDES, a surname of the god Æsculapius, as son of Coronis. Ovid. Fast. 6, 746.

CORŌNIS, a daughter of Phlegias, loved by Apollo. She became pregnant by her lover, who killed her on account of her criminal partiality to Ischys the Thessalian. According to some, Diana killed her, for her infidelity to her brother; and Mercury saved the child from her womb, as she was on the burning pile. Others say, that she brought forth her son and exposed him, near Epidaurus, to avoid her father's resentment, and they farther mention, that Apollo had set a crow to watch her behaviour. The child was preserved, and called Æsculapius, and the mother, after death, received divine honours, and had a statue at Sicyon, in her son's temple, which was never exposed to public view Paus. 2, 26.——The daughter of Coronæus, king of Phocis, changed into a crow by Minerva, when flying before Neptune. Ovid. Met 2, 543.——One of the daughters of Atlas and Pleione

CORONTA, a town of Acarnania. Thucyd. 2, 102

CORONUS, a son of Apollo. Paus 2, 5 ——A son of Phoroneus, king of the Lapithæ. Dod 1

CORSI, the inhabitants of Corsica.——The inhabitants of northern Sardinia, who came originally from Corsica.

CORSICA, an island of the Mediterranean, called by the Greeks Kúpvos. The ancient writers represent it as mountainous, woody, and well cultivated, only along the eastern coast, where the Romans had settlements Its principal products were resin, honey, and wax. The honey, however, had a bitter taste, in consequence of the quantity of yew trees which grew on the island. The inhabitants were a rude race of mountaineers, indebted for their subsistence more to the produce of their flocks than to the cultivation of the soil. Seneca, who was banished to this island in the reign of Claudius, draws a very unfavourable picture of the island and its inhabitants; describing the former as rocky, unproductive, and unhealthy, and the latter as the worst of barbarians. He writes, however, under the influence of prejudiced feelings, and many allowances must be made. The inhabitants derived their origin from Iberian and Ligurian tribes The Phocæans, on migrating from Asia, settled here for a time, but were driven out finally by the Tyrrhenians and Carthaginians. The Romans became masters of the island B.C. 231, and used it as a place of exile. Diod. Sic. 5, 13 et 14.—Virg. Ecl. 9, 30 —Ovid. Am. 1, el. 12.—Senec. de Consol. ad Helv. 6, 8.

CORSOTE, a town of Mesopotamia, on the river Masca, according to Xenophon. D'Anville places it at the confluence of the Masca and Euphrates. Xen. Anab. 3.

CORSURA, an island in the bay of Carthage

CORTONA, a town of Etruria, a short distance north-west of the Lacus Thrasymenus, and about fourteen miles south of Arretium. It is supposed to have been built on the ruins of an ancient town called Corythus, and is known by that appellation in Virgil. It retains at present its ancient name of Cortona. Virg. Æn. 3, 170. 7, 209.—Sil. Ital 5, 163 —Dionys. H. 1, 20 et 26.

T. CORUNCĀNIUS, the first plebeian who was made high priest at Rome.——The family of the Coruncanii was famous for the number of great men which it supplied, for the service and honour of the Roman republic. Cic. pro Domo.

CORUS, a river of Arabia, falling into the Red sea. Herod. 3, 9.

CORVINUS, a name given to M. Valerius from a crow, which assisted him when he was fighting against a Gaul.——An orator. Paterc. 2, 36 ——Messala. an eloquent orator in the Augustan age. Vid. Messala.

CORYBANTES, the priests of Cybele, called also Galli In the celebration of their festivals, they beat their cymbals, and behaved as if delirious. They first dwelt on mount Ida, and from thence passed into Crete, and secretly brought up Jupiter. Some suppose that they derive their origin from Corybas, son of Jasius and Cybele, who appointed them to perform religious service to his mother in the island of Crete and in Phrygia. Others deduce the name from their moving along in a kind of dance, and tossing the head to and fro, (ἀπο τοῦ κορυπτόντας βαίνειν) Diod. 5. —Strab. 10.—Horat 1, od 16.

CORYBANTICA, a festival observed at Cnossus in Crete, in memory of the Corybantes, who educated Jupiter when concealed in that island from his father Saturn.

CORYBAS, a son of Jasus and Cybele. Diod. 5.——A painter, disciple to Nicomachus. Plin. 35, 11.

CORYCIDES, the nymphs who inhabited the foot of Parnassus. This name is often applied to the Muses. Ovid Met. 1, 320

CORYCIUM ANTRUM, a cave or grotto on mount Parnassus, about 60 stadia from Delphi, and higher up the mountain. It was so large, that on the approach of the Persians, the greater part of the Delphians sought refuge in its recess It was sacred to the Corycian nymphs, and to the god Pan. Paus. 10, 32.—Herod. 8, 36.

CORYCIUS, an old man of Tarentum, whose time was happily employed in taking care of his bees. He is represented by Virgil, G. 4, 127, &c., as a contented old man, whose assiduity and diligence are exemplary. Some suppose that the word Corycius, implies not a person of that name, but a native of Corycus, who had settled in Italy.

CORYCUS, now Korghos, a town of Cilicia Campestris, on the coast, south east of Seleucia Trachea. In its vicinity was produced excellent saffron. A little above it were several large caverns, one of which was called the Corycium Antrum; and another, much farther inland, was fabled to have been the residence of the giant Typhœus. Strab. 14.—Mela, 1, 13.——A promontory of Ionia, south-east of the southern extremity of Chios, now Cape Kourko. It was a famous place of retreat for pirates and robbers.

CORYDON, a fictitious name of a shepherd, often occurring in the pastorals of Theocritus and Virgil.

CORYMBIFER, a surname of Bacchus, from his wearing a crown of corymbi, certain berries that grow on the ivy. Ovid. Fast. 1, 393.

CORYNETA and CORYNETES, a famous robber, son of Vulcan. He for a while plundered and terrified the neighbourhood of Epidaurus, till he was killed by Theseus. Plut. in Thes.

CORYPHASIUM, a promontory on the western coast of Messenia, north of Methone, now Cape Zonchio. There was a town of the same name on it, to which the inhabitants of Pylos retired after the destruction of their town. Paus. 4, 36.

CORYTHE, a daughter of Oceanus. Ov. de Nat. D. 3. 23.

CORYTUS, an ancient king of Etruria, father to Iasius, whom Dardanus is said to have put to death to obtain the kingdom. He gave his name to a town of Etruria, now Cortona, near which Dardanus was born. (Vid. Cortona.) Virg. Æn. 3, 170. 7, 209.—Sil. 3, 123. 4, 721.

COS, an island of the Ægean, one of the Sporades, west of the promontory of Doris. Its earlier names were Merope, Cea, and Nymphæa. It is now called Stan-co It gave birth to Hippocrates, Apelles, and Philetas, and was famous for its exceeding fertility, for the beautiful and sanative wine which it produced, and for the manufacture of silk of a very fine texture. The women of the island always dressed in white; they were said to have been changed into cows by Juno, because they reproached her for having allowed Hercules to lead Geryon's herds through their territories. The chief town was Cos, called anciently Astypalæa, in the suburbs of which stood a magnificent temple of Æsculapius. Homer. Il. 2, 184, 14, 255.—Ovid. A. A. 3, 401.—Hor. Od. 4, 13, 13 Sat. 2 4 29.—Plin 11, 22, 23.

COSA, and COSSA, or COSSÆ, a maritime town of Etruria, on the promontory of mount Argentarius, north-west of Centum Cellæ. It was situate at a little distance from the modern Ansedonia, which is now itself in ruins. Plin. 3, 5.—Virg. Æn. 10, 167.—Vell Paterc. 1, 14.——A city of Lucania, in Italy, near the source of the river Cylistarnus. Cic. Ph. 2, 27.

COSCONIUS, a Latin writer Varro de L. L. 5.——A wretched epigram writer. Martial. 2, ep. 77.

COSIS, a brother to the king of Albania, killed by Pompey. Plut. in Pomp.

COSMUS, an effeminate Roman. Juv. 8.

COSSUS, a surname given to the family of the Cornelii ——A. Cornel., a Roman, who killed Lar. Tolumnius, king of Veii, and was the second who obtained the Spolia Opima, A.U.C. 318. Virg Æn. 6, 841.

COSSUTII, a family of Rome, of which Cossutia, Cæsar's wife, was descended. Suet in Cæs.

COSYRA, a barren island in the African sea near Melita. Ovid Fast 3, 567.

COTES, a promontory of Mauritania, now Cape Spartel. It was called Cotes by the Carthaginians and Phœnicians, from the number of excellent vines which grew in the neighbourhood; hence the Greeks translated this name into their own language, calling it Ampelusia. Mela, 1, 5

COTHON, a small island near the citadel of Carthage, with a convenient bay, which served for a dock-yard. Diod. 3.

COTISO, a king of the Daci, whose alliance was courted by Augustus, and was defeated by Lentulus, the lieutenant of Augustus. It was that Augustus solicited his daughter in marriage. Suet in Aug. 63.—Horat. Od. 3, 8, 18.

COTTA, M. AURELIUS, a Roman, who opposed Marius. He was consul with Lucullus; and when in Asia, he was defeated by sea and land, by Mithridates. He was surnamed Pontifex, because he took Heraclea of Pontus by treachery. Plut. in Lucull.——An orator, greatly commended by Cicero de Orat.——A governor of Paphlagonia, very faithful to Sardanapalus. Diod. 2. ——A spendthrift, in the age of Nero, &c. Tacit. ——An officer of Cæsar, in Gaul.——A poet mentioned by Ovid in Ep de Pont.

COTTIÆ ALPES, now Mont St. Genevre, generally, though erroneously, supposed to be the place where Annibal passed on his invasion of Italy. They took their name from Cottius, an Alpine chieftain, who held a kind of sovereignty over several valleys among the Alps. Amm. Marc. 15, 10.—Suet. Ner. 18.

COTTUS, a giant, son of Cœlus and Terra, who had 100 hands and 50 heads. Hesiod Theog. 147.

COTYÆUM, now Kutaya, a town of Phrygia, south of Dorylæum.

COTYLATIS, a surname of Æsculapius, worshipped on the borders of the Euxotus. His temple was raised by Hercules. Paus 3, 19.

COTYORA, a city of Asia Minor, founded by a colony from Sinope. Now, Bazuk Kale. Dion 14.

COTYS, the father of Asia. Herod 4, 45.—A son of Manes by Callirhoe, who succeeded his father on the throne of Mæonia.—A king of Thrace C Nep in Iphic.—Another, who favoured the interest of Pompey. He was of an irascible temper Lucan 5, 54.—Another, king of Thrace, who divided the kingdom with his uncle, by whom he was killed. It is the same to whom Ovid writes from his banishment Tacit. Ann 2 64.—Ovid de Pont. 2, ep 9.—A king of the Odrysæ Liv. 42, 29.—A king of Armenia Minor, who fought against Mithridates, in the age of Claudius Tacit Ann 11 et 13.

COTYTTO, the goddess of all debauchery, whose festivals called Cotyttia, were celebrated by the Athenians, Corinthians, Thracians, &c. during the night. Her priests were called Baptæ, and nothing but debauchery and wantonness prevailed at the celebration. A festival of the same name was observed in Sicily, where the votaries of the goddess carried about boughs hung with cakes and fruit, which it was lawful for any person to pluck off. It was a capital punishment to reveal whatever was seen or done at these sacred festivals; and it cost Eupolis his life for an unseasonable reflection upon them. The goddess Cotytto is supposed to be the same as Proserpine or Ceres. Horat. Epod 17, 58.—Juv 2, 91.

CRAGUS, a ridge of woody mountains in Lycia, bend to Diana, running along the eastern shore of the Sinus Telmessicus. The fabulous monster Chimæra, said to have been subdued by Bellerophon, was a volcano in this ridge, which he cultivated. Ovid. Met 9, 645.—Horat Od. 1, 21

CRANAI, a surname of the Athenians, from their king Cranaus. Herod. 8, 44

CRANAUS, the second king of Athens, who succeeded Cecrops, and reigned nine years, B.C. 1061. Paus 1, 2.

CRANII, a town of Cephallenia, situate in the Cranæan gulf with Pallæ. Strab. 10

CRANON and CRANNON, a town of Thessaly, to the east of Pharsalus, where Antipater and Craterus defeated the Athenians after Alexander's death. Liv. 26, 10 42. 64.

CRANTOR, the last philosopher of the old academy, was a native of Solæ in Cilicia, and flourished about 300 B C. He was the first who wrote commentaries on the works of Plato, and his virtues have been celebrated both by Cicero and Horace. Cic. Ac Qu 4, 44. Tusc Qu. 3, 6.—Horat. Epist. 2, 3.—An armour-bearer of Pelias, killed by Demoleon Ovid Met. 12, 351.

CRASSIPES, a surname of the family of the Furii, one of whom married Tullia, Cicero's daughter, whom he soon after divorced. Cic Att 4, ep. 5.—Liv. 38, 42.

L. CRASSITIUS, a man who opened a school at Rome. Suet. de Gramm. 18.

CRASSUS, the grandfather of Crassus the Rich who never laughed. Plin. 7. 19.—Publ. Licinius, a Roman high-priest about 131 years B.C who went into Asia with an army against Aristonicus, where he was killed and buried at Smyrna. Patere. 2, 4.—M Licinius, a celebrated Roman, surnamed Rich, on account of his opulence. At first he was very circumscribed in his circumstances; but, by educating slaves, and selling them at a high price, he soon enriched himself. The cruelties of Cinna obliged him to leave Rome; and he retired to Spain, where he remained concealed for eight months. After Cinna's death he passed into Africa, and thence to Italy, where he served Sylla, and ingratiated himself in his favour. When the gladiators, with Spartacus at their head, had spread an universal alarm in Italy, and defeated some of the Roman generals, Crassus was sent against them. A battle was fought, in which Crassus slaughtered 12,000 of the slaves, and by this decisive blow he soon put an end to the war, and was honoured with an ovatio at his return. He was soon after made consul with Pompey, and in this high office he displayed his opulence, by entertaining the populace at 10,000 tables. He was afterwards censor, and formed the first triumvirate with Pompey and Cæsar. As his love of riches was more predominant than that of glory, Crassus never imitated the ambitious conduct of his colleagues, but was satisfied with the province of Syria, which seemed to promise an inexhaustible source of wealth. With hopes of enlarging his possessions, he though the omens proved unfavourable, and though his friends deprecated his departure, and his enemies openly threatened his ruin, set off from Rome, and embarked at Brundusium. He crossed the Euphrates, and, forgetful of the rich cities of Babylon and Seleucia, he hastened to make himself master of Parthia. He was betrayed in his march by the delay of Artavasdes, king of Armenia, and the perfidy of Ariamnes. He was met in a large plain by Surena, the general of the forces of Orodes, the king of Parthia, and a battle was fought in which 20 000 Romans were killed, and 10,000 taken prisoners. The darkness of the night favoured the escape of the rest, and Crassus, forced by the mutiny and turbulence of his soldiers, and the treachery of his guides, trusted himself to the general of the enemy, on pretence of proposing terms of accommodation, and he was put to death, B C. 53. His head was cut off, and sent to Orodes, who, to insult his misfortunes and to deride his avarice, poured melted gold down his throat. The firmness with which Crassus received the news of his son's death, who perished in that expedition, has been deservedly commended, and the words that he uttered when he surrendered himself into the hands of Surena equally claim our admiration. He was wont often to say, that no man ought to be accounted rich if he could not maintain an army. Though he has been called avaricious, yet he was liberal and generous in his intercourse with his friends, and the hospitality with which he treated the Romans could not always be attributed to sordid or interested motives. At all times eager to relieve distress, he always showed himself willing to lend money unsolicited to his friends, and without interest. He was fond of philosophy, and his knowledge of history was great and extensive. Plutarch has written his life. Plut. 3, 11.—Publius, the son of the rich Crassus, possessed great powers of mind, with a highly cultivated understanding, but military glory, the passion of the times, was his favourite pursuit. After displaying his valour in the armies of Cæship in Gaul, he accompanied his father into Parthia at the head of a chosen troop of a thousand horse. When he saw himself in the fatal battle surrounded by the enemy, and without any hope of escape, he ordered one of his men to run him through. His head was cut off, and, fixed on a spear, was shown with insulting triumph to his father and his army by the Parthians. Plut. in Crass ——L. Licinius, a celebrated Roman orator, deservedly commended by Cicero, and introduced in his book De oratore as the principal speaker Besides his great abilities as an orator, and as a man of letters, Crassus possessed the wisdom of a senator, the intrepidity of a soldier, and the integrity of a magistrate He passed through all the public offices of the state, in which he had his friend Scævola for colleague, except in the tribuneship and censorship; and as the governor of Gaul, he gained popularity by his justice and vigilance, and merited the honours of a triumph, which, however, were through intrigue refused to his services During a vehement debate in the senate with Philippus, Crassus was suddenly seized with a pain in his side, which in seven days terminated his life, happy, as Cicero observes, to not being a witness of the many calamities which soon after afflicted Rome. Cic. de Or 3, 12.—Id. in Verr. 3, 1.—Id. pro Font 7.—Id. Off 1, 30, &c. ——A son of Crassus the Rich, killed in the civil wars, after Cæsar's death.

CRASTINUS, a man in Cæsar's army killed at the battle of Pharsalia. Cæs Bell. C 3, 99

CRATAIS, the mother of Scylla, supposed to be the same as Hecate. Hom. Odyss 12, 124

CRATER, or SINUS CRATER, a name anciently given, from its form, to the Gulf of Naples

CRATERUS, one of Alexander's generals. He rendered himself conspicuous by his literary fame, as well as by his valour in the field, and wrote the history of Alexander's life. He was greatly respected and loved by the Macedonian soldiers, and Alexander always trusted him with unusual confidence. After Alexander's death, he subdued Greece with Antipater, and passed with his colleague into Asia, where he was killed in a battle against Eumenes, B C. 321 He had received for his share of Alexander's kingdoms, Greece and Epirus. Nep in Eumen. 2.—Justin. 12 et 13.—Curt. 3.—Arrian.—Plut in Alex —— An eminent physician, intimate with Cicero and Atticus. Cic ad Attic 14, ep. 13 Hor.at. sat 2, 3, 161.—Persius, 3, 6.——A painter, whose pieces adorned the public buildings of Athens. Plin 35, 11.——An Athenian, who collected into one body all the decrees which had passed in the public assemblies at Athens.

CRATES, a philosopher of Bœotia, son of Ascondus, and disciple of Diogenes the Cynic B C. 324. He sold his estate, the produce of which he gave to the poor, that he might study philosophy without disturbance. Though ugly, old, and filthy, a lady named Hipparchia, fell in love with him, and became his wife. Some of his apophthegms and letters are extant. Diog. in vita.—— A native of Pergamus, who wrote an account of the most striking events of every age, B.C. 165. Ælian de Anim. 17, 9 ——A philosopher of Athens, who succeeded in the school of his master Polemon. Crates and Polemon had long been attached to each other by a similarity of dispositions and pursuits. Their friendship was uninterrupted whilst they lived, and they were both buried in the same grave.—— An Athenian, originally an actor, and who in that capacity performed the principal characters in the plays of Cratinus. Afterwards, about B.C. 450, he began to write comedies himself. His style is said to have been gay and facetious; yet the few fragments of his compositions which remain are of a serious cast.

CRATESICLEA, the mother of Cleomenes, who went to Egypt in hopes of serving her country, &c. Plut. in Cleom.

CRATESIPOLIS, a queen of Sicyon, who severely punished some of her subjects, who had revolted at the death of Alexander, her husband, &c. Polyæn. 8 58.

CRATESIPPIDAS, a commander of the Lacedæmonian fleet, against the Athenians, &c. Diod 13.

CRATHIS, a river of Arcadia, which had its source in a mountain of the same name, and ran through Achaia into the Sinus Corinthiacus. It was from this stream that the Italian Crathis, which flowed between Crotona and Sybaris, derived its appellation. Herod 1 146.—Strab. 8. —— A river of Lucania, rising in the Apennines, near Consentia, and falling into the Sinus Tarentinus between Crotona and Sybaris. Its waters were said to possess the property of giving a yellow colour to the hair of those who bathed in them It is now the Crati Strab. 6.

CRATINUS, a comic poet of Athens, who flourished about B.C 440. He is recorded to have composed thirty-eight comedies, and to have been nine times victor. He was one of those who freely indulged in personal satire, and among other public characters is said to have attacked Pericles. He was also much addicted to conviviality, and Horace quotes his authority against water drinking poets. Quintilian enumerates him among the principal of the comic poets, whose works he recommends as useful in forming an orator. Notwithstanding his intemperance, he lived to an extreme old age, dying B.C. 431, in his ninety-seventh year Nothing remains of his composition but a few verses, from which no judgment can be formed. Horat. Epist. 1, 19. Sat 1, 4.—Persius, 1, 123.—Quinct. 10 1.

CRATIPPUS, a philosopher of Mitylene, who, among others, taught Cicero's son at Athens. After the battle of Pharsalia, Pompey visited the house of Cratippus, where their discourse was chiefly turned upon Providence, which the warrior blamed and the philosopher defended. Plut. in Pomp.—Cic. in Offic. 1.——An historian, contemporary with Thucydides. Dionys. Hal.

CRATYLUS, a philosopher, preceptor to Plato after Socrates.

CRAUGIÆ, two islands on the coast of Argolis, off Cape Spiræa.

CRAUXIDAS, a man who obtained an Olympic crown at a horse race. Paus 5, 8.

CREMERA, now la Valca, a small river of Tuscany, running between Veii and Rome, and falling into the Tiber. It is famous for the surprise and slaughter of the Fabii by the Veientes. According to Livy, 306 of the Fabii fell into an ambuscade, and were cut to pieces near this river; one alone of the whole family surviving, who, by reason of his tender years, had been left at Rome. He was the grandfather of Fabius Maximus. Ovid. Fast 2, 205.—Juv. 2, 155.

CREMMYON and CROMMYON, a town near Corinth, where Theseus killed a sow of uncommon bigness. Ovid. Met. 7, 435.

CREMNA, or CREMNI, a fort in the interior of Pisidia, lying on the declivity of Taurus, nearly six miles north of Selga. King Amyntas took it from the Pisidians; and after his death it fell, in the reign of Augustus, into the hands of the Romans, who established a colony there. It is generally supposed to be represented by the modern Kebrinaz Strab. 12.——A commercial town on the Palus Mæotis, probably near the modern Taganrock Herod. 4, 2

CREMONA, a town of Cisalpine Gaul, north east of Placentia, and a little north of the Po. It was a Roman colony, and suffered much during the second Punic war, as well as in the civil contentions of Augustus, and was at last destroyed by the partisans of Vespasian, in the war with Vitellius. It was, however, soon afterwards rebuilt with considerable magnificence. Liv. 37, 46. – Tacit. Hist. 3, 33 et 34 —Plin. 3, 19.

CREMONIS JUGUM, a part of the Alps, over which, as some suppose, Annibal passed to enter Italy. Liv. 21, 38.

CREMUTIUS CORDUS, an historian, who wrote an account of Augustus, and of the civil wars, and starved himself for fear of the resentment of Tiberius, whom he had offended by calling Cassius the last of the Romans. Tacit. Ann. 55, 34, 35.—Suet. in Aug. 35. In. Tib. 61. In Calig. 16.

CRENIS, a nymph mentioned by Ovid, Met. 12, 313.

CREON, king of Corinth, was son of Sisyphus. He promised his daughter Glauce to Jason, who repudiated Medea, after he had lived ten years with her in perfect felicity under the protection and in the house of the Corinthian king. To revenge the success of her rival, Medea sent her for a present, a gown covered with poison. Glauce put it on, and was seized with sudden pains. Her body took fire, and she expired in the greatest torments. The house was also consumed by the fire, and Creon and his family shared Glauce's fate. Apollod. 1, 9. 3, 7.—Eurip. in Med.—Hygin. fab. 25.—Diod. 4 ——A son of Menœtius, father to Jocasta, the wife and mother of Œdipus. At the death of Laius who had married Jocasta, Creon ascended the vacant throne of Thebes. As the ravages of the Sphinx (Vid. Sphinx) spread desolation and terror through the country, Creon offered his crown and daughter in marriage to him who could explain the enigmas which the monster proposed. Œdipus was happy in his explanations, and he ascended the throne of Thebes, and married Jocasta without knowing that she was his mother, and by her he had two sons, Eteocles and Polynices. These two sons mutually agreed, after their father's death, to reign in the kingdom each alternately. Eteocles first ascended the throne by right of seniority; but when he was once in power, he refused to resign at the appointed time, and his brother led against him an army of Argives to support his right. The war was decided by single combat between the two brothers. They both killed one another, and Creon ascended the throne, till Leodamas the son of Eteocles should be of sufficient age to assume the reins of government. In his regal capacity, Creon commanded that the Argives, and more particularly Polynices, who was the cause of all the bloodshed, should remain unburied. If this was in any manner disobeyed, the offenders were to be buried alive. Antigone, the sister of Polynices, transgressed, and was accordingly punished. Hæmon, the son of Creon, who passionately loved Antigone, killed himself on her grave, when his father refused to grant her pardon. Creon was afterwards killed by Theseus, who had made war against him at the request of Adrastus, because he refused burial to the Argives. (Vid Eteocles, Polynices, Adrastus, Œdipus.) Apollod. 3, 56, &c —Paus 1, 39 9, 5, &c —Stat. in Theb.—Sophocl in Antig.—Æschyl. Sept. ante Theb.—Hygin. fab. 67 et 76.—Diod. 1 et 4.——The first annual archon at Athens, 654 B C. Patere. 1, 8.

CREONTIADES, a son of Hercules by Megara, daughter of Creon, killed by his father because he had slain Lycus.

CREOPHYLUS, a native of Samos, who composed, under the title of Οἰχαλίας ἅλωσις "The conquest of Œchalia," an epic poem commemorative of the exploits of Hercules. According to an ancient tradition, Homer himself was the author of this piece, and gave it to Creophylus as a return for the hospitable reception which he had received under his roof. In an epigram of Callimachus, however, Creophylus is named as the real author. Strab. 12.

CREPERIUS POLLIO a Roman, who spent his all in the most extravagant debauchery. Juv. 9, 5.

CRES, an inhabitant of Crete.——The first king of Crete. Paus. 8, 53

CRESPHONTES, a son of Aristomachus, who, with his brothers Temenus and Aristodemus attempted to recover the Peloponnesus. Paus. 4, 3, &c.

CRESSIUS, belonging to Crete. Virg Æn. 4, 70*, 294.

CRESTON, a town of Thrace, the capital probably of the district of Crestonia.

CRESTONIA, a district of Thrace, to the north of Anthemus and Bolbe, chiefly inhabited by a remnant of Pelasgi. It is now called Caradagh. Herod 1, 57.

CRESUS and EPHESUS, two men who built the temple of Diana at Ephesus. Paus. 7, 2.

CRETA, now Candia, one of the largest islands of the Mediterranean sea, at the south of all the Cyclades. It is said to have obtained its name from Cres, a son of Jupiter and the nymph Idæa. It is likewise designated among the poets and mythological writers by the several appellations of Aeria, Doliche, Idæa, and Telchinia. It is about 140 miles in length, and from 15 to 30 in breadth. Though the interior is very mountainous and woody, it is intersected with valleys, the rich fertility of which is increased by the happy temperature of its climate. It was once famous for its hundred cities, and for the laws which the wisdom of Minos established there. The inhabitants, in the earlier part of their history, were a just and wise people, but they degenerated so far as to be charged with the grossest vices. Jupiter, as some authors report, was educated in that island by the Corybantes, and the Cretans boasted that they could show his tomb. There were different colonies from Phrygia, Doris, Achaia, &c. that established themselves there. The island, after groaning under the tyranny of democratical usurpation, and feeling the scourge of frequent sedition, was made a Roman province, B C. 66. after a war of three years, in which the inhabitants were so distressed, that they were even compelled to drink the water of their cattle Chalk was produced in great abundance there, and was thence called Creta terra, or simply Creta. Horat. Od. 1, 36, 10. Epod. 9.

—Ovid. Fast 3, 444. Epist. 10, 106.—Val. Max 7, 6.—Strab. 10.—Lucan. 3, 184.—Virg. Æn. 3, 101.—Mela, 2, 7.—Flor. 4, 12.

CRETÆUS, a poet mentioned by Propertius, 2, el 34, 29.

CRETE, the wife of Minos. Apollod 3, 1.—A daughter of Deucalion. Id. 3, 3.

CRETES, inhabitants of Crete. Virg. Æn. 1, 110.

CRETHEUS, a Trojan, distinguished as a poet and musician. He followed Æneas, and was killed by Turnus. Virg. Æn 9, 774.—Another, killed by Turnus. Id 12, 538.

CRETHEIS, the wife of Acastus king of Iolchos, who fell in love with Peleus, son of Æacus, and accused him of attempts upon her virtue, because he refused to comply with her wishes, &c. She is called by some Hippolyte or Astydamia Pindar. Nem. 4.

CRETHEUS, a son of Æolus, father of Æson, by Tyro his brother's daughter. Apollod 1 7, &c.

CRETHON, a son of Diocles, engaged in the Trojan war on the side of Greece. He was slain, with his brother Orsilochus, by Æneas Hom. Il 5, 540.

CRETICUS, a certain orator. Jun 2, 67.—A surname of M. Antony's father.

CREUSA, a daughter of Creon, king of Corinth As she was going to marry Jason, who had divorced Medea, she put on a poisoned garment, which immediately set her body on fire, and she expired in the most excruciating torments. She had received this gown as a gift from Medea, who wished to take that revenge upon the infidelity of Jason Some call her Glauce Ovid de Art Am 1, 337.—A daughter of Priam, king of Troy, by Hecuba. She married Æneas, by whom she had some children, among which was Ascanius. When Troy was taken, she fled in the night with her husband, but they were separated in the midst of the tumult, and Æneas could not recover her, nor hear where she was. Cybele saved her, and carried her to her temple, of which she became priestess, according to the relation of Virgil, who represents Creusa as appearing to her husband in a vision, while he was seeking her in the noise and tumultuous confusion of the fight. She predicted to Æneas the calamities that attended him, the fame he should acquire when he came to Italy, and his consequent marriage with a princess of the country Paus 10, 16 Virg. Æn 2, 762 &c.—A daughter of Erechtheus, king of Athens. She was mother of Janus by Apollo.

CREUSIS, or CREUSA, a town of Bœotia, on the Sinus Corinthiacus. It was the harbour of Thespiæ Paus. 9, 32.—Lov 36, 21.

CRIASUS, a son of Argus, king of Peloponnesus. Apollod. 2, 1.

CRIMISUS, or CRIMISUS, a river on the western parts of Sicily near Segesta, where Timoleon defeated the Carthaginian forces It discharged itself into the Hypsa. It is now the Belicdestro. C. Nep in Tim.—Virg. Æn. 5, 38.—The word in the various editions of Virgil, is spelt Cremisus, Crimissus, Crimisus, Crimesus, Crinisus, Crimnisus.—The Crimisus was a Trojan prince, who exposed his daughter on the sea, rather than suffer her to be devoured by the sea monster which Neptune sent to punish the infidelity of Laomedon. (Vid. Laomedon.) The daughter came safe to the shores of Sicily. Crimisus some time after went in quest of his daughter, and was so disconsolate for her loss, that the gods changed him into a river in Sicily, and granted him the power of metamorphosing himself into whatever shape he pleased. He made use of this privilege to seduce the neighbouring nymphs.—A river of the Bruttii in Magna Græcia, falling into the Sinus Tarentinus, north of Crotona, near Petilia. It is now the Tuamenaca.

CRISPUS, a general of Dionysius the elder.

CRINO, a daughter of Antenor. Paus. 10, 27.—One of the Danaïdes. Apollod

CRISON, a man of Himera, who obtained a prize at Olympia &c. Paus 5, 25.

CRISPINA, a Roman matron, &c. Tacit. Hist. 1, 47.

CRISPINUS, a prætorian, who, though originally a slave in Egypt, was after the acquisition of riches, raised to the honours of Roman knighthood by Domitian Juv. 1, 26.—A stoic philosopher, as remarkable for his loquacity as for the foolish and tedious poem which he wrote, to explain the tenets of his own sect, to which Horace alludes in the last verses of Sat. 1, 1.

CRISPUS SALLUSTIUS Vid Sallustius.—Virio, a famous orator. Quintil 10, 1.—The second husband of Agrippina.—Flav. Jul., a son of the great Constantine made Cæsar by his father, and distinguished for valour and extensive knowledge. Fausta, his stepmother, wished to seduce him, and when he refused, she accused him before Constantine, who believed the crime, and caused his son to be poisoned, A.D 326

CRISSÆUS SINUS, an arm of the Sinus Corinthiacus, on the northern shore. It extends into the country of Phocis, and had at its head the city of Crissa, whence it took its name. It is now called the Gulf of Salona.

CRITALA, a town of Cappadocia. Herod. 7, 26.

CRITHEIS, a daughter of Melampus, who became pregnant by an unknown person, and afterwards married Themicis of Smyrna, and brought forth the poet Homer, according to Herod. in vita.

CRITHOTE, a town of the Thracian Chersonesus. C Nep

CRITIAS, one of the thirty tyrants set over Athens by the Spartans. He was eloquent and well bred, but of dangerous principles, and he cruelly persecuted his enemies, and put them to death. He was killed in a battle against those citizens whom his oppression had banished. He had been among the disciples of Socrates, and had written elegies and other compositions, of which some fragments remain. Cic. de Orat. 2.

CRITO, one of the disciples of Socrates, who attended his learned preceptor in his last moments, and composed some dialogues now lost. Diog—A physician in the age of Artaxerxes Longimanus.—An historian of Naxus, who wrote an account of all that had happened during eight particular years of his life.—A Macedonian historian, who wrote an account of Pallene, of Persia, of the foundation of Syracuse, of the Getæ, &c.

CRITOBULUS, a general of Phocis, at the battle of Thermopylæ, between Antiochus and the Romans Paus 10. 20.—A physician in the age of Philip king of Macedonia. Plin. 7, 37.—A son of Crito, disciple to Socrates. Diog. in Crit.

CRITOGNATUS, a celebrated warrior of Alesia, when Cæsar was in Gaul. Cæs. Bell. Gall.

CRITOLAUS, a citizen of Tegea in Arcadia, who, with two brothers, fought against the three sons of Demostratus of Pheneus, to put an end to the long war between their respective nations. The brothers of Critolaus were both killed, and he alone remained to withstand his three bold antagonists. He conquered them; and when at his return, his sister deplored the death of one of his antagonists to whom she was betrothed, he killed her in a fit of resentment. The offence deserved capital punishment, but he was pardoned, on account of the services he had rendered his country. He was afterwards general of the Achæans, and it is said that he poisoned himself, because he had been conquered at Thermopylæ by the Romans. Cic. de Nat. D. 3.——A peripatetic philosopher of Athens, sent ambassador to Rome, &c 140 B.C. Cic. de Orat 2.

CRIU-METŌPON, or the Ram's Front, a promontory of the Taurica Chersonesus, and the most southern point of that peninsula.

CRIUS, a soothsayer, son of Theocles. Paus 3, 13 ——A river of Achaia, called after a giant of the same name. Paus 7, 27 ——A son of Cœlus and Terra, who married Eurybia daughter of Tellus, by whom he had three sons, Astreus the husband of Aurora, Pallas the husband of Styx, and Perses the father of Asteria by Hecate. Hesiod. Th. 375, &c.

CROBYZI, a people between mount Hæmus and the Danube, in Lower Mœsia

CRŌCALE, one of Diana's attendants. Ovid Met. 3, 169.

CROCODILOPŌLIS, a town of Egypt, southeast of the lake Mœris, and afterwards called Arsinoe. It derived its name from the crocodiles which were fed and worshipped there The Egyptians are said to have honoured the crocodile because it was consecrated to Typhon, an evil genius, whom they dreaded and sought to appease by worshipping an animal which was his symbolical image This town has been succeeded by the modern Faioum, built at the distance of about a league north-east of its dilapidated walls. ——A town of Egypt, in the Thebais, supposed to be the modern Adribe.

CROCUS, a beautiful youth enamoured of the nymph Smilax. He was changed into a flower of the same name, on account of the impatience of his love, and Smilax was metamorphosed into a yew tree. Ovid. Met. 4, 283.

CRŒSUS, the fifth and last of the Mermnadæ, who reigned in Lydia, was son of Alyattes, and passed for the richest of mankind. He was the first who made the Greeks of Asia tributary to the Lydians. His court was the asylum of learning; and Æsop, the famous fable-writer, among others, lived under his patronage. In a conversation with Solon, Crœsus wished to be thought the happiest of mankind, but the philosopher appraised him of his mistake, and gave the preference to poverty and domestic virtue. Crœsus undertook a war against Cyrus the king of Persia, and marched to meet him with an army of 420,000 men, and 60,000 horse. After a reign of fourteen years, he was defeated, B.C. 548; his capital was besieged, and he fell into the conqueror's hands, who ordered him to be burned alive. The pile was already on fire, when Cyrus heard the conquered monarch three times exclaim, Solon! with lamentable energy. He asked him the reason of his exclamation, and Crœsus repeated the conversation which he had once held with Solon on human happiness. Cyrus was moved at the recital, and at the recollection of the inconstancy of human affairs, he ordered Crœsus to be taken from the burning pile, and he became one of his most intimate friends. The kingdom of Lydia became extinct in his person, and the power was transferred to Persia. Crœsus survived Cyrus. The manner of his death is unknown. He is celebrated for the immensely rich presents which he made to the temple of Delphi, from which he received an obscure and ambiguous oracle, which he interpreted in his favour, and which was fulfilled in the destruction of his empire. Herod. 1, 26, &c. —Plut. in Solon. 8, 24.—Justin. 1, 7.

CROMI, or CROMNI, a town of Arcadia, in the district Cromitis. Xen. Hel 7, 4, 21.

CROMMYON and CROMYON, a small place in Corinthia, situate on the shore of the Saronic gulf. It was celebrated in mythology as the haunt of a wild boar destroyed by Theseus Plut. Vit Thes —Strab 8.

CROMUS, a son of Neptune Paus. 2, 1.——A son of Lycaon. Id 8, 3.

CRONIA, a festival at Athens in honour of Saturn. The Rhodians observed the same festival, and generally sacrificed to the god a condemned malefactor.

CROPHI, a mountain of Egypt, between Syene and Elephantine. According to a statement made to Herodotus by an Egyptian priest at Sais, the sources of the Nile were between this mountain and another called Mophi. Herod 2, 28.

CROSSÆA, a country situate partly in Thrace, and partly in Macedonia. Herod. 7, 123.

CROTALUS, a navigable river of Italy. Plin 3, 10.

CROTON, a man killed by Hercules, by whom he was afterwards greatly honoured. Diod 4.

CROTŌNA, a town of Italy, still known by the same name, in the bay of Tarentum, founded 759 years before the Augustan age, by a colony from Achaia The inhabitants were excellent warriors, and great wrestlers; so that it was proverbially said, that the last of the Crotonians was the first of the other Greeks. Democedes, Alcmæon, Milo, &c were natives of this place. It was surrounded with a wall twelve miles in circumference, before the arrival of Pyrrhus in Italy. Crotona, whose citizens had acquired such lasting fame in their battles against the Sybarites, struggled in vain against the attacks of Dionysius of Sicily, who took it. It suffered likewise in the wars of Pyrrhus and Annibal, but it received ample glory, in being the place where Pythagoras established his school. Herod. 8, 47.—Strab. 6.—Plin. 2, 96.—Liv. 1, 18. 24, 3.—Justin. 20, 2.

CROTONIÄTÆ, the inhabitants of Crotona. Cic. de Fin. 2, 1.

CROTONIÄTIS, a part of Italy, of which Crotona is the capital. Thucyd. 7, 35.

CROTŌPIAS, the patronymic of Linus, grand son of Crotopus. Ovid. in Ib. 480.

CROTŌPUS, a king of Argos, son of Agenor, and father to Psamathe the mother of Linus by Apollo Ovid. in Ib 480.

CROTUS, a son of Eumene the nurse of the Muses He devoted his life to the labours of the chase, and after death Jupiter placed him among the constellations under the name of Sagittarius. Paus 9, 29.

CRUNOS, a town of Peloponnesus. Mela, 2, 2.

CRUSTUMERIUM and CRUSTUMBRIA, a town of the Sabines. Liv. 1, 9. 42, 34.—Virg. Æn. 7 631

CRUSTOMINUM, a town of Etruria, near Veii, famous for pears; whence the adjective Crustumia. Virg. G. 2, 88

CRUSTUMIUM, CRUSTUNUS, and CRUSTURNENIUS, a river of Umbria in Italy, rising in the Apennines, and falling into the sea below Ariminum. It is now the Conca. Lucan 2, 406.

CRYPTA, a passage through mount Pausilypus. Vid. Pausilypus.

CTEATUS, one of the Grecian chiefs before Troy. Paus. 5, 4.—A son of Actor and Molione, called by some of the poets son of Neptune. He assisted Augias against Hercules, and was afterwards killed by him at the Isthmian games. Apollod. 2.—Homer. Il. 13, 185.

CTENOS, a harbour of Chersonesus Taurica, on the western coast.

CTESIAS, son of Ctesiochus, was a Greek historian and physician of Cnidos, taken prisoner by Artaxerxes Mnemon at the battle of Cunaxa. He cured the king's wounds, and was his physician for seventeen years. He wrote a history of the Assyrians and Persians, which Justin and Diodorus have partially preferred to that of Herodotus. It consisted of 23 books, and began with the reign of Ninus, and continued in a general plan to the third year of the 98th olympiad, or about 398 years B.C. Some fragments of this composition have been preserved by Photius, and are to be found in Wesseling's edition of Herodotus. Strab. 1.—Athen. 12.—Plut. in Artax.——A sycophant of Athens.——An historian of Ephesus CTESIBIUS, a mathematician of Alexandria, who flourished 130 years B.C. He was the inventor of the pump and other hydraulic instruments. He also invented a clepsydra, or water clock. This invention of measuring time by water was wonderful and ingenious. Water was made to fall upon a wheel, or a train of wheels, which were turned by it. The wheels communicated their motion to a small wooden image, which, by being gradually raised, pointed with an index to the proper hours, that were engraved on a column near the machine. This artful invention gave rise to many improvements; and the modern manner of measuring time with an hour-glass is in imitation of the clepsydra of Ctesibius. Vitruv. de Archit. 9, 9.——A Cynic philosopher.

CTESIDEMUS, a painter, who had Antiphilus for pupil. Plin. 35, 10.

CTESILOCHUS, a noble painter, who represented Jupiter as bringing forth Bacchus. Plin 35, 11.

CTESIPHON, an Athenian, son of Leosthenes, who advised his fellow-citizens publicly to present Demosthenes with a golden crown for his probity and virtue. This was opposed by the orator Æschines, the rival of Demosthenes, who accused Ctesiphon of seditious views. Demosthenes undertook the defence of his friend, in a celebrated oration still extant, and Æschines was banished. Demost. et Æschin. de Corona.——A Greek architect, who made the plan of Diana's temple at Ephesus.——An elegiac poet, whom king Attalus set over his possessions in Æolia. Athen. 15.——A Greek historian, who wrote a history of Bœotia, besides a treatise on trees and plants. Plut. in Thes.——A city of Assyria, built by the Parthians, on the eastern bank of the Tigris, opposite to Seleucia. It soon became a very important place, the kings of Parthia passing the winter here, as they did the summer at Ecbatana. It had at first no walls, but was, notwithstanding this, so exceedingly populous, that when the emperor Severus attacked it, he carried off 100,000 captives. It was afterwards very strongly fortified, and became the residence of the Persian kings, until they fell under the power of the Arab Caliphs in the seventh century. It is now, together with Seleucia in Babylonia, a heap of ruins which is only separated by the Tigris, and known by the common name of Al Modain, or "the two cities." Strab. 15.—Plin 6, 26.

CTESIPPUS, a son of Chabrias. After his father's death he was received into the house of Phocion, the friend of Chabrias. Phocion attempted in vain to correct his natural foibles and extravagancies. Plut. in Phoc.——A man who wrote a history of Scythia.——One of the descendants of Hercules CTIMENE, the youngest daughter of Laertes by Anticlea. Homer. Odyss 15, 363.

CULARO, a town of the Allobroges in Gaul, called afterwards Gratianopolis, and now Grenoble. Cic. Ep.

CUMA, or CYME, a city of Æolia in Asia Minor, north-east of Phocæa. It is said to have been built by Pelops on his return from Greece, and to have obtained its name from the Amazon Cyme. It was the birth-place of Hesiod and Ephorus. The inhabitants were proverbially taxed with stupidity and slowness of apprehension. The ruins of the city are to be seen near the Turkish village of Sanderli. Strab. 13.—Paterc. 1, 4.

CUMÆ, a city of Campania in Italy, north-west of Neapolis. It was founded at a very early period by a colony from Chalcis in Eubœa, under the conduct of Megasthenes and Hippocles. The inhabitants were called Cumæi and Cumani. There was one of the Sibyls that fixed her residence in a cave in the neighbourhood, and was called the Cumæan Sybil. (Vid Sybillus.) It was here also that Daedalus after he had escaped from the prisons of Crete, and the resentment of Minos, erected a magnificent temple to Apollo. Cumæ, on account of its delightful situation, became the favourite resort and residence of many of the Romans, who here passed their hours of relaxation from the severer duties of the state. Ovid. Met. 15, 712. Fast 4, 198. Pont. 2, 8, 41.—Cic. Rull. 2, 26.—Paterc 1, 4.—Virg. Æn. 3, 441.—Liv 4, 44.—Plol. 3, 1.—Strab. 5.

CUMANUM, a country house of Pompey, near Cumæ. Cic. ad Attic 4, ep. 10.——Another of Varro. Id Acad. 4, 1.

CUNAXA, a place of Assyria, 600 stadia from Babylon, famous for a battle fought there between Artaxerxes and his brother Cyrus the younger, B.C. 401. The latter entered the field of battle with 113,000 men, and the former's forces amounted to 900,000. The valour and the retreat of the 10,000 Greeks, who were among the troops of Cyrus, are well known, and have been celebrated by the pen of Xenophon, who was present at the battle, and who had the principal care of the retreat. Plut. in Artax.—Ctesias.

CUNEUS Vid. Lusitania

CUPAVO, a son of Cycnus, who assisted Æneas against Turnus. Virg. Æn 10, 186.

CUPENTUS, a friend of Turnus, killed by Æneas Virg Æn 12, 539.

CUPIDO, a celebrated deity among the ancients, god of love, and love itself. There are different traditions concerning his parents. Cicero mentions three Cupids; one, son of Mercury and

Diana; another, son of Mercury and Venus, and the third, of Mars and Venus Plato mentions two. Hesiod, the most ancient theogonist, speaks only of one, who, as he says, was produced at the same time as Chaos and the earth There are, according to the more received opinions, two Cupids, one of whom is a lively ingenious youth, son of Jupiter and Venus; whilst the other, son of Nox and Erebus, is distinguished by his debauchery and riotous disposition Cupid is represented as a winged infant, naked, armed with a bow and a quiver full of arrows. On gems, and all other pieces of antiquity, he is represented as amusing himself with some childish diversion Sometimes he appears driving a hoop, throwing a quoit, playing with a nymph, catching a butterfly or trying to burn with a torch, at other times he plays upon a horn before his mother or closely embraces a swan, or with one foot raised in the air, he, in a musing posture, seems to meditate some trick, Sometimes, like a conqueror, he marches triumphantly, with a helmet on his head, a spear on his shoulder, and a buckler on his arm, intimating that even Mars himself owns the superiority of love His power was generally known by his riding on the back of a lion, or on a dolphin, or breaking to pieces the thunderbolts of Jupiter Among the ancients he was worshipped with the same solemnity as his mother Venus, and as his influence was extended over the heavens, the sea, and the earth, and even the empire of the dead his divinity was universally acknowledged, and vows, prayers, and sacrifices were daily offered to him. According to some accounts, the union of Cupid with Chaos gave birth to men, and all the animals which inhabit the earth, and even the gods themselves were the offspring of love, before the formation of the world. Cupid, like the rest of the gods, assumed different shapes; and we find him in the Æneid putting on, at the request of his mother, the form of Ascanius and going to Dido's court where he inspired the queen with love Ivy Æn 1, 693, &c —Ov de Art D 3 —Ovid. Met 1 fab. 10 - Hesiod. Theog 121, &c.—Oppian. Hal 4. Cynig 2 —Bion Idyll 3

CUPIENNIUS, a friend of Augustus, who made himself ridiculous for the nicety and effeminacy of his dress. Horat. Sat. 1, 2, 46.

CURES, now Correse, a town of the Sabines, of which Tatius was king The inhabitants, called Quirites, were carried to Rome, of which they became citizens Ivy. Ann 1, 292 8, 618 — Liv 1, 13 — Macrob. 1, 9 —Ovid. Fast. 2, 177 et 480. 3, 91

CURETES, a people of Crete, called also Corybantes, who, according to Ovid, were produced from rain Their knowledge of all the arts was extensive, and they communicated it to many parts of ancient Greece. They were entrusted with the education of Jupiter, and to prevent his being discovered by his father they invented a kind of dance, and drowned his cries in the harsh sounds of their shields and cymbals. As a reward for their attention they were made priests and favourite ministers of Rhea called also Cybele, who had entrusted them with the care of Jupiter Diodys. Hal. 2 — Ivy 1. 1, 151 — Strab 10.—Pausa. 4, 33 —Ovid. Met 1. 82 Fast 4, 210

CURETIS, a name given to Crete, as being the residence of the Curetes Ovid, Met 8, 130

CURIA, a division of the Roman tribes. Romulus originally divided the people into three tribes, and each tribe into ten Curiæ. Over each Curia was appointed a priest, who officiated at the sacrifices of his respective assembly. The sacrifices were called Curiones and the priest Curio. He was to be above the age of fifty His morals were to be pure and unexceptionable, and his body free from all defects The Curiones were elected by their respective Curiæ, and above them was a superior priest called Curio maximus, chosen by all the Curiæ in a public assembly —The word Curia was also applied to public edifices among the Romans. These were generally of two sorts, divine and civil. In the former were held the assemblies of the priests, and of every religious order, for the regulation of religious sacrifices and ceremonies The other was appointed for the senate, where they assembled for the despatch of public business. The Curia was solemnly consecrated by the Augurs, before a lawful assembly could be convened there There were three at Rome, which more particularly claim our attention, Curia Hostilia, built by king Tullus Hostilius; Curia Pompeii, where Julius Cæsar was murdered, and Curia Augusti, the palace and court of the emperor Augustus —A town of the Rhæti, now Coire, the capital of the Grisons

CURIA LEX, de Comitiis, was enacted by M Curius Dentatus, the tribune It forbade the convening of the Comitia, for the election of plebeian magistrates, without a previous permission from the senate

CURIÆ Vid Curium

CURIATII, a family of Alba, which was carried to Rome by Tullus Hostilius, and entered among the patricians. The three Curiatii, who engaged the Horatii, and lost the victory, were of this family. Flor. 1, 3 - Dionys. Hal 3 — Liv 1, 24

CURIO, the surname of the family of the Scribonii. There were three of this family in succession who distinguished themselves as orators at Rome —Caius, the grandfather, who is mentioned with great commendation by Cicero Brut 32 —His son, Caius Scribonius who was consul 677, and gained great praise by his conquest of the Dardani, when governor of the province of Macedonia. He shone as an orator, though the awkward agitation into which he threw his body from side to side when speaking, procured the surname of Barbatulus, from an actor, who was ridiculed for such gestures. Val. Max. 9 14.—Plin 7, 12 —Cic Pro Dom. 41 Brut. 16, 29, 60 —His son Caius though possessed of great natural abilities, showed himself more eager after profligate pleasures, than military fame or oratorical distinction Cicero for a while interposed his friendship and authority, and roused him to deeds and pursuits worthy of his family, but extravagance and profligacy were so deeply rooted in the character of Curio, that he was prepared for public plunder, or for civil war. Cæsar, more wise and more intriguing, attached him to his party by discharging his debts, which, it is said, amounted to 5,0,0,000 English money, and Curio showed his gratitude, by embracing all the plans of aggrandizement, of rapacity, and ambition, which might prove his friend at the head of the state During the civil war between Pompey and Cæsar, Curio, who had hitherto favoured the party of the senate, artfully showed his enmity to Pompey, by pleading the cause of Cæsar, and by seizing Sicily for him. From Sicily Curio passed into Africa, where he defeated Varus, and laid siege to Utica; but the efforts of Cato, and the speedy arrival of Juba, whom Curio in his tribuneship had attempted to deprive of his kingdom, turned the fortune of the war, and Curio, surrounded on all sides, and unwilling to fly, rushed boldly into the midst of the combatants, and fell on heaps of slain. Lucan. 4, 707, &c.—Cæs. B. C. 2, 31.—Val Max. 9, 1.—Cic. Fam. 2, ep. 4, &c Brut. 81. Phil. 2, 18.—Plin 36, 15.—Plut in Cæs.—Flor. 4, 2

CURIOSOLITÆ, a people of Gallia Celtica, in Armorica, north-west of the Redones. Cæs B. G 2, 34, 3, 11

CURIUM, a town of Cyprus, on the southern coast, or rather, according to the ancients, at the commencement of the western coast, at a small distance from which, to the south east, there is a cape which bears the name of Curias. The town is now called Procopi, and the promontory Cape Curadu. Herod 5, 113.

CURIUS DENTATUS, MARCUS ANNIUS, a Roman, celebrated for his fortitude and frugality He was three times consul, and was twice honoured with a triumph He obtained decisive victories over the Samnites, the Sabines, and the Lucanians, and defeated Pyrrhus near Tarentum The ambassadors of the Samnites visited his cottage, while he was boiling some vegetables in an earthen pot, and they attempted to bribe him by the offer of large presents He refused their offers with contempt, and said, "I prefer my earthen pots to all your vessels of gold and silver, and it is my wish to command those who are in possession of money, while I am deprived of it, and live in poverty." Plut in Cat Cens.—Horat Od 1, 12, 41.—Flor. 1, 13.—A lieutenant of Cæsar's cavalry, to whom six cohorts of Pompey revolted, &c. Cæs. Bell. Civ 1, 24.

CURTIA, a patrician family, which migrated with Tatius to Rome

CURTILLUS, a celebrated epicure, &c Horat. Sat 2, 8, 52.

M. CURTIUS, a Roman youth, who devoted himself to the gods Manes for the safety of his country, about 360 years B.C. A wide gap, called afterwards Curtius lacus, had suddenly opened in the forum, and the oracle said that it never would close before Rome threw into it whatever it had most precious. Curtius immediately perceived that no less than a human sacrifice was required. He armed himself, mounted his horse, and solemnly threw himself into the gulf, which instantly closed over his head. Liv 7, 6.—Val Max. 5, 6.—Q. Rufus (Vid Quintus)—Nicias, a grammarian, intimate with Pompey, &c Suet de Gr—Montanus, an orator and poet under Vespasian. Tacit. Ann 4—Atticus a Roman knight, who accompanied Tiberius in his retreat into Campania. Tacit. Ann. 4—Lacus, the gulf into which Curtius leaped (Vid M Curtius)—Fons, a stream which conveyed water to Rome from the distance of forty miles, by an aqueduct so elevated as to be distributed through all the hills of the city. Plin 36, 15.

CURULES MAGISTRATUS, Roman magistrates who had the privilege of using the sella curulis, or chair of state This was anciently made of ivory, or at least adorned with it. The magistrates who enjoyed this privilege, were the dictator, consuls, prætors, censors, and curule ædiles. They sat on this chair in their tribunals on all solemn occasions. Those commanders who triumphed, had it with them in their chariot. Persons whose ancestors, or themselves, had borne any curule office, were called nobiles, and had the jus imaginum They who were the first of the family that had raised themselves to any curule office, were called homines novi, new men, or upstarts.

CUSSÆI, or COSSÆI, a nation inhabiting the mountains of Media They were a warlike people, and the kings of Persia frequently compelled to purchase a passage over these mountains from them Alexander effected one by taking them by surprise. Antigonus lost a portion of his army in crossing over.

CUSUS, a river of Hungary, falling into the Danube, now the Waag

CUTILIÆ, a town of the Sabines, east of Reate, and on the right bank of the Velinus, famed as an aboriginal city of great antiquity, and celebrated for its lake, and the floating island on its surface This lake was farther distinguished by the appellation of the Umbilicus, or "Navel (i.e. centre) of Italy. Cutiliæ is also noticed by Strabo for its mineral waters, which were accounted salutary for many disorders: they failed, however, in their effect upon Vespasian, who is stated to have died here. Dion. Hal. 1, 14. 2, 49.—Seneca Q. N 3, 2.—Plin 3, 12.—Strab 5.—Suet. Vesp. 24

CYANE, a nymph of Syracuse, to whom her father offered violence in a fit of drunkenness. She dragged her ravisher to the altar, where she sacrificed him, and killed herself to stop a pestilence, which, as if sent as a punishment from heaven, had already begun to afflict the country. Plut in Parall.—A nymph of Sicily, who endeavoured to assist Proserpine when she was carried away by Pluto The god changed her into a fountain, now called Pisme, a few miles from Syracuse. Ovid. Met 5, 112.

CYANEÆ, two small, rugged islands, at the entrance of the Euxine sea, and forty stadia from the mouth of the Thracian Bosphorus. According to Strabo, one was near the European, the other near the Asiatic, side, and the space between them was about twenty stadia. The waves of the sea, which continually break against them with a violent noise, fill the air with a darkening foam, and render the passage extremely dangerous. The ancients supposed that these islands floated about, and even sometimes united to crush to pieces those vessels which chanced at the time to be passing through the straits. This tradition arose from their appearing, like all other objects, more or less confined, according to the course of the vessel. They were sometimes called Symplegades, or, "the dashers," to which the term Cyaneæ, or "dark," is often joined. They were also termed Planetæ, or "the wanderers" It was reported that they were to continue to float till some bold pilot had steered his vessel through the dangerous straits, and when this was happily effected by Jason and the Argonauts, the islands became fixed and immoveable, and the situation and form was then fully explored and ascertained Strab 7.—Mela, 2, 7.—Plin 4, 13.—Homer. Odyss. 12 61.—Apollon. 2, 317 et 601.—Pind. Pyth. 4, 371, &c

CYANEE and CYANPA, a daughter of the Mæander, mother of Byblis and Caunus, by Miletus, Apollo's son Ovid. Met. 9 451.

CYANIPPE a daughter of Adrastus.

CYANIPPUS, a Syracusan, who derided the orgies of Bacchus, for which impiety the god so inebriated him, that he offered violence to his daughter Cyane who sacrificed him on the altar. Plut. in Pomill.

CYAXARES, or CYAXARES, a king of the Medes, who succeeded his father Phraortes, B C 634. He was a prince of great courage and abilities, and soon avenged on the Assyrians the death of his father. The Scythians, however, overran, and ravaged Media, and the king, in order to free himself from them invited them to an entertainment, and caused them all to be massacred. Cyaxares entered into an alliance with Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon, and in conjunction with the Babylonians, he resumed the siege of Nineveh, slew Sarac the king, and levelled that proud metropolis with the ground. Having created his kingdom into a potent empire, he died, and left the government to his son Astyages. Herod 1, 73, &c.—Son of Astyages succeeded to the throne of Media, B C 560. He joined his nephew, Cyrus, in the reduction of Babylon, and is said to have reigned in conjunction with him, and to have died B C 536. Xen. Cyrop. 1.

CYBEBE, a name of Cybele, used by the poets when a long penult is required. The form Cybelle is sometimes, though with less propriety, employed for a similar purpose.

CYBELE, a goddess, daughter of Coelus and Terra, and wife of Saturn. She is supposed to be the same as Ceres, Rhea, Ops, Vesta, Bona Mater, Magna Mater, Berecynthia, Dindymene, &c. According to Diodorus she was the daughter of a Lydian prince called Menes by his wife Dindymene, and he adds, that as soon as she was born she was exposed on a mountain. She was preserved and suckled by some of the wild beasts of the forest, and received the name of Cybele from the mountain where her life had been preserved. When she returned to her father's court she had an intrigue with Atys, a beautiful youth, whom her father mutilated, &c. All the mythologists are unanimous in mentioning the amours of Atys and Cybele. The partiality of the goddess for Atys seems to arise from his having first introduced her worship in Phrygia. She enjoined him perpetual celibacy, and the violation of his promise was expiated by voluntary mutilation. In Phrygia the festivals of Cybele were observed with the greatest solemnity. Her priests, called Corybantes, Galli, &c., were not admitted in the service of the goddess without a previous mutilation. In the celebration of the festivals, they imitated the manners of madmen, and filled the air with dreadful shrieks and howlings, mixed with the confused noise of drums, tabrets, buckles, and spears. This was in commemoration of the sorrow of Cybele for the loss of her favourite Atys. Cybele was generally represented as a robust woman, far advanced in her pregnancy, to intimate the fecundity of the earth. She held keys in her hand, and her head was crowned with rising turrets, and sometimes with the leaves of an oak. She sometimes appears riding in a chariot drawn by two tame lions; Atys follows by her side, carrying a ball in his hand, and supporting himself upon a Brtree, which is sacred to the goddess. Sometimes Cybele is represented with a sceptre in her hand, with her head covered with a tower. She is also seen with many breasts, to show that the earth gives aliments to all living creatures; and she generally carries two lions under her arms. From Phrygia the worship of Cybele passed into Greece, and was solemnly established at Eleusis, under the name of the Eleusinian mysteries of Ceres. The Romans, by order of the Sibylline books, brought the statue of the goddess from Pessinus into Italy, and when the ship which carried it had run on a shallow bank of the Tiber, the virtue and innocence of Claudia were vindicated in removing it with her girdle. It is supposed that the mysteries of Cybele were first known about 1500 years B C. The Romans were particularly superstitious in washing every year, on the 5th of the calends of April, the shrine of this goddess in the waters of the river Almo. These prevailed many ceremonies in the observation of the festivals, and the priests themselves were the most eager to use indecent expressions, and to show their unbounded licentiousness by the impurity of their actions. (Ind. Atys, Eleusis, Rhea, Corybantes, Galli, &c.) The first germ of the Grecian religion came from India, and many of the deities of the latter country will be found, upon an attentive examination, to have been the prototypes of those mentioned in classical mythology. Thus Cybele is a very strong resemblance between Cybele and Pracriti, the goddess of nature among the Hindoos. Both are represented as drawn by lions, at the festivals of Pracriti a drum is beaten, as it always was at that of Cybele. Thus drum is called Dundyma, and in the history of the goddess Cybele, we find mention made of Mons Dindymus, where her rites were celebrated, and of the appellation Dindymene given to the goddess herself. Augustin. de Civit. D. &c.—Lactant.—Lucian in Dea Syr.—Diod. 3.—Virg. Æn. 9, 617. 10, 252.—Lucan 1, 566.—Ovid. Trist. 1, 240 et 484.—Plut. de Isopace.—Cic. ad Attic.—Curt Rhod. 8, 12, &c.

CYBELE and CYBELA, a mountain of Phrygia, probably near Celaenæ.

CYBIRA. Vid Cibyra.

CYBISTRA, a town of Cappadocia, in Cataonia, west of mount Argæus. Strab. 12.—Cic. Ep. ad Fam. 15, 2 et 4.

CYCLADES, a name given by the ancient Greeks to that cluster (κυκλος, circulus) of islands which encircled Delos. They were at first considered to be only twelve in number, but were afterwards increased to fifteen. These were Ceos, Cythnos, Seriphos, Melos, Siphnos, Cimolos, Prepesinthos, Olearos, Paros, Naxos, Syros, Myconos, Tenos, Andros, and Gyaros. The Cyclades were first inhabited by the Phœnicians, Carians, and Leleges, whose piracies drew down upon them the vengeance of Minos, they were subsequently occupied by the Persians, but became dependant on the Athenians after the battle of Mycale. Strab. 10.—Plin. 4, 12.—Herod. 1, 171, 5, 28.—Thucyd. 1, 4, 98, &c.

CYCLOPES, a certain race of men of gigantic stature, supposed to be the sons of Coelus and Terra. They had but one eye in the middle of the forehead, whence their name, (κυκλος, circulus, ωψ, oculus). They were three in number, according to Hesiod, called Arges, Brontes, and Steropes. Their number was greater according to other mythologists, and in the age of Ulysses Polyphemus was their king. (Ind Polyphemus.) They inhabited the western parts of the island of Sicily, and because they were uncivilized in their manners, the poets speak of them as man-eaters. The tradition of their having only one eye originates from their custom of wearing small bucklers of steel which covered their faces and had a small aperture in the middle, which corresponded exactly to the eye. From their vicinity to mount Ætna, they have been supposed to be the workmen of Vulcan, and to have fabricated the thunderbolts of Jupiter. The most solid walls and impregnable fortresses were said, among the ancients, to be the work of the Cyclops, to render them more respectable, and we find that Jupiter was armed with what they had fabricated, and that the shield of Pluto, and the trident of Neptune, were the produce of their labour. The Cyclops were reckoned among the gods, and we had a temple dedicated to their service at Corinth where sacrifices were solemnly offered. Apollo destroyed their all, because they had made the thunderbolts of Jupiter, with which his son Æsculapius had been killed. From the different accounts given of the Cyclops by the ancients, it may be concluded that they were all the same people, to whom various functions have been attributed, which cannot be reconciled one to the other, without drawing the pencil of fiction or mythology. Apollod. 1, 1 et 2.—Homer Odyss. 1, 71, 9, 106 et 188.—Hesiod Theog. 140.—Theocrit. Id. 1, &c.—Strab. 8.—Virg. G. 4, 170. Æn. 6, 630 &c. 8, 415, &c. 11, 263.—Ovid. Met. 13, 7 & 14, 1.

CYCNUS, a son of Mars by Pelopea, killed by Hercules. The manner of his death provoked Mars to such a degree, that he resolved severely to punish his murderer, but he was prevented by the thunderbolts of Jupiter. Hygin fab. 31 et 171.—Hesiod. in Scut. Herc.——A son of Neptune by Calyce, invulnerable in every part of his body. Achilles fought against him, but when he saw that his darts were of no effect, he threw him on the ground, and smothered him. He stripped him of his armour, and saw him suddenly changed into a bird of the same name. Ovid Met. 12, fab. 3.——A Bœotian, son of Hyrie by Apollo. He was beloved by Phyllius, who promised to give him a favourite bull, in consequence of which he, in a fit of resentment, threw himself down a precipice on the top of mount Ismenius in Bœotia, and was changed into a swan. Ovid Met. 7, 371, &c.——A son of Stheneles, king of Liguria. He was deeply afflicted at the death of his friend and relation Phaëton, and in the midst of his lamentations he was metamorphosed into a swan, a bird which chose to dwell in an element of an opposite nature to that which had caused the death of his dearly loved friend. Ovid Met. 2, 367.—Virg. Æn. 10, 189.—Paus. 1, 30.——A horse's name. Stat. Theb. 6, 124.

CYDAS, a profligate Cretan, made judge at Rome by Antony. Cic. in Phil. 3 et 5.

CYDIAS, an Athenian of great valour, &c. Paus. 10, 21.——A painter, who made a celebrated painting of the Argonauts. It was bought by the orator Hortensius, for 144 talents. Plin. 35.

CYDIPPE, the wife of Anaxilaus, &c. Herod. 7, 165.——The mother of Cleobis and Biton. (Vid. Cleobis.)——A girl beloved by Acontius. (Vid. Acontius.)——One of Cyrene's attendants. Virg. G. 4, 339.

CYDNUS, a river of Cilicia Campestris, rising in the chain of mount Taurus, and falling into the sea a little below Tarsus, which stood on its banks. Its waters were remarkably clear and cold, and nearly proved fatal to Alexander, who imprudently bathed in them when heated with marching. The illness of Alexander, resulting from this, is connected with the well-known story of the physician Philip. Arrian. 2, 4.—Xen. Anab. 1, 2.—Curt. 3, 4.

CYDON, a friend of Turnus against Æneas. Virg. Æn. 10, 325.

CYDONIA, or CYDŌNIS, the most ancient city in the island of Crete said to have been founded by Minos, and enlarged by the Samians. It stood on the northern coast of the north-western part of Crete, and was the most powerful and wealthy city of the whole island since, in the civil wars, it withstood the united forces of Gortyna and Gortyna after they had reduced the greater part of Crete. From Cydonia, the quince-tree was first brought into Italy, and thence the fruit was called malum Cydoneum, or Cydonian apple. Its inhabitants were admirable archers. Its ruins are to be seen on the site of Iconium. Ovid Met. 8, 22.—Virg. Æn. 12, 858.—Sil. 2, 101.—Liv. 37, 60.—Lucan. 7, 529.

CYDRARA, a town of Asia Minor, situate on the confines of Phrygia and Lydia. Herod. 7, 30.

CYDROLAUS, a man who led a colony to Segmos. Dinol. 5.

CYLLENE, mountains of Phrygia, where the Caystrus takes its rise. Plin. 5, 29.

CYLICES, a people of Illyricum, between the Naro and the Drilo. They are said to have had among them the tomb of Cadmus and Harmonia. Mela 2.

CYLINDUS, a son of Phryxus and Calliope.

CYLLARUS, the most beautiful of all the Centaurs, passionately fond of Hylonome. He was killed at the marriage of Pirithous, and Hylonome, inconsolable for his loss, stabbed herself with the dart which had caused his death. Ovid. Met. 12, 405.——A celebrated horse of Castor, according to Seneca, Valerius Flaccus, and Claudian; but according to Virgil, of Pollux. Virg. G. 3, 90.

CYLLENE, the mother of Lycaon, by Pelasgus. Apollod. 3, 8.—The haven of Elis the capital of the district of Elis in the Peloponnesus.——A mountain of Arcadia rising between Stymphalus and Pheneus on the borders of Achaia. It was exceedingly lofty, and celebrated as the birth place of Mercury, who had a temple on its summit. It is now called Zyria. Paus. 8, 17.—Hom. H. 2, 663. Hymn in Merc. 1.—Ital. 6, 129.—Virg. Æn. 8, 139.

CYLLENIUS, a surname of Mercury, from his being born on the mountain of Cyllene.

CYLON, an Athenian, who aspired to tyranny. Herod. 5, 71.

CYME, the largest and most beautiful town of Æolia, called also Phriconis, and Phricondis, and Cuma (Vid. Cuma). Liv. 37, 11.—Cic. Fam. 2, 20.—Herod. 1, 149.

CYMODOCE CYME, and CYMO, one of the Nereides. Hesiod Theog. 255.—Virg. G. 4, 338.

CYMŌLUS. Vid Cimolus.

CYMOTHOE, one of the Nereides, represented by Virgil, Æn. 9, 118, as assisting the Trojans with Triton after the storm with which Æolus, at the request of Juno, had afflicted the fleet.

CYNÆGIRUS, an Athenian, celebrated for his extraordinary courage. He was brother to the poet Æschylus. After the battle of Marathon, he pursued the flying Persians to their ships, and seized one of their vessels with his right hand, which was immediately severed by the enemy. Upon this he seized the vessel with his left hand, and when he had lost that also, he still kept his hold with his teeth. Herod. 6, 114.—Justin. 2, 9.

CYNÆTHÆ, a town of Arcadia, on the river Crathis, near the northern borders, and some distance to the north-west of Cyllene. The inhabitants were despised and shunned by their fellow countrymen, for their depraved and barbarous manners, said to be the result of their neglecting the study of music. Polyb. 4.

CYNANE, a daughter of Philip king of Macedonia, who married Amyntas, son of Perdiccas, by whom she had Eurydice. Polyæn. 8.

CYNAPES, a river falling into the Euxine. Ovid 4, Pont. el 10, 19

CYNARA, one of Horace's favourites. Od 1, 1, 4.

CYNESII and CYNETÆ, the most western people of Europe, living beyond the Celtæ. Herod. 2, 33. 4, 49.

CYNETHUSSA, an island in the Ægean sea. Plin 4 12.

CYNIA a lake of Acarnania. Strab 10

CYNICI, a sect of philosophers, so called either from Cynosarges, where Antisthenes the founder of the sect lectured or from the snarling humour of their master. This sect is to be regarded more as an institution of manners than as a school of philosophy, as it was formed rather for the purpose of providing a remedy for the moral disorders of luxury, ambition, and avarice, than with a view to establish any new theory of speculative opinions. The sole end of the Cynic philosophy was to subdue the passions, and produce simplicity of manners. Hence the coarseness of their outward attire, their haughty contempt of external good, and hardy endurance of external ill. The rigorous discipline of the first Cynics, however, degenerated by degrees into the most absurd severity. The Cynics renounced every kind of scientific pursuit, in order to be at perfect liberty to apply themselves to the cultivation of virtuous habits. The sect sank gradually into dissoteem and contempt, and many disgraceful tales were propagated concerning them Vid. Diogenes.

CYNISCA, a daughter of Archidamus, king of Sparta, who obtained the first prize in the chariot races at the Olympic games Paus 3, 8.

CYNO, a woman who preserved the life of Cyrus. Herod 1, 110.

CYNOSCEPHALÆ, a hill in Thessaly, south-east of Pharsalus, where the Roman consul T. Q. Flaminius gained a victory over Philip of Macedon, and put an end to the first Macedonian war. It derived its name from the Greek words κυων κεφαλη, owing to some of its crags resembling a dog's head. Liv 33, 7.—Plut Vit Flamin.

CYNOCEPHALI, a nation of India, who were said to have the heads of dogs, whence their name. It has been generally supposed that they were nothing more than a species of large ape or baboon. Aul. Gell. 9, 4.—Ælian. Nat An. 4, 46 —Diod Sic 3, 34.

CYNOPHONTIS, a festival at Argos, observed during the dog-days It received its name, ἀπο του κυνας φονευειν, from killing dogs, because they used to kill all the dogs they met CYNORTAS, one of the ancient kings of Sparta, son of Amyclas and Diomede Paus 3, 1.

CYNOS, a town of Locris, in the territory of the Opuntii, and their principal maritime place According to some ancient traditions it had long been the residence of Deucalion and Pyrrha, the latter was even said to have been buried here. Strab. 9.

CYNOSARGES, a surname of Hercules.——A place in the suburbs of Athens, appropriated for the public exercises of the youths. It was here also that the Cynic philosophers established their school. Herod 5 et 6.

CYNOSSEMA, (a dog's tomb), a promontory of the Thracian Chersonesus, where Hecuba was changed into a dog, and buried. Ovid. Met 13, 569 .

CYNOSURA, a nymph of Ida in Crete. She nursed Jupiter, who changed her into a star which bears the same name It is the same as the Ursa Minor. Ovid. Fast 3, 107.

CYNTHIA, a beautiful woman, who was mistress to Propertius, 1, el Lake ——A surname of Diana, from mount Cynthus, where she was born.

CYNTHIUS, a surname of Apollo, from mount Cynthus.

CYNTHUS, a mountain of Delos, so high that it is said to overshadow the whole island Apollo was surnamed Cynthius, and Diana Cynthia, as they were born on the mountain, which was sacred to them. The modern name is Monte Cinto. Virg G. 3, 36.—Ovid Met 6, 304 Fast 3, 346

CYNURENSES, a people of Arcadia Paus 8, 27. 6

CYNUS, a naval station of Opus. Id. 10 1.

CYPARISSÆ, or CYPARISSIA, a town of Messenia, near the mouth of the river Cyparisseus, and in the centre of the Sinus Cyparissius. The river and gulf are now called Arcadia, and Gul. of Arcadia respectively, from the modern town which occupies the site of Cyparissia Strab. 8. —Polyb 5, 92 ——A town of Laconia in the vicinity of the Asopus. The site is now occupied by the modern fortress of Rupano or Rampano, sometimes also called Castel Kyparissi

CYPARISSUS, a youth, son of Telephus of Ceos, beloved by Apollo He killed a favourite stag of Apollo's, for which he was so sorry that he pined away, and was changed by the god into a cypress tree Virg Æn 3, 680 —Ovid. Met. 10, 121 ——A town near Delphi. Mela, 2, 3.

CYPHARA, a fortified place of Thessaly. Liv. 32, 13.

CYPRIANUS, a native of Carthage, who, though born of heathen parents, became a convert to christianity, and the bishop of his country. To be more devoted to purity and study, he abandoned his wife, and as a proof of his charity, he distributed his goods to the poor. He wrote eighty-one letters, besides several treatises, de Bono gratiæ, de virginum habitu, &c. and rendered his compositions valuable by the information which he conveys of the discipline of the ancient church, and by the soundness and purity of his theology. He died a martyr, A. D. 258. The best editions of Cyprian are, that of Fell, fol. Oxon. 1682, and that reprinted Amst. 1700

CYPRUS, a daughter of Antony and Cleopatra, who married Agrippa.——A large island in the Mediterranean sea, south of Cilicia, and west of Syria. It is thought to have obtained its name from Cyprus, one of its early kings, though others say, it was derived from a certain fragrant tree or flower. It was also called Spherea from its ancient inhabitants the Spheres, Cerasta from its many capes, Macaria from the happiness of its climate, and Paphos from its ancient city of that name. According to ancient measurements, its length from west to east was 1,400 stadia, and its circuit 3,420. It has been celebrated as the residence of Venus, surnamed Cypria who was the chief deity of the island, and to whose service many places and temples were consecrated. It was anciently divided into nine kingdoms, and was for some time under the power of Egypt, and afterwards of the Persians. The Greeks made themselves masters of it, and it was taken from them by the Romans. There were three celebrated temples there, two sacred to Venus, and the other to Jupiter. The inhabitants were exceedingly ingenious and industrious, though they were much given to pleasure and dissipation. Strab. 15.—Flor. 3, 9.—Justin. 18, 5.—Plin. 12, 24. 33, 5. 36, 26.—Mela, 2, 7.

CYPSELIDES, the name of three princes of the descendants of Cypselus, who reigned at Corinth during seventy-three years. Cypselus was succeeded by his son Periander, who left his kingdom, after a reign of forty years, to Cypselus II. Paus. 2, 4. 5, 17.

CYPSELUS, a king of Arcadia, who married the daughter of Ctesiphon, to strengthen himself against the Heraclidæ. Paus. 4, 3.——A man of Corinth, son of Eetion, and father of Periander. He destroyed the Bacchiadæ, and seized upon the sovereign power, about 659 years B.C. He reigned thirty years, and was succeeded by his son. Periander had two sons, Lycophron, and Cypselus, who was insane. Cypselus received his name from the Greek word κύψελος, a coffer, because when the Bacchiadæ attempted to kill him, his mother saved his life by concealing him in a coffer. Paus. 5, 17.—Cic. Tusc. 5, 37.—Herod. 1, 14. 5, 92, &c.—Aristot. Polit.——The father of Miltiades. Herod. 6, 35.

CYRAUNIS, an island of Libya. Id. 4, 195.

CYRENAICA, a country of Africa, bounded on the north by the Mediterranean sea, on the east by Marmarica, on the south by the vast deserts of the interior, and on the west by Tripolitana. Its metropolis was Cyrene. It corresponds with the modern Barca. Id. 4, 170.

CYRENAICI, a sect of philosophers who followed the doctrine of Aristippus. They placed all happiness in pleasure, and said that virtue ought to be commended because it gave pleasure. Laert. in Arist.—Cic. de N. D. 3.

CYRENE, the daughter of the river Peneus of whom Apollo became enamoured. He carried her to that part of Africa which is called Cyrenaica, where she brought forth Aristæus. She is called by some daughter of Hypseus, king of the Lapithæ, and son of the Peneus. Virg. G. 4, 321.—Justin. 13, 7.—Pindar. Pyth. 9.——A celebrated city of Libya, to which, according to some, Aristæus, who was the chief of the colonists settled there, gave his mother's name. Cyrene was situate in a beautiful and fertile plain, about eleven miles from the Mediterranean sea, and it became the capital of the country, which was called Pentapolis, on account of the five cities which it contained. It gave birth to many eminent men, amongst others to Eratosthenes, Callimachus, Aristippus, Carneades, and Anniceris. The town of Cyrene was built by Battus, B.C. 630, and the kingdom was bequeathed to the Romans B.C. 97, by king Ptolemy Apion. Herod. 3 et 4.—Paus. 10, 14.—Strab. 17.—Mela, 1, 8.—Plin. 5, 5.—Tacit. Ann. 3, 70.

CYRESCHÆTA. Vid. Cyropolis.

CYRIADES, one of the thirty tyrants who harassed the Roman empire, in the reign of Gallienus. He died A.D. 259.

CYRILLUS, a bishop of Jerusalem, who died A.D. 386. Of his writings, composed in Greek, there remain twenty-three Catecheses, and a letter to the emperor Constantine; the best edition of which is by Milles, fol. Oxon. 1703.——A bishop of Alexandria, who was the best part of his life engaged in quarrels with his contemporaries about heretical opinions, in which he displayed great zeal, and often unchristian violence. He died A.D. 444. The best edition of his writings, which are mostly controversial, in Greek, is that of Paris, fol. 7 vols. 1638.

CYRNOS. Vid. Corsica.

CYRNUS, a driver in the games which Scipio exhibited in Africa, &c. Ital. 16, 342.——A man of Argos, who founded a city of Chersonesus. Dod. 5.

CYROPOLIS, a city of Asia, on the banks of the Jaxartes, built by Cyrus. It was also called Cyreschata. It is now Chodjend.

CYRRHESTICA, a country of Syria, north east of the city Antiochia, and north of the district Chalybonitis. It was so called from its metropolis Cyrrhus. Plin. 5, 23.—Cic. Att. 5, 18.

CYRRHUS, a town of Macedonia, near Pella.——A town of Syria, the capital of the district Cyrrhestica. It obtained its name from the Macedonian Cyrrhus, although it is fabled by some to have been named after Cyrus, who founded it, and settled certain Jews there after their return from captivity. It is now called Corus.

CYRSILUS, an Athenian, stoned to death by his countrymen because he advised them to receive the army of Xerxes, and to submit to the power of Persia. Demosth. de Coron.—Cic. de Offic. 3, 11.

CYRUS, a king of Persia, son of Cambyses and Mandane, daughter of Astyages, king of Media. His father was of an ignoble family, whose marriage with Mandane had been consummated on account of the apprehensions of Astyages. (Vid. Astyages.) Cyrus was exposed as soon as born, but he was preserved by a shepherdess, who educated him as her own son. As he was playing with his equals in years, he was elected king in a certain diversion, and he exercised his power with such an independent spirit, that he ordered one of his play companions to be severely whipped for disobedience. The father of the youth, who was a nobleman, complained to the king of the ill treatment which his son had received from a shepherd's son. Astyages ordered Cyrus before him, and discovered that he was Mandane's son, from whom he had so much to apprehend. He treated him at first with coldness, and afterwards with marked severity; but Cyrus, unable to bear his tyranny, escaped from his confinement and began to levy troops to dethrone his grandfather. He was assisted and encouraged by the ministers of Astyages, who were displeased with the king's oppression. He marched against him, and Astyages was defeated in a battle, and taken prisoner, B.C. 559. From this victory the empire of Media became tributary to the Persians. Cyrus subdued the eastern parts of Asia, and made war against Croesus, king of Lydia, whom he conquered, B.C. 548. He invaded the kingdom of Assyria, and took the city of Babylon, by drying the channels of the Euphrates, and marching his troops through the bed of the river, while the people were celebrating a grand festival. He afterwards marched against Tomyris, the queen of the Massagetæ, a Scythian nation, and was defeated in a bloody battle, B.C. 530. The victorious queen, who had lost her son in a previous encounter, was so incensed against Cyrus, that she cut off his head, and threw it into a vessel filled with human blood, exclaiming,

"Take then thy fill." Xenophon has written the life of Cyrus, but his history is not to be considered as perfectly authentic. In the character of Cyrus he delineates a brave and virtuous prince, and often puts in his mouth many of the sayings of Socrates The chronology is false, and Xenophon, in his narration, has given existence to persons whom no other historian ever mentioned. The Cyropædia, therefore, is not to be looked upon as an authentic history of Cyrus the Great, but we must regard it as a philosophical treatise, valuable for its morality, and the soundness of its precepts, and particularly as displaying, in an elegant and fascinating style, the character which every good and virtuous prince ought to bear Diod 14.—Herod. 1, 75, &c.—Justin 1, 1 et 7 ——The younger Cyrus, was the younger son of Darius Nothus, and the brother of Artaxerxes. He was sent by his father, at the age of sixteen that he might either enlarge his mind by observation and travelling, or acquire the military discipline and celebrity of the Greeks to assist the Lacedæmonians against Athens. Artaxerxes succeeded to the throne at the death of Nothus, and Cyrus, who was of an aspiring soul, attempted to assassinate him. His design was discovered and frustrated, and he would have been punished with death, had not his mother, Parysatis, saved him from the hands of the executioner by her tears and entreaties This circumstance did not in the least check the ambitious views of Cyrus, he was appointed over Lydia and the sea coasts, where he secretly fomented rebellion, and levied troops under various pretences When fully prepared, he threw off the mask of dissimulation, and took the field with an army of 100,000 barbarians, and 13,000 Greeks, under the command of Clearchus Artaxerxes met him with 900 000 men near Cunaxa The battle was long and bloody, and Cyrus might have perhaps obtained the victory, had not his uncommon rashness proved his ruin. It is said that the two royal brothers met in person and engaged with the most inveterate fury, and their engagement unfortunately ended in the death of Cyrus, 401 years B.C, and thus prevented the final success and elevation to the throne of a prince, who, for his bravery in the field, his prudence in the cabinet, and a thousand amiable qualities in his private character, seemed to promise a new era of national glory and public prosperity in the Persian monarchy. Artaxerxes was so anxious of its being universally reported that his brother had fallen by his hand, that he put to death two of his subjects for boasting that they had killed Cyrus The Greeks, who were engaged in the expedition, obtained immortal glory in the battle; and after the death of Cyrus, they remained victorious in the field without a commander. They were not, however, discouraged, though at a great distance from their country, and surrounded on every side by a powerful and harassing enemy They unanimously united in the election of commanders, and traversed all Asia, in spite of the continual attacks of the Persians, and nothing is more truly celebrated in ancient history than the bold retreat of the ten thousand The journey that they made from the place of their first embarkation, till their return, has been calculated at 1155 leagues, performed in the space of fifteen months, including all the time which was devoted to take rest and refreshment. This retreat has been celebrated by the pen of Xenophon, who was one of the leaders, and among the friends and supporters of Cyrus. It is said, that in the letter which he wrote to Lacedæmon, to solicit auxiliaries, Cyrus boasted his philosophy, his royal blood, and his ability to drink more wine than his brother without being intoxicated, a strange recommendation with a nation which considered valour as the noblest of distinctions, and esteemed temperance as the greatest of virtues Plut in Artax.—Diod 14.—Justin 5, 11 ——A rival of Nero, in the affections of one of his mistresses, 1, ad 17, 24. ——A poet of Panopolis, in the age of Theodosius.——An architect, whence Cyrea, opera applied to the edifices, &c which he raised. Cic. Att 2, ep. 3. 3, ep. 10 ——A large river of Asia, rising in Iberia, and discharging itself into the Caspian sea. It is now the Kur.

CYTA, now Kutais, a town of Colchis, east of Æa, famous for the poisonous herbs which it produced, and for the birth of Medea. Flacc. 6, 653. —Propert 2, 1, 53.

CYTÆIS, a surname of Medea, from her being an inhabitant of Cyta Propert. 2, 1, 7

CYTHERA, now Cerigo, an island on the coast of Laconia in Peloponnesus It was particularly sacred to the goddess Venus, who was from thence surnamed Cytherea, and who rose, as some suppose, from the sea near its coasts. It was for some time under the power of the Argives, but always considered as of the highest importance to maritime powers, as from its proximity to the Peloponnesus it could constantly harass an enemy, and from that circumstance Xerxes, on his invasion of Greece, was advised by Demaratus to seize it, and convert it into a capacious harbour for the reception of his fleets The Phœnicians had built there a famous temple to Venus Ung. Scn. 1, 262. 10, 3.—Paus. 3, 23. —Ovid Met. 4, 288 15, 396 Fast 4, 14.—Herod. 1, 26

CYTHEREA a surname of Venus, from her rising out of the ocean near the island of Cythera

CYTHERIS, a certain courtezan in great favour with Antony

CYTHERON. Vid Citharon

CYTHNOS, an island between Ceos and Seriphos, in the Mare Myrtoum It was the birthplace of Cadmus, an eminent painter. The cheese of Cythnos was held in great estimation among the ancients The island is now called Thermia.

CYTINIUM, the most important of the four cities of Doris in Greece. According to Thucydides, it was situated to the west of Parnassus, and on the borders of the Locri Ozolæ. Thucyd. 3, 95.

CYTORUS, a town of Paphlagonia, on the coast between the promontory Cerambis and Amastris According to Ephorus, cited by Strabo, it took its name from Cytor, son of Phrixus, and belonged to the Sinopians. In its vicinity was a mountain, also named Cytorus, which produced a beautifully veined species of box-tree. The vestiges of the ancient town are to be seen near a harbour called Kidros Strab. 12.—Catull. 4, 13. —Virg. G. 2, 437—Apoll. Arg. 2, 944.

CYZICUS a son of Æneus and Stilbe, who reigned in Cyzicus He hospitably received the Argonauts, in their expedition against Colchis After their departure from the court of Cyzicus, they were driven back in the night, by a storm, upon the coast; and the inhabitants seeing such an unexpected number of men, furiously attacked them, supposing themselves to be invaded by the Pelasgi, their ancient enemies. In this nocturnal engagement, many were killed on both sides, and Cyzicus perished by the hands of Jason himself, who honoured his remains with a splendid funeral, and raised a stately monument over his grave. Apollod. 1, 9 —— An island of the Propontis, about 500 stadia in circuit, with a city of the same name. It was connected with the mainland by two bridges, built by Alexander the Great The city was situated partly in the plain which extended to the bridges, and partly on the slope of mount Arctos. It had two harbours, Chytus and Panormus. It was a very flourishing city, and styled by Horus the Rome of Asia The coins of the place, called Κυζικηνοὶ στατῆρες, were executed with such perfection, that they were looked upon as a miracle of art. The inhabitants of Cyzicus had claim to a very high antiquity for their city, and pretended that it was given by Jupiter to Proserpine for her dowry on which account they worshipped her as their chief deity Cyzicus is celebrated for its siege by Mithridates, which that monarch was compelled by Lucullus to raise. It received from the Romans the rights of a free city, but these were taken away from it by Tiberius, as a punishment for violence offered to some Roman citizens. Cyzicus continued to be a place of importance until a late period, and in the arrangement of provinces under the Christian emperors, it became the metropolis of the province of the Hellespont. It is now, however, only a heap of uninhabited ruins Strab. 12.—Plin. 5, 32.—Agrippa Bell. Mithr. 72, &c.—Cic. pro Leg. Jurid 8.—Suet. Tib 37.

D

DAÆ, DAHÆ, or DAI, a people who dwelt on the south eastern borders of the Caspian sea, in the province of Hyrcania. Their country is supposed by some to correspond with the modern Dahistan. Sil. 13, 794.—Lucan 7, 129.—Virg. Æn 1, 724.

DACIA, a large country of Europe, bounded on the south by the Danube, on the east by the Euxine sea, on the north by Sarmatia, and on the west by the Iazyges Metanastæ It comprised Transylvania Moldavia, Walachia, Bessarabia, and the eastern part of the Banat. The inhabitants were called Daci, or Getæ, the former name being more familiar to the Romans, and the latter to the Greeks, the Getæ were, however, considered by some as dwelling in the eastern part of the province, and the Daci as cantoned to the west of them, about the upper course of the Danube This province must not be confounded with the Dacia of Aurelian, who, finding it difficult to maintain his possessions on the northern side of the Danube, withdrew the Roman colonists into Mœsia, where he established a new province, under the name of Dacia Aurelani. (Vid. Mœsia.) Virg. G. 2, 497.—Hor. Od. 1, 35, 9. 3, 6, 14. 4, 15, 22.

DACICUS a surname of the emperor Trajan, from his conquest of Dacia.—A surname assumed by Domitian, on his pretended victory over the Dacians Juv. 6, 204.

DACTYLI, a name given to the priests of Cybele, which some derive from Δάκτυλος, finger because they were ten, the same number as the fingers of the hands Plin 1, 8

DADICÆ, a people of Asiatic Scythia. Herod. 3, 91.

DÆDALA, a mountain and city of Lycia, where Dædalus was buried, according to Pliny, 5, 27. —A name given to Circe, from her being cunning, and ingeniously skilful (δαίδαλος) like Dædalus Virg. Æn 7, 282 —— Two festivals in Bœotia. One of these was observed at Alalcomenes by the Plataeans, in a large grove, where they exposed in the open air, pieces of boiled flesh, and carefully observed whether the crows that came to prey upon them directed their flight. All the trees upon which any of these birds alighted, were immediately cut down, and with them statues were made called Dædala, in honour of Dædalus.—— The other festival was of a more solemn kind. It was celebrated every sixty years by all the cities of Bœotia, as a compensation for the intermission of the smaller festivals, for that number of years, during the exile of the Plataeans Fourteen of the statues, called Dædala, were distributed by lot among the Plataeans, Lebadæans, Coroneans, Orchomenians, Thespians, Thebans, Tanagræans, and Chæroneans, because they had effected a reconciliation among the Plataeans, and caused them to be recalled from exile, about the time that Thebes was restored by Cassander, the son of Antipater. During this festival, a woman in the habit of a bridemaid accompanied a statue, which was dressed in female garments, on the banks of the Eurotas. This procession was attended to the top of mount Cithæron, by many of the Bœotians, who had places assigned them by lot. Here an altar of square pieces of wood cemented together like stones, was erected, and upon it were thrown large quantities of combustible materials. Afterwards a bull was sacrificed to Jupiter, and an ox or heifer to Juno, by every one of the cities of Bœotia, and by the most opulent that attended. The poorest citizens offered small cattle; and all these oblations, together with the Dædala, were thrown in the common heap, and set on fire, and totally reduced to ashes They originated in this: When Juno, after a quarrel with Jupiter, had retired to Eubœa, and refused to return to his bed, the god, anxious for her return, went to consult Cithæron king of Plataea, to find some effectual measure to break her obstinacy. Cithæron advised him to dress a statue in woman's apparel, and carry it in a chariot and publicly report that it was Plataea, the daughter of Asopus, whom he was going to marry. The advice was followed, and Juno, informed of her husband's future marriage, repaired in haste to meet the chariot, and was easily united to him, when she discovered the artful measures he made use of to effect a reconciliation. Pausan. et Plut

DÆDALION, a son of Lucifer, brother to Ceyx, and father of Philonis He was so afflicted at the death of Philonis, whom Diana had put to death, that he threw himself down from the top of mount Parnassus, and was changed into a falcon by Apollo. Ovid Met 11, 295.

DÆDALUS, an Athenian, son of Eupalamus, descended from Erechtheus, king of Athens. He was the most ingenious artist of his age, and to him we are indebted for the invention of the wedge, the axe, the auger, the plummet, and many other mechanical instruments, and the sails of ships. He made statues, which by moving of themselves, seemed to be endowed with life. Talus, his sister's son, promised to be as great as himself, by the ingenuity of his inventions; and, therefore, from envy, he threw him down from a window and killed him. After the murder of this youth, Dædalus, with his son Icarus, fled from Athens to Crete, where Minos king of the country, well acquainted with his abilities and great genius, gave him a cordial reception Dædalus made a famous labyrinth for Minos, and assisted Pasiphae, the queen, to gratify her unnatural passion for a bull. For this action, Dædalus incurred the displeasure of Minos, who ordered him to be confined in the labyrinth which he had constructed. Here he made himself wings with feathers and wax, and carefully fitted them to his body, and to that of his son, who was the companion of his confinement They took their flight in the air from Crete; but the heat of the sun melted the wax on the wings of Icarus, whose flight was too high, and he fell into that part of the ocean, which from him has been called the Icarian sea. The father, by a proper management of his wings, alighted at Cumæ, where he built a temple to Apollo, and thence directed his course to Sicily, where he was kindly received by Cocalus, who reigned over part of the country. He left many monuments of his ingenuity in Sicily, which still existed in the age of Diodorus Siculus He was despatched by Cocalus, who was afraid of the power of Minos, who had declared war against him, because he had given an asylum to Dædalus The flight of Dædalus from Crete, with wings, is explained, by observing that he was the inventor of sails, which in his age might pass at a distance for wings. Paus 1, 21 7, 4 9, 40.—Diod 4.—Ovid Met 8, fab 3 Hesiod 4.—De Art. Am 2 Trist. 3, el 4.—Hygin fab. 40.—Virg. Æn. 6, 14.—Apollod 3, 1 &c.—Herod 7, 170.—There were two statuaries of the same name, one of Sicyon, son of Patrocles, the other a native of Bithynia. Paus 7, 14.—Arrian

DÆMON, a kind of spirit, which, as the ancients supposed, presided over the actions of mankind, gave them their private counsels, and carefully watched over their most secret intentions Some of the ancient philosophers maintained that every man had two of these Dæmons; the one bad, and the other good. These Dæmons had the power of changing themselves into whatever they pleased, and of assuming whatever shapes were most subservient to their intentions At the moment of death, the Dæmon delivered up to judgment the person with whose care he had been entrusted, and according to the evidence he delivered, sentence was passed over the body. The Dæmon of Socrates is famous in history. That great philosopher asserted that the genius informed him when any of his friends was going to engage in some unfortunate enterprise, and stopped him from the commission of all crimes and impiety. These Genii or Dæmons, though at first reckoned only as the subordinate ministers of the superior deities, received divine honour in length of time, and we find altars and statues erected to Genio loci, Genio Augusti, Junonibus, &c. Cic. Tusc. 1.—Plut. de Gen. Socr.

DAHÆ. Vid. Dæ.

DAI, a nation of Persia, all shepherds. Herod. 1, 125.

DAIDIA, a solemnity observed by the Greeks. It lasted three days. The first was in commemoration of Latona's labour; the second in memory of Apollo's birth; and the third in honour of the marriage of Podalirius, and the mother of Alexander Torches were always carried at the celebration, whence the name.

DAIMENES, a general of the Achæans. Paus. 7, 7.——An officer exposed on a cross, by Dionysius of Syracuse. Diod 14.

DAIPHRON, a son of Ægyptus, killed by his wife, &c. Apollod. 2, 1.

DAIRA, on of the Oceanides, mother of Eleusis by Mercury. Paus 1, 38.

DALMATIA, a part of Illyricum, on the east side of the Adriatic sea. It was separated from Liburnia, the remaining part of Illyricum, to the south-east of which it lay, by the river Titius. According to ancient tradition, it abounded with gold. Martial, in one of his epigrams, calls it the land which produced gold. Horat. Od 2, 1, 16.—Strab. 7.—Plol 2.

DALMATIUS, one of the Cæsars, in the age of Constantine, who died A D. 337.

DALMINIUM, the capital of Dalmatia, which the Romans took and destroyed, A.U C. 597. Strab. 7.

DAMAGÉTUS, a man of Rhodes, who inquired of the oracle what wife he ought to marry? and received for answer the daughter of the bravest of the Greeks. He applied to Aristomenes and obtained his daughter in marriage, B. C 670. Paus. 4, 24.

DAMÆTAS, a courtezan at Rome, in the age of Horace, Od. 1, 36, Id.

DAMAS, a Syracusan in the interest of Agathocles Diod. 19

DAMASCENE, a country of Syria, deriving its name from Damascus, which was situate in it.

DAMASCIUS a stoic of Damascus, who wrote a philosophical history, the life of Isidorus, and four books on extraordinary events, in the age of Justinian. His works, which are now lost, were greatly esteemed according to Photius

DAMASCUS, a celebrated city of Damascene in Syria, situated in a plain still called Gouteh Demesk, or, the orchard of Damascus, and watered by a river called by the Greeks Chrysorrhoas, but by the Syrians, Bardines and Pharphar It is supposed to have been founded by Uz, the eldest son of Aram. However this may be, it subsisted in the time of Abraham, and may be reckoned one of the most ancient cities in being. According to Josephus, Hadad was the first person who took the title of king of Damascus, and he was vanquished by David. It was captured and ruined by Tiglath-pileser, king of Assyria, who sent its inhabitants into captivity, beyond the Euphrates; thus fulfilling the predictions of the prophets Isaiah and Amos. It was also taken by Sennacherib, and by the generals of Alexander the Great Metellus and Lælius seized it during the war of Pompey with Tigranes, B.C. 65, and it remained under the dominion of the Romans, until the Saracens took possession of it about A. D 634. Damascus is now the capital of a Pachalic. The Arabs call it El-Sham, and the oriental name Demesk is known only to geographers. Lucan. 3, 215.—Justin. 36, 2.—Mela, 1, 11.

DAMASICHTHON, a king of Thebes. Paus. 9, 5

DAMASIPPUS a captain in Philip's army —— A senator who accompanied Juba when he entered Utica in triumph. Cæs. Bell. C. 2 ——1. Jun. Brutus, a prætor at Rome, who favoured the party of Marius, and cruelly put to death a number of senators because they were friendly to Sylla's cause. He was slain afterwards by order of Sylla. Sall. Cat. 51.——A man, who, after he had spent all his patrimony, maintained himself by acting on the stage Jur. 3, 185.——A merchant of old seals and vessels, who, after losing his all in unfortunate schemes in commerce, assumed the name and habit of a stoic philosopher. Horat Sat. 2, 3.——One of Niobe's sons.

DAMASITHYNUS, a son of Candaules, general in the army of Xerxes Herod 7, 98.——A king of Calyndæ, sunk in his ship by Artemisia. Id 8, 87.

DAMASTES, a man of Sigeum, disciple of Hellanicus, about the age of Herodotus, &c. Dionys——A famous robber. Vid Procrustes

DAMASTOR, a Trojan chief, killed by Patroclus at the siege of Troy Homer Il 16, 416

DAMIA, a surname of Cybele.——A woman to whom the Epidaurians raised a statue. Herod. 5, 82.

DAMIPPUS, a Spartan taken by Marcellus as he sailed out of the port of Syracuse He discovered to the enemy that a certain part of the city was negligently guarded, and in consequence of this discovery Syracuse was taken Polyæn

DAMIS, a man who disputed with Aristodemus the right of reigning over the Messenians Paus. 4, 16.

DAMNII, a people of Scotland, whose country corresponded to the modern Clydesdale, Renfrew, Lennox, and Stirling.

DAMNONII, a people of Britain, whose country answered to the modern Cornwall and Devonshire.

DAMNORIX, a celebrated Gaul, in the interest of Julius Cæsar, &c.

DAMO, a daughter of Pythagoras, who by order of her father, devoted her life to perpetual celibacy, and induced others to follow her example. Pythagoras at his death entrusted her with all the secrets of his philosophy, and gave her the unlimited care of his compositions, under the promise that she never would part with them. She faithfully obeyed his injunctions, and though in the extremest poverty, she refused to obtain money by the violation of her father's commands Laert in Pythag

DAMOCLES, one of the flatterers of Dionysius, the elder, of Sicily. He admired the tyrant's wealth, and pronounced him the happiest man on earth. Dionysius prevailed upon him to undertake for a while the charge of royalty, and be convinced of the happiness which a sovereign enjoyed. Damocles ascended the throne, and while he gazed upon the wealth and splendour that surrounded him, he perceived a sword hanging over his head by a horse hair This so terrified him, that all his imaginary felicity vanished at once, and he begged Dionysius to remove him from a situation which exposed his life to such fears and dangers. Cic. in Tusc. 5, 21.

DAMOCRITA, a Spartan matron, wife of Alcippus, who severely punished her enemies who had banished her husband, &c. Plut. in Parall.

DAMOCRITUS, a timid general of the Achæans &c Paus. 7, 13.——A Greek writer, who composed two treatises, one upon the art of drawing an up arms in battle array, and the other concerning the Jews.——A man who wrote a poetical treatise upon medicine

DAMON, a victor at Olympia, Olymp. 102. Paus 6, 27.——A poet and musician of Athens, intimate with Pericles, and distinguished for his knowledge of government, and fondness of discipline He was banished for his intrigues about 450 B C. C. Nep 15, 2.—Plut. in Pericl——A Pythagorean philosopher, very intimate with Pythias. When he had been condemned to death by Dionysius, he obtained from the tyrant leave to go and settle his domestic affairs on promise of returning at a stated hour to the place of execution. Pythias pledged himself to undergo the punishment which was to be inflicted on Damon, should he not return in time, and he consequently delivered himself into the hands of the tyrant. Damon returned at the appointed moment, and Dionysius was so struck with the fidelity of those two friends, that he remitted the punishment and entreated them to permit him to share their friendship, and enjoy their confidence. Val. Max 4, 7.——A man of Cheronæa, who killed a Roman officer, and was murdered by his fellow citizens. Plut in Cim——A Cyrenean, who wrote a history of philosophy. Laert.

DAMOPHANTUS, a general of Elis, in the age of Philopœmen. Plut in Phil.

DAMOPHILA, a poetess of Lesbos. She was intimate with only wrote hymns in honour gods, but opened a school where the younger persons of her sex were taught the various powers of music and poetry

DAMOSTRATUS, a philosopher who wrote a treatise concerning fishes Ælian. 7 H. 13, 24.

DAMOXENUS, a comic writer of Athens. Athen. 3.——A boxer of Syracuse, banished for killing his adversary. Paus 6, 10.

DANA, a large town of Cappadocia, supposed to be the same with Tyana. Vid Tyana.

DANACE, the name of the piece of money which Charon required to convey the dead over the Styx Suidas

DANAE, the daughter of Acrisius king of Argos, by Eurydice. She was confined in a brazen tower by her father, who had been told by an oracle, that his daughter's son would put him to death. His endeavours to prevent Danae from becoming a mother proved fruitless; and Jupiter, who was enamoured of her, introduced himself to her bed, by changing himself into a golden shower. From his embraces Danae had a son, with whom she was exposed on the sea by her father. The wind drove the bark which carried her to the coasts of the island of Seriphus, where she was saved by some fishermen, and carried to Polydectes king of the place, whose brother called Dictys, educated the child, called Perseus, and tenderly treated the mother. Polydectes fell in love with her, but as he was afraid of her son, he sent him to conquer the Gorgons, pretending that he wished Medusa's head to adorn the nuptials which he was going to celebrate with Hippodamia the daughter of Œnomaus. When Perseus had victoriously finished his expedition, he retired to Argos with Danae, to the house of Acrisius, whom he inadvertently killed. Some suppose that it was Proetus the brother of Acrisius, who introduced himself to Danae in the brazen tower and instead of a golden shower it was maintained, that the keepers of Danae were bribed by the gold of her seducer. Virgil mentions that Danae came to Italy with some fugitives of Argos, and that she founded a city called Ardea. Ovid Met 4, 611. Art. Am. 3, 415 Amor 2, 19, 27 Horat. Od. 3, 16.—Ho- mer. Il. 14, 319.—Apollod. 2, 2 et 4.—Stat. Theb. 1, 258.—Virg. Æn. 7, 410.——A daughter of Leontium, mistress to Sophron, governor of Ephesus. The fidelity of her attachment proved fatal to her; she apprised Sophron that Loadices conspired against his life, and whilst he escaped to Corinth, she was seized by the successful traitor, and thrown down a precipice.——A daughter of Danaus, to whom Neptune offered violence.

DANAI, a name given to the people of Argos, and promiscuously to all the Greeks, from Danaus their king. Virg et Ovid passim.

DANAIDES, the fifty daughters of Danaus king of Argos. When their uncle Ægyptus came from Egypt with his fifty sons, they were promised in marriage to their cousins, but before the celebration of their nuptials, Danaus, who had been informed by an oracle that he was to be killed by the hands of one of his sons-in-law, made his daughters solemnly promise that they would destroy their husbands. They were provided with daggers by their father, and all, except Hypermnestra, stained their hands with the blood of their cousins, the first night of their nuptials; and, as a pledge of their obedience to their father's injunctions, they presented him each with the head of the murdered sons of Ægyptus. Hypermnestra was summoned to appear before her father, and answer for her disobedience in suffering her husband, Lynceus, to escape, but the unanimous voice of the people declared her innocent, and in consequence of her honourable acquittal, she dedicated a temple to the goddess of Persuasion. The sisters were purified of this murder by Mercury and Minerva, by order of Jupiter, but according to the more received opinion, they were condemned to severe punishment in hell, and were compelled to fill with water a vessel full of holes, so that the water ran out as soon as poured into it, and therefore their labour was infinite, and their punishment eternal. The names of the Danaides and their husbands, were as follows, according to Apollodorus: Amymone married Enceladus, Automate, Busiris, Agave, Lyceus, Scea, Dayphron; Hippodamia, Ister, Rhodia, Chalcedon, Hypermnestra, Lynceus, Calxee, another Lynceus; Gorgophone, Proteus, Cleopatra, Agenor, Asteria, Cnetus; Glauce, Alcis, Hippodamia, Daseores; Hippomedusa, Alemeuon; Gorge, Hippothous; Iphimedusa, Eurbenor; Rhode, Hippolytus; Pirene, Agaptolemus, Cercestus, Dorion, Pharte, Eurydamas; Mnestra, Ægius, Evippe, Argius, Anaxibia, Archelaus, Nelo, Melachus, Clite, Clitus; Stenele, Stenelus, Chrysippe, Chrysippus, Autonoe, Eurylochus, Theano, Phantes, Electra, Peristhenes, Eurydice, Dryas, Glaucippe, Potamon; Autholea, Cisseus, Cleodora, Lixus; Evippe, Imbrus, Erata, Bromius, Stygne, Polector, Bryce, Chthonius; Actea, Periphas, Podarce, Œneus; Diotippe, Ægyptus; Adyte, Menalces; Oenpete, Lampus; Pitarge, Idmon; Hippodice, Idas, Adraste, Daiphron; Callidia, Pandion; Œme, Arbelus; Celena, Hizbius; Evippe, Hippocoristes. The heads of the sons of Ægyptus were buried at Argos; but their bodies were left at Lerna, where the murder had been committed. Apollod 2 1. - Horat. Od. 3, 11.—Strab. 8.—Paus. 2, 16—Hygin. fab. 168, &c.

DANAPRIS, now the Dnieper, a name given in the middle ages to the Borysthenes. Vid. Borysthenes.

DANASTUS, another name for the Tyras. It is now the Dniester. Vid. Tyras.

DANAUS, a son of Belus and Anchinoe, who, after his father's death, reigned conjointly with his brother Ægyptus on the throne of Egypt. Some time after, a difference arose between the brothers, and Danaus set sail with his fifty daughters in quest of a settlement. He visited Rhodes, where he consecrated a statue to Minerva, and arrived safe on the coast of Peloponnesus, where he was hospitably received by Gelanor, king of Argos. Gelanor had lately ascended the throne, and the first years of his reign were marked with dissensions with his subjects. Danaus took advantage of Gelanor's unpopularity, and obliged him to abdicate the crown. In Gelanor, the race of the Inachida was extinguished, and the Belida began to reign at Argos in Danaus. Some authors say, that Gelanor voluntarily resigned the crown to Danaus, on account of the wrath of Neptune, who had dried up all the waters of Argolis, to punish the impiety of Inachus. The successful settlement of Danaus invited the fifty sons of Ægyptus to embark for Greece. They were kindly received by their uncle, who either apprehensive of their number, or terrified by an oracle which threatened his ruin by one of his sons-in-law, caused his daughters, to whom they were promised in marriage, to murder them the first night of their nuptials. His fatal orders were executed, but Hypermnestra alone spared the life of Lynceus. (Vid. Danaides.) Danaus, at first, persecuted Lynceus with unremitted fury, but he was afterwards reconciled to him, and he acknowledged him for his son in-law, and successor, after a reign of fifty years. He died about 1426 years before the christian era, and after death, he was honoured with a splendid monument in the town of Argos, which still existed in the age of Pausanias. According to Æschylus, Danaus left Egypt, not to be present at the marriage of his daughters, with the sons of his brother, a connexion which he deemed unlawful and impious. The ship in which Danaus came to Greece, was called Argus, and was the first that had ever appeared there. Apollod. 2, 1.—Paus. 2, 19.—Hygin. fab. 168, &c.—Herod. 2, 91, &c 7, 94.

DANDARI and DANDARIDÆ, certain inhabitants near mount Caucasus. Tacit. Ann. 12, 18.

DANDON, a man of Illyricum, who, as Pliny, 7, 48, reports lived 500 years.

DANUBIUS, the largest river in Europe except the Rha, or Volga and called in German the Donau, by us the Danube. It rises in the chain of Mons Abnoba, or the mountains of the Black Forest, and after a course of about 1620 miles, generally in a south-easterly direction, falls into the Black sea. It is of irregular breadth, being sometimes compressed between rocks and mountains, at other times so wide that it almost resembles a sea, and again broken and divided into small streams by numerous islands. It receives 30 navigable rivers, the largest of which is the Œnus, or Inn; and 60 smaller streams. It is always yellow with mud, and its sands are everywhere auriferous. At its entrance into the Black sea, it is shallow; its waters are spread over an immense surface, and lie stagnating among an infinity of reeds and other aquatic plants. The current of the river communicates a whitish colour to the sea, and gives a freshness to it for nearly nine leagues, and within one league renders it fit for use. Pomponius Mela says it had as many mouths as the Nile, of which three were small, and four navigable. Only two now remain, which can scarcely be entered by ships of considerable size or burden, the rest being choked up. The ancients gave the name of Ister to the eastern part of this river, after its junction with the Savus, or Save The Greeks and Romans were very imperfectly acquainted with the whole course of the stream, which was for some time the northern boundary of the Roman empire in this quarter. This river was an object of worship to the Scythians. The river deity is exhibited on a medal of Trajan; but the finest figure of him is on the column of that emperor at Rome. Strab. 4.—Plin 4, 12 et 24.—Hor Od. 4, 15, 21.—Val. Flac. 8, 293.—Hesiod. Theog. 339.—Ovid. Met 2, 249.

DAPHNÆ, a town of Egypt, about sixteen miles from Pelusium, on the route to Memphis, near the Pelusiac mouth of the Nile. It is now Sephos. Herod 2, 30.

DAPHNÆUS, a general of Syracuse, against Carthage Polyæn. 5

DAPHNE, a daughter of the river Peneus, or of the Ladon, by the goddess Terra, of whom Apollo became enamoured. This passion had been raised by Cupid, with whom Apollo, proud of his late conquest over the serpent Python, had disputed the power of his darts Daphne heard with horror the addresses of the god, and endeavoured to remove herself from his importunities by flight. Apollo pursued her; and Daphne, fearful of being caught, intreated the assistance of the gods, who changed her into a laurel. Apollo crowned his head with the leaves of the laurel, and for ever ordered that that tree should be sacred to his divinity. Some say that Daphne was admired by Leucippus son of Œnomaus king of Pisa, who, to be in her company, disguised his sex, and attended her in the woods, in the habit of a huntress. Leucippus gained Daphne's esteem and love, but Apollo, upon which, discovered, discovered his sex, and Leucippus was killed by the companions of Diana. Ovid. Met 1, 452, &c. — Parthen Erotic. 15.— Paus 8, 20 ——A daughter of Tiresias priestess in the temple of Delphi, supposed by some to be the same as Manto. She was consecrated to the service of Apollo by the Epigoni, or according to others, by the goddess Tellus. She was called Sibyl, on account of the wildness of her looks and expressions, when she delivered oracles. Her oracles were generally in verse, and Homer, according to some accounts, has introduced much of her poetry in his compositions. Diod. 4.—Tzetz. 10, 5.——A famous grove near Antiochia, on the borders of the Orontes. The beauty of its situation rendered it a place of resort, its walks were embellished, its woods made romantic, and a temple of Apollo gave it still greater celebrity It was, therefore devoted to voluptuousness and luxury, and few besides the dissipated and profligate frequented it; hence the proverb Daphnicus morbus urere applied to an effeminate life. Liv 33, 49.—Strab. 16.—Eutrop. 6, 11.

DAPHNEPHORIA, a festival in honour of Apollo, celebrated every ninth year by the Bœotians. It was then usual to adorn an olive bough with garlands of laurel and other flowers, and place on the top a brazen globe, on which were suspended smaller ones. In the middle were placed a number of crowns, and a globe of inferior size, and the bottom was adorned with a saffron coloured garment. The globe on the top represented the sun, or Apollo, that in the middle was an emblem of the moon, and the others of the stars. The crown, which were sixty-five in number, represented the sun's annual revolutions. This bough was carried in solemn procession by a beautiful youth of an illustrious family, and whose parents were both living. The youth was dressed in rich garments which reached to the ground, his hair hung loose and disheveled, his head was covered with a golden crown, he wore on his feet shoes called Iphicratides, from Iphicrates, an Athenian, who first invented them. He was called Δαφνηφόρος, laurel bearer, and at that time he executed the office of priest of Apollo. He was preceded by one of his nearest relations, bearing a rod adorned with garlands, and behind him followed a train of virgins, with branches in their hands. In this order the procession advanced as far as the temple of Apollo, surnamed Ismenius, where supplicatory hymns were sung to the god.—This festival owed its origin to the following circumstance: when an oracle advised the Æolians, who inhabited Arne and the adjacent country, to abandon their ancient possessions, and go in quest of a settlement, they invaded the Theban territories, which at that time were pillaged by an army of Pelasgians. As the celebration of Apollo's festivals was near, both nations, who religiously observed it, laid aside all hostilities, and according to custom, cut down laurel boughs from mount Helicon, and in the neighbourhood of the river Melas, and walked in procession in honour of the divinity The day that this solemnity was observed, Polemates, the general of the Bœotian army, saw a youth in a dream that presented him with a complete suit of armour, and commanded the Bœotians to offer solemn prayers to Apollo, and walk in procession with laurel boughs in their hands every ninth year Three days after this dream, the Bœotian general made a sally, and cut off the greatest part of the besiegers, who were compelled by this blow to relinquish their enterprise Polemates, in commemoration of this deliverance, immediately instituted a novennial festival to the god, who seemed to be the patron of the Bœotians. Paus. Bœotic., &c.

DAPHNIS, a shepherd of Sicily, son of Mercury, by a Sicilian nymph. He was educated by the nymphs, Pan taught him to sing and play upon the pipe, and the muses inspired him with the love of poetry. It is supposed that he was the first who wrote pastoral poetry, in which his successor Theocritus so happily excelled. He was extremely fond of hunting, and at his death, five of his dogs, from their attachment to him, refused all aliments, and pined away. From the celebrity of this shepherd, the name of Daphnis has been appropriated by the poets, ancient and modern, to express a person fond of rural employments, and of the peaceful innocence which accompanies the tending of flocks. Ælian. V. H. 10, 18 Diod. 4.——There was another shepherd on mount Ida of the same name, changed into a rock, according to Ovid. Met. 4. 276.——A son of Paris and Œnone.

DAPHNUS, a part of the canal of Constantinople, at the distance of eighty stadia from the city, and forty from the Euxine sea.——A town of the Locri Opuntii, situated on the sea coast, near the frontiers of the Epicnemidian Locri. It formerly belonged to the Phocæans.

DARÂDUS, a river of Africa, rising to the north west of the Palus Nigritæ, on mount Mandrus, and falling into the Atlantic to the north of the promontory Arsinarium. It is thought to be the same with the Senegal.

DARANTASIA a town of Gallia Belgica, called also Forum Claudii, and now Moustier.

DARDANIA, a district of Troas, in the north, called so from its inhabitants the Dardani These obtained their name from Dardanus, who built here the city Dardania This district extended on the coast from Abydos to the promontory Sigeum, and inland to the summit of Ida ——A country of Illyria in Dalmatia, the capital of which bore the same name.——A name given to a region north of Macedonia, called subsequently Dacia Mediterranea.

DARDANIDES, a name given to Æneas, as descended from Dardanus. The word, in the plural number, is applied to the Trojan women Virg. Æn. 3, 94 ; 7, 10, 515.

DARDANIS, or DARDANIUM, a promontory of Troas, on which was situate the city of Dardanus It is now called Cape Berbieri, or, Capo Barun

DARDANUS, a son of Jupiter and Electra, who killed his brother Jasius to obtain the kingdom of Etruria, after the death of his reputed father Corytus, and fled to Samothrace, and thence to Asia Minor, where he married Batia, the daughter of Teucer, king of Teucria. After the death of his father-in law he ascended the throne, and reigned sixty-two years. He built the city of Dardania, and was reckoned the founder of the kingdom of Troy. He was succeeded by Erichthonius. According to some, Corybas, his nephew, accompanied him to Teucria, where he introduced the worship of Cybele. Dardanus taught his subjects to worship Minerva, and he gave them two statues of the goddess, one of which is well known by the name of Palladium. Virg. Æn. 3, 167 —Paus. 7, 1.—Hygin fab. 155 et 275.—Apollod. 3.—Homer. Il. 20, 215 —A Trojan killed by Achilles Homer. Il. 20, 460

DARDANUS, a city of Troas, on the promontory Dardanis It lay at the distance of seventy stadia from Rhœtium, and about the same distance from the town of Abydos. It is no longer in existence, but there is no doubt that it gave its name to the Dardanelles, or ancient Hellespont In this city, peace was concluded between Sylla and Mithridates. Strab. 13.

DARDARII, a nation near the Palus Mæotis. Plut in Lucull.

DARES, a Phrygian, who lived during the Trojan war, in which he was engaged and of which he wrote the history in Greek This history was extant in the age of Ælian, the Latin translation, now extant, is universally believed to be spurious, though it is attributed by some to Cornelius Nepos. The best edition is that of Smids cum not. var 4to and 8vo Amst 1702.—Homer Il. 5, 10 et 27 —One of the companions of Æneas, descended from Amycus, and celebrated as a pugilist at the funeral games in honour of Hector, where he killed Butes. He was killed by Turnus in Italy. Virg Æn. 5, 363. 12, 363.

DARIAVES, the name of Darius in Persian. Strab. 16.

DARICUS, a Persian gold coin, equal in value to twenty Attic silver drachmæ Reckoning the Attic drachma equal to 7½d sterling, which is the ordinary computation, the daric will be equivalent to 12s. 11d sterling. The daric did not receive its name from Darius the king, but from the Persian word dara, a king, a word which was applied to this coin in order to signify that it was stamped by the royal authority, and to distinguish it from any coin that might be stamped and put in circulation by private merchants The impression on the daric exhibited on one side of it the representation of a king, and on the reverse an archer holding a bow in his left hand and an arrow in his right

DARIUS, a people of Persia. Herod 3, 92

DARIUS, a noble satrap of Persia, son of Hystaspes, who conspired with six other noblemen to destroy Smerdis, who usurped the crown of Persia after the death of Cambyses. On the murder of the usurper, the seven conspirators universally agreed, that he whose horse neighed first should be appointed king. In consequence of this resolution, the groom of Darius previously led his master's horse to a mare, at a place near which the seven noblemen were to pass On the morrow before sunrise when they proceeded all together the horse recollecting the place, suddenly neighed, and at the same time a clap of thunder was heard, as if in approbation of the choice The noblemen dismounted from their horses, and saluted Darius king, and a resolution was made among them, that the king's wives and concubines should be taken from no other family but that of the conspirators, and that they should for ever enjoy the unlimited privilege of being admitted into the king's presence without previous introduction. Darius was twenty nine years old when he ascended the throne, and he soon distinguished himself by his activity and military accomplishments He besieged Babylon, which he took, after a siege of twenty months, by the artifices of Zopyrus. From thence he marched against the Scythians, and in his way conquered Thrace. This expedition was finally unsuccessful, and, after several losses and disasters in the wilds of Scythia, the king retired with shame, and soon after turned his arms against the Indians whom he subdued. But Darius had now a more powerful enemy to encounter. The Grecian cities of Asia still remembered the freedom and independence which their ancestors enjoyed, therefore they submitted with reluctance to the Persian yoke. To assert their liberties they applied for assistance to the states of Greece and Athens, which warmly espoused their cause, and sent them a fleet of 25 ships. These combined forces advanced into Asia Minor, and laid siege to Sardes the capital of Lydia, which they reduced to ashes. Darius saw with indignation the designs of the Greeks to foment war in his kingdom, and so exasperated was he against the Athenians in consequence of the burning of Sardes, that a servant every evening, by his order, repeated these words: "Remember, O king, to punish the Athenians" Mardonius, the king's son-in-law, was now intrusted, not only with the defence of the kingdom, but with a powerful force which was to carry war and devastation into the heart of Greece. This army however was on its march attacked and defeated by the Thracians, but the king, regardless of his defeat, collected a more numerous force, the command of which he gave to Datis and Artaphernes They were conquered at the celebrated battle of Marathon, by 10,000 Athenians, and the Persians lost in that expedition no less than 200,000 men Darius was not disheartened by this severe blow, but he resolved to carry on the war in person, and immediately ordered a still larger army to be levied. He died in the midst of his preparations, B. C

485, after a reign of thirty-six years, in the 65th year of his age. Herod. 1, 2, &c.—Diod 1.—Justin. 1, 9.—Plut. in Arist.—C. Nep. in Miltiad. ——The second king of Persia, of that name, was also called Ochus, or Nothus, because he was the illegitimate son of Artaxerxes by a concubine. Soon after the murder of Xerxes he ascended the throne of Persia, and married Parysatis his sister, a cruel and ambitious woman, by whom he had Artaxerxes, Memnon Amestris, and Cyrus the younger. He carried on many wars with success, under the conduct of his generals and of his son Cyrus. He died B C 404, after a reign of nineteen years, and was succeeded by his son Artaxerxes, who asked him on his death-bed, what had been the guide of his conduct in the management of the empire, that he might imitate him? The dictates of justice and of religion, replied the expiring monarch. Justin 5, 11.—Diod. 12.—The third of that name was the last king of Persia, surnamed Codomanus. He was son of Arsames and Sysigambis, and descended from Darius Nothus. The eunuch Bagoas raised him to the throne, though not nearly allied to the royal family, in hopes that he would be subservient to his will, but he prepared to poison him, when he saw him despise his advice, and aim at independence. Darius discovered his perfidy, and made him drink the poison which he had prepared against his life. The peace of Darius was early disturbed by the ambitious views of Alexander, who invaded Persia, to avenge the injuries which the Greeks had suffered from the predecessors of Darius. Darius did not take the command of his army in person, until after the battle of Granicus had been fought, and Alexander had advanced into Cilicia. He then proceeded to meet him in all the pomp of royalty, but with a force ill adapted to contend with such an enemy. He determined, nevertheless, to hazard a battle, contrary to the advice of his Greek allies. The battle of Issus was fought, and Darius took the command, but fled with such precipitation, that he left behind him his bow, shield, and mantle. His camp was plundered, and his mother, wife, and children, fell into the power of the victor. He wrote to Alexander, desiring him to name a ransom for his family, and proposing to decide their dispute in another combat with equal numbers. Alexander replied with haughtiness, and pursued his success. While engaged in the siege of Tyre, Darius sent him another letter, offering him his daughter Statira in marriage, and all the country of Asia, as far as the Halys. These terms being rejected, Darius made another attempt at accommodation, which also failing, the concluding battle of Gaugamela ensued. The Persian army was completely routed, and Babylon, Susa, and Persepolis taken. Darius fled to Ecbatana in Media, but Bessus, governor of Bactria, assuming the royal authority, shut him up in a covered cart, and took him away towards Bactria. Alexander closely pursued them beyond the Caspian straits; and on Darius refusing to proceed any farther, he was severely wounded by the conspirators, and left weltering in his blood. In this state he was found by a Macedonian, named Polystratus, in whose arms he died, desiring that his acknowledgments might be made to Alexander for his kindness to his family, and praying that his death might be avenged on the traitors. When Alexander came up, and found Darius dead, he shed tears, and covering the body with his own cloak, ordered it to be embalmed, and sent to Sisigambis, to be interred with the relics of the Persian monarchs. Darius died in the fiftieth year of his age, and sixth of his reign, B C. 330, and with him terminated the Persian empire. Diod. 17. —Plut. in Alex.—Justin 10, 11, &c.—Curtius. ——A son of Xerxes, who married Artaynta, and was killed by Artabanus. Herod 9, 108.—Diod. 11.——A son of Artaxerxes, declared successor to the throne, as being the eldest prince. He conspired against his father's life, and was capitally punished. Plut. in Artax.

DASCON, a man who founded Camarina. Thucyd 6, 5.

DASCYLIUM, a town of Bithynia, near the lake Dascylitis. It is now Duskilo.

DASCYLUS, the father of Gyges. Herod. 1, 8.

DASIUS, a chief of Salapia, who favoured Annibal Liv 26, 38.

DATAMES, a son of Camissares, governor of Caria, and general of the armies of Artaxerxes. His great abilities as a general, and as a negotiator, were displayed in the service of the king, and in every expedition which he undertook he increased his fame and military glory, by an unusual career of good fortune. The popularity which he deservedly acquired, however, procured him enemies, the courtiers of the monarch were soon engaged to depreciate the meritorious actions which they could not imitate, and Artaxerxes was meanly induced to suspect and persecute a man whom it was his duty to protect and reward. Datames was well acquainted with the malicious intentions of his detractors, and unable now to live in safety as a peaceful subject, he declared himself no longer the vassal of the Persian monarch, and established himself as the independent prince of a distant province. Every attempt to reduce him to obedience proved unsuccessful, but Datames, who had braved all dangers in the field against an open foe, fell at last by the secret dagger of a treacherous friend. He was assassinated by Mithridates who had invited him to a parley under pretence of entering into the most inviolable connexion and friendship, 362 B.C. C. Nep in Datam.—Diod. 15.

DATAPHERNES, one of the friends of Bessus. After the murder of Darius, he betrayed Bessus into Alexander's hands. He also revolted from the conqueror, and was delivered up by the Dahæ. Curt. 7, 5 et 8.

DATIS, a general of Darius I, sent with an army of 200,000 foot, and 10,000 horse, against the Greeks, in conjunction with Artaphernes. He was defeated at the celebrated battle of Marathon, by Miltiades, and some time after put to death by the Spartans. C Nep. in Milt DATOS, a town of Europe, which, after having belonged to Thrace, was transferred to Macedonia when the empire was extended on that side. It was situated near mount Pangæus, on a rugged hill, having a forest to the north, and to the south a marsh, at a small distance from the sea. Proserpine is said to have been gathering flowers here when she was carried away by Pluto. This place was proverbially rich, on account of the mines of gold in its territory. It was at first called Crenides, from the fountains (κρῆναι) which abounded in the hill on which it was built; and afterwards Callistratus, the Athenian, gave it the name of Datos. When Philip, king of Macedonia, took possession of it, he fortified it, and called it Philippi. Appian. de Civ.

DAULIS, a nymph, daughter of Cephisus, from whom the city of Daulis in Phocis, anciently called Anacris, received its name It was at Daulis that Philomela and Procne made Tereus eat the flesh of his son, and hence the nightingale, into which Philomela was changed, is often called Daulias ales Ovid Ep. 15, 151 Strab 9.—Paus. 10, 4.—Ptol. 3, 15.—Liv. 32, 18.—Plin. 4.

DAUNIA, a country of Italy, forming a part of Apulia, and situate on the coast to the northwest of Peucetia It derived its name from Daunus, who settled there, and is now called Capitanata Virg. Æn 8, 146.—Sil 9 500, 12, 429.—Horat Od. 1, 6, 27 —Juturna, the sister of Turnus, was called Daunia, after she had been made a goddess by Jupiter Virg. Æn 12, 139 et 785

DAUNUS, a son of Pilumnus and Danae He came from Illyricum into Apulia, where he reigned over part of the country, which from him was called Daunia, and he was still on the throne when Diomedes came to Italy. Ptol 3, 1, Mela, 2, 4. Strab 5 —A river of Apulia, now Cervaiello Horat. Od. 3, 30.

DAURÍTES and DAURISES, a brave general of Darius treacherously killed by the Carians. Herod 5, 116, &c.

DAVARA, a hill near mount Taurus, in Asia Minor

DAVUS, a comic character in the Andrian of Terence Horat Sat. 1, 10, 10

DECAPOLIS, a district of Palestine, lying to the east and south-east of the sea of Tiberias It derived its name from the circumstance of ten cities (δέκα πόλεις) contained in it, having united themselves into a league to resist the oppressions of the Maccabees. These ten cities were Scythopolis, Capitolias, Canatha, Abila, Hippos, Gadara, Pella, Dium, Gerasa, and Philadelphia They belonged originally to the kingdom of Israel, but were afterwards reckoned to Syria The Romans included them in their province of Cœle-Syria, and though they gave Herod some of them, yet upon his death these were withheld from his heirs. Josephus, Ant 17, 12. Bell Jud. 2, 4.—Plin 6, 18.

DECEBALUS, a warlike king of the Daci, who made a successful war against Domitian. He was conquered by Trajan, Domitian's successor, and he obtained peace. His active spirit again kindled rebellion and the Roman emperor marched against him, and defeated him He destroyed himself and his head was brought to Rome, and Dacia became a Roman province, A. D. 103 Dio 68

DECELEA, a town of Attica, north-east of Athens, near the source of the Cephisus. It was considered of great importance, from its situation on the road to Eubœa, whence the Athenians derived their supplies. During the Peloponnesian war, the Lacedæmonians occupied and garrisoned it, by the advice of Alcibiades, and thereby exposed Athens to great loss and inconvenience. Thucyd 6, 91. 7, 19.—Strab. 9.

DECELUS a man who informed Castor and Pollux, that their sister, whom Theseus had carried away, was concealed at Aphidnæ. Herod 9, 73

DECEMVIRI, ten magistrates of absolute authority among the Romans. The privileges of the patricians raised dissatisfaction among the plebeians; who, though freed from the power of the Tarquins, still saw that the administration of justice depended upon the will and caprice of their superiors, without any written statute to direct them, and convince them that they were governed with equity and impartiality. The tribunes complained to the senate, and demanded that a code of laws might be framed for the use and benefit of the Roman people. This petition was complied with, and three ambassadors were sent to Athens, and to all the other Grecian states, to collect the laws of Solon, and of the other celebrated legislators of Greece. Upon the return of the commissioners, it was universally agreed, that ten new magistrates, called decemviri, should be elected from the senate, to put the project into execution Their power was absolute, all other offices ceased after their election, and they presided over the city with regal authority They were invested with the badges of the consul, in the enjoyment of which they succeeded by turns, and only one was preceded by the lictors, and had the power of assembling the senate, and confirming decrees The first decemvirs were Appius Claudius, T. Genutius, P Sextius, Sp. Veturius, C Julius, A. Manlius Ser. Sulpitius Pluvetius, T Romulius, Sp Postumius, A U C 303 Under them, the laws which had been exposed to public view, that every citizen might speak his sentiments, were publicly approved of as constitutional, and ratified by the priests and augurs in the most solemn and religious manner. These laws were ten in number, and were engraved on tables of brass; two were afterwards added and they were called the laws of the twelve tables, leges duodecim tabularum, and leges decemvirales. The decemviral power, which was beheld by all ranks of people with the greatest satisfaction, was continued, but in the third year after their creation, the decemvirs became odious, on account of their tyranny, and the attempt of Ap Claudius to ravish Virginia, was followed by the total abolition of the office. The people were so exasperated against them that they demanded them from the senate, to burn them alive. Consuls were again appointed, and tranquility re-established in the state —There were also military decemviri, and on various emergencies, decemviri were created to manage and regulate certain affairs after the same manner as boards of commissioners are now appointed. Thus, there were decemviri for conducting colonies, decemviri who officiated as judges in cases of litigation under the quæstor and prætor; decemviri for dividing the lands among the veteran soldiers, decemviri to prepare and preside at feasts in honour of the gods, decemviri to take care of the sacrifices, and decemviri to keep the Sibylline books. With regard to the last of these, however, it must be observed that the number, after having been originally two, and then increased to ten, was subsequently still farther increased to fifteen.

DECIA LEX, was enacted by M Decius the tribune, A. U. C 442, to empower the people to appoint two proper persons to fit and repair the fleets

L. DECIDIUS SAXA, a Celtiberian in Cæsar's camp. Cæs. Bell. Civ. 1.

DECIUS, MUS, a celebrated Roman consul, who, after many glorious exploits, devoted himself to the gods Manes for the safety of his country, in a battle against the Latins, 339 years B C. His son Decius imitated his example, and devoted himself in like manner in his fourth consulship, when fighting against the Gauls and Samnites, B. C. 296. His grandson also performed the same patriotic exploit, in the war against Pyrrhus and the Tarentines, B. C. 280. This action of devoting oneself, was of infinite service to the state The soldiers were animated by the example, and induced to follow with intrepidity, a commander, who, arrayed in an unusual dress, and addressing himself to the gods with solemn invocation, rushed into the thickest part of the enemy to meet his fate. Liv. 8, 9, &c — Val Max 5, 6 Polyb. 2 — Virg Æn. 6, 824.—Brutus, connected Cæsar to the senate-house the day that he was murdered.—Cn. Metius Q Trajanus, a native of Pannonia, sent by the emperor Philip, to appease a sedition in Mœsia Instead of obeying his master's command, he assumed the imperial purple, and soon after marched against him, and at his death became the only emperor. He signalized himself against the Persians; and when he marched against the Goths, he pushed his horse in a deep marsh, from which he could not extricate himself and he perished with all his army by the darts of the barbarians, A. D. 251, after a reign of two years This monarch enjoyed the character of a brave man, and of a great disciplinarian; and by his justice and exemplary life merited the title of Optimus, which a servile senate had lavished upon him

DECUMATES AGRI, certain lands in Germany, which were subjected by the Romans to the imposition of a tenth part of their produce Tacit. G. 29

DECURIO a subaltern officer in the Roman armies He commanded a decuria, which consisted of ten men and was the third part of a turma, or the thirtieth part of a legio of horse, which was composed of 300 men. Each decurio had an optio or deputy under him —There were also provincial magistrates called by this name The colonies differed from the free towns in this, in t hey used the laws prescribed them by the Romans, but they had almost the same kind of magistrates. Their two chief magistrates were called duumviri, and their senators decemviri, because their court consisted of ten persons or because, as some say, when the colony was first planted, every tenth man was made a senator The fortune requisite for being elected a decurio, under the emperors, was 100 000 sesterti.

DEDITAMENES a friend of Alexander, made governor of Babylonia Curt 8, 3

DEGIS, a brother of Deceballus, king of the Daci He came as ambassador to the court of Domitian. Martial, 5, ep 3

DELEON, a Trojan prince, son of Pergasus, intimate with Æneas. He was killed by Agamemnon. Homer. Il. 5, 534.—A son of Hercules and Megara. Apollod 2, 7

DEIDAMIA, a daughter of Lycomedes, king of Scyros. She bore a son called Pyrrhus, or Neoptolemus, to Achilles, who was disguised at her father's court in woman's clothes, under the name of Pyrrha. Propert 2, el. 9 — Apollod 3, 13 — A daughter of Pyrrhus, killed by the Epirots. Polyæn —A daughter of Adrastus, king of Argos, called also Hippodamia.

DEILEON, a companion of Hercules in his expedition against the Amazons Flacc 5, 115

DEIPHOBUS, a son of Neleus and Chloris, was killed, with all his brothers, except Nestor, by Hercules. Apollod. 1, 9.

DEIOCES, a son of Phraortes, by whose means the Medes delivered themselves from the yoke of the Assyrians. He presided as judge among his countrymen, and his great popularity and love of equity raised him to the throne, and he made himself absolute, B. C. 700 He was succeeded by his son Phraortes, after a reign of fifty-three years. He built Ecbatana, according to Herodotus, and surrounded it with seven different walls, in the middle of which was the royal palace Herod 1, 96 &c. Polyæn

DEIOCHUS, a Greek captain killed by Paris in the Trojan war. Homer Il 15, 341.

DEIONE, the mother of Miletus by Apollo. Miletus is often called Deionides, on account of his mother Ovid Met. 9, 442

DEIONEUS, a king of Thessaly, who married Dioneda, daughter of Xuthus, by whom he had Dia. He gave his daughter Dia in marriage to Ixion, who promised to make a present to his father-in-law. Deioneus accordingly visited the house of Ixion, and was thrown into a large hole filled with burning coal, by his son-in-law. Hygin fab 38 et 241.—Apollod 1, 7 et 9, 2 4

DEIOPEIA, a nymph, the fairest of all the fourteen nymphs that attended upon Juno The goddess promised her in marriage to Æolus the god of the winds, if he would destroy the fleet of Æneas, which was sailing for Italy. Virg. Æn. 1, 76 —One of the attendant nymphs of Cyrene. Virg G. 4, 343

DEIOTARUS, a governor of Galatia made king of that province by the Roman people. In the civil wars of Pompey and Cæsar, Deiotarus followed the interest of the former. After the battle of Pharsalia, Cæsar severely reprimanded Deiotarus for his attachment to Pompey, deprived him of part of his kingdom, and left him only the bare title of royalty. When he was accused by his grandson, of attempts upon Cæsar's life, Cicero ably defended him in the Roman senate. He joined Brutus with a large army, and faithfully supported the republican cause. He died at a very advanced age Strab 12 — Lucan 5, 55.

DEIPHILA. Vid Dejopite

DEIPHOBE, a sibyl of Cumæ, daughter of Glaucus It is supposed that she led Æneas to the infernal regions. (Vid Sibylla.)—Virg. Æn 6, 36

DEIPHOBUS, a son of Priam and Hecuba, who, after the death of his brother Paris, married Helen His wife unworthily betrayed him and introduced into his chamber her old husband Menelaus, to whom by this act of treachery she wished to reconcile herself He was shamefully mutilated and killed by Menelaus. He had highly distinguished himself during the war, especially in his two combats with Merion, and in that in which he slew Ascalaphus, son of Mars. Virg Æn 6, 495 — Homer Il 13.—A son of Hippolytus, who purified Hercules after the murder of Iphitus. Apollod 2, 6

DEIPHON, a brother of Triptolemus, son of Celeus and Metanira When Ceres travelled over the world, she stopped at his father's court, and undertook to nurse him and bring him up To reward the hospitality of Celeus, the goddess began to make his son immortal; and every evening she placed him on burning coals to purify him from whatever mortal particles he still possessed. The uncommon growth of Deiphon astonished Metanira who wished to see what Ceres did to make him so vigorous She was frightened to see her son on burning coals, and the shrieks that she uttered disturbed the mysterious operations of the goddess, and Delphon perished in the flames. Apollod. 1, 5.——The husband of Hymetho, daughter of Temenus, king of Argos. Id. 2, 7.

DEIPHONTES, a general of Temenus, who took Epidauria, &c Paus. 2, 12.

DEIPYLE, a daughter of Adrastus, who married Tydeus, by whom she had Diomedes. Apollod. 1, 8.

DEIPYLUS, a son of Sthenelus, in the Trojan war. Homer. Il 5.

DEITRUS, a Grecian chief, during the Trojan war. Homer. Il. 5

DEJANIRA, a daughter of Œneus, king of Ætolia. Her beauty procured her many admirers, and her father promised to give her in marriage to him only who proved to be the strongest of all his competitors. Hercules obtained the prize and married Dejanira, by whom he had three children, the most known of whom is Hyllus As Dejanira was once travelling with her husband, they were stopped by the swollen streams of the Evenus, and the centaur Nessus offered Hercules to convey her safe to the opposite shore. The hero consented; but no sooner had Nessus gained the bank, than he attempted to offer violence to Dejanira, and to carry her away in the sight of her husband. Hercules, upon this, aimed from the other shore, a poisoned arrow at the seducer, and mortally wounded him. Nessus, as he expired, wished to avenge his death upon his murderer, and he gave Dejanira his tunic, which was covered with blood, poisoned and infected by the arrow, observing that it had the power of reclaiming a husband from unlawful loves Dejanira accepted the present; and when Hercules proved faithless to her bed, she sent him the centaur's tunic, which instantly caused his death (Vid Hercules.) Dejanira was so disconsolate at the death of her husband, which she had ignorantly occasioned, that she destroyed herself Ovid. Met. 8 et 9 — Diod 4.—Senec in Hercul — Hygin. fab 34 et 36.

DELIA, a festival celebrated every fifth year in the island of Delos, in honour of Apollo. It was first instituted by Theseus, who, at his return from Crete, placed a statue there, which he had received from Ariadne. At the celebration, they crowned the statue of the goddess with garlands, appointed a choir of music, and exhibited horse-races. They afterwards led a dance, called γέρανος, i. e the crane in which they imitated by their motions, the various windings of the Cretan labyrinth, from which Theseus had extricated himself by Ariadne's assistance ——There was also another festival of the same name, yearly celebrated by the Athenians in Delos It was also instituted by Theseus, who, when he was going to Crete, made a vow, that if he returned victorious, he would yearly visit in a solemn manner the temple of Delos. The persons employed in this annual procession were called Deliadæ and Theori. The ship, the same which carried Theseus, and had been carefully preserved by the Athenians, was called Theoria and Delias. When the ship was ready for the voyage, the priest of Apollo solemnly adorned the stern with garlands, and an universal lustration was made all over the city. The Theori were crowned with laurels, and before them proceeded men armed with axes, in commemoration of Theseus, who had cleared the way from Trœzene to Athens, and delivered the country from robbers. When the ship arrived at Delos, they offered solemn sacrifices to the god of the island, and celebrated a festival in his honour. After this, they retired to their ship, and sailed back to Athens, where all the people of the city ran in crowds to meet them Every appearance of festivity prevailed at their approach, and the citizens opened their doors, and prostrated themselves before the Deliastæ, as they walked in procession. During this festival, it was held unlawful to put any condemned person to death, which was the reason that Socrates was reprieved for thirty days after his condemnation. Xenophon. Memor. et in Conv. — Plut. in Phæd.— Senec. Ep. 50

DELIA, a surname of Diana, because she was born in Delos. Virg. Ecl 3, 67.

DELIADES, a son of Glaucus, killed by his brother Bellerophon. Apollod 2, 3.——The priestesses in Apollo's temple. Homer. Hymn. ad Ap.

DELIASTÆ, the name of the deputies whom the people of Athens sent every fifty years in solemn embassy to Delos, to offer sacrifices and pay homage to Apollo.

DELIUM, a temple of Apollo.——A town of Bœotia, on the sea-coast, north of the mouth of the Asopus It was celebrated for the defeat of the Athenians by the Bœotians in the Peloponnesian war, B C. 424. It was in this battle that Socrates, according to some accounts, saved the life of Xenophon, or, according to others, of Alcibiades. Some vestiges of this town are to be seen near the village of Drauna, on the Euripus. Strab 9.—Diog. Laert. 2, 22.—Thucyd 4, 96

DELIUS, a surname of Apollo, because he was born in Delos ——Quint. an officer of Antony, who, when he was sent to cite Cleopatra before his master, advised her to make her appearance in the most captivating attire. The plan succeeded. He afterwards abandoned his friend, and fled to Augustus, who received him with great kindness. Horace has addressed, 2 od 3, to him Plut. in Anton

DELMATIUS, Fl Jul. a nephew of Constantine the Great, honoured with the title of Cæsar, and put in possession of Thrace, Macedonia, and Achaia. His great virtues were unable to save him from a violent death, and he was assassinated by his own soldiers, &c.

DELMINIUM, the ancient capital of Dalmatia. Vid Dalminium

DELOS, an island of the Ægean sea, situated nearly in the centre of the Cyclades It was called likewise Lagia, Ortygia, Asteria, Chlamydias, Pelasgia, Pyrpile, and Cynthia. The name Delos is commonly derived from δῆλος, manifest, in allusion to the island having floated under the surface of the sea until made to appear and stand firm by order of Neptune This was done for the purpose of receiving Latona, who was on the eve of delivery, and could find no asylum on the earth, it having been bound by an oath by Juno not to receive her: as Delos at the time was floating beneath the waters, it was not considered to be bound by this oath The island is celebrated for the nativity of Apollo and Diana, and the solemnity with which the festivals of these deities were celebrated there, by the inhabitants of the neighbouring islands and of the continent, is well known. One of the altars of Apollo, in the island, was reckoned among the seven wonders of the world. It had been erected by Apollo, when only four years old, and made with the horns of goats, killed by Diana on mount Cynthus. It was unlawful to sacrifice any living creature upon that altar, which was religiously kept pure from blood and every pollution. The whole island of Delos was held in such veneration, that the Persians, who had pillaged and profaned all the temples of Greece, never offered violence to the temple of Apollo, but respected it with the most awful reverence. Apollo, whose image was in the shape of a dragon, delivered their oracles during the summer, in a plain manner, without any ambiguity or obscure meaning. The winter residence of the god was at Patara in Lycia. The Athenians were commanded by an oracle, in the time of Pisistratus, to purify Delos, which they did by causing all the dead bodies to be taken up, which had been interred there, and removed from all places within view of the temple. In the sixth year of the Peloponnesian war, they, by the advice of an oracle, purified it anew, by carrying all the dead bodies to the neighbouring island of Rhenea, where they were buried. After having done this, in order to preserve it from pollution for the future, they decreed that all births and deaths amongst its inhabitants should take place in Rhenea. In memory of this purification, the Athenians instituted a quinquennial festival, which was celebrated with great pomp (Vid. Delia.) In the tenth year of the Peloponnesian war, the Athenians drove out the entire population, but were themselves afterwards expelled by Mithridates, who lost it to the Romans. It is now called Delo or Sdille, and is so covered with ruins and rubbish as to admit of little or no culture. Strab. 8 et 10.—Ovid. Met. 6, 329, 6, 333.—Mela, 2, 7.—Plin. 4, 12.—Plut de solert. Anim. &c.—Thucyd. 3, 4, &c.—Virg. Æn. 3, 73.—Pol. 3, 1.—Callim. de Del.—Claudian. de 4. Cons. Hon.

DELPHI, now Castri, a town of Phocis in Greece, situate at the foot of the most southern point of the chain of Parnassus, and built in the form of an amphitheatre. It was also called Pytho because the serpent Python was killed there; and it received the name of Delphi, from Delphus, the son of Apollo. Some have also called it Pentanion Naje, the valley of Parnassus. It was famous as the place where the Amphictyonic council assembled, but more particularly for a temple of Apollo, and for an oracle celebrated in every age and country. The origin of the oracle, though fabulous, is described as something wonderful. A number of goats that were feeding on mount Parnassus, came near a place which had a deep and long perforation. The steam which issued from the hole, seemed to inspire the goats, and they played and frisked about in such an uncommon manner, that the goat-herd was tempted to lean on the hole, and see what mysteries the place contained. He was immediately seized with a fit of enthusiasm, his expressions were wild and extravagant, and he passed for prophecies. This circumstance was soon known about the country, and many experienced the same enthusiastic inspiration. The place was revered, and a temple was soon after erected in honour of Apollo, and a city built. According to some accounts, Apollo was not the first who gave oracles there; but Terra, Neptune, Themis, and Phœbe, were in possession of the place before the son of Latona. The oracles were generally given in verse, but when it had been sarcastically observed that the god and patron of poetry was the most imperfect poet in the world, the priestess delivered her answers in prose. The oracles were always delivered by a priestess called Pythia. (Vid. Pythia.) The temple was built and destroyed several times. It was customary for those who consulted the oracle to make rich presents to the god of Delphi; and no monarch distinguished himself more by the splendour of his donations than Crœsus. This sacred repository of opulence, was often the object of plunder; but the attempts of Xerxes, and afterwards of Brennus, to rob it of its treasures, were, it is said, defeated by the supernatural interference of the gods. During the sacred war, the people of Phocis seized from it 10,000 talents, equal to 2,250,000*l.* sterling, to maintain their armies against their powerful opponents, and Nero, with little delicacy, carried away no less than five hundred statues of brass, partly of the gods, and partly of the most illustrious heroes. In another age, Constantine the Great removed its most splendid ornaments to his new capital. It was universally believed, by the ancients, that Delphi was in the middle of the earth; and on that account it was called terræ umbilicus. This, according to mythology, was first found out by two eagles, which Jupiter had let loose from the two extremities of the earth, and which met at the place where the temple of Delphi was built. Apollon. 2, 706.—Dod. 16.—Plut. de Defect. Orac. &c.—Paus. 10, 6, &c.—Ovid. Met. 10, 168.—Strab. 9.

DELPHIUS, a surname of Apollo, from the worship paid to his divinity at Delphi.

DELPHINIA, festivals at Ægina, in honour of Apollo of Delphi.

DELPHIS, the priestess of the oracle of Delphi. Martial. 9, ep 43.

DELPHUS, a son of Apollo and Celæno, who is said to have built Delphi, and consecrated it to his father. Hygin 161.—Paus 10, 6.

DELTA, a part of Egypt, which received that name from its resemblance to the form of the fourth letter of the Greek alphabet. It lies between the Canopic and Pelusiac mouths of the Nile, and begins to be formed where the river divides itself into several streams. It has been made totally by the mud and sand, which are washed down from the upper parts of Egypt by the Nile, according to ancient traditions. Curs. Alex. 27.—Strab. 15 et 17.—Herod. 2, 13, &c.—Plin 3, 16.

DEMADES, an Athenian, who, from a sailor, became an eloquent orator, and obtained much influence in the state. He was taken prisoner at the battle of Chæronea, by Philip, and ingratiated himself into the favour of that prince, by whom he was greatly esteemed. He was put to death by Cassander, because intercepted letters proved that he held secret communication with the enemies of the former, B.C 322. Agonitum of his Τραγῳδίας διδασκαλίας. "Respecting his conduct during the space of twelve years," is in the collections of Aldus, Henry Stephens, and Reiske. Dod. 16 et 17.—Plut in Dem.

DEMÆNETUS, a rhetorician of Syracuse, enemy to Timoleon. C. Nep in Tim 5.

DEMAGORAS, one of Alexander's flatterers.—An historian who wrote concerning the foundation of Rome. Dionys. Hal. 1.

DEMARATA, a daughter of Hiero, &c. Liv. 24, 22.

DEMARÄTUS, the son and successor of Ariston on the throne of Sparta, B.C 526. He was banished by the intrigues of Cleomenes his royal colleague, as being illegitimate. He retired into Asia, and was kindly received by Darius son of Hystaspes king of Persia. When the Persian monarch made preparations to invade Greece, Demaratus, though persecuted by the Lacedæmonians, informed them of the hostilities which hung over their head Herod. 5, 75, &c.—6, 50, &c.—A rich citizen of Corinth, of the family of the Bacchiadæ. When Cypselus had usurped the sovereign power of Corinth, Demaratus with all his family, migrated to Italy, and settled at Tarquinii, 658 years before Christ. His son, Lucumon, was king of Rome, under the name of Tarquinius Priscus Dionys. Hal.—A Corinthian exile at the court of Philip, king of Macedonia. Plut. in Alex.

DEMARETA, a Spartan mother, who killed her son, because he returned from a battle without glory Plut. Lac. Inst.

DEMETRIA a festival in honour of Ceres, whom the Greeks called Δημήτηρ. It was usual on this occasion for the votaries of the goddess to lash themselves with whips, made from the bark of trees, and called μάστιγες. The Athenians had a festival of the same name, in honour of Demetrius Poliorcetes.

DEMETRIAS, a town of Thessaly, on the Sinus Pelasgicus or Pagasæus, at the mouth of the river Onchestus. It owed its name and origin to Demetrius Poliorcetes Strab. 9.—A town of Assyria, south-east of Arbela, now Arbook. It is called Corcura by Ptolemy.

DEMETRIUS a son of Antigonus and Stratonice, surnamed Poliorcetes, besieger of cities. At the age of twenty-two, he was sent by his father against Ptolemy, king of Egypt, who had invaded Syria. He was defeated near Gaza, but he soon repaired his loss by a victory over one of the generals of the enemy. He afterwards sailed with a fleet of 250 ships to Athens, and restored the Athenians to liberty, by freeing them from the power of Cassander and Ptolemy, and expelling the garrison, which was stationed there under Demetrius Phalereus. After this successful expedition, he besieged and took Munychia, and defeated Cassander at Thermopylæ. His reception at Athens, after these victories, was attended with the greatest servility, and the Athenians were not ashamed to raise altars to him as to a god, and to consult his oracles. This uncommon success raised the jealousy of the successors of Alexander; and Seleucus, Cassander, and Lysimachus, united to destroy Antigonus and his son. Their hostile armies met at Ipsus, B.C. 301. Antigonus was killed in the battle, and Demetrius, after a severe loss, retired to Ephesus. His ill success raised him many enemies, and the Athenians who had lately adored him as a god, refused to admit him into their city. He soon after ravaged the territories of Lysimachus, and reconciled himself to Seleucus, to whom he gave his daughter Stratonice in marriage. Athens now laboured under tyranny, and Demetrius relieved it, and pardoned the inhabitants. The loss of his possessions in Asia recalled him from Greece, and he established himself on the throne of Macedonia. [illegible] the murder of Alexander the son of Cassander. Here he was continually at war with the neighbouring states; and the superior power of his adversaries obliged him to leave Macedonia, after he had sat on the throne for seven years. He passed into Asia, and attacked some of the provinces of Lysimachus with various success; but famine and pestilence destroyed the greatest part of his army, and he retired to the court of Seleucus for support and assistance. He met with a kind reception, but hostilities were soon begun; and after he had gained some advantages over his son-in-law, Demetrius was totally forsaken by his troops in the field of battle, and became an easy prey to the enemy. Though he was kept in confinement by his son-in-law, yet he maintained himself like a prince, and passed his time in hunting and in every laborious exercise. His son Antigonus offered Seleucus all his possessions, and even his person, to procure his father's liberty, but all proved unavailing, and Demetrius died in the fifty-fourth year of his age, after a confinement of three years, 286 B.C. His remains were given to Antigonus, and honoured with a splendid funeral pomp at Corinth, and thence conveyed to Demetrius. His posterity remained in possession of the Macedonian throne till the age of Perseus, who was conquered by the Romans. Demetrius has rendered himself famous for his fondness of dissipation when among the dissolute, and his love of virtue and military glory in the field of battle. He has been commended as a great warrior, and his ingenious inventions, his warlike engines, and stupendous machines in his war with the Rhodians justify his claims to that perfect character. He has been blamed for his voluptuous indulgences, and his biographer observes, that no Grecian prince had more wives and concubines than Poliorcetes. His obedience and reverence to his father have been justly admired, and it has been observed, that Antigonus ordered the ambassadors of a foreign prince particularly to remark the cordiality and friendship which subsisted between him and his son Plut. in vita.—Died 17.—Justin. 14, 17, &c.—The prince who succeeded his father Antigonus on the throne of Macedonia. He reigned eleven years, and was succeeded by Antigonus Doson. Justin 26, 2.—Polyb. 2.—A son of Philip king of Macedonia, delivered as a hostage to the Romans, and led in triumph by T. Q. Flaminius. When afterwards, he appeared at Rome as the ambassador of his father, his great modesty and virtuous diffidence drew upon him the attention and the esteem of the senate, and the father, accused of hostile views against the republic, was pardoned through the innocence of the son. His popularity thus acquired at Rome, raised suspicions and jealousies in Macedonia, and Demetrius, falsely criminated by his brother Perseus, who envied him his fame and meritorious services, was cruelly put to death, B.C. 180, by Philip, who, too late acknowledging the innocence of his slaughtered son, and the perfidy of his surviving brother, at last fell a prey to lingering sorrow and unavailing remorse. Liv. 33, 51. 34, 32. 39. 47, &c. 40, 4, &c.—Justin. 32, 2.—A prince, surnamed Soter, was son of Seleucus Philopater, the son of Antiochus the Great, king of Syria. His father gave him as a hostage to the Romans. After the death of Seleucus, Antiochus Epiphanes, the deceased monarch's brother, usurped the kingdom of Syria, and was succeeded by his son Antiochus Eupator. This usurpation displeased Demetrius, who was detained at Rome, he procured his liberty on pretence of going to hunt, and fled to Syria, where the troops received him as their lawful sovereign, B.C. 162. He put to death Eupator and Lysias, and established himself on his throne by cruelty and oppression. Alexander Bala, the son of Antiochus Epiphanes, laid claim to the crown of Syria, and defeated Demetrius in a battle, in the twelfth year of his reign. Strab. 16.—Appian.—Justin. 34, 3.—The second, surnamed Nicanor, or Conqueror was son of Soter, to whom he succeeded by the assistance of Ptolemy Philometer, after he had driven from the throne the usurper Alexander Bala, B. C. 146. He married Cleopatra, the daughter of Ptolemy, who was, before, the wife of the expelled monarch. Demetrius abandoned himself to every kind of dissipation and licentiousness, and suffered his kingdom to be governed by flatterers and parasites. At that time a pretended son of Bala, called Diodorus Tryphon, seized a part of Syria; and Demetrius, to oppose his antagonist, made an alliance with the Jews, and marched into the east, where he was taken by the Parthians. Phraates, king of Parthia, gave him his daughter Rhodogyne in marriage; and Cleopatra was so incensed at this new connexion, that she gave herself up to Antiochus Sidetes, her brother-in-law, and married him. Sidetes was killed in a battle against the Parthians, and Demetrius regained the possession of his kingdom. His pride and oppression rendered him odious, and his subjects asked a king of the house of Seleucus, from Ptolemy Physcon, king of Egypt, and Demetrius, unable to resist the power of his enemies, fled to Ptolemais, which was then in the hands of his wife Cleopatra. The gates were shut against his approach by Cleopatra; and he was killed by order of the governor of Tyre, whither he had fled for protection. He was succeeded by Alexander Zebina, whom Ptolemy had raised to the throne, B C 127 Justin. 36, &c.—Appian. de Bell Syr —Joseph ——The 3d, surnamed Eucerus, was son of Antiochus Gryphus. After the example of his brother Philip, who had seized Syria, he made himself master of Damascus, B C. 93, and soon after obtained a victory over his brother. He was taken in a battle against the Parthians, and died in captivity Joseph. 1.——Phalereus, a disciple of Theophrastus, who gained such an influence over the Athenians, by his eloquence, and the purity of his manners, that he was elected decennial archon, B C. 317. He so embellished the city, and rendered himself so popular by his munificence, that the Athenians raised 360 brazen statues to his honour. Yet in the midst of all this popularity, his enemies raised a sedition against him, and he was condemned to death, and all his statues thrown down, after obtaining the sovereign power for ten years. He fled without concern or mortification to the court of Ptolemy Soter, where he met with kindness and cordiality. The Egyptian monarch consulted him concerning the succession of his children, and Demetrius advised him to raise to the throne the children of Eurydice, in preference to the offspring of Berenice. This counsel so irritated Philadelphus, the son of Berenice, that after his father's death, he sent the philosopher into Upper Egypt, and there detained him in strict confinement. Demetrius, tired with his situation, put an end to his life by the bite of an asp, 284 B.C. Demetrius was author of a vast number of works in prose and verse, on philosophy, history, politics, criticism, rhetoric, &c. None of them, however, have reached our day, for the elegant treatise περὶ Ἑρμηνείας, on Elocution, which some writers have ascribed to him, is probably the work of a later age. According to the representations of Aristobulus, Philo, Josephus, and others, Demetrius was librarian to Ptolemy Philadelphus, and, besides forming a noble collection of above 200,000 volumes, obtained a royal mandate which produced the translation of the Jewish scriptures from the Hebrew, commonly called the Septuagint. Many able critics, however, have entertained doubts with respect to the credit due to their testimony. Diog. in vita.—Cic. in Brut. et de Offic.—Plut. in Exil. ——A Cynic philosopher, who flourished at Corinth in the first century. During the reign of Caligula, he taught philosophy at Rome, where he acquired a high reputation for wisdom and virtue. He was banished from Rome in the time of Nero, for his free censure of public manners. At the death of this emperor he returned to Rome; but having offended Vespasian by the boldness of his language, was again sent into exile. Apollonius Tyaneus, with whom he had contracted an intimate friendship, prevailed upon Titus to recall him, but under Domitian he was involved in the common fate of the philosophers, and withdrew to Puteoli. Seneca speaks in high terms of panegyric concerning his character: "Leaving," says he, "the nobles clad in purple, I converse with, and admire, the half naked Demetrius; and why do I admire him, but because I perceive, that in the midst of his poverty he wants nothing! When I hear this excellent man discoursing from his couch of straw, I perceive in him, not a preceptor only, but a witness of the truth; and I cannot doubt that Providence has endowed him with such virtues and talents, that he might be an example and a monitor to the present age." Senec. de vit. beat. 25.——A stage player. Juv. 3, 99.——Syrus, a rhetorician at Athens, who had Cicero among his pupils. Cic. in Brut. 174

DEMOCEDES, a celebrated physician of Crotona, son of Calliphon, and intimate with Polycrates. He was carried as a prisoner from Samos to Darius king of Persia, where he acquired great riches and much reputation by curing the king's foot, and the breast of Atossa. He was sent to Greece as a spy by the king, and fled away to Crotona, where he married the daughter of the wrestler Milo. Athan. V. H. 8, 18.—Herod. 3, 121, &c

DEMOCHARES, an Athenian, sent with some of his countrymen with an embassy to Philip king of Macedonia. The monarch gave them audience; and when he asked them what he could do to please the people of Athens, Demochares replied, "Hang yourself." This bold and impudent answer raised the indignation of all the hearers; but Philip mildly dismissed them, and bade them ask their countrymen, which deserved most the appellation of wise and moderate, either they who gave such ill language, or he who received it without any signs of resentment? Senec. de Ira 3, 23.—Ælian. V. H 3, 7 8, 14.—Cic. in Brut. 3. De Orat 2, 23.——A poet of Soli, who composed a comedy on Demetrius Poliorcetes. Plut. in Dem.——A statuary, who wished to make a statue of mount Athos. Vitruv.——A general of Pompey the younger, who died B.C. 36.

DEMOCLES, a man accused of disaffection towards Dionysius, &c. Polyæn. 5.

DEMOCOON, a natural son of Priam, who came from his residence at Abydos to protect his country against the Greeks. He was, after a glorious defence, killed by Ulysses Homer. Il. 4, 499.

DEMOCRATES, an architect of Alexandria. ——An Athenian, who fought on the side of Darius, against the Macedonians. Curt. 6, 5.

DEMOCRITUS, a celebrated philosopher of Abdera, disciple to Leucippus. He travelled over the greatest part of Europe, Asia, and Africa, in quest of knowledge, and returned home in the greatest poverty. There was a law at Abdera, which deprived of the honour of a funeral the man who had reduced himself to indigence; and Democritus, to avoid ignominy, repeated before his countrymen one of his compositions called Diacosmus. It was received with such uncommon applause, that he was presented with 500 talents, statues were erected in his honour; and a decree passed that the expenses of his funeral should be paid from the public treasury. He retired to a garden near the city, where he dedicated his time to study and solitude, and according to some authors he put out his eyes, to apply himself more closely to philosophical inquiries. He was accused of insanity, and Hippocrates was ordered to inquire into the nature of his disorder. The physician had a conference with the philosopher, and declared that not Democritus, but his enemies were insane. He continually laughed at the follies and vanity of mankind, who distract themselves with care, and are at once a prey to hope and to anxiety. He told Darius, who was inconsolable for the loss of his wife, that he would raise her from the dead, if he could find three persons who had gone through life without adversity, whose names he might engrave on the queen's monument. The king's inquiries to find such persons proved unavailing, and the philosopher in some manner soothed the sorrow of his sovereign. He taught his disciples that the soul died with the body; and therefore, as he gave no credit to the existence of ghosts, some youths, to try his fortitude, dressed themselves in a hideous and deformed habit, and approached his cave in the dead of night, with whatever could create terror and astonishment. The philosopher received them unmoved, and without even looking at them, he desired them to cease making themselves such objects of ridicule and folly. He died in the 109th year of his age, B.C. 361. His father was so rich, that he entertained Xerxes, with all his army, as he was marching against Greece. All the works of Democritus are lost. He was the author of the doctrine of atoms, and first taught that the milky way was occasioned by a confused light arising from a multitude of stars, an opinion still believed and supported by the moderns. He may be considered as the parent of experimental philosophy, in the prosecution of which he showed himself so ardent, that he declared he would prefer the discovery of one of the causes of the works of nature, to the diadem of Persia. He made artificial emeralds, and tinged them with various colours; he likewise dissolved stones, and softened ivory. Fusch 14, 27.—Diog in vita.—Ælian V H 4, 20.—Cic. de Finib. Val Max 8, 7.—Strab 1 et 15.——An Ephesian, who wrote a book on Diana's temple, &c. Diog.

DEMODICE, the wife of Cretheus king of Iolchos. Some call her Biadice, of Tyro. Hygin F. A. 2, 20.

DEMODŎCUS, a musician at the court of Alcinous, who sang, in the presence of Ulysses, the secret amours of Mars and Venus, &c. Homer. Od. 8, 44.—Plut de Mus.——A Trojan chief, who came with Æneas into Italy, where he was killed. Virg. Æn 10, 413.

DEMOLEON, a centaur, killed by Theseus at the nuptials of Pirithous. Ovid Met. 12, 356.——A son of Antenor, killed by Achilles. Homer. Il. 20, 395.

DEMOLEUS, a Greek, killed by Æneas in the Trojan war. Virg. Æn. 5, 260.

DEMON, an Athenian, nephew to Demosthenes. He was at the head of the government during the absence of his uncle, and obtained a decree that Demosthenes should be recalled, and that a ship should be sent to bring him back.

DEMONASSA, a daughter of Amphiaraus, who married Thersander. Paus. 9, 5.

DEMONAX, a celebrated philosopher of Crete, in the reign of Adrian. He showed no concern about the necessaries of life; but when hungry, he entered the first house he met, and there satisfied his appetite. He died in his 100th year.——A man of Mantinea, sent to settle the government of Cyrene. Herod. 4, 161.

DEMONICA, a woman who betrayed Ephesus to Brennus. Plut in Parall.

DEMOPHILE, a name given to the sibyl of Cumæ; who, as it is supposed by some, sold the sybylline books to Tarquin. Varro. apud Lact. 1, 6.

DEMOPHON, an Athenian, who assisted the Thebans in recovering Cadmea, &c. Thod 15.

DEMOPHOON, son of Theseus and Phædra, was king of Athens, B.C. 1182, and reigned 33 years. At his return from the Trojan war, he visited Thrace, where he was tenderly received and treated by Phyllis. He returned to Athens, and forgot the kindness and love of Phyllis, who hanged herself in despair. Ovid Heroid 2.—Paus. 10, 25.——A friend of Æneas, killed by Camilla. Virg. Æn 11, 675.

DEMOPOLIS, a son of Themistocles. Plut. in Them

DEMOSTHENES, a celebrated Athenian orator, son of a respectable citizen of Athens of the same name, who carried on a great manufacture of arms. He was born in the 4th year of the 99th olympiad, B.C. 381, and at the age of seven years he lost his father, who left him a patrimony of fourteen talents, about L. 3150 sterling. His guardians negligently managed his affairs, and embezzled the greatest part of his possessions. His education was totally neglected, and for whatever advances he made in learning, he was indebted to his own industry and application. He became the pupil of Isæus and Plato, and applied himself to study the orations of Isocrates. At the age of seventeen years, he gave an early proof his eloquence and abilities against his guardians, from whom he obtained the retribution of the great at part of his estate. His stammering talents were however impeded by weak lungs, and a difficulty of pronunciation, especially of the letter ρ, but these obstacles were soon conquered by unwearied application. To correct the stammering of his voice he spoke with pebbles in his mouth; and removed the distortion of his features, which accompanied his utterance, by watching the motions of his countenance in a looking-glass. That his pronunciation might be loud and full of emphasis, he frequently ran up the steepest and most uneven walks, where his voice acquired force and energy, and on the sea shore, when the waves were violently agitated, he declaimed aloud, to accustom himself to the noise and tumult of a public assembly. He also confined himself in a subterranean cave, to devote himself more closely to studious pursuits; and to eradicate all curiosity of appearing in public, he shaved one half of his head. In this solitary retirement, by the help of a glimmering lamp, he composed the greatest part of his orations, which have ever been the admiration of every age though his contemporaries and rivals severely inveighed against them, and observed that they smelt of oil. His abilities, as an orator, raised him to consequence at Athens, and he was soon placed at the head of the government In this public capacity he roused his countrymen from their indolence, and animated them against the encroachments of Philip of Macedonia. In the battle of Chæronæa, however, Demosthenes betrayed his pusillanimity, and saved his life by flight. After the death of Philip, he declared himself warmly against his son and successor, Alexander, whom he branded with the appellation of boy, and when the Macedonians demanded of the Athenians their orators, Demosthenes reminded his countrymen of the fable of the sheep which delivered their dogs to the wolves. Though he had boasted that all the gold of Macedonia could not tempt him, yet he suffered himself to be bribed by a small golden cup from Harpalus The tumults which this occasioned forced him to retire from Athens, and in his banishment, which he passed at Troezene and Ægina, he lived with more effeminacy than true heroism. When Antipater made war against Greece, after the death of Alexander, Demosthenes was publicly recalled from his exile, and a galley was sent to fetch him from Ægina. His return was attended with much splendour, and all the citizens crowded at the Pireus to see him land His triumph and popularity, however were short Antipater and Craterus were near Athens, and demanded all the orators to be delivered up into their hands Demosthenes, with all his adherents, fled to the temple of Neptune in Calauria, and when he saw that all hopes of safety were banished, he took a dose of poison, which he always carried in a quill, and expired on the day that the Thesmophoria were celebrated, in the 66th year of his age, B C 322. The Athenians raised a brazen statue to his honour, with an inscription translated into this distich:

Si tibi par meriti robur, Vir magne, fuisset,
Græcia non Macedæ succubuisset heri

Demosthenes has been deservedly called the prince of orators, and Cicero his successful rival among the Romans calls him a perfect model, and such as he wished to be These two great princes of eloquence have often been compared together, but the judgment hesitates to which to give the preference. They both arrived at perfection, but the measures by which they obtained it were diametrically opposite. Demosthenes has been compared, and with propriety, by his rival Æschines, to a Siren, from the melody of his expressions No orator can be said to have expressed the various passions of hatred, of resentment, and of indignation, with more vehemence than he; for even now the breast is warmed and agitated by those bold and energetic appeals, which converted a nation of indolent and effeminate citizens into a band of patriots, eager to defend the liberties of their country, to avenge her wrongs, and to emulate the heroic deeds which had immortalized the name of their forefathers. As a proof of the uncommon application of this celebrated orator, it need only be mentioned, that he transcribed eight or even ten times the history of Thucydides, that he might not only imitate but possess the force and energy of the great historian. The best editions of his works are, that of Wolfius, Frankof. 1604, fol; that left unfinished by Taylor, Cantab. 1748—57, 4to; that of Reiske in the Corpus Oratorum Græcorum, re-edited by Schæffer, and published in London, 1822, 3 vols. 8vo, and that of Dobson, containing also the works of Æschines, Lond 1827, 9 vols. 8vo. The best translations are those of Leland and Francis Plut in vita.—Dion 16.—Cic. in Orat 4c.—Paus 1, 8. 2, 33.—An Athenian general, sent to succeed Alcibiades in Sicily. He attacked Syracuse with Nicias, but his efforts were ineffectual. After many calamities he fell into the enemy's hands, and his army was confined to hard labour. The accounts about the death of Demosthenes are various; some believe that he stabbed himself, while others suppose that he was put to death by the Syracusans, B.C. 413 Plut. in Nic.—Thucyd 8; &c.—Diod. 12.—The father of the orator Demosthenes. He was very rich, and employed an immense number of slaves in the business of a manufacturer of arms. Plut in Dem——A governor of Cæsarea, under the Roman emperors

DEMUCHUS, a Trojan, son of Philetor, killed by Achilles. Homer, Il 20, 457.

DEMYLUS, a tyrant, who tortured the philosopher Zeno Phil. de Stoic. Rep.

DERBRIGA, a town on the Iberus in Spain, now Miranda de Ebro

DEODATUS, an Athenian who opposed the cruel resolutions of Cleon against the captive prisoners of Mitylene

DEOIS, a name given to Proserpine from her mother Ceres, who was called Deo This name Ceres received, because when she sought her daughter all over the world, all wished her success in her pursuits, with the words eis, intremes a Jove, intremo Ovid. Met 6, 114

DERBE, a town of Asia Minor, in Lycaonia, near Isauria. D'Anville locates it near a small chain of mountains detached from Taurus in the country of Isauria called Antiochiana. Stephanus of Byzantium says it was in Isauria, but St Luke, in the Acts and Hierocles place it in Lycaonia. It was the residence of Antipater Derbæus, and the country of Timothy. Col Leake is inclined to identify Derbe with some extensive ruins now called Bunbar-Kisasi, or the Thousand Churches

DERBICES, a people near Caucasus, who killed all those that had reached their 70th year. They buried such as died a natural death. Strab.

DERCE, a fountain in Spain, whose waters were said to be uncommonly cold.

DERCENNUS, an ancient king in Latium. Virg Æn 11, 850.

DERCETO and DERCETIS, a goddess of Syria, called also Atergatis, whom some supposed to be the same as Astarte She was represented as a beautiful woman above the waist, and the lower part terminated in a fish's tail. According to Diodorus, Venus, whom she had offended, made her passionately fond of a young priest, remarkable for the beauty of his features. She had a daughter by him, and became so ashamed of her incontinence, that she removed her lover, exposed the fruit of her amour, and threw herself into a lake. Her body was transformed into a fish, and her child was preserved and called Semiramis. As she was chiefly worshipped in Syria, and represented like a fish, the Syrians anciently abstained from fishes Lucian. de Dea Syr.—Plin 5, 13.—Ovid Met. 4, 44.—Diod. 2.

DERCYLLIDAS, a general of Sparta, celebrated for his military exploits He took nine different cities in eight days, and freed Chersonesus from the inroads of the Thracians, by building a wall across the country. He lived B C 390. Diod. 14.—Xenoph. Hist. Græc 1, &c.

DERCYLLUS, a man appointed over Attica by Antipater. C. Nep. in Phoc. 2.

DERCYNUS, a son of Neptune, killed by Hercules. Apollod 2, 5.

DERTONA, a town of Liguria, about twenty miles to the west of Asta. It was a Roman colony, surnamed Julia as we learn from inscriptions. It is now Tortona. Strab. 5 — Plin. 3, 5.

DERTOSA, a city of the Ilercaones in Spain, situated at a small distance from the mouth of the Iberus It is now Tortosa

DEUCALION, a son of Prometheus, who married Pyrrha, the daughter of Epimetheus. He reigned over part of Thessaly, and in his æra the whole earth was overwhelmed with a deluge. The impiety of mankind had irritated Jupiter, who resolved to destroy the world, and immediately the earth exhibited a boundless scene of waters. The highest mountains were climbed up by the frightened inhabitants of the country, but this seeming place of security was soon overtopped by the rising waters, and no hope was left of escaping the universal calamity. Prometheus advised his son to make himself a ship, and by this means he saved himself and his wife Pyrrha. The vessel was tossed about during nine successive days, and at last stopped on the top of mount Parnassus, where Deucalion remained till the waters had subsided Pindar and Ovid make no mention of a vessel built by the advice of Prometheus, but, according to their relation, Deucalion saved his life by taking refuge on the top of Parnassus, or, according to Hyginus, of Ætna in Sicily. As soon as the waters had retired from the surface of the earth, Deucalion and his wife went to consult the Oracle of Themis, and were directed to repair the loss of mankind, by throwing behind them the bones of their grandmother. This was nothing but the stones of the earth; and after some hesitation about the meaning of the oracle, they obeyed. The stones thrown by Deucalion immediately became men, and those of Pyrrha women. According to Justin, Deucalion was not the only one who escaped from the universal calamity. Many saved their lives by ascending the highest mountains, or trusting themselves in small vessels to the mercy of the waters. This deluge, which chiefly happened in Thessaly, according to the relation of some writers, was produced by the inundation of the waters of the river Peneus whose regular course was stopped by an earthquake near mount Ossa and Olympus. According to Xenophon, there were no less than five deluges. The first happened under Ogyges, and lasted three months The second, which was in the age of Hercules and Prometheus, continued but one month. During the third, which happened in the reign of another Ogyges, Attica was laid waste by the waters. Thessaly was totally covered by the waters during the fourth, which happened in the age of Deucalion. The last was before the Trojan war, and its effects were severely felt by the inhabitants of Egypt. There prevailed a report in Attica, that the waters of Deucalion's deluge had disappeared through a small aperture about a cubit wide, near Jupiter Olympius's temple, and Pausanias, who saw it, further adds, that a yearly offering of flour and honey was thrown into it with religious ceremony The deluge of Deucalion, so much celebrated in ancient history, is supposed to have happened 1503 years B. C. Deucalion had two sons by Pyrrha, Hellen, called by some son of Jupiter, and Amphictyon king of Attica, and also a daughter, Protogenia, who became mother of Æthlius by Jupiter. Pynd Olymp. 9 — Ovid Met 1 fab. 8.—Hesiod. 45, 167.—Apollod 1, 7 —Paus. 1, 10. 5, 8.—Juv. 1, 81 —Hygin. fab. 153 —Justin. 2, 6 — Diod. 5. —Lucian. de Dea Syria.—Virg. G. 1, 62.——One of the Argonauts ——A son of Minos. Apollod. 3, 1.——A son of Abas.

DEUDORIX, one of the Cheruici, led in triumph by Germanicus

DEVA, a town of the Cornavii in Britain. It lay near the Setæa Æstuarium, or mouth of the Dee, and was the station of the 20th legion. It is now Chester —A river of Britain, in the north, now the Dee, which runs into the German ocean at Old Aberdeen ——There was another river named Deva in Britain, on the north-western coast, which is also called Dee, and discharges itself into the Solway Firth, the ancient Ituna Æstuarium.

DEXAMENE, one of the Nereides. Hom Il 18, 41

DEXAMENUS, a man delivered by Hercules from the hands of his daughter's suitors. Apollod. 2, 5 ——A king of Olenus in Achaia, whose two daughters married the sons of Actor. Paus. 5, 3.

DEXIPPUS, a Spartan, who assisted the people of Agrigentum, &c. Diod 13.

DEXITHEA, the wife of Minos. Apollod. 3, 1.

DEXIUS, a Greek, father of Iphimous, killed by Glaucus in the Trojan war, &c. Homer. Il. 7, 13.

DIA, a daughter of Deion, mother of Pirithous by Ixion —— An island in the Ægean sea, seventeen miles from Delos It is the same as Naxos. Ital. Naxos. Ovid Met. 8, 157.——An island off the north shore of Crete, now Standia

DIACTORIDES, one of Agarista's suitors. Herod. 6, 127.——The father of Eurydame, the wife of Leutychides Id. 6, 71.

DIÆUS, of Megalopolis, a general of the Achæans, who killed himself when his affairs became desperate. Paus. 7, 16

DIAGONDAS, a Theban, who abolished all nocturnal sacrifices. Cic. de Leg. 2, 15.

DIAGORAS, a philosopher of the Eleatic sect, was a native of the island of Melos. Having been sold as a captive in his youth, he was redeemed by Democritus, and trained up in the study of philosophy. He also cultivated polite learning, and distinguished himself in the art of lyric poetry His name, however, has been transmitted to posterity with infamy, as that of an avowed advocate for the rejection of all religious belief. It is expressly asserted by ancient writers that when, in a particular instance, he saw a perjured person escape punishment, he publicly avowed his disbelief of Divine Providence, and from that time spoke of the gods and all religious ceremonies with ridicule and contempt. He proceeded so far as to lay open the sacred mysteries, and to dissuade the people from submitting to the rites of initiation A reward at last was put upon his head, and he fled to Corinth, where he died B.C. 412. Cic. de Nat D 1, 23 3, 37, &c.—Val. Max 1, 1 —— An athlete of Rhodes, 460 years before the Christian era. Pindar celebrated his merit in a beautiful ode still extant, which was written in golden letters in a temple of Minerva. He saw his three sons crowned the same day at Olympia, and died through excess of joy. Cic. Tusc. 5.—Plut. in Pel.—Paus 6, 7.

DIALIS, a priest of Jupiter at Rome, first instituted by Numa. He was never permitted to swear even upon public trials. Dionys. 2.—Liv. 1, 20.

DIAMASTIGŌSIS, a festival at Sparta, in honour of Diana Orthia, which received that name ἀπὸ τοῦ μαστίγους, from whipping, because boys were whipped before the altar of the goddess. These boys, called Bomonicæ, were originally freeborn Spartans, but, in the more delicate ages, they were of mean birth, and generally of a slavish origin. This operation was performed by an officer in a severe and unfeeling manner; and that no compassion should be raised, the priest stood near the altar with a small light statue of the goddess, which suddenly became heavy and insupportable if the lash of the whip was more lenient or less rigorous. The parents of the children attended the solemnity, and exhorted them not to commit any thing either by fear or groans, that might be unworthy of Laconian education. These flagellations were so severe, that the blood gushed in profuse torrents, and many expired under the lash of the whip, without uttering a groan, or betraying any marks of fear. Such a death was reckoned very honourable, and the corpse was buried with much solemnity, with a garland of flowers on its head. The origin of this festival is unknown. Some suppose, that Lycurgus first instituted it to inure the youths of Lacedæmon to bear labour and fatigue, and render them insensible to pain and wounds. Others maintain that it was a mitigation of an oracle, which ordered that human blood should be shed on Diana's altar; and, according to their opinion, Oreetes first introduced that barbarous custom, after he had brought the statue of Diana Taurica into Greece. There is another tradition which mentions, that Pausanias, as he was offering prayers and sacrifices to the gods, before he engaged with Mardonius, was suddenly attacked by a number of Lydians, who disturbed the sacrifice, and were at last repelled with staves and stones, the only weapons with which the Lacedæmonians were provided at that moment. In commemoration of this, therefore, the whipping of boys was instituted at Sparta, and after that the Lydian procession.

DIANA, the goddess of hunting. According to Cicero, there were three of this name; a daughter of Jupiter and Proserpine, who became mother of Cupid, a daughter of Jupiter and Latona; and a daughter of Upis and Glauce. The second is the most celebrated, and to her all the ancients allude. She was born at the same birth as Apollo, and the pains which she saw her mother suffer during her labour, gave her such an aversion to marriage, that she obtained from her father the privilege of living in perpetual celibacy, and of presiding over the travails of women. To shun the society of men, she devoted herself to hunting, and obtained the permission of Jupiter to have for her attendants sixty of the Oceanides, and twenty other nymphs, all of whom, like herself, firmly abjured the use of marriage. She is represented with a bent bow and quiver, and attended with dogs, and sometimes drawn in a chariot by two white stags. Sometimes she appears with wings, holding a lion in one hand, and a panther in the other, with a chariot drawn by two heifers, or two horses of different colours. She is represented taller by the head than her attendant nymphs, her face has something manly, her legs are bare, well shaped and strong, and her feet are covered with a buskin, worn by huntresses among the ancients. Her flowing hair is negligently collected in a knot on her shoulder, her robe is tucked up on one side and decently fastened to her girdle, and often a crescent appears glittering on her forehead, though sometimes she is represented without the crescent, but clothed with a large veil all bespangled with shining stars. Diana received many surnames, particularly from the places where her worship was established, and from the functions over which she presided. She was called Lucina, Ilythia, or Juno Pronuba, when invoked by women in childbed, and Trivia when worshipped in the cross-ways, where her statues were generally erected. She was supposed to be the same as the moon, and Proserpine or Hecate, and from that circumstance she was called Triformis; and some of her statues represented her with three heads, that of a horse, a dog, and a boar. Her power and functions, under these three characters, have been beautifully expressed in these two verses:

Terret, lustrat, agit, Proserpina, Luna, Diana,
Ima, suprema, feris, regibus, fulgore, sagitta.

She was also called Agrotera, Orthia, Taurica, Delia, Cynthia, Aricia, &c. She was supposed to be the same as the Isis of the Egyptians, whose worship was introduced into Greece with that of Osiris under the name of Apollo. When Typhon waged war against the gods, Diana is said to have metamorphosed herself into a cat, to avoid his fury. The goddess is generally known in the figures that represent her by the crescent on her head, by the dogs which attend her, and by her hunting habit. The most famous of her temples was that of Ephesus, which was one of the seven wonders of the world. (Vid. Ephesus.) She was there represented with a great number of breasts, and other symbols, which signified the earth, or Cybele. Though she was the patroness of chastity, yet she forgot her dignity to enjoy the company of Endymion, and the very familiar favours which she granted to Pan and Orion are well known. (Vid. Endymion, Pan, Orion.) The severity, however, with which she resented intrusion or neglect is marked in the melancholy fate of Actæon, who was torn by his dogs, (Vid. Actæon), and in the distress which she caused in Calydon, when she punished the impiety of Œneus, by sending a wild boar to depopulate his country, (Vid. Calydon), and likewise in the punishment of Menalippe and of Cometho. The inhabitants of Taurica were particularly attached to the worship of this goddess, and they cruelly offered on her altar all the strangers that were shipwrecked on their coasts. Her temple in Aricia was served by a priest who had always murdered his predecessor, and the Lacedæmonians yearly offered her human victims till the age of Lycurgus, who changed this barbarous custom for the sacrifice of flagellation. The Athenians generally offered her goats, and others a white kid, and sometimes a boar pig, or an ox. Among plants the poppy and the dittany were sacred to her. She, as well as her brother Apollo, had some oracles, among which those of Egypt, Cilicia, and Ephesus are the most known. Ovid. Fast. 2, 155. Met. 3, 156. 7 94 et 194, &c.—Catul. ep 38.—Cic de Nat. D. 3.—Horat 3, od. 22.—Virg. Æ. 3, 392 Æn. 1, 505.—Homer. Od. 5.—Paus. 8, 31 et 37 —Stat 3, Silv. 1, 57.—Apollod 1, 4, &c. 3, 5, &c.

DIANÆ FANUM, a promontory of Asia Minor in Bithynia, at the entrance of the Euxine sea. Jupiter Urius had a temple on this promontory. Ptol.

DIANIUM, a promontory and town of Hispania Terraconensis, on the Mediterranean coast, opposite the Pityusæ Insulæ The modern name of the promontory is Cape St Antonio and of the town, Denia. There was here a temple of Diana, which was much venerated.

DIASIA, a festival in honour of Jupiter at Athens. It received its name ἀπὸ τοῦ Διὸς, καὶ τῆς διας, from Jupiter and misfortune, because by making supplications to Jupiter, protection and deliverance from evils were obtained During this festival, all sorts of goods were exposed to sale.

DIBIO, a town of France, now Dijon in Burgundy.

DICÆA, a town of Thrace, in the territory of the Bistones, and near the Bistonis Palus. Herod. 7, 109

DICÆARCHEA Vid Puteoli.

DICÆUS, an Athenian, who was supernaturally apprised of the defeat of the Persians in Greece. Herod 8, 65

DICE, one of the Horæ, daughters of Jupiter. Apollod 1, 3.

DICÆARCHUS a Greek philosopher and historian, was the son of Phidias, and was born at Messina in Sicily. He was a disciple of Aristotle. He composed a number of works which were much esteemed; one of the chief of them was a treatise, in three books, on the different people and cities of Greece, their manners, institutions, &c. His account of the republic of Sparta was so highly thought of, that a law was made for its annual recital in the hall of the Ephori, in presence of the young men of the city. Another of his works is on the measurement of mountains in Peloponnesus, of which a description of Mount Pelion remains in the Geographiæ Veter. Script. Græc minores.

DICENEUS, an Egyptian philosopher in the age of Augustus, who travelled into Scythia, where he ingratiated himself with the king of the country, and by his instructions softened the wildness and rusticity of his manners. He also gained such an influence over the multitude, that they destroyed all the vines which grew in their country, to prevent the riot and dissipation which the wine occasioned among them. He wrote all his maxims and his laws in a book, that they might not lose the benefit of them after his death.

DICTÆUS MONS. Vid Dicte

DICTATOR, a magistrate at Rome, invested with regal authority This officer, whose magistracy seems to have been borrowed from the customs of the Albans or Latins, was first chosen during the Roman wars against the Latins. The consuls being unable to raise forces for the defence of the state, because the plebeians refused to inlist, if they were not discharged from all the debts they had contracted with the patricians, the senate found it necessary to elect a new magistrate with absolute and incontrollable power to take care of the state. The dictator could not remain above six months in office, and, indeed, seldom retained his dignity so long, as he generally abdicated his authority as soon as the business which called for his appointment was accomplished He knew no superior in the republic, and even the laws were subjected to him. He was called dictator, because dictus, named by the consul, or quoniam dictis ejus parebat populus, because the people implicitly obeyed his command. He was not created by the suffrages of the people, as the other magistrates but one of the consuls, by virtue of a decree of the senate appointed as dictator whatever person of consular dignity he thought proper, and this he did, after having taken the auspices, usually in the dead of night As his power was absolute, he could proclaim war, levy forces, conduct them against an enemy, and disband them at pleasure. He punished as he pleased; and from his decision there was no appeal, at least till later times. He was preceded by twenty four lictors, with the fasces, during his administration, all other officers, except the tribunes of the people, were suspended, and he was the master of the republic. But amidst all his independence, he was not permitted to spend the public money arbitrarily, or to leave Italy, or to enter the city on horseback. He was chosen only when the state was in imminent danger from foreign enemies or inward seditions. In the time of a pestilence a dictator was sometimes elected, as also to hold the comitia, or to celebrate the public festivals, to hold trials, to choose senators, or drive a nail in the Capitol, by which superstitious ceremony the Romans believed that a plague could be averted, or the progress of an enemy stopped This office, so respectable and illustrious in the first ages of the republic became odious by the perpetual usurpations of Sylla and J. Cæsar, and after the death of the latter, the Roman senate, on the motion of the consul Antony, passed a decree, which for ever after forbade a dictator to exist in Rome. The dictator, as soon as elected, chose a subordinate officer, called his master of horse, magister equitum. This officer was respectable, but he was totally subservient to the will of the dictator, and could do nothing without his express order, though he enjoyed the privilege of using a horse, and had the same insignia as the prætors. This subordination however, was some time after removed, and during the second Punic war, the master of the horse, Minucius, was invested with a power equal to that of the dictator, Fabius Maximus A second dictator was also chosen for the election of magistrates at Rome, after the battle of Cannæ The dictatorship was originally confined to the patricians, but the plebeians were afterwards admitted to share it Titus Lartius Flavus was the first dictator. A U C 253 Dionys Hal. —Cic de Leg. 3.—Dio.—Plut in Fab.—Appian 3.—Polyb 3.—Paterc. 2, 28.—Liv. 1, 23. 2, 18. 4, 57. 9, 38.

DICTE, a mountain of the island of Crete, now called Stim, next in height to mount Ida, and covered throughout a great part of the year with snow; whence it is denominated by Strabo, Pliny, and Ptolemy, "the White Mountain" It was consecrated to Jupiter; and hence he obtained the appellation of Dictæus, as well as from a cave which was there, in which he had been concealed from Saturn. Crete was sometimes also styled by the poets Dictæa arva. Strab. 10.—Virg. G 4, 149. Æn. 3, 171.

DICTIDIENSES, certain inhabitants of mount Athos. Thucyd. 5, 82.

DICTYNNA, a nymph of Crete, who first invented hunting nets. She was one of Diana's attendants, and for that reason the goddess is often called Dictynna. Some have supposed that Minos pursued her, and that to avoid his importunities, she threw herself into the sea, and was caught in fishermen's nets, δίκτυα, whence her name. There was a festival at Sparta in honour of Diana, called Dictynna. Paus. 2, 30. 3, 12

DICTYNNÆUM PROMONTORIUM a promontory on the northern coast of the isle of Crete, towards the north-west. This promontory was at the extremity of a chain of mountains, on which was a celebrated temple of the nymph Dictynna. Strab. 10 — Diod. Sic. 5, 76.—Mela, 2, 7

DICTYS, a Cretan, who went with Idomeneus to the Trojan war. It is supposed that he wrote a history of this celebrated war, and that at his death he ordered it to be laid in his tomb, where it remained till a violent earthquake in the reign of Nero opened the monument where he had been buried. This convulsion of the earth threw out his history of the Trojan war, which was found by some shepherds, and afterwards carried to Rome. This mysterious tradition is deservedly deemed fabulous. The real author was one Praxis, or Eupraxidas, who lived in the time of Nero. The Greek original of Praxis is lost: we have remaining, however, the Latin version of Q Septimius, whom some place under Diocletian or Constantine, and others in the age of Theodosius Although this work does not merit the confidence which its fabricator wished to produce, it is still not without interest for those who pursue the study of antiquities, since it contains many things derived from books that no longer exist. The best edition is that of Masaltus Venta, 4to, Mediol. 1477.—A king of the island of Seriphus, raised to that dignity by Perseus, who deposed Polydectes, because he behaved with wantonness to Danae. (Id Polydectes.) Apollod 1, 9. 2, 4 —A centaur, killed at the nuptials of Pirithous Ovid. Met. 12, 334.

DIDAS, a Macedonian, whose intrigues were employed by Perseus to render Demetrius unpopular and suspected to his father Philip. He became afterwards one of Philip's favourite generals Liv. 40, 23 et 24. 42, 51 et 59.

DIDIA LEX, de Sumptibus, by Didius, A U C. 606, to restrain the expense that attended public festivals and entertainments, and limit the number of guests which generally attended them, not only at Rome, but in all the provinces of Italy By it, not only those who received guests in these festive meetings, but the guests themselves were liable to be fined. It was an extension of the Oppian and Fannian laws.

DIDIUS, a governor of Spain, conquered by Sertorius. Plut. in Sert —A man who brought Cæsar the head of Pompey's eldest son. Plut. —A governor of Britain under Claudius.—Julianus, a rich Roman, who, after the murder of Pertinax, bought the empire which the Prætorians had exposed to sale, A. D. 192. His great luxury and extravagance rendered him odious, and when he refused to pay the money which he had promised for the imperial purple, the soldiers revolted against him, and put him to death, after a short reign. Severus was made emperor after him.

DIDO, called also Elissa, a daughter of Belus king of Tyre, who married Sichæus, or Sicharbas, her uncle, who was priest of Hercules. Pygmalion, who succeeded to the throne of Tyre after Belus, murdered Sichæus, to get possession of the immense riches which he possessed; and Dido, disconsolate for the loss of a husband whom she tenderly loved, and by whom she was equally esteemed, set sail in quest of a settlement, with a number of Tyrians, to whom the cruelty of the tyrant became odious. According to some accounts, she threw into the sea the riches of her husband, which Pygmalion so greatly desired; and by that artifice compelled the ships to fly with her, that had come by order of the tyrant to obtain the riches of Sichæus. During her voyage, Dido visited the coast of Cyprus, where she carried away fifty women, who prostituted themselves on the sea-shore, and gave them as wives to her Tyrian followers A storm drove her fleet on the African coast, and she bought of the inhabitants as much land as could be covered by a bull's hide, cut into thongs. Upon this piece of land she built a citadel, called Byrsa (Id, Byrsa), and the increase of population, and the rising commerce among her subjects, soon obliged her to enlarge her city, and the boundaries of her dominions Her beauty, as well as the fame of her enterprise, gained her many admirers, and her subjects wished to compel her to marry Iarbas, king of Mauritania, who threatened them with a dreadful war. Dido begged three months to give her decisive answer; and, during that time, she erected a funeral pile, as if wishing, by a solemn sacrifice, to appease the manes of Sichæus, to whom she had promised eternal fidelity. When all was prepared, she stabbed herself on the pile in presence of her people, and by this uncommon action obtained the name of Dido, valuntà vemam, instead of Elissa According to Virgil and Ovid, the death of Dido was caused by the sudden departure of Æneas, of whom she was deeply enamoured, and whom she could not obtain as a husband. This poetical fiction represents Æneas as living in the age of Dido, and introduces an anachronism of near 300 years Dido left Phœnicia, 247 years after the Trojan war, or the age of Æneas, that is, about 993 years B C. This chronological error proceeds not from the ignorance of the poets, but it is supported by the authority of Horace,

"Aut famam sequere, aut sibi convenientia finge."

While Virgil describes, in a beautiful episode, the desperate love of Dido, and the submission of Æneas to the will of the gods, he at the same time gives an explanation of the hatred which existed between the republics of Rome and Carthage, and informs his readers that their mutual enmity originated in their very first foundation, and was apparently kindled by a more remote cause than the jealousy and rivalship of two flourishing empires. Dido, after her death, was honoured as a deity by her subjects. Justin. 18, 4, &c.—Patere. 1, 6.—Virg. Æn. 1, &c.—Ovid. Met. 14, fab 2. Heroid. 7.—Appian. Alex.—Oros. 4.—Herodian.—Dionys. Hal.

DIDYMÆUS, a surname of Apollo.

DIDYMÆON, an excellent artist, famous for making suits of armour. Virg Æn. 5, 359.

DIDYME, one of the Cyclades Ovid. Met. 7, 469.—A city of Sicily. Id. Fast. 4, 475.—One of the Lipari isles, now Salina.—A place near Miletus, where the Branchidæ had their famous oracle.

DIDŸMUS, a freedman of Tiberius, &c Tac. Ann. 6, 24.——A grammarian of Alexandria, surnamed Χαλκέντερος, or bowels of brass, from the number of his productions. He is said to have written nearly 4000 volumes, none of which have come down to us, except some scholia on Homer. He flourished B.C. 40. The editions of his scholia are, that in 2 vols 8vo, Venet apud Ald. 1528, and that of Paris, 8vo, 1630.——An ecclesiastical writer of Alexandria. Though blind he acquired an extensive knowledge of the sciences and theology. Nothing of his remains but a Latin translation of a treatise on the Holy Spirit; Remarks on the Acts and Epistles; and a book, in Greek, against the Manicheans. He died A.D. 395, aged eighty-five.——A musical writer of Alexandria, who lived in the reign of Nero. He wrote upon grammar and medicine as well as music, but all his works are lost. He is allowed to have preceded Guido in the invention of music in parts

DIENNECES, a Spartan, who, upon hearing, before the battle of Thermopylæ, that the Persians were so numerous that their arrows would darken the light of the sun, observed, that it would be a great convenience, for they then should fight in the shade Herod. 7, 226

DIESPITER, a surname of Jupiter as being the father of light.

DIGENTIA, a river of Italy, which passed near the country-house of Horace It flows into the Anio, and is now called the Licenza. Horat. 1, ep. 18, 104.

DIGITIUS, SEX., a sailor, who, at the taking of New Carthage, claimed of Scipio the prize of valour in opposition to Trebellius a centurion. The general, to avoid a dissension between his army and his fleet, commended both and rewarded them with a mural crown. Liv 26, 48.

DII, the divinities of the ancient inhabitants of the earth were very numerous. Every object which caused terror, inspired gratitude, or bestowed affluence, received the tribute of veneration. Man saw a superior agent in the stars, the elements, or the trees, and supposed that the waters which communicated fertility to his fields and possessions, were under the influence and direction of some invisible power, inclined to favour and to benefit mankind Thus arose a train of divinities, which imagination arrayed in different forms, and armed with different powers. They were endowed with understanding, and were actuated by the same passions which daily afflict the human race; and those children of superstition were appeased or provoked as the imperfect being which gave them birth. Their wrath was mitigated by sacrifices and incense, and sometimes human victims bled to expiate a crime, which superstition alone supposed to exist. The sun, from its powerful influence and animating nature, first attracted the notice, and claimed the adoration, of the uncivilized inhabitants of the earth. The moon also was honoured with sacrifices, and addressed in prayers; and afterimmortality had been liberally bestowed on all the heavenly bodies, mankind classed among their deities the brute creation; and the cat and the sow shared equally with Jupiter himself, the father of gods and men, the devout veneration of their votaries. This immense number of deities have been divided into different classes, according to the fancy or caprice of the mythologists. The Romans, generally speaking, reckoned two classes of the gods, the dii majorum gentium, or dii consulentes, and the dii minorum gentium The former were twelve in number, six males and six females. (Vid. Consentes.) In the class of the latter, were ranked all the gods who were worshipped in different parts of the earth. Besides these, there were some called dii selecti, sometimes classed with the twelve greater gods, these were Janus, Saturn, the Genius, the Moon, Pluto, and Bacchus There were also some called demi gods, that is, who deserved immortality by the greatness of their exploits, and for their uncommon services to mankind Among these were Priapus, Vertumnus, Hercules, and those whose parents were some of the immortal gods. Besides these, there were some called topici, whose worship was established at particular places, such as Isis in Egypt, Astarte in Syria, Uranus at Carthage, &c. In process of time also all the passions and the moral virtues were reckoned as powerful deities, and temples were raised to a goddess of concord, peace, &c. According to the authority of Hesiod, there were no less than 30,000 gods that inhabited the earth, and were guardians of men, all subservient to the power of Jupiter. To these succeeding ages have added an almost equal number; and indeed they were so numerous, and their functions so various, that we find temples erected, and sacrifices offered to unknown gods. It is observable, that all the gods of the ancients have lived upon earth as mere mortals; and even Jupiter, who was the ruler of heaven, is represented by the mythologists as a helpless child, and we are acquainted with all the particulars that attended the birth and education of Juno In process of time, not only good and virtuous men, who had been the patrons of learning and the supporters of liberty, but also thieves and pirates, were admitted among the gods, and the Roman senate courteously granted immortality to the most cruel and abandoned of their emperors.

DII, a people of Thrace, on mount Rhodope.

DIMASSUS, an island near Rhodes. Plin 5, 31.

DINARCHUS, a Greek orator, son of Sostratus, and disciple to Theophrastus, at Athens. He acquired much money by his compositions, and suffered himself to be bribed by the enemies of the Athenians, 307 B C. Of sixty-four of his orations, only three remain. Cic de Orat. 2, 53. ——A Corinthian ambassador, put to death by Polyperchon. Plut in Phoc ——A native of Delos, who collected some fables in Crete, &c. Dionys. Hal.

DINDŸMUS, or A (orum) a mountain of Phrygia, near a town of the same name in the neighbourhood of Cyzicus It was from this place that Cybele was called Dindymene, as her worship was established there by Jason Strab 12. —Stat. 1, Sylv 1, 9—Horat 1, od 16, 5.—Virg. Æn 9, 617

DINIA, now Digne, a town of Gallia Narbonensis, and the capital of the Bodiontici. Its name is said to be of Celtic origin, being derived from din, water, and ia, hot, so called from the thermal waters at the distance of a league from it.

DINIAS, a general of Cassander. Diod 19 ——A man of Pheræ, who seized the supreme power at Cranon. Polyæn. 2 ——A man who wrote a history of Argos. Plut. in Arat

DINOCHARES, an architect, who finished the temple of Diana at Ephesus, after it had been burned by Erostratus.

DINOCRATES, an architect of Macedonia, who made a proposal to Alexander the Great, to convert mount Athos into the figure of a man, the left hand of which should contain a city, while all the rivers of the mount flowed into the right, and from thence into the sea. Alexander was too wise to attend to this romantic scheme, but he employed him in building the city of Alexandria, in Egypt. Under the patronage and direction of Ptolemy Philadelphus, Dinocrates began to build a temple in honour of Arsinoe, in which he intended to suspend a statue of the queen, by means of loadstones. His death, and that of his royal patron, prevented the execution of a work which would have been the admiration of future ages. Plin 7, 37.—Vuvcell 22, 40.—Plut in Alex —— A Messenian, who behaved with great effeminacy and wantonness. He defeated Philopœmen, and put him to death, B C 183. Plut in Flamin

DINOMENES, a man who conspired against Hieronymus king of Sicily, and afterwards was made governor of Syracuse. Liv. 24, 7 et 25.—Plut. 8, 42

DINON, a governor of Damascus, under Ptolemy, &c. Polyæn 4 —— The father of Clitarchus, who wrote a history of Persia in Alexander's age. He is esteemed a very authentic historian by C. Nep in Conon.—Plut in Alex.

DINOSTRATUS, a mathematician, who lived in the time of Plato, and attended his academy. He invented a quadrature, which goes by his name, though some ascribe that invention to Hippias.

DIOCLEA, festivals celebrated in the spring at Megara, in honour of Diocles, who died in the defence of a certain youth, to whom he was tenderly attached. There was a contest on his tomb, and the youth who gave the sweetest kiss, was publicly rewarded with a garland. Theocritus has described them in his 12 Idyll 27 —— A town on the coast of Dalmatia celebrated as the birth-place of the emperor Diocletian. Plin 3, 23

DIOCLES, a general of Athens, &c. Polyæn 5.—A rich man of Messenia, son of Orsilochus the son of Alpheus. His twin sons Orsilochus and Creton went to the Trojan war, where they were slain by Æneas. Homer. Il. 5, 541.—Prun 4, 2 —— A general of Syracuse. Died 13.

DIOCLETIANOPOLIS, a city of Macedonia, called so in honour of Diocletian, and supposed by Mannert to have been identical with Pella.

DIOCLETIANUS, CAIUS VALERIUS JOVIUS, a celebrated Roman emperor, born of an obscure family in Dalmatia. He was first a common soldier, and by merit and success he gradually rose to the office of a general and at the death of Numerian, he was invested with the imperial purple. In this high station, he regarded the virtue and fidelity of Maximian who had served with him in all the subordinate offices in the army, by making him his colleague on the throne. He created two subordinate emperors, Constantius and Galerius, whom he called Cæsars, whilst he claimed for himself and his colleague the superior title of Augustus. Diocletian has been celebrated for his military virtues; and though he was naturally unpolished by education and study, yet he was the friend and patron of learning and true genius. He was bold and resolute, active and diligent, and well acquainted with the arts which endear a sovereign to his people, and make him respectable even in the eyes of his enemies. His cruelty, however, against the followers of Christianity, has been deservedly branded with the appellation of unbounded tyranny, and insolent wantonness. After he had reigned 21 years in the greatest prosperity, he exhibited to his astonished subjects an example of unusual moderation; and by publicly abdicating the crown in the plains of Nicomedia, May 1, A. D. 304, he convinced mankind how much superior the calm tranquillity of a private situation is to the storms of splendid power and elevated rank. Maximian, his colleague, followed his example, but not from voluntary choice, and when he, some time after, endeavoured to rouse the ambition of Diocletian, and persuade him to resume the imperial purple, he received for answer, that Diocletian took now more delight in cultivating his little garden, than he formerly enjoyed in a palace, when his power was extended over all the earth. He lived nine years after his abdication, in the greatest security and enjoyment at Salona, and died in the 68th year of his age. Diocletian is the first sovereign who voluntarily resigned his power; a philosophical resolution, which in a later age, was imitated by the emperor Charles the Fifth of Germany. Aurel. Vict. 39.—Eutrop. 9 19.

DIODORUS, an historian, surnamed Siculus, because he was born at Argyrium in Sicily. He wrote a history of Egypt, Persia, Syria, Media, Greece, Rome, and Carthage, which was divided into forty books, of which only fifteen are extant, with some few fragments. This valuable composition was the work of an accurate inquirer, and it is said that he visited all the places of which he has made mention in his history. It was the labour of thirty years though the greater part may be considered as nothing more than a judicious compilation from Berosus, Timæus, Theopompus Callisthenes, and others. The author, however, is too credulous in some of his narrations and often wanders far from the truth. His style is neither elegant, nor too laboured; but it contains great simplicity, and unaffected correctness. He often dwells too long upon fabulous reports and trifling incidents while events of the greatest importance to history are treated with brevity, and sometimes passed over in silence. His manner of reckoning, by the Olympiads, and the Roman consuls, will be found very erroneous. The historian flourished about 44 years B C. He spent much time at Rome to procure information, and authenticate his historical narrations. The best editions of his works are, that of Wesseling, 2 vols fol. Amst 1746, and that of Heyne, 11 vols. 8vo, Bipont. 1793—1807.——A native of Caria, and disciple of the Megaric school. He lived at the court of Ptolemy Soter, king of Egypt, in whose presence being called upon to answer some puzzling question, and demanding time, the monarch, out of ridicule, gave him the name of Chronus (χρόνος). He is reckoned among the atomic philosophers but he appears to have been a mere quibbling sophist.——A peripatetic philosopher, with whom the uninterrupted succession of the peripatetic school terminated.——A bishop of Tarsus in Cilicia. A few fragments of his writings remain in the Catena Patrum Græcorum. He was ordained A.D 378, and died A. D. 394.——A disciple of Euclid, in the age of Plato. Diog. in vita.——A son of Eubœanax, who, with his brothers Cadrus and Anaxagoras, murdered Hegesias, the tyrant of Ephesus, &c. Polyæn. 6.—— An Ephesian, who wrote an account of the life of Anaximander. Diog.——An orator of Sardis, in the time of the Mithridatic war.——A stoic philosopher, preceptor to Cicero. He lived and died in the house of his pupil, whom he instructed in the various branches of Greek literature. Cic. in Brut.

DIOGENES, a celebrated Cynic philosopher, was born at Sinope, a city of Pontus, B.C. 414. His father, who was a banker, was convicted of coining false money, and was forced to leave the country. This circumstance gave the son an opportunity of visiting Athens, where he became the disciple of Antisthenes, who was at the head of the Cynics. Antisthenes, at first, refused to admit him into his house, and even struck him with a stick. Diogenes calmly bore the rebuke, and said, "Strike me, Antisthenes, but never shall you find a stick sufficiently hard to remove me from your presence, whilst there is any thing to be learned, any information to be gained from your conversation and acquaintance." Such firmness recommended him to Antisthenes, and he became his most devoted pupil. Diogenes perfectly adopted the principles and character of his master. Renouncing every other object of ambition, he determined to distinguish himself by his contempt of riches and honours, and by his indignation against luxury. He wore a coarse cloak, carried a wallet and staff, and, according to some of his biographers, took up his residence in a tub. In his old age he is said to have been taken by pirates on a voyage to Ægina, and sold as a slave to a rich Corinthian named Xeniades, who discovered his value, and employed him in the education of his sons. At Corinth he used to harangue in the Cranæum; and it is asserted that he was visited by Alexander, who, on approaching him, said, "I am Alexander the king:" to which he coolly replied, "And I am Diogenes the Cynic." The monarch then asked him if he could render him any service: "Yes," he replied, "by not standing between me and the sun." Alexander felt the greatness of wanting nothing, to be next to that of possessing all things; and exclaimed, "If I were not Alexander, I would wish to be Diogenes." After a life spent in the greatest misery and indigence, he died B.C. 324, in the 96th year of his age. He ordered his body to be carelessly thrown into a ditch, and some dust to be sprinkled over it. His orders were, however, disobeyed in this particular, and his friends honoured his remains with a magnificent funeral at Corinth. The inhabitants of Sinope raised statues to his memory; and the marble figure of a dog was placed on a high column erected on his tomb. His biographer has transmitted to posterity a number of his sayings, remarkable for their simplicity and moral tendency. The life of Diogenes, however, shrinks from the eye of a strict examination; he boasted of his poverty, and was so arrogant that many have observed that the virtues of Diogenes arose from pride and vanity, not from wisdom and sound philosophy. His morals were corrupted, and he gave way to the most vicious indulgences, and his unbounded wantonness has given occasion to some to observe, that the bottom of his tub would not bear too close an examination. Diog. in vita.—Plut. in Apoph.—Cic. de Nat. D. 3, 36, &c.——A stoic of Babylon, disciple of Chrysippus. He went to Athens, and was sent as ambassador to Rome, with Carneades and Critolaus, 155 years B.C. He died in the 88th year of his age, after a life of the most exemplary virtue. Some suppose that he was strangled by order of Antiochus king of Syria, for speaking disrespectfully of his family in one of his treatises. Quintil. 1, 1.—Athen. 5, 11.—Cic. de Offic. 3, 51.——A native of Apollonia, celebrated for his knowledge of philosophy and physic. He was pupil to Anaxagoras. Diog. in vita.——Laertius, so called from his birth-place, Laertes in Cilicia. He wrote the lives of the philosophers in ten books, which are still extant. The period when he lived is not exactly known, but it is thought to have been during the reigns of Septimius Severus and Caracalla. The title of his work is as follows: Φιλοσόφων ἐν ἐπιτομῇ τρισκαιδεκάτου καὶ ἀποφθεγμάτων τῶν ἐν φιλοσοφίᾳ εὐδοκιμησάντων. "Philosophic History of the lives, opinions, and apophthegms, of celebrated philosophers." The author divides all the Greek philosophers into two classes, those of the Ionic and those of the Italic school. He derives the first from Anaximander, the second from Pythagoras. After Socrates, he divides the Ionian philosophers into three branches: 1st, Plato and the Academics down to Clitomachus; 2d, the Cynics down to Chrysippus; 3d, Aristotle and Theophrastus. The series of Italic philosophers consists, after Pythagoras, of the following: Telanges, Xenophanes, Parmenides, Zeno of Elea, Leucippus, Democritus, and others down to Epicurus. The first seven books are devoted to the Ionic philosophers; the last three treat of the Italic school. The work of Dionysius is one of the most valuable that has come down to us, by reason of the numerous facts and notices with which it supplies us, as well as the great number of passages cited in the course of it, from works that are now lost. The author was of no particular sect, except it be that he leaned a little to the side of Epicurus. He is extremely impartial, but he is credulous, often inexact, and sometimes without critical acumen or judgment. The best editions of Diogenes are, that of Meibomius, Amst. 1692, 2 vols 4to, and that of Hübner, Lips. 1828, 2 vols 8vo.——There was a philosopher of that name, who attended Alexander in his Asiatic expedition, for the purpose of marking out and delineating his march, &c.

DIOGENUS, a man who conspired with Dymnus against Alexander. Curt. 6, 7.

DIOGNETUS, a philosopher, who instructed Marcus Aurelius in philosophy, and in writing dialogues. There is extant, among the works of St. Justin, a letter to Diognetus, supposed to be this person, on the false gods worshipped in those times. This letter is considered by historians as one of the most valuable remains of ecclesiastical antiquity, containing an interesting account of the life and manners of the primitive Christians.

DIOMEDA, a daughter of Phorbas, whom Achilles brought from Lemnos, to be his mistress after the loss of Briseis. Homer. Il. 9, 661.

DIOMEDES, son of Tydeus and Deipbyle, was king of Ætolia, and one of the bravest of the Grecian chiefs in the Trojan war. He engaged Hector and Æneas, and by repeated acts of valour obtained much military glory. He went with Ulysses to steal the Palladium from the temple of Minerva at Troy; and assisted in murdering Rhesus, king of Thrace, and carrying away his horses. At his return from the siege of Troy, he lost his way in the darkness of the night, and landed in Attica, where his companions plundered the country, and lost the Trojan Palladium. During his long absence, his wife Ægiale forgot her marriage vows, and prostituted herself to Cometis, one of her servants. This lasciviousness of the queen was attributed by some to the resentment of Venus, whom Diomedes had severely wounded in the arm in a battle before Troy. The infidelity of Ægiale was highly displeasing to Diomedes. He resolved to abandon his native country which was the seat of his disgrace, and the attempts of his wife to take away his life, according to some accounts, did not a little contribute to hasten his departure. He came to that part of Italy which has been called Magna Græcia, where he built a city, called Argyrippa and married the daughter of Daunus, the king of the country. He died there in extreme old age, or, according to certain tradition, he perished by the hand of his father-in-law. His death was greatly lamented by his companions, who, in the excess of their grief were changed into birds resembling swans. These birds took flight into some neighbouring islands in the Adriatic, (Vid Diomedis Insulæ) and became remarkable for the tameness with which they approached the Greeks, and for the horror with which they shunned all other nations. They are called the birds of Diomedes. Altars were raised to Diomedes, as to a god, one of which Strabo mentions at Tamynus. Virg Æn. 1, 756. 11, 243, &c.—Ovid. Met 14, fab 10.—Apollod. 1, 8. 3, 7.—Hygin fab 97, 112 et 113.—Paus. 2, 30.—A king of Thrace, son of Mars and Cyrene, who fed his horses with human flesh. It was one of the labours of Hercules to destroy him; and accordingly the hero, attended with some of his friends, attacked the inhuman tyrant, and gave him to be devoured by his own horses which he had fed so barbarously. Diod 4.—Paus 3, 18.—Apollod 2, 5.

DIOMEDIS INSULÆ, two small islands opposite the Sinus Uriæ, and at no great distance from the coast of Apulia. They are now the Islands of Tremiti. One of these islands was called Teutria, and the other Diomedea or Tremitus. Strab. 6.—Plin. 3, 26. 10, 44.—Tacit. Ann. 4 71.

DIOMEDON, an Athenian general, put to death for his negligence at Arginusæ. Thucyd. 8, 19.—A man of Cyzicus, in the interest of Artaxerxes. C. Nep in Ep.

DION. Vid. Dium.

DION, a Syracusan, son of Hipparinus, famous for his abilities, his power, and his misfortunes. He was related to Dionysius the tyrant, and obtained of him, together with the philosopher Plato, who, at his request had come to reside at the court of Syracuse, to lay aside the supreme power. His great popularity rendered him odious in the eyes of the tyrant, who through fear or jealousy, banished him to Greece. There he collected a numerous force, and, encouraged by the influence of his name, and the hatred of his enemy, he resolved to free his country from tyranny. He entered the port of Syracuse only with two ships, and in three days reduced under his power an empire which had already subsisted for fifty years, and which was guarded by 500 ships of war, and 100 000 foot, and 10,000 horse. The tyrant, abandoned by all, fled to Corinth, and Dion, fearful of the ambition or rivalship of the Sicilian nobles, kept the sovereign power in his own hands, and displayed in his administration the views of a man who considered national prosperity and individual happiness as inseparable from his own personal security. When his government, however, seemed to promise the Sicilians the revival of liberty and of public confidence, he was shamefully betrayed and murdered by one of his familiar friends, called Callicrates, or Callipus, 354 years before the christian era, in the fifty fifth year of his age, and four years after his return from Peloponnesus. His death was universally lamented by the Syracusans, who had witnessed his virtues and esteemed his character, and a monument was by their gratitude raised to his memory. Diod 16.—C. Nep. in vità.—Cassius Cocceianus, a native of Nicæa in Bithynia. His father's name was Cassius Apronianus. He was raised to the greatest offices of state in the Roman empire by Pertinax and his three successors. Naturally fond of study, he improved himself by unwearied application, and was ten years in collecting materials for a history of Rome, which he made public in eighty books, after a laborious employment of twelve years in composing it. This valuable history began with the arrival of Æneas in Italy, and was continued down to the eighth year of the reign of the emperor Alexander Severus, when Dion was a second time consul. The first thirty-four books and part of the thirty fifth are lost, the twenty-five following are mutilated, and fragments are all we possess of the last twenty. In the compilation of his extensive history, Dion proposed to himself Thucydides for a model; but he is not perfectly happy in his imitation. His style is clear and easy, and his reflections are judicious; but upon the whole he is credulous, and the bigoted slave of partiality, satire, and flattery. He inveighs against the republican principles of Brutus and Cicero, and extols the cause of Cæsar, hence is the object of his satire, and he represents him as debauched and licentious in his morals. Dion flourished about the 230th year of the christian era. The best edition of his works is that of Fabricius, completed by Reimar, 2 vols fol. Hamb. 1750.

DIONÆA, a surname of Venus, as the supposed daughter of Jupiter and Dione.

DIONE, a nymph, daughter of Nereus and Doris. She was mother of Venus, by Jupiter, according to Homer and others. Hesiod, however, gives Venus a different origin. (Vid. Venus.) Venus is herself sometimes called Dione. Virg. Æn. 3, 19.—Homer. Il. 5, 381.—Stat. Sylv. 1, 1, 86.

DIONYSIA, festivals in honour of Bacchus among the Greeks. Their form and solemnity were first introduced into Greece from Egypt by a certain Melampus, and if we admit that Bacchus is the same as Isis, the Dionysia of the Greeks are the same as the festivals celebrated by the Egyptians in honour of Isis. They were observed at Athens with more splendour and ceremonious superstition than in any other part of Greece. The years were numbered by their celebration. The Archon assisted at the solemnity, and the priests that officiated were honoured with the most dignified seats at the public games. At first they were celebrated with great simplicity, and the time was consecrated to mirth. It was then usual to bring a vessel of wine adorned with a vine branch, after which followed a goat, a basket of figs, and the phallus. The worshippers imitated in their dress and actions the poetical fictions concerning Bacchus. They clothed themselves in fawns' skins, fine linen, and mitres; they carried thyrsi, drums, pipes, and flutes, and crowned themselves with garlands of ivy, vine, fir, &c. Some imitated Silenus, Pan, and the Satyrs by the uncouth manner of their dress, and their fantastical motions. Some rode upon asses, and others drove the goats to slaughter for the sacrifice. In this manner both sexes joined in the solemnity, and ran about the hills and country, nodding their heads, dancing in ridiculous postures, and filling the air with hideous shrieks and shouts, and crying aloud, Evoe! Bacche! Io! Io! Evoe! Iacche! Io Bacche! Evoe! With such solemnities were the festivals of Bacchus celebrated by the Greeks, particularly the Athenians. In one of these there followed a number of persons carrying sacred vessels, one of which contained water. After these came a select number of noble virgins, carrying little baskets of gold filled with all sorts of fruits. This was the most mysterious part of the solemnity. Serpents were sometimes put in the baskets, and by their wreathing and crawling out they amused and astonished the beholders. After the virgins, followed a company of men carrying poles, at the end of which were fastened φαλλοί. The heads of these men, who were called φαλλοφόροι, were crowned with ivy and violets, and their faces covered with other herbs. They marched singing songs upon the occasion of the festivals, called φαλλικὰ ἄσματα. Next to the φαλλοφόροι followed the ληναΐαι in women's apparel, with white striped garments reaching to the ground, their heads were decked with garlands and on their hands they wore gloves composed of flowers. Their gestures and actions were like those of a drunk man. Besides these, there were a number of persons called λικνοφόροι, who carried the λίκνον, or mystical van of Bacchus, without their attendance none of the festivals of Bacchus were celebrated with due solemnity, and on that account the god is often called Λικνίτης. The festivals of Bacchus were almost innumerable. The names of the most celebrated were the Dionysia ἀγραΐκὰ ἐν Λίμναις in Attica. The chief persons that officiated were fourteen women called γεραραί, venerable. They were appointed by one of the archons, and before their appointment they solemnly took an oath before the archon or his wife, that their body was free from all pollution. ——The greater Dionysia, sometimes called τὰ κατ' ἄστυ, or τὰ κατ' ἄστει, as being celebrated within the city, were the most famous. They were supposed to be the same as the preceding.——The less Dionysia, sometimes called τὰ κατ' ἀγροὺς, because celebrated in the country, or Λῆναια, from ληνὸς, a wine press, were, to all appearance, a preparation for the greater festivals. They were celebrated in autumn. —— The Dionysia Βραυρωνία, or Brauronia, at Brauron in Attica, were a scene of lewdness, extravagance, and debauchery. —— The Dionysia Νυκτήλια were observed by the Athenians in honour of Bacchus Nyctelius. It was unlawful to reveal whatever was seen or done during the celebration. —— The Dionysia, called Διασφάγια, because human victims were offered to the god, or because the priests imitated the eating of raw flesh, were celebrated with much solemnity. The priests put serpents in their hair, and by the wildness of their looks, and the oddity of their actions, they feigned insanity. —— The Dionysia Ἀγρώνια were yearly observed in Arcadia, and the children who had been instructed in the music of Philoxenus and Timotheus, were introduced in a theatre, where they celebrated the festivals of Bacchus by entertaining the spectators with songs, dances, and different exhibitions. There were besides these others of inferior note. There was also one observed every three years, called Dionysia τριετηρικὰ, and it is said that Bacchus instituted it himself in commemoration of his Indian expedition in which he spent three years. There is also another, celebrated every fifth year, as mentioned by the scholiast of Aristophanes. —— All these festivals in honour of the god of wine, were celebrated by the Greeks with great licentiousness, and they contributed much to the corruption of morals among all ranks of people. They were also introduced into Etruria, and from thence to Rome. Among the Romans, both sexes promiscuously joined in the celebration during the darkness of night. The drunkenness, the debauchery, and impure actions and indulgences, which soon prevailed at the solemnity, called aloud for the interference of the senate, and the consuls Sp. Posthumius Albinus, and Q. Martius Philippus made a strict examination concerning the propriety and superstitious forms of the Bacchanalia. The disorder and pollution which were practised with impunity by no less than 7,000 votaries of either sex were beheld with horror and astonishment by the consuls, and the Bacchanalia were for ever banished from Rome by a decree of the senate. They were again re instituted there in length of time, but not with such licentiousness as before. Ewing on Bacc.—Pong. Ar. n. 11. 737.—Dod. 1.—Ovid. Met. l. 4. 23. 4. 391. & 5. 7.

DIONYSIADES, two small islands lying off the north east part of the island of Crete. —— Festivals in honour of Bacchus. Pitis. 3. 14.

DIONYSIAS a town of Egypt, situate at the south western extremity of the lake Mœris. It is now called Beled Kerun.

DIONYSIODORUS a famous geometer. Plin. 2. 101. —— A Tarentine who obtained a prize at Olympia in the hundredth Olympiad.

DIONYSIUS I. or the elder, was son of Hermocrates. He signalized himself in the wars which the Syracusans carried on against the Carthaginians, and taking advantage of the power lodged in his hands, he made himself absolute at Syracuse. To strengthen himself in his usurpation, and acquire popularity, he increased the pay of the soldiers, and recalled those that had been banished. He vowed eternal enmity against Carthage, and experienced various success in his wars against that republic. He was ambitious of being thought a poet, and his brother Theodorus was commissioned to go to Olympia and repeat there some verses in his name, with other competitors for the poetical prizes. His expectations were frustrated, and his poetry was received with groans and hisses. He was not, however, so unsuccessful at Athens, where a poetical prize was publicly adjudged to one of his compositions. This victory gave him more pleasure than all the victories he had ever obtained in the field of battle. His tyranny and cruelty at home rendered him odious in the eyes of his subjects and he became so suspicious that he never admitted his wife or children to his private apartments, with out a previous examination of their garments. He never trusted his head to a barber but always burnt his beard. He made a subterraneous cave in a rock, said to be still extant, in the form of a human ear, which measured 80 feet in height, and 250 in length. It was called the ear of Dionysius. The sounds of this subterraneous cave were all necessarily directed to one common tympanum, which had a communication with an adjoining room, where Dionysius spent the greatest part of his time to hear whatever was said by those whom his suspicion and cruelty had confined in the apartments above. The artists that had been employed in making this cave were all put to death by order of the tyrant, for fear of their revealing to what purposes a work of such uncommon construction was to be appropriated. His impiety and sacrilege were as conspicuous as his suspicious credulity. He took a golden mantle from the statue of Jupiter, observing that the son of Saturn had a covering too warm for the summer and too cold for the winter, and he placed one of wool instead. He also robbed Æsculapius of his golden beard and plundered the temple of Proserpine. He died of an indigestion in the sixty-third year of his age, B.C 308, after a reign of thirty-eight years. Authors, however, are divided about the manner of his death, and some are of opinion that he died a violent death. Some suppose that this tyrant invented the catapulta, an engine which proved of infinite service for the discharging of showers of darts and stones in the time of a siege. Diod Ed. 14, &c.—Justin. 20 1, &c.—Xenoph. Hist. Græc.—C. Nep. Timol.—Plut. in Dion——The second of that name, surnamed the younger, was son of Dionysius, the 1st, by Doris. He succeeded his father as tyrant of Sicily, and by the advice of Dion his brother-in law, he invited the philosopher Plato to his court, under whom he devoted himself for a while to studious pursuits. The philosopher enlarging on the virtues of justice and moderation, advised him to lay aside the supreme power, and in his admonitions he was warmly seconded by Dion. Dionysius, whose character was violent and irritable, not only rejected the exhortations of the philosopher, but cruelly ordered him to be seized and publicly sold as a slave. Dion, likewise, on account of his great popularity, soon became suspected by the tyrant; he was severely abused and insulted in his family, and his wife given in marriage to another. Such a violent behaviour was highly resented; Dion, who had been dishonourably banished, collected some forces in Greece, and in three days rendered himself master of Syracuse, and expelled the tyrant, B C. 357. (Vid Dion.) Dionysius retired to Locri, where he behaved with the greatest oppression and was ejected by the citizens. He recovered Syracuse ten years after his expulsion, but his triumph was short, and the Corinthians, under the conduct of Timoleon obliged him to abandon the city. He fled to Corinth, where to support himself he kept a school, as Cicero observes, that he might still continue to possess absolute authority, and as he could not command over men, that he might still exercise his power over boys. It is said that he died from an excess of joy, when he heard that a tragedy of his own composition had been rewarded with a poetical prize. Dionysius was as cruel as his father, but he did not, like him, possess the art of retaining his power. This was seen and remarked by the old man, who, when he saw his son attempting to debauch the wives of some of his subjects, asked him with the greatest indignation, whether he had ever heard of his having acted so brutal a part in his younger days. No, answered the son, because you were not the son of a king. Well, my son, replied the old man, never shalt thou be the father of a king. Justin. 21, 1, 2, &c. —Diod. 15, &c.—Ælian. V. H. 9, 8—Quintil. 8, 3—C. Nep. in Dion—Cic Tusc 5, 2.——An historian of Halicarnassus, who left his country and came to reside at Rome, that he might carefully study all the Greek and Latin writers, whose compositions treated of the Roman history. He formed an acquaintance with all the learned of the age, and derived much information from their company and conversation. After an unremitted application during twenty-four years, he gave to the world his Roman antiquities in twenty books, of which only the eleven first are now extant, nearly containing the account of 312 years. His composition has been greatly valued by the ancients as well as the moderns for the easiness of his style, the fidelity of his chronology, and the judiciousness of his remarks and criticism. Like a faithful historian, he never mentioned any thing, but what was authenticated, and he totally disregarded the fabulous traditions which fill and disgrace the pages of both his predecessors and followers. To the merits of the elegant historian, Dionysius as may be seen in his treatises, has also added the equally respectable character of the eloquent orator, the critic, and the politician. He lived during the Augustan age, and came to Rome about thirty years before the christian era. The best editions of his works are that of Hudson, 2 vols, fol. Oxon. 1704, and that of Reiske, 6 vols. 8vo Lips. 1774.——A tyrant of Heraclea in Pontus, in the age of Alexander the Great. After the death of the conqueror and of Perdiccas he married Amastris, the niece of king Darius, and assumed the title of king. He was of such an uncommon corpulence that he never exposed his person in public, and when he gave audience to foreign ambassadors, he always placed himself in a chair which was conveniently made to hide his face and person from the eyes of the spectators. When he was asleep, it was impossible to awake him without boring his flesh with pins. He died in the fifty fifth year of his age. As his reign was remarkable for mildness and popularity, his death was sorely lamented by his subjects. He left two sons and a daughter, and appointed his widow queen regent.——A surname of Bacchus, supposed to be derived Διο τοῦ Διος and Νύσσα, because he was son of Jupiter and educated at Nysa.——A native of Chalcis, who wrote a book entitled Μίσεις or, the tyrants of cities——A commander of the Ionian fleet against the Persians, who went to plunder Phœnicia. Herod 6, 17——A philosopher of Heraclea, disciple to Zeno. He starved himself to death, B C. 270, in the eighty-first year of his age. Diog.——A native of Alexandria, in Susiana. The period when he flourished is not exactly known, but it is supposed to have been about 80 B C. He was surnamed Periegeta, from a geographical treatise which he wrote in Greek hexameters, entitled Περιήγησις οἰκουμένης, "Description of the habitable world." This poem, though useful in the geographical information which it conveys, displays not much of the genius or fire of the poetical muse, except in very few passages. The best editions of his treatise, are that of H. Stephens, in his collection, 4to, 1577; that of Hill, 8vo. Lond 1683 often reprinted; and that of Matthiæ, at the end of his Aratus, 8vo Francof. 1817.——A christian writer, A. D 492, called Areopagita, from his being a member of the court of Areopagus at Athens. He was converted to christianity by the preaching of St Paul. He was consecrated bishop of Athens, and suffered martyrdom, but when, or in what manner, does not appear. The works ascribed to him are allowed to be spurious——Surnamed Exiguus, or the Little, on account of the shortness of his stature, was a Scythian monk of the sixth century, who drew up a body of canons, and another of decretals. To him is attributed the mode of computing the time of Easter, and also the way of counting the years from the birth of Christ. ——A Greek poet and musician, and the author of the words and music of three hymns addressed to Calliope, Apollo, and Nemesis. They were published by Vincenzo Galilei, at Florence, in 1581; and again by Dr Fell, at Oxford, in 1672, from a manuscript found among the papers of archbishop Usher.——A native of Thrace, generally called the Rhodian, because he lived there. He wrote some grammatical treatises and commentaries, B. C. 61 Strab 14.

DIONYSOPŌLIS, a town of India, supposed to correspond with the modern Nagar, on the western bank of the river Coor.——A town of Lower Mœsia, in the vicinity of the Euxine sea. Pliny says that it was also called Crunos, but Pomponius Mela says, that Crunos was the port of Dionysopolis It is said to have obtained its name from a statue of Bacchus, which was carried by sea to this place

DIOPHANES, a man who joined Peloponnesus to the Achæan league. Paus 8, 30 ——A rhetorician of Mitylene intimate with Tib. Gracchus, whom he instructed in oratory. Cic. Br, 27.—Plut in Gracchus.

DIOPHANTUS, an Athenian general of the Greek mercenary troops in the service of Nectanebus, king of Egypt. Diod. 16.——A mathematician of Alexandria, who, according to the most received opinion, was contemporary with the emperor Julian. His reputation was so high among the ancients, that they ranked him with Pythagoras and Euclid, and it appears that he attained to the advanced age of eighty-four. He wrote thirteen books of arithmetic or algebra, which only six remain. The best edition is that of Bachet, re-published with additional notes of M. de Fermat, by the son of the latter, at Toulouse, 1670, in folio.

DIOPŒNUS, a noble sculptor of Crete. Plin. 36, 4.

DIOPŌLIS, a town of Armenia Minor, formerly called Cabira, and afterwards Sebaste. Strab. 12.

DIORES, a friend of Æneas, killed by Turnus. He had engaged in the games exhibited by Æneas on his father's tomb in Sicily. Virg. Æn. 5, 297. 12, 509.

DIORYCTUS, a place of Acarnania, where a canal was cut (διά, ὀρύσσω) to make Leucadia an island. (Vid. Leucadia). Plin. 4, 1.

DIOSCORĪDES, a native of Anazarbus in Cilicia, who lived, according to some, in the time of Antony and Cleopatra, while others place him in the reign of Nero. He wrote a work on the Materia Medica (Περὶ ὕλης ἰατρικῆς), which for several ages was accepted and appealed to by the professors of the healing art. Six or seven hundred plants are mentioned by Dioscorides, and some of his prescriptions have descended to modern times. The best edition of his works is that of Sarracenus, fol., Francof. 1598.——A disciple of Isocrates, who wrote a work on the government of Lacedæmon.——A poet of Alexandria, some of whose epigrams are preserved in the Anthology.——An astrologer sent ambassador by Julius Cæsar to Achillas, &c. Cæs Bell. Civ 3, 109.

DIOSCORIDI INSULA, or DIOSCORIDA, an island situate at the south of the entrance of the Arabic gulf, and now called Socotora. It was inhabited by a mixed population of Arabians, Indians, and Greeks. It produced a great quantity of aloes, which the ancients held in high estimation.

DIOSCŪRI, or sons of Jupiter, a name given to Castor and Pollux. There were festivals in their honour, called Dioscuria, celebrated by the people of Coreyra, and chiefly by the Lacedæmonians. They were observed with much jovial festivity. The people made a free use of the gifts of Bacchus, and diverted themselves with sports, of which wrestling matches always made a part.

DIOSCURIAS, now Iskuria, a maritime town of Colchis, at the mouth of the small river Charus. It was anciently called Aea, and, in process of time, Sebastopolis It was established, according to Arrian, by a colony of Milesians. Pomponius Mela says, that it was founded by Castor and Pollux, who made a voyage to Colchis, along with Jason, in the Argonautic expedition

DIOSPŌLIS MAGNA, a famous city of Egypt. (Vid. Thebæ.)——Parva, a city of Egypt, west of Tentyra, and on the western side of the Nile It was the capital of the nome Diospolites ——A city of Palestine, called also Lydda. It was situated in a plain, thirty-two miles north-west of Jerusalem. It was destroyed by the Saracens, who at a later period built about two geographical miles to the east of its site, the modern city of Ramlat.

DIOTIME, a woman who gave lectures upon philosophy, which Socrates attended. Plut in Symp.

DIOTIMUS, a stoic, who flourished 55 B. C.

DIOXIPPE, one of the Danaides. Apollod. 2, 1.

DIOXIPPUS, a soldier of Alexandria, who killed one of his fellow-soldiers in a fury, &c. Ælian. ——A Trojan killed by Turnus. Virg. Æn. 9, 574.

DIPÆÆ, a place of Peloponnesus, where a battle was fought between the Arcadians and Spartans Herod. 9, 35.

DIPHILAS, a man sent to Rhodes by the Spartans, to destroy the Athenian faction there. Diod. 14 ——A governor of Babylon in the interest of Antigonus. Id. 19.

DIPHILUS, an Athenian general, A U C 311. ——An architect so slow in finishing his works, that Dyphilo tardior became a proverb. Cic. ad Attic. 3, ep. 1.

DIPHORĪDAS, one of the Ephori at Sparta. Plut. in Ages.

DIPŌLIS, a name given to Lemnos, as having two cities, Hephæstia and Myrina.

DIPSAS (-antis), a river of Cilicia, flowing from mount Taurus. Lucan 3, 255.——(-adis). a profligate and incontinent woman mentioned by Ovid. Am. 1, 8.——A species of serpent, whose bite is said to produce such a thirst as proves mortal; whence the Greeks called it διψάς, or, thirsty. In Latin, it is called situla, a pail. Moses speaks of it in Deut 8, 15 The Hebrew name is tsimmon, answering to the Greek in meaning. Lucan. 9.

DIPYLON, one of the gates of Athens.

DIRÆ, the daughters of Acheron and Nox, who persecuted the souls of the guilty. They are the same as the Furies, and some suppose that they are called Furies in hell, Harpies on earth, and Diræ in heaven. They were represented as standing near the throne of Jupiter, in an attitude which expressed their eagerness to receive his orders, and the power of tormenting the guilty on earth with the most excruciating punishments. Virg. Æn. 4, 473. 8, 701.

DIRCE, a woman whom Lycus, king of Thebes, married after he had divorced Antiope. When Antiope became pregnant by Jupiter, Dirce suspected her husband of infidelity to her bed, and imprisoned Antiope, whom she tormented with the greatest cruelty, by insults of the most malignant nature, and all the horrors of hunger, of thirst, of cold, and of excessive heat. Antiope escaped from her confinement, and brought forth Amphion and Zethus on mount Cithæron. When these children were informed of the cruelties to which their mother had been exposed, they besieged Thebes, put Lycus to death, and tied the cruel Dirce to the tail of a wild bull, which dragged her over rocks and mountains, and exposed her to the most poignant pains, till the gods, pitying her fate, changed her into a fountain, in the neighbourhood of Thebes. According to some accounts, Antiope was mother of Amphion and Zethus, before she was confined and exposed to the tyranny of Dirce (Id. Amphion, Antiope) Propert. 3, 15, 37.—Paus. 9, 26.—Ælian V. H. 12, 37.—Lucan. 4, 176. 4, 640.——A fountain of Bœotia, sacred to the muses, whence Pindar the Theban poet is called Dircæus Cygnus. Horat. Od. 4, 2, 25.

DIRCENNA, a cold fountain of Spain, near Bilbilis Martial. 1, ep. 50, 17.

DIRPHYIA, a surname of Juno, from Dirphys, a mountain of Bœotia, where the goddess had a temple.

DIS, a god of riches among the Gauls, supposed to be the same as Pluto the god of hell. The inhabitants of Gaul considered themselves descended from that deity. Cæs. Bell. G. 6.—Tacit. Hist. 1, 84.

DISCORDIA, a malevolent deity, daughter of Nox, and sister to Nemesis, the Fates, and Death. She was driven from heaven by Jupiter, because she sowed dissensions among the gods, and was the cause of continual quarrels. When the nuptials of Peleus and Thetis were celebrated, the goddess of discord was not invited, and this seeming neglect so irritated her, that she threw an apple into the midst of the assembly of the gods, with the inscription of detur pulchriori. This apple was the cause of the ruin of Troy, and of infinite misfortunes to the Greeks (Id. Paris) The goddess of discord is represented with a pale ghastly look, her garment is torn, her eyes sparkle with fire, and she holds a dagger concealed in her bosom. Her head is generally entwined with serpents, and she is attended by Bellona. She is supposed to be the cause of all the dissensions, murders, wars, and quarrels, which arise upon earth, public as well as private. Virg. Æn. 8, 702.—Hesiod Theogn. 225.

DITHYRAMBUS, a surname of Bacchus, either because he was twice born, or because Ceres collected and restored life to his limbs, that had been cut to pieces in the wars of the giants, or because the cave where he was brought up had two entrances. The hymns sung in his honour were called Dithyrambics, and expressed an enthusiastic poetical fury, such as became intoxication. Horat. Od. 4, 2, 10.

DIUM, a city of Macedonia, situated at the foot of mount Olympus, about seven stadia from the Sinus Thermaicus, or Gulph of Salonica. It is now Standia. Liv. 44, 6 et 7.

DIVI, a name chiefly appropriated to those who were made gods after death, such as heroes, and warriors, or the Lares, and Penates, and other domestic gods.

DIVITIACUS, one of the leading men among the Ædui. He went to Rome to solicit assistance against Ariovistus, and he gained the esteem and friendship of Cæsar and of Cicero. Cæs. B. G. 1, 3 et 19. 6, 11.—Cic. de Div. 1, 41.

DIVODURUM, the chief city of the Mediomatrici, a people of Gallia Belgica, who were located on the Moselle, or Mosella. Its name was afterwards changed to that of the people itself, and is now Metz.

DIVUS FIDIUS, a god of the Sabines, worshipped also at Rome. Dionys.

DOCILIS, a gladiator at Rome, mentioned by Horat. 1, ep. 18, 19.

DOCIMUS, a man of Tarentum, deprived of his military dignity by Philip, son of Amyntas, for indulging himself with hot baths. Polyæn. 5.——An officer of Perdiccas, taken by Antigonus. Diod. 18.

DODONA, a town of Epirus, placed by some writers in Thesprotia, and by others in Molossia; but Strabo reconciles these conflicting opinions, by informing us that anciently it belonged to Thesprotia, and afterwards to Molossia, for it stood on the borders of these two districts. There was in its neighbourhood a celebrated oracle of Jupiter. The town and temple of the god were first built by Deucalion, after the universal deluge, or by Pelasgus, according to others. It was supposed to be the most ancient oracle of all Greece, and, according to the traditions of the Egyptians, mentioned by Herodotus, it was founded by a dove. Two black doves, as he relates, took their flight from the city of Thebes, in Egypt, one of which flew to the temple of Jupiter Ammon, and the other to Dodona, where, with a human voice, they acquainted the inhabitants of the country that Jupiter had consecrated the ground, which in future would give oracles. The extensive grove which surrounded Jupiter's temple was endowed with the gift of prophecy, and oracles were frequently delivered by the sacred oaks, and by the doves which inhabited the place. This fabulous tradition of the oracular power of the doves, is explained by Herodotus, who observes, that some Phœnicians carried away two priestesses from Egypt, one of whom went to fix her residence at Dodona, where the oracle was established. It may further be observed, that the fable might have been founded upon the double meaning of the word πέλειαι, which signifies doves, in most parts of Greece, while in the dialect of the Epirots, it implies old women. In ancient times the oracles were delivered by the murmuring of a neighbouring fountain, but the custom was afterwards changed. Large kettles were suspended in the air near a brazen statue, which held a lash in its hand. When the wind blew strong, the statue was agitated and struck against one of the kettles, which communicated the motion to all the rest, and raised that clattering and discordant din, which continued for a while, and from which the artifice of the priests drew their predictions. Some suppose that the noise was occasioned by the shaking of the leaves and boughs of an old oak, which the superstition of the people frequently consulted, and from which they pretended to receive oracles. It may be observed, with more probability, that the oracles were delivered by the priests, who, by artfully concealing themselves behind the oaks, gave occasion to the superstitious multitude to believe that the trees were endowed with the power of prophecy. As the ship Argo was built with some of the oaks of the forest of Dodona, there were some beams in the vessel which gave oracles to the Argonauts, and warned them against the approach of calamity. Within the forest of Dodona there was a famous fountain, which at mid-day was always dry, but at midnight attained its full height. This fountain was also said to extinguish burning torches when plunged into it, but on approaching them closely to the surface of the water they were re-lighted. The oracles of Dodona were originally delivered by men, but afterwards by females. (Vid. Dodonides.) Plin. 2, 103.—Herod. 2, 57.—Mela, 2, 3.—Homer Od. 14. Il.—Paus. 7, 21.—Strab 17.—Plut. in Pyrrh.—Apollod. 1, 9.—Lucan 6, 427.—Ovid. Trist. 4, el. 8, 23.

DODONÆUS, a surname of Jupiter from Dodona.

DODŌNE, a daughter of Jupiter and Europa. ——A fountain in the forest of Dodona. Vid. Dodona

DODONIDES, the priestesses who gave oracles in the temple of Jupiter in Dodona. According to some traditions, the temple was originally inhabited by seven daughters of Atlas, who nursed Bacchus. Their names were Ambrosia, Eudora, Pasithoe, Pytho, Plexaure, Coronis, Tythe or Tycho. In the latter ages the oracles were always delivered by three old women, which custom was first established when Jupiter enjoyed the company of Dione, whom he permitted to receive divine honour in his temple at Dodona. The Bœotians were the only people of Greece who received their oracles at Dodona from men, for reasons which Strabo fully explains.

DOLABELLA, P. CORN a Roman who married the daughter of Cicero, from whom afterwards he was by mutual agreement divorced. During the civil wars, he warmly espoused the interest of Julius Cæsar, whom he accompanied at the famous battles at Pharsalia, Africa, and Munda. He was made consul by his patron, though M. Antony his colleague opposed it. After the death of Julius Cæsar, he seemed inclined to support the republican party of Brutus, but the intrigues of Antony gained him over, and the hopes of paying the immense debts which he had contracted, produced in him a willingness to espouse innovation, and to effect the ruin of the commonwealth. As a reward for his attachment, Antony procured him the government of Syria, which had before been promised to Cassius. Eager to render himself opulent and independent, Dolabella departed for his province, but the violence of his character proved his ruin. At Smyrna, he seized, and with great cruelty put to death, Trebonius, one of Cæsar's murderers, for which shameful conduct he was declared an enemy to the republic by the Roman senate. In consequence of this he was besieged by Cassius in Laodicea, and when he saw that all was lost, he killed himself, in the twenty-seventh year of his age. He was of a small stature, which gave occasion to his father-in-law to ask him once when he entered his house, who had tied him so cleverly to his sword. Cic. Fam. 3, ep. 15, 3, ep. 10, 9.—Att. 6, ep. 6, &c.—Hor. 1, 2.—Dio, 41, 49, 43, 51, 44, 53.—Sueton. Aug 56.—Liv. 113.—Vel. Pat. 2, 58.——A proconsul of Africa.——Cneus, a city prætor, afterwards governor of Cilicia, where Verres was his quæstor. Cic. Verr. 1, 15, &c.——Another consul with Decius, A. U. C. 672. He triumphed over the Thracians, and was accused by Cæsar of extortion, and defended by Cotta and Hortensius, and acquitted. Cic. Br. 92.—Vis. 19.—Suet. Cæs. 4.——Another, who conquered the Gauls, Etrurians, and Boii, at the lake Vadimonis, B. C. 283.——The family of the Dolabellæ distinguished themselves at Rome, and one of them, L. Corn conquered Lusitania, B. C. 93.

DOLICHAON, the father of the Hebrus, &c. Virg Æn. 10, 696

DOLICHE, a town of Thessaly, in the Perrhæbian district to the south east of Aracus. Liv. 42, 53.——A town of Syria, situated in the district Euphratensis, and north-west of Zeugma. It is now Dolue.

DOLIUS, a faithful servant of Ulysses Hom. Odyss 4, 675.

DOLON, a Trojan, son of Eumedes, famous for his swiftness. Being sent by Hector to spy the Grecian camp by night, he was seized by Diomedes and Ulysses, to whom he revealed the situation, schemes, and resolutions of his countrymen, with the hopes of escaping with his life. He was put to death by Diomedes, as a traitor. Homer. Il. 10, 314.—Virg. Æn. 12, 349, &c.

DOLONCI, a people of Thrace. Herod 6, 34.

DOLOPES, a people who inhabited that south-eastern corner of Thessaly, formed by the chain of Pindus, or rather Tymphrestus one side, and mount Othrys, branching out of it, on the other. They are supposed to have formed one of the twelve nations, or districts, which sent deputies to the Amphictyonic council These people possessed the isle of Scyros, and they are said to have been a body of corsairs who infested the Ægean sea. When Cimon took possession of their island, he expelled them from it. Their country was called Dolopia. Virg Æn. 2, 7.—Flacc. 2, 10.—Hom. Il 9, 480.—Liv. 36, 33.—Strab 9. —Plut in Cimon

DOLOPS, a Trojan, son of Lampus, killed by Menelaus. Homer, Il 15, 526.

DOMIDUCUS, a god who presided over marriage. Juno also was called Domiduca, from the power she was supposed to have in marriages.

DOMINICA, a daughter of Petronius, who married the emperor Valens

DOMITIA LEX, de Religione, was enacted by Domitius Ahenobarbus, the tribune, A. U. C. 650 It transferred the right of electing priests from the college to the people

DOMITIANUS, TITUS FLAVIUS, son of Vespasian and Flavia Domatilla, made himself emperor of Rome, at the death of his brother Titus, whom, according to some accounts, he destroyed by poison. The beginning of his reign promised happiness to the people, and tranquillity to the state, but their expectations were soon frustrated. Domitian became cruel, and gave way to incestuous and unnatural indulgences. He commanded himself to be called God and Lord in all the papers which were presented to him. He passed the greatest part of the day in catching flies and killing them with a bodkin, so that it was wittily answered by Vibius, to a person who asked him who was with the emperor, nobody, not even a fly. In the latter part of his reign Domitian became suspicious, and his anxieties were increased by the predictions of astrologers, but still more poignantly by the stings of remorse. He was so distrustful, even when alone, that round the terrace, where he usually walked, he built a wall with shining stones, that from them he might perceive, as in a looking-glass, whether any body followed him. All these precautions were unavailing; he perished by the hand of an assassin, the 18th of September, A. D. 96, in the 45th year of his age, and the 15th of his reign. He was the last of the twelve Cæsars. He distinguished himself for his love of learning, and in a little treatise, which he wrote upon the great care which ought to be taken of the hair to prevent baldness, he displayed much taste and elegance, according to the observations of his biographers. After his death he was publicly deprived by the senate of all the honours which had been profusely heaped upon him, and even his body was left in the open air without the honours of a funeral. This disgrace might proceed from the resentment of the senators, whom he had exposed to terror as well as to ridicule. He once assembled that august body, to know in what vessel a turbot might be most conveniently dressed. At another time they received a formal invitation to a feast, and when they arrived at the palace, they were introduced into a large gloomy hall hung with black, and lighted with a few glimmering tapers. In the middle were placed a number of coffins, on each of which was inscribed the name of some one of the invited senators. On a sudden a number of men burst into the room, clothed in black, with drawn swords and flaming torches, and after they had for some time terrified the guests, they permitted them to retire Such were the amusements and cruelties of a man, who, in the first part of his reign, was looked upon as the father of his people, and the restorer of learning and liberty. Suet in vita.—Eutrop 7.

DOMITILLA, FLAVIA, a woman who married Vespasian, by whom she had Titus a year after her marriage, and eleven years after Domitian. ——A niece of the emperor Domitian, by whom she was banished.

DOMITIUS DOMITIANUS, a general of Diocletian in Egypt. He assumed the imperial purple at Alexandria, A. D. 288, and supported the dignity of emperor for about two years. He died a violent death.——A consul with C. Fannius, A.U.C 631. He conquered the Arverni and Allobroges, and erected a trophy of his victory, and travelled through his province in military parade, mounted on an elephant. Flor. 3, 2.—Suet Ner. 2.—Liv 61.——Cneus Ahenobarbus, his son, was known for his integrity as a magistrate, and his firmness as a senator Though not naturally eloquent, he exerted his oratorical powers on the accusation of Jul. Silanus, and of M. Scaurus, and he displayed great uprightness of conduct when he not only refused to see, but even imprisoned a slave of Scaurus, who privately promised him intelligence by which his master might be more fatally criminated and condemned. He was the author of a law which transferred the right of electing the priests from the college to the people. Val. Max. 6, 5. 9, 1.—Vell. 2, 12.—Cic. Rull. 2, 7. In Deiot. 11. Qual. 2, 56. Brut. 45.—Plin. 17, 1.——Lucius Ahenobarbus, son of Cneus, early distinguished himself as the rival and enemy of Cæsar. By the influence of Pompey, he presided over the celebrated trial of Milo. When appointed by the senate to succeed Cæsar in Cisalpine Gaul, he showed his ignorance of military manœuvres, by throwing himself into Corfinium, instead of uniting his forces to those of Pompey, and so apprehensive was he of the resentment of his enemy, that he took poison to destroy himself. The clemency of Cæsar towards his adversaries made him repent his rashness, and he was greatly rejoiced to find that his slave had not given him, as he desired, a dose of poison, but a soporific potion Cæsar's kindness, however had no great weight on Domitius, as he soon after defended Marseilles against his lieutenants, and headed one of the wings of Pompey's army at the battle of Pharsalia. The ruin of Pompey proved fatal to his friend, who, as he fled from the field of battle, was slain by some horsemen; or, as Cicero says, by Antony Phil in Cic.—Seneca de Benef. 3.—Cic. Att. 9, ep 6, &c. Ad Fr. Ad Fam.—Sueton. Cæs. et Ner.——Cneus, son of Lucius by Marcia the sister of Cato of Utica, was with his father at the battle of Pharsalia, and he showed his attachment to the republican cause, by being of the number of Cæsar's assassins, though Suetonius denies it. He was intrusted by Brutus with the command of 50 ships to intercept the supplies of Antony and Augustus in Greece, and in the fatal battle of Philippi he had the good fortune to be the only one of the conspirators who escaped. He afterwards joined himself to Antony, by whose influence he was restored to the honours of the state; but when the triumvirate was dissolved by the ambition of the two rivals, Domitius, who despised the connexion with Cleopatra, and foresaw the ruin of Antony, joined himself to Augustus, and thus ensured his safety. He died soon after, of a fever brought on, says Plutarch, by remorse for his perfidy Sueton Aug. et Ner.—Cic. Fam. 6, ep. 22 Phil. 2, 11.—Paterc 2, 72 et 76.——Lucius, son of Cneus just mentioned, was engaged as an officer in the German wars under Tiberius, and known for his cruelty, insolence, and perfidy. He married Antonia the daughter of Antony and Octavia, by whom he had Cneus, the father of Nero by Agrippina, the daughter of Germanicus. Cneus was equally cruel and profligate as his father, and the vices of this unfortunate family seemed still to acquire greater strength and more dreadful features in the bloody character of Nero. Paterculus, however, with more unpardonable flattery than truth, has endeavoured to represent the character of these Domitii as respectable and praiseworthy. Sueton; Ner. Cal.—Tacit. Ann. 1, 63. 4, 44. 11, 11. 12, 64.——Cn. Ahenobarbus, a Roman consul, who conquered Bituitus the Gaul, and left 20,000 of the enemy on the field of battle, and took 3000 prisoners. Liv 33, 42. 34 42. 36, 37.——A grammarian in the reign of Adrian. He was remarkable for his virtues, and his melancholy disposition.——A consul, during whose consulate peace was concluded with Alexander king of Epirus. Liv. 8, 17 ——Cneus Calvinus, a Roman consul, A U.C. 709. He espoused the cause of Cæsar against Pompey, and was commissioned to oppose Scipio, over whom, after being himself defeated, he obtained a victory In the battle of Pharsalia, he had the command of the centre of Cæsar's army. He was rewarded for his conduct with the province of Asia, and though defeated by the superior forces of Pharnaces, he however, maintained his situation, and accompanied his friend into Africa. He was afterwards governor of Spain, where he decimated some of the soldiers for their ill conduct. Cic. Fluce. 12 Sext.

53.—Dio. 40, 17, &c. - Cæs. in B. C. 3, &c. Hirt. B. Alex. 9, &c.—Vell. Pat. 2, 78.——A consul under Caligula. He wrote some few things now lost.——A Latin poet, called also Marsus, in the age of Horace. He wrote epigrams, remarkable for little besides their indelicacy, and also a poem called Amazonis, on the wars of Hercules against the Amazons. Like Catullus and the other poets of his age, he sang the beauty of his mistress called Melænis, and devoted to the praise of ideal perfections perhaps talents which might better have been employed in celebrating the heroic actions of his countrymen Only three of his verses remain. Ovid. de Pont. 4, el. 16, 5 ——Afer, an orator, who was preceptor to Quintilian. He disgraced his talents by his adulation, and by practising the arts of an informer under Tiberius and his successors He was made a consul by Nero and died A D. 59.

DONATUS, Ælius, a grammarian, who flourished in the time of Constantine and was one of the preceptors of St Jerome Besides his commentaries on Virgil and Terence, he wrote an elementary work, in which he treated of the eight parts of speech individually ——A bishop of Numidia, promoter of a sect called Donatists, A D. 311.——Another bishop of Africa, of great learning and abilities. He was a zealous friend of the Donatists, who may be said to have received their name from him rather than the preceding He was banished from Carthage by his opponents, A.D 356, and died in exile.

DONILAUS, a prince of Gallogræcia, who assisted Pompey with 300 horsemen against J. Cæsar.

DONUSA, an island in the Icarian sea, one of the Sporades It lay south-east of Icaria, and east of Patmos. The marble obtained from this island was green It is now Heraclea Ling Arc. 3, 125.

DORES, the inhabitants of Doris Vid Doris

DORIAN a river of India extra Gangem. It is thought to answer to the modern Zangan, the mouth of which is in the kingdom of Tonquin.

DORICUS, an epithet applied not only to Doris, but to all the Greeks in general. Virg Æn 2, 27

DORIEUS, a son of Anaxandridas, who went with a colony into Sicily, because he could not bear to submit to the authority of his brother at home. Herod. 5, 42, &c.—Pyth. 5, 2 et 10, &c

DORILAS, a rich Lydian prince, killed in the court of Cephens. Ovid Met 5, fab 4.

DORION, a town of Messenia, where Thamyras the musician challenged the Muses to a trial of skill. Stat Theb. 4, 183.—Propert. 2, 22, 19 —Lucan. 6, 415.

DORIS, a country of Greece, bounded on the north by Thessaly, on the south by Phocis and the territory of the Locri Ozolæ, on the east by the river Pindus, and on the west by Ætolia. Its territory was not large, extending only about forty miles in length, and about twenty in breadth.* The country, though mountainous, abounded with spacious plains, and was very fruitful. It was called Doris and the people Dores, from Dorus, the son of Hellen, and grandson of Deucalion, who is said to have first peopled or conquered it. It was also called Tetrapolis from its four cities, viz. Pindus, Erineus, Boium, and Cytinium. The Dorians were a stout and warlike race, and formed a part of the nation of the Hellenes Under Deucalion, the Hellenes inhabated the territory of Phthiotis; under Dorus they occupied the district of Histiæotis. They were driven thence by the Cadmæans, and moving south, finally settled in Doris. From this, as a central point emigrated the various Doric colonies, one of which settled in the isle of Rhodes After the siege of Troy, the Dorians founded Megara on the confines of Attica, about 1131 B C. Others migrated to the shores of Asia Minor, and established the famous colony of Doris, in Asia Minor, on the coast of Caria. In process of time, other colonies of Dorians passed into Italy and Sicily But the country which may be regarded a the principal seat of their power was the Peloponnesus, of which they took possession under the conduct of the Heraclidæ about eighty years after the taking of Troy The Heraclidæ divided among themselves the territories of the Peloponnesus, reserving some few towns to the Ionians upon the borders of Achaia —— A colony of the Dorians in Asia Minor, on the coast of Caria. On the arrival of the Dorians in Asia, they formed themselves into six independent states or small republics, which were confined within the bounds of as many cities *These were Halicarnassus, Cnidus, Cos, Lindus, Ialyssus, and Camirus. Other cities in the territory, called from them Doris, belonged to their confederacy; but the inhabitants of these six alone, as true and genuine Dorians, were admitted into the temple at Triopæ, where they exhibited solemn games in honour of Apollo Triopius. The prizes were tripods of brass, which the victors were obliged to consecrate to Apollo, and leave in the temple. When Agasicles of Halicarnassus won the prize, he transgressed this custom, and carried the tripod to his own house, on which account the city of Halicarnassus was ever afterwards excluded from the Dorian confederacy The Dorians were from that time known by the name of the five cities, or Pentapolis, and no longer by that of Hexapolis. Strab. 9, &c.—Ling Æn 2, 27.—Plin. 5, 29. Apollod 2.—Herod 1, 144 8, 31. ——A goddess of the sea daughter of Oceanus and Tethys She married her brother Nereus, by whom she had fifty daughters called Nereides. Her name is often used to express the sea itself. Propert. 1, 17, 25.—Ling. Ecl 10.—Hesiod Theog. 240.——A woman of Locri, daughter of Xenetus, whom Dionysius the elder, of Sicily, married the same day with Aristomache Or Tusc. 5 ——One of the fifty Nereides Hesiod. Theog. 250. —Homer. Il 18, 45.

DORISCUS, a place of Thrace near the sea, where Xerxes numbered his forces. Herod. 7, 59.

DORSENNUS a comic poet of great merit in the Augustan age. Plin 14, 14.—Horat. 2, ep. 10, 173.

DORSO, C FABIUS, a Roman, who, when Rome was in the possession of the Gauls, issued from the capitol, which was then besieged, to go to a sacrifice, which was to be offered on mount Quirinalis. He dressed himself in sacerdotal robes, and carrying on his shoulders the statues of his country gods, passed through the guards of the enemy, without betraying the least signs of fear. When he had finished his sacrifice, he returned to the capitol unmolested by the enemy, who were astonished at his boldness, and did not obstruct his passage or molest his sacrifice. Liv. 5, 46.

DORUS, a son of Hellen Vid Doris.

DORYCLUS, an illegitimate son of Priam, ki led by Ajax in the Trojan war. Homer. Il. 11. ——A brother of Phineus king of Thrace, who married Berve. Virg. Æn. 5, 620.

DORYLÆUM and DORYLÆUS, a city of Phrygia, near the junction of the Thymbres and Sangarius, and on the borders of Bithynia. It is now Eski sher. Plin. 5, 29.—Cic. Balb. 17.

DORYLAS, one of the centaurs killed by Theseus. Ovid. Met. 12, 180.——A man killed at the marriage of Andromeda, by Aleyoneus. Ovid Met 12, 380. 5, 129.

DORYLÁUS, a warlike person, intimate with Mithridates Evergetes, and general of the Gnossians, B C 125 Strab. 10

DORYSSUS, a king of Lacedæmon, killed in a tumult. Paus. 3, 2.

DOSIADAS, a poet who wrote a piece of poetry in the form of an altar (Βωμός), which Theocritus has imitated.

DOSON, a surname of Antigonus, because he promised and never performed Plut. in Coriol.

DOTO, one of the Nereides. Virg. Æn 9, 102.

DOTUS, a general of the Paphlagonians, in the army of Xerxes. Herod 7, 72.

DRACANUS a mountain where Jupiter took Bacchus from his thigh. Theocrit

DRACO, a celebrated lawgiver of Athens, who flourished about 624 B C. When he exercised the office of archon, he made a code of laws for the protection of the citizens, which, on account of their severity, were said to be written in letters of blood. By them, idleness was punished with as much severity as murder, and death was denounced against the one as well as the other. Such a code of rigorous laws gave occasion to a certain Athenian to ask of the legislator, why he was so severe in his punishments, and Draco gave for answer, that as the smallest transgression had appeared to him deserving death, he could not find any punishment more rigorous for more atrocious crimes. These laws were at first enforced, but they were often neglected on account of their extreme severity, and Solon totally abolished them, except that one which punished a murderer with death The Athenians could not endure the rigour of his laws, and the legislator himself was obliged to withdraw to the island of Ægina. Here he was received at the public theatre with an applause which proved fatal to him, for its expression consisted in heaping upon him the cloaks and hats of the audience, by which he was suffocated He was buried under the theatre. Plut in Sol.——A man who instructed Plato in music Id de Musc.

DRACUS, a general of the Achæans, conquered by Mummius.

DRANCES, a friend of Latinus, remarkable for his weakness and eloquence He showed himself an obstinate opponent to the violent measures which Turnus pursued against the Trojans. Some have imagined that the poet wished to delineate the character and the eloquence of Cicero under this name. Virg. Æn. 11, 122, 220 et 336. 12, 644.

DRANGÆ. Vid. Zarangæ.

DRAVUS, a river of Germany, rising in the Noric Alps. It traverses the southern part of Noricum and Pannonia, running from west to east, and enters the Danube near the town of Mursa, or Essek. It is now the Drave

DREPANE, an ancient name of Corcyra.

DREPANUM, now Trapani, a town of Sicily near mount Eryx in the form a scythe, whence its name (δρέπανον, falx) Anchises died there, on his voyage to Italy with his son Æneas. The Romans under Cl. Pulcher were defeated near the coast, B C. 249, by the Carthaginian general Adherbal Virg Æn 3, 707.—Cic. Verr. 2, 57. —Ovid. Fast. 4, 474 —— A promontory of Peloponnesus, said likewise to have derived its name from the word δρέπανον, signifying a scythe, because with that instrument Saturn was fabled to have there mutilated his father DRILO, or DRINIUS, a river of Illyricum, which falls into the Adriatic at Lissus. It is composed of two branches, the northern one, or White Drino, rising in mount Scardus, and the southern one, or Black Drino, flowing from the Lychnitis Palus.

DRIMACHUS, a famous robber of Chios. When a price was set upon his head, he ordered a young man to cut it off and go and receive the money. Such an uncommon instance of generosity so pleased the Chians, that they raised a temple to his memory, and honoured him as a god. Herod. 4, 76.

DRIOPIDÆ, an Athenian ambassador sent to Darius when the peace with Alexander had been violated Curt 3, 13.

DROMÆUS, a surname of Apollo in Crete.

DROMOS ACHILLIS a promontory near the mouth of the Borysthenes, so called from its being the place which Achilles appropriated to his own use and that of his companions for various kinds of exercise, and particularly that of running. It is now called Kossa-Ouharigatch. Vid. Leuce.

DRUENTIUS and DRUENTIA, a river of Gaul, which has its source among the Alpes Cottiæ, north of Brigantio, or Briançon. It falls into the Rhodanus, or Rhone, three miles below Avenio, or Avignon, after a course of about 100 miles, and is now called the Durance. Sil. Ital. 3, 464. —Strab 4.

DRUIDÆ, the ministers of religion among the ancient Gauls and Britons. They were divided into different classes, called the Bardi Eubages, the Vates, the Semnothei, the Saronides, and the Samothei. They were held in the greatest veneration by the people. Their life was austere and recluse from the world, their dress was peculiar to themselves, and they generally appeared with a tunic which reached a little below the knee. As the chief power was lodged in their hands, they punished as they pleased, and could declare war and make peace at their option. Their power was extended not only over private families, but they could depose magistrates and even kings, if their actions in any manner deviated from the laws of the state. They had the privilege of naming the magistrates who annually presided over the cities, and the kings themselves were created only with their approbation. They were intrusted with the education of youth, and all religious ceremonies, festivals, and sacrifices were under their peculiar care. They taught the doctrine of the metempsychosis, and believed the immortality of the soul. They were professionally acquainted with the art of magic, and from their knowledge of astrology, they drew omens and saw futurity revealed before their eyes. In their sacrifices they often immolated human victims to their gods, a barbarous custom which continued long among them, and which the Roman emperors attempted to abolish to little purpose. The power and privileges which they enjoyed were beheld with admiration by their countrymen, and as their office was open to every rank and every station, there were many who daily proposed themselves as candidates to enter upon this important function. The rigour, however, and severity of a long noviciate deterred many, and few were willing to attempt a labour, which enjoined them during fifteen or twenty years to load their memory with the long and tedious maxims of druidical religion. Their name is derived from the Greek word δρῦς, an oak, because the woods and solitary retreats were the places of their residence. Cæs. Bell. G. 6, 13 —Plin. 16, 44 —Diod. 5

DRUSA or Drome, a river of Gaul, falling into the Rhone.

DRUSILLA, LIVIA, a daughter of Germanicus and Agrippina, famous for her debaucheries and licentiousness She committed incest with her brother Caligula, who was so tenderly attached to her that in a dangerous illness he made her heiress of all his possessions, and commanded that she should succeed him in the Roman empire She died A D 38, in the 23d year of her age, and was deified by her brother Caligula who survived her for some time.——A daughter of Agrippa, king of Judæa, &c

DRUSO, an unskilful historian and meanness, who obliged his debtors, when they could not pay him, to hear him read his compositions, to draw from them praises and flattery. Horat Sat. 1, 3, 86

DRUSUS, a son of Tiberius and Vipsania who made himself famous by his intrepidity and courage in the provinces of Illyricum and Pannonia He was raised to the greatest honours of the state by his father, but a blow which he gave to Sejanus, an audacious libertine, proved his ruin Sejanus corrupted Livia the wife of Drusus, and in conjunction with her he caused him to be poisoned by an eunuch, A.D 23.——A son of Germanicus and Agrippina, who enjoyed offices of the greatest trust under Tiberius. His enemy Sejanus, however, effected his ruin by his insinuations; Drusus was confined by Tiberius, and deprived of all aliment. He was found dead nine days after his confinement, A D. 33 ——A son of the emperor Claudius, who died by swallowing a pear thrown in the air.——An ambitious Roman, grandfather to Cato He was killed for his seditious conduct Patere. 1, 13.——Livius, father of Livia, the wife of Augustus, was intimate with Brutus, and killed himself with him after the battle of Philippi. Patere 2, 71 —M Livius, a celebrated Roman, who renewed the proposals of the Agrarian laws, which had proved fatal to the Gracchi. He was murdered as he entered his house, though he was attended with a number of clients and Latins, whom he wished to admit to the privileges of Roman citizens, B.C 190. Cic ad Her 4, 12 ——Nero or Decimus Claudius, a son of Tiberius Nero and Livia, adopted by Augustus He was brother to Tiberius, who was afterwards made emperor He greatly signalized himself in his wars in Germany and Gaul against the Rhœti and Vindelici, and was honoured with a triumph He died of a fall from his horse in the 30th year of his age, B.C. 9. He left three children, Germanicus, Livia and Claudius, by his wife Antonia. Dion ——M Livius Salinator, a consul who conquered Asdrubal with his colleague Claudius Nero. Horat Od. 4, 4.—Virg. Æn. 6 821 ——Cæsus an historian, who being one day missed from his cradle, was found the next on the highest part of the house, with his face turned towards the sun.——The plebeian family of the Drusi produced eight consuls, two censors, and one dictator. The surname of Drusus was given to the family of the Livii, as some suppose, because one of them killed a Gaulish leader of the name of Drausus. Virgil, in Æn 6, 824, mentions the Drusi among the illustrious Romans, and that perhaps more particularly, because the wife of Augustus was of that family.

DRYADES, nymphs that presided over the woods The Dryades differed from the Hamadryades, in that these latter were attached to some particular tree with which they were born, and with which they died; whereas the Dryades were the goddesses of the trees and woods in general, and lived at large in the middle of them. For though δρυς properly signifies an oak it was also used for a tree in general. Oblations of milk oil, and honey, were offered to them, and sometimes the votaries sacrificed a goat. Virg. G 1, 11.

DRYANTIDES a patronymic of Lycurgus, king of Thrace son of Dryas He cut his legs as he attempted to destroy the vines, that no libations might be made to Bacchus. Ovid. in Ib. 345.

DRYAS, a son of Hippolochus, who was father to Lycurgus. He went with Etiocles to the Theban war, where he perished Stat Theb. 8, 353.—A son of Mars, who went to the chase of the Calydonian boar. Apollod 1, 8 ——A centaur at the nuptials of Perithous, who killed Rhœtus Ovid Met. 12, 256 ——A daughter of Faunus, who so hated the sight of men, that she never appeared in public.——A son of Lycurgus, killed by his own father in a fury. Apollod 3, 5. ——A son of Egyptus, murdered by his wife Eurydice Id 2, 1

DRYMÆA, a town of Phocis, on the banks of the Cephisus, north east of Elatea It was burned and sacked by the Persians under Xerxes. Paus. 10, 33.—Herod. 8, 33

DRYMO, a sea nymph, one of the attendants of Cyrene. Virg. G. 4 336.

DRYOPE, a woman of Lemnos, whose shape Venus assumed to persuade all the females of the island to murder the men. Flacc. 2, 174 ——A virgin of Œchalia, whom Andræmon married after she had been ravished by Apollo. She became mother of Amphissus, who, when scarce a year old, was with his mother changed into a lotus Ovid. Met 10, 311 ——A nymph, mother of Tarquitus by Faunus Virg Æn. 10, 551 —— A nymph of Arcadia mother of Pan, by Mercury, according to Homer. Hymn. in Pan.

DRYOPETIA, an anniversary day observed at Asine in Argolis, in honour of Dryope, the son of Apollo

DRYOPIS a country of Greece, situate in the vicinity of mount Œta and Parnassus, and so called it is said, from Dryope, the daughter of Eurytus, or, according to the poets a nymph ravished by Apollo; but more probably from δρυς, an oak, and ὀψ a voice on account of the number of oaks which grew about the mountains and the rustling of their leaves The Dryopes, however, valued themselves much upon their fabulous origin, and called themselves the sons of Apollo; and therefore Hercules, having overcome this people, carried them prisoners to Delphi, where he presented them to their divine progenitor, who commanded the hero to take them with him to the Peloponnesus. Hercules obeyed and gave them a settlement there, near the Asineau and Hermionian territories; hence the Asineans came to be blended with, and to call themselves Dryopes Herod 1, 56 et 146 8, 31 —Paus 4, 34 —Strab. 7, 8, 14.—Plin. 4, 1.—Virg Æn. 4, 146.—Lucan 3, 179.

DRYOPS, a son of Priam, killed by Achilles. Homer, Il 20, 455 —A friend of Æneas, killed by Clausus in Italy. Virg. Æn. 10 346

DRYUSIA, the younger daughter of Darius, given in marriage to Hephæstion by Alexander. Ibid 18.

DUBIS or ALDUABIS, a river of Gallia, rising in mount Vocetius, and, after a northern course, running westward through the territory of the Sequani till it unites with the Arar. It is now the Doubs or Doux.

DUBRIS, a town of Britain, supposed to be Dover.

DUCETIUS, a Sicilian general, who died B C 440.

DUILLIA LEX, was enacted by M Duillius, a tribune, A U C 304. It made it a capital crime to leave the Roman people without its tribunes, or to create any new magistrate, from whom there was no appeal. Liv. 3, 55 —Another A, U. C. 392, fixing the interest of money at one per cent

C DUILLIUS NEPOS, a Roman consul, the first who obtained a victory over the naval power of Carthage B. C 260. After his colleague, Cn Corn, Scipio had been taken at sea by the Carthaginians in the first Punic war, Duillius proceeded with a new-built Roman fleet to Sicily, in quest of the enemy, whom he met near the Lipari islands, and, by means of grappling irons, so connected the ships of the Carthaginians with his own, that the contest became a sort of land fight. Through the aid of this contrivance, he entirely defeated the Carthaginian fleet, taking eighty ships and destroying thirteen, with a great number of men This victory was thought so important, that Duillius was received at Rome with the greatest applause, and enjoyed a triumph. A naval column was erected in the forum to perpetuate the event, which was standing in Pliny's time, and was found again, with its inscription, in 1560 Cic. de Senec.—Tacit Ann. 1, 12.

DULICHIUM, the largest of the Echinades, at the mouth of the Achelous, off the coast of Ætolia and Acarnania It formed part of the kingdom of Ulysses, who took some of its inhabitants with him to the siege of Troy. It is now Anatolico. Orad. Trist 1, el 4, 67 Met 14. 226 H. A. 27.2 —Martial 11, ep 70, 5.—Virg Eel 6 76

DUMNORIX, a powerful chief among the Æduu Cæs Bell G 1. 9.

DURATIUS PICTO, a Gaul, who remained in perpetual friendship with the Roman people Cæs Bell G. 8, 26

DURIS, an historian of Samos, who flourished B C 257. He wrote the life of Agathocles of Syracuse, a treatise on tragedy, a history of Macedonia, and other works, often quoted with approbation by ancient writers, but now no more. Cic ad Att. 6, ep 1.—Strab 1.

DURIUS, a river of Spain rising in the chain of Mons Idubeda, and after a course of 410 miles, discharging itself into the Atlantic, a little below Caile, the modern Oporto. It is now the Douro. Strab. 3 —Sil. Ital 1, 234.

DUROCASSES, the chief residence of the Druids in Gaul, now Dreux. Cæs. Bell. G. 6, 13.

DUROCOTORUM, the capital of the Remi, now Rheims.

DUSII, a name applied by the Gauls to some supreme divinities, whose attributes resembled those of the Fauns and Satyrs of the Latins. August de C. D. 15, 23

DUUMVIRI, a general appellation among the ancient Romans given to magistrates of communes, and officers, where two were joined together in the same function, so that there had almost as many Duumviri as they had officers joined two by two in commission The most considerable of the Duumviri were those called Duumviri Sacrorum. They were created by Tarquinius Superbus for the performance of sacrifices, and keeping the Sibylline books. They were chosen from among the patricians, held the office for life, were exempted from military service and the discharge of civil offices, and without them the Sibylline oracles could not be consulted. The number was increased to ten, A U. C. 387, called from their number Decemviri. Sulla, A. U C. 671, added five, upon which their name was changed to Quindecimviri Their body was afterwards much increased, and at length amounted to sixty, yet still it retained the appellation last mentioned. The office was abolished under the emperor Theodosius, towards the close of the fourth century —There were also certain magistrates at Rome, called Duumviri perduellionis aut capitalis. They were first created by Tullus Hostilius, for trying such as were accused of treason This office was abolished as unnecessary, but Cicero complains of their revival by Labienus the tribune Orat. pro Rabir. Some of the commanders of the Roman vessels were also called Duumviri, especially when there were two together. They were first created, A. U. C 542. There were also in the municipal towns in the provinces two magistrates called Duumviri municipales. They were chosen from the centurions, and their office was much the same as that of the two consuls at Rome. They were sometimes preceded by two lictors with the fasces. Their magistracy continued for five years, on which account they have been called Quinquennales magistratus.

DYAGONDAS, a Theban legislator, who abolished all nocturnal sacrifices. Cic. de Leg. 2, 15

DYMÆ, the last of the Achæan towns to the west, situate about forty stadia beyond the mouth of the Peirus It was anciently called Palea and Stratos. Its territory was frequently laid waste during the Social war. Paus. 7, 18.—Strab 8.

DYMAS, a Trojan, who joined himself to Æneas when Troy was taken, and was at last killed by his countrymen, who took him to be an enemy because he had dressed himself in the armour of one of the Greeks whom he had slain. Virg, Æn. 2, 340, 428.—The father of Hecuba, who, from him, is called Dymantis Homer. Il. 16, 718.—Virg. Æn. 2, 394.—Ovid Met 11, 761.

DYMNUS, one of Alexander's officers. He conspired with many of his fellow soldiers against his master's life. The conspiracy was discovered, and Dymnus stabbed himself before he was brought before the king. Curt. 6, 7

DINAMENE, one of the Nereides. Homer. Il. 18, 45.

DYRAS, a river of Thessaly, twenty stadia beyond the Sperchius, said to have sprung from the ground in order to assist Hercules when burning on the pile. Herod. 7, 198 — Strab 9.

DYRASPES, a river of Scythia. Ovid. Pont. 4, 10, 54.

DYRIS, the name given to mount Atlas by the neighbouring inhabitants.

DYRRACHIUM, now Durazzo a large city of Macedonia, bordering on the Adriatic sea, founded by a colony from Corcyra, B. C. 627. It was the common landing-place from Brundusium, and on that account it was frequently called Hadriæ faberna. Cicero met with a favourable reception there during his exile. Its ancient name was Epidamnus, which the Romans, considering it of ominous meaning, changed into Dyrrachium. Ælian 13, 16 — Thucyd. 1, 24 — Plin. 2, 106 — Mela, 2, 3 — Paus. 6, 10. — Cic. Att. 3, 22.

DYSAULES a brother of Celeus, who instituted the mysteries of Ceres at Celeæ. Paus. 2. 14.

DYSORUS, a mountain of Macedonia, famous for its gold and silver mines. Herod. 5, 23.

E

EANES, a man supposed to have killed Patroclus, and to have fled to Peleus in Thessaly. Strab. 9.

EANUS, the name of Janus among the ancient Latins. The word seems to be derived abeundo, because Janus was considered by some as the representative of the sun and of time, whose celebrity is constant and regular. Macrob. Sat 1, 9 — Cic. de Nat. D 2.

EARINUS a beautiful boy, eunuch to Domitian Stat Sylv. 3, 4.

EBDOME, a festival in honour of Apollo at Athens on the seventh day of every lunar month. It was usual to sing hymns in honour of the god, and to carry about boughs of laurel — There was also another of the same name, celebrated by private families, the seventh day after the birth of every child.

EBON, a name given to Bacchus by the people of Neapolis. Macrob. 1, 18.

EBORA, a town of Lusitania, to the south of the Tagus and north of the Anas, called also Liberalitas Julia. It is now Evora, the chief town of the province of Alentejo Plin. 4, 22. — Mela, 3, 1. — A fortress in Hispania Bætica, on the eastern bank of the Bætis. Mela, 3, 1 — A town of Hispania Terraconensis, near the river Tamaris It is thought to correspond with the modern village of Murvi, near the mouth of the Tambre

EBORACUM, a city of Britain, in the territory of the Brigantes now York It was a distinguished Roman station; the emperors Adrian and Severus each resided in it occasionally, and the latter died here.

EBUDES, or HERUDES, the western isles of Britain, now Hebrides Their number and situation are variously given by the ancients, but the chief of them were Ebuda Occidentalis, or Lewis and Harris, Ebuda Orientalis, or Skye, Maleos, or Mull, Epidium or Islay, and Ricina, or Rachlin Ptol. 2 2 — Plin. 4, 16.

EBURONES, a people of Belgium, now the country of Liege. Cæs. B. G. 2, 4. 6, 5. — The Eburovices Aulerci were the people of Evereux in Normandy. Cæs. ib. 3, 17.

EBUSUS, the largest of the Pityusæ, or Pine Islands. It was fertile in the production of vines, olives, and large figs, which were exported to Rome and elsewhere. It was famed also for its wool; but that no poisonous animal existed here is a mere fable of the ancients. It is about forty miles from the Mediterranean coast of Spain, and is now named Iviza Mela, 2, 7. — Plin. 3, 5, 14, 9 — A man engaged in the Rutulian war. Virg Æn 12, 289.

ECBATANA (ORUM), the capital of Media, situated about twelve stadia from Mount Orontes. It was the summer residence of the Persian kings, who came hither to avoid the excessive heat of Susa The Parthian kings also, after them, made it their place of abode during the heat of summer, which was felt very severely at Ctesiphon. It was built by Dejoces the First, and contained a very strong citadel, which was encompassed with seven walls of unequal heights the largest, according to Herodotus, was nearly equal in extent to the circumference of Athens. The battlements of these walls were of different colours The first was white, the second black, the third purple, the fourth blue, the fifth orange, the sixth plated with silver, and the seventh with gold. Parmenio was put to death here by Alexander's orders, and Hephæstion died here also, and received a most magnificent funeral. The site of Ecbatana has given rise to much discussion. Sir W. Jones places it at Taurus. D'Anville and Mannert declare for Hamadan. Dr Williams, in his work on the geography of ancient Asia, is in favour of Ispahan. Herod. 1, 98 — Strab 11 — A town of Syria, at the foot of mount Carmel, on the side of Ptolemais Here Cambyses gave himself a mortal wound as he was mounting his horse, and thus fulfilled the oracle which had warned him to beware of Ecbatana. Herod. 3, 64.

ECETRA, a town of the Volsci. Liv. 2, 25 3, 4.

ECHECRATES, a Thessalian, who offered violence to Phœbas, the priestess of Apollo's temple at Delphi. From this circumstance a decree was made by which no woman was admitted to the office of priestess before the age of fifty. Dod 4 — A Pythagorean philosopher of Locri, in the age of Plato. Cic Fin. 5, 29.

ECHELATUS, a man who led a colony to Africa. Strab. 5.

ECHEPLUS, a Trojan chief, killed by Patroclus — Another, son of Agenor, killed by Achilles Homer. Il. 16, 694. 20, 474

ECHEMBROTUS, an Arcadian, who obtained the prize at the Pythian games. Paus 10, 7

ECHEMON, a son of Priam, killed by Diomedes. Homer. Il. 5, 160.

ECHEMUS, an Arcadian, who conquered the Dorians when they endeavoured to recover Peloponnesus under Hyllus. Paus. 8, 5. — A king of Arcadia, who joined Aristomenes against the Spartans.

ECHENUS, a Phæacian, remarkable for his age and for his mental accomplishments, when Ulysses visited the country Homer. Odyss. 7, 155. 11, 341.

ECHEPOLIS, a Trojan, son of Thasius, killed by Antilochus Homer Il. 4, 458.

ECHESTRATUS, a son of Agis the First, king of Sparta, who succeeded his father, B. C. 1059. Herod. 7, 204.

ECHIDNA, a celebrated monster, sprung from the union of Chrysaor with Callirhoe, the daughter of Oceanus. She is represented as a beautiful woman in the upper part of the body, but as a serpent below the waist. She was mother, by Typhon, of Orthos, Geryon, Cerberus, the Hydra, &c. According to Herodotus, Hercules had three children by her, Agathyrsus, Gelonus, and Scytha. Herod. 3, 108.—Hesiod. Theog 295.—Apollod 2.—Paus. 8, 18.—Ovid. Met. 9, 198.

ECHINADES, or ECHINÆ, islands formerly lying opposite the mouth of the Achelous, but which, in process of time, have for the most part become connected with the mainland by the alluvial deposit of the river. They are now called Iuxolari Pau 2, 85.—Herod. 2, 10.—Ovid. Met. 8, 589.—Strab. 2.

ECHINUSA. Vid Cimolus.

ECHION, one of those men who sprung from the dragon's teeth sown by Cadmus. He was one of the five who survived the fate of his brothers, and assisted Cadmus in building the city of Thebes. Cadmus rewarded his services by giving him his daughter Agave in marriage. He was father of Pentheus by Agave. He succeeded his father-in-law on the throne of Thebes, as some have imagined, and from that circumstance Thebes has been called Echiônia, and the inhabitants Echionidæ. Ovid. Met. 3, 311. Trist. 5, el. 5, 53.——A son of Mercury and Antianira, who was the herald of the Argonauts. Flacc 1, 400.——A man of great swiftness in running. He was at the chase of the Calydonian boar. Ovid Met. 8, 292.——A musician at Rome, in Domitian's age Juv. 6, 76.

ECHIONIDES, a patronymic given to Pentheus as descended from Echion. Ovid. Met 3.

ECHIONIUS, an epithet applied to a person born in Thebes, founded with the assistance of Echion. Virg. Æn 12, 515.

ECHO, a daughter of the Air and Tellus who chiefly resided in the vicinity of the Cephisus. She was once one of Juno's attendants, and became the confidant of Jupiter's amours. Her loquacity, however, displeased Jupiter, and she was deprived of the power of speech by Juno, and only permitted to answer to the questions which were put to her. Pan had formerly been one of her admirers, but he never enjoyed her favours. Echo, after she had been punished by Juno, fell in love with Narcissus, and on being despised by him, she pined away, and was changed into a stone, which still retained the power of voice Ovid Met. 3, 356.

ECNOMUS, a mountain of Sicily, now Alcata.

ECTENES, a people who, according to Pausanias, first inhabited the territory of Thebes, in Bœotia. Œgyges is said to have been their first king. They were exterminated by a plague, and succeeded by the Hyantes. Strab. 9.—Paus. 9, 5.

EDESSA, now Orfa, a city of Mesopotamia, in the district of Osroene, near the source of a mountain-torrent called Scirtus. It lay north-east of Zeugma, and south-east of Samosata. Edessa is said to have been one of those numerous cities which were built by Seleucus Nicator It was once a place of great celebrity and famous for a temple of the Syrian goddess, which was one of the richest in the world, and hence it was denominated Hierapolis, or the Holy City. During some intestine broils which weakened the government of Syria, Abgarus seized on this city and its surrounding territory which he erected into a kingdom, and transmitted the royal title to his posterity. In the reign of the emperor Caracalla, Edessa was reduced to a Roman province.——A town of Macedonia. Vid. Ædessa.

EDETANI, a people of Spain, south of the Iberus. They occupied what answers to the northern half of Valencia, and the south-western corner of Aragon

EDON, a mountain of Thrace, called also Edonus. From this mountain that part of Thrace is often called Edonis, which lies between the Strymon and the Nessus, and the epithet is generally applied not only to Thrace, but to a cold northern climate Virg. Æn. 12, 365.—Plin. 4, 11.—Lucan 1, 674

EDONI, or EDONES, a people of Thrace, near the Strymon. Apollod 3, 5

EDONIDES, a name given to the priestesses of Bacchus, because they celebrated the festivals of the god on mount Edon Ovid Met. 11, 69

EDYLIUS, a mountain which Sylla seized to attack the people of Cheronæa. Plut. in Syll.

EETION, the father of Andromache, and of seven sons, was king of Thebes in Cilicia He was killed by Achilles. From him the word Eetioneus is applied to his relations or descendants. Homer. Il 1, 366. 6, 416.—Strab. 13.—The commander of the Athenian fleet conquered by the Macedonians under Clytus, near the Echinades Dod. 18.

EGELIDUS, a river of Etruria. Virg. Æn. 8, 650.

EGERIA, a nymph of Aricia in Italy, where Diana was particularly worshipped. Egeria was courted by Numa, and, according to Ovid, she became his wife. This prince frequently visited her, and that he might more successfully introduce his laws and new regulations into the state, he solemnly declared before the Roman people, that they were previously sanctified and approved by the nymph Egeria. Ovid says that Egeria was so disconsolate at the death of Numa, that she melted into tears, and was changed into a fountain by Diana She is reckoned by many as a goddess who presided over the pregnancy of women and some maintain that she is the same as Lucina, or Diana. Liv. 1, 19.—Ovid. Met. 15, 547.—Virg. Æn 7, 775.—Martial. 2, ep. 6, 16.

EGERIUS, the grandson of Demaratus, so called for his poverty. Liv. 1, 34

EGESARETUS, a Thessalian of Larissa, who favoured the interest of Pompey during the civil wars Cæs B C 3, 35.

EGESINUS, a philosopher, pupil to Evander. Cic. Acad. 4, 6.

EGESTA, a daughter of Hippotes the Trojan. Her father exposed her on the sea, for fear of being devoured by a marine monster which laid waste the country. She was carried safe to Sicily, where she was ravished by the god of the river Crimisus.——A town of Sicily. Vid. Ægesta.

EGNATIA, a town of Apulia, on the coast, below Barium It gave its name to the consular way that followed the coast from Canusium to Brundusium. Its ruins are still apparent near the Torre d' Agnazzo, and the town of Monopoli. Pliny states that a certain stone was shown at Egnatia, which was said to possess the property of igniting wood that was laid on it. Strab. 6.—Plin. 2, 107

EGNATIA MAXIMILLA, a woman who accompanied her husband into banishment under Nero, &c. Tacit Ann. 15, 71.——A town. Vid. Gnatia.

P. EGNATIUS, a crafty and perfidious Roman, in the reign of Nero, who committed the greatest crimes for the sake of money. Tacit. Hist. 4, 10.

ELON, a town of Thrace, situate at the mouth of the Strymon, and twenty five stadia from Amphipolis, of which it formed the harbour. Thucyd. 4, 102.

ELPENUS, a Greek, killed by Hector in the Trojan war. Homer Il. 5 ——A Thracian father to Rhesus. Id. 10.

ELÆA, the port and naval arsenal of the city of Pergamus. It stood at the mouth of the Caicus in Æolia, and opposite to the south-eastern extremity of Lesbos. It is now Kisseli. Strab. 13.—Liv 33, 43, 37, 18 —— An island in the Propontis, so called on account of its olives (ελαια).

ELEUS, a part of Epirus ——A surname of Jupiter ——A town of the Thracian Chersonesus. Liv. 31, 16 37, 8.

ELAGABALUS, the surname of the son at Emesa. (Vid Emesa and Heliogabalus).

ELAIUS, a mountain of Arcadia Paus 8 41

ELAPHEBOLIA, a festival in honour of Diana the Huntress. In the celebration a cake was made in the form of a deer, ελαφος, and offered to the goddess. It owed its institution to the following circumstance, when the Phocians had been severely beaten by the Thessalians they resolved, by the persuasion of a certain Delphian, to raise a pile of combustible materials and burn their wives, children, and effects, rather than submit to the enemy This resolution was unanimously approved by the women, who decreed Delphantus a crown for his magnanimity When every thing was prepared, before they fired the pile, they engaged their enemies, and fought with such desperate fury, that they totally routed them, and obtained a complete victory In commemoration of this unexpected success, this festival was instituted to Diana, and observed with the greatest solemnity, so that even one of the months of the year, March, was called Elaphebolion from this circumstance

ELAPHIEA, a surname of Diana in Elis. Paus. 6, 22.

ELAPHUS, a river of Arcadia Id. 8, 36

ELAPTONIUS, a youth who conspired against Alexander. Curt 8, 6.

ELATEA, the most considerable of the Phocian cities after Delphi, situate 180 stadia from Amphicrea, on a gently rising slope, above the plain watered by the Cephisus. It was captured and burned by the army of Xerxes, but was afterwards restored, and again frequently attacked. Its ruins are observable on the site called Vieh'sta Paus. 10, 34 —Herod. 8, 33.—Liv. 32, 18, &c.

ELATUS, one of the first Ephori of Sparta, B. C. 760 Plut. in Lyc ——The father of Cenæus. Ovid Met 12, 427.——A king in the army of Priam, killed by Agamemnon. Homer Il 6, 33.——One of Penelope's suitors, killed by Eumæus. Homer. Od 22, 267

ELAVER, a river of Gaul, rising in the same quarter with the Liger and, after pursuing a course almost parallel with it, falling into the same stream below Nevers. It is now the Allier. Cæs. B. G 8, 34 et 53.

ELEA, a city of Lucania. Vid. Velia.

ELECTRA, one of the Oceanides, who married Thaumas son of Pontus, and became mother of the Harpies, and of Iris the messenger of Juno. Hesiod. Th 265.—Homer. in Cerer ——A daughter of Atlas and Pleione. She was mother of Jasion and Dardanus by Jupiter, who placed her after death in the constellation called Pleiades, where, as authors assert, her star shines with less brilliancy since the fall of Troy, as she commiserated the calamities which the descendants of her son endured. Hygin. fab 155.—Virg. Æn. 8, 136.—Ovid Fast. 4, 31 et 179.—Apollod. 3, 10 et 12 ——One of the Danaides, who married Persides, according to Apollodorus, or Hyperantes, according to Hyginus, fab. 170. Apollod. 2, 1 — —A daughter of Agamemnon king of Argos. She preserved the life of her brother Orestes, by sending him to king Strophius, to escape from the dagger of Clytemnestra and Ægysthus, and she afterwards assisted him in the destruction of these infamous adulterers, to avenge the death of their murdered father Some have imagined that Ægysthus had insultingly married her to a man of obscure birth and mean occupation, but the more probable account relates, that, as a proof of his gratitude Orestes gave her in marriage to his friend Pylades, and she became mother of two sons, Strophius and Medon Her adventures and misfortunes form one of the interesting tragedies of the poet Sophocles Hygin fab 117, 122.—Euripid. in Orest.—Paus 2, 16 —Ælian V H 4, 26, &c ——A sister of Cadmus, who gave her name to one of the seven gates of Thebes Paus 9, 8 ——One of Helen's female attendants. Id. 10, 25.

ELECTRIDES, islands in the Adriatic sea, which received their name from the quantity of amber (electrum) which they produced They were at the mouth of the Po, according to Apollonius of Rhodes, but some historians doubt the existence. (Vid Eridanus.) Plin 2, 26, 37, 2. —Mela, 3, 2.

ELECTRYON a king of Argos, son of Perseus and Andromeda. He was brother to Alcæus, whose daughter Anaxo he married, and by her he had several sons and one daughter, Alcmene He sent his sons against the Teleboans, who had ravaged his country, and they were all killed except Licymnius. Upon this Electryon promised his crown and daughter in marriage to him who could undertake to punish the Teleboans for the death of his sons. Amphitryon offered himself and succeeded. Electryon inadvertently perished by the hand of his son-in law (Vid. Amphitryon, and Alcmena.) Apollod. 2, 4.—Paus.

ELEI, a people of Elis in Peloponnesus. (Vid Elis)

ELELEUS, a surname of Bacchus, from the word ελελευ which the Bacchanals loudly repeated during his festivals. His priestesses were in consequence called Eleleæ (ides) Ovid Met 4, 17.

ELEPHANTINE, now Gezyret Assuan, a small island of Egypt, on the Nile opposite to Syene It contained a handsome city, and was the emporium for all goods which passed from the lower country to Æthiopia, and vice versâ. It formed originally the southern boundary of Egypt, but the Ptolemies, and after them the Romans, pushed the limits to the neighbouring Philæ At Elephantine was the Nilometer, or well for measuring of the inundation of the Nile, which at its greatest height rose here to 28 cubits, or 42 feet. Strab 17.

ELEPHANTIS, a poetess who wrote lascivious verses. Martial. Ep. 12 43, 4.—A princess, by whom Danaus had two daughters, Gorgophone and Hypermnestra. Apollod. 2.

ELEPHANTOPHAGI, a people of Æthiopia.

ELEPHENOR, son of Chalcodon, was one of Helen's suitors, and conducted an army of the Abantes of Euboea to the Trojan war. Homer. Il. 2, 47

ELEUSINIA, a great festival observed every fourth year by the Cretans, Phliasians, as also by the Phenicians, Lacedæmonians, Parrhasians, and Cretans; but more part eularly by the people of Athens, every fifth year at Eleusis in Attica, where it was introduced by Eumolpus, B.C. 1356. It was the most celebrated of all the religious ceremonies of Greece, whence it is often called, by way of eminence, μυστήρια the mysteries. It was so superstitiously observed, that if any one ever revealed its secret mysteries, it was supposed that he had called divine vengeance upon his head, and it was unsafe to live in the same house with him. Such a wretch was publicly put to an ignominious death. This festival was sacred to Ceres and Proserpina, every thing contained a mystery, and Ceres herself was known only by the name of ἀλγώς, from the sorrow and grief (ἄλγος) which she suffered for the loss of her daughter. This mysterious secrecy was solemnly observed, and enjoined on all the votaries of the goddess, and if any one ever appeared at the celebration, either intentionally, or through ignorance, without proper introduction, he was immediately punished with death. Persons of both sexes and all ages were initiated at this solemnity, and it was looked upon as so heinous a crime to neglect this sacred part of religion, that it was one of the heaviest accusations which contributed to the condemnation of Socrates. The initiated were under the more particular care of the deities, and therefore their life was supposed to be attended with more happiness and real security than that of other men. This benefit was not only granted during life, but it extended beyond the grave, and they were honoured with the first places in the Elysian fields, while others were left to wallow in perpetual filth and ignominy. As the benefits of expiation were so extensive, particular care was taken in examining the character of such as were presented for initiation. Such as were guilty of murder, though against their will, and such as were convicted of witchcraft, or any heinous crime, were not admitted, and the Athenians suffered none to be initiated but such as were members of their city. This regulation, which compelled Hercules, Castor, and Pollux, to become citizens of Athens, was strictly observed in the first ages of the institution, but afterwards all persons, barbarians excepted, were freely initiated. The festivals were divided into greater and less mysteries. The less were instituted from the following circumstance. Eumolpus was present at Eleusis while the Athenians were celebrating the mysteries, and desired to be initiated. As this could not be done because he was a stranger, and as Eumolpus was unwilling to displease him on account of his great power and the services which he had done to the Athenians, another festival was instituted without violating the laws. It was called μικρά, and Hercules was solemnly admitted to the celebration and initiated. These less mysteries were observed at Agræ near the Ilissus. The greater were celebrated at Eleusis, from which place Ceres has been called Eleusinia. In later times the smaller festivals were preparatory to the greater, and no person could be initiated at Eleusis without a previous purification at Agræ. This purification they performed by keeping themselves pure, chaste, and unpolluted during nine days, after which they came and offered sacrifices and prayers, wearing garlands of flowers, called ἴουλοι, or ὑάκινθοι, and having under their feet Διὸς σκῦλον, Jupiter's skin, which was the skin of a victim offered to that god. The person who assisted was called ὑδροφόρος from ὕδωρ, water, which was used at the purification; and they themselves were called μύσται, the initiated. A year after the initiation at the less mysteries, they sacrificed a sow to Ceres, and were admitted into the greater, and the secrets of the festivals were solemnly revealed to them, from which they were called ἔφοροι and ἐπόπται, inspectors. The institution was performed in the following manner. The candidates, crowned with myrtle, were admitted by night into a place called μυστικὸς οἶκος, the mystical temple, a vast and stupendous building. As they entered the temple, they purified themselves by washing their hands in holy water, and received for admonition that they were to come with a mind pure and undefiled, without which the cleanness of the body would be unacceptable. After this, the holy mysteries were read to them from a large book called πατρῶια, because made of two stones, πατρὸς, fitly cemented together. After this the priest, called ἱεροφάντης, proposed to them certain questions, to which they readily answered. After this, strange and amazing objects presented themselves to their sight, the place often seemed to quake, and to appear suddenly resplendent with fire, and immediately covered with gloomy darkness and horror. Sometimes thunders were heard, or flashes of lightning appeared on every side. At other times hideous noises and howlings were heard, and the trembling spectators were alarmed by sudden and dreadful apparitions. This was called αὐτοψία, intuition. After this the initiated were dismissed with the barbarous words of κοῦξ, ὀπάκ. The garments in which they were initiated, were held sacred, and of no less efficacy to avert evils than charms and incantations. From this circumstance, therefore, they were never left off before they were totally unfit for wear, after which they were appropriated for children, or dedicated to the goddess. The chief person that attended at the initiation was called ἱεροφάντης, the revealer of sacred things. He was a citizen of Athens, and held his office during life, though among the Celeans and Philasians it was limited to the period of four years. He was obliged to devote himself totally to the service of the deities; his life was chaste and single, and he usually anointed his body with the juice of hemlock, which is said, by its extreme coldness, to extinguish in a great degree the natural heat. The Hierophantes had three assistants, the first was called δᾳδοῦχος, torch-bearer, and was permitted to marry. The second was called κῆρυξ, a crier. The third administered at the altar, and was called ὁ ἐπὶ βωμῷ. The Hierophantes is said to have been a type of the powerful Creator of all things, ἡλιοῦχος of the sun, κῆρυξ of Mercury, and ὁ ἐπὶ βωμῷ of the moon. There were, besides these, other inferior officers who took particular care that every thing was performed according to custom. The first of these, called βασιλεύς, was one of the Archons; he offered prayers and sacrifices, and took care that there was no indecency or irregularity during the celebration. Besides him there were four others, called ἐπιμεληταὶ, curators, elected by the people. One of them was chosen from the recred family of the Eumolpidæ, the other was one of the Ceryces, and the rest were from among the citizens. There were also ten persons who assisted at this and every other festival, called ἐφοπτεύσαι, because they offered sacrifices. This festival was observed in the month Boedromion, or September, and continued nine days, from the 15th till the 23d. During that time it was unlawful to arrest any man, or present any petition, on pain of forfeiting a thousand drachmas, or, according to others on pain of death. It was also unlawful for those who were initiated to sit upon the cover of a well, to eat beans, mullets, or weasels. If any woman rode to Eleusis in a chariot, she was obliged by an edict of Lycurgus, to pay 6000 drachmas. The design of this law was to destroy all distinction between the richer and poorer sort of citizens.—The first day of the celebration was called ἄγυρσις, assembly as it might be said that the worshippers first met together. The second day was called Ἅλαδε μύσται, to the sea, you that are initiated, because they were commanded to purify themselves by bathing in the sea. On the third day, sacrifices, and chiefly a mullet, were offered; as also barley from a field of Eleusis. These oblations were called θέα, and held so sacred that the priests themselves were not, as in other sacrifices, permitted to partake of them. On the fourth day they made a solemn procession, in which the καλάθου, holy basket of Ceres was carried about in a consecrated cart, while on every side the people shouted χαῖρε Δημήτηρ, Hail Ceres! After these followed women, called κανηφόροι, who carried baskets, in which were sesamum, carded wool, grains of salt, a serpent, pomegranates, reeds, ivy boughs, certain cakes, &c. The fifth was called ἡ τῶν λαμπάδων ἡμέρα, the torch day, because on the following night the people ran about with torches in their hands. It was usual to dedicate torches to Ceres, and contend which should offer the biggest in commemoration of the travels of the goddess, and of her lighting a torch in the flames of mount Ætna. The sixth day was called Ἴακχος, from Iacchus, the son of Jupiter and Ceres, who accompanied his mother in her search of Proserpina, with a torch in his hand. From that circumstance his statue had a torch in its hand, and was carried in solemn procession from the Ceramicus to Eleusis. The statue with those that accompanied it, called Ἰακχαγωγοί, were crowned with myrtle. In the way nothing was heard but singing and the noise of brazen kettles, as the votaries danced along. The way through which they passed from the city was called ἱερὰ ὁδός, the sacred way; the resting place ἱερὰ συκῆ, from a fig-tree which grew in the neighbourhood. They also stopped on a bridge over the Cephissus, where they derided those that passed by. After they had passed this bridge they entered Eleusis by a place called μυστικὴ εἴσοδος, the mystical entrance. On the seventh day were sports, in which the victors were rewarded with a measure of barley, as that grain had been first sown in Eleusis. The eighth day was called Ἐπιδαύρια ἡμέρα, because once Æsculapius, at his return from Epidaurus to Athens was initiated by the repetition of the less mysteries. It became customary therefore, to celebrate them a second time upon this, that such as had not hitherto been initiated might be lawfully admitted. The ninth and last day of the festival was called πλημόαι, earthen vessels, because it was usual to fill two such vessels with wine, one of which being placed towards the east, and the other towards the west, which, after the repetition of some mystical words, were both thrown down, and the wine being spilt on the ground, was offered as a libation. Such was the manner of celebrating the Eleusinian mysteries, which have been deemed the most sacred and solemn of all the festivals observed by the Greeks. Some have supposed them to be obscene and abominable, and that from thence proceeded all the mysterious secrecy. They were carried from Eleusis to Rome in the reign of Adrian, where they were observed with the same ceremonies as before, though perhaps with more freedom and licentiousness. They lasted about 1400 years, and were at last abolished by Theodosius the Great. Ælian. V. H. 12 24.—Cic. de Leg. 2, 14.—Paus. 10, 31, &c. Plut.

ELEUSIS, or ELEUSIN, a town of Attica, equidistant from Megara and the Piræus, and famed for the celebration of the mysteries of Ceres, (Vid. Eleusinia.) It is stated to have derived its name from a son of Mercury, or, as others say, from the Greek word ἐλεύσεις, adventus, owing to Ceres having resided there for some time after she had left Enna in Sicily in search of her daughter Proserpine. It is now called Lemna. Hygin fab. 147 et 275.—Ovid Fast. 5, 507.—Paus. 9, 24.

ELEUTHER, a son of Apollo.

ELEUTHERÆ, a town of Attica, on the road from Eleusis to Platæa, which appears to have once belonged to Bœotia, but finally became included within the limits of Attica. Bacchus is said to have been born here. Strab. 9.—Dion. Sic. 3, 65.

ELEUTHERIA, a festival celebrated at Plataa in honour of Jupiter Eleutherius, or the asserter of liberty, by delegates from almost all the cities of Greece. Its institution originated in this; after the victory obtained by the Grecians under Pausanias over Mardonius the Persian general, in the country of Platæa, an altar and statue were erected to Jupiter Eleutherius, who had freed the Greeks from the tyranny of the barbarians. It was further agreed upon in a general assembly, by the advice of Aristides the Athenian, that deputies should be sent every fifth year from the different cities of Greece to celebrate Eleutheria, festivals of liberty. The Plataans celebrated also an anniversary festival in memory of those who had lost their lives in that famous battle. The celebration was thus: At break of day a procession was made with a trumpeter at the head, sounding a signal for battle. After him followed chariots loaded with myrrh, garlands, and a black bull, and certain free young men, as no signs of servility were to appear during the solemnity, because they in whose honour the festival was instituted had died in the defence of their country. They carried libations of wine and milk in large-eared vessels, with jars of oil and precious ointments. Last of all appeared the chief magistrate, who, though not permitted at other times to touch iron, or wear garments of any colour but white, yet appeared clad in purple, and taking a water pot out of the city chamber, proceeded through the middle of the town with a sword in his hand, towards the sepulchres. There he drew water from a neighbouring spring, and washed and anointed the monuments; after which he sacrificed a bull upon a pile of wood, invoking Jupiter and Infernal Mercury, and inviting to the entertainment the souls of those happy heroes who had perished in the defence of their country. After this he filled a bowl with wine, saying, I drink to those who lost their lives in the defence of the liberties of Greece ——There was also a festival of the same name observed by the Samians in honour of the god of love. Slaves also, when they obtained their liberty, kept a holiday which they called Eleutheria. Plaut. 9, 2.

ELEUTHERO-CILICES, a name given to those of the Cilicians who had fled to the mountains when the Greek settlers established themselves in that country. The appellation, which means "Free Cilicians" has reference to their independent mode of life. Cic. Ep. ad Fam. 15, 4. ad Att. 5, 20

ELEUTHERO-LACONES, a title granted by Augustus to a considerable part of the Laconian nation, consisting of several maritime towns, for the zeal which the inhabitants had early testified in favour of the Romans. Enfranchisement and other privileges accompanied the title. Strab. 8, —Paus. 3, 21

ELEUTHEROPOLIS, a city of Palestine, situated at the distance of twenty miles south west from Jerusalem, and twenty-four miles north-east from Ascalon. It was founded in the third century, but by whom is uncertain. Amm. Marcell 23, 1

ELEUTHERUS, a surname of Jupiter, from the aid and deliverance which he afforded to mankind. ——A river of Syria, rising in mount Libanus, and running north westward into the sea. It is now the Nahr el Kebir

ELEUTHO, a surname of Juno Lucina, from her coming, when invoked, to the aid of women in labour. Ovid. Trist. 4, 72

ELIACI, a name given to the school of philosophy established by Plato of Elis. It was instituted after the Socratic model, which was continued by Phædrus an Elian, and afterwards by Menedemus of Eretria. Laert 2, 105

ELIUS, a surname of Jupiter, worshipped on mount Aventine, because he had been drawn (elicere) upon earth by the prayers and devotion of the Romans, and especially of Numa, to whom he gave an undoubted pledge of the duration, prosperity and greatness of the Roman empire. Ovid. Fast 3, 285.

ELIMEA or ELIMIOTIS, a region of Macedonia, to the east of Stymphalia. It was at one time independent, but was afterwards conquered by the kings of Macedonia, and finally included by the Romans in the fourth division of that province. Thucyd 2, 99 —Liv. 45 30.

ELIPHASII, a people of Peloponnesus. Polyb. 11.

ELIS a district of the Peloponnesus, bounded on the north by Achaia, on the east by Arcadia, on the south by Messenia, and on the west by the Ionian sea. Its greatest extent from east to west was about forty-eight miles, and from north to south about sixty. It was formerly divided into several districts, each occupied by a separate people, the chief of which were the Epei, or Elei, as they are also called by Homer, from their possessing the city of Elis and the Caucones, from whom the whole province is sometimes called Cauconia: these tribes are regarded as indigenous, and are said to have been joined shortly after the siege of Troy by large colonies of Ætolians, Dorians, and Heraclidæ. But the subsequent division of Elis was into Elis Proprie, or Cerle, Pisatis, and Triphylia. Cele was the northernmost of these, Pisatis was in the centre, and Triphylia in the south. Elis was by far the most fertile and populous district of Peloponnesus, and its inhabitants were fond of agriculture and rural pursuits. Strab 8.—Homer Il. 11, 669 Odyss. 15, 296.—Paus 5, 3.—Polyb 4, 73.——The capital of Elis, situate on the Peneus, at the distance of 120 stadia from the sea. It was composed of several detached villages, which were united, after the Persian war, in one large city. It had no walls, being considered under the immediate protection of the god whose festival was there solemnized. Its remains are now called Palæopoli. Strab. 8

ELISSA, a queen of Tyre, more commonly known by the name of Dido. Vid. Dido.

ELISSUS, a small river of Achaia, now the Mavro

ELLOPIA, a district of Eubœa, in the northern part of the island, in which Histiæa was situated. According to some it derived its name from Ellops, a son of Ion, who settled here. Strab. 10.

ELORUS, a river of Sicily. Vid Helorus.

ELOUS. Vid Helorus.

ELPENOR, one of the companions of Ulysses, changed into a hog by Circe's potions, and afterwards restored to his former shape. He fell from the top of a house where he was sleeping, and was killed. Ovid Met 14, 242.—Homer. Odyss. 10, 552 11, 51

ELPINICE a daughter of Miltiades, who nobly offered to marry Callias, a man that promised to release from confinement her brother and husband, whom the laws of Athens had made responsible for the fine imposed on his father. C. Nep. in Cim.

ELUCINA, a surname of Ceres.

ELYCES, a man killed by Perseus. Ovid. Met. 5, fab 3

ELYMAIS, a country of Persia, between the Persian Gulf and Media. The capital of the country was called Elymais, and was famous for a rich temple of Diana, which Antiochus Epiphanes attempted to plunder. The Elymeans assisted Antiochus the Great in his wars against the Romans. None of their kings are named in history. Strabo.

ELYMI, a nation descended from the Trojans, in alliance with the people of Carthage. Paus. 10, 8.

ELYMUS, a man at the court of Acestes in Sicily. Virg. Æn. 5, 73.

ELYSIUM, and ELYSII CAMPI, a place or island in the infernal regions, where, according to the mythology of the ancients, the souls of the virtuous were placed after death. There happiness was complete, the pleasures were innocent and refined. Bowers for ever green, delightful meadows with pleasant streams, were the most striking objects. The air was wholesome serene, and temperate; the birds continually warbled in the groves and the inhabitants were blessed with another sun and other stars. The employments of the heroes who dwelt in these regions of bliss were various; the manes of Achilles are represented as waging war with the wild beasts, while the Trojan chiefs are innocently exercising themselves in managing horses, or in handling arms. To these innocent amusements some poets have added continual feasting and revelry, and they suppose that the Elysian fields were filled with all the incontinence and voluptuousness which could gratify the low desires of the debauchee. According to Diodorus Siculus, the whole table of the infernal regions was borrowed from the funeral rites of the Egyptians, and introduced into Greece by Orpheus. From this source Homer is said to have borrowed his ideas and descriptions which occur in various parts of the Odyssey. Succeeding poets and philosophers copied from Homer. Some placed the Elysian fields in the middle region of the air, some in the moon, others in the sun, and others again in the centre of the earth adjoining to Tartarus. The most common opinion was, that they lay in one of the isles of the ocean, called the Fortunate Islands, the modern Canaries. Virg. Æn. 6, 638.—Homer. Odyss 4.—Pindar.—Tibull. 1, el 3, 57.—Lucan.—Plut. de Consol.

EMATHIA, the most ancient name of Macedonia. Polybius and Livy expressly assert, however, that Emathia was originally called Paonia, though Homer certainly mentions them as two distinct countries. Polyb. Prag. 24, 5.—Liv. 40, 3.

EMATHION, a son of Titan and Aurora, who reigned in Macedonia. The country was called Emathia from his name. Some suppose that he was a famous robber destroyed by Hercules Ovid Met. 5, 313.—Justin. 7, 1.——A man killed at the nuptials of Perseus and Andromeda Ovid Met 5, 100.

EMATHION, a man killed in the wars of Turnus. Virg. Æn 9, 571.

EMERITA AUGUSTA, a town of Lusitania, below Norba Cæsarea, on the northern bank of the Anas. It was founded by Augustus, who at the end of the Cantabrian war, sent here a colony of Emeriti, or such veterans as had served their time. It was famed for its scarlet dye and excellent olives It is now Merida. Plin 9, 41

EMESSA an ancient city of Syria, situate near the eastern bank of the Orontes, south east of Epiphania It was the birth-place of the emperor Heliogabalus, and contained a splendid temple of the Sun, in which Heliogabalus was priest. It is now called Homs; and though formerly a strong and populous city, it is at present only a large ruinous town containing not more than 2000 inhabitants Amm. Marcell 25, 18

EMODI MONTES, part of a range of mountains in Asia. Pliny says that the Emodi Montes, and those of Imaus and Paropamisus, were connected together. That part of the range which Alexander crossed in order to invade Bactriana, was called Paropamisus, the more easterly continuation of the chain was termed Emodi Montes, and its still farther continuation, even to the eastern ocean, was styled Imaus. Vid. Imaus.

EMPEDOCLES, a philosopher, poet, and historian of Agrigentum in Sicily, who flourished 444 B.C. He was the disciple of Telauges the Pythagorean, and warmly adopted the doctrine of transmigration. He wrote a poem upon the opinions of Pythagoras, very much commended, in which he spoke of the various bodies which nature had given him. He was first a girl, afterwards a boy, a shrub, a bird, a fish, and lastly Empedocles. His poetry was bold and animated, and his verses were so universally esteemed, that they were publicly recited at the Olympic games with those of Homer and Hesiod. Empedocles was no less remarkable for his humanity and social virtues than for his learning. He showed himself an inveterate enemy to tyranny, and refused to become the sovereign of his country He taught rhetoric in Sicily, and often alleviated the anxieties of his mind as well as the pains of his body with music. It is reported that his curiosity to visit the flames of the crater of Ætna, proved fatal to him. Some maintain that he wished it to be believed that he was a god, and that his death might be unknown, he threw himself into the crater and perished in the flames. His expectations, however, were frustrated, and the volcano, by throwing up one of his sandals, discovered to the world that Empedocles had perished by fire. Others report that he lived to an extreme old age, and that he was drowned in the sea. Horat. 1, ep. 12, 20. Art. P.—Cic de Orat. 1, 50, &c.—Suog. in vita.

EMPERAMUS, a Lacedæmonian general in the second Messenian war.

EMPORIA, a country of Africa Propria, called also Byzacium situate to the north of the Syrtis Minor. No part of the Carthaginian dominions was more fruitful than this. Polybius says that the revenue which arose from it was so considerable that almost all the hopes of the Carthaginians were founded on it, and he deduces the origin of its name from its great fertility, and the commerce which distinguished it. To this were owing the anxiety and state jealousy of the Carthaginians, lest the Romans should sail beyond the Fair promontory that lay before Carthage, and become acquainted with a district which might induce them to attempt the conquest of it. Polyb. 3, 23.

EMPORIÆ, a town of Hispania Terraconensis, now Ampurias Liv 34, 9 et 16 26, 19

ENCELADUS, a son of Titan and Terra, the most powerful of all the giants who conspired against Jupiter. He was struck with Jupiter's thunders, and overwhelmed under mount Ætna. Some suppose that he is the same as Typhon. According to the poets, the flames of Ætna proceeded from the breath of Enceladus, and as often as he turned his weary side, the whole island of Sicily felt the motion and shook from its very foundations. Virg. Æn 3, 578, &c.

ENDEIS, a nymph, daughter of Chiron. She married Æacus king of Ægina, by whom she had Peleus and Telamon. Pans 2, 29.—Apollod. 3, 12.

ENDYMION, a shepherd, son of Æthlius and Calyce. It is said that he required of Jupiter to grant to him to be always young, and to sleep as much as he would, whence came the proverb of Endymionis somnium dormire, to express a long sleep. Diana saw him naked as he slept on mount Latmos, and was so struck with his beauty, that she came down from heaven every night to enjoy his company. Endymion married Chromia, daughter of Itonus, or according to some, Hyperippe, daughter of Arcas, by whom he had three sons, Paon, Epeus, and Ætolus, and a daughter called Eurydice, and so little ambitious did he show himself of sovereignty, that he made his crown the prize of the best racer among his sons an honourable distinction which was gained by Epeus. The fable of Endymion's amours with Diana, or the moon, arises from his knowledge of astronomy, and as he passed the night on some high mountain, to observe the heavenly bodies, it has been reported that he was courted by the Moon. Some suppose that there were two of that name, the son of a king of Elis, and the shepherd or astronomer of Caria. The people of Heraclea maintained that Endymion died on mount Latmos, and the Eleans pretended to show his tomb at Olympia in Peloponnesus. Propert. 2, el. 15.—Cic. Tusc. 1.—Juv. 10.—Theocrit. 3.—Paus. 5, 1. 6, 20.

ENETI. Vid. Heneti.

ENGONASIS, a name applied to the constellation of Hercules, because he is represented as resting on his knees (in genibus) Cic. N. D. 2, 42.

ENGYUM, a town of Sicily, situated near the source of the southern Himera. It was founded by the companions of Minos, and famous for a temple dedicated to Ceres. Cic Ver 3, 43. 4, 14. —Sil. Ital 14, 250.

ENIOPEUS, a charioteer of Hector, killed by Diomedes Homer. Il. 8, 120.

ENIPEUS, a river of Macedonia, in the district of Pieria, rising in mount Olympus, and, though nearly dry in summer, becoming a considerable torrent in winter from the heavy rains Its modern name is Metalhira Liv 44, 8 et 35 —A river of Thessaly, flowing into the Apidanus, which afterwards enters the Peneus It rose in mount Othrys, and flowed from Achaia, or the south-western portion of Phthiotis, as we learn from Thucydides, who remarks, that Brasidas was arrested in his march through Thessaly, when about to cross the Enipeus. It is now called the Gouras. Strab 8.—Thucyd 4, 78.—A small river of Elis, of which Tyrò the daughter of Salmoneus became enamoured. Neptune assumed the shape of the river god to enjoy the company of Tyro Ovid Am 3, el 5 —Strab 8.

ENNA, a city of Sicily situated on an eminence in the middle of the island, whence it was called the navel of Sicily. It was one of the strongest places in the island, and remarkable for its beautiful plains, fruitful soil and the numerous lakes and springs which watered its territory Proserpine was carried away by Pluto in the neighbourhood of Enna, while she was gathering flowers in an adjacent meadow. The site of Enna is occupied by Castro Giovanni. Mela, 2, 7 —Cic. Ver 3, 49 4 101 —Ovid Fast 4, 422.—Liv 24 37

ENNIA, was the wife of Macro and afterwards of the emperor Caligula. Tacit Ann 6, 45.

Q ENNIUS an ancient poet born at Rudii in Calabria. He obtained the name and privileges of a Roman citizen by the friendship of M Fulvius Nobilior, supported by the stronger claims of his genius and the brilliancy of his learning His style is rough and unpolished, but his defects, which are more particularly attributed to the age in which he lived, have been fully compensated by the energy of his expressions and the fire of his poetry. Quintilian warmly commends him, and Virgil has shown the superiority of his poetical merit by introducing many whole lines from his poetry into his own compositions, which he calls pearls gathered from the dunghill. Ennius wrote in heroic verse eighteen books of the annals of the Roman republic, and displayed much knowledge of the world in some dramatical and satirical compositions. He died of the gout, contracted, it is said, by frequent intoxication, about 169 years before the Christian era, in the seventieth year of his age, and he was buried in the Appian road about one mile from Rome. Ennius was intimate with the great men of his age; he accompanied Cato in his quæstorship in Sardinia, and was esteemed by him of greater value than the honours of a triumph, and Scipio, on his death-bed, ordered his body to be buried by the side of his poetical friend. This epitaph was said to be written upon him:

Aspexit, O cives, vestis Ennii imagines flevnam!
Hic restrum pinxit maximus forte pictor.
Nemo me lacrymis decoret, neque funera fletu
Faxit: cur? volito vivus per ora virûm.

Conscious of his merit as the first epic poet of Rome, Ennius bestowed on himself the appellation of the Homer of Latium. Of the tragedies, comedies, annals, and satires which he wrote, nothing remains but fragments happily collected from the quotations of ancient authors, to the number of about 600 lines. The best edition of these is by Hesselius, 4to. Amst. 1707. Ovid. Trist. 2, 424 —Luc de finib. 1, 4 —De Offic. 2, 18. —Quintil 10, 1.—Lucret. 1, 117, &c.—C. Nep. in Catone

ENNOMUS, a Trojan prince, who with Chromis the commanded the Mysians He was skilled in the knowledge of augury, and at last perished by the hands of Achilles Homer. Il 2, 385 11, 422.

ENNOSIGÆUS, terræ concussor, a surname of Neptune. Juv. 10, 182

ENÖPE, a town of Peloponnesus, near Pylus. Paus. 3, 26.

ENOPS, a shepherd loved by the nymph Ne's, by whom he had Samius. Homer. Il 11, 443.—A Trojan killed by Patroclus Il 16, 401.

ENOS, a maritime town of Thrace, the foundation of which is attributed improperly to Æneas, as it existed before the Trojan war. Ptol 3, 11. —Homer Il 4, 520. Strab. 11.

ENOSICHTHON, a surname of Neptune.

ENTELLA, a town of Sicily, in the western quarter of the island, near the river Hypsa, and north east of Selinus. Ital 14, 20.—Cic. Verr. 4, 43.

ENTELLUS, a famous athlete among the friends of Æneas. He was intimate with Eryx, and entered the lists against Dares, whom he conquered in the funeral games of Anchises, in Sicily. Virg, Æn 5 347, &c

ENYALIUS, a surname of Mars.

ENYO, a sister of Mars, called by the Latins Bellona, supposed by some to be the daughter of Phorcys and Ceto. Ital. 10 276

EORDÆA a district at the west of Macedonia. Liv 31, 39. 33, 6 42, 53.

EOS, the name of Aurora among the Greeks, whence the epithet Eous is applied to all the eastern parts of the world Ovid Fast 3, 406. A. A. 3, 537 6 478 - Virg G 1, 288. 2, 115.

EOUS, one of the horses of the sun. Ovid. Met. 2, 153, &c

EPAGRIS, one of the Cyclades, called by Aristotle Hydrussa Plin 4, 12.

EPAMINONDAS, a famous Theban descended from the ancient kings of Bœotia His father's name was Polymnus He has been celebrated for his private virtues and military accomplishments. His love of truth was so great that he never disgraced himself by falsehood. He formed a most sacred and inviolable friendship with Pelopidas, whose life he saved in a battle By his advice Pelopidas delivered Thebes from the power of Lacedæmon. This was the signal of war. Epaminondas was set at the head of the Theban armies, and defeated the Spartans at the celebrated battle of Leuctra, about 371 years B C. Two years after this memorable success, Epaminondas and Pelopidas, being nominated Bœotarchs, or chiefs of the Bœotian league, entered the Peloponnesus Seventy thousand men of different nations marched under their orders and were led on by them against the city of Lacedæmon. The city was saved, however, by the skilful prudence of Agesilaus. The Theban commanders, on their return home, were accused of violating one of the rules of the Bœotian league, by having held their power over one year, which was the term prescribed by law for remaining in command. Pelopidas pusillanimously sunk under the charge, but Epaminondas displayed so much firmness and patient resignation to his fate, that he ingratiated the popular feeling in his favour, and the judges did not dare to condemn him. An unsuccessful campaign against Corinth, however, again subjected him to the loss of popular favour, and he was reduced to the condition of a private citizen. He afterwards served as a common soldier in an army sent to rescue Pelopidas from Alexander, tyrant of Pherae, and having, even in that humble rank, preserved the Theban forces from destruction, was reinstated in his former office of commander. After rescuing his friend he marched into the Peloponnesus, succeeded almost in making it itself master of Sparta, and at last ended his glorious career at the battle of Mantinea in Arcadia, where he fell in the arms of victory. The army of the Spartans and their allies consisted of 20,000 foot and 2,000 horse, that of the Thebans, of 30,000 infantry and 3,000 cavalry. The enemy had early betaken themselves to flight but rallying on a sudden, attacked Epaminondas, who was pursuing them with great ardour. He received a fatal wound in the breast and expired, exclaiming that he died unconquered, when he heard that the Boeotians obtained the victory, in the 48th year of his age, 363 years before Christ. The Thebans severely lamented his death, in him their power was extinguished, for only during his life they had enjoyed freedom and independence among the Grecian states. Epaminondas was frugal as well as virtuous, and he refused with indignation the rich presents which were offered to him by Artaxerxes the king of Persia. He is represented by his biographer as an elegant dancer and a skilful musician, accomplishments highly esteemed among his countrymen. Plut. in Pelopid. —C. Nep in vita.—Aeneph. Quest Graec.—Diod. 15.—Polyb. 1.

EPAPHRODITUS, a freedman punished with death for assisting Nero to destroy himself. Suet. in Ner.—A freedman of Augustus, sent as a spy to Cleopatra. Plut.—A name assumed by Sylla.

EPAPHUS, a son of Jupiter and Io, who founded a city in Egypt, which he called Memphis, in honour of his wife, who was the daughter of the Nile. He had a daughter called Libya, who became mother of Agyptus and Danaus by Neptune. He was worshipped as a god at Memphis. Herod. 2, 153.—Ovid. Met. 1, 6 9, &c.

EPASACTUS, a Gaul in alliance with Rome, &c. Caes. Bell. G. 8, 44.

EPEBOLUS, a soothsayer of Messena, who prevented Aristodemus from obtaining the sovereignty. Paus. 4, 9 &c.

EPEI, or EPEI, a people of Peloponnesus. Pin. 4, 5.

EPETIUM, now Imou, a town of Illyricum.

EPEUS, a son of Endymion, by Iphthe to Perse, who reigned in a part of Peloponnesus. His subjects were called from him Epei. Paus. 5, 1.—A son of Panopeus, who was the fabricator of the famous wooden horse, which proved the ruin of Troy. Virg. Aen. 2, 264.—Justin. 20, 2.—Paus. 10, 26.

EPHESUS, a city of Ionia, built, as Justin mentions, by the Amazons; or by Androclus, son of Codrus, according to Strabo; or by Ephesus a son of the river Cayster. It was famous for a temple of Diana, which was reckoned one of the seven wonders of the world. This temple was 425 feet long, 220 broad, and was adorned with the choicest paintings and statues. The roof was supported by 127 columns, sixty feet high, which had been placed there by so many kings. Of these columns, 36 were carved in the most beautiful manner, one of which was the work of the famous Scopas. This celebrated building occupied 220 years in completing. Cteaphon was the chief architect. There was above the entrance a huge stone, which, according to Pliny had fallen place there by Diana herself. The riches which were in the temple were immense, and the goddess who presided over it was worshipped with the most awful solemnity. This celebrated temple was burned to the ground on the night that Alexander was born (Val. Erostratus), and soon after it rose from its ruins with more splendour and magnificence. Alexander offered to rebuild it at his own expense, if the Ephesians would place upon it an inscription which denoted the name of the benefactor. This generous offer was refused by the Ephesians, who observed, in the language of adulation, that it was unbecoming in one deity to erect a temple to another. Lysimachus ordered the town of Ephesus to be called Arsinoe, in honour of his wife, but after his death the new appellation was lost, and the town was again known by its ancient name. The ruins of this once famed city are to be seen near the Turkish town of Aiasalouk, which seems to have risen about the middle of the fourteenth century. The Ephesians were much addicted to the use of spells and incantations, hence the words Ideae Ephesiae are applied to letters containing such magical powers as were fancied to enable persons easily to obtain their wishes. Pers. 36 14.—Strab. 12 et 14.—Mela, 1, 17.—Plin. 5, 2.—Paul in Act.—Justin 2, 4.—Callim. in Dian.—Plut.—Cic. de Nat. D. 2.

EPHETAE, a number of magistrates at Athens, first instituted by Demophoon, the son of Theseus. They were reduced to the number of 51 by Draco, who, according to some, first established them. They were superior to the Areopagites and their privileges were great and numerous. Solon, however, lessened their power, and entrusted them only with the trial of manslaughter and of conspiracy against the life of a citizen. They were all more than fifty years old, and it was required that their manners should be pure and innocent, and their behaviour austere and full of gravity.

EPHIALTES, or EPHIALTUS a giant son of Neptune who grew nine inches every month (Val. Alceus)—An Athenian, famous for his courage and strength. He fought with the Persians against Alexander, and was killed at Halicarnassus. Diod. 17.—A Trachinian, who led a detachment of the army of Xerxes to a secret path to attack the Spartans at Thermopylae. Paus. 1, 4.—Herod. 7, 213.

EPHORI, powerful magistrates at Sparta, who were first created by Lycurgus; or, according to some, by Theopompus, B. C. 760. They were five in number. Like censors in the state, they could check and restrain the authority of the kings, and even imprison them, if guilty of irregularities. They fined Archidamus for marrying a wife of small stature, and imprisoned Agis for his unconstitutional behaviour. They were much the same as the tribunes of the people at Rome, created to watch with a jealous eye over the liberties and rights of the populace. They had the management of the public money, and were the arbiters of peace and war. Their office was annual, and they had the privilege of convening, proroguing, and dissolving the greater and less assemblies of the people. The former was composed of 9000 Spartans, all inhabitants of the city, the latter of 30,000 Lacedæmonians, inhabitants of the inferior towns and villages. C. Nep. in Paus. 3 —Aristot Pol. 2, 7.

EPHORUS, an orator and historian of Cumæ in Æolia, about 352 years before Christ. He was a disciple of Isocrates, at whose instigation he wrote a history, which he commenced after the fabulous periods with the return of the Heraclidæ into the Peloponnesus, and brought down to the 20th year of Philip of Macedon. His work, now lost, was divided into 30 books, and was held in considerable esteem among the ancients, though some, especially Diodorus Siculus, accuse him of inaccuracy and falsehood. He left a son, called Demophilus, who is said to have finished the incomplete history of his father. Quintil 10, 1 —Cic Orat 2, 13 et 23. Br 56 Orat 51, 57.

EPHYRA, the ancient name of Corinth, which it received from a nymph of the same name, and thence Ephyræa is applied to Dyrrachium, founded by a Grecian colony Virg. G. 2, 294. —Ovid Met. 2, 239 —Lucan 6, 17.—Stat Theb 4, 59 —Ital. 14, 181 —A town of Epirus, at the head of the bay or harbour called Glykys Limen —A town of Elis, near the mouth of the river Selleis —One of Cyrene's attendants. Virg G. 4, 343

EPICASTE, a name of Jocasta, the mother and wife of Œdipus. Paus. 9, 5

EPICERIDES, a man of Cyrene, greatly esteemed by the Athenians for his beneficence. Demosth.

EPICHARIS, a woman accused of conspiracy against Nero She refused to confess the associates of her guilt, though exposed to the greatest torments, &c. Tacit. Ann. 15, 51 et 57.

EPICHARMUS, a native of the island of Cos, who flourished in the 5th century, B.C. His father removed him at an early age to Megara, and afterwards to Syracuse, where he became a disciple in the Pythagorean school Being prevented, by the tyranny of Hiero, from assuming the public profession of philosophy, he chiefly amused himself to the study of dramatic poetry, and offended the Pythagoreans, by introducing the doctrines and precepts of Pythagoras upon the stage His comedies were numerous, of which Suidas assigns to him fifty-two; but only a few fragments remain He taught a school at Syracuse, and is said to have added the letters ξ, ψ, ω, to the Greek alphabet. He also wrote commentaries upon medical and philosophical subjects. According to Lucian, he reached the great age of ninety seven. Horat. 2, ep. 1, 58.— Diog 3 et 8 — Cic. ad Attic. 1, ep. 19 Tusc 1, 5 —Theocr ep 17.

EPICLES, a Trojan prince, killed by Ajax. Homer. Il 12, 379

EPICLIDES, a Lacedæmonian of the family of the Eurystheneidæ He was raised to the throne by his brother Cleomenes III in the place of Agis, against the laws and constitution of Sparta. Paus 2, 9.

EPICRATES, a Milesian, servant to J. Cæsar. —A man of some eminence at Athens. Cic. Fam. 10, ep. 21.—The name is applied to Pompey, as expressive of supreme authority. Cic. ad Attic. 3, ep. 8.

EPICTETUS, an eminent Stoic philosopher, born in a servile condition at Hierapolis in Phrygia, who flourished in the first century of the Christian era. At an early age he was sold as a slave to Epaphroditus, a freedman of Nero He obtained his freedom by some means which are not related, and retired to a small hut within the city of Rome, where he devoted himself to study. Notwithstanding his poverty, he soon became a popular preceptor of morals. He was banished by Domitian with the other philosophers, and fixed his residence at Nicopolis in Phrygia. He returned to Rome after the death of the tyrant, and was greatly esteemed by Adrian. He died about the close of the reign of Adrian. His memory was so highly respected, that the few utensils which he possessed were purchased with avidity, and the earthen lamp by which he studied sold for 3000 drachmas, about 90*l.* sterling. Epictetus himself wrote nothing. His beautiful moral manual, or Enchiridion, and his "Dissertations," collected by Arrian, were drawn up from notes which his disciples took from his lips. Simplicius has left a commentary upon his doctrine, in the Eclectic manner. There are also various fragments of his wisdom preserved by Antoninus, Gellius, Stobæus, and others. Although the doctrine of Epictetus is less extravagant than that of any other Stoic, his writings every where breathe the true spirit of Stoicism. The sum of his moral precepts is Ἀνέχου καὶ ἀπέχου, "Endure and abstain." He inculcates contentment upon the principle, that all things happen according to the appointment of Providence, that is as the Stoics understood the term, according to the inevitable order of fate. The best edition of the Enchiridion is, that of Schweighæuser, Lips. 1798 2vo The able English version is that of Mrs Carter, publish in 1758, with notes. A Gell.—Arrian.

EPICURUS, a surname of Apollo, which he received from the assistance he gave to the people of Phigalia in Arcadia, when they were visited by a pestilence. Paus 8, 42.

EPICURUS, a celebrated philosopher, son of Neocles and Chærestrata, born at Gargettus in Attica. Though his parents were poor and of an obscure origin, yet he was early sent to school, where he distinguished himself by the brilliancy of his genius, and at the age of twelve, when his preceptor repeated to him this verse from Hesiod,

"Πάντων μὲν πρώτιστα χάος γένετ', &c.
In the beginning of things the Chaos was created,

Epicurus earnestly asked him who created it? To this the teacher answered that he knew not, but only philosophers. "Then," says the youth, "philosophers henceforth shall instruct me." After having improved himself, and enriched his mind by travelling, he visited Athens, which was then crowded by the followers of Plato, the Cynics, the Peripatetics, and the Stoics Here he established himself, and soon attracted a number of followers by the sweetness and gravity of his manners, and by his moral virtues. He taught them that the happiness of mankind consisted in pleasure, not such as arises from sensual gratification, or from vice, but from the enjoyments of the mind, from sobriety, from temperance, and a due restraint of the tumultuous and disorderly passions, and from the sweets of virtue. This doctrine was warmly attacked by the philosophers of the different sects, and particularly by the Stoics. They observed that he disgraced the gods by representing them as inactive, given up to pleasure, and unconcerned with the affairs of mankind. He refuted all the accusations of his adversaries by the purity of his morals, and by his frequent attendance on places of public worship. When Leontium, one of his female pupils, was accused of prostituting herself to her master and to all his disciples, the philosopher proved the falsity of the accusation by silence and an exemplary life. His health was at last impaired by continual labour, and he died of a retention of urine, which long subjected him to the most excruciating torments, and which he bore with unparalleled fortitude. His death happened 270 years before Christ in the seventy-second year of his age. His disciples showed their respect for the memory of their learned preceptor, by the unanimity which prevailed among them. While philosophers in every sect were at war with mankind and among themselves, the followers of Epicurus enjoyed perfect peace, and lived in the most solid friendship. The day of his birth was observed with universal festivity, and during a month all his admirers gave themselves up to mirth and innocent amusement. Of all the philosophers of antiquity, Epicurus is the only one whose writings deserve attention for their number. He wrote no less than 300 volumes, according to Diogenes Laertius, and Chrysippus was so jealous of the fecundity of his genius, that no sooner had Epicurus published one of his volumes, than he immediately composed one that he might not be overcome in the number of his productions. Epicurus, however, advanced truths and arguments unknown before, but Chrysippus said, what others long ago had said, without showing any thing which might be called original. The followers of Epicurus were numerous in every age and country, his doctrines were rapidly disseminated over the world, and when the gratification of the sense was substituted for the practice of virtue, the morals of mankind were undermined and destroyed. Even Rome, whose austere simplicity, had happily nurtured virtue, felt the attack, and was corrupted. When Cineas spoke of the tenets of the Epicureans in the Roman senate, Fabricius indeed intreated the gods that all the enemies of the republic might become his followers. But those were the feeble efforts of expiring virtue, and when Lucretius introduced the popular doctrine in his poetical composition, the smoothness and beauty of the numbers contributed, with the effeminacy of the Epicureans, to enervate the conquerors of the world. Diog. in vita.—Ælian. V. H 4, 13.—Cic. de Nat D. 1, 21 et 25.—Luc 3, 49.—De Finib. 2, 32.

EPICYDES, a tyrant of Syracuse, B. C. 213.

EPIDAMNUS, a town of Macedonia on the Adriatic, nearly opposite Brundusium. The Romans planted there a colony which they called Dyrrachium, considering the ancient name (ad damnum) ominous. Pous. 6, 10.—Plin 3, 23.—Plautus, Men 2, act. 1, 42.

EPIDAPHNE, a town of Syria, called also Antioch. Germanicus, son of Drusus, died there. Tacit. Ann. 2, 83.

EPIDAURIA, a festival at Athens in honour of Æsculapius.——A country of Peloponnesus.

EPIDAURUS, formerly called Epicarus, a city of Argolis, on the shores of the Sinus Saronicus, opposite the island of Ægina. It derived its principal celebrity from the neighbouring temple of Æsculapius, the resort of all who needed the assistance of the god, and built where he himself was reputed to have been born and educated, it was richly decorated with offerings, and stood within a grove surrounded by mountains. It contained also a famous statue of Æsculapius, which the Romans during a pestilence were advised to convey to their city, but, whilst the inhabitants delayed parting with the effigy a huge serpent coiled itself in the stern of the ship sent on this solemn embassy, and being taken for the god, was carried with great pomp to the banks of the Tiber. Epidaurus was famed for its vines and for its breed of fine horses. Its site is now known by the name of Epidhaura. Strab 8.—Pans 3, 23. Mela, 2, 3.—Homer Il 2, 561.—Virg. G. 3, 44.——A town of Laconia, surnamed Limera on the eastern coast, about 300 stadia from Epidaurum. It is now called Palero Kumrasia. Strab 8.—Thucyd. 4, 56 & 105.——A maritime town of Illyria, south of the river Naro. It is now Ragusa Vecchia. Cæs. B. Alex 44.

EPIDIUM, one of the Rhodæ Insulæ, now Isley.——A promontory of Caledonia, now the Mull of Cantyre.

EPIDIUS, a man who wrote concerning unusual prodigies. Plin 1b, 25.

EPIDOTÆ, certain deities who presided over the birth and growth of children, and were known among the Romans by the name of Dii averruncæ. They were worshipped by the Lacedæmonians, and chiefly invoked by those who were persecuted by the ghosts of the dead, &c. Pans. 3, 17. &c.

EPIGENES a Babylonian astrologer and historian. Plin. 7, 56.

EPIGILUS, a Grecian prince, who left his native country after the murder of a relation, and fled to Peleus, who engaged him to accompany his son Achilles to the Trojan war. He was, after many deeds of bravery, killed by Hector. Homer. Il 1b, 570.

EPIGONI, the sons and descendants of the Grecian heroes who were killed in the first Theban war. The war of the Epigoni is famous in ancient history. It was undertaken ten years after the first. The sons of those who had perished in the first war, resolved to avenge the death of their fathers, and marched against Thebes, under the command of Thersander; or, according to others, of Alcmæon the son of Amphiaraus. The Argives were assisted by the Corinthians, the people of Messenia, Arcadia, and Megara. The Thebans had engaged all their neighbours in their quarrel, as in one common cause, and the two hostile armies met and engaged on the banks of the Glissus. The fight was long, obstinate and bloody, but victory declared for the Epigoni, and some of the Thebans fled to Illyricum with Leodamas their general, while others retired into Thebes, where they were soon besieged, and forced to surrender. In this war Ægialeus alone was killed, and his father Adrastus was the only person who escaped alive in the first war. This whole war, as Pausanias observes, was written in verse; and Callimus, who quotes some of the verses, ascribes them to Homer, which opinion has been adopted by many writers. For my part, continues the geographer, I own that next to the Iliad and Odyssey of Homer, I have never seen a finer poem. Pans 9, 9 et 25.—Apollod. 1 et 3.—Diod. 4.—— This name has been applied to the sons of those Macedonian veterans, who in the age of Alexander formed connexions with the women of Asia. Justin. 12, 4.

EPIMENES, a man who conspired against Alexander's life. Curt 8, 6.

EPIMENIDES, a Cretan philosopher and poet, contemporary with Solon. Many wonderful tales are related concerning him. Among others it is said, that, being sent by his father in search of a strayed sheep, the heat of the day made him to withdraw to a cave, where he fell asleep, and remained without awakening for fifty years. It is also recorded of him, that he was favoured by peculiar communications from heaven, and enjoyed the gift of prophecy, and that he possessed the secret of sending his soul out of his body, and recalling it at pleasure. During a plague in Attica, the Athenians sent for him to perform a solemn lustration, in consequence of which, it is said, the gods were appeased and the plague ceased. He is reported to have lived, after his return to Crete, to the age of 157 years. Most of these fictions may probably have originated with the Cretans, who were, to a proverb, famous for their powers of invention. The most probable account of Epimenides is, that he was a man of superior talents, who pretended to hold intercourse with the gods, and in order to justify his pretensions, lived in retirement upon the spontaneous productions of the earth, and practised various arts of imposture. At the time of his pretended inspiration, he might, possibly, have the art of appearing totally insensible and entranced, which would be considered by ignorant and deluded spectators as a power of dismissing and recalling his spirit. Solon seems to have been no stranger to the true character of Epimenides, for we find that he greatly disapproved of the conduct of the Athenians in employing him to perform the above mentioned ceremony. Divine honours were paid him after his death by the superstitious Cretans. He wrote various pieces, none of which remain. His treatise on oracles and responses, mentioned by St Jerome, is said to have been the work from which St Paul quotes in the epistle of Titus, 1, 12. Cic. de Div. 1, 34.—Diog. in vit.—Paus. 1, 14.—Plut. in Solon.—Val. Max. 8, 13.—Strab 10.—Plin. 7, 12.

EPIMETHEUS, a son of Japetus and Clymene, one of the Oceanides, who inconsiderately married Pandora, by whom he had Pyrrha the wife of Deucalion. He had the curiosity to open the box which Pandora had brought with her (vid Pandora), and from thence issued a train of evils, which from that moment have never ceased to afflict the human race. Hope was the only one which remained at the bottom of the box, not having sufficient time to escape, and it is she alone which comforts us under misfortunes. Epimetheus was changed into a monkey by the gods, and sent into the island of Pithecusa. Apollod. 1, 2 et 7.—Hygin fab. 142.—Hesiod. Theog. 512. Vid. Promethens.

EPIMETHIS, a patronymic of Pyrrha, the daughter of Epimetheus. Ovid. Met. 1, 360.

EPITUS, a son of Lycurgus, who received divine honours in Arcadia.

EPIUS, the wife of Æsculapius. Paus. 2, 29.

EPIPHANEA, a town of Cilicia Campestris, on the small river Carsus, near the range of mount Amanus. It was first called Oeniandus. Plin. 5, 27.—Cic. Fam. Ep. 15, 4.——A city of Syria, on the Orontes, south of Apamia. Its oriental and true name was Hamath, and it was rebuilt by the people of the East one of the most magnificent cities in the world, having been founded, as they imagined, by Hamath, one of the sons of Canaan. Its name was changed by the Macedonians in honour of Antiochus Epiphanes. It is now called Hamah.

EPIPHANES, (illustrious), a surname given to the Antiochi, kings of Syria. Tacit. Hist 5, 39.——A surname of one of the Ptolemies, the fifth of the house of the Lagidæ. Strab 17.——The surname of Epiphanes is also applied to Jupiter, because he appeared to mankind. Cic. de Nat. D 2.

EPIPHANIUS, a christian writer, was born about A. D. 320, at Besanduce, in Palestine. He studied in Egypt, and, on his return into Syria, founded a monastery at his native village, in 367, he was chosen bishop of Salamis, the metropolis of Cyprus, where he condemned the writings of Origen, and held a contest with John, bishop of Jerusalem. He died in 403. His works in Greek were printed at Basil, in folio, 1544; again, with a Latin translation, at Paris, in 1622; and at Cologne in 2 vols. fol., 1682.——A scholast of the sixth century, the friend of Cassiodorus. He translated the Greek histories of Socrates, Sozomen, and Theodoret, into Latin.

EPIPOLÆ, a piece of high ground without the city of Syracuse, on the north side, surrounded by a wall, by Dionysius, who, to complete the work expeditiously, employed 60 000 men upon it, so that in thirty days he finished a wall 4½ miles long, and of great height and thickness. It received its name from being so elevated above Syracuse, the whole of which could be seen from it.

EPIRUS, a country of Greece, bounded on the north by Macedonia, on the east by Thessaly, on the south by Ætolia and Acarnania, and on the west by the Ionian sea. It appears to have received its name from the Greek term ἤπειρος continens, which was probably applied to it at an early period, in contradistinction to the numerous islands scattered along the coast. It was divided into the districts Chaonia, Thesprotia, Molossis, Athamania, and Aperantia. According to tradition, Neoptolemus, or Pyrrhus, the son of Achilles, went over to Epirus after the siege of Troy, and having subjugated a considerable extent of territory founded a kingdom, which he transmitted to his son Molossus. From him the sceptre passed into various hands, till it reached those of the ambitious Alexander; when the dynasty of the Æacids succeeded to the throne. On the extinction of this family, the government assumed a republican form, until its total subversion by the Romans, who, hiding their jealousy of the Epirots in an accusation of their favouring Perseus during the last Macedonian war, treated them with unexampled and detestable severity, reducing them to slavery, and their territory to a wilderness. Though Epirus was in many parts a mountainous country, it was very fertile, and produced excellent cattle, as well as large dogs and fleet horses. The people are said to have spoken the same language, and to have worn the same dress, as the Macedonians, so that the two nations were probably descended from a common stock. The country of Epirus answers to the Lower Albania of the present day. Diod. Sic. 17 et 19.—Strab. 7.—Liv. 45, 34.—Plin. Nat. 4, 81. 7, 56.—Virg. G. 1, fr. 3, 405.

EPISTROPHUS, a son of Iphitus king of Phocis, who went to the Trojan war at the head of the Phœnian nation. Homer. Il. 2, 24.——A prince who assisted the Trojans against the Greeks. Homer. Il. 2, 363.

EPITADES, a man who first violated a law of Lycurgus, which forbade laws to be made. Plut. in Agid.

EPITHRAGIA, a surname given by Theseus to Venus, because she changed the sex of the goats which he offered to her divinity before he set sail for Crete. There was a remarkable statue of this goddess in Elis, said to be the work of Scopas. Plut. in Thes.

EPITUS. Vid. Epytus.

EPOPEUS, a son of Neptune and Canace, who came from Thessaly to Sicyon, and carried away Antiope, daughter of Nicteus king of Thebes. This rape was followed by a war, in which Nicteus and Epopeus were both killed. Paus. 2, 6.——Apollod. 1, 7, &c.——A son of Aleeus, grandson to Phœbus. He reigned at Corinth. Paus. 2, 1 et 3.——One of the Tyrrhene sailors, who attempted to abuse Bacchus Ovid Met 3, 610

EPORÉDORIX, a powerful person among the Ædui, who commanded his countrymen in their war against the Sequani. Cæs. Bell. G. 7, 67.

EPULO, a Rutulian killed by Achates. Virg. Æn. 12, 459.

EPYTIDES, a patronymic given to Periphas the son of Epytus, and the companion of Ascanius. Virg. Æn. 5, 547.

EPYTUS, a king of Alba. Ovid. Fast. 4, 44.——A king of Messenia, of the family of the Heraclidæ. He was son of Cresphontes, and his reign was so mild and equitable that his descendants exchanged the honourable name of Heraclidæ for that of Epytides He was succeeded by Glaucus, equally illustrious with his father. Paus. 4, 3.——The father of Periphas, a herald in the Trojan war. Homer. Il. 17, 328.

EQUICULUS, a Rutulian, engaged in the wars of Æneas. Virg. Æn. 9, 684.

EQUIRIA, festivals established at Rome by Romulus, in honour of Mars, when horse races and games were exhibited in the Campus Martius, on the 27th of February and the 14th of March. Varro de L. L. 5, 3.—Ovid Fast 2, 859.

EQUITES, the second order in the Roman state, forming an intermediate bond between the patricians and the plebeians. At first they were merely a body of 300 young men, chosen by Romulus, 100 from each tribe. They were the most distinguished for rank, wealth, and other accomplishments, and their duty was to serve on horseback, and attend the king as a body guard. Their original name was Celeres. Their number was augmented by Tullus Hostilius, who chose 300 more from the Albans. They were afterwards increased to 1200 by Tarquinius Priscus, or perhaps to 1800 Servius Tullius made eighteen centuries of Equites, choosing twelve new ones, and making six others out of the original three 10,000 pounds of brass were given to each of them to purchase horses, and a tax was laid on widows, who were exempt from other contributions, for maintaining their horses. They were required to possess a fortune of 400 sesterces (3,229*l.* sterling), at least towards the end of the republic and under the emperors. Their principal occupation was at first to serve in the army, but afterwards to act as judges or jurymen, and to farm the public revenues. They were reviewed every fifth year, and if an Eques had been corrupt in his morals, or had diminished his fortune, or even had not taken proper care of his horse, he was ordered by the censor to sell his horse, which was tantamount to degradation. In cases less flagrant, the name of the offender was merely left out of the list of Equites.

EQUUS TUTICUS, now Castel Franco, a town of Samnium, on the Appian Way, to which, as some suppose, Horace alludes in this verse, Sat 1, 5, 87.

"Mansurus oppidulo quod versus decere non est."

ERACON, an officer of Alexander, imprisoned for his cruelty. Curt. 10

ERANA, a small village of Cilicia on mount Amanus Cic. Fam. 15. ep. 4.

ERASENUS, a river of Peloponnesus, flowing for a little space under the ground in Argolis. Ovid. Met. 15, 275.—Plin. 2, 13.

ERASISTRATUS, a celebrated physician, was born in the island of Ceos, and was the disciple of Chrysippus, in the fourth century before the Christian era. He lived in the court of Seleucus Nicator, king of Syria, and was the father of anatomical science; to improve himself in which, he dissected human bodies, and thereby made many discoveries, particularly in regard to the brain. His practice was very simple, but none of his works are extant. Plin. 29, 15.—A. Gellius, 16, 3.—Val Max 5, 7.

ERATO, one of the Muses, who presided over lyric, tender, and amorous poetry She is represented as crowned with roses and myrtle, holding in her right hand a lyre, and a lute in her left, musical instruments, of which she is considered by some as the inventress. Love is sometimes placed by her side holding a lighted flambeau, while she herself appears with a thoughtful, but oftener with a gay and animated look. She was invoked by lovers, especially in the month of April, which, among the Romans, was more particularly devoted to love. Apollod. 10.—Hyg. Æn. 7, 37.—Ovid. de Art. Am. 2, 425.——One of the Nereides. Apollod. 1, 2.——One of the Dryades, wife of Arcas, king of Arcadia. Paus. 8, 4.——One of the Danaides, who married Bromius ——A queen of the Armenians, after the death of Ariobarsanes, &c Tacit Ann. 2, 4.

ERATOSTHENES, a native of Cyrene, who was the second intrusted with the care of the Alexandrian library. He dedicated his time to grammatical criticism and philosophy, but more particularly to poetry and mathematics. He has been called a second Plato, the cosmographer, and the geometer of the world. He is supposed to be the inventor of the armillary sphere. With the instruments with which the munificence of the Ptolemies supplied the library of Alexandria, he was enabled to measure the obliquity of the ecliptic, which, in the year 230 B. C, he makes 23° 51′ 20″. He also measured a degree of the meridian, and determined the extent and circumference of the earth with great exactness, by means adopted by the moderns. He starved himself after he had lived to his eighty-second year, B. C. 194, not being able to bear up under the depression of spirits occasioned by the decay of his sight. Some few fragments remain of his compositions. He collected the annals of the Egyptian kings by order of one of the Ptolemies. Cic. ad Attic. 2, ep. 6. Varro de R. R. 1, 2.

ERATOSTRATUS, an Ephesian who burned the famous temple of Diana, the same night that Alexander the Great was born. This burning as some writers have observed, was not prevented or seen by the goddess of the place, who was then present at the labours of Olympias, and the birth of the conqueror of Persia. Eratostratus did this villany merely to eternize his name by so uncommon an action. Plut. in Alex.—Val. Max. 8, 14.

ERATUS, a son of Hercules and Dynaste. Apollod.——A king of Sicyon, who died B. C. 1071.

ERBESUS, a strongly fortified town of Sicily, north east of Agrigentum. Polyb. 1, 18.—Diod. Sic. 23, 9.

ERCHIA, a small village of Attica, the birth place of Xenophon. Lucrt. 2, 45.

EREBUS, a deity of hell, son of Chaos and Darkness. He married Night, by whom he had the light and the day. The poets often use the word Erebus for the gloomy region in the shades, distinguished both from Tartarus the place of torment, and from Elysium the region of bliss. Ov. de Nat. D. 3, 17.—Virg. Æn. 4, 28.

ERECHTHEUS, son of Pandion I., was the sixth king of Athens. He was father of Cecrops II., Metion, Pandorus, and of four daughters, Preusa, Orithya, Proeris, and Othonia, by Praxithea. Some have referred to this reign the arrival of Ceres in Attica after the rape of her daughter Proserpine, who taught the cultivation of corn, and the institution by her of the Eleusinian mysteries. After death he received divine honours. He reigned 50 years, and died B. C. 1437. Ovid. Met. 6, 677.—Paus. 2, 25.—Apollod. 3, 15.—Cic. pro Sext. 21. Fast. 1, 43. Nat. D. 3, 15.

ERECHTHIDES, a name given to the Athenians from their king Erechtheus. Ovid. Met. 7, 430.

ERESUS, a town of Æolia, twenty-eight stadia from the Promontorium Signium. It was the birth place of Theophrastus. Its site still retains the name of Eresso. Plin. 5, 30.—P. Mela, 1, 18.

ERETRIA, a town of the island of Eubœa, situate on the coast of the Euripus, south-east of Chalcis. It was founded by some Athenians belonging to the demus Eretria, and attained to considerable opulence and power before its destruction by Darius. It was rebuilt shortly after, but never regained its former importance. Its modern name is Gravillinois. Paus. 7, 3, &c.—Mela 2, 7.—C. Nep. in Mil. 4.

ERETUM, a town of the Sabines, north of Nomentum and north-east of Fidenæ, and near the Tiber. Virg. Æn. 7, 711.—Tibull 4, 3, 4.

ERETHALION, a man killed by Nestor in a war between the Pylians and Arcadians. Hom. Il. 7.

ERGENNUS, a celebrated soothsayer of Etruria. Pers. 2, 26.

ERGINUS, a king of Orchomenos, son of Clymenus. He obliged the Thebans to pay him a yearly tribute of 100 oxen, because his father had been killed by a Theban. Hercules attacked his servants, who came to raise the tribute, and mutilated them, and he afterwards killed Erginus, who attempted to avenge their death by invading Bœotia with an army. Apollod. 2.—Pindar. Olymp. 4.—Paus. 9, 17.——One of the four brothers who kept the Acrocorinth, by order of Augeus. Paus. 6.

ERGINNUS, a man made master of the ship Argo by the Argonauts, after the death of Typhis.

ERIBŒA, a surname of Juno. Homer. Il. 5.——The mother of Ajax Telamon. Sophocl. in Ajac.

ERICÆTES, a man of Lycaonia, killed by Mezentius in Italy. Virg. Æn. 10, 749.

ERICHTHO, a Thessalian woman, famous for her knowledge of poisonous herbs and medicine. Lucan. 6, 507.——One of the Furies. Ovid.—Hesiod. 2, 151.

ERICHTHONIUS, the fourth king of Athens, sprung from the seed of Vulcan which fell upon the ground when that god attempted to offer violence to Minerva. He was very deformed, and had the tails of serpents instead of legs. Minerva placed him in a basket, which she gave to the daughters of Cecrops, with strict injunctions not to examine its contents. Aglaurus, one of the sisters, had the curiosity to open the basket, for which the goddess punished her indiscretion by making her jealous of her sister Herse. (Vid. Herse.) Erichthonius was young when he ascended the throne of Athens. He reigned fifty years, and died B.C. 1437. The invention of chariots is attributed to him, and the manner of harnessing horses to draw them. He was made a constellation after death, under the name of Bootes. Ovid. Met. 2, 517. Hygin. fab. 166.—Apollod. 3, 14.—Paus. 2, 14.—Virg. G. 3, 113.——A son of Dardanus, who reigned in Troy, and died 1374 B.C., after a long reign of about 75 years. He married Astyoche daughter of the Simois, by whom he had Tros. Hom. Il. 20, 219.—Apollod. 3, 12.

ERICUSA, one of the Lipari isles, now Vacuna.

ERIDANUS, a river of Italy, in Cisalpine Gaul, called also Padus, now the Po. It rises in Mons Vesulus, now Monte Viso; runs first south, and then east, and after a course of 370 miles, empties itself into the Adriatic by seven mouths. It receives, in its progress, the waters of more than thirty rivers from the Alps and Apennines. It is famous for the death of Phaeton, and the metamorphosis of his sisters into poplars. Virgil calls it the king of rivers, and Lucan compares it to the Rhine and Danube. Apoll. Rhod Argon. 4, 610.—Polyb. 2, 16.—Plin. 2, 103.—Virg. G. 1, 482. Æn 6, 659.—Lucan. 2, 409.

ERIGONE, a daughter of Icarius, who hung herself when she heard that her father had been killed by some shepherds whom he had intoxicated. She was made a constellation, known under the name of Virgo; and her dog, called Mera (Erigonius canis), became also a constellation called Canicula. Bacchus deceived her by changing himself into a beautiful grape. Ovid. Met. 6, fab. 4.—Stat. Theb. 11, 644.—Virg. G. 1, 33.—Apollod. 3, 14.—Hygin. fab. 1 et 24.——A daughter of Ægisthus and Clytemnestra, who had by her brother Orestes, Penthilus, who shared the regal power with Tisamenus, the illegitimate son of Orestes and Hermione. Paus. 2, 18.—Paterc. 1, 1.

ERIGONEIUS, a name applied to the Dog-star. (Vid. Erigone.) Ovid. Past. 5, 723.

ERIGONUS, a river of Thrace.——A painter. Plin. 35, 11.

ERIGYIUS, a Mitylenean, one of Alexander's officers. Curt. 6, 4.

ERILLUS, a philosopher of Carthage, contemporary with Zeno. Diog.

ERINDES, a river of Asia, near Parthia. Tac. ex. Ann. 11, 10.

ERINNA, a poetess of Greece, who is supposed to have been contemporary with Sappho, about 600 B.C. She was celebrated for her poetical talents, and several epigrams were written upon her, one of which speaks of her as inferior to Sappho in lyrics, and superior in hexameters.

Some fragments are extant in her name, which are inserted in the Carmina veterum Poetarum Pseudonymorum, Antv. 1568, and in the Edinburgh edition of Anacreon, 1754.

ERINNYS, the Greek name of the Rumenides. The word signifies the fury of the mind, ἴρις νόῦ (Vid. Rumenides) Virg. Æn. 2, 337 ——A surname of Ceres, on account of her amour with Neptune under the form of a horse. The name is meant to express the anger of the goddess towards Neptune. Paus 8, 25 et 42.

ERIOPIS, a daughter of Medea. Paus. 2, 3.

ERIPHANIS, a Greek woman famous for her poetical compositions. She was extremely fond of the hunter Melampus, and to enjoy his company she accustomed herself to live in the woods. Athen. 14

ERIPHIDAS, a Lacedæmonian, who being sent to suppress a sedition at Heraclea, assembled the people and beheaded 300 of the ringleaders. Diod. 14.

ERIPHILE, a sister of Adrastus, king of Argos, who married Amphiaraus She was daughter of Talaus and Lysimache When her husband concealed himself, that he might not accompany the Argives in their expedition against Thebes where he knew he was to perish, Eriphyle suffered herself to be bribed by Polynices with a golden necklace, which had been formerly given to Hermione by the goddess Venus, and she discovered where Amphiaraus was This treachery of Eriphyle compelled him to go to the war, but before he departed, he charged his son Alcmæon to murder his mother as soon as he was informed of his death Amphiaraus perished in the expedition, and his death was no sooner known than his last injunctions were obeyed, and Eriphyle was murdered by the hands of her son. Virg. Æn. 6, 445 —Homer. Odyss 11.—Cic. in Verr. 4, 14 —Apollod. 1, 9 3, 6 et 7 —Hygin. fab 73.—Paus 5, 17.

ERIS, the goddess of discord among the Greeks. She is the same as the Discordia of the Latins. Vid. Discordia.

ERISICHTHON, a Thessalian, son of Triops, who derided Ceres, and cut down her groves. This impiety irritated the goddess, who afflicted him with continual hunger. He squandered all his possessions to gratify the cravings of his appetite, and at last he devoured his own limbs for want of food. His daughter Metra had the power of transforming herself into whatever animal she pleased, and she made use of that artifice to maintain her father, who sold her, after which she assumed another shape and became again his property. Ovid. Met. fab 18.

ERITHUS, a son of Actor, killed by Perseus. Ovid. Met 5.

ERIXO, a Roman knight, condemned by the people for having whipped his son to death. Senec de Clem. 1, 14

EROPUS, or ÆROPAS, a king of Macedonia, who when in the cradle succeeded his father Philip I. B.C. 602. He made war against the Illyrians, whom he conquered. Justin. 7. 2.

EROS, a servant, of whom Antony demanded a sword to kill himself Eros produced the instrument, but instead of giving it to his master, he killed himself in his presence. Plut. in Anton.——A comedian. Cic. pro Rosc. 2.——A son of Chronos or Saturn, god of love. Vid. Cupido.

EROSTRATUS Vid. Erostratus.

EROTIA, a festival in honour of Eros, the god of love. It was celebrated by the Thespians every fifth year with sports and games, when musicians and others contended. If any quarrels or seditions had arisen among the people, it was then usual to offer sacrifices and prayers to the god, that he would totally remove them.

ERSE, a daughter of Cecrops. Vid Herse.

ERYALUS, a Trojan chief killed by Patroclus. Homer Il 16, 411.

ERYCINA, a surname of Venus, from Mount Eryx, where she had a temple She was also worshipped at Rome under this appellation Ovid. Fast. 4, 874. Horat. Od. 1 2, 33.

ERYMANTHUS a surname of Calliste, as an inhabitant of Erymanthus —— Arcadia is also known by that name, from its containing Mount Erymanthus

ERYMANTHUS, a mountain chain in the north-west angle of Arcadia, celebrated in fable as the haunt of the savage boar destroyed by Hercules It is now called Olenus Apollod 2, 5, 4.—Paus. 8, 24 —Homer Odyss 6, 102.——A river of Arcadia, rising in the mountain of the same name, and, after receiving another small stream, called the Aroanius, joining the Alpheus on the borders of Elis. It is now the Dogana. Callim. Hymn in Jov.—Ovid Met. 4, 214

ERYMAS, a Trojan killed by Turnus. Virg. Æn 9, 702.

ERYMNUS, a peripatetic philosopher, who flourished B C 126

ERYTHEA, an island off the coast of Iberia, in the Atlantic. It lay in the Sinus Gaditanus, or Bay of Cadiz, and was remarkable for its fertility. It was the dwelling place of Geryon whom Hercules robbed of his cattle. (Vid. Hercules and Geryon) Plin. 4, 22 —Mela, 3, 6 —A daughter of Geryon. Paus 10, 37.

ERYTHRÆ, one of the twelve cities of Ionia, situate near the coast opposite Chios. It is said to have derived its name and origin from Erythrus, son of Rhadamanthus, at the head of a Cretan and Lycian colony; but it was afterwards increased by a body of Ionians, led by Cnopus, son of Codrus. It was famous for a very ancient temple of Hercules, and as the residence of the Sibil Herophile. Its site retains the name of Ritre Herod. 1, 142.—Strab. 14.—Paus 7, 5, 10, 12 —— A city of Bœotia, near Mount Cithæron. Strab. 9.—Homer. Il. 2, 499.

ERYTHRÆUM MARE, a name given by the Greeks to the whole ocean, extending from the coast of Ethiopia to the island of Taprobana, when their geographical knowledge of India was in its infancy. Afterwards, when they learned the existence of an Indian ocean the term Erythræan Sea was applied merely to the sea below Arabia, and to the Arabian and Persian Gulfs. The appellation was probably derived from Edom (Easu), whose descendants were called Idumæans, and inhabited the northern parts of Arabia. The Idumæans navigated upon the Red Sea and Persian Gulf, and also upon the Indian ocean, and the oriental name Idumæan signified red. Whence the sea of the Idumæans was called the Red Sea, and the Erythræan Sea, (Ἐρυθρὰ θάλασσα). (Vid Arabicus Sinus.) Paus 1, 5. 10, 12.—Curt. 8. 9.—Plin 6. 23.—Herod. 1, 180 et 189. 3. 93. 4, 37 —Mela 3, 8

ERYX, a son of Butes and Venus, who relying upon his strength, challenged all strangers to fight with him in the combat of the cestus. Hercules accepted his challenge after many had yielded to his superior dexterity, and Eryx was killed in the combat, and buried on the mountain, where he had built a temple to Venus. Virg. Æn. 5, 468.——An Indian killed by his subjects for opposing Alexander, &c. Curt. 8, 11.——A mountain of Sicily, near Drepanum, which received its name from Eryx, who was buried there. It is now called Monte St Juliano, or, Monte di Trapani.——A town of Sicily, now Trapani del Monte, situated on the summit of Mount Eryx, difficult of access, and famous for a temple of Venus, called Erycina. It is said that this town was destroyed by Hamilcar, who, in the first Punic war removed its inhabitants to Drepanum, which he had built not long before. Ovid. Fast. 4, 475.—Hygin. fab. 10 et 260.—Luc. 28, 9. Mela, 2, 7.—Paus. 3, 16.

ERYXO, the mother of Battus, who artfully killed the tyrant Learchus who courted her Herod. 4, 160.

ESERNUS a famous gladiator. Cic.

ESQUILIÆ and ESQUILINUS MONS, the most extensive of the seven hills of Rome, added to the city by Servius Tullius. Varro mentions that the name of the Esquiliæ was derived from the Latin word excultus it having been planted by Servius with several sacred groves. It was divided into two principal heights, Cispius and Oppius. Part only of this hill was included within the walls In the early days of Rome, there was a plot of ground without the city called the Campus Esquilinus, which was used as a cemetery for the lower orders, and in which there was a place allotted for executions, called Sestertium. Varro L. L. 4, 8 Horat. Sat. 1, 8, 10.—Epod. 5, 100.—Tacit. Ann. 2, 32.

ESSEDONES, a people of Asia, above the Palus Mœotis, who ate the flesh of their parents mixed with that of cattle They gilded the head, and kept it as a sacred relic. Mela, 2, 1.—Plin 4, 12.

ESTIÆOTIS, that portion of Thessaly which lies near Pindus, and between that mountain and Upper Macedonia. Strab 9.

ESTIATA, solemn sacrifices to Vesta, of which it was unlawful to carry away any thing or communicate it to any body.

ESULA, a town of Italy near Tibur. Horat. Od. 3, 29, 6.

ETEARCHUS, a king of Oaxus in Crete. After the death of his wife, he married a woman who made herself odious to her by tyranny over her step-daughter Plaonima. Etearchus gave ear to all the accusations which were brought against his daughter, and ordered her to be thrown into the sea. She had a son called Battus, who led a colony to Cyrene. Herod 4, 154.

ETEOCLES, a son of Œdipus and Jocasta. After his father's death, it was agreed between him and his brother Polynices, that they should both share the royalty, and reign alternately each a year Eteocles by right of seniority first ascended the throne, but after the first year of his reign was expired, he refused to give up the crown to his brother according to their mutual agreement. Polynices, resolving to punish such an open violation of a solemn engagement, went to implore the assistance of Adrastus, king of Argos. He received that king's daughter in marriage, and was soon after assisted with a strong army, headed by seven famous generals. These hostile preparations were watched by Eteocles, who on his part did not remain inactive. He chose seven brave chiefs to oppose the seven leaders of the Argives, and stationed them at the seven gates of the city. He placed himself against his brother Polynices, and he opposed Menalippus to Tydeus, Polyphontes to Capaneus, Mœgareus to Eteoclus, Hyperbius to Parthenopæus, and Lasthenes to Amphiaraus. Much blood was shed in fight and unavailing skirmishes, and it was at last agreed between the two brothers that the war should be decided by single combat. They both fell in an engagement conducted with the most inveterate fury on either side, and it is even said that the ashes of these two brothers, who had been so inimical one to the other, separated themselves on the burning pile, as if even after death, sensible of resentment, and hostile to reconciliation. Stat Theb. 12.—Apollod. 3, 5, &c.—Æschyl. Sept. ante Theb.—Eurip. in Phœn.—Paus 5, 9, 9, 6.——A Greek, son of Andreus, by a daughter of Leucon, king of Orchomenos, the first who raised altars to the Graces. Paus 9, 35.

ETEOCLUS, one of the seven chiefs of the army of Adrastus, in his expedition against Thebes, celebrated for his valour, for his disinterestedness and magnanimity. He was killed by Mœgareus, the son of Creon, under the walls of Thebes. Eurip. in Supp.—Apollod. 3, 6.

ETEOCRUS, an officer at the court of Menelaus, when Telemachus visited Sparta. He was son of Boethus. Homer. Od 4, 22.

ETEONICUS, a Lacedæmonian general, who upon hearing that Callicratidas was conquered at Arginusæ, ordered the messengers of this news to be crowned, and to enter Mitylene in triumph. This so terrified Conon, who besieged the town, that he concluded that the enemy had obtained some advantageous victory, and he raised the siege. Justin. 14.—Polyæn. 1.

ETEONUS, a town of Bœotia, on the Asopus. Stat. Theb. 7, 256.

ETESIÆ, periodical northern winds of a gentle and mild nature, very common for five or six weeks in the months of spring and autumn. They were generally preceded by winds, which the ancients called Prodromi. Lucret. 5, 741).

ETHALION, one of the Tyrrhene sailors changed into dolphins for carrying away Bacchus. Ovid. Met 3, 647.

ETHEMON, a person killed at the marriage of Andromeda. Ovid Met. 5, 163.

ETRURIA. Vid Hetruria.

ETRUSCI, the inhabitants of Etruria, famous for their superstitions and enchantments. (Vid. Hetruria) Cic. ad Fam. 6 ep. 6.—Liv. 2, 49.

CL. ETRUSCUS, a man raised from a mean condition to an equestrian rank by Vespasian, for his services in the war against the Jews. When banished by Domitian, he was accompanied into exile by his son. whose sorrow on the father's death is celebrated by Statius in a poem called Lucrymæ Etruscı. Etruscus built a bath called by his own name, and highly commended. Mart. 7, ep. 30. 6, ep. 42.—Stat. Sylv. 1, 5 3, 2.

EUBAGES, certain priests held in great veneration among the Gauls and Britons. They were a branch of the Druids.

EUBATAS, an athlete of Cyrene, whom the courtezan Lais in vain endeavoured to seduce. Paus Eliac. 1, 8.

EUBŒA, a large and celebrated island, lying along the coast of Locris, Bœotia, and Attica. It is said to have derived its name from Io, who here gave birth to Epaphus. It was anciently known by the various appellations of Macris, Ocha, Ellopia, Asopis, and Abantis. Its greatest length is 90 miles, and its average breadth about ten miles. The champaign country was exceedingly fertile, and produced corn, wine, oil, and fruits; but it was chiefly famous for its pastures. The earliest inhabitants were the Abantes, who dwelt in the southern part of the island; in the north were the Istiæi. In process of time, some of the Ionians, who migrated from Athens, settled here; and carrying on a commercial intercourse with their brethren in Ionia, became distinguished for their wealth and prosperity. The principal commercial cities were Chalcis and Eretria. The modern name of Rubœa is Negropont, formed by a series of corruptions from the word Euripus, which designated the narrow strait separating the island from the Bœotian coast. Strab. 10. – Plin. 4, 12.—Homer. Il. 2, 536.—Ovid. Met. 14, 155.——One of the three daughters of the river Asterion, who was one of the nurses of Juno. Paus. 2, 17 ——One of Mercury's sons by Thessa. ——A daughter of Thespius. Apollod. 2 ——A town of Sicily near Hybla.

EUBŒICUS, belonging to Rubœa. The epithet is also applied to the country of Cumæ, because that city was built by a colony from Chalcis, a town of Eubœa. Ovid. Fast 4, 257.—Virg. Æn. 6, 2. 9, 710.

EUBOLE, an Athenian virgin, daughter of Leon, sacrificed with her sisters, by order of the oracle of Delphi, for the safety of her country, which laboured under a famine. Ælian. V. H. 12, 18.

EUBULIDES, a philosopher of Miletus, who flourished B. C. 300. He was the disciple and successor of Euclid, and a strenuous opponent of Aristotle. Eubulides was a complete sophist, and the inventor of a species of syllogisms, calculated to confound truth, and to perplex the understanding. Diog. Laert. 2, 108, &c.——A famous statuary of Athens. Paus. 8, 14.

EUBULUS, an Athenian orator, rival to Demosthenes.——A comic poet of Athens, born in the borough of Atarnea. He exhibited about B. C. 375. He was the author of fifty comedies ——A philosopher of Alexandria.

EUCRATES, a man of Alexandria, accused of adultery with Octavia, that Nero might have occasion to divorce her. Tacit. Ann. 14, 60.

EUCHENOR, a son of Ægyptus and Arabia. Apollod. ——A son of Polyidus, who was told that he should die of a lingering disease in his palace, or gloriously perish in war. He preferred an honourable death, and accompanied the Greeks to Troy, where he was slain. Homer. Il. 13, 663

EUCLIDES, a native of Megara, founder of the Megaric or Eristic sect. He was a disciple of Socrates when a separation took place between them, owing to the love which Euclid showed for disputation. He then went to Megara, where he established a school. He was averse to the analogical method of reasoning, and taught that legitimate argumentation consists in drawing just conclusions from settled premises. Being asked what he thought of the gods, he said, "I know no more of them than this, that they hate inquisitive persons." Diog. Laert. 2, 30. 3, 6. 6, 32.—— A celebrated mathematician, who appears to have been a native of Alexandria in Egypt, where he taught mathematics in the reign of Ptolemy Lagus, about 296 B. C. He was the first who established a mathematical school at Alexandria, and it existed and maintained its reputation till the Mahometan conquest of Egypt. Many of the fundamental principles of the pure mathematics had been discovered by Thales, Pythagoras, and other predecessors of Euclid; but to him is due the merit of having given a systematic form to the science, especially that part of it which relates to geometry. He likewise studied the cognate sciences of astronomy and optics; and, according to Proclus, he was the author of "Elements," "Data," "An Introduction to Harmony," "Phænomena," "Optics," "Catoptrics," "A Treatise on the Division of Surfaces," "Porisms," &c. His most valuable work, "The Elements of Geometry," has been repeatedly published. All his works extant were published at Oxford, 1703, fol., by the Savilian professor of astronomy, David Gregory. The edition of Peyrard, however, is entitled to the praise of being the best. It appeared at Paris, in 1814, and some of the following years, in 3 vols. 4to.

EUCLUS, a prophet of Cyprus, who foretold the birth and greatness of the poet Homer, according to some traditions. Paus. 10. 12.

EUCRATE, one of the Nereides. Apollod.

EUCRATES, the father of Procles the historian. Paus. 2, 21

EUCRITUS. Vide Evephegus.

EUCTEMON, a Greek of Cumæ, exposed to great barbarities. Curt. 5, 5.——An astronomer who flourished B. C. 431

EUDAMIDAS, a son of Archidamus IV., brother to Agis IV. He succeeded on the Spartan throne, after his brother's death, B. C. 330. Paus. 3 10. ——A son of Archidamus, king of Sparta, who succeeded B. C. 268.——The commander of a garrison stationed at Trœzene by Craterus.

EUDAMUS, a son of Agesilaus of the Heraclidæ. He succeeded his father.——A learned naturalist and philosopher.

EUDEMUS the physician of Livia, the wife of Drusus, &c. Tacit. Ann. 4, 3 ——An orator of Megalopolis, preceptor to Philopœmen EUDOCIA, wife of the emperor Theodosius the Younger, was the daughter of Leontius, a philosopher of Athens, where she was born about A. D. 400. She was highly accomplished, and became the favourite of Pulcheria, sister of the emperor In 421, she embraced Christianity, and changed her name from Athenais to Eudocia. The same year she was married; but, in 445, a separation took place through the jealousy of Theodosius. She then went into Palestine, and died about 460 She was the author of a paraphrase on some of the books of the Old Testament; and of a life of our Saviour, in 2143 hexameters, formed from verses and hemistichs selected out of the poems of Homer.

EUDORA, one of the Nereides. Apollod. 1. ——One of the Atlantides. Hygin. 192

EUDORUS, a son of Mercury and Polymela, who went to the Trojan war with Achilles. Homer. Il. 16, 179.

EUDOXIA, the wife of Arcadius, &c ——A daughter of Theodosius the Younger, who married the emperor Maximus, and invited Genseric the Vandal over into Italy.

EUDOXUS, a Pythagorean philosopher of Cnidus, who flourished, B. C 360. He was the disciple of Archytas and Plato, and, in the course of his travels, went to Egypt, and was introduced to the notice of Nectanebis II., and by him to the Egyptian priests. After his return from Egypt, he taught astronomy and philosophy with great applause at Cyzicus, and afterwards removed to Athens, where he opened a school and was in such high repute, as to be consulted on subjects of policy as well as science by deputies from all parts of Greece. His skill in these subjects, and more particularly in astronomy, is highly celebrated by the ancients, and he is stated to have left behind him many excellent writings, none of which are now extant. He died B. C. 354. Cic. de Div. 2, 42.—Diog. Laert. 8, 86.——A native of Cyzicus, sent by Ptolemy Evergetes on a voyage to India, and some years after, on a second voyage, by Cleopatra, widow of that prince. It appears that he subsequently attempted the circumnavigation of Africa. Plin. 2, 67.—Strab. 2 et 8.——A Sicilian, son of Agathocles.

EUGANEI, an ancient people of Italy, who originally occupied the country afterwards called Venetia. Expelled thence by the Veneti, they settled on the borders of Rhætia and the Transpadana, between the rivers Ollius and Athesis. Liv. 1, 1.

EUGENIUS, an usurper of the imperial title after the death of Valentinian the II, A. D. 392.

EUGERUSUS. Vid. Evemerus.

EUHIPPE, a town of Thessaly. Liv. 32, 13.

EULÆUS, or CHOASPES, a river of Persia, flowing near the city of Susa. Its water was so remarkably pure, that the kings of Persia drank of no other, forbidding it on pain of death to be used by any subject, and carrying it with them in silver vessels in all their journeys to the most distant countries. It is probably the modern Abzal. Herod. 1, 188.—Ælian V. H. 12, 40.

EULIMENE, one of the Nereides.

EUMÆUS, a herdsman and steward of Ulysses, who knew his master at his return home from the Trojan war and of many years' absence, and assisted him in removing Penelope's suitors. He was originally the son of the king of Scyros, and upon being carried away by pirates, he was sold as a slave to Laertes, who rewarded his fidelity and services. Homer. Odyss. 14, 463. 14, 3. 15, 288. 16, 1, 17, 15, &c.

EUMEDES, a Trojan, son of Dolon, who came to Italy with Æneas, where he was killed by Turnus. Virg. Æn. 12, 346.—Ovid. Trist. 3, el. 4, 27.

EUMELIA, the patronymic of Parthenope as daughter of Eumelus. Stat. Sylv. 4, 3, 49.

EUMELUS, a son of Admetus king of Pheræ in Thessaly. He went to the Trojan war, and had the fleetest horses in the Grecian army. He distinguished himself in the games made in honour of Patroclus. Homer. Il. 2, 221 et 270. 23, 288.——A man whose daughter was changed into a bird. Ovid. Met. 7, 390.——A man contemporary with Triptolemus, of whom he learned the art of agriculture. Paus. 7, 18.——One of the followers of Æneas, who first informed his friend that his fleet had been set on fire by the Trojan women. Virg. Æn. 5, 665.——One of the Bacchiadæ, who wrote, among other things, a poetical history of Corinth, B. C. 750, of which a small fragment is still extant. Paus. 2, 1.——A king of the Cimmerian Bosphorus, who died B. C. 304.

EUMENES, a Greek officer in the army of Alexander, son of a charioteer. He was the best cautious, for military prudence and acknowledged abilities, of all the officers of Alexander, to succeed after the death of his master. He conquered Paphlagonia and Cappadocia, of which he obtained the government, till the power and jealousy of Antigonus obliged him to abandon his possessions. He joined his forces to those of Perdiccas, and defeated Craterus and Neoptolemus. Neoptolemus perished by the hands of Eumenes. When Craterus had been killed during the war, his remains received an honourable funeral from the hand of the conqueror; and Eumenes, after weeping over the ashes of a man who once was his dearest friend, sent his remains to his relations in Macedonia. Eumenes fought against Antipater and conquered him, and after the death of Perdiccas, his ally, his arms were directed against Antigonus, by whom he was conquered, chiefly by the treachery and conduct of his officers. This fatal battle obliged him to disband the greatest part of his army to secure himself a retreat, and he fled with only 700 faithful attendants to Nora, a fortified place on the confines of Cappadocia, where he was soon besieged by the conqueror. He supported the siege for a year with courage and resolution, but some disadvantageous skirmishes so reduced him, that his soldiers, grown desperate, and bribed by the offers of the enemy, had the infidelity to betray him into the hands of Antigonus. The conqueror, from shame or remorse, had not the courage to visit Eumenes; but when he was asked by his officers in what manner he wished him to be kept, he answered, Keep him as carefully as you would keep a lion. This severe command was obeyed; but the asperity of Antigonus vanished in a few days, and Eumenes, delivered from the weight of chains, was permitted to enjoy the company of his friends. Even Antigonus hesitated whether he should not restore to his liberty a man with whom he had lived in the greatest intimacy while both were subservient to the command of Alexander, and those secret emotions of pity and humanity were not a little increased by the petitions of his son Demetrius for the release of Eumenes. But the calls of ambition prevailed; and when Antigonus recollected what an active enemy he had in his power, he ordered Eumenes to be put to death in the prison; though some imagine he was murdered without the knowledge of his conqueror. His bloody commands were executed B. C. 315. Such was the end of a man who raised himself to power by merit alone. His skill in public exercises first recommended him to the notice of Philip, and under Alexander his attachment and fidelity to the royal person, and particularly his military accomplishments promoted him to the rank of a general. Even his enemies revered him; and Antigonus, by whose orders he perished, honoured his remains with a splendid funeral, and conveyed his ashes to his wife and family in Cappadocia. It has been observed that Eumenes had such an universal influence over the successors of Alexander, that none during his lifetime dared to assume the title of king, and it does not a little redound to his honour, that the wars which he carried on were not for private or interested motives, but for the good and welfare of his deceased benefactor's children. Plut. et C. Nep in vita.—Diod. 19.—Justin. 13, 14.—Curt. 10.—Arrian.——A king of Pergamus, who succeeded his uncle Philetærus on the throne, B. C. 263. He made war against Antiochus the son of Seleucus, and enlarged his possessions by seizing upon many of the cities of the kings of Syria. He lived in alliance with the Romans, and made war against Prusias, king of Bithynia. He was a great patron of learning, and given much to wine. He died of an excess in drinking, after a reign of twenty-two years. He was succeeded by Attalus. Strab. 13.——The second of that name succeeded his father Attalus on the throne of Asia and Pergamus. His kingdom was small and poor, but he rendered it powerful and opulent, and his alliance with the Romans did not a little contribute to the increase of his dominions after the victories obtained over Antiochus the Great. He carried his arms against Prusias and Antigonus, and died B C. 159, after a reign of thirty-eight years, leaving the kingdom to his son Attalus II. He has been admired for his benevolence and magnanimity, and his love of learning greatly enriched the famous library of Pergamus, which had been founded by his predecessors, in imitation of the Alexandrian collection of the Ptolemies His brothers were so attached to him and devoted to his interest, that they enlisted among his body guards to show their fraternal fidelity. Strab. 13.—Justin. 34 et 34.—Polyb.—A celebrated orator of Athens about the beginning of the fourth century. Some of his harangues and orations are extant.

EUMENIA, a city of Phrygia built by Attalus in honour of his brother Eumenes.——A city of Thrace.——of Caria Plin. 5, 29.——of Hyrcania.

EUMENIDES and EUMENES, a man mentioned, Ovid. Trist 3, el. 4, 27.

EUMENIDES, a name given to the Furies by the ancients. They sprang from the drops of blood which flowed from the wound which Celus received from his son Saturn. According to others they were daughters of the earth, and conceived from the blood of Saturn. Some make them daughters of Acheron and Night, or Pluto and Proserpine, or Chaos and Terra, according to Sophocles, or as Epimenides reports, of Saturn and Evonyme. According to the most received opinions, they were three in number, Tisiphone, Megara, and Alecto, to which some add Nemesis. Plutarch mentions only one, called Adrasta, daughter of Jupiter and Necessity. They were supposed to be the ministers of the vengeances of the gods, and therefore appeared stern and inexorable; always employed in punishing the guilty in open earth, as well as in the infernal regions. They inflicted their vengeance upon earth by wars, pestilence, and dissensions, and by the secret stings of conscience; and in hell they punished the guilty by continual flagellation and torments. They were also called Furiæ, Erinnyes, and Diræ, and the appellation of Eumenides, which signifies benevolence and compassion, they received after they had ceased to persecute Orestes, who in gratitude offered them sacrifices, and erected a temple in honour of their divinity Their worship was almost universal, and people presumed not to mention their names or fix their eyes upon their temples They were honoured with sacrifices and libations, and in Acbaia, they had a temple, which when entered by any one guilty of crime, suddenly rendered him furious, and deprived him of the use of his reason. In their sacrifices, the votaries used branches of cedar and of alder, hawthorn, saffron, and juniper, and the victims were generally turtle doves and sheep, with libations of wine and honey. They were generally represented with a grim and frightful aspect, with a black and bloody garment, and serpents wreathing round their head instead of hair. They held a burning torch in one hand, and a whip of scorpions in the other, and were always attended by terror, rage, paleness, and death. In hell they were seated around Pluto a throne as the ministers of his vengeance. Æschyl. in Eumen.—Sophocl. in Œdip. Col.

EUMENIDIA, festivals in honour of the Eumenides, called by the Athenians semnæ Deæ, venerable goddesses They were celebrated once every year with sacrifices of pregnant ewes, with offerings of cakes made by the most eminent youths, and libations of honey and wine. At Athens none but freeborn citizens were admitted, such as had led a life the most virtuous and unsullied. Such only were accepted by the goddesses, who punished all sorts of wickedness in a severe manner.

EUMENIUS, a Trojan, killed by Camilla in Italy. Virg. Æn. 11, 666.——An orator at the court of Constantius Chlorus, author of a panegyric spoken before the emperor, and still preserved among the Panegyrici Veteres.

EUMOLPE, one of the Nereides. Apollod.

EMOLPIDÆ, the priests of Ceres at the celebration of her festivals of Eleusis. All causes relating to impiety or profanation were referred to their judgment and their decisions, though occasionally severe, were considered as generally impartial The Eumolpidæ were descended from Eumolpus, a king of Thrace, who was made priest of Ceres by Erechtheus king of Athens He became so powerful after his appointment to the priesthood, that he maintained a war against Erechtheus This war proved fatal to both, Erechtheus and Eumolpus were both killed, and peace was re-established among their descendants, on condition that the priesthood should ever remain in the family of Eumolpus, and the regal power in the house of Erechtheus. The priesthood continued in the family of Eumolpus for 1200 years, and this is still more remarkable, because he who was once appointed to the holy office, was obliged to remain in perpetual celibacy. Paus. 2, 14.

EUMOLPUS, a king of Thrace, son of Neptune and Chione. He was thrown into the sea by his mother, who wished to conceal her shame from her father. Neptune saved his life, and carried him into Æthiopia, where he was brought up by Amphitrite, and afterwards by a woman of the country, one of whose daughters he married. An act of violence offered to his sister-in-law obliged him to leave Æthiopia, and he fled to Thrace, with his son Ismarus, where he married the daughter of Tegyrius the king of the country This connexion with the royal family rendered him ambitious; he conspired against his father-in-law, and fled, when the conspiracy was discovered, to Attica, where he was initiated in the mysteries of Ceres of Eleusis, and made Hierophantes or high priest. He was afterwards reconciled to Tegyrius, and inherited his kingdom. He made war against Erechtheus, the king of Athens, who had appointed him to the office of high priest, and perished in battle. His descendants were also invested with the priesthood, which remained for about 1200 years in that family. (Vid. Eumolpidæ.) Apollod. 2. 5, &c.—Hygin. fab. 73.—Diod. 5.—Paus 2, 14.

EUNAPIUS, a son of Jason by Hypsipyle, daughter of Thoas. Homer. Il. 7

EUNAPIUS, a native of Sardis in Lydia, in the fourth century, was a physician and historian. He wrote the lives of the philosophers of his time, in which he is very severe on Christianity. He also wrote the history of the Cæsars, from the reign of Claudius to that of Honorius. The former work only is extant, which was printed in 1596, 8vo.

EUNŌMIA, a daughter of Juno, one of the Horæ Apollod.

EUNŌMUS, a son of Pertanes, who succeeded his father on the throne of Sparta. Paus 3, 36. ——A famous musician of Locris, rival to Arion, over whom he obtained a musical prize at Delphi Strab. 6 ——A Thracian, who advised Demosthenes not to be discouraged by his ill success in his first attempts to speak in public Plut in Dem ——The father of Lycurgus, killed by a Molchen knife. Plut in Lyc

EUNUS, a Syrian slave, who inflamed the minds of the servile multitude by pretended inspiration and enthusiasm He filled a nut with sulphur in his mouth, and by artfully conveying fire to it he breathed out flames to the astonishment of the people, who believed him to be a god, or something more than human. Oppression and misery compelled 2000 slaves to join his cause, and he soon saw himself at the head of 60 000 men With such a force he defeated the Roman armies, till Perpenna obliged him to surrender by famine, and exposed on a cross the greatest part of his followers B C 132. Flut. in Sert

EUONYMUS one of the Lipari isles, now Panarea

EUPALAMON, one of the hunters of the Calydonian boar Ovid Met 8, 306.

EUPATOR a son of Antiochus ——The surname of Eupator was given to many of the Asiatic princes such as Mithridates, &c. Strab 12.

EUPATORIA, a town of Pontus, at the confluence of the Iris and Lycus It was begun by Mithridates under the name Eupatoria, and received from Pompey, who completed it, the title of Magnopolis Its remains are to be seen near Tchernikeh Strab 12.——A town in the north western part of the Taurica Chersonesus, on the Sinus Carcinites. It was built by Mithridates and is thought to correspond with the present Asaslov.

EUPEITHES, a prince of Ithaca, father to Antinous. In the former part of his life he had fled before the vengeance of the Thesprotians, whose territories he had laid waste in the pursuit of some pirates. During the absence of Ulysses he was one of the most importuning lovers of Penelope. Homer. Odyss 16.

EUPHAES succeeded Androcles on the throne of Messenia, and in his reign the first Messenian war began He died B C 770. Paus 4, 5 et 6.

EUPHANTUS a poet and historian of Olynthus, son of Eubulides, and preceptor to Antigonus, king of Macedonia. Diog in Fucl.

EUPHEME a woman who was nurse to the Muses, and mother of Crotus by Pan. Prus.

EUPHEMUS, a son of Neptune and Europa, who was among the Argonauts, and the hunters of the Calydonian boar He was so swift and light that he could run over the sea without scarce wetting his feet. Pindar. Pyth. 4.—Apollod. 1, 9 —Paus. 5, 17 ——One of the Greek captains before Troy Homer Il 2 3.3.

EUPHORBUS, a famous Trojan, son of Panthous as skilful in guiding the chariot as in wielding the lance. He was the first who wounded Patroclus, whom Hector killed. He perished by the hand of Menelaus, who hung his shield in the temple of Juno at Argos. Pythagoras, the founder of the doctrine of the metempsychosis, or transmigration of souls, affirmed that he had been once Euphorbus, and that his soul recollected many exploits which had been done while it animated that Trojan's body. As a further proof of his assertion, he showed at first sight the shield of Euphorbus in the temple of Juno. Ovid. Met. 15, 160.—Paus 2, 17.—Homer. Il 16, 808 17, 9 ——A physician of Juda, king of Mauritania.

EUPHORION, a Greek poet of Chalcis in Eubœa, born about 276 B.C The emperor Tiberius esteemed his works so much, that he erected statues to the memory of the author He wrote in hexameter verse, but only some fragments are extant —— A tragic poet of Athens, son of Æschylus. He conquered four times with posthumous tragedies of his father's composition, and also wrote several dramas himself. Suidas.

EUPHRANOR, a sculptor and painter of Athens, was the disciple of Aristides, and lived about 362 B C The principal of his paintings were the twelve deities, the battle of Mantinea and Theseus Pliny speaks highly of his powers of invention in both arts. Paus 1, 3.—— Plin. 34, 8. ——This name was common to many Greeks.

EUPHRATES, a disciple of Plato who governed Macedonia with absolute authority in the reign of Perdiccas, and rendered himself odious by his cruelty and pedantry After the death of Perdiccas, he was murdered by Parmenio ——A Stoic philosopher, who flourished in the second century He was a friend of the philosopher Apollonius Tyaneus, who introduced him to Vespasian According to Pliny, he was universally esteemed for his talents and virtues. When he found his strength worn out by disease and old age, he voluntarily put an end to his life by drinking hemlock, having first, for some unknown reason, obtained permission from the emperor Adrian Plin. Ep. 1, 10.—Dio 69 ——One of the largest and most celebrated rivers of Asia, which has its rise in the mountains of Armenia, from two principal sources, one issuing from the Anti-taurus, not far from the borders of Cappadocia, Pontus, and Colchis, the other from Mount Abus, or Ararat. These two branches unite opposite Sinerva in Asia Minor. The Euphrates then becomes a great river, and after having formed the line of separation between Asia Minor and Armenia, as also between Syria and Mesopotamia, it enters Babylonia, and, joining the Tigris, falls into the Persian Gulf Its general direction is south easterly, and its whole length to the sea upwards of 1980 miles. After its junction with the Tigris the united stream has indifferently called Euphrates or Tigris, and occasionally Pasitigris, from a little river of this name which runs into it. Strab 11 —Mela, 1, 2. 3, 8. - Plin 5, 24.—Ptol 5, 13.—Mist Theb 9, 250 —Virg. G 1, 50). 4, 560

EUPHRON an aspiring man of Sicyon, who enslaved his country by bribery Diod. 15.

EUPHROSYNE, one of the Graces, sister to Aglaia and Thalia. Paus 9, 35

EUPLŒA, an island of the Tyrrhene sea, near Neapolis. Stat. Silv. 3, 1, 149

EUPOLIS a comic poet of Athens, who flourished B C. 460. He was one of the same class as Aristophanes and Cratinus, who rendered themselves the dread and hatred of the great, by giving the names of the objects of their satires Eupolis, in his comedy of the "Baptæ," so severely attacked the effeminacy and licentiousness of his countrymen, that Alcibiades, who was particularly pointed out, is said in revenge to have hired assassins to throw him into the sea, as he was crossing the Hellespont with the Athenian forces, on an expedition against the Lacedæmonians. It is however proved that he wrote several comedies after this period, and Ælian says that he died in Ægina. His comedies were chiefly political, some fragments only are remaining. Horat. Sat. 1, 4. 2, 10.—Cic. ad Attic 6, 1.—Ælian.

EURIANASSA, a town near Chios. Plin 5, 31

EURIPIDES, a celebrated tragic poet, born at Salamis the day on which the army of Xerxes was defeated by the Greeks. As the son of Mnesarchus, he was descended from a respectable family at Athens, though Aristophanes and Valerius Maximus report that his mother Clito was employed in the mean occupation of an herb seller. The bad aid was called forth to assist his infant genius, and he early studied eloquence under Prodicus, ethics under Socrates, and philosophy under Anaxagoras. His native powers inclined to dramatical composition, and his writings became so much the admiration of his countrymen, that the unfortunate Greeks, who had accompanied Nicias in his expedition against Syracuse, were freed from slavery, only by repeating some verses from the pieces of Euripides. The poet often retired from the society of mankind, and confined himself in a solitary cave near Salamis, where he wrote and finished his most excellent tragedies The talents of Sophocles were looked upon by Euripides with jealousy, and the great enmity which always reigned between the two poets, gave an opportunity to the comic muse of Aristophanes to ridicule them both on the stage with success and humour During the representation of one of the tragedies of Euripides, the audience, displeased with some lines in the composition, desired the writer to strike them off. Euripides heard the reproof with indignation; he advanced forward on the stage, and told the spectators, that he came there to instruct them, and not to receive instruction. An other piece, in which he called riches the summum bonum and the admiration of gods and men, gave equal dissatisfaction, but the poet desired the audience to listen with silent attention, for the conclusion of the whole would show them the punishment which attended the lovers of opulence. The ridicule and envy to which the severity of his muse, and the unbending tendency of his principles, exposed him, obliged him at last to remove from Athens. He retired to the court of Archelaus king of Macedonia, where he received the most conspicuous marks of royal munificence and friendship. His end was as deplorable as it was uncommon. It is said that the dogs of Archelaus met him in his solitary walks, and that, animated by the encouragement of some of the envious courtiers, the enraged animals tore his body to pieces, 407 years before the Christian era, in the 78th year of his age. Euripides wrote 120 tragedies, of which only nineteen are extant; the Phœnissæ, Orestes, Medea, Andromache, Electra, Hippolytus, Iphigenia in Aulis, Iphigenia in Tauris, Hercules, the Troades, Hecuba, Alcestis, Supplices, Rhesus, Bacchæ, Cyclops, Heraclidæ, Helena, and Ion. altogether contained in 26 048 lines, including the 65 verses of the fragment of Danae. He is peculiarly happy in expressing the passions of love, especially the more tender and animated. To the pathos he has added sublimity, and the most common expressions have received a perfect polish from his pen. In his person, as it is reported, he was noble and majestic, and his deportment was always grave and serious. He was slow in composing, and laboured with difficulty, from which circumstance Alcestes, a foolish and malevolent poet, once observed, that he had written 100 verses in three days, while Euripides had written only three' True, says Euripides, but there is this difference between your poetry and mine, yours will expire in three days, but mine shall live for ages to come Euripides was such an enemy to the fair sex that some have called him μισογυνης, woman-hater, and perhaps from this aversion arise the impure and diabolical machinations which appear in his female characters, an observation, however, which he refuted, by saying he had faithfully copied nature. In spite of all this antipathy he was married twice, but his connexions were so injudicious, that he was compelled to divorce both his wives. The best editions of this great poet are that of Musgrave, 4 vols. 4to, Oxon. 1778, that of Beck, 4 vols. 4to, Lips. 1774-88; that of Matthiæ, 9 vols. 8vo, Lips. 1813 18; and that of Glasgow, 9 vols. 8vo, 1.20 Of the separate plays, the best editions are those of Valckenaer, Brunck, Monk Porson, Elmsley, &c. Euripides has been translated into English by Potter. Dod 1d.—Val. Max. 3, 7 —Cic. In. 1, 50. Or. 3 7 Acad. 1, 1 Offic. 3 Fomb 2. Tusc. 1, 1, &c — Aul Gell. 15, 20.—Athen. 13, 2 — Quintil. 10, 1

EURIPUS, a narrow strait between Eubœa and the mainland of Greece, supposed to have been formed by some great convulsion of nature which separated the two. Several of the ancients have reported that the tide in this strait ebbed and flowed seven times during the day, and as often during the night, and that the current was so strong as to arrest the progress of ships in full sail. Livy, however, contradicts this popular notion, and attributes the variableness of the current to the effect of winds, which are so violent as to cause the sea to rush through the channel like a mountain torrent. The strait is now called, by a corruption of the ancient name, the straits of Negropont. Mela, 2, 7.—Strab. 1 et 9. —Plin. 2, 100.—Liv 28, 6.

EURISTHENES. Vid. Eurysthenes.

EURÔMUS, a city of Caria. Liv. 32, 33. 33, 30.

EUROPA, one of the three main divisions of the ancient world. On the north it was bounded by the Hyperborean or Arctic Ocean, on the west by the Atlantic Ocean, on the south by the Mediterranean Sea, which separated it from Africa, and on the east by the Ægæan and Euxine Seas, the Palus Mæotis, the rivers Tanais and Rha, and the Rhipæi or Hyperborei Montes. Though it is the smallest of the divisions of the globe, it is superior to the rest in the genius, power, and learning of its inhabitants. According to the mythology of the poets, it received its name from Europa, who was carried there by Jupiter. Bochart derives the name from the Phœnician Ur-appa, which he makes equivalent to the Greek λευκοπρωσωπος, "of a white, or fair, aspect," and considers it as applying to the continent of Europe, from the fairer visages and complexions of its inhabitants. M. Gebelin, on the other hand, deduces the word from the Phœnician Wrab, i. e. "West," as indicating the country lying in that direction with reference to Asia. Mela, 2, 1.—Plin 3, 1. &c.—Lucan. 3, 275.—Virg Æn. 7, 222. ——A daughter of Agenor, king of Phœnicia and Telephassa. She was so beautiful that Jupiter became enamoured of her, and the better to engage her affections, he assumed the shape of a bull, and mingled with the herds of Agenor, while Europa, with her female attendants, were gathering flowers in the meadows. Europa caressed the beautiful animal, and at last had the courage to sit upon his back. The god took advantage of her situation, and with precipitate steps retired towards the shore, and crossed the sea with Europa on his back, and arrived safe in Crete. Here he assumed his original shape, and declared his love. The nymph consented, though she had once made vows of perpetual celibacy, and she became mother of Minos, Sarpedon, and Rhadamanthus. After this distinguished amour with Jupiter, she married Asterius king of Crete. This monarch seeing himself without children by Europa, adopted the fruit of her amours with Jupiter, and always esteemed Minos, Sarpedon, and Rhadamanthus, as his own children. Some suppose that Europa lived about 1552 years before the Christian era. Some have explained the story of Europa by alleging that a Cretan captain, named Taurus, carried off that princess after he had taken the city of Tyre from Agenor, but others, with greater probability, assert that some Cretan merchants having arrived upon the coast of Phœnicia, and seen the young Europa, were so much struck with her beauty, that they carried her off for their king; and as their ship bore the emblem of a white bull, and this king of Crete had assumed the name of Jupiter, it was hence fabled that the god had transformed himself into a bull in order to carry off the princess. The Cretans are said to have worshipped her after death as a divinity. Ovid. Met. 2, fab 13. Fast. 5, 604.—Mosch. Idyl.—Apollod. 2, 5. 3, 1 ——One of the Oceanides. Hesiod Theog. 356 ——A district of Macedonia, in which was situate the town of Europus. It was also called Europia

EUROPEUS, a patronymic of Minos the son of Europa. Ovid. Met. 8, 23.

EUROPS, a king of Sicyon, son of Ægialeus, who died B C. 1993. Paus 2, 5.

EUROPUS, a king of Macedonia, &c. Justin. 7, 1 ——A town of Macedonia, situated on the river Axius, and in the district of Emathia. Plin. 4, 10.

EURÔTAS, a son of Lelex, father to Sparta who married Lacedæmon He was one of the first kings of Laconia, and gave his name to the river which flows near Sparta. Apollod. 3 16.—Paus. 3, 1.——A river of Laconia, which rises in Arcadia, a little to the south-west of Tegea, and after running a short distance, loses itself under ground. On the opposite side of the mountains which separate Arcadia from Laconia, it reappears in the latter country, in the district of Belmina. It then traverses that province, and passes by Sparta to Helos, near which town it empties itself into the sea. The Eurotas was called Basilipotamos by the Spartans, who worshipped it as a god, and assigned its banks for the exercise of their young men, and the river itself for the bath of their maidens. It is now called the Iri, or the Vasilico Potamo. Strab. 8.—Dionys. Perieg. 411.—Hemod. Th. 1063.—Virg. Æn. 1, 498.—Theocr. Idyl 18, 23.——A river of Thessaly, called also Titaresius, rising in mount Titarus, a branch of Olympus, and falling into the Peneus, a little above the vale of Tempe. Its waters were thick and turbid, and from their not mixing with the transparent stream of the Peneus, they were supposed to have been connected with the infernal Styx. It is now called the Sarantis Poros. Strab. 9.—Hom. Il. 2, 751.

EURÔTO, a daughter of Danaus by Polyxo. Apollod.

EURUS, a wind blowing from the east-south-east parts of the world. The Latins sometimes called it Vulturnus or Apeliotes. Ovid. Trist. 1, el. 2. Met 11, &c.

EURYALE, a queen of the Amazons, who assisted Æetes, &c Flacc. 4.——A daughter of Minos, mother of Orion by Neptune.——A daughter of Prœtus, king of Argos.——One of the Gorgons, who was immortal. Hesiod. Theog. 277.

EURYALUS, one of the Peloponnesian chiefs, who went to the Trojan war with eighty ships. Homer. Il. 2, 72.——An illegitimate son of Ulysses and Evippe, killed by Telemachus. Sophocl.——A son of Mêlas, taken prisoner by Hercules, &c.—Apollod. 1, 8 ——A Trojan who came with Æneas into Italy, and rendered himself famous for his immortal friendship with Nisus. (Vid. Nisus.) Virg. Æn. 9, 179 ——A pleasant place of Sicily, near Syracuse Liv 25, 23 ——A Lacedæmonian general in the second Messenian war.

EURYBÂTES, a Grecian herald in the Trojan war, who took Briseis from Achilles by order of Agamemnon. Homer. Il 1, 32.—Ovid. Heroid. 3 ——A warrior of Argos, often victorious at the Nemean games, &c. Paus. 1, 29.——One of the Argonauts.

EURYBIA, the mother of Lucifer and all the stars. Hesiod.——A daughter of Pontus and Terra, mother of Astræus, Pallas, and Perses, by Crius. Hesiod. Th. 237, 376.

EURYBIADES, a Spartan who had the command of the Grecian fleet at the battles of Artemisium and Salamis against Xerxes. He has been charged by his enemies with want of courage, though with ambitious views of raising himself above the control of his countrymen. He offered to strike Themistocles when he wished to speak about the manner of attacking the Persians, upon which the Athenian said, "Strike me, but hear me." A magnificent tomb was raised over his remains under the walls of Sparta, which still existed in the age of Pausanias. Paus 3, 16.—Herod. 8, 2, 74, &c.—Plut. in Them.—C. Nep in Them.

EURYBIUS, a son of Eurytus king of Argos, killed in a war between his country men and the Athenians. Apollod. 2, 8.——A son of Neleus and Chloris. Id. 1, 9.

EURYCLEA a beautiful daughter of Ops of Ithaca. Laertes bought her for twenty oxen, and gave her his son Ulysses to nurse, and treated her with much tenderness and attention. She distinguished herself by her fidelity and her attachment to the family of Laertes, and she was the first to discover and to welcome the return of Ulysses to his palace. Homer. Odyss. 1, 428. 19, 257. 22, 318. 23, 1

EURYCLES, an orator of Syracuse who prepared to put Nicias and Demosthenes to death, and to confine to hard labour all the Athenian soldiers in the quarries. Plut.——A Lacedæmonian at the battle of Actium on the side of Augustus. Id. in Anton.

EURYCRÂTES, a king of Sparta, descended from Hercules. Herod. 7, 204.

EURYDAMUS, a Trojan skilled in the interpretation of dreams. His two sons were killed by Diomedes during the Trojan war. Homer. Il. 5, 148.——One of Penelope's suitors. Id. 22, 883.——A wrestler of Cyrene, who, in a combat, had his teeth dashed to pieces by his antagonist, which he swallowed without showing any signs of pain, or discontinuing the fight. Ælian. V. H. 10, 19.——A son of Egyptus. Apollod.——A surname of Hercules, expressive of his great power. Ovid. Fb. 3.11.—Sil. 2, 156.

EURYDAMUS, the son of Leotychides, king of Sparta. Herod.

EURYDAMIDAS, a king of Lacedæmon, of the family of the Proclidæ Paus. 3, 10.

EURYDICE, the wife of Amyntas, king of Macedonia. She had by her husband Alexander, Perdiccas, and Philip, and one daughter called Eurydice. A criminal partiality for her daughter's husband, to whom she offered her hand and the kingdom, made her conspire against Amyntas, who must have fallen a victim to her infidelity had not Eurydice discovered it. Amyntas forgave her. Alexander ascended the throne after his father's death, and perished by the ambition of his mother. Perdiccas who succeeded him shared his fate; but Philip, who was the next in succession, secured himself against all attempts from his mother, and ascended the throne with peace and universal satisfaction. Eurydice fled to Iphicrates the Athenian general for protection. The manner of her death is unknown. C. Nep. in Iphic. 3.——A daughter of Amyntas, who married her uncle Aridæus, the illegitimate son of Philip. After the death of Alexander the Great, Aridæus ascended the throne of Macedonia, but he was totally governed by the intrigues of his wife, who called back Cassander, and joined her forces with his to march against Polyperchon and Olympias. Eurydice was forsaken by her troops. Aridæus was pierced through with arrows by order of Olympias, who commanded Eurydice to destroy herself either by poison, the sword, or the halter. She chose the latter.——A daughter of Nereus and Doris, wife to the poet Orpheus. As she fled before Aristæus, who wished to offer her violence, she was bit by a serpent in the grass, and died of the wound Orpheus was so disconsolate that he ventured to go to hell, where, by the melody of his lyre, he obtained from Pluto the restoration of his wife to life, provided he did not look behind before he came upon earth He violated the conditions, as his eagerness to see his wife rendered him forgetful He looked behind, and Eurydice vanishing from his eager embraces, was for ever taken from him (Vid. Orpheus.) Virg. G 4, 457, &c.—Paus. 9, 30.—Ovid Met. 10, 30, &c.——A daughter of Adrastus, wife of Ilas. Apollod. 3, 12 ——One of the Danaides, who married Dyas Id. 2, 1 —— The wife of Lycurgus, king of Nemea in Peloponnesus. Id. 1, 9 ——A daughter of Actor. Id. ——A wife of Æneas. Paus. 10, 26 ——A daughter of Amphiaraus. Id 3, 17 ——A daughter of Antipater, who married one of the Ptolemies Id. 1, 7.——A daughter of king Philip. Id. 5, 17.——A daughter of Lacedæmon. Id. 3, 13 —— A daughter of Clymenus, who married Nestor. Homer. Od 3, 452.——A wife of Demetrius, descended from Miltiades. Plut. in Demetr.

EURYLEON, a king of the Latins, called also Asconius.

EURYLOCHUS, one of the companions of Ulysses, the only one who did not taste the potions of Circe. His prudence, however, forsook him in Sicily, where he carried away the flocks sacred to Apollo, for which sacrilegious crime he was shipwrecked. Homer. Od. 10, 205. 12, 193.—Ovid. Met. 14, 257.——A man who discovered the conspiracy which was made against Alexander by Hermolaus and others. Curt. 8, 6.

EURYMACHUS, a powerful Theban, who seized Platæa by treachery, &c.——One of Penelope's suitors, son of Polybus of Ithaca. He was killed by Ulysses. Homer. Odyss. 1, 399, &c.—Ovid, Heroid 1, 91.

EURYMEDE, the wife of Glaucus king of Ephyra Apollod.

EURYMEDON, the father of Periboea by whom Neptune had Nausithous. Homer, Od. 7.——A river of Pamphylia in Asia Minor, rising in the chain of Mount Taurus, and, after passing the city of Aspendus, falling into the Mediterranean below that place. It is now the Capruseo. Near it the Persians were defeated both by sea and land in one day by the Athenians under Cimon, B C. 470 Mela, 1, 14.—Liv. 39, 41 37, 23.——A man who accused Aristotle of propagating profane doctrines in the Lyceum.

EURYMENES, a son of Neleus and Chloris Apollod.

EURYNOME one of the Oceanides, mother of the Graces. Hesiod Theog 908 ——The wife of Orchamus, an Arabian prince, mother of Leucothoe. Ovid. Met 4, 210.——A daughter of Apollo, mother of Adrastus and Eriphyle —— A woman of Lamnos, daughter of Dorielus, and wife of Codrus. Flacc. 2, 136.——The wife of Lycurgus son of Aleus Apollod. 3, 9. ——The mother of Asopus by Jupiter. Id. 3, 12.—— One of Penelope's female attendants. Homer. Odyss. 17, 515 ——An Athenian sent with a reinforcement to Nicias in Sicily. Plut. in Nic.

EURYNOMUS, one of the deities of hell. Paus. 10, 28.

EURYONE, a daughter of Amyntas king of Macedonia, by Eurydice. Justin. 7, 4.

EURYPON, a king of Sparta, son of Sous. His reign was so glorious that his descendants were called Eurypontidæ. Paus 3, 7.

EURYPYLUS, a son of Telephus and Astyoche, was killed in the Trojan war by Pyrrhus. He made his court to Cassandra, and evinced his claim by the valour with which he fought the enemies of her father's kingdom. Homer. Il. 11, 510.——A Grecian, son of Evæmon, at the Trojan war in 40 ships. Homer. Il. 2, 243.——A prince of Oleaus, who went with Hercules against Laomedon. Paus. 7, 19.——A son of Mecisteus, who signalized himself in the war of the Epigoni against Thebes. Apollod. 3.——A son of Temenus king of Messenia, who conspired against his father's life. Id 3, 8.——A son of Neptune, killed by Hercules. Id. 2, 7 ——One of Penelope's suitors. Id. 3, 10.——A Thessalian, who became delirious for looking into a box which fell to his share after the plunder of Troy. Paus 7, 19.——A soothsayer in the Grecian camp before Troy, sent to consult the oracle of Apollo, how his countrymen could return safe home. The result of his inquiries was the injunction to offer a human sacrifice. Virg. Æn. 2, 114.

EURYSTHENES, a son of Aristodemus, who lived in perpetual dissension with his twin brother Procles, while they both sat on the Spartan throne. It was unknown which of the two was born first, the mother, who wished to see both her sons raised to the throne, refused to declare it, and they were both appointed kings of Sparta, by order of the oracle of Delphi, B.C. 1102. After the death of the two brothers, the Lacedæmonians, who knew not to what family the right of seniority and succession belonged, permitted two kings to sit on the throne, one of each family. The descendants of Eurysthenes were called Eurysthenidæ, and those of Procles, Procleadæ. It was inconsistent with the laws of Sparta for two kings of the same family to ascend the throne together, yet that law was sometimes violated by oppression and tyranny. Eurysthenes had a son called Agis, who succeeded him. His descendants were called Agidæ. There sat on the throne of Sparta thirty-one kings of the family of Eurysthenes, and only twenty four of the Procleidæ. The former were the more illustrious (Pid. Lacedæmon) Herod. 4, 147. 6, 52.—Paus. 3, 1. —C. Nep. in Ages.

EURYSTHENIDÆ Vid Eurysthenes.

EURYSTHEUS, a king of Argos and Mycenæ, son of Sthenelus and Nicippe the daughter of Pelops and husband to Antimache, daughter of Amphidamas. Juno hastened his birth by two months, that he might come into the world before Hercules the son of Alcmena, as the younger of the two sons was doomed by order of Jupiter to be subservient to the will of the other. (Vid Alcmena.) This natural right was cruelly exercised by Eurystheus, who was jealous of the fame of Hercules, and who to destroy so powerful a relation, imposed upon him the most dangerous and uncommon enterprises, well known by the name of the twelve labours of Hercules. The success of Hercules in achieving those perilous labours alarmed Eurystheus in a great degree, and he furnished himself with a brazen vessel, where he might secure himself a safe retreat in case of danger. After the death of Hercules, Eurystheus renewed his cruelties against his children, and made war against Ceyx king of Trachinia, because he had given them support, and treated them with hospitality. He was killed in the prosecution of this war by Hellus the son of Hercules. His head was sent to Alcmena the mother of Hercules, who, mindful of the cruelties which her son had suffered, insulted it, and tore out the eyes with the most inveterate fury. Eurystheus was succeeded on the throne of Argos by Atreus his nephew. Hygin. fab 30 et 32.—Apollod. 2, 4. &c.—Paus. 1, 35. 3, 6.—Ovid. Met. 9, fab 6.—Virg. Æn. 5, 292.

EURYTE, a daughter of Hippodamus, who married Parthaon. Apollod.——The mother of Hallirrhotius, by Neptune. Id.

EURYTALE, a daughter of Thespius.——A daughter of Leucippus. Apollod.

EURYTHEMIS, the wife of Thestius. Apollod.

EURYTHION and EURYTION, a Centaur, whose insolence to Hippodamia was the cause of the quarrel between the Lapithæ and Centaurs, at the nuptials of Pirithous. Ovid Met. 12.—Prop. 3, 10.—Hesiod. Theog.——A herdsman of Geryon, killed by Hercules. Apollod. 2.——A king of Sparta, who seized upon Mantinea by stratagem. Polyæn. 2.——One of the Argonauts. Ovid. Met. 8, 311.——A son of Lycaon, who signalized himself during the funeral games exhibited in Sicily by Æneas. Virg. Æn 5, 495. ——A man of Heraclea, convicted of adultery. His punishment was the cause of the abolition of the oligarchical power there. Aristot. Polit. 5.——A son of Actor, king of Phthia, who purified Peleus of the murder of Phocus, and gave him his daughter Antigone in marriage. He was killed at the chase of the Calydonian boar. Apollod. 1 et 2.

EURYTIS (-idos), a patronymic of Iole, daughter of Eurytus Ovid. Met. 9, fab. 11.

EURYTUS, a son of Mercury, among the Argonauts Flacc. 1, 439.——A king of Œchalia, father to Iole. He offered his daughter to him who shot a bow better than himself. Hercules conquered him, and put him to death, because he refused him his daughter as the prize of his victory. Apollod. 2, 4 et 7.——A son of Actor, concerned in the wars between Augias and Hercules, and killed by the hero.——A son of Augias, killed by Hercules as he was going to Corinth to celebrate the Isthmian games Apollod.——A giant, killed by Hercules or Bacchus for making war against the gods.——An artist, who made the armour of Pallas, the son of Evander. Virg. Æn. 10, 409

EUSEBIA, AUREL., an empress, wife to Constantius. She was celebrated for her beauty, her genius, and the great chastity of her manners, as well as the humanity of her character. By her advice, Constantius married his sister Helena to Julian. She died, A. D. 360, highly and deservedly regretted.

EUSEBIUS, surnamed Pamphilus, an ecclesiastical historian, born in Palestine, probably at Cæsarea, about 265 A.D. He received holy orders from Agapius, bishop of Cæsarea, whom he succeeded in 315. He had a considerable share in the disputes relating to Arius, whose cause he at first defended, but afterwards he assisted at the council of Nice, and subscribed the confession of faith drawn up by that assembly. He was also at the councils of Tyre and Jerusalem, by which last he was deputed to go on a mission to Constantine, who honoured him with many marks of his favour. Eusebius died in 339 or 340. He was the author of "Præparatio Evangelica," "Demonstratio Evangelica," "Historia Ecclesiastica," "Chronicon," &c. The best editions of the Præparatio and Demonstratio Evangelica, is that of Vigier, 2 vols. fol. Paris, 1628. Of the Historia Ecclesiastica, the best edition is that of Zimmerman, 8vo, Francof. 1822.——There were other ecclesiastics of the same name, the principal of whom was Eusebius bishop of Samosata, in the fourth century, who opposed the Arians, and was murdered by a woman of that party in Syria. ——A surname of Bacchus.

EUSEPUS and PEDASUS, the twin sons of Bucolion killed in the Trojan war. Homer. Il. 6.

EUSTATHIUS, archbishop of Thessalonica, lived in the twelfth century, under the emperors Manuel, Alexius, and Andronicus Comnenus. He was a very eminent grammarian, and wrote commentaries upon Homer, and Dionysius the geographer His commentary on Homer was printed at Rome in 1550; and at Basil ten years after. His commentary on Dionysius was published at Paris in 1577, and more correctly at Oxford in 1697, 8vo.——A man who wrote a very foolish romance in Greek, entitled de Ismenes et Ismenes amoribus, edited by Gualtruchius, 8vo, Paris, 1617.

EUTERPE, one of the Muses, daughter to Jupiter and Mnemosyne. She presided over music, and was looked upon as the inventress of the flute and of all wind instruments. She is represented as crowned with flowers, and holding a flute in her hands. Some mythologists have attributed to her the invention of tragedy, more commonly supposed to be the production of Melpomene. (Vid. Muses.)——The name of the mother of Themistocles according to some.

EUTHYCRATES, a sculptor of Sicyon, son of Lysippus. He was peculiarly happy in the proportions of his statues. Those of Hercules and Alexander were in general esteem, and particularly that of Medea, which was carried on a chariot by four horses. Plin. 34, 8.——A man who betrayed Olynthus to Philip.

EUTHYDEMUS, an orator and rhetorician who greatly distinguished himself by his eloquence, &c. Strab. 14.

EUTRAPELUS, a man described as artful and talkative by Horace, ep. 1, 18, 31.——A hairdresser. Martial. ep 7, 82.

EUTRAPELUS, (Volumn) a friend of M Antony, so called from the politeness of his manners, and the raillery of his wit. Cic Fam. ep. 32 et 33.

EUTROPIUS, a Latin historian of the fourth century. He bore arms under Julian in his expedition against the Parthians, and is thought to have obtained the senatorian rank. He wrote several works, of which the only one remaining is an abridgment of the Roman history in ten books, from the foundation of the city to the reign of the emperor Valens. It is brief and dry outline, without either elegance or ornament, yet containing certain facts which are nowhere else mentioned. The best edition is that of Tzschuke, Lips 1797, svo.——A famous eunuch at the court of Arcadius, the son of Theodosius the Great. After the vicissitudes of popular favour and imperial usurpation, and after exercising the highest offices, with the caprice and cruelty of a tyrant, he was at last beheaded, A. D. 399

EUTYCHIDES, a learned servant of Atticus, &c Cic. ad. Attic 15.

EUXANTHUS, a daughter of Minos and Dexithea. Apollod

EUXENUS, a man who wrote a poetical history of the fabulous ages of Italy. Dionys. Hal 1.

EUXINUS PONTUS. Vid Pontus Euxinus.

EUXIPPE, a woman who killed herself because the ambassadors of Sparta had offered violence to her virtue, &c.

EVADNE, a daughter of Iphis or Iphicles of Argos, who slighted the addresses of Apollo, and married Capaneus, one of the seven chiefs who went against Thebes. When her husband had been struck with thunder by Jupiter for his blasphemies and impiety, and his ashes had been separated from those of the rest of the Argives, she threw herself on his burning pile, and perished in the flames. Virg Æn 6, 447.—Propert. 1, el. 15, 21 Stat. Theb. 12, 800.——A daughter of the Strymon and Neæra. She married Argus, by whom she had four children. Apollod. 2.

EVAGORAS, a king of Cyprus who retook Salamis, which had been taken from his father by the Persians. He made war against Artaxerxes, the king of Persia, with the assistance of the Egyptians, Arabians, and Tyrians, and obtained some advantage over the fleet of his enemy. The Persians, however, soon repaired their losses, and Evagoras saw himself defeated by sea and land, and obliged to be tributary to the power of Artaxerxes, and to be stripped of all his dominions, except the town of Salamis. He was assassinated soon after this fatal change of fortune, by a eunuch, 374 B C. He left two sons, Nicocles, who succeeded him, and Protagoras, who deprived his nephew Evagoras of his possessions. Evagoras deserves to be commended for his sobriety, moderation, and magnanimity, and if he was guilty of any political error in the management of his kingdom, it may be said, that his love of equ was a full compensation. His grandson bore the same name, and succeeded his father Nicocles. He showed himself oppressive, and his uncle Protagoras took advantage of his unpopularity to deprive him of his power. Evagoras fled to Artaxerxes Ochus, who gave him a government more extensive than that of Cyprus, but his oppression rendered him odious, and he was accused before his benefactor, and by his orders put to death. C. Nep. 12, 2.—Diod. 14.—Plut. 1, 2.—Justin 5, 6.——A man of Elis, who obtained a prize at the Olympian games Paus. 5, 8.——A Spartan, famous for his services to the people of Rhis Ib. 6, 10.——A king of Rhodes.——An historian of Lindus in the age of Augustus, author of a history of Egypt, besides the life of Timagenes, a lexicon in Thucydid, and other works.——Another of Thasos, whose works proved serviceable to Pliny in the compilation of his natural history Plin. 10.

EVAGORIDES, one of the Nereides Apollod.

EVAN, a surname of Bacchus, which he received from the wild ejaculation of Evan' Iouu' by his priestesses. Ovid Met 4, 15.—Virg Æn 6, 517.

EVANDER, a son of Mercury, by the prophetess Carmente, king of Arcadia An accidental murder obliged him to leave his country, and he came to Italy, where he drove the Aborigines from their ancient possessions, and reigned in that part of the country where Rome was afterwards founded He kindly received Hercules when he returned from the conquest of Geryon; and he was the first who raised him altars. He gave Æneas assistance against the Rutuli, and distinguished himself by his hospitality It is said that he first brought the Greek alphabet into Italy, and introduced there the worship of the Greek deities He was honoured as a god after death, by his subjects, who raised him an altar on mount Aventine; and as his reign had been distinguished by mildness and hospitality, some have considered him as the Saturn of Latium, and described his age as the golden age, so uncontaminated by immorality and vice. Evander had a son, Pallas, who was slain by the Rutuli and to the town, which he erected on the bank of the Tiber, for the capital of his kingdom, he gave the name of Pallantium, which was afterwards lost in the Palatine hill Paus. 8, 43 Liv. 1, 7.—Ital 7, 15.—Dionys Hal 1, 7.—Ovid Fast 1, 500 & 91.—Virg. Æn. 8, 100, &c.——A philosopher of the second Academy, who flourished B. C 215

EVANGORIDES, a man of Elis, who wrote an account of all those who had obtained a prize at Olympia, where he himself had been victorious. Paus 6, 8

EVARCHUS, a river of Asia Minor, flowing into the Euxine, to the south-east of Sinope. It was once the boundary of Paphlagonia and Cappadocia.

EVAS, a native of Phrygia who accompanied Æneas into Italy, where he was killed by Mezentius Virg Æn. 10, 702.

EVAX, an Arabian prince of great learning and uncommon application He studied medicine, and wrote a book De Simplicium Effectibus, which he dedicated to Nero. Plin. 25, 2.

EVEMERUS, an ancient historian of Messenia, intimate with Cassander. He travelled over Greece and Arabia, and wrote a history of the gods, in which he proved from the monuments and records which he found in the temples, especially that of Jupiter Triphylius, that they all had been upon earth, as mere mortal men. Enius translated it into Latin. It is now lost. Cic. de N. D. 1. 42.—Varro de R. R. 1, 46.—Lactant. de Fals. R. 11.—Vid. de Inid. et Os.

EVENOR, a painter, father to Parrhasius. Plin. 35. 9.

EVENUS a river of Ætolia, rising in the country of the Bomienses, at mount Œta, and, after a south westerly course of fifty miles, falling into the Ionian sea. It received its name from Evenus, son of Mars and Demonice, who was so disconsolate at the loss of his daughter Marpessa, whom Idas had carried away, and whom he pursued in vain that he threw himself into the Lycormas, which thenceforth retained his name. It was on the banks of the Evenus that Hercules killed the centaur Nessus. It is now the Fidaro. Near its mouth stood Macalongki. Strab. 10.—Apollod. 1, 7 et 8.—Ovid Met 9, 104.——An epigrammatic poet of Paros, who flourished about 250 B. C. Vossius, Hist. Gr.——A son of Jason and Hypsipyle, queen of Lemnos, who supplied the Greeks with some provisions during the Trojan war, and fought himself bravely on their side. Homer. Il. 7. 4o.

EVEPHEMUS, a Pythagorean philosopher, whom Dionysius condemned to death because he had insinuated the people of Metapontum from his power. The philosopher begged leave of the tyrant to go and marry his sister, and promised to return in six months. Dionysius consented by receiving Encritus, who pledged himself to die if Evephemus did not return in time. Evephemus returned at the appointed moment, to the astonishment of Dionysius, and delivered his friend from the danger which threatened him. The tyrant was so pleased with these two friends, that he pardoned Evephemus, and begged to share in their friendship and confidence. Polyæn. 5.

EVERES, a son of Pteralaus, the only one of his family who did not perish in a battle against Electryon. Apollod. 2.——A son of Hercules and Parthenope.——The father of Tiresias. Apollod.

EVERGETÆ, a people of Upper Asia, whose proper name was Agriaspæ. They were called Evergetæ, or benefactors, by Cyrus, because they had assisted him with provisions, and saved his army from perishing by hunger in the desert. They had formed themselves into a little republic, and their manners and customs were so superior to those of the surrounding barbarians, that Alexander not only gave them their full freedom, but also granted them, at their request, some territories in their vicinity. Curt. 7. 3.

EVERGETES, a surname, signifying benefactor, given to Philip of Macedonia, and to Antigonus Doson, and Ptolemy of Egypt. It was also originally given to the kings of Syria and Pontus, but we often see among the former as Alexander Evergetes, and among the latter a Mithridates Evergetes. Some of the Roman emperors also affected that epithet, so expressive of benevolence and humanity. Curt. 7, 5.—Justin. 12. 5.

EVESPERIDES, a people of Africa. Herod. 4, 204.

EVIAS, a female worshipper of Bacchus, so called from his surname of Evius. Horat. Od. 3, 25. 9.

EVIPPE, one of the Danaïdes who married and murdered Imbrus. Apollod.——Another. Id. 2, 1.——The mother of the Pierides, who were changed into magpies. Ovid. Met. 5. 299.

EVIPPUS, a son of Thestius, king of Pleuron, killed by his brother Iphiclus in the chase of the Calydonian boar. Apollod. 1, 7.——A Trojan killed by Patroclus. Homer. Il. 16, 417.

EVIUS, a surname of Bacchus, which he received from the exclamation of his father Jupiter in the war against the giants. Evoe! euouay, euoi, euoi, and from thence originated the Evohe! Evoë! so loudly and so frequently repeated at the celebration of his festivals. Colum. de R. R. 10, 286. —Horat. Od. 2, 11, 17.

EXADIUS, one of the Lapithæ at the nuptials of Pirithous. Homer. Il. 1, 264.—Ovid. Met. 12, 256.

EXÆTHES, a Parthian who cut off the head of Crassus, &c. Polyæn. 7.

EXAGONUS, the ambassador of a nation in Cyprus who came to Rome and talked so much of the power of herbs, serpents, &c., that the consuls ordered him to be thrown into a vessel full of serpents. These venomous creatures, far from hurting him, caressed him and harmlessly licked him with their tongues. Plin. 28. 3.

EXAMPÆUS, a small stream, which falls into the Hypanis, where the river is four days' journey from the sea, and renders its waters bitter, which before were sweet. Herod. 4, 52.

F

FABARIA, festivals celebrated at Rome on the first of June, in honour of the goddess Carna, the wife of Janus, when beans (faba) were presented as an oblation. From this circumstance, the same name was sometimes applied to the calends of June.

FABARIS, now Farfa, a river of Italy in the territories of the Sabines, called also Fucarus. Ovid. Met. 14, 330.—Virg. Æn. 7, 715.

FABIA. Vid. Fabius Fabricianus.

FABIA LEX, de plagiis, enacted against kidnapping, or stealing away and retaining freemen or slaves. The punishment of this offence, at first, was a fine, but afterwards, to be sent to the mines; and for buying or selling a freeborn citizen, death.——Another, de ambitu, limiting the number of Sectatores that attended candidates when canvassing for any office. It was proposed, but did not pass. The Sectatores, who always attended candidates, were distinguished from the Salutatores, who only waited on them at their houses in the morning, and then went away, and from the Deductores, who went down with them to the Forum and Campus Martius.

FABIA, a tribe at Rome. Horat. Ep. 1, 7, 22.——A vestal virgin, sister to Terentia, Cicero's wife. She was accused of incest with Catiline, but acquitted.

FABIANI, some of the Lupercî at Rome, instituted in honour of the Fabian family.

FABII, a noble and powerful family at Rome, who derived their name from faba, a bean, because some of their ancestors cultivated this pulse. They were said to be descended from Fabius, a supposed son of Hercules by an Italian nymph, and they were also so numerous that they took upon themselves to wage war against the Veientines. They came to a general engagement near the Cremera, in which all the family, amounting of the race, were totally slain, B.C. 477. There only remained one whose tender age had detained at home, and from him arose the noble Fabii in the following ages. The family was divided into different branches the Ambusti, the Maximi, the Vibulani, the Buteones, the Dorsuones and the Pictores Labeones Gurgites, the three first of which are frequently mentioned in the Roman history but the others seldom. Dionys. 9, 5.—Liv. 2, 46, &c.—Flor. 1, 2.—Ovid Trist. 2, 225.—Virg. Æn. 6, 845.

FABIUS MAXIMUS RULLIANUS was the first of the Fabii who obtained the surname of Maximus, for lessening the power of the populace at elections. He was master of horse to Papirius Cursor and his victory over the Samnites in that capacity nearly cost him his life because he engaged the enemy without the command of the dictator. He was five times consul twice dictator, and once censor. He triumphed over seven different nations in the neighbourhood of Rome and rendered himself illustrious by his patriotism. Liv. 8, 29 et 38, 9, 23.—His son Quintus Maximus Gurges, was defeated by the Samnites and would have been disgraced by the senate had not his father interfered and promised to serve as his lieutenant, that thus he might wipe away the infamy thrown upon the Roman arms. In consequence of this the Samnites were conquered, and Pontius their general was cruelly beheaded. Liv. 11.—Quintus was the only survivor of the Fabian family after the battle of Cremera. He was three times consul and was at last banished. Liv. 3, 1, &c.—Rusticus an historian in the age of Claudius and Nero. He was intimate with Seneca, and the encomiums which Tacitus passes upon his style make us regret the loss of his compositions.—Marcellinus an historian in the second century.—A Roman lawyer, whom Horace (Sat. 1, 2, 134) ridicules as having been caught in adultery.—Q. Maximus, a celebrated Roman first surnamed Verrucosus from a wart on his lip, and Agnicula from his inoffensive manners. From a dull and unpromising childhood he burst into deeds of valour and heroism and was gradually raised by merits to the highest offices of the state. As ambassador in Africa, he boldly supported the Roman character; and when the Carthaginian senate hesitated to declare friendship or war and desired that he might give whichever he chose, he disdainfully threw open his robe, exclaiming, Take war. In his first consulship he obtained a victory over Liguria, and the fatal battle of Thrasymenus occasioned his election to the dictatorship. In this important office he began to oppose Annibal, not by fighting him in the open field, like his predecessors, but he continually harassed his army by countermarches and ambuscades from which he received the surname of Cunctator, or delayer. Such operations, for the commander of the Roman armies, gave offence to some, and Fabius was even accused of cowardice. He, however, still pursued the measures which prudence and reflection seemed to dictate as most salutary to Rome, and he patiently bore to see his master of horse raised to share the dictatorial dignity with himself, by means of his enemies at home. When he had laid down his office of dictator, his successors for a while followed his plan, but the rashness of Varro, and his contempt for the operations of Fabius occasioned the fatal battle of Cannæ. Tarentum was obliged to surrender to his arms after the battle of Cannæ, and on that occasion the Carthaginian enemy observed that Fabius was the Annibal of Rome. When he had made an agreement with Annibal for the ransom of the captives, which was totally disapproved by the Roman senate he nobly sold all his estates to pay the money rather than forfeit his word to the enemy. The bold proposal of young Scipio to go and carry the war from Italy to Africa was rejected by Fabius as chimerical and dangerous. He did not, however, live to see the success of the Roman arms under Scipio, and the conquest of Carthage by measures which he treated with contempt and heard with indignation. He died in the 100th year of his age after he had been five times consul and twice honoured with a triumph. The Romans were so sensible of his great merit and services that the expenses of his funeral were defrayed from the public treasury. He was called the shield as Marcellus le served the appellation of the sword of Rome. Ovid Fast. 2, 242.—Cic. Br. 18. Orat. 2, 67.—Plut. in vita.—Flor. 2, 6.—Liv. 21, &c.—His son bore the same name and showed himself worthy of his noble father's virtues. During his consulship he received a visit from his father on horseback in the camp. The son ordered the father to dismount and the old man cheerfully obeyed embracing his son and saying, I wished to know whether you knew what it is to be consul. He died before his father and the Cunctator with the moderation of a philosopher delivered a funeral oration over the dead body of his Plut. in Fabio.—Hector the earliest of Roman historians, grandson of the artist who painted the temple of Health. He flourished during the second Punic war and after the battle of Cannæ was deputed to the oracle of Delphi to learn the proper means of appeasing the gods. He wrote Annals of Rome both in the Greek and Latin language as also books De Jure Pontificio. Few fragments remain.—A loquacious person mentioned by Horace (Sat. 1, 4).—A Roman consul surnamed Ambustus, because he was struck with lightning.—A lieutenant of Cæsar in Gaul.—Fabricianus a Roman assassinated by his wife Fabia that she might more freely enjoy the company of a favourite youth. His son was saved from his mother's cruelties, and when he came of age he avenged his father's death by murdering his mother and her adulterer. The senate took cognizance of the action, and patronized the parricide. Plut. in Parall.—Lupercus, a priest of Pan at Rome. The priests were divided into two classes, called Fabiani the friends of Remus and Quintiliani the friends of Romulus. Ovid. Fast. 2, 2, 5.—Propert. 4, 1, 8.—A lieutenant of Lucullus, defeated by Mithridates.—A son of Paulus Æmilius, adopted into the family of the Fabii.—Q. Æmilianus, was degraded from Ædileship, and was surnamed Allobrogicus from his victory over the Allobroges, &c. Flor. 2, 17.—Another, chosen general against the Carthaginians in Italy. He lost all his forces in a battle and fell wounded by the side of Annibal. Plut. in Parall.—A consul with J. Cæsar who conquered Pompey's adherents in Spain. Dio. 43, 45.—A high priest, who wrote some annals, and made war against Viriathus in Spain. Liv. 30, 26.—Flor. 3, 2.—Dorus. Vid Dorus.

FABRATERIA, a town of Latium, on the river Liris, and near its junction with the Trerus. It is now Falvaterra. Liv. 8, 19.—Sil. Ital. 8, 366.

FABRICIUS, a Latin writer in the reign of Nero, who employed his pen in exhibiting and defaming the senators. His works were burned by order of Nero.—Caius Luscinus, a celebrated Roman, who, in his first consulship, obtained several victories over the Samnites and Lucanians, and was honoured with a triumph. The riches which were acquired in those battles were immense, the soldiers were liberally rewarded by the consul, and the treasury was enriched with 400 talents. Two years after, Fabricius went as ambassador to Pyrrhus and refused with contempt the presents, and heard with indignation the offers, which might have corrupted the fidelity of a less virtuous citizen. Pyrrhus had occasion to admire the magnanimity of Fabricius; but his astonishment was more powerfully awakened when he opposed him in the field of battle, and when he saw him make a discovery of the perfidious offer of his physician, who pledged himself to the Roman general for a sum of money to poison his royal master. To this greatness of soul were added the most consummate knowledge of military affairs, and the greatest simplicity of manners. Fabricius never used rich plate at his table. A small salt-cellar, whose feet were of horn, was the only silver vessel which appeared in his house. This contempt of luxury and useless ornaments, Fabricius wished to inspire among the people, and during his censorship he banished from the senate Cornelius Rufinus, who had been twice consul and dictator, because he kept in his house more than ten pounds weight of silver plate. Such were the manners of the conqueror of Pyrrhus, who observed that he wished rather to command those that had money than possess it himself. He lived and died in the greatest poverty. His body was buried at the public charge, and the Roman people were obliged to give a dowry to his two daughters, when they had arrived to marriageable years. Val Max 2, 9 4, 4.—Flor 1 18.—Cic de Offic 3.—Plut in Pyrrh.—Virg Æn 6 844.——A tribune, who proposed the restoring of Cicero from exile. Cic Sest 30.—Red in Sen 8.——A bridge at Rome, built by the consul Fabricius over the Tiber. Horat. Serm. 2, 3, 36.

FABULLA, a prostitute, &c. Juv 2, 68.

FACELINA, a small place on the north of Sicily where Diana had a temple. Servius ad Virg. Æn. 2, 117.—Hygin 261.

Q FADIUS, a freedman, father of Fulvia, Antony's wife. He was called Bambalio from his stammering. Cic Phil. 2, 2 et 35, 6.——Titus, a quæstor in Cicero's consulship. He was unjustly banished. Cic. Fam. 5, ep. 18.—Ad Att. 3, ep. 23.

FADUS, a Rutulian killed in the night by Euryalus. Virg Æn. 9 344.

FÆSULÆ, now Fiesole, a town of Etruria, north-east of Florentia, whence it is said the Augurs passed to Rome. Catiline made it a place of arms. The Goths, when they entered Italy, under the consulate of Stilicho and Aurelian, A. D. 406, were defeated near this town. Cic pro Mur. 24.—Hist. 3, 478.—Sallust. Cat 27.

FAGUTAL, a surname of Jupiter, either because the beech (fagus) was consecrated to him, or because one of his temples was surrounded with such trees. Plin. 16, 10.

FALCIDIA LEX, was enacted by the tribune Falcidius, A.U.C. 713, that the testator should leave at least the fourth part of his fortune to the person whom he named his heir.

FALCONIA PROBA, a Roman lady in the age of Theodosius the younger, who distinguished herself as a poetess in favour of Christianity. She married Adelphius, a man of singular ability, by whom she had Paltonia; but the cheerfulness of her character did not prevent her from being suspected of betraying Rome to the barbarian Alaric. Her poem, which epitomizes most of the principal events of the Old and New Testaments, is written with spirit, in the true style of Virgilian verse, and consists of 694 lines.

FALERIA, a town of Picenum, south-west of Firmum, now Fallerone. Plin 3, 13.

FALERII, (or ium), now Civita Castellana, a city of Etruria, south-west of Fescennium, and the capital of the Falisci. The Romans borrowed some of their laws from Falerii. The place was famous for its pastures, and for a peculiar sort of sausage. (Vid. Falisci.) Martial 6, ep 76.—Liv 10, 12 et 16.—Ovid. Fast 1, 84.—Pont 4, 8, 41.—Cato R R 4 et 14.—Servius in Virg. Æn. 7, 695.—Plin 3, 5.

FALERINA, a tribe at Rome. Liv 9, 20.

FALERNUS, a district of Italy famed for its wine. Few parts of Italy proved unfriendly to the vine, but it flourished most in that portion of the south-western coast, to which, from its extraordinary fertility and delightful climate, the name of Campania Felix was given. Some doubt concerning the extent of the appellation seems to exist; but Pliny and Strabo confine it to the level country reaching from Sinuessa to the promontory of Sorrento, and including the Campi Leborini, from whence the present name of Terra di Lavoro has arisen. In ancient times, indeed, the hills by which the surface is diversified seem to have formed one continued vineyard. Falernus, as spoken of by Florus as a mountain, and Martial describes it under the same title; but Pliny, Polybius, and others, denominate it a field or territory (ager); and, as the best growths were styled indiscriminately Massicum and Falernum (vinum), it is thought that Massicus was the proper appellation of the hills which rose from the Falernian plain. The truth seems to be, that the choicest wines were produced on the southern declivities of the range of hills which connection in the neighbourhood of ancient Sinuessa, and extend to a considerable distance inland, and which may have taken their general name from the town or district of Falernus; but the most conspicuous or the best exposed among them may have been the Massic, and, as in process of time several inferior growths were confounded under the common denomination of Falernian, correct writers would choose that epithet which most accurately denoted the finest vintage. If, however, it be allowable to appeal to the analogy of modern names, the question of locality will be quickly decided; for the mountain which is generally allowed to point out the site of ancient Sinuessa is still known by the name of Monte Massico. Pliny's account of the wines of Campania is the most circumstantial. (Plin. 14, 6.) "Augustus, and most of the leading men of his time," observes this writer, "gave the preference to the Setine wine that was grown in the vineyards above the Forum Appii, as being of all kinds the least apt to injure the stomach. Formerly the Cæcuban wine, which came from the marshes of Amyclæ, was most esteemed, but it has lost its repute, partly from the negligence of the growers, and partly from the limited extent of the vineyards, which have been nearly destroyed by the navigable canal begun by Nero from Averuus to Ostia. The second rank used to be assigned to the growths of the Falernian territory, and among them chiefly to the Faustianum. The territory of Falernus begins from the Campanian bridge, on the left hand, as you go to Urbana. The Faustian vineyards are situate about four miles from the village, in the vicinity of Cedia, which village is six miles from Sinuessa. The wines produced on this soil owe their celebrity to the great care and attention bestowed on the manufacture; but latterly they have somewhat degenerated, in consequence of the rapacity of the farmers, who are usually more intent upon the quantity than the quality of their vintage. They continue, however, in the greatest estimation, and are perhaps the strongest of all wines, as they burn when approached by the flame. They are of three kinds; namely, the dry, the sweet, and the light Falernian. The grapes of which the wine is made are unpleasant to the taste." From this and other accounts, it appears that the Falernian wine was strong and durable; so rough in its present state as not to be drunk with pleasure, and requiring to be kept many years before it grew sufficiently mellow. Horace terms it a fiery wine, and calls for water from the spring to moderate its strength; and Persius applies to it the epithet indomitum, in allusion to its very heady qualities. According to Galen, the best was that from ten to twenty years; after this period it became bitter. Among the wines of the present day, Nerea and Monteira most closely resemble the Falernian. Vid. Cæcubus Ager. (Henderson on Wines, ch. 6.)

FALISCI, a people of Etruria, said to have been originally a Macedonian colony. When they were besieged by Camillus, a schoolmaster went out of the gates of the city with his pupils, and offered to betray them into the hands of the Roman enemy, that by such a possession he might easily oblige the place to surrender. Camillus heard the proposal with indignation, and ordered the man to be stripped naked and whipped back to the town by those whom his perfidy wished to betray. This instance of generosity operated upon the people so powerfully, that they surrendered to the Romans. Plut. in Camill.

FALISCUS GRATIUS. Vid. Gratius.

FAMA, (Fame,) was worshipped by the ancients as a powerful goddess, and generally represented blowing a trumpet, &c. Stat. Theb. 3, 427.

FANNIA, a woman of Minturnæ, who hospitably entertained Marius in his flight, though he had formerly sat in judgment upon her, and divorced her from her husband.

FANNIA LEX, de Sumptibus, enacted A. U. C. 588. It limited the expenses of one day, at festivals, to 100 asses, whence the law is called by Lucilius, Centussis; on ten other days every month, to 30, and on all other days to 10 asses: also that no other fowl should be served up except one hen, and that not fattened for the purpose.

FANNIUS, QUADRATUS, an inferior poet, ridiculed by Horace, because his poems and picture were consecrated in the library of Apollo, on mount Palatine at Rome, as it was then usual for such as possessed merit. Horat. Sat. 1, 4, 21.—Caius, a writer of annals, son-in-law of Lælius. Brutus abridged an elegant history which he composed. Cic. Br. 21 et 26, 27. Tusc. 4, 17. Att. 13, ep. 5.——A tribune, who commanded in Sicily, during the civil wars. After Cæsar's death, he sided with Cn. Pompey, and advised him to relieve D. Brutus in Mutina. Cic. Ph. 13, 6. Att. 7, ep. 15.——A person who killed himself when apprehended in a conspiracy against Augustus. Mart. 12, ep. 59.——Caius, an author in Trajan's reign, whose history, in three books, of the cruelties of Nero, is greatly regretted. Pliny the younger, who was his friend, bitterly laments his fate, and describes him as polished and eloquent, and naturally endowed with great powers improved by study and exercise.

FANUM VACUNÆ, a temple of Vacuna, in the vicinity of Horace's Sabine villa. It is supposed to have stood on the summit of Rocca Giovane. Hor. Ep. 1, 10, 49.

FARFARUS, a river in the country of the Sabines, the same as Fabaris. It falls into the Tiber above Capena. Ovid. Met. 14, 330.

FASCELIS, a surname of Diana, because her statue was brought from Taurica by Iphigenia in a bundle of sticks, (fascis,) and placed at Aricia. Hygin. fab 261.

FAUCULA, a prostitute who privately conveyed food to the Roman prisoners at Capua. Liv. 26, 33.

FAUNA, a deity among the Romans, daughter of Picus, and originally called Marica. Her marriage with Faunus procured her the name of Fauna, and her knowledge of futurity that of Fatua and Fatidica. It is said that she never saw a man after her marriage with Faunus, and that her uncommon chastity occasioned her being ranked among the gods after death. She is the same, according to some, as Bona Mater. Some mythologists accuse her of drunkenness, and say that she expired under the blows of her husband, for an immoderate use of wine. Virg. Æn. 7, 47, &c.—Varro.—Justin. 43, 1.

FAUNALIA, festivals at Rome in honour of Faunus.

FAUNI, certain deities of the country, represented as having the legs, feet, and ears of goats, and the rest of the body human. They were called Satyri by the Greeks. The peasants offered them a lamb or a kid, with great solemnity. Virg. G. 1, 10.—Ovid. Met. 6, 392.

FAUNUS, a son of Picus, who is said to have reigned in Italy about 1200 years B. C. His bravery as well as wisdom have given rise to the tradition that he was son of Mars. He raised a temple in honour of the god Pan, called by the Latins Lupercus, at the foot of the Palatine hill; and he exercised hospitality towards strangers with a liberal hand. His great popularity, and his fondness for agriculture, made his subjects revere him as one of their country deities after death. He was represented with all the equipage of the Satyrs, and was consulted to give oracles. Dionys. 1, 7.—Virg. Æn. 7, 47. 8, 314. 10, 55.—Horat. Od. 1, 17.

FAUSTA, a daughter of Sylla, wife to Milo. Horat. Sat. 1, 2, 64.—Cic. Att. 5, ep. 9.—Plut. in Syll.——The wife of the emperor Constantine, disgraced for her cruelties and vices.

FAUSTINA, the wife of the emperor Antoninus Pius, infamous for her debaucheries. She died A. D. 141, in her thirty-seventh year. Her daughter, of the same name, blessed with beauty, liveliness, and wit, became the most abandoned of her sex. She married M. Aurelius the emperor, who pitied but did not punish her irregularities. She died A. D. 175, near mount Taurus in Asia, where she attended her husband in his expedition against the rebellious Caselus.——The third wife of the emperor Heliogabalus bore that name, and was grand-daughter to the preceding. She was unlike her predecessors in their conduct, but not possessed of such personal charms.

FAUSTITAS, a goddess among the Romans, supposed to preside over cattle, and the productions of the seasons generally. Horat. Od. 4, 5, 17.

FAUSTŬLUS, a shepherd ordered to expose Romulus and Remus. He privately brought them up at home. Liv. 1, 4.—Plutarch Rom.

FAUSTUS, an obscure poet under the first Roman emperors, two of whose dramatic pieces, Thebe and Tereus, Juvenal mentions, 7, 12.——The name of Faustus was given by Sylla to his son, born after his elevation to the dictatorship. Plut. in Syll.—Cic Sull. 19.—Ad. 4, ep. 10.

FAVO, a Roman mimic, who, at the funeral of Vespasian, imitated the manners and gestures of the deceased emperor. Suet. in Vesp. 19.

FAVONIUS, the name of one of the winds. Vid. Ventl.

FAVORĪNUS, a Platonic philosopher and rhetorician, was born at Arelate, in Gaul. He lived in the reign of Adrian, and taught at Athens and Rome with great reputation. He complied with the capricious humours of Adrian, saying, "would you have me dispute with a man who can command thirty legions?" Many works have been ascribed to him, but none are extant.

FEBRUALIA, a feast at Rome of purification and atonement, in the month of February: it continued for twelve days. The month of February, which, together with January, was added by Numa to the ten months constituting the year of Romulus, derived its name from this general expiatory sacrifice, the people being then purified (februati) from the sins of the whole year.

FECIALES, a number of priests at Rome, employed in declaring war and making peace. When the Romans thought themselves injured, one of this sacerdotal body was empowered to demand redress, and after the allowance of thirty-three days to consider the matter, war was declared if submissions were not made, and the Fecialis hurled a bloody spear into the territories of the enemy in proof of intended hostilities. Liv. 1, 3. 4, 26.

FELGINAS, a Roman knight, killed by Pompey at Dyrrachium. Cæs. Bell. Civ. 3.

FELIX, M. ANTONIUS, a freedman of Claudius Cæsar, made governor of Judæa, Samaria, and Palestine. He is called by Suetonius the husband of three queens, as he married the two Drusillæ, one grand-daughter of Antony and Cleopatra, and the other a Jewish princess, sister of Agrippa. The name of his third wife is unknown. Suet. in Cl. 28.—Tacit. Ann. 12, 14.——Minutius, a father of the primitive church, who flourished about A. D. 226. He was an African by birth, and a lawyer, and when converted to Christianity, he wrote in its defence a celebrated dialogue called Octavius. Vid. Minutius.

FELSINA, an Etrurian city in Gallia Cisalpina, afterwards called Bononia, and now Bologna. It was at one time the principal city of the Tusci, north of the Apennines. It became a Roman colony, and suffered considerably during the civil wars, but was afterwards restored by Augustus. Plin. 3, 15.—Liv. 27, 37.—Cic. ad Fam. 11, 13. 12, 5.—Tacit. Hist. 2, 32.

FELTRIA, a town of Italy at the north of Venice, now Feltro.

FENESTELLA, a Roman historian in the age of Augustus. He died at Cumæ.——One of the gates at Rome. Ovid. Fast. 4, 625.

FENNI, or FINNI, the inhabitants of Finningia or Enningia, now considered as Finland. Tacit. G. 46.—Plin. 4, 13.

FERALIA, a festival observed among the Romans on February 21st, or, according to Ovid, on the 17th of that month, in honour of the manes of their deceased friends or relations. Varro derives the word from fero, on account of a repast carried to the sepulchres of those to whom the last offices were rendered on that occasion. Festus derives it from ferio, on account of the victims sacrificed. Vossius observes, that the Romans called death fera, cruel, and that the word feralia might arise thence. During the continuance of this festival, which lasted eleven days, presents were made at the graves of the deceased, marriages were forbidden, and the temples of the gods shut up. While the ceremonies continued, they imagined that the manes suffered no punishments in the infernal regions, but that their tormentors allowed them to wander round their tombs, and feast upon the meats which their surviving friends had prepared for them.

FERENTINUM, a town of Etruria, south-east of Vulsinii, now Ferenti. Suet. Oth. 1.—Sext. Aur. Vict.—Tacit. Hist. 2, 50.——A town of Latium, about eight miles beyond Anagnia, on the Via Latina, now Ferentino. It appears to have belonged originally to the Volsci, but was taken from them by the Romans, and allotted to the Hernici. It subsequently fell into the hands of the Samnites. Liv. 4, 51. 10, 35.

FERENTUM, or FORENTUM, a town of Apulia, about eight miles to the south-east of Venusia, and on the other side of mount Vultur. It is now Forenza. Plin. 3, 11.—Horat. Od. 3, 4, 18.

FERETRIUS, a surname of Jupiter, a ferendo, because he had assisted the Romans, or a feriendo, because he had conquered their enemies under Romulus. He had a temple at Rome, built by Romulus, where the spoils called opima, obtained from Acron king of Cæninæ, were deposited by the monarch. Only two generals obtained these celebrated spoils after the age of Romulus. Liv. 1, 10.—Plut. in Rom.—C. Nep. in Att. 20.

FERIÆ LATINÆ, festivals at Rome instituted by Tarquin the Proud. The principal magistrates of forty-seven towns in Latium used to assembled on a mount near Rome, where they altogether with the Roman magistrates offered a bull to Jupiter Latialis, of which they carried home some part after the immolation, after they had sworn mutual friendship and alliance. It continued but one day originally, but in process of time four days were dedicated to its celebration. Dionys. Hal. 4, 49.—Cic. ad Fam. 8, ep. 4.—Liv. 21, 63. The feriæ among the Romans were certain days set apart to celebrate festivals, and during that time it was unlawful for any person to work. They were either public or private. The public were of four different kinds. The feriæ stativæ were certain immovable days always marked in the calendar, and observed by the whole city with much festivity and public rejoicing. The feriæ conceptivæ were moveable feasts, and the day appointed for the celebration was always previously fixed by the magistrates or priests. Among these were the Feriæ Latinæ, which were first established by Tarquin, and observed by the consuls regularly, before they set out for the provinces; the Compitalia, &c. The feriæ imperativæ were appointed only by the command of the consul, dictator, or prætor, as a public rejoicing for some important victory gained over the enemies of Rome. The feriæ Nundinæ were regular days in which the people of the country and neighbouring towns assembled together and exposed their respective commodities to sale. They were called Nundinæ, because kept every ninth day. The feriæ privatæ were observed only in families, in commemoration of birth-days, marriages, funerals, and the like. The days on which the feriæ were observed were called by the Romans festi dies, because dedicated to mirth, relaxation, and festivity.

FERONIA, a nymph of Campania, who presided over the woods and orchards, and was worshipped at Rome as a goddess. The name is derived from ferro, because she gave assistance to her votaries, or, perhaps, from the town Feronia, near mount Soracte, where she had a temple. It was usual to make a yearly sacrifice to her, and to wash the face and hands in the waters of the sacred fountain, which flowed near her temple. It is said that those who were fully inspired by this goddess could walk barefooted over burning coals without receiving any injury from the flames. The goddess had a temple and grove about three miles from Anxur, and also another in the district of Capena. Liv. 34, 26.—Virg. Æn. 7, 697 et 800.—Varro de L. L. 4, 10.—Ital. 13, 84.—Strab. 5.—Horat. Sat. 1, 5, 24.

FESCENNIA, (orum) or FESCENNIUM, a city of Etruria, east of the Cimmian lake and near the Tiber. It seems to have occupied the site of the modern Gabne. It is noted in the annals of Latin poetry for the nuptial songs, called Carmina Fescennina, to which according to Festus, it gave its name. The origin of the Fescennine verses is to be traced to the rude hilarity attendant upon the celebration of harvest. They were, therefore, in their primitive character, a sort of rustic dialogue spoken extempore, in which the actors exposed before their audience the failings and vices of their adversaries, and by a satirical humour and merriment endeavoured to raise the laughter of the company. They would seem to have speedily run into excess, since one of the laws of the twelve tables prohibits this license under pain of death: a punishment afterwards commuted for beating with sticks. Plin. 15, 22.—Virg. Æn. 7, 695.—Horat. Ep. 2, 1, 145.

FESTUS, a friend of Domitian, who killed himself in an illness. Martial 1 ep 79.—Portius, a proconsul who succeeded Felix as governor of Judæa, under Claudius.—Pompeius, a Latin grammarian, supposed to have lived during the latter half of the third century. He made an abridgment of a work of Verrius Flaccus, de verborum significatione. His abridgment was again reduced by Paul Winifred, of which an edition was published in 1470; and more completely afterwards, particularly in the Delphin classics, in 1835, 4to.

FESULÆ. Vid Fæsulæ.

FIBRENUS, a small stream of Latium, falling into the Liris through Cicero's farm at Arpinum. Sil. 8, 408.—Cic. Leg 2, 1.

FICANA, a town of Latium, at the south of Rome, near the Tiber. Liv. 1, 33.

FICARIA, a small island on the east of Sardinia. Vid Serpentes. Plin. 3, 7

FICULEA, or FICULNEA, a town of Latium at the foot of mount Sacer at the north of Rome. Cicero had a villa there, and the road that led to the town was called Ficulnensis afterwards Nomentana Via. Cic. Att. 12, 44.—Div. 1, 36. 3, 52.

FIDENÆ, a town of the Sabines, between four and five miles from Rome. It was founded by an Alban colony, and was finally reduced under the Roman power, A. U. C. 329, by the dictator Æmilius Mamercus. Liv. Æn 6, 774.—Jur. 1, 44.—Liv 1, 14, 15 et 27. 2, 19. 4, 1. et 21.

FIDENTIA, a town of Gaul on the south of the Po, between Placentia and Parma. Vell. 2, 25.—Plin 3, 15.—Cic. de Inv 2, 51.

FIDES, the goddess of faith, oaths, and honesty, worshipped by the Romans. Numa was the first who paid her divine honours, and he directed that her worship should be maintained at the expense of the public, whose prosperity was so nearly centered in the observation of it. The temple fell to decay, but was rebuilt by Att Clatinius. It stood in the capitol, according to Pliny, though Cicero says that only the statue of the goddess was there. The only dress of this divinity was a white veil, expressive of frankness, candour, and modesty; and the head and hands of her priests were likewise adorned with white, and they were permitted to offer oblations only with the right hand. No animal was offered, as the goddess was an enemy to bloodshed. Sometimes she is represented with a cup in one hand, and in the other a cornucopia, sometimes sitting, and crowned with an olive branch, with a turtle, the symbol of peace, in one hand, and a military ensign in the other. The symbol of fidelity is represented by two hands strongly joined together. Varro de L. L. 4, 10.—Cic. de Off. 3.—De N. D. 2.—Dionys. Hal 2, 75.—Plin. 35, 10.—Horat. Od. 1, 35.

FIDICULÆ, a place of Italy. Ital Mer 7, 6.

FIDIUS DIUS, a divinity, the god of faith and truth, by whom the Romans generally swore. He was also called Sancus, or Sanctus, and Semipater, and he was solemnly addressed in prayers on the 5th of June, which was yearly consecrated to his service. Some suppose him to be Hercules, while others assert that he was the first king of the Sabines, whom the adulation of his subjects and of his son Sabus, who gave his name to the nation, elevated to rank with the gods after death. Ovid. Fast 6, 213.—Varro de L. L. 4, 10.—Dionys Hal 2 et 9.

FIDUCIUS, M., a Roman senator, proscribed by Sylla, and thirty three years after by Antony, by whom he was put to death. Plin 7, 43.—Val 47.

FIGULUS, C. Marcius, a consul with Nasica, A. U. C. 592. He resigned his office, through the informality of his election, and was six years after consul with Lentulus. Cic De 20.—Div 2, 35. N. D. 2, 1.—A consul with L. Cæsar, A. U. C. 689. His tomb is described as very sumptuous. Ov. Leg. 2, 25.—Ill. 1, ep. 2.—Nigidius, a senator, known for his great knowledge of astrology. Lucan. 1, 639.

FIMBRIA, C. Flavius, a Roman consul, A. U. C. 668. He served in Asia with the consul Valerius Flaccus, whom he put to death, and after displaying great courage in his encounters with the armies of Pontus, he nearly took their king Mithridates prisoner. The return of Sylla into Asia, and the consequent pacification, put an end to the ambitious hopes of Fimbria, who seeing the success of his rival and the rapid desertion of his troops, killed himself. Plut. in Lucull.—Cic. Rab. 7. Off. 3, 19.—Liv. 82, 83.

FIRMUS, M. a powerful native of Seleucia, who proclaimed himself emperor, and was at last conquered by Aurelian FIRMUM, a town of Picenum, about five miles from the sea, below the river Tinna In the course of the second Punic war, it sent succours to the Romans against Annibal It is now Fermo. Its port was Castellum Firmanorum, now Portodi Fermo. Vell. Pat. 1, 14.—Cic. Att. 8, 12. —Plin. 3, 13.

FISCELLUS, a part of the Apennine mountains in Umbria, where the Nar rises. Sil. 8, 515.—Plin 3, 12

FLACCUS, a consul who marched against Sylla, and was assassinated by Fimbria Plut —— A poet. (Val. Valerius.)—A governor of Egypt, who died A. D. 39 —— Verrius, a grammarian tutor to the two grandsons of Augustus, and supposed author of the Capitoline marbles —— A name of Horace Vid Horatius.

FLAVIA FLACILLA, the mother of Arcadius and Honorius, was daughter of Antonius, a prefect of Gaul

FLAMINIA LEX, agraria, by C Flaminius, the tribune, A U C 522. It required that the lands of Picenum, from which the Gauls Senones had been expelled, should be divided among the Roman people

FLAMINIA VIA, a celebrated road which led from Rome to Arminium and Aquileia It received its name from Flaminius, who built it, and was killed at the battle of Thrasymenus against Annibal ——A gate of Rome opening to the same road, now del popolo.

C. FLAMINIUS, a Roman consul of a turbulent disposition, who was drawn into a battle near the lake of Thrasymenus, by the artifice of Annibal. He was killed in the engagement, with an immense number of Romans, B C 217. The conqueror wished to give a burial to his body, but it was not found in the heaps of slain While tribune of the people he proposed an agrarian law against the advice of his friends, of the senate, and of his own father. Cic. de Inv 2, 17.—Inv. 22, 3, &c —Polyb —Flor. 2, 6 —Val. Max. 1, 6.

FLAMINIUS, or FLAMININUS, T Q a celebrated Roman raised to the consulship, A.U C 556. He was trained in the art of war against Annibal, and he showed himself capable in every respect to discharge with honour the great office with which he was intrusted. He was sent at the head of the Roman troops against Philip, king of Macedonia, and in his expedition he met with uncommon success. The Greeks gradually declared themselves his firmest supporters, and he totally defeated Philip on the confines of Epirus, and made all Thessaly, Phocis, and Thessaly, tributary to the Roman power. He granted peace to the conquered monarch, and proclaimed all Greece free and independent, at the Isthmian games. This celebrated action procured the name of patrons of Greece to the Romans, and insensibly paved their way to universal dominion Flamininus behaved among them with the greatest policy, and by his ready compliance with their national customs and prejudices, he gained uncommon popularity, and received the name of father and deliverer of Greece. He was afterwards sent ambassador to king Prusias, who had given refuge to Annibal. He persuaded Prusias to violate the laws of hospitality in delivering up Annibal, but the veteran soldier prevented the treachery of the monarch by taking poison. Flamininus was found dead in his bed, after a life spent in the greatest glory, in which he had imitated with success the virtues of his model Scipio. Plut. in vit —Flor —— Lucius, the brother of the preceding, signalized himself in the wars of Greece He was expelled from the senate for killing a thief, by Cato his brother's colleague in the censorship, an action which was highly resented by Titus Plut in Flam —— Philippus, a tribune, who, at the head of 300 men, saved the Roman army in Sicily, B. C 258, by engaging the Carthaginians and cutting them to pieces.

FLANATICUS SINUS, a bay of the Flanates, in Liburnia, on the Adriatic, now the gulf of Quarnaro. It was also termed Sinus Polaticus (Vid. Flano.) Mela, 2, 3.—Plin. 3, 19.

FLANO, a town on the Illyrian side of the Sinus Flanaticus, and giving name to the gulf. It is now Fiumare Steph. Byz

FLAVIA LEX, agraria, by L. Flavius, A.U.C. 693 for the distribution of a certain quantity of lands among Pompey's soldiers, and the commons

FLAVINIA M. a town of Etruria, south of Capena, and near the Tiber. It was also called Flavina. Its modern name is Fiano. Virg Æn. 7, 696.—Sil Ital. 8, 492.

FLAVIUS, a senator, who conspired with Piso against Nero, &c. Tacit.——A Roman, who informed Gracchus of the violent measures of the senate against him —— The name of the emperor Vespasian's family. Hence his partisans are called Flaviani and Domitian his son, Flavius ultimus. Suet. Vesp 1. Dom. 10 et 18.—Tac Hist. 3, 7 et 24.—Juv 4, 47 —— Lucius, a tribune, who, to little purpose, proposed an agrarian law. He was prætor in the consulship of Cæsar and Bibulus, and warmly espoused the cause of the dictator in the civil war Cic. Att. 1, ep 18 et 19. 10, ep. 1. Ad Fr 1, ep 2. Dio. 37, 32.—— Marcus, a tribune, who wished the people of Tusculum to be punished, &c Liv 8, 37.—A schoolmaster at Rome in the age of Horace, Sat. 1, 6, 72

FLEVUS, a canal intersecting the country of the Frisii, made by Drusus. This in time expanded to such a degree as to form a considerable lake, whose junction with the sea was fortified by a castle bearing the same name. This lake, having been in progress of time much increased by the sea, assumed the name of Zuyder Zee, or the Southern Sea; and of several channels which afford entrance to the ocean, that named Vlie indicates the genuine egress of the Flevus. Tacit. Ann. 2, 6 4, 72.—Plin 4, 15.—Mela, 3, 2.

FLORA, the goddess of flowers and gardens among the Romans, the same as the Chloris of the Greeks. Some suppose that she was originally a common courtezan, who left to the Romans the immense riches which she had acquired by prostitution and lasciviousness, on condition that they should celebrate the anniversary of her birth-day by games and feasts. She was worshipped even among the Sabines, long before the foundation of Rome, and likewise among the Phocæans, who built Marseilles long before the existence of the capital of Italy. Tatius was the first who raised her a temple in the city of Rome. It is said that she married Zephyrus, and that she received from him the privileges of presiding over flowers, and of enjoying perpetual youth. (Vid. Floralia.) She was represented as crowned with flowers and holding in her hand the horn of plenty. Ovid. Fast 5, 195, &c — Varro de R. R. 1.—Lactant. 1, 20.——A celebrated courtezan, passionately loved by Pompey the Great She was so beautiful, that when the temple of Castor and Pollux at Rome was adorned with paintings, her picture was drawn and placed among the rest — — Another courtezan, &c. Juv 3, 39

FLORALIA, games celebrated at Rome in honour of Flora They began the 28th of April, and continued for several days. They were instituted about the age of Romulus, but they were not celebrated with regularity and proper attention till the year A U C 580. They were observed yearly, and exhibited a scene of the most unbounded licentiousness. It is reported that Cato wished once to be present at the celebration, and that when he saw that the deference for his presence interrupted the feast, he retired, not choosing to be the spectator of the prostitution of naked women in a public theatre This behaviour so captivated the degenerate Romans, that the venerable senator was treated with the most uncommon applause as he retired Val. Max 2, 10 — Lactan de F. E. 1, 20 — Polyæn 1, 14. — Plin. 18, 29 — Ovid Fast 5, 195 — Tacitus, 1, 20 — Senec ep. 97. — Mart 8, ep 67.

FLORENTIA a town of Etruria, on the river Arnus, now Florence the capital of Tuscany Tacit. Ann 1, 79 — Plin 3, 5

FLORIANUS, a man who wore the imperial purple at Rome only for two months A D 276

FLORUS L. ANNÆUS, a Latin historian of the second century, of the same family with Seneca and Lucan He is the author of a "Compendium of the Roman History," from the foundation of the city to the reign of Augustus, in four books It is to be regarded rather as a panegyric on many of the great actions of the Romans, than a faithful and correct recital of their history. Throughout the narrative, however, there are pleasing reflections which display great animation, and strong powers of sensibility Florus was a writer of poetry as well as an historian, and has been thought to have entered the lists against the emperor Adrian. The best editions of Florus are that of Duker, 2 vols, 8vo, L. Bat. 1722 and 1744, and that of Fischer, 8vo, Lips 1760 — A young Roman, the friend of Horace, who accompanied Tiberius in his expedition into Dalmatia, A U C 731, and subsequently into Armenia, A.U.C 734 Horace addresses two epistles to him.

FLUONIA, a surname of Juno Lucina, who under that appellation was invoked by the Roman matrons to stop excessive discharges of blood Fest de V sig

FOLIA a woman of Ariminum famous for her knowledge of poisonous herbs and for her puissance Horat Epod. 5, 42.

FONS SOLIS, a fountain in the province of Libya Exterior, warm in the morning and evening, cold at noon, and hot at midnight. (Vid. Ammon.) Herod. 3 181.

FONTANUS, a poet mentioned by Ovid, Pont. 4, 16.

FONTEIA, a vestal virgin. Oic. Font 17.

FONTEIUS, CAPITO, an intimate friend of Horace Sat. 1, 5, 32. — Titus, a prætor, who was governor of Spain. Liv 40 et 41 — Marcus, a governor of Gaul, in whose defence Cicero exerted his oratorical powers Cic. Font. 1 Att 4, ep. 15 — A Roman, who raised commotions in Germany after the death of Nero Tacit. Hist. 1, 7. — A man who conducted Cleopatra into Syria by order of Antony Plut. in Ant

FONTINALIA, a festival celebrated at the Porta Fontinalis of Rome, on the 13th of October, in honour of the nymphs who presided over fountains. During the ceremonies, wells and fountains were hung with beautiful garlands of flowers Festus de V sig. — Varro de L. L. 5, 3. — Liv 27, 10.

FORCULUS, or FORICULUS, a deity at Rome, who presided over doors, as Carna presided their hinges. Tertull de Id. 15 — Aug de Civ D 4, 8.

FORMIÆ a town of Latium, to the north-east of Caieta. It was anciently the abode of the Lestrygones, and it became known for its excellent wines, and was called Mamurrarum urbs, from a family of consequence and opulence who lived there Its modern name is Mola de Gaeta. Liv 1, 14 38, 36 — Horat Od 1, 20, 11 3, 17. Sat 1, 5 &c. — Plin 30, 6.

FORMIANUM, a villa of Cicero near Formiæ, near which the orator was assassinated Cic Fam 11 ep 27 16, ep 10 — Tacit. Ann 16, 10

FORNIO a small river of Venetia, now the Romano considered, before the reign of Augustus, as the boundary of Italy towards its north eastern extremity, but when Istria was included in Cisalpine Gaul, this limit was removed to the little river Arsia. Plin. 3, 18.

FORNAX a goddess at Rome, who presided over the baking of bread. Her festivals, called Fornicalia, were first instituted by Numa. Ovid. Fast 2, 525.

FORTUNA, a powerful deity among the ancients, daughter of Oceanus according to Homer or one of the Parcæ according to Pindar. She was the goddess of fortune, and from her hand were derived riches and poverty, pleasures and misfortunes, blessings and pains. She was worshipped in different parts of Greece, and in Achaia her statue held the horn of plenty in one hand, and had a winged Cupid at its feet. In Bœotia she had a statue which represented her as holding Plutus the god of riches in her arms, to intimate that fortune is the source whence wealth and honours flow. Rupalus was the first who made a statue of Fortune for the people of Smyrna, and he represented her with the polar star upon her head, and the horn of plenty in her hand The Romans paid particular attention to the goddess of Fortune, and had no less than eight different temples erected to her honour in their city Tullus Hostilius was the first who built her a temple, and from that circumstance it is easily known when her worship was first introduced among the Romans Her most famous temple in Italy was at Antium, in Latium, where presents and offerings were regularly sent from every part of the country Fortune has been called Pherepolis, the protectress of cities, and Acrea from her temple at Corinth on an eminence Supra She was called Prænestine at Prænestæ in Italy, where she had also a temple she was worshipped among the Romans under different names, such as Female Fortune, Virile Fortune, Equestrian, Evil, Peaceful, Virgin, &c On the first of April, which was consecrated to Venus among the Romans, the Italian widows and marriageable virgins assembled in the temple of Virile Fortune, and after burning incense and stripping themselves of their garments, they entreated the goddess to hide from the eyes of their husbands whatever defects there might be on their bodies. The goddess of Fortune is represented on ancient monuments with a horn of plenty, and sometimes two, in her hands. She is blindfolded, and generally holds a wheel in her hands as an emblem of her inconstancy. Sometimes she appears with wings, and treads upon the prow of a ship, and holds a rudder in her hands. Dionys Hal. 4.—Ovid. Fast. 6, 569.—Plut. de Fort. Rom. et in Cor.—Cic. de Div. 2.—Liv. 10.—Augustin. de Civ. D. 4, 18.—Plaut. 1.—Val. Max. 1, 5.—Lucan. 2, 193.

FORTUNATÆ INSULÆ, islands at the south-west of Mauritania in the Atlantic sea. They are now called the Canary Islands from one of them, formerly named Canaria, and at present Canary. They were considered by the ancients as the islands of the blessed (μακάρων νῆσοι), where the souls of virtuous men were placed after death. The climate was delightfully genial, the air wholesome and temperate, and the breezes constantly gentle, and the earth brought forth every thing that could contribute to the happiness of man without his assistance, and in the most luxurious abundance. When they had been described to Sertorius in the most enchanting colours, that celebrated general expressed a wish to retire thither, and to remove himself from the noise of the world and the dangers of war. The nearest of the Fortunate islands to the continent was Centuria or Pintuaria, now Fuerteventura, to the west of it was Canaria, now Canary, so called from its abounding in large dogs. Beyond it was Convallis or Nivaria, now Teneriffe, famous for its lofty peak, which, from its being generally covered with snow, gave name to the island. Farther westward were Capraria, now Gomera, so called from its abounding with goats, Junonia or Hera, now Ferro, and Pluvialia or Ombrion, now Palma. The Fortunate islands are remarkable as having been the most western part of the world with which the ancients were acquainted, and hence it was from them that they reckoned their longitude. Strab. 1.—Plut. in Sertor.—Pind. Olymp. 2, 128.—Horat. Od. 4, 8, 27. Epod. 16.—Plin. 6, 31 et 32.

FORULI, a town of the Sabines built on a stony place. Strab. 5.—Virg. Æn. 7, 714.

FORUM ROMANUM, Vetus vel Magnum, a large open space in the city of Rome, where public assemblies and courts of judicature were held. It was situated between the Capitoline and Palatine hills, and was in shape a rectangle, the breadth being about two-thirds of the length. According to what may now be regarded as the received opinion, the four angles of the Roman forum were formed by the arch of Severus at the foot of the Capitol; the arch of Fabian, near the temple of Antonius and Faustina; the temple of Romulus, now the church of St Theodore, at the foot of the Palatine; and a point near the church della Consolazione, below the Capitol. It was formed by Romulus, and adorned with porticoes and shops by Tarquinius Priscus. It was afterwards surrounded with temples, basilicks, and statues; among which were those of the twelve deities, named Consentes Urbani, whereof six were males and six females. Its site is now called Campo Vaccino, or the Cow-field, or market. Liv. 1, 12 et 35.—Dion. Hal. 2, 66. 3, 67.—Varro de R. R. 1, 1.—There was only one Forum under the republic; Julius Cæsar added another, Augustus a third; a fourth was begun by Domitian, and finished by Nerva, after whom it was named. But the most magnificent was that of Trajan, decorated with the spoils he had taken in war. Besides these, there were various fora, or places where markets and public auctions were held.

FORUM, ALLIENI, a town of Gallia Cisalpina, now Ferrara. Tacit. Hist. 3, 6.—Appii, a town of Latium, on the Via Appia, about twenty-three miles from Aricia. It is mentioned by St Luke in his account of St Paul's journey to Rome (Acts 28, 15), and is likewise well known as the second resting-place of Horace in his journey to Brundusium. Its position seems to agree with that of Borgo Longo near Treponti. Cic. Att. 1, 10.—Horat. Sat. 1, 5, 3.—Augusti, a place at Rome. Ovid. Fast. 5, 552.—Aurelii, a town of Etruria, now Montalto. Cic. Cat. 1, 9.—Claudii, another in Etruria, now Oriolo.—Cornelii, a town of Gallia Cisalpina, built by Sylla, now Imola, in the Pope's dominions. Plin. 3, 16.—Cic. Fam. 12, 5.—Domitii, a town of Gallia Narbonensis, probably built by Ahenobarbus Domitius, now Frontignan in Languedoc.—Flaminii, a town of Umbria, now San Giovanni. Plin. 3, 14.—Fulvii, a town of Liguria, surnamed Valentinum, now Valenza. Id. 3, 5.—Gallorum, a town of Gallia Cisalpina, on the Via Æmilia, eight miles from Mutina. It is now Castel Franco, in the territory of Bologna. Cic. Fam. 12, 25.—Also a town of Venetia, called Forojulienses urbs, now Friuli. Id. 12, 26.—Julii, a town of Gallia Narbonensis, now Frejus, in Provence. Id. 10, 17.—Lepidi, a town of Gallia Cisalpina, now Reggio. Id. 12, 5.—Livii, another in Gallia Cisalpina, now Forli. Plin. 3, 14.—Popilii, another, now Forlimpopoli. Id. 3, 15.—Sempronii, a town of Umbria, on the Metaurus, now Fossombrone. Id. 3, 14.—Many other places bore the name of Forum wherever there was a public market, or rather where the prætor held his court of justice, (forum vel conventus), and thence they were called sometimes fora provinciæ as well as fora. The whole provinces were generally divided under the administrations of a separate governor. Cic Verr 2, 20. 4, 48. 5, 11. Valin. S. Fam 5, 6 et 8. Alter. 5, 21.

FOSI, a people of Germany, lying north of the Cheruci, along the Visurgis, or Weser. They shared the fate of the Cheruci when the Longobardi conquered the latter people. Tacit. G. 36.

FOSSA, the straits of Bonifacio, between Corsica and Sardinia, called also Taphros. Plin 3, 6.—Drusi or Drusiana, a canal eight miles in length, opened by Drusus from the Rhine to the Isel, below the separation of the Whal. Suet. Claud. 1.—Tacit. Hist 5, 23.—Mariana, a canal cut by Marius from the Rhone to Marseilles during the Cimbrian war, and now called Gelgon. Sometimes the word is used in the plural, Fossæ, as if more than one canal had been formed by Marius. Plin. 3, 4.—Strab. 4.—Mela, 2, 5.

FOSSA PHILISTINA, one of the mouths of the Po, now the Po grande. Tacit. Hist. 3, 9.

FRANCI, tribes of Germans, who occupied the districts on the Lower Rhine and Weser. They assumed the name of Franks, i. e. Freemen, from a temporary union among themselves against the Roman power. This confederacy is supposed to have been formed in the reign of Gordian III.; and the Chauci, Cherusci, Catti, and other tribes of inferior strength, are thought to have belonged to it. The Franks soon became powerful enough to act on the offensive, and crossing the Rhine, they spread their devastations from the banks of that river to the foot of the Pyrenees; nor were they stopped by these mountains. Spain, in turn, was overrun; and when the exhausted country no longer supplied a variety of plunder, the Franks seized on some vessels, and transported themselves into Mauritania. They were afterwards driven out of Gaul by the Roman arms, and from the reign of Probus, A.D 277, to that of Honorius, seem to have contented themselves with occasional irruptions. They obtained a permanent footing in Gaul during the last years of the reign of Honorius About the year 500, Clovis, by reducing the several Frank principalities under his own sceptre, and conquering the last remnant of the western Roman empire in Gaul, is held to have established the modern kingdom of France. Claudian

FRAUS, a divinity worshipped among the Romans, daughter of Orcus and Night. She was invoked by those who dreaded the treachery over which she presided, as well as those who practised every cruel and secret act of perfidy She was represented under the form of a beautiful woman, whose deformities were concealed in the extremities of her body, which was terminated by a serpent spotted with various colours.

FREGELLÆ, a city of Latium, south east of Anagnia, on the Via Latina It belonged first to the Sidicini, and successively to the Volsci and the Samnites, but it was finally conquered and colonized by the Romans, A.U.C 427 Its ruins are to be seen at Ceperano, a small town on the right of the Garigliano. Noah 5 — Liv 8, 22 26, 9.—Cic de Fin 5, 23 Phil 3, 6

FREGENÆ, a town of Etruria, on the sea coast Plin 3, 5.

FRENATRIX, or FRENATRIX, a surname of Pallas, because she first was supposed to have tamed the horse, and rendered him useful to mankind She had a temple at Corinth, in which her statue was wood, except the hands, face, and feet, which were of white marble. Paus 2 4

FRENTANI, a people of Italy, on the Adriatic coast, east of Samnium and north west of Apulia, who received their name from the river Frento, now Fortore, which runs through the eastern part of their country, and falls into the Adriatic opposite the islands of Diomede. Their country included the greater part of Abruzzo Citra, and the north east portion of Samnio. Plin. 3, 11.—Liv 9, 45.—Sil 8, 520.

FRETUM, (the sea,) is sometimes applied by eminence to the Sicilian sea, or the straits of Messina. Cæs. C 1, 29.—Flor. 1, 25 — Cic. Att. 2, 1

FRISII, a people of Germany, having for their boundaries the eastern mouth of the Rhine on the west, the Ocean on the north, the Amisia or Ems on the east, and the Vecuta or Vechte on the south. They occupied, consequently what corresponds at the present day to West Friesland, Groningen, and the northern angle of Ober Yssel, together with the islands which lie partly to the north in the ocean, and partly at the eastern mouth of the Rhine. Tacit. Ann. 1, 60. Hist. 4, 15 et 72. G. 34.

FRONTINUS, SEX. JUL., an eminent Roman, was city praetor under Vespasian, A.D 70. He was afterwards a supplementary consul, and distinguished himself by his military talents as a commander in Britain. Under Nerva he was charged with the general superintendence of the waters and aqueducts of the capital, and in this capacity brought the waters of the Anio to Rome by means of a splendid aqueduct. He wrote a work on the Roman aqueducts, and another on military stratagems. When he died, he forbade the erection of a monument to his memory, saying that it was a superfluous expense, for that his name would survive, if by his actions he had merited it. The best edition of Frontinus is that of. Oudendorp, L Bat 1779, 8vo.

FRONTO, MARCUS CORNEL., a preceptor of M Antoninus, by whom he was greatly esteemed None of his works are extant, though his compositions are mentioned with high commendation by Macrobius, St Jerome, Ausonius, and others — Julius, a learned Roman, who was so partial to the company of poets, that he lent them his house and gardens, which continually re-echoed the compositions of his numerous visitants. Juv. Sat 1, 12.

FRUSINO, a town of Latium, situate on the left bank of the river Cosa. It was deprived by the Romans of a third part of its lands for having stirred up the Hernici to rebellion, A U C 450. It is now Frosinone Juv 3, 223 — Liv. 10, 1 — Sil 8 399 — Cic Att 11, 1 et 13

FUCINUS, a lake of Italy in the country of the Marsi, at the north of the Liris, attempted to be drained by J Cæsar, and afterwards by Claudius, by whom 30,000 men were employed for eleven years in cutting a passage through a mountain to convey the water into the Liris, but with no permanent success The lake surrounded by a ridge of high mountains is now called Celano, and is supposed to be forty-seven miles in circumference, and not more than twelve feet deep on an average Plin. 36, 15 — Tacit Ann. 12, 56.— Luc Ann 7, 7 9.

FUFIDIUS, a wretched usurer, &c. Horat Sat. 1, 2

FUFIUS GEMINUS, a man greatly promoted by the interest of Livia, &c. Tacit Ann. 3, 1 et 2.

FUGALIA, festivals at Rome, celebrated on the 24d of February, to commemorate the flight and expulsion of the Tarquins. Aug de Civ. D. 2, 6.—Ovid. Fast 2, 685.

FULGINATES, (sing. Fulginas), a people of Umbria, whose chief town was Fulginum, now Foligno. Sil It 8, 462.—Plin 3, 4 5, 14.

Q FULGINUS, a brave officer in Cæsar's legions, &c. Cæs. Bell Civ

FULGORA, a goddess at Rome, who presided over lightning. She was addressed to save her votaries from the effects of violent storms of thunder Aug. de Civ D. 6, 10.

FULLINUM and FULGINUM, a small town of Umbria.

FULVIA LEX was proposed but rejected A.U.C 628, by Flaccus Fulvius. It tended to make all the people of Italy citizens of Rome.

FULVIA, a bold and ambitious woman, who married the tribune Clodius, and afterwards Curio, and at last M. Antony. She took a part in all the intrigues of her husband's triumvirate, and showed herself cruel as well as revengeful. When Cicero's head had been cut off by order of Antony, Fulvia ordered it to be brought to her, and with all the insolence of barbarity, she bored the orator's tongue with her golden bodkin Antony divorced her to marry Cleopatra, upon which she attempted to avenge her wrongs, by persuading Augustus to take up arms against her husband. When this scheme did not succeed, she raised a faction against Augustus, in which she engaged L. Antonius her brother-in-law, and when all her attempts proved fruitless, she retired into the east, where her husband received her with great coldness and indifference.

This unkindness totally broke her heart, and she soon after died, about 10 years before the Christian era. Plut. in Cic. et Anton.—A woman who discovered to Cicero the designs of Catiline upon his life. Plut. in Cic.

FULVIUS, a man who migrated to Rome from Tusculum, and became consul, A.U.C. 452. It is said that he triumphed over his countrymen. Plin. 7, 43. Liv. 8, 14, 37, &c.—Q. Flaccus, a Roman engaged in the second Punic war. He took Capua, and put to death eighty of the principal inhabitants, against the advice of his colleague App. Claudius. Liv. 26, 15. 27, 8. Sil. 12. 71. Cic. Bull. 2. 33.—Marcus Nobilior, a consul who triumphed over the Ætolians, and built a temple in honour of Hercules, and of the Muses, which he adorned with a beautiful picture of these goddesses by Zeuxis from Ambracia. He was intimate with Ennius, who accompanied him in his Ætolian expedition. Cic. Tusc. 1. 2. Arch. 11.—Flor. 3, 10.—Liv. 37, 50.—A Roman senator intimate with Augustus. He disclosed the emperor's secrets to his wife, who made it public to all the Roman matrons for which he received so severe a reprimand from Augustus, that he and his wife hanged themselves in despair.—Marcus Flaccus, a consul, A.U.C. 630. He assisted the people of Marseilles, and was the first who conquered the Ligurians. He espoused the party of the Gracchi, and strongly interested himself in the turbulent factions of the times, upon which he was killed by the consul Opimius, and his house levelled to the ground. His body was thrown into the river, and his widow was forbidden to put on mourning for his death. Plut. in Gracch.—Liv. 60.—Appian C. B. 1.—Cic. Agra. 2.—Flaccus Censor, a Roman who distinguished himself in his wars against the Spaniards. When censor he plundered a marble temple of Lacinian Juno, to finish the building of one which he had erected to Fortune, in consequence of a vow. This was considered as a sacrilege, and opposed by the Romans, upon which it was said that misfortunes overwhelmed the house of Fulvius, and that he was bereaved of his senses by the offended Juno, and consequently on the death of his son he strangled himself. Liv. 39, 39, &c. 40, 1 &c. 42, 3. et 28.—See Nobilior, a Roman consul who went to Africa after the defeat of Regulus. After he had acquired much glory against the Carthaginians, he was shipwrecked at his return with 200 Roman ships. His grandson Marcus was sent to Spain, where he greatly signalized himself. He was afterwards rewarded with the consulship.

C. FUNDANIUS, the father-in-law of Varro, intimate with Cicero. Varr. R. R. 1, 2.—Cic. ad Fr. 1, ep. 2.—Caius, a comic poet in the age of Augustus, praised by Horace for the pleasing characters he gives of artful slaves, &c. Horat. Sat. 1, 10, 42. 2, 8, 19.—Marcus, a tribune who wished to abrogate the Appian law. Liv 34, 1.

FUNDANUS, a lake near Fundi in Italy, which discharges itself into the Mediterranean. Tacit. Hist 3. 69.

FUNDI, a town of Latium, on the Appian way, near the Lacus Fundanus, and not far from Caieta. It is now Fondi. Strab. 5.—Liv. 8, 14 et 19. 33, 36.—Horat. Sat. 1, 5, 34.—Cic. ad Att. 11, 6.

FURIA LEX, de Testamentis, by C. Furius the tribune. It ordained that no person should leave by way of legacy more than a thousand asses, and that he who took more should pay fourfold. Cic. Ver. 1, 42.

FURIÆ, the three daughters of Nox and Acheron, or of Pluto and Proserpine, according to some. Vid. Furmenides.

FURII, a family which migrated from Medullia in Latium, and came to settle at Rome under Romulus, and was admitted among the patricians. Camillus was of this family, and it was he who first raised it to distinction. This illustrious family was supposed to be anciently the same as the Furii. It branched into the families of the Aculeones, Bibaculi, Crassipedes, Camilli Lusci, Pacili, Phili, Purpuriones, Medullini. Liv. 3, &c.—Quintil. 1, 4.—Plut. in Camill.

FURINA, the goddess of robbers, worshipped at Rome. Some say that she is the same as the Furies. Her festivals were called Furinalia, and were celebrated in the month of July. Her power was not considered as great or revengeful, since the asylum which C. Gracchus had taken in her sacred grove was rudely violated by his enraged pursuers. Cic. de Nat. D. 3, 5.—Varro de L. L. 5, 6.

FURIUS, L. MEDULLINUS, a military tribune.—A Roman slave, who obtained his freedom, and applied himself with unremitted attention to cultivate a small portion of land which he had purchased. The uncommon fruits which he reaped from his labours rendered his neighbours jealous of his prosperity. He was accused before a Roman tribunal of witchcraft, but honourably acquitted.—M. Bibaculus, a Latin poet of Cremona, who wrote annals in iambic verse, and was universally celebrated for the wit and humour of his expressions. It is said that Virgil imitated his poetry, and even borrowed some of his lines. Horace, however, has not failed to ridicule his verses. Quintil. 8, 6, &c.—Horat. Sat. 2, 5, 40.—Antias, another Latin poet, who wrote annals, and other poems, praised for their elegance, polished style, and happy diction. Only seventeen verses are preserved of his poetry, collected in the corpus poetarum. Aul. Gell.—Lucius Camillus, a consul, A.U.C. 405. He made war against the Gauls, and erected a temple to the goddess Moneta. Liv. 7, 25. 26, 28.—A friend of Camillus, described as being in very indigent circumstances.—The name of Camillus. Vid. Camillus.

FURNIUS, a man accused of adultery with Claudia Pulchra, and condemned, &c. Tacit. Hist. 4, 52.—A friend of Horace, who was consul, and distinguished himself by his elegant historical writings. Sat. 1, 10, 86.

FUSCUS, ARISTIUS, a friend of Horace, as conspicuous for the integrity and propriety of his manners, as for his learning and abilities. The poet addressed his 22 od. 1 and 1 ep. 10, to him.—Cornu, a praetor sent by Domitian against the Daci, where he perished. Juv. 4, 112.

FUSIA LEX, de Comitiis, A.U.C. 627, forbade any business to be transacted at the public assemblies on certain days, though among the fasti.—Another, A.U.C. 690, which ordained that, in the Comitia Tributa, the different kinds of people in each tribe should vote separately, that thus the sentiments of every rank might be known.—Canina, another by Camillus and C. Canius Gallus, A.U.C. 751, limiting the manumission of slaves to a certain number, proportioned to the whole amount of slaves which one possessed; from two to ten, the half; from ten to thirty, the third, from thirty to a hundred, the fourth part; but not above a hundred, whatever was the number.

FUSIUS, a Roman orator. Cic. de Orat. 2, 22. ——A Roman, killed in Gaul, while he presided there over one of the provinces. Cæs. Bell. G. 7, 3.——A Roman actor, whom Horace ridicules, Sat. 2, 3, 60. He intoxicated himself; and when on the stage he fell asleep whilst he personated Ilione, where he ought to have been roused and moved by the cries of a ghost, but in vain.

G

GABÆ, a city of Persia, in the province of Persis, south east of Pasargadæ, on the borders of Carmania. It is now Derahgherd——A city of Sogdiana, south west of Cyreschata. It was one of the first places to which the exploits of Alexander gave celebrity in this country. Its modern name is Charas.

GABALA, a small town on the isthmus of Corinth, where Dido, one of the Nereides, had a magnificent temple, in which was preserved the veil that Eriphyle received to engage her son Alcmæon to head an army against Thebes. Paus. 2, 1.——Some small towns of Syria have received the same name Plol. 5, 15.

GABALI, a people of Aquitania. Plin 4, 19.

GABAZA, a district of Sogdiana. Curt. 8, 4.

GABELLUS, now La Secchia, a river falling in a northern direction into the Po, opposite the Mincius. Plin 3, 16

GABIA, or GABINA. Vid Gabina.

GABIENUS, a friend of Augustus, beheaded by order of Sext. Pompey. It is maintained that he spoke after death

GABII, a town of the Sabines, near the Via Salaria, and not far from Cures. Its site is now called Grotte di Torri, or simply Torri.——An ancient city of Latium, somewhat to the north-west of Tusculum, and beyond the little river Veresis. Its site exists as a place called l'Osteria del Pantano It is said to have been one of the numerous colonies founded by Alba. It was taken by the artifice of Sextus, the son of Tarquin, who gained the confidence of the inhabitants by deserting to them, and pretending that his father had ill-treated him Romulus and Remus were educated there, as it was the custom at that time to send there the young nobility, and Juno was the chief deity of the place. The inhabitants had a peculiar mode of tucking up their dress, which was by throwing one of their skirts over the left shoulder, and tying it in a knot to the other under the right arm, whence the expression Gabinus cinctus. This mode of dress originated in their being suddenly attacked, by their enemies while offering a sacrifice, and the expeditious manner in which they tucked up their long flowing robe, was afterwards adopted as a favourable omen to national prosperity. Virg. Æn. 6, 773. 7, 612 et 682.—Liv. 3, 46. 6, 29. 8, 9. 10, 7.—Ovid. Fast. 2, 709.—Plut. in Romul. de fort. R.

GABINA, the name of Juno, worshipped at Gabii. Virg. Æn. 7, 682. Vid Gabii.

GABINIA LEX, de Comitiis, by A. Gabinius, the tribune, A.U.C. 614. It required, that in the public assemblies for electing magistrates, the votes should be given by tablets, and not even viva voce——Another, for convening daily the senate from the calends of February to those of March.——Another, de Comitiis, which made it a capital punishment to convene any clandestine assembly, agreeable to the old law of the twelve tables. ——Another, de Militia, by A. Gabinius the tribune, A U C 685 It granted Pompey the power of carrying on the war against the pirates, during three years, and of obliging all kings, governors, and states, to supply him with all the necessaries he wanted, over all the Mediterranean sea, and in the maritime provinces, as far as 400 stadia from the sea.——Another, de Cæsa, by Aul. Gabinius, the tribune, A U C 685. It ordained that no action should be granted for the recovery of any money borrowed upon small interest, to be lent upon larger. This was an usual practice at Rome, which obtained the name of versuram facere——Another, against fornication.

GABINIANUS, a rhetorician in the reign of Vespasian

GABINIUS, a Roman historian.——A prætor, accused of extortion in Achaia. Cic Cæc. 20, Arch. 5.——Aulus, a Roman consul, who made war in Judæa, and re-established tranquillity there. He suffered himself to be bribed, and replaced Ptolemy Auletes on the throne of Egypt He was accused, at his return, of receiving bribes; but Cicero, though formerly ill treated by him, at the request of Pompey, ably defended him. He was lieutenant to Cæsar during the civil wars, and he died at Salona when besieged there by Octavius, 40 years B C. Appian. Illy. 762.—Hirt. Alex. 34.—Cic Dom 9. Sext 25. Manil. 17 —— A lieutenant of Antony.

GABINUS cinctus Vid Gabii

GADES (arum), GADIS (is), and GADIRA, a small island in the Atlantic, on the Spanish coast 25 miles from the columns of Hercules. It was sometimes called Tartessus and Erythea, according to Pliny, and is now known by the name of Cadiz. Geryon, whom Hercules killed, fixed his residence there. Hercules, surnamed Gaditanus, had there a celebrated temple, in which all his labours were engraved with excellent workmanship The inhabitants were called Gaditani, and their women were known for their agility of body, and their incontinency Horat, Od. 2, 2, 11.—Stat. Sylv. 3, 1, 183 — Liv 21, 21. 24, 49. 26. 43. —Plin. 4. 33.—Strab. 3.—Cic. pro Balb.—Justin. 44. 4.—Prisc. 1, 35.—Pol. 2, 4.—Palerc. 1, 2.

GADITANUM FRETUM, now the Straits of Gibraltar Vid. Abyla and Calpe.

GADITANUS, a surname of Hercules, from Gades. Vid. Gades

GADITANUS SINUS, now the Bay of Cadiz.

GÆSATÆ, a people on the Rhone, who assisted the Senones in taking and plundering Rome under Brennus. Strab. 5.

GÆTULIA, a country of Africa, south of Numidia, and now answering in some degree to Biledulgerid, or the region of locusts. Its situation and limits are not accurately ascertained, and indeed do not seem to have been always the same. Sallust. in Jug.—Sil 3, 287.—Plin. 5, 4.

GETULICUS, CN. LENTULUS, an officer in the age of Tiberius, &c. Tacit Ann. 4, 42.—— A poet, who wrote some epigrams, in which he displayed great genius and more wit, though he often indulged in indelicate expressions. He has, like some of his contemporaries, extolled the personal charms of his favourite Cesennia, a woman that seemed to return the affections of the poet. Only three of his verses are preserved. Some suppose that he is the Lentulus Gætulicus mentioned by Suetonius.

GALA, father of Masinissa, was king of Numidia, and the determined ally of Carthage against Rome Liv. 24, 48, &c. 29, 29.

GALACTOPHAGI, a people of Asiatic Scythia. Homer. Il. 3.

GALÆSUS. Vid Galesus.

GALANTHIS, a servant maid of Alcmena, whose sagacity eased the labours of her mistress. When Juno resolved to retard the birth of Hercules, and hasten the labours of the wife of Sthenelus, she solicited the aid of Lucina, who immediately repaired to the house of Alcmena, and, in the form of an old woman, sat near the door with her legs crossed, and her fingers joined. In this posture she uttered some magical words, which served to prolong the labours of Alcmena, and render her state the more miserable Alcmena had already passed some days in the most excruciating torments, when Galanthis began to suspect the jealousy of Juno, and concluded that the old woman, who continued at the door always in the same unchanged posture, was the instrument of the anger of the goddess. With such suspicions, Galanthis ran out of the house, and with a countenance expressive of joy, she informed the old woman that her mistress had just brought forth. Lucina, at the words, rose from her posture, and that instant Alcmena was safely delivered. The uncommon laugh which Galanthis raised upon this, made Lucina suspect that she had been deceived. She seized Galanthis by the hair, and threw her on the ground, and while she attempted to resist, she was changed into a weasel, and condemned to bring forth her young in the most agonizing pains, by the mouth, by which she had uttered falsehood. This transformation alludes to a vulgar notion among the ancients, who believed this of the weasel, because she carries her young in her mouth, and continually shifts from place to place. The Bœotians paid great veneration to the weasel, which, as they supposed, facilitated the labours of Alcmena. Ælian. H. Anim. 2. - Ovid Met. 9, fab. 6

GALATÆ, the inhabitants of Galatia. Vid. Galatia.

GALATEA, and GALATHÆA, a sea nymph, daughter of Nereus and Doris. She was passionately loved by the Cyclops Polyphemus, whom she treated with coldness and disdain; while Acis, a shepherd of Sicily, enjoyed her unbounded affection. The happiness of these two lovers was disturbed by the jealousy of the Cyclops, who crushed his rival to pieces with a fragment of a broken rock, while he lay in the bosom of Galatea. Galatea was inconsolable for the loss of Acis, and as she could not restore him to life, she changed him into a fountain. This story seems to be borrowed from the account of Philoxenus, who lived at the court of Dionysius of Sicily, and enjoyed the favours of a mistress of the tyrant. The poet was sent, for this partiality, to the quarries, where, in the midst of his captivity and severe punishement, he composed a poem, in which he satirized the tyrant under the name of Polyphemus, and spoke of his misfortunes and those of his mistress under the assumed appellation of Ulysses and Galatea. Ovid. Met. 13, 750.—Virg. Ecl. 9, 103.——The daughter of a Celtic king from whom the Gauls were called Galatæ. Ammian. 15.——A country girl. Ecc. Virg. Ecl. 3.

GALATIA, a country of Asia Minor, bounded on the north by Paphlagonia and part of Bithynia, on the south and west by Phrygia, and on the east by Cappadocia. It owed both its name and origin to the Gauls, who wandered from Europe, B. C. 278, under their leader Brennus, shortly after their defeat in Greece It was likewise named Gallo-Græcia, from its being surrounded by Greek colonies; and Gallia Parva, to distinguish it from Gallia Propria, which the Greeks also called Galatia. Strab. 12.—Justin. 27. 1.—Liv. 38, 12 et 40.—Lucan. 7, 540.—Cic. Att. 6, 5 —Plin. 5, 32.—Ptol. 5, 4.

GALAXIA, a festival, in which they boiled a mixture of barley, pulse, and milk, called Galaxia by the Greeks.

GALBA, a surname of the first of the Sulpicii, from the smallness of his stature The word signifies a small worm, or, according to some, it implies, in the language of Gaul, fatness, for which the founder of the Sulpician family was remarkable.——A king among the Gauls, who made war against Julius Cæsar. Cæs. Bell. Gall 2, 4.——A brother of the emperor Galba, who killed himself, &c.——A mean buffoon, in the age of Tiberius. Juv. 5, 4.——Servius, a lawyer at Rome, who defended the cause of adulterers with great warmth, as being one of the fraternity. Horace ridicules him. Sat. 1, 2, 46 ——Servius Sulpicius, a Roman who rose gradually to the greatest offices of the state, and exercised his power in the provinces with equity and unremitted diligence. He dedicated the greatest part of his time to solitary pursuits, chiefly to avoid the suspicions of Nero. His disapprobation of the emperor's oppressive command in the provinces, was the cause of new disturbances. Nero ordered him to be put to death, but he escaped from the hands of the executioner, and was publicly saluted emperor. When he was seated on the throne, he suffered himself to be governed by favourites, who exposed to sale the goods of the citizens to gratify their avarice Exemptions were sold at a high price, and the crime of murder was blotted out, and impunity purchased with a large sum of money. Such irregularities in the emperor's ministers, greatly displeased the people; and when Galba refused to pay the soldiers the money which he had promised them when he was raised to the throne, they assassinated him in the seventy-third year of his age, and in the eighth month of his reign, and proclaimed Otho emperor in his room, January 16th, A D. 69. The virtues which had shone so bright in Galba when a private man, totally disappeared when he ascended the throne; and he who showed himself the most impartial judge, forgot the duties of an emperor, and of a father of his people. Sueton. et Plut in vitâ.—Tacit.—Sergius, a celebrated orator before the age of Cicero. During his command in the provinces of Spain, he with great perfidy, cut off 7000, or, according to Suetonius, 30,000 Lusitanians, which gave rise to the war against Viriatus. On his return to Rome, he was accused for this criminal conduct, but by showing his sons to the Roman people, and imploring their protection, he saved himself from the punishment which either his guilt or the persuasive eloquence of his adversaries, M. Cato and L. Scribonius, urged as due to him. Cic. de Orat. 1, 53. Ad. Her. 4, 3. —Val. Max. 3, 6.—Liv. 40.—Tacit. Ann. 3, 66.—Suet. Galb. 3.——His son, Caius, was the first of the college of priests condemned by public sentence. Cic. Or. 1, 56.——Br. 26, 34.——His son, Sergius, was great-grandfather to the emperor. He was lieutenant to Cæsar in Gaul, and afterwards conspired against his life. Cæs. B. G. 3, 1. 4, 3.—Suet Galb 3.—Cic. Phil. 13, 16.—Pater. 2, 56.——Sulpicius, the son of Sergius, was grandfather to the emperor. He was prætor at Rome, but devoted himself particularly to literary pursuits, and wrote a history replete with much valuable information. Suet. in Galb. 3

GALENUS CLAUDIUS, a celebrated physician, born at Pergamus, about 131 A D After studying philosophy, astronomy, geometry, and general literature, he turned his attention to medicine. Galen travelled for information respecting the properties of drugs and plants, and at the age of thirty, visited Rome with an intention of settling there; but the faculty opposed him so effectually, that he returned to Pergamus He had not been long there, before the fame of his talents induced Marcus Aurelius and Lucius Verus, to invite him to their court at Aquileia He accompanied the former emperor to Rome, where he triumphed over his enemies by the cures which he performed, particularly in the imperial family. Having succeeded in relieving Marcus Aurelius, when all the other medical men had missed his case, the emperor said, "we have but one physician, for Galen is the only valuable man of his profession" He died at Rome, A.D. 201. His writings were exceedingly numerous, and though many are lost, those which are extant compose a voluminous body of practical and theoretical medicine The best edition of his works, in Greek and Latin, is that of Kühn, 13 vols. 8vo, Lips 1821-7.

GALEO, a Roman who left all his property to Cicero. Cic Att 11, 11

GALERIA, one of the Roman tribes.——The wife of Vitellius Cæs.—Tacit. Hist. 2, 60 —— Faustina, the wife of the emperor Antoninus Pius.

GALERIUS, a native of Dacia, made emperor of Rome by Diocletian. Vid Maximianus

GALESUS, now Galeasi, a river of Calabria flowing into the bay of Tarentum. The poets have celebrated it for the shady groves in its neighbourhood, and the fine sheep which feed on its fertile banks, and whose fleeces were said to be rendered soft when they bathed in the stream. Martial. Ep 9, 57, 4, 56.—Virg. G. 4, 126.—Horat. Od. 2, 6, 10.——A rich person of Latium, killed as he attempted to make a reconciliation between the Trojans and Rutulians, when Ascanius had killed the favourite stag of Tyrrheus; which was the prelude to all the enmities between the hostile nations. Virg. Æn. 7, 535.

GALILÆA, a celebrated province of Palestine, forming the northern division. Josephus divides it into Upper and Lower; and he says, that the limits of Galilee were, on the south, Samaria and Scythopolis, unto the flood of Jordan. It contained four tribes, Issachar, Zebulun, Naphtali, and Asher; a part also of Dan, and part of Peræa, or the country beyond Jordan. Upper Galilee abounded in mountains, and was called Galilee of the Gentiles, from its being inhabited not only by Jews, but by Egyptians, Arabians, and Phœnicians. Lower Galilee, which contained the tribes of Zebulun and Asher, was sometimes named the Great Field, "the champaign." The valley was adjacent to the sea of Tiberias. Josephus describes Galilee as very populous, and containing 204 cities and towns. It was also very rich, and paid 200 talents in tribute. The natives were brave and good soldiers; but they were seditious, and prone to insolence and rebellion. Their language was a corrupt and unpolished dialect of Syriac, with a mixture of other languages It was probably this corrupt dialect that led to the detection of Peter as one of Christ's disciples. This district was most honoured with our Saviour's presence. Here he was conceived, here he was brought back by his mother and reputed father, after their return from Egypt; here he lived with them till he was thirty years of age; and, although after his entrance on his public ministry, he frequently visited the other provinces, it was here that he chiefly resided. Here, also, he made his first appearance after his resurrection to his apostles, who were themselves natives of this country, and were thence styled by the angels, "men of Galilee." Joseph. Bell. Jud 3, 3.—Strab. 16.—Matt. 26, 7.—Mark, 14, 70.—Acts, 1, 11

GALINTHIADIA, a festival at Thebes, in honour of Galinthias, a daughter of Proetus. It was celebrated before the festival of Hercules, by whose orders it was first instituted.

GALLI, a nation of Europe, naturally fierce, and inclined to war. They were very superstitious, and in their sacrifices they often immolated human victims In some places they had large statues made with twigs, which they filled with men, and reduced to ashes. They believed themselves descended from Pluto; and from that circumstance they always reckoned their time, not by the days, as other nations, but by the nights. Their obsequies were splendid; and not only the most precious things, but even slaves and oxen, were burned on the funeral pile Children, among them, never appeared in the presence of their fathers, before they were able to bear arms in the defence of their country. Cæs. Bell. G.—Strab. 4.—Tacit. (Vid. Gallus.)——The priests of Cybele, who received that name from the river Gallus, in Phrygia, where they celebrated the festivals. They mutilated themselves, before they were admitted to the priesthood, in imitation of Atys, the favourite of Cybele. (Vid. Atys) The chief among them was called Archigallus, who in his dress resembled a woman, and carried suspended to his neck, a large collar with two representations of the head of Atys. (Vid. Corybantes, Dactyli, &c) Dionys. 4.—Ovid. Fast. 4, 36.—Lucan 1, 566.—Lucan. de Dea Syria.

GALLIA, an extensive and populous country of Europe, bounded on the north and west by the ocean, on the east by the Rhine and the Alps, and on the south by the Mediterranean and the Pyrenees. Its greatest breadth was 600 English miles, but much less towards either extremity. Its length from north to south was from 480 to 620 miles. It comprehended in addition to the modern kingdom of France, the little county of Nice, the western half of Switzerland, and such parts of Germany and the Netherlands as are west and south of the Rhine. It was called Galatia by the Greeks, and Celtica by the natives. It was originally divided amongst three great nations, the Celtæ Belgæ, and Aquitani. The Celtæ inhabited the middle of the country, and were separated from their northern neighbours the Belgæ, by the Sequana, the Matrona, and mount Vogesus; to the south the Garumna was the limit between them and the Aquitani, whose territory is sometimes called Armorica. This extent of the Celtæ includes the Roman conquest in south eastern Gaul, which they designated by the name of Provincia (whence the modern Provence), with the occasional epithets of Nostra or Gallia. After the conquest of Gaul by Cæsar, and in the time of Augustus, the four provinces were more equally divided as to extent, without particular attention being paid to the distinction of their inhabitants. Their boundaries were then as follows: Belgica, or north-eastern Gaul, was separated from the Roman provincegn the south, by a line running from mount Adula, or St Gothard, through the lake Lemanus, to the river Arar; from Celtica, by the upper course of this river, to mount Vogesus, and thence by a north-western line to the English Channel, near the mouth of the Samara, or Somme. Celtica, or Lugdunensis, as it was now called, from Lugdunum its capital, was the north-western part of Gaul, and was bounded on the east by Belgica, on the south mostly by the Liger, and on the west and north by the ocean. To the south of this was Aquitania, or south-western Gaul, bounded on the east by a part of Lugdunensis, and mount Cebenna, on the south by the Tarnis, and the Pyrenees, and on the west by the ocean. The Roman province, or south-eastern Gaul, took the name of Narbonensis, from Narbo, or Narbonne, the metropolis of the whole country. In the course of time, each of these provinces was divided into several others, till at length their number amounted to seventeen. Besides these great divisions, there is often mention made of Gallia Cisalpina, or Citerior, Transalpina or Ulterior, whither refers to that part of Italy which was conquered by some of the Gauls who crossed the Alps. By Gallia Cisalpena, the Romans understood that part of Gaul which lies in Italy, and by Transalpina, that which lies beyond the Alps, in regard only to the inhabitants of Rome. Gallia Cispadana, and Transpadana, is applied to a part of Italy, conquered by some of the Gauls, and then it means the country on this side of the Po, or beyond the Po, with respect to Rome. By Gallia Togata, the Romans understood Cisalpine Gaul, where the Roman gowns, togæ, were usually worn, as the inhabitants had been admitted to the rank of citizenship at Rome. Gallia Narbonensis, was called Braccata, on account of the peculiar covering of the inhabitants for their thighs. The epithet of Comata, is applied to Gallia Celtica, because the people suffered their hair to grow to an uncommon length. The inhabitants were great warriors; and their valour overcame the Roman armies, took the city of Rome, and invaded Greece, in different ages. They spread themselves over the greatest part of the world. They were very superstitious in their religious ceremonies, and revered the sacerdotal order as if they had been gods. (Vid. Druidæ.) They long maintained a bloody war against the Romans; and Cæsar resided ten years in their country before he could totally subdue them. Cæs. Bell. Gall.—Paus. 7, 6.—Strab. 5, &c.

GALLICANUS MONS, a mountain of Campania.

GALLICUS AGER, was applied to the country between Picenum and Arminum, whence the Galli Senones were banished, and which was divided among the Roman citizens. Liv. 22, 14. 39, 44.—Cic. Cat. 2.—Cæs Cic. 1, 29.——Sinus, a part of the Mediterranean on the coast of Gaul, now called the gulf of Lyons.

GALLIENUS, PUBL. LICINIUS, a son of the emperor Valerian. He reigned conjointly with his father for seven years, and ascended the throne as sole emperor, A.D. 260. In his youth, he showed his activity and military character, in an expedition against the Germans and Sarmatæ; but when he came to the purple, he delivered himself up to pleasure and indolence. His time was spent in the greatest debauchery, and he indulged himself in the grossest and most lascivious manner, and his palace displayed a scene, at once, of effeminacy and shame, voluptuousness and immorality. He often appeared with his hair powdered with golden dust; and enjoyed tranquillity at home, while his provinces abroad were torn by civil quarrels and seditions. He heard of the lurs of a rich province, and of the execution of a malefactor, with the same indifference; and when he was apprised that Egypt had revolted, he only observed, that he could live without the produce of Egypt. He was of a disposition naturally inclined to raillery and the ridicule of others. When his wife had been deceived by a jeweller, Gallienus ordered the malefactor to be placed in the circus, in expectation of being exposed to the ferocity of a lion. While the wretch trembled at the expectation of instant death, the executioner, by order of the emperor, let loose a capon upon him. An uncommon laugh was raised upon this, and the emperor observed, that he who had deceived others, should expect to be deceived himself. In the midst of these ridiculous diversions, Gallienus was alarmed by the revolt of two of his officers, who had assumed the imperial purple. This intelligence roused him from his lethargy, he marched against his antagonists, and put all the rebels to the sword, without showing the least favour either to rank, sex, or age. These cruelties irritated the people and the army; emperors were elected, and no less than thirty tyrants aspired to the imperial purple. Gallienus resolved boldly to oppose his adversaries; but in the midst of his preparations, he was assassinated at Milan by some of his officers, in the 50th year of his age, A.D. 268. Though deservedly hated, Gallienus yet was possessed of great abilities, and distinguished himself by his eloquence, his wit, his genius, and his poetical effusions.

GALLINARIA SYLVA, a wood near Cumæ in Italy, famous as being the retreat of robbers. Juv. 3, 307.

GALLIPOLIS, a fortified town of the Salentines, on the Ionian sea.

GALLOGRÆCIA, a country of Asia Minor, near Bithynia and Cappadocia. It was inhabited by a colony of Gauls, who assumed the name of Gallogræci, because a number of Greeks had accompanied them in their emigration. Strab. 2.

GALLONIUS, P. a luxurious Roman, who, as was observed, never dined well, because he was never hungry. Cic. de Fin. 2, 8 et 28.

GALLUS. Vid. Alectryon.——A general of Otho, &c. Plut.——A lieutenant of Sylla.——An officer of M. Antony, &c.——Cælius, a friend of the great Africanus, famous for his knowledge of astronomy, and his exact calculation of eclipses. Cic. de Senect.——Ælius, the third governor of Egypt in the age of Augustus.——Cornelius, a Roman knight, who rendered himself famous by his poetical, as well as his military talents. He was passionately fond of the slave Lycoris or Cytheris, and celebrated her beauty in his poetry. She proved ungrateful, and forsook him to follow M. Antony, which gave occasion to Virgil to write his tenth eclogue. Gallus, as well as the other poets of his age, was in the favour of Augustus, by whom he was appointed over Egypt. He became forgetful of the favours which he had received, despoiled the province, and even conspired against his benefactor, according to some accounts, for which he was banished by the emperor. This disgrace operated so powerfully upon him that he killed himself in despair, A. D. 28. Some few fragments remain of his poetry, and it seems that he particularly excelled in elegiac compositions. It is said that Virgil wrote an eulogium on his poetical friend, and inserted it at the end of his Georgics, but that he totally suppressed it, for fear of offending his imperial patron, of whose favours Gallus had shown himself so undeserving, and instead of that he substituted the beautiful episode about Aristæus and Eurydice. This eulogium, according to some, was suppressed at the particular desire of Augustus. Quintil. 10, 1.—Virg. Ecl. 6 et 10.—Ovid. Amat. 3, 15, 28.——Vibius Gallus, a celebrated orator of Gaul, in the age of Augustus, of whose orations Seneca has preserved some fragments.——A Roman who assassinated Decius, the emperor, and raised himself to the throne. He showed himself indolent and cruel, and beheld with the greatest indifference the revolt of his provinces, and the invasion of his empire, by the barbarians. He was at last assassinated with his son Volusianus, by his soldiers, A. D. 253, after a reign of nearly three years.——Flavius Claudius Constantinus, a brother of the emperor Julian, raised to the imperial throne under the title of Cæsar, by Constantius his relation. He conspired against his benefactor, and was publicly condemned to be beheaded, A. D. 354.——A small river of Phrygia, whose waters were said to be very efficacious, if drunk in moderation, in curing madness. Plin. 31, 2.—Ovid. Fast. 4, 361.

GAMARUS, an Indian prince, brought in chains before Alexander for revolting.

GAMELIA, a surname of Juno, as Gamelius was of Jupiter, on account of their presiding over marriages.——A festival privately observed at three different times. The first was the celebration of a marriage, the second was in commemoration of a birth day, and the third was an anniversary of the death of a person. As it was observed generally on the 1st of January, marriages on that day were considered as of a good omen, and the month was called Gamelion, among the Athenians. Cic. de Fin. 2, 31.

GANGARIDÆ, a people near the mouths of the Ganges. Their capital, called Gange Regia, so famous as a place of trade for the finest Indian manufactures, as well as Nard and Chinese Malobathrum, seems to answer to the situation of Calcutta, the metropolis of the British dominions in India. Justin. 12, 8.—Curt. 9, 2.—Virg. Æn. 3, 27.—Flacc. 5, 67.

GANGES, a celebrated river of India, which, in the language of Hindoostan, is called Padda, or Padda, i. e. the foot, because, as some Brahmins affirm, it flows from the foot of the god Vishnu, or Boechan. It is also named Burra Gonga, or the Great River, and Gonga, the river, by way of eminence, whence its European name is derived. It is formed by the junction of three large streams, the Callygunga, the Bhagerattee, and the Mahananda, which have their sources in the southern recesses of the Himaleh mountains, and unite at Deoprag. Between Hurdwar, where it enters the plains of Hindoostan, and its mouth, a course of 1300 miles, it receives eleven rivers, some of which are equal to the Rhine, and none smaller than the Thames. The Delta of the Ganges commences about 220 miles from the sea, an immense alluvial tract cut in every direction by creeks and rivers. This dreary district is in fact nothing less than a multitude of islands, formed by the various streams, covered with thick forests and inhabited by tigers. The navigation to the sea is very intricate on account of the number of channels, but there are two good passages; the southern, which opens into the Hoogly river, and the Baltinghaut, which opens into a lake on the eastern side of that city. The Ganges, like many other rivers, has a periodical rise. The rains begin to fall in the mountains early in April, and towards the end of the month the commencement of the inundation may generally be observed at Bengal. By the end of July, all the low parts of Bengal near the Ganges are overflowed. This river is deemed particularly sacred; its waters are held to have an expiatory efficacy, and even in the British courts of justice, the Hindoos are made to swear upon water from the Ganges. Lucan. 3, 230.—Strab. 5.—Plin. 6, 17.—Curt. 8, 9.—Mela, 3, 7.—Virg. Æn. 9, 31.

GANGETICUS SINUS, now the Bay of Bengal, into which the Ganges falls.

GANNASCUS, an ally of Rome, put to death by Corbulo, the Roman general, &c. Tacit. Ann. 11, 18.

GANYMEDE, a goddess, better known by the name of Hebe. She was worshipped under this name in a temple at Phlius in Peloponnesus. Paus. 2, 13.

GANYMEDES, a beautiful youth of Phrygia, son of Tros, and brother to Ilus and Assaracus. According to Lucian, he was son of Dardanus. He was taken up to heaven by Jupiter as he was hunting, or rather tending his father's flocks on mount Ida, and he became the cup-bearer of the gods in the place of Hebe. Some say that he was carried away by an eagle, to satisfy the shameful and unnatural desires of Jupiter. He is generally represented sitting on the back of a flying eagle in the air, whilst the bird reclining back, embraces his limbs with his talons with a gentleness and delicacy, which, in providing for his security, seems still afraid to hurt him. Such was the elegant attitude in which he was represented by the sculptor Leochares, in a beautiful statue which Nero is supposed to have plundered to adorn the temple of peace. Paus. 5, 24.—Homer. Il. 20, 231.—Virg. Æn. 5, 252.—Ovid. Met. 10, 155.—Horat. Od. 4, 4.

GARAMANTES, (sing. Garamas), a people of Africa, south of Phazania, deriving their name from the city of Garama, now Germa. Their cruelty and oppression provoked Cæsar to despatch against them his general, Cornelius Balbus, who followed them up into the distant parts of their country, and soon reduced them to obedience. Virg. Æn. 4, 198. 6. 795.—Lucan. 4, 344.—Strab. 2.—Plin. 5, 8.—Sil. It. 1, 142. 11, 181.

GARAMANTIS, a nymph who became mother of Iarbas, Phileus, and Pilumnus, by Jupiter. Virg. Æn. 4, 198.

GARAMAS, a king of Libya, whose daughter was mother of Ammon by Jupiter.

GARATAS, a river of Arcadia, near Tegea, on the banks of which Pan had a temple. Paus. 8, 44.

GARKATÆ, a people of Arcadia. Paus. 8, 45.

GARGANUS, now St Angelo, a mountain of Apulia, terminating in a promontory called Garganum promontorium, now Testa del Gargano. Virg. Æn. 11, 257.—Lucan 5, 396.

GARGAPHIA, a valley near Platæa, with a fountain of the same name, where Actæon was torn to pieces by his dogs. Ovid. Met 3, 156

GARGARIS, or GARGORIS, a king of the Curetes, who first found the manner of collecting honey. Id. Gargoris.

GARGARUS, (plur a, orum), one of the summits of Ida, the roots of which formed the promontory of Lectum. It is generally supposed to have been the highest peak of the range, but this honour must be assigned to the ancient Cotylus On Gargarus was a town named Gargara. Virg. G. 1, 103.—Macrob 5 20.—Strab. 13.—Plin. 5, 30

GARGETTUS, a village of Attica, the birthplace of Epicurus Cic. Fam 15, 16

GARGILIUS, MARTIALIS, an historian ——A hunter, who purchased game, and imposed it upon his friends and the public as the fruit of his great exertions in the chase. Horat Ep. 1, 6, 57.

GARGITTIUS a dog which kept Geryon's flocks He was killed by Hercules

GARGORIS, an ancient king of the Curetes, who first discovered the method of collecting honey, and of feeding bees He wished to destroy a child which his daughter had had from an improper connexion, but when his repeated attempts failed, he left him his crown and kingdom. Justin 44.

GARITES, a people of Aquitania, in Gaul

GARUMNA, now the Garonne, a river of Gaul rising in the Pyrenees, and after a north-western course of 350 miles, falling into the Sinus Aquitanicus, or Bay of Biscay. According to Julius Cæsar's division of Gallia, the Garumna was the boundary of Aquitania, and separated that district from Gallia Celtica. This river is navigable to Tolosa, or Toulouse, and communicates with the Mediterranean by means of the canal of Louis XIV., about 180 miles long, made through Languedoc. Mela, 3, 2.

GASTRON, a general of Lacedæmon, &c Polyæn. 2

GAUGAMELA a village of Assyria, in the district of Aturia, and about 500 stadia from Arbela. The battle between Alexander and Darius took place near this spot; but, as Arbela was a considerable town, the Greeks chose to distinguish the conflict by the name of the latter. Gaugamela is said to have signified in Persian, the house of the camel, so called because Darius, the son of Hystaspes, escaped upon his camel across the deserts of Scythia, when retiring from the latter country; and, having placed the animal here, appointed the revenue of certain villages for its maintenance. Arrian. 6, 1.—Plut. Alex.

GAULUS a small island in the Mediterranean sea near Melite, or Malta, now called Gozo, with a city of the same name, now called Rabatto. Plin. 3, 8.—Sil Ital 14, 274

GAURUS, a ridge of mountains bordering on Lake Avernus, and now called Monte Barbaro. It was famous for its wines. Lucan. 2, 667.—Sil. 12, 160.—Stat. Sylv 3, 5 99.

GAUS and GAOS, a man who followed the interest of Artaxerxes, from whom he revolted, and by whom he was put to death. Diod. 15.

L. GAVIUS FIRMANUS, a man made prefect of Cilicia by Cicero, for which favour he proved himself very ungrateful. Cic. Att. 6, 1 et 3.

GAZA, a city of the Philistines, made by Joshua part of the tribe of Judah. It was one of the five principalities of the Philistines, situated towards the southern extremity of Canaan, between Raphia and Askelon. The advantageous situation of Gaza was the cause of the numerous revolutions which it underwent. It first of all belonged to the Philistines, and then to the Hebrews. It recovered its liberty in the reigns of Jotham and Ahaz, and was reconquered by Hezekiah It was subject to the Chaldeans who conquered Syria and Phœnicia. Afterwards, it fell into the hands of the Persians. It must have been a place of considerable strength. For two months it baffled all the efforts of Alexander the Great, who was repeatedly repulsed, and wounded in the siege; which he afterwards revenged in a most infamous manner on the person of the gallant defender Betis, whom, while yet alive, having ordered his ankles to be bored, he dragged round the walls, tied to his chariot-wheels, in the barbarous parade of imitating the less savage treatment of the corpse of Hector by Achilles. 1 Sam. 6, 17.—2 Kings, 18, 8.—Arrian. 2, 27.—Quintus Curtius, 4, 6

GAZA, or GAZACA, now Tebriz or Tauris, a city of Atropatia, north-east of the lake Spauta. It was the depository of great wealth, and the summer residence of the kings of Atropatia.

GEBENNA, now Cevennes, a chain of mountains in Gaul, which separated the Helvii from the Averni, in that part of the Roman province corresponding to the modern Languedoc.

GEDROSIA, an extensive province of Persia, bounded on the west by Carmania, on the north by Drangiana and Arachosia, on the east by Indus, and on the south by the Erythræan sea It is now called Mekran. It was in general exceedingly barren and very thinly inhabited, owing to which circumstances it proved fatal to the armies of Semiramis and Cyrus, when they passed through it, and the troops of Alexander, as they returned through it from India, only escaped the horrors of thirst and famine, with which they were threatened, by one of the most rapid marches which that extraordinary man ever conducted, and which, amongst other reasons, he was induced to undertake for the ambitious purpose of convincing the world how much more he could accomplish than his predecessors. Its principal city was Pura, now Pureg or Phureg. Strab 15.

GEGANII, a family of Alba, part of which migrated to Rome, under Romulus. One of the daughters, called Geganii was the first of the vestals created by Numa. Plut. in Num.—— One of the family was consul, and he triumphed over the Volsci. Liv. 3, 65 4, 10.

GELA, a town on the southern parts of Sicily, about ten miles from the sea, according to Ptolemy, which received its name from a small river in the neighbourhood; called Gelas. It was built by a Rhodian and Cretan colony, 45 years after the founding of Syracuse, Olymp. 45, 1. After it had continued in existence 464 years, Phintias, tyrant of Agrigentum, carried the inhabitants to Phintias, a town in the neighbourhood, which he had founded, and he employed the stones of Gela to beautify his own city. Phintias was also called Gela. The inhabitants were called Gelenses, Gelæ, and Gelani. Virg. Æn. 3, 702.—Paus. 8, 46.—Strab. 6.

GELANOR, a king of Argos, who succeeded his father Sthenelus. His right to the sovereignty was disputed by Danaus, who had lately arrived from Egypt, and whilst the competitors were pleading their cause in the presence of the people, a wolf boldly attacked under the walls of the city a herd of cows and the bull that followed. The accident was seized by the superstitious and prejudiced assembly; and Gelanor, compared to the bull, was made to yield to the superior power and influence of his rapacious rival. Paus. 2, 16 et 19. Vid Danaus.

GELAS. Vid. Gela.

GELLIA CORNELIA LEX, de Civitate, by L. Gellius and Cn. Cornel Lentulus, A.U.C. 681. It enacted that all those who had been presented with the privilege of citizens of Rome by Pompey should remain in the possession of that liberty.

GELLIAS, a native of Agrigentum, famous for his munificence and his hospitality. Diod 13 — Max. 4, 8.

GELLIUS, a consul and censor, who bestowed highest praise on Cicero, for his vigilance energy in crushing Catiline's conspiracy. ad Quar. 7. Pis. 3.—Plut. in Pomp ——A ul, who defeated a party of Germans in the rest of Spartacus Plut —— A Roman historian, of little reputation. Cic. Div. 1, 25 —— A Roman grammarian and critic in the age of M. Antoninus. He studied rhetoric under Cornelius Fronto, at Rome; and philosophy at Athens, under Phavorinus, Taurus, and others. His work, entitled Noctes Atticæ, consisting of critical and philological observations, which he had collected from reading and conversation, has preserved his name from oblivion. It was commenced in the nights of a winter which he spent in the country near Athens, from which circumstance the title originated. Like the works of Athenæus, Macrobius, and other miscellaneous Collectanea, it derives its chief value from the facts and monuments of antiquity, and the fragments of former writers which are included in it. Aulus Gellius died about the beginning of the reign of Marcus Aurelius. The best edition of his work is that of Gronovius, 8vo. L. Bat. 1686. The edition of Thysius, 8vo, L. Bat. 1666, is also held in considerable estimation. There is an English translation of the Noctes Atticæ, by the Rev. W. Beloe.

GELO and GELON, a son of Dinomenes, who made himself absolute at Syracuse, 491 years before the Christian era. He conquered the Carthaginians at Himera, and made his oppression [illegible]ar by his great equity and moderation. He reigned seven years, and his death was universally lamented at Syracuse. He was called the father of his people, and the patron of liberty, and honoured as a demigod. His brother Hiero succeeded him. Paus. 8, 42 —Herod 7, 153, &c. —Diod. 11.——A man who attempted to poison Pyrrhus.——A governor of Bœotia.——A son of Hiero the younger. Paus. 6, 9.——A general of Phocis, destroyed with his troops by the Thessalians. Paus. 10, 1.

GELŌI, the inhabitants of Gela. Virg. Æn. 3, 701.

GELONES and GELŌNI, a people of Scythia, inured from their youth to labour and fatigue. They painted themselves to appear more terrible in battle. They were descended from Gelonus, a son of Hercules Virg. G. 2, 15. Æn. 8, 725. —Mela, 1, 1.—Claudian in Ruf. 1, 315.

GELOS, a port of Caria. Mela, 1, 16.

GEMINI, a sign of the zodiac, which represents Castor and Pollux, the twin sons of Leda.

GEMINIUS, a Roman, who acquainted M. Antony with the situation of his affairs at Rome, &c.——An inveterate enemy of Marius. He seized the person of Marius, and carried him to Minturnæ. Plut in Mario.——A friend of Pompey, from whom he received a favourite mistress called Flora. Plut.

GEMINUS, an astronomer and mathematician of Rhodes, fl. C. 77.

GEMONIÆ SCALÆ, steps at Rome, near the prison called Tullianum, down which the bodies of those who had been executed in prison were thrown into the Forum, to be exposed to the gaze of the multitude. Val Max. 6, 9.—Liv. 38, 59

GENABUM, a city of the Aurelliani, situate at the great bend of the Ligeris, or Loire. It was afterwards called Aurelliani, from the name of the people, and is now Orleans. Cæs. B. C. 7, 3. —Lucan. 1, 440

GENAUNI, a people of Vindelicia. Horat Od. 4, 14, 10

GENEVA, a city of the Allobroges, at the western extremity of the Lacus Lemanus, or Lake of Geneva, on the south bank of the Rhodanus, or Rhone. The modern name of Geneva is the same as the ancient.

GENIUS, a man of Cyzicus, killed by the Argonauts, &c. Flacc. 3, 45.

GENIUS, a spirit or dæmon, which, according to the ancients, presided over the birth and life of every man. Each person was supposed to have two of these aerial attendants, one good the other evil; and according to their different influence, his actions were guided. The genii which presided over females were called Junones and those who protected towns and countries were ranked among the divinities of the higher order Apul. de Socr. Deo —Horat. Ep 2, 2, 187.—Senec. ep. 110. Vid. Dæmon.

GENSERIC, a famous Vandal prince, who passed from Spain to Africa, where he took Carthage. He laid the foundation of the Vandal kingdom in Africa, and in the course of his military expeditions, invaded Italy, and in July 455 took Rome, which he delivered up to the pillage and violence of his barbarous soldiers for fourteen days. This cruel tyrant, so eminent for his presence of mind, and the strong energies of a bold undaunted spirit, died A.D. 477, and was succeeded by his son Huneric, who had married Eudoxia the daughter of the Roman emperor.

GENTIUS, a king of Illyricum, who imprisoned the Roman ambassadors at the request of Perseus king of Macedonia. This offence was highly resented by the Romans, and Gentius was conquered by Anicius, and led in triumph with his family, B.C. 169. Liv. 43, 19, &c.

GENUA, now Genoa, a celebrated town of Liguria. In the second Punic war, Genua, then a celebrated emporium, took part with the Romans, and was, in consequence, plundered and burned by Hago the Carthaginian. It was afterwards rebuilt by the Romans, and was made a municipium. Liv. 28, 46. 30, 1.

GENUCIUS, a tribune of the people, cut off in his own house by the intrigues of his enemies. Liv. 2, 54.—A plebeian augur. [illegible] 10, 9.—A consul.

GENUSUS, now Semno, a river of Macedonia, falling into the Adriatic above Apollonia. Lucan 5. 464.

GENUTIA LEX, de magistratibus, by L. Genutius the tribune, A.U.C. 411. It ordained that no person should exercise the same magistracy within ten years, or be invested with two offices in one year.

GEORGICA, a poem of Virgil, in four books. The first treats of ploughing the ground; the second of sowing it, the third speaks of the management of cattle, &c., and in the fourth, the poet gives an account of bees, and of the manner of keeping them among the Romans. The word is derived from γῆ, terra, and ἔργον, opus, because it particularly treats of husbandry. The work is dedicated to Mæcenas, the great patron of poetry in the age of Virgil. The author was seven years in writing and polishing it; and in that composition, by correctness of style, dignity of versification, and happiness of expressions, he showed how much he excelled all other writers. He imitated Hesiod, who wrote a poem nearly on the same subject, called Opera et Dies.

GEORGIUS PISIDA Vid. Pisida.

GEPHYRA, one of the cities of the Seleucidæ in Syria. Strab. 9.

GEPHYRÆI, a people of Phœnicia, who passed with Cadmus into Bœotia, and from thence into Attica. Herod 5, 57.

GERÆSTUS, a port of Eubœa. Liv. 31, 45.

GERANIA, a mountain between Megara and Corinth.

GERRETICUS, a harbour of Teios in Ionia. Liv. 37, 27.

GERGITHUM, a town near Cumæ in Æolia. Plin. 5, 30.

GERGOVIA, a strongly fortified town of Gaul, belonging to the Arverni. It was situated on a very high mountain, and every access to it was extremely difficult. At length it was obliged to submit to the victorious arms of Rome, and it was probably so completely destroyed, that no trace remains from which we may ascertain its situation. It has been conjectured, however, that its situation was in the vicinity of Clermont. Cæs. B. G. 7, 9.

GERMANIA, an extensive country of Europe, at the east of Gaul. Its inhabitants were warlike, fierce, and uncivilized, and always proved a watchful enemy against the power of Rome. Cæsar first entered their country, but he rather checked their fury than conquered them. His example was followed by his imperial successors or their generals, who sometimes invaded the country to chastise the insolence of the inhabitants. The ancient Germans were very superstitious, and, in many instances, their religion was the same as that of their neighbours the Gauls; whence some have concluded that these two nations were of the same origin. They paid uncommon respect to their women, who, as they believed, were endowed with something more than human. They built no temples to their gods, and paid great attention to the heroes and warriors whom the country had produced. Their rude institutions gradually gave rise to the laws and manners which still prevail in the countries of Europe, which their arms invaded or conquered. Tacitus, in whose age even letters were unknown among them, observed their customs with nicety, and has delineated them with the genius of an historian, and the reflection of a philosopher. Tacit. de Morib. Germ.—Mela, 1, c. 3, 3.—Cæs. Bell. G.—Strab. 4.

GERMANICUS CÆSAR, a son of Drusus and Antonia, the niece of Augustus. He was adopted by his uncle Tiberius, and raised to the most important offices of the state. When his grandfather Augustus died, he was employed in a war in Germany, and the affection of the soldiers unanimously saluted him emperor. He refused the unseasonable honour, and appeased the tumult which his indifference occasioned. He continued his wars in Germany, and defeated the celebrated Arminius, and was rewarded with a triumph at his return to Rome. Tiberius declared him emperor of the east, and sent him to appease the seditions of the Armenians. But the success of Germanicus in the east was soon looked upon with an envious eye by Tiberius, and his death was meditated. He was secretly poisoned, as it is supposed, by Piso and Plancina at Daphne near Antioch, A. D. 19, in the thirty-fourth year of his age. The news of his death was received with the greatest grief, and the most bitter lamentations, and Tiberius seemed to be the only one who rejoiced in the fall of Germanicus. He had married Agrippina, by whom he had nine children, one of whom, Caligula, disgraced the name of his illustrious father. Germanicus has been commended, not only for his military accomplishments, but also for his learning, humanity, and extensive benevolence. In the midst of war, he devoted some moments to study, and he favoured the world with two Greek comedies, some epigrams, and a translation of Aratus in Latin verse. Sueton. Cal. 1, 2 et 7.—Tacit. Ann. 1, 3, 7, 53, &c.—This name was common in the age of the emperors, not only to those who had obtained victories over the Germans, but even to those who had entered the borders of their country at the head of an army. Domitian applied the name of Germanicus, which he himself had vainly assumed, to the month of September, in honour of himself. Suet. in Dom. 13.—Martial. 9, 2, 4.

GERMANII, a people of Persia. Herod 1, 125.

GERONTHRÆ, a town of Laconia, where a yearly festival called Geronthræa, was observed in honour of Mars. The god had there a temple with a grove, into which no woman was permitted to enter during the time of the solemnity. Paus Lacon.

GERRA, a city of Arabia Deserta, on the Sinus Persicus. It is now El Katf. Plin. 6, 28.—A city of Ægyptus Inferior, in the eastern quarter, about eight miles from Pelusium. Now, probably, Maseh.—A city of Syria, in the district of Cyrrhestica, between Bethanmaria and Arimara, and near the Euphrates. Now Surak.

GERRHI, a people of Scythia, in Asiatic Sarmatia, by the Borysthenes rises. The kings of Scythia were generally buried in their territories. Herod. 4, 71.

GERRHUS, a river of Scythia, which flowed between the territories of the Scythian herdsmen and those of the Royal Scythians, and then fell into the Hypacris. It is now the Molotchnoe. Herod 4, 56.

GERYON, and GERYONES, a celebrated monster, born from the union of Chrysaor with Callirhoe, and represented by the poets as having three bodies and three heads. He lived in the island of Gades, where he kept numerous flocks which were guarded by a two-headed dog, called Orthos, and by Eurythion. Hercules, by order of Eurystheus, went to Gades and destroyed Geryon, Orthos, and Eurythion, and carried away all his flocks and herds to Tiryntbus. Heniod. Theog. 1-7.—Virg. Æn 7, 661. 8, 202.—Ibid. 1, 277.—Apollod 2.—Lucret 6, 28.

GERGOVIACUM, a town of Gaul, belonging to the Morini It was afterwards called Bononia, and is now Boulogne.

GESSATÆ, a people of Gallia Togata. Plut in Marcell.

GETA, a Roman, expelled from the senate, and afterwards restored to his dignity and made censor. Cic Clu. 42.—Val. Max. 2. 9.——A slave mentioned in the characters of Terence s Adelphi and Phormio.——A man who raised seditions at Rome in Nero's reign, &c. Tacit Hist 2, 72 ——Septimius, a son of the emperor Severus, brother to Caracalla In the eighth year of his age he was moved with compassion at the fate of some of the partisans of Niger and Albinus, who had been ordered to be executed, and his father, struck with his humanity, retracted his sentence, After his father s death he reigned at Rome, conjointly with his brother, but Caracalla, who envied his virtues, and was jealous of his popularity, ordered him to be poisoned, and when this could not be effected, he murdered him in the arms of his mother Julia, who, in the attempt of defending the fatal blows from his body, received a wound in her arm from the hand of her son, the 28th of March, A D. 212 Geta had not reached the twenty-third year of his age, and the Romans had reason to lament the death of so virtuous a prince, whilst they groaned under the cruelties and oppression of Caracalla.

GETÆ, (Getæ, sing) a tribe of Scythians, who, according to Strabo, occupied the arid and uncultivated plains along the sea coast, between the mouths of the Ister and that of the Tyras, in which the army of Darius, in its march against the Scythians, was in danger of perishing for want of water. Under the empire of Trajan, the Getæ were subjected to the Roman dominion. Herodotus speaks of Zamolxis as the legislator of the Getæ, and he says that from him they derived the doctrine of the soul's immortality; and Trajan attributed to this principle the intrepidity with which they encountered death in the perils of war. The Getæ possessed only a small space along the coast, but their territory extended to a considerable distance in the interior of the country. Those who inhabited the western part in ascending the Ister, were called Daci; but those who were more appropriately denominated Getæ, occupied the eastern part near the Pontus Euxinus; and those who inhabited the banks of the Tyras, were called Tyragitæ. They had all the same language The Getæ are thought to have been the same people with those who were called Gothæ, and whose migrations were so extensive. Ovid. de Pont. Trist. 5, 7, 111.—Strab 7.—Stat. Sylv. 2, 2, 61. 3 1. 17 - Lucan. 2, 54. 3, 95.

GETULIA. Vid. Gætulia.

GIGANTES, the sons of Cœlus and Terra, who, according to Hesiod, sprang from the blood of the wound which Cœlus received from his son Saturn; whilst Hyginus calls them sons of Tartarus and Terra. They are represented as men of uncommon stature, and with strength proportioned to their gigantic size. Some of them, as Cottus, Briareus, and Gyges, had fifty heads and 100 arms, and serpents instead of legs. They were of a terrible aspect, their hair hung loose about their shoulders, and their beards were suffered to grow untouched Pallene and its neighbourhood was the place of their residence. The defeat of the Titans, with whom they are often ignorantly confounded, and to whom they were nearly related, incensed them against Jupiter, and they all conspired to dethrone him. The god was alarmed, and called all the deities to assist him against this powerful enemy, who hurled against him rocks of such magnitude, that those which fell into the sea became islands, and those on the earth huge mountains. Their other weapons were trees torn by the roots, and burning woods, and their daring strength was so prodigious, that they began to heap mount Ossa upon Pelion, to scale with more facility the walls of heaven. At the sight of such dreadful adversaries, the gods fled with the greatest consternation into Egypt, where they assumed the shape of different animals, to screen themselves from their pursuers. Jupiter, however, remembered that they were not invincible, provided he called a mortal to his assistance; and by the advice of Pallas, he armed his son Hercules in his cause. With the aid of this celebrated hero, the giants were soon put to flight and defeated. Alcyoneus and Eurytus were destroyed by the arm of Hercules, Porphyrion by Jupiter, Clytius perished under the stroke of Vulcan, Mercury killed Hippolitus, Diana Gration, Neptune Polybotes, and Minerva, after she had killed Enceladus, flead Pallas, and adorned herself with his skin. All the rest of inferior note, were dispersed either by the thunder of Jupiter, or the club of Hercules, and some were crushed to pieces under mountains or buried in the sea (Vid Enceladus, Alcides, Porphyrion, Typhon, Otus, Titanes, &c) The existence of giants has been supported by all the writers of antiquity, and received as an undeniable truth. Homer tells us that Tityus, when extended on the ground, covered nine acres; and that Polyphemus ate two of the companions of Ulysses at once, and walked along the shores of Sicily, leaning on a staff which might have served for the mast of a ship. The Grecian heroes, during the Trojan war, and Turnus in Italy, attacked their enemies by throwing stones, which four men of the succeeding ages would have been unable to move. Plutarch also mentions in support of the gigantic stature, that Sertorius opened the grave of Antæus in Africa, and found a skeleton which measured six cubits in length. Apollod. 1, 6 — Hesiod. Th. 150 et 185.—Horat. Od. 3, 4.—Faus. 8, 2, &c. —Ovid. Met. 1, 151. Trist. 4, 7, 17, Fast. 5, 35.—Plut. in Sertor.—Hygin. fab. 2, &c.—Homer. Odyss 7 et 10.—Virg. G. 1, 280. Æn, 6, 580.

GIGIS, one of the female attendants of Parysatis, who was privy to the poisoning of Statira. Plut. in Artax.

GILDO, a governor of Africa, in the reign of Arcadius. He died A D. 398.

GILLO an infamous adulterer, in Juvenal's age. Juv. 1, 40.

GINDANES, a people of Libya, who fed on the leaves of the lotus. Herod. 4, 176.

